SHE MADE GOOD COFFEE

But It Did Not Agree With Her, So It Was Placed on the Prohibited List.

A dainty little West End lady, famous for the excellence of the coffee she made, and quite proud of her accomplishments, was pained to discover that it neither agreed with her nor any other member of the family. So coffee was reluctantly placed on the prohibited list.

In giving an order to the grocer sometime afterwards, when asked about coffee, she explained why none was being ordered. The grocer, who had also been a victim of the coffee habit, immediately advised that she try Caramel Cereal.

A package was sent up with the other goods and next morning Caramel Cereal was prepared for breakfast. It was boiled the regulation twenty minutes, the first ten quite rapidly, and the last ten minutes slowly. The cream and sugar had already been placed in the cups and when ready the Caramel Cereal was also poured in.

The result was the most delightful drink, equal in fragrance and richness in every way to the finest coffee she had ever made.

Every member of the family drank it and every one was delighted with it, the children particularly being loud in sounding its praises.

There were no bad after effects, no feeling of dulness and depression, no headaches and no indigestion. Caramel Cereal is as harmless as water and, like milk, is a food-drink.

With Caramel Cereal to drink and Granose Biscuits, Granose Flakes, Granola or life chips to eat, very little else is required for the ordinary breakfast. They are sold wholesale and retail by J. F. Morrish, 237 Yonge-street.

Awkward Generosity.

From The Scotsman.

A man from Dunedin once visited (the town of) Wellington. An Irish friend insisted upon the visitor staying at his house instead of at an hotel, and kept him there for a month, playing the host in detail, even to treating him to theatres and other amusements, paying all the cab fares, and the rest. When the visitor was returning to Dunedin the Irishman saw his down to the steamer, and they went into the saloon to have a parting drink.

"What'll you have?" asked the host, continuing his hospitality to the very last.

"Now look here," said the man from Dunedin, "I'll hae nae mair o' this. Here ye've been keepin' me at yer house for a month an' payin' for a' the theatres an' cabs an' drinks. I tell ye I'll stan' nae mair o' it! We'll just hae a toss for this one!"

He Got Ambitious.

"I had a man on my place," said the Wyoming ranch owner, "who turned out to be so lazy and worthless that I gave orders to have him discharged. He came to me about it, and I said:

"'Jim, you've got to go. You are not worth your salt. Take you all in all, I never saw a more worthless man.'

"'Don't you believe I'll ever amount to anything?' he asked.

"'You'll never be fit for wolf bait.'

"He went away looking very dejected, and I saw no more of him for three days. Then he rode up on a horse and called me out and said:

"'Major, I just stopped to let you see how mistaken you was. I've robbed the Blue Hills stage of $400, stolen this horse, broke into a postoffice and cleaned out three Chinamen in the last three days, and now I'm off to help rob a passenger train. So long, major—so long!'"

Stricklane; V.C., Hugh Ellard; Treasurer, A. Jasey; Secretary, J. Fullan. Refreshments were served at the conclusion.

The Highest Mountain of North America.

Mount St. Elias is 5520 metres in height, Mount Fairweather is 4940 and Mount Logan is 5947. There is a higher peak still that has never yet been climbed. It lies in 63 1-2 degrees of north latitude and in 155 degrees of west longttude and has been called Mount McKinley. Its altitude is 6129 metres or 20,226 fet, and it will probably remain uncâmbed for many years owing to its remoteness and to the inherent difficulties of the ascent.

Lay of the Last Grafter.

From The Chicago News.

The day was long, the wind was cold,
The grafter was infirm and old;
The last of all the "gang" was he,
Who held the law of mockery.
Alone he stood, apart from all,
Within the busy City Hall,
And watched the toil and earnest ways
Of civil service employes.

"Alas!" he said, "and can it be
That this is all there's left of me?
Are all my triumphs of the past
Sunk to this measure small at last?
What boots it now that I have been
The main cog in the old 'machine,'
If to a city job the right
Must be put down in black and white?

"Of what avail that I should be
The victor at the primary,
If every man that I supply
Is skinned out by some college guy?
That this should be the present game
Is what I call a measly shame;
And things are in a pretty fix
When there's no 'graft' in politics."

The grafter paused, then gazed around
His old familiar stamping ground—
The place where once his mighty word
Had ruled without a protest heard,
One long, last look he gave and then,
Elbowed and shoved by restless men,
Like one who quite a hopeless fray,
Once more pursued his weary way.

FAMOUS SHIPBUILDER.

William Fife Began Work on the Clyde Fifty-Five Years Ago.

London, Jan. 14.—William Fife, who died yesterday, began yacht building on the Clyde 55 years ago. He was second of the name to build yachts at Fairlie, a litle village on the Ayrshire coast of Scotland.

His son, Mr. William Fife, jr., designer and builder of the Shamrock I., the Canada, the Isolde and the Alisa, is the third Fife. His father built the Fiona, the Foxhound, the Bloodhound and the Neptune, all the best boats of their time. He was very proud of his son's achievements.

For generations, it may be said, the Fife family have been engaged in designing and building yachts. With the Herreshoffs and the Watsons, it shares hereditary genius and traditions in this branch of naval architecture. At the home of the Fife business, at Fairlie, on the Firth of Clyde, Mr. William Fife, sr.—"Old Wall," as he was affectionately styled—has long been the head of the firm, altho its interests have now for several years been superintended by his son, the bearer of his name, who designed the Shamrock I. to be an America's Cup challenger.

As far back as 1770, the first Fife, a millwright, settled down in the pretty little Ayrshire village which has since become famous for the creation on its slip ways of so many crack racing yachts. The original boat builder died in 1805 at the age of 85. His son, whose death is announced, had nearly reached the same age, having been born about 1820. The Stella, the Fiona and the Latona were more particularly identified with his own craftsmanship and built up the reputation which was to lead to the appreciation of the Fife boats on this side of the Atlantic and to that friendly rivalry in yacht building which the international cup races have produced.

LOCAL TOPICS.

Charles Cole was run down by a horse and cutter in charge of David Plews on Yonge-street yesterday afternoon. He was taken to Dr. Greene's surgery, where it was found his right ankle had been sprained.

Detective Davis last night arrested Frank Adams on a warrant chaging him with stealing a number of refreshment tickets from the Liederkranz, where is employed.

"Old Bill" Fowler was locked up yesterday and will be charged with vagrancy. When the police started in pursuit, he was carrying a woman's jacket, which he managed to hide in Daly's resort before he was apprehended.

Over 100 couples attended the third annual masquerade ball of the Toronto Hebrew Benevolent Society, held last night in St. George's Hall. There were some pretty and some amusing costumes, and all the dancers had a good time.

York Lodge, A.O.U.W.

York Lodge, No. 57, A.O.U.W., installed their newly-elected officers in Association Hall last night, after which ceremony a concert was held. There was a large attendance of members and their friends and the combined event proved a big success.

Haigr; treasurer, W. J. Wharin; guide, A. R. Thompson; inside watchman, W. H. S. Duncan; outside watchman, J. Baker.

The installation was conducted by F. N. Nudel, P.D.D.G.M. The retiring master workman, B. N. Davis, was presented with a fur-lined overcoat, the presentation being made by F. G. Inwood, P.G.M. The program was contributed by J. M. Sherlock, Miss Teresa Flanagan, E. Thwaite Cowper, Miss Mae Dickenson, J. Ruthven Macdonald, Miss M. La Dell and Harry Rich. Charles E. Musgrave ably presided at the piano.

HIT AT UNITED STATES.

Berlin, Jan.14.—Baron Heyizu Herrnsheim (National Liberal) proposed an amendment to the tariff bill in committee to-day which was aimed at the United States.

The government is authorized to apply to imports from any foreign state such regulations respecting the consular authentication of invoices of such imports, the declaration of their market value and the costs of their production, as may be enforced against German exports. The language of the amendment proposed by Baron Heyizu Herrnsheim is fashioned after the American law, and is regarded by the committee as undoubtedly designed to offset the customs requirements of the United States, and satisfy the long-standing complaints of German manufacturers. This amendment has not yet been discussed, but inquiry of some members of the committee has elicited the statement which indicates that it is more than likely to be adopted.

CAUCUS UNANIMOUS.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 14.—Senator Allen was nominated to-night for the position of United States Senator for the sixth consecutive term, and Senator Jonathan P. Dolliver was nominated to succeed himself at the expiration of his appointed term. The vote of the caucus was unanimous in both cases.

First Born, Longest Lived.

Not only life insurance experts, but a great many other people also have observed that longevity or the reverse runs in families. Some persons have hardjer constitutions than others, and they are apt to transmit them to their children. A man both of whose parents were long lived has a promise of a good old age himself. This, of course, is an old story. A much less familiar principle affecting the duration of life has been presented by Miss Mary Beeton of Combridge and Professor Karl Pearson of London. In a new periodical called "Biometrika."

A comparison was made between the length of the lives of two adult brothers or two adult sisters, to ascertain if there was a perceptible difference between the older and the younger members of a pair. The figures here given represent the average of over 1000 cases, and hence would seem to point to a general law. It may be added that the particular persons under investigation belonged to the Society of Friends. That organization placed its records at the disposal of Miss Beeton and Professor Pearson.

It thus appears that the average age of the elder brother was 58.56 years, the younger brother's 54.575, the elder sister's 59.924 and the younger sister's 55.667. There is a difference of over four years in favor of the older adult brother or sister. This does not signify that the older brother or sister will survive the younger. The mean interval between the births of the members of all the pairs under consideration was about 6½ years. Hence the older brother or sister would ordinarily die first, tho attaining a greater age.

The first enquiry here mentioned was limited to pairs the younger members of which had attained the age of at least 21. A second comparison was made that included minors with adults, it gave results closely resembling the other. The mean excess of life in 3853 pairs was 4.6 years. But the interval between the births appears to exert some influence. "Biometrika's" contributors furnish a formula by which one's expectations can be computed, and add: "Thus, a brother born ten years before another brother, has probably seven years' greater duration of life. A sister born ten years before another sister has probably about six years' greater duration of life."

Truths to Impress.

1. That it is a worthy ambition to wish to be remembered after we are dead.
2. That there is a might and a majesty in death which must affect the life.
3. That prosperity means responsibility.
4. That the prosperity of the good is an irritation to the wicked.
5. That selfishness is cruel even when it does not deliberately intend to be.
6. That persecution never did kill, but usually fans into new life.
7. That cruelty always grows more cruel as it tries to satisfy itself.
8. That the more we suffer the more must we look to God and follow His plans.

Shall I Drop It?

Killing Two Birds with One Stone.

A man said: "I nearly killed two birds with one stone when I ruined stomach and nerves with coffee. Quit it? Well, I think so. I had rather be well, feel good, eat meals, sleep well and be able to do something in this world than to have all the coffee on earth."

Brain workers can get on with coffee a while, but the day comes when dyspepsia begins to show its head, then come times when the brain gets tired and has to be pushed. That's the time to look out, for it is a sure forerunner of that terrible disease, Nervous Prostration and probable paralysis.

Coffee poison affects stomach and nerves (the brain included), and if persisted in will do its work sure as the sun is sure to rise. Medicine will not avert the final attack. There is but one thing to do. Drop it, if you show the least sign of the poison affecting you in stomach, nerves, kidneys, bowels, eyes or heart.

It is easy to change from coffee to Postum Food Coffee if you insist on having Postum prepared by long boiling. That brings out the taste and food value.

Breastworks of Snow Offer Safe Defence.

Recent experiments made in Norway have proved that snow is a substance which offers a surprising resistance to penetration by a rifle bullet. Its resistance has been found to be far greater than wood, tho not, of course, so great as earth. It was shown that a wall of snow, four feet thick, is absolutely proof against the Norwegian army rifle, which is an arm of great penetrative force. Volleys were fired at the snow breastworks, first at a distance of half a mile, and then gradually at decreasing distances, until the range was only 50 yards, and the white walls were not once penetrated. This suggests a new means of field defence in winter campaigning, snow being much more easily handled than earth or sand bags. Troops entrenching themselves in snow banks would be a novel and picturesque sight. It is disputed whether or not Andrew Jackson made use of cotton bales in his defences at the battle of New Orleans, tho he got the credit for having done so. Whether he did or not, he will have to give place in the matter of novel breastworks to the general who shall first use field fortifications of snow.

Raising a Colt on Cow's Milk.

The following answer is given by The National Stockman and Farmer to a correspondent asking advice on this subject:

(1) The milk used should be from a cow that has just become fresh. (2) Teach the colt to drink by all means. (3) Feed as often as every two hours for the first week and feed it at a temperature of 100 degrees as near as possible. (4) Feed from a tin vessel, never from a wooden one. (5) A pint at a feed is enough for the first week. As it grows older increase and make the interval longer between feeds. (6) Let it have fine, well-cured clover or mixed hay whenever it will eat. (7) Don't feed it any corn, either cooked or uncooked, but feed oats and wheat bran mixed equally, as a rule a pint at a feed after it learn to eat them three times daily. Watch the bowels. If constipated before it will eat solid food add a spoonful of molasses to the milk. If too loose in the bowels add a tablespoonful of a mixture of peppermint essence and tincture of ginger to each feed of milk until the passages are natural. (8) No set rules can be laid down in raising a colt by hand, they vary so much in size and individuality. They need as much care as a baby for the first month. They need at this season to be kept warm, and all depends upon the one who cares for them havin ggood sense and judgment. The one who tries by rule generally fails.
