Poetry

KATY DARLING.

THE MOST POPULAR IRISH MELODY OF THE DAY.

Oh, they call me chaw as proud, Katy Darling,
Their hearts never more windy!
Did they tell thee I was false, Katy Darling,
Or my love for thee had cooled?
O, they know not the loving
Of the hearts of Erin's sons;
Would I love like to thine, Katy Darling,
If the grave to the race that he runs.

Oh, hear me, sweet Katy,
For the wild flowers grow red, Katy Darling,
And the love birds are singing on each tree;
Will they never more hear me, Katy Darling?
Behold, love, I'm waiting for thee.

I am kneeling by thy grave, Katy Darling!
This world is all a blank world to me!
Oh, doubtest thou hear my wailing, Katy Darling,
Or speak, love, I am sighing for thee!
Oh, methinks the stars are weeping,
In their soft and lambent light;
And they would be melting, Katy Darling,
Couldst thou see thy lone Dermot this night.

Oh, listen, sweet Katy,
For the wild flowers are sleeping, Katy Darling,
And the love-birds are nestling in each tree;
Will they never more hear me, Katy Darling,
Or know, love, I'm kneeling by thee?

'Twill soon all my sleeping, Katy Darling!
But I'm pray that thy spirit be my guide,
And that when life is spent, Katy Darling,
They will lay me down to rest by thy side.
O, I have grief I'm bearing,
Though I scarce can have a sigh;
And I'll ever be dreaming, Katy Darling,
Of thy love every day till I die.

Farewell, then, sweet Katy,
For the wild flowers will blossom, Katy Darling,
And the love-birds will warble on each tree,
But in heaven I shall meet thee, Katy Darling,
For there, love, thou art waiting for me.

CONSTITUTION AND CHARACTER OF AMERICANS.—The population of the United States is composed of the same elements as that of Great Britain. It is of the same mixture of Anglo-Saxon, Scotch, and Celtic blood as in the old country. The Americans, in fact, are nothing else than Englishmen, differentiated under different political and social institutions. They are not cousins of the English, as they are commonly called, but their brothers; born of their bone, and flesh of their flesh. The institutions which have modified the original English character in the Union, are the equality of democracy, highly developed local self-government, and cheap and facile tenure of land, all unfettered by a state church and a hereditary landed aristocracy. In one portion of the Union we had, besides, the institution of slavery; a dead weight, which checks in some degree, the tendency to innovation inherent in every democracy. Like the English, the Americans are a deeply earnest and a religious people; they keep the Sabbath with equal rigour, but they provide also for the religious wants of the entire population by churches and preachers, though the church is nowhere maintained by the state, and cannot draw its revenues, year by year, whether it has to deserve them or not.—Pulszky's White, Red, and Black.

A FACT FOR NATURALISTS.—A Newfoundlander satisfactorily accounts for the short tail of the bear. The bear, it seems, was once met by a fox, who carried a load of fish, and when, in answer to the question how he obtained them, replied that he had caught them by angling. The bear expressed a desire to know how he set about it; when the fox informed him that he had only to make a hole in the ice and insert his tail. "You must stop long enough, and not mind it if it hurt you a little (said the friendly adviser), for a sensation of pain is a sure sign that you have a bite. The longer the time, the more the fish. Nevertheless, when you have a good strong bite be sure you pull out." The credulous bear followed the directions, and kept his tail in the hole till it was frozen fast. When he pulled, the end of the tail came off; and hence the shortness of the appendage at the present day.—Fraser's Magazine.

LAUGHTER.—Laughter is the effect of so many causes that it would require a keen study to trace it, on all occasions, to its real source. There is something, however, in honest laughter from the heart; itself, for instance, as a child, clothed in ruddy health and bounding spirits, is apt to indulge in, which cannot well be misconceived. Contrast the laugh of the unbelieving satirist, or self-styled philosopher, with that just cited, and notwithstanding that both spring from the heart, how wide is the distinction! One is the unconstrained but thankful tribute of innocence to nature; the other a dress proof of moral ingratitude of the most loathsome and despicable kind.

PAYING DEBTS.—It is told of Franklin, that on a certain occasion he loaned a person a sum of money, exacting a promise, that at such a day, the man was able to repay it, he should lend it to some other person who should be in need of it, exacting from him a similar promise to the one he had given to Franklin.

Would this not be an excellent plan for our little friends to adopt, in reference to those from whom they receive, and on whom they confer little kindnesses? It is not always convenient to pay back any little favours we may have received. But if there was an understanding that it must be paid to some one, not much matter who, there would be more frequent interchanges of little acts of kindness, and all would be happier for so doing—try it ye little friends.

"HOW HAPPENED IT," some one inquired of a workman arrested as having acted as chief at one of the Parisian barricades, "that you enlisted in your corps so many thieves and robbers returned from the hulks?" "That is easily explained," replied the insurgent; "when the question is to upset a government, one must not be too nice in the choice of one's instruments; were only honest folks to be reckoned on in like cases, there would be no such thing as getting up an occasional revolution."

TEETH.—Healthy teeth depend mainly on healthy digestion, and on cleanly habits as regards the mouth. They must, of course be confined to the purposes for which they are designed. If they are employed for the purpose of cracking nuts, taking tacks, unscrewing needle cases, or turning the stopper of a smelling-bottle; if the mouth is used as a kind of portable tool-chest, in which a pair of scissors, a knife, a vice, a corkscrew, or any other instrument, may be found at the time of need, there serious and irretrievable injury will eventually be done to the enamel of the teeth, which no abstinence of digestion nor cleanliness of habit will avail to remedy.

CHARCOAL FOR SWINE.—It may not perhaps be generally known that one of the best articles that can be given to swine while in preparation for the pen, is common charcoal. The nutritive properties are so great that they have subsisted on it without other food for weeks together.—Corn treated so as to improve them in motion, and fattened on three pounds of meal per day, and at least as they are worth, have become fat in eight days. The hog may occasionally after a little time, and is never injurious to take a good supply. It should always be kept in the sty, and be fed to the animals regularly like all other food.

MILK AND CREAM.—It is asserted that milk always yields a much greater quantity of the cream when it is kept in metal than in earthen vessels, and that, when cream rises by standing, the milk, thus gotten, and churning, it has been found, generally, the quality of butter is injured by this treatment.

VEGETABLE FOOTED ANTS PREVENT.—It is a curious fact that some vegetables have a peculiarity which insures their preservation from the depredations of ants. For instance, the stalks of Castle Cotton, the Hollyhock, the Mallow, and the Tree Mallow will never, upon any account, be touched by ants; and it is said the democrats will be the greatest sufferers.

A Philadelphia Editor has achieved the following: "Why are the Chinese like balls? Ans. It is up, or Way, because they have spring bottoms.

He whose soul walks by starving alone, is as base as the hope of gaining by it is baseness.
