CHAMPLAIN TERCENTENRAY

Commission Sets Date for the Great Celebration Next Summer.

Montpelier, Vt., Nov. 13.—The commissions representing the States of Vermont and New York, in arranging for the celebration of the tercentennial anniversary of the discovery of Lake Champlain and the surrounding territory, now forming part of the two states and of the Province of Quebec, have decided upon the dates on which the observance will be held.

The opening day's celebration, Sunday, July 4, have been arranged to consist largely of religious services, and will be general throughout New York, Vermont and Quebec. On Monday, the real opening day of the observance, Crown Point, N. Y., will be the headquarters; on Tuesday, Ticonderoga, N. Y., and on Wednesday, Plattsburg will be the scenes of the closing celebrations in New York State. Shifting into Vermont on Thursday, the main observances of that day will be held in Burlington, and the celebration will be continued on Isle La Motte on Friday. Saturday, like the opening day, will be featured in general observances.

CROKER COMING ACROSS.

Dublin, Nov. 13.—Richard Croker, the former leader of Tammy Hall, will be a passenger on the Lusitania, which sails from Queenstown tomorrow. He will not return to Ireland until May. Mr. Croker declines to express an opinion on the recent elections in the United States, saying that he is entirely out of politics.

Tender Accepted.

At a special meeting of the hospital committee, held last night, the tenders for the wiring of the new buildings at Victoria Hospital were opened, and the tender of the Electrical Construction Company at $87 was accepted. The other tenders were: Commercial Electric Company, $125; London Electric Company, $107.

Prof. Bowman's Address.

Prof. James H. Bowman, of this city, addressed a meeting of the men of Wellington Street Methodist Church, last evening, on "The Relation of Scientific Fact to Practical Process." The address was a very interesting one and was appreciated by the large audience. In a clear manner he described why science is responsible for the perfect manner in which the practical process is carried out. Ald. Booth occupied the chair.

WHAT BATTLES OF 1870 DID

Prof. Barnes Traces Movements of Civilization Through Several Centuries

St. Andrew's Hall was well filled last night when Professor Earl Barnes gave the fifth of his series of lectures on "The History of Civilization," delivered under the auspices of the London Froebel Society. His subject for the evening was "Monarchy and Democracy."

Prof. Barnes first gave a short resume of his course of lectures, showing how the advance of the world had been marked off into definite cycles in which civilization advanced along one definite line. He showed how in each age this was the case. There was no universal development, each period stretching out like a tentacle in some particular line. It was an age of great personalities, or the personalities were lost and it became an age of culture; or again, they were forgotten for the time, and ecclesiasticism became the noun of life; later, it changed to a bases of politics, when everything becomes subordinated to this conception.

What 1870 Did.

Using the statement of the Hon. James Bryce that a hundred years hence, 1870, would be considered the greatest date in human history, the speaker went on to show how from that date throughout the world the democratic principle began to spell ruin to the principle of absolute monarchism. It became the age of politics. That date saw the final unification of the kingdom of Italy; the unification of the petty German states into a great empire, and republicanism adopted in France. The period, too, marked the rise of the idea of state education in England. Michigan and Cornell Universities threw open their doors for the higher education of women, and trade unionism became a factor in life and capital became organized.

All Is Changed.

Now the great rulers and statesmen and jurists have sunk into the background, and it is such names as Rockefeller, Morgan, Schwab, the captains of industry, who have come to the fore.

The United States is moving towards a highly centralized form of government, as opposed to state right, a great change in the whole system of the country. Yet it was hardly an issue in the recent presidential campaign. Taft himself is an avowed Unitarian. His wife, it is said, is a Roman Catholic. In a former age this would have been an insurmountable obstacle to his election, but it was scarcely mentioned in the recent campaign. If a man lost or gained a reputation it was due to his relation, right or wrong, to great industrial conditions.

Issues of Life.

The issues of life, said the speaker, fall into two lines. In how far shall we express ourselves? Or how for shall we subordinate ourselves for the good of the majority? If a man subordinate himself he is known as a conservative. If he insists on his own individual rights he is known as a radical, and the problem of political development is the problem of these two forces working against one another. Turning to the more definite subject of his lecture, Prof. Barnes spoke on what he termed the "Age of Politics," which might be roughly designated by the two dates, 1648 to 1870.

He showed how in the thirty years' war what had begun as a religious movement, died out as a political issue, leaving Europe desolated.

Taking France as an example he traced this principle down to its legitimate conclusion, showing how the religions merged into the political, and through the very absolutism into the principle of democracy. The period opens with Huguenots and Catholics contending in France, a distinctly religious issue. Henry of Navarre's remark, "Paris is worth a mass," showed how the political was superseding the religious in men's minds. Under Richelieu, a Catholic army aids Germany, a Protestant nation, against a Catholic Austria. So on through Richelieu and Mazarin the principle is carried till France again becomes wholly Catholic with a gradually developing centralized government. Under Louis XIV. the Huguenots are expelled; the great nobles, another danger to the state, are ordered to Versailles where their substance is wasted, and the king's power vitiated by a system that tended to wear out the individualism and make a man a mere automaton. By degrees from a centralized state France became the apostle of absolutism, which degenerated into despotism. The king, having absolute control, the system continuing after under less able leaders, totters on the brink of a chasm; a spirit pervades the land that is exemplified in Madame Le Pompadour's famous saying "After Us the Deluge."

Turn Back.

Out of the chaos of despotism a voice is heard, a new voice, that of Voltaire and Rousseau, bidding men turn back to nature. Rousseau's social contract spoke of the mutual responsibility of ruler and people, when the idea had been long dead. The ruler had not fulfilled his obligation, and the obligation of the people is abrogated. This spells revolution. In France the monarchy is overthrown. Spain has to fight for her life; the United States issues its declaration of Independence; Mexico, Hayti and the South American states declare their independence. Everywhere the people are paramount, being in the age of democracy.

In his concluding lecture, Mr. Barnes will take up the question of the rise and advance of the spirit of democracy, under the title of "Individualism and Collectivism," thus bringing to a close the discussion of growth and development of the world's history.

PRIZE DAY AT ST. MARTINS

Pleasant Time in the Schoolhouse Yesterday Afternoon.

What has developed into a pleasing annual treat at St. Martin's separate school passed off nicely yesterday afternoon amid song and glee of the happy children.

The pupils of this school look forward with much interest to this day, on which they carry off their prizes for the work of the past year. Many of the parents and friends of the children took advantage of the occasion to visit the school and witness the good work being done by the pupils and teachers. The rooms were were beautifully decorated with flags, bunting and palms. All wore a festal appearance.

Addresses of a congratulatory character and encouragement, thoroughly in keeping with the happy occasion, were delivered by Rev. J. T. Aylward, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral; Rev. M. D. O'Neil, superintendent of the Catholic schools of the city; Hon. Senator Coffey, P. J. Mugan, M.D., John F. Faulds, barrister, W. T. Groom and M. O'Sullivan, treasurer of the school board.

Father Aylward Presided.

Rev. J. T. Aylward occupied the chair and congratulated the pupils who had won prizes, and highly praised the good work done at St. Martin's by the teachers and pupils. He hoped that the time would soon come when there would be a Catholic Church in South London.

A most plentiful and varied supply of good things furnished by Mr. O'Sullivan rendered the day a happy one for the little ones, whose splendid programme, as given below, was well rendered:

1. Opening hymn, by the pupils.
2. National song, "Our Canada," class.
3. Recitation by senior boys.
4. Violin duet by Misses Esther and Ruth Masuret, former pupils of the school, was particularly well rendered.
5. Song by Russell Gardiner, "Put Me Off at London."
6. Instrumental, Mrs. and Misses Ruth and Esther Masuret, accompanied by Miss Dromgole.
7. Ten little maidens from Japan.
8. Song by the pupils, "Come Back to Erin," "God Save the King."

Prizes were donated by Rev. Fathers Aylward and O'Neil, also Hon. Senator Coffey, T. J. Murphy, W. T. Groom, John M. Daly, P. J. Pocock, Mrs. Wm. Masuret, Mrs. Ryan and M. O'Sullivan.

Rev. H. A. Graham, of the Wellington Street Methodist Church, will conduct anniversary services at Palmerston Methodist Church Sunday.
