St. Lukes Church Concert.

The sacred concert given in St. Luke's church last evening by the Music Union, assisted by Mrs. Perley, was a musical event of a truly enjoyable character. The choruses by the Union were admirably given under the direction of Mr. T. H. Hall and were marked by precision and agreeable shading, evincing that much regard has been paid in rehearsal to that important feature of chorus singing, the expression. The selections in the programme were all good and Mrs. Perley's recitative and aria from St. Paul "I will sing" was received with an unanimous sentiment of regret that it was so short. The beautiful selection was sung most sweetly and the singer seemed to be in particular good voice. The quartette, "Guide me O thou great jehovah" by Jennie Hall, Mrs. W. J. Stewart, Mr. J. H. Hall and Mr. McSorley, was very smoothly and pleasantly rendered, Miss Hall singing her solo very well indeed. The solos of Mr. Rodgers "The storm" and of Mr. McSorley "From the depth" by Campana were also well received. The organ solo by Miss Farmer, and the reading by Rev. L. G. Stevens and the trombone solo were excellent. The concert was one of the best given in the North end for a long time past.

Y. M. C. A.—The annual meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held this evening at 8 o'clock.

NOMINATED.

latter the speaker hoped he would be continued in, while he was able for the duties—a fitting reward for his eminent services in political life; and in this hope he knew all the people joined.

In closing he referred to the C. P. R. its palatial trains on land; its palace steamers on sea; by which with speed and comfort we can go round the world, and for this crowning glory of our commercial empire, he said we are indebted to those eminent leaders, Sir George Stephen, Sir Donald A. Smith, G. W. Van-Horne of the Canada Pacific railway and to Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Leonard Tilley in the Parliament of Canada, six names that would ever be linked in the construction of this, the greatest and best gift to this Dominion. Senator Boyd looked for a prosperous future yet for St. John under the regime of the grand old chieftain Sir John A. Macdonald.

Senator Boyd was followed by

who had listened eagerly to the words of the latter. He had been impressed by the reading of Sir John's manifesto, and he believed truly that the coming election is based on some of the gravest questions in the history of the country. As descendants of our loyalist forefathers, he did not believe our people would throw away their glorious heritage, cut aloof from Great Britain and become a vassal of the United States (cheers). He regretted that we had in our midst a paper disloyal to our country and one that was endeavoring to falsely make the United States believe that we are willing to be governed in trade matters at Washington—a sheet that would not for a moment be tolerated in the United States. But he had faith in the verdict of March 5th, and believed that the government would be sustained by a still greater majority than it was sustained by the last election. In concluding, Mr. Smith impressed upon the electors to vote the straight ticket, the whole ticket and nothing but the ticket.

MR. CHAS. A. EVERETT

was loudly called, and he responded in an able address, cut short, however, by the entrance of the committee, who had by this time chosen three candidates. Mr. Everett felt that every one present would endorse the sentiments so nobly expressed by Sir John, and not only these present, but every one in the city and county of St. John, who was loyal to the crown and loyal to the best interests of the country would endorse them. The issue now before the people was only the continuation of the policy of 1878. Shifting had been the policy of the Liberal party, that party which was now saying that the government had stolen their policy. He thanked God the government had not done that. The chieftain of the party of progress, of the national party, resided in Canada; where did the chieftain who formulated the policy of the Liberals reside? In the city of New York and there he had been sought by Sir Richard Cartwright and Mr. Laurier.

The committee at this stage returned, and in conclusion Mr. Everett called upon the electors to vote for the candidates that were chosen one and all.

Dr. Bayard presented the names to the chairman who read as follows:—Ezekiel McLeod for the city and C. N. Skinner and J. Douglas Hazen for the county, a ticket which was unanimously accepted and loudly applauded.

J. DOUGLAS HAZEN

was cheered as he stepped to the platform, and in an eloquent speech he thanked the electors for the nomination. He had not sought it; from personal grounds he had thought all along that it would be better that he should not be nominated. Early in the campaign his friends had expressed the wish of seeing him one of the candidates; but he had returned to all of them the one answer. He had been a resident of St. John for a comparatively short period, and while he recognized the high honor of being a candidate of such a constituency, and had always desired to take part in the contest, yet he thought it would be better to be a supporter of others, who had for a longer period been in the constituency and were better fitted as the representatives of the people to be sent to support the grand old chieftain, and were his own personal choice considered, to be a humble follower in the ranks than become a standard bearer and one of the foremost in the fight.

Continuing, Mr. Hazen said: To-day, when prominent members of our party came to me and said: "If you are nominated will you run?" I then gave them the same answer that I detailed, but also stated that if nominated I would serve the party in securing their best interests, though I was of opinion that their interests would be better if placed in other hands. Still after the nomination has been accorded me by so influential an assembly—and not by any mere clique or put up arrangement—I will cheerfully accept it. (Cheers.) I will consider it my duty to do whatever my party calls upon me to do. This is my position before you tonight, and having been nominated by you I will do my utmost to carry out your views and promote your welfare. From this day to the fifth of March I will, so far as I can manage to do it,

SPARE NO TIME OR PAINS

to secure victory for the party whose standard I bear; my time will be at your disposal and if I can I will carry it, on the fifth day of March, to victory. (Applause.) I will, if I do so, be proud for my own sake but prouder for the sake of my party. (Cheers.) I feel that my position on the ticket is due to the young men of the city. A few months ago several members of the party having in mind the fact that since the last election there had been added to the voting list in the city 1,500 names and in the whole county 3,000 names, mostly those of the young men who would at this election for the first time exercise their franchise, formulated and carried into being the Junior Liberal Conservative association and of which I became a member, and it is due to this fact I have no doubt that I owe my nomination and the honorable position of being a candidate of the liberal conservative party in the largest, the most populous and the most intelligent constituency in the maritime provinces. It is the duty of the young men to fight unceasingly, to watch the progress of affairs and to use every honest and legitimate effort to see that the choice of the party is upheld. I shall ask all, not to consider that I am the man to be elected, but to consider that Mr. Skinner, Mr. McLeod and myself are the three men to be elected—the whole ticket—and to

and if we stand loyally by one another I feel that on the 5th of March we will relieve this city from the stigma of being an obstacle in the path of progress, and that there will be returned to parliament three men to support Sir John A. Macdonald in the efforts he puts forth for the advancement of our country. (Cheers.)

A canvas, said Mr. Hazen, would be used against him on account of his short residence in St. John, but every interest he now had was centered in St. John, and for St. John he would work with best efforts. He referred to his stand in the Short Line matter when he held the office of mayor of Fredericton, and his explanation of the case was received with applause. Then the speaker pointed out the issue upon which the election would be run. It is the most important issue that has agitated the people of Canada for the past twenty years. For years this country has been regarded by the people of the United States as a land of perpetual snow and ice; they could take it when they wanted, but what good would it be when it was taken. A change had now come over the vision of their dreams, for after Confederation when they saw that we were not so small or helpless as they supposed; and when in the course of a few years they saw that the Canadian Pacific railway was an accomplished fact, that we were an unbroken chain of provinces from ocean to ocean: when they saw that we were united by that great undertaking; when they saw that we had the larger half of the continent, and the better part of the wheat belt on the continent, as they began to realize all these thing the idea that we were nothing began to disappear from their minds.

The United States in 1878 wanted us to accept their terms, but Sir John A. Macdonald inaugurated his policy—the national policy, which has ever since been sustained, and demonstrated to the people of United States that we could get along with our own markets. This policy of unrestricted reciprocity defined by—not Mr. Laurier—but by Mr. Erastus Wiman, of New York, is that we must adopt the Amerian tariff against the rest of the world, that we should give up the control of our tariff to those at Washington and let them make our laws; in other words, we have no brains here to make laws for ourselves. Such, said the speaker, is the humiliating position in which some desire to place us. Unrestricted reciprocity would mean the equalizing of our tariff with that of the United States, a discrimination against the mother country; it would disorganize trade, especially the wholesale trade; but the most trenchant argument against it, to his mind, was that it would give away with the revenue now collected by duties necessary to carry on the government of the country. The money needed amounts to about $20,000,000, and of this sum about $7,500,000 is raised on goods imported from the United States. This would be lost under unrestricted reciprocity, and about $7,000,000 more would be lost on account of the higher tariff against Great Britain, in $14,500,000, to recoup which it would be necessary to impose direct taxation.

Time did not permit him to go into figures or arguments to any length but, he would meet the electors at different occasions during the campaign and he hoped before the 5th of March to know each and every one of them personally. Concluding, he said it did not do to underrate the enemy. All should go manfully into the fray and go in to win. Let each one vote for the whole ticket and on the fifth of March St. John would be found ranged alongside of the large majority of constituencies in Canada and in line under the leadership of their old chieftain Sir John A. Macdonald. (Prolonged applause and cheers.)

G. N. SKINNER, M. P.

was loudly applauded when he took the platform. He said owing to the lateness of the hour, he would merely say that he accepted the nomination and would do his utmost to gain a victory of his party. He had every faith in the victories to be won on March 5th, for already men were coming forward to support the government who had never supported it before. He had every faith that this dominion would continue its British allegiance, and would not now at the call of a foreign power cast aside the mantle of national greatness, that almost enveloped her shoulders.

E. M'LEOD

was received with great enthusiasm and he thanked the electors for their nomination, which he cheerfully accepted. He would meet the electors many times during the present month.

Cheers were given for the candidates the Queen, Sir John A. Macdonald, and the chairman, and before the meeting broke up Geo. F. Smith was chosen permanent chairman, and J. T. Twining Hartt, permanent secretary.

LYTELL'S RETURN.—Theatre goers will be pleased at the opportunity given them for almost another week of dramatic entertainment. Mr. Lytell's company has returned from Halifax and open at the Institute this evening in "Hands Across the Sea," a play that is considered by many competent critics the best its author has written. Besides the pleasure lovers of the drama will experience in seeing and hearing in this play Mr. Lytell and Mr. Edwards, who have won the esteem of all St. John patrons of the drama by earnest conscientious work, there is another attraction in the fact that Olive West who personates the leading lady's character in "Hands Across the Sea" has played the same role in Charles Jefferson's company for several months.
