AIRSHIP SEASON NOW ON

Many Mishaps to Parisians From Their Flying Machines.

Paris, Feb. 14.—The flying machine season is here. In a balloon of the Aero Club No. 3 Vicomtesse and Baron de Cadier de Veax made a successful ascent, remaining above Paris two hours. Charlotte, the 11-year-old daughter of the baron, was a passenger, being the second French child to make a voyage in a free balloon.

A stop not so successful was that of Henry Gordet, a Lyons engineer, in experimenting with a flying machine at Bel Air. Like Darius Green, he leaped from a roof with a machine he had just completed. It sailed for a while and then collapsed. Gordet is in a hospital with a broken leg and other injuries.

Another emulator of Santos-Dumont has just come to grief. Lifebure, an engineer, worked patiently with flying machines in a room in the Rue Hotel de Ville here. The other day the machine exploded, wounding Lifebure and causing a fire which threatened to destroy the house.

The Aero Club de France has just founded a grand prix to be competed for annually in October in the Tuileries.

A project is being promoted to organize an academie des sportsmen in imitation of the Academy of Immortels. The new academy is not necessarily designed to reform the spelling in the literature of sports, but it is hoped it will be more active and enterprising than the immortels, and perhaps have a voice in the organization of international contests. The membership is to be limited to 40.

A GOOD MEDICINE requires little advertising. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil gained the good name it now enjoys, not through elaborate advertising, but on its great merits as a remedy for bodily pains and ailments of the respiratory organs. It has carried its fame with it wherever it has gone, and it is prized at the antipodes as well as at home. Dose small, effect sure.

RAKE'S SUICIDE WAS DRAMATIC

Woman Robbed Him of Everything Except Pin—Pierced Heart With It.

Vienna, Feb. 12.—The follies of Franz Kutzner, which have been the talk of Galicia for the last three years, have ended in a manner equally strange and tragic. Three years ago Kutzner came into a fortune of $500,000, which he promptly proceeded to dissipate.

His eccentricity was such that he kept this money—a large sum of it in gold—in his rooms at Cracow, and whenever he came to the Austrian capital, brought it with him, under the guard of two professional bullies, to each of whom he paid $2,500 a year.

After tasting the interested affection of at least half a dozen mercenary ladies of questionable character, Kutzner became enamored of one of the handsomest and most vicious women in Austria. His fortune, already dwindling, rapidly vanished altogether under her tuition.

One hundred and fifty thousand dollars went to carriages, horses, jewelry and dress for the rapacious harpy whom he had the misfortune to love.

Disregarding the protests of the guardian bullies, he finally presented her with a duplicate key of his precious money chest, bidding her help herself as she liked. The permission was made the most of. When in the early hours of Monday morning, Kutzner returned from a gambling hell where he had got rid of all his ready money and personal jewelry, he found the money chest absolutely empty, save for a diamond and sapphire scarfpin, which had evidently been overlooked.

The woman had flown. Reduced to desperation, Kutzner determined to kill himself. He wrote a note to the woman, saying: "In robbing me you have overlooked one little thing. That you will find in my heart." On returning from posting the letter, he removed his shirt and drove the scarfpin into his heart.

IT LOOKS LIKE WAR

Plain Words of Lord Lansdowne Over North Sea Case.

London, Feb. 13. — The diplomatic correspondence regarding the North Sea incident and leading up to the appointment of the Paris international commission issued tonight, shows that the affair severely strained Anglo-Russian relations. Foreign Minister Lansdowne insisted that it was a question that admitted of no delay, as public feeling in Great Britain might become uncontrollable.

The correspondence gives a significant conversation between Lord Lansdowne and Count Benckendorff, the Russian ambassador, when the British Government was apprehensive that Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky would continue on his voyage to the far east without calling at Vigo. Lord Lansdowne told Count Benckendorff that "in that case we might find ourselves at war before the week is over," and pointed out the news of the concentration of the British fleets at Gibraltar and elsewhere.

POPE WRITES CZAR

Sends Letter to Emperor After Bloodshed in Russian Capital.

Rome, Feb. 14. — The Pope seems to have been the only authority in Europe who has had the courage to remonstrate, no matter how mildly, with the Czar for the recent shedding of blood in the Russian Empire.

Soon after the bloody happenings in St. Petersbrg and Moscow Pius X., who was greatly affected by the events, sent a personal letter to the Czar, couched in the most amiable terms, venturing the suggestion that perhaps the wishes of the Russian people for more liberty had better find a responsive echo in the heart of the Czar.

A special messenger was dispatched to St. Petersburg with the document which by this time has certainly reached the Czar's hands.

In the best-informed Vatican circles it is not thought that the Pope's impulsive action will have much effect on the Russian autocrat, and it is even feared that it might be considered a diplomatic mistake in Russian governmental circles. However, Pius feels that he has done his duty.

It is said that the letter also recalls the Czar's utterances in summoning the first peace conference at The Hague, and suggests the desirability of ending the war with Japan. It is surmised here that the letter was written at the Mikado's personal request, as direct assurances were recently given to the Vatican that Roman Catholic interests in Japan will be fully protected during the war.

CREED IN THREE REFORMS

The New French Cabinet Seems More Firmly Established

Paris, Feb. 14.—Premier Rouvier's ministry is still alive and even appears to be more firmly established. Debates in the Chamber and discussions in the press have shown that of the three reforms the ministry has adopted that on which it is most strongly united of all is the vote for the separation of church and state.

The other two reforms—that is to say, the income tax and workmen's pensions—present almost insolvable difficulties. For workingmen's pensions the necessary funds do not exist. As to the income tax, it is feared the taxpayers will be discontented.

On the other hand, the separation of church and state will not cost a cent and will even save money. That is why separation comes first. One may almost say it has come first, for on Thursday Bienvenu Martin, Minister of Public Instruction, introduced in the Chamber of Deputies a bill which he signed with his colleagues, the Ministers of Justice, Foreign Affairs and the Interior, after having prepared it himself.

The separation bill is similar to that introduced by M. Braut. Its provisions are as follows:

The state does not recognize or subsidize any form of worship.

Present incumbents of positions in the churches will receive in place of their salaries a life pension of one-half or two-thirds of their pay, with the annual minimum $80.

Property in goods and buildings used for the maintenance of worship and incumbents will be transferred to societies which may be formed to maintain such worship, and which may join with others in unions which may embrace ten departments. These societies will hire from departments and communes buildings at present devoted to worship.

This bill does not provide for a method of nominating bishops and cures. Therefore it will be the Pope, in accord with the religious societies, who will attend to it. It is almost certain there will be a majority of votes for this bill, but we must not conceal the fact that with it we are entering into a period of interminable debates. This is the greatest event of the week.

One other event of importance is the resumption of the good relations between France and Morocco, and the reception of St. Rene Taillandier, envoy of France, by the Sultan. There also must be mentioned the strike now in way of settlement by the electricians of the Edison Company of Paris, and the passing by the Chamber of the appropriations for the postal and telegraph department and for public works.

Debates in the Senate on the law reducing military service to two years, which soon will be adopted, developed a split between the parliamentary socialists and the socialist executive committee. The plan of M. Jaures, who was in favor of participation by the socialists in the programme of the majority, has been abandoned by the party. This is a mistake committed by the party at which others are unwise to
