PLANNING FOR A NEW CANADA

Minister of Labor Talks on Reconstruction to an Ottawa Audience of Veterans

(Ottawa Journal.)

Plans for the reconstruction period of Canada with brief hints of the policies the government is prepared to follow were plainly put forward on Sunday evening by Hon. Gideon Robertson, minister of labor, in an address delivered before the G. W. V. A. and People's Forum. The speaker also made a strong plea for co-operation of all classes of people during the period upon which this country is about to enter.

The world, he said, has had before it from the month of July to the present time the finest example of the value of co-operation that history affords. The success of the Allied arms has been due in no small degree to the splendid co-operation of the armies of the belligerent nations under the leadership of Marshal Foch, and what Foch had accomplished by co-operation in war could be accomplished by the people of Canada applying similar principles to the problems of the reconstruction period.

The ruler of Germany, he asserted, had attempted to produce a one-man government for the entire world and his effort had failed. The war had also produced examples of other kingdoms which had fallen because an attempt was made to govern without the will of the governed.

Canada's soldiers and Canada's women had passed through many Gethsemanes to help win freedom for the world and the Canadian people would be recreant in their duty if they neglected to exert every effort to make such sacrifice worth while.

What Can We Do?

The question resolved itself into two phases: What can we do and how shall we begin to reconstruct our commercial and social life?

Everyone knew that the war would end some day but it was fair to say the end had come more quickly than most people expected. However, some steps had already been taken by the government of Canada to prepare for the after-war period, and to meet the problems which would then be ushered in.

There must be thorough co-operation between the employers of labor and organized labor in order that the progress of the reconstruction programme shall not be interfered with or hampered by industrial strife. Before the men and women who will be thrown out of work by the closing of munition industries can be placed in other occupations, and the soldiers now overseas can be restored to civil life there must be readjustments of present conditions. These will entail some unemployment for a period and some hardship and it will be necessary to do all that can be done in order that such hardship may be reduced to the minimum. He estimated that by the end of the present year in Canada the unemployed will number 200,000 persons. Some of these would suffer inconveniences but the government of Canada was already working to make that inconvenience as small as possible.

It was a conservative estimate that the value of Canada's export of manufactured goods for last year was $600,000,000 and the providing of these goods kept every person busy and prosperous. The government had well founded hope that this volume of trade could be maintained during the coming year by the supply of much of the material required for the restoration of ruined France and Belgium. Orders of this sort would come from London, and to secure such orders the government had caused to be moved from Washington to London a gentleman who, while in Washington had been responsible for turning business this way to the extent of $100,000,000.

Mission in London.

A mission would be established in London to endeavor to attract to Canada all the business possible. If the export trade could be kept up to the mark there would be no question of unemployment.

For the development of export trade, transportation facilities by land and sea were required. The minister of marine already had the creation of a merchant marine underway. As far as could be ascertained, the steps already undertaken would employ 50,000 workmen for the period of nine months.

The speaker expressed his pleasure at the fact that employers and organized labor in Canada had been brought closer together than ever.

Last week, he said, a representative of the lumber association came to his office and promised that 10,000 men would be employed by members of that organization this season, and that current rates of wages would be paid. This was the co-operative spirit.

Another labor employer of whom he had knowledge was less wise. He told his employes that in six months he would have them working for him at half the pay they now received. That man, said the speaker, was in for trouble.

The great railways of the country, he said, "state that 20,000 of their employes had gone overseas and these would be restored to their former positions upon their return. They will also require 11,000 extra men, while two railways alone in Canada estimate that to take care of the improvement work which had not been thoroughly carried out during the war, 28,000 men will be necessary.

"Thousands of men will be employed in the Canadian mines, exclusive of the coal mines.

"The dislocation caused by the stoppage of war orders will be most keenly felt in Ontario and Quebec. On the Pacific coast the British Columbia shipbuilding industry will care for all the men available, while the prairie provinces can absorb on the farms all that will play.

"In the maritime provinces the mines and fisheries will care for those who left those occupations to go into munition work, and there will be no hardship there. In Quebec and Ontario the great majority will have to be provided with other employment, and this can be done if an earnest effort is made to stimulate manufacturing interests to the point where the export trade of the country can be kept up to a war standard."

The minister then dealt briefly with matters considered by the Department of Labor. Arrangements are in the making for opening in every important centre of population in Canada or labor bureaus, to be kept up jointly by the Dominion and the provinces. In time such a policy would mean the abolition of private labor bureaus.

Attention should also be given to the matter of homes for working men, and he hoped that would be accomplished in time. Technical education would also be an important factor in reconstruction, but in the carrying out of any or all of these projects the most complete co-operation was necessary between all the people.

Before and after the address the G. W. V. A. band rendered several selections, and Miss W. Evans sang "For the Glory of the Grand Old Flag," the large audience joining heartily in the refrain.

TRAFALGAR DAY STORY OF DYING SAILOR BOY

One more dramatic story comes from the sea. It was told in connection with the Trafalgar Day celebration by a naval chaplain, the Rev. W. J. Sarey, in his sermon at St. Martin-in-the-Fields Church, in London.

Mr. Carey related how, during an action, he assisted the doctors to attend to men who had been cruelly burned.

O"enlad who was dying," he said, "asked for water. I got him some, but the boy, seeing that the lad next to him needed it as much as himself, wrenched his lips from the cup, and said, 'Give it to him first.' I don't believe the courage and gallantry of Sir Philip Sidney," added Mr. Carey, "was any greater than this almost unknown boy of eighteen."

This simple record recalls the story of the great Sidney, who, when mortally wounded at Zutphen, in 1586, surrendered a cup of water to a dying soldier, with the words, "Thy need is greater than mine."
