Merchant's Gargling Oil!

A Liniment for Man and Beast.

"Whether for use on man or beast, Merchant's Gargling Oil will be found an invaluable Liniment, and worthy of use by every resident in the land. We know of no proprietary medicine or article now used in the United States which shares the good will of the people to a greater degree than this. Yellow wrapper for animal and white for human flesh."—N. Y. Independent.

Extract from a letter from G. H. Simmonds, Unionville, Ia., July 24, 1873.—"I am selling more Gargling Oil than all the liniments put together, and I am keeping twelve different kinds. I think it is the best remedy for horseflesh in existence, and can say it without fear of successful contradiction."

Extract from a letter from Shoemaker & Co., Bloomington, Ind., Sept, 17th, 1873.—"It is the popular horse liniment in this country."

Extract from a letter from Geo. A. Snell, Braman's Corners, N. Y., Aug. 9th, 1873.—"I sell more of your Gargling Oil than of all other liniments combined, and have seen it used on horses and cattle with good effect when others have failed."

Extract from a letter from Pattee & Co., Derry, N. H., Aug. 26th, 1873.—"We think your Gargling Oil one of the best articles for what it is recommended that we have ever used or sold."

Extract from a letter from Snowdon & Gibbs, Concordia, Kan., July 28th, 1873.—"We sell more of your Gargling Oil than of any liniment we keep."

Merchant's Gargling Oil as a Family Liniment.

We are now, and have been for some years, preparing the Oil free from stain, to be used as a common liniment for human flesh, extracting the coloring ingredient which has heretofore rendered it objectionable. This Oil possesses all the medicinal properties of that prepared with the dark tinge for horses and cattle, and will be found one of the best remedies for all purposes where a liniment is required that has ever been manufactured.

From J. K. Fisher, Uniontown, Pa., Jan. 31, 1857.—"Your Gargling Oil is doing much better here than formerly, since its virtues have become known; and the bottles put up for family use, without stain, are much sought for."

☞ The Gargling Oil called "Family Oil," although prepared intentionally for human flesh, answers as well for beasts; vice versa, the dark Oil answers as well for human flesh, only it will stain and discolor the skin, but not permanently. Yellow wrapper for animal and white for human flesh.

Merchant's Gargling Oil as an Internal Remedy.

Merchant's Gargling Oil is a diffusible stimulant and carminative. It can be taken internally when such a remedy is indicated, and is a good substitute for pain killers, cordials and anodynes. For Cramps or Spasms of the Stomach, Colic, Asthma, or Internal Pain, the dose may be from fifteen to twenty drops, on sugar, or mixed with syrup in any convenient form, and repeated at intervals of three to six hours. Yellow wrapper for animal and white for human flesh.

MERCHANT'S GARGLING OIL is the Standard Liniment of the United States. Established 1833. Large size, $1; medium, 50c.; small, 25c.; small size for family use, 25c. Manufactured at Lockport, N. Y., by M. G. O. Co., and sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER VII.

A SERVICE IN THE MORMON TABERNACLE—BRIGHAM YOUNG AS A SPEAKER—THE CHURCH'S SHARE OF ITS MEMBERS' PROPERTY.

The day on which we visited the tabernacle was fine, and the attendance large; the great Chief never failing, even under adverse conditions, to draw full houses. The galleries were packed with the juniors and a portion of the male Saints; the body of the church was occupied—as we before stated—mostly by women, and around the altar, were the chief officers with a formidable array of subalterns. Previous to the entry of the speaker there was a good deal of quiet whispering but, still, nothing indecorous. Precisly at the time appointed clad in asuit of sober grey. Laying aside his hat and looking around, he seats himself. All is hushed: a pin could be heard to drop in any part of the building. Rising, he gives out a hymn, with slow and distinct enunciation his eye, in the meantime seeming to take in every detail and person before him. As he notes the devout bearing of sister Sanctity there is an unmistakable appearance of satisfaction; but, when his eye rests on the gaudy feathers and flaring shawl which are displayed by the newly made, youthful wife of Deacon Jones, he cannot conceal his displeasure. After regarding her sternly, a look of sorrowful reproach is bestowed on the good Deacon, which we interpret as follows: "My good Jones, why do you allow yourself to be led to sanction such vanities; of course the pleadings of a young and attractive wife are hard to resist; I know how it is myself. But you've got to strike a line somewhere and why, why not set it up between her and those abominable feathers which are so unbecoming to a Saint; I do hope you'll look to this matter."

Jones does take the hint, notwithstanding he seems absorbed in the pages of the hymn book. In the meantime the singing begins and the entire congregation take part in it. If the excution is not very fine the effect, on the whole, is agreeable. The tune is simple and there are, consequently, few discords, while the volume of sound fills the entire building. On the completion of four or five verses which is from the book of Mosiah—a division of the book of Marmon—chapter and verse long forgotten. The prophet (Mosiah) beseeches the Nephites (the people of God) to shun the Lamanites (the Amalekites of the Scriptures.) They were to have no intercourse with them whatever, as evil communications corrupt good manners, and whenever opportunity offered they were to be treated as some wild and lawless brute, whose presence was a perpetual menace to the public weal. By substitution he quite naturally, placed the Mormons in the position of the former and we, as members of the Gentile family were assigned an inheritance in this world and a place hereafter among the heathen. On this congenial text Brigham speedily grows eloquent. When enlarging on the privileges of the Saints he gestulates wildly. When he tells them to beware of the Gentile in their midst he is stern and anthoritative. The ladies especially are warned against our fascinations, and are bluntly charged not even to show us their ankles as they walk the streets. This was going fast from the sublime to the ridiculous; so that we found it impossible to restrain a smile. Losing sight of the text altogether a rambling and incoherent discourse is the consequence. Every possible advantage of the female saint here and hereafter is duly enlarged on in order that we may not be able to imbue them with the leaven of dissatisfaction. The Gentiles are warned that now is the accepted time and that to-morrow will be too late for them as it was for the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah. The good Bishops are charged to keep a vigilant eye on the members of their flock and to put down schism with a firm hand. The faithful are incited to habits of industry. The needs of the Church were many and increasing. Missionaries in all parts of the world were accomplishing wonders, but, to continue this, required money. Tithes were not sufficient to sustain the present staff but he was glad to say that the Lord had opened the hearts of many wealthy Saints and they had given liberally. This course was worthy of imitation. A man never lost anything by giving to the Lord. He could return it tenfold and he would too. We would remark that the worshippers of Baal and Ashtaroth thought so, also, and—and how many special offerings are misappropriated under this specious plea. We were very much

DISAPPOINTED IN BRIGHAM,

As an orator and reasoner, he is a failure. His discourse wants connection and long before the subject is closed the main statements are buried under a heap of rubbish, so as to be wholly lost to the majority of his hearers. His forte lies in reiteration and great earnestness, combined with an indomitable will. The doctrines which he preaches appears to be a part of his existence to the ignorant multitude to whom he holds forth weekly. Assume that these are correct and he is irresistible. He delivers the message of the Almighty before it is fairly cold and who can, or dare gainsay such an authority? He might fairly be likened to a stump orator who harps on the party platform; refers to the constitution and other great and broad questions, and finally loses sight of these in frivolous side issues, ending with a tirade of personal abuse and wholesale denunciation. Nevertheless, the great Chief is no common man.

AS THE HEAD OF AN ORGANIZATION,

he has no superior, being cool, resolute and far-seeing and, where the occasion may require it, as affable as a ward politican. Every body is known to him and none are passed without a friendly nod, shake of the hand or kindly enquiry as to the well-being of themselves and families. Should the party be from an outlying district the interview will be more protracted. Minute enquires will be made in regard to all public matters, in order to test the correctness of the head officer's report and he will inform himself in all affairs pertaining to the farming interest. The value of every man's possessions in land, kine, and growing crops is ascertained as minutely as possible and the result noted down on the spot. Information gathered in this manner is of great importance in arriving at a just conclusion as to whether some Saint is not withholding from the Lord (Brigham's Treasurer) the divinely ordered portion. As a general thing the Church gets its lawful share.

THE CHURCH AND ITS SHARE OF WORLDLY GOODS.

Where every man's hand and tongue is against every other man it is impossible to hide an increase in worldly possessions, even if a man were determined to risk the reprobation of the Church and scorn of the community; besides a forfeit of at least an amount equal to the tax. This tax is sufficiently onerous. It amounts to one tenth of all production and increase in all kinds of stock. As money is not one of the staples, contributions have to be received in kind. This necessitates the erection of large buildings in central localities which are denominated "tithing offices." When a large quantity of the various grains and vegetables are accumulated a contract is made with Uncle Sam for the supply of some outlying fort and the whole turned into ready money. The immigrant, also, becomes a purchaser to a certain extent and, large sums were received from the overland Mail and Telegraph Companies. The surplus is disposed of to needy brethren who make a return when a crop is secured or in labour at the time of receipt. Brigham has full control of all this and, as he has only to render an account to the Lord, no other Auditor is required. This system of auditing, though generally admitted to be correct in principle, has not been found to work satisfactorily, or give that security for the proper use of funds which the public imagine they should have. The reckoning is looked on as very far off (though it may come in a moment) and, as usual, in such cases, laxness is the rule. It is not surprising, under these circumstances, that Mr
