HANLAN WILL ACCEPT.

A TALK WITH THE EX-CHAMPION OARSMAN.

He Cables Over a Deposit to Make a Match with Beach—Cambridge Wins Her Nineteenth Victory Against Oxford—A Splendid Race.

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 3.—William Beach, the champion sculler, sailed yesterday for England. He challenges any man in the world to row him on the Thomas for the championship.

The above despatch was received by The World on Saturday, and a young man was at once despatched to see Hanlan and ascertain what he was going to do about it. Hanlan was at home, and said it was the first he had seen of the telegram. He inquired if it was bona fide, and, being assured that it was, said, "then I must hurry up and get in ahead of anybody else," evidently referring to Teemer and the other oarsmen who had been indulging in winter talk as to their intense anxiety to cross blades with the wonderful Dapto oarsman. He consequently authorized The World man to draw up and send the following cablegram at his expense:

W. J. Innes, News of World, London:

TORONTO, April 4—Post at once one hundred pounds forfeit for a five hundred pound match against Beach on the Thames with Sportsman.

HANLAN.

The cablegram was forwarded last night to Mr. Innes, who is the most prominent backer of oarsmen in England, and had previously secured from Hanlan a promise that if the Australian invaded England he should be his backer. Hanlan rather regretted that he had made engagements in Eastern Canada that would keep him this side of the Atlantic until July, but having entered into them he would act up to his promises, even though the championship should have been lost and won. But then, he added, it will take seven weeks for Beach to reach England, and that will bring him up to nearly the end of June and he will not want to row any good man before the latter part of August. "I will sail for England," Hanlan said, "about the middle of July and shall be prepared to row six or seven weeks from landing there, that is somewhere about the first week in September." "That's a long time to look ahead isn't it Ned," was the query. "Oh, no," he replied, "under the circumstances it is perfectly reasonable. Beach cannot receive my challenge officially until he arrived and he will only be too glad of the two months' grace." "Well, Ned, how have you wintered and in what condition will you be for racing?" "I have not," was the response, "taken better care of myself for ten years than I have done this winter. I have had all the iceboating I could get and have taken regular exercise. Oh, yes, I'm feeling splendid." "But, are you not stouter than ever before?" "Yes, I've made flesh pretty freely. I weigh 185 pounds as I stand, but I can bring myself down thirty pounds with ease, and will step into my boat when I row Beach at 154 or 156 lbs. By the way," continued the ex-champion, "I had made during the winter by Waring the finest racing boat that has ever been built for me. It is made after my own model, and its dimensions are: length 31 ft. 5 in., breadth 10½ in. depth 5½ inches and weight 27 pounds. She will prove, I really believe, 3 or 10 seconds faster in a mile than any shell I have ever previously rowed in. The great improvements always been that I could never get a boatbuilder to make a boat after my own idea. They always thought me a crank and in spite of the fact that I was the man who had to do the work would firmly declare that they knew more about the kind of implement I wanted to work with than I did myself. Possibly it was so and possibly it was not. Anyhow I rowed, but now I've got a boat made by a splendid workman after my own model and I think she will prove as near perfection as possible. Of course, she will be fitted with all the latest improvements, and it is my hope to row the first race in her against Beach. Then, if I win, it will not only be one more pronounced victory won by me as a Canadian, but will be more particularly my own than any that have gone before." "And you feel confident of beating the Antipodean?" "Yes, he will not have everything his own way on the Thames. The umpire's boat will not, for instance, be kept waiting an hour until the tide is better adapted for main strength. The race will be rowed at the time fixed, and each man will have an equal show. Yes, I think I can win, and I tell you people who think my best days are over stand a very fair show of being grievously disappointed. I am only 31, and some years junior to Beach. Why, many of the best oarsmen have not come to their prime until they were past my age. I am in splendid trim for a summer campaign and think I shall do as well if not better, this year than ever before. From this out I shall begin to reduce in flesh, so that my system will not suffer from any hasty and sudden reduction. Furthermore, I am now relieved of business cares and can give up my whole time and attention to my profession." "How about Teemer?" was a natural question. "Oh," said Hanlan, "my first aim is to get the championship of the world back, and then Teemer will not think himself so much a cock of the walk as he is at present disposed to do. He met me when I was laboring under great disadvantages, and wants to make the most of it. I don't blame him. Rowing is his profession, as it is mine, and he has a right to make the most out of it, as I have tried to do and propose to continue doing. It is no more than everybody else does out of his calling." "What about these engagements in Eastern Canada? There appears to be some confusion. Are you going to row Ross or not?" "Yes, I am under engagement to row Wallace on the Richelieu river, at St. John's Que., on July 1st for a purse of $2000." The report about the race being cancelled and your engagement with Hosmer is erroneous?" "Yes, I was invited to St. John's by the mayor and others and treated princely. If they wanted me to row Teemer or Beach there I said the race would have to be for $5000 but I would row Ross for $2000, the winner to take two thirds and the loser one-third. They said they could raise the latter amount and I agreed to row. Then I went on to Quebec, where I was again treated magnificently. I told the people there the same thing and they said they could raise a purse of $1500 or $2000 for a race on the beautiful Lake St. Joseph, which is a regular sportman's paradise, abounding with fish of all kind. I again agreed and June 21 is the date named. I gave them a list of the most prominent oarsmen, from whom the local committee will choose an opponent for me. People say a man is not a prophet in his own country but I can tell you that I found the Quebecers a splendid race of men and very anxious to do all they could to further the interests of a fellow-countryman, even supposing he did come from the rival province of Ontario."

The Battle of the Blues.

LONDON, April 3.—The annual University boat race between the Oxford and Cambridge crews was rowed over the usual course on the Thames from Putney to Mortlake, and resulted in a victory for Cambridge. The sky was cloudy, the weather mild and the wind pretty strong at the start and during the race. The water was sufficiently "lumpy" to put to a thorough test the stamina of the men engaged in the contest. The betting was in favor of the Cambridge crew. A manufacturing company of New England sent up several hundred small balloons from Putney containing advertisements of their wares and offering some of them free to finders of the balloons. There was consequently great rushing by immense crowds to receive the balloons as they came to the ground. A large gang of rough and ill-clad men marched in procession along the race course, headed by a band and bearing a banner containing the inscription, "You live; we starve." Oxford won in the toss for choice of stations. The boats were started even and were kept so by as fine a contest as was ever witnessed on the course for about a mile. Then the Cambridge boat was pulled a few feet ahead. In this second stage the race was exciting. The Cambridge men made several desperate spurts to get away from their competitors, but the latter responded instantly and successfully to each, and when Hammersmith bridge was reached the Cambridge boat was but a quarter of a length ahead. A mile and a half had now been rowed and the contest continued stubborn, fairly even and exciting up to the two-mile-and-one-half point, opposite Chiswick church. Here Oxford spurted. The boat responded until its prow got even with that of Cambridge and then passed it by a few feet. The Cambridge men gradually sent their boat up even with that of Oxford, and the boats were kept even until Barnes' bridge was passed. Here neither crew had any visible advantage, and both were straining to such a point that each over-passed form and splashed. The people along the banks and on the boats following were wild with excitement, and cries of "dead heat," "dead heat," were everywhere heard, but near the finish the Cambridge men were able to add one spurt to their long sustained pull and it moved their craft at forty-two strokes to the minute a few feet ahead and they passed the limit almost a half length in advance, winning one of the greatest races ever rowed over the course. The excitement at the close was thrilling. As no point during the entire race had it been possible for either crew to get more than half a length ahead of its rival. The race is everywhere pronounced the greatest pulled on the Thames since the dead heat of 1877. The length of the course was four and one-quarter miles. The time made by Cambridge was 22.10½, the longest occupied in any of the university races since the contest of 1877. The tide was poor and the race was rowed against head winds almost the whole way. These two facts explain the time made, in view of the continuous hard pulling done by the crews. The men of both crews were very much exhausted at the finish. The Oxford boat was steered badly.

The following were the crews:

The Alleged "Fire Bug" Again in Custody.

William Lindsey, the young man who has been repeatedly arrested, but never convicted, on charges of incendiarism, and who has gained for himself the cognomen of "The Fire Bug," was locked up early Saturday morning by Detective Cuddy. He will probably get a hearing this morning.

THE AIR TELEGRAPH.

Dr. A. M. Rosebrugh Reads a Paper Before the Canadian Institute.

At the weekly meeting of the Canadian Institute held on Saturday night Dr. A. M. Rosebrugh read an interesting paper in The Air Telegraph. He dealt with the subject very comprehensively. The doctor referred to an article in the New York Electrical World describing the first public test of the air telegraph on the Staten Island railroad. The second public test was made on March 19 between Chicago and Milwaukee, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, on which occasion about 200 gentlemen, representing railway, telegraph, telephone and other interests, were present. This second test appeared to have been fully as satisfactory as that on the Staten Island railroad. The Doctor then exhibited some drawings representing the arrangement of the apparatus on the train and at the railway station and explained in detail the several factors that contribute to make the air telegraph a possibility, dividing them into four parts: The electric generator, the receiver, the inductive device and the protectors. The question of priority of invention was next discussed, the Doctor asserting that the so-called "air telegraph" was largely a Canadian invention, and explaining at some length his reasons for arriving at this conclusion. With regard to the commercial value of the air telegraph and the probable position it is destined to take in commercial economy, Dr. Rosebrugh was not in a position to say, but it had excited much interest among railway men, which statement the Doctor could not better substantiate than by quoting from an article appearing in the March number of the North American Review by Thomas A. Edison.

The Recent Freshet.

From the Hamilton Spectator.

The London Free Press very properly rebukes the Toronto World, forasmuch as the flippant Toronto journal alluded to Mr. Bernard Constantine McCann—the president of the London emptyness where the baseball club was—as "Barney McCann." The Free Press plainly and boldly tells The World that it "ought to know that undue familiarity is calculated at times to breed contempt." It is to be hoped that the scurrilous World will be induced to reform, and that it will in future speak respectfully of people who belong to baseball organizations of other cities than its own. The Free Press is not one of those inconsistent journals that preach what they do not practice. When it has occasion to mention a Toronto or a Hamilton baseball man it does not indulge in familiarity. It alludes to him respectfully as a "fad," a "traitor," a "sneak," or as a "beer-jerker," who is full of "treachery" and "dishonesty," and belongs to a "mongrel" organization. We sincerely hope The World will give up its bad habit of "undue familiarity."

Mr. Badger, of Montreal, arrived in town yesterday to valuate the damages of the Bell company in the late fire. Mr. H. P. Dwight will act for the insurance companies. They will probably make an award by evening.

Mr. C. F. Sise, the vice-president of the Bell company, left at noon yesterday for Chicago to buy new switch-boards. Temporary or discarded switches will have to be used until new ones can be made.

Mr. Nellson has thirty-five line men at work leading the wires into the new building at the corner of Adelaide and Bay, where the temporary switches will be set up.

It is not settled that the company will go back to the Mail building.

The Major and the Reporter.

It having been reported on Saturday that Chief of Police Draper had written to Mr. Mowat relative to holding an inquiry into the causes of the fire in the Mail building, a World reporter called last night at Mr. Draper's residence to ascertain what conclusion had been arrived at. Major Draper, ever since he has been at the head of the police force, was never known to give a newspaper man a civil answer, and the present was no exception to the rule. The Major said the reporter had a great deal of cheek to attempt to pry into official business, and he was gruffly edged towards the door. From another source it was learned that it is within the range of probabilities that such an enquiry would be held.

Couldn't Show His Cow.

Editor World: In reference to the removal of the cattle market, I for one can give my experience of what I had to contend against. Having a cow for sale, I sent her to the market, and when I arrived there I was informed by the parties who were in charge that there was no room for me, and to get out. I was compelled to remain outside at as convenient a place as I could select until others had made their sales. This was a loss to me in not being able to show my cow.
