CHAPTER XVII.

Laura Pomeroy had never looked more beautiful in her life than when she went down to trick Max Remington into making a proposal of marriage to her.

She had a very dainty white lace dress, which she had worn only once, in a bridal scene, at some amateur theatricals before coming to America, and, though she did not like white as well as bright colors, she decided to waive her preference and wear it, because she felt sure that Max knew that Agnes' costume was to be white, and then she hoped to be better able to carry out the deception she intended to practice upon him.

The robe was made with the silken corsage-lining cut very low and sleeveless, while the lace came up close about her throat and fell loose to her wrists, and thus the beautiful pattern of the material was plainly outlined upon her perfect neck and arms.

The skirt was full and flowing, over an underdress of silk, its only garniture being a broad sash of heavy watered ribbon.

Her midnight hair was rolled back from her broad, low forehead, a la Pompadour, and knotted at the back of her well-shaped head. She wore a pair of solitaire diamonds in her ears, and one blazing stone at her throat—they were not genuine, but so well counterfeited that only an expert could detect the sham, and the effect was therefore just as fine—while Max's lovely pink roses lay quivering on her breast.

She was indeed brilliantly, dazzling beautiful. How fair a creature from her Master's hand if her soul were only the counterpart of her person!

She sped down the wide staircase, meeting no one on her way, glided through the long drawing-room and out of the low French window, at its farther end, upon the balcony.

She drew the draperies together as she passed out, so that she might be concealed from the view of any one coming into the drawing-room, and then she sank, excited and panting, upon a chair, her anxious heart beating audibly, for she felt she was staking her all upon this one daring act.

She had thrown a light zephyr hood over her head, more to conceal her dark hair than for protection against the keen October air; she had left nothing undone to carry out the deception, having even sprinkled herself with a few drops of heliotrope—the perfume which Agnes invariably used.

With bated breath and gleaming eyes she sat there, listening for the first fall of the footsteps of the man whom she loved with all the strength of her impassioned nature.

The elegant marble clock on the drawing-room mantel was just on the stroke of eight when Max Remington, in full evening dress, and looking just what he was—a handsome, noble gentleman—stepped lightly over the threshold, passed swiftly down the apartment, swept aside the draperies that hung over the window leading out upon the balcony, and, with a heart-throb of joy, saw a still, white figure sitting there, leaning against the low railing.

With a quick, eager movement, Max bent down and gathered that white-robed form within his arms, drawing the half-concealed head upon his breast and touched the perfumed hair with his tremulous lips.

"My own darling; you are mine! for, by the act of coming here, you have given yourself to me!" he breathed, with a tenderness that thrilled Laura through and through, even though she knew that those soft words were not intended for her, and she yielded herself unresistingly to the ecstasy of the moment, resting upon his bosom, her heart beating in unison with his, her pulses leaping to the rhythm of his voice.

Max did not dream what a terrible mistake he was making, nor of what a crafty plot he was the victim.

The two girls were about the same size and stature; he knew that Agnes intended to wear white that evening, and Laura some rich, warm color; the roses he had sent to Agnes were on her breast, while the delicate perfume of heliotrope completed the deception.

"I love you—I love you," he went on, winding his arms more closely about the supple form, "how I have longed to tell you so for days, but could not; ever since the first hour of our meeting I have known that you were the one woman in the world whom I could take into the sanctuary of my heart and make my wife! I wish I might look into your face and read my fate in these dear eyes," touching them lightly with his lips, "but the darkness will not let me even trace the outline of your features." How Laura blessed the darkness. "But, tell me, dear, that you return my affection; I know you must or you would never rest so content within my arms; still I want to hear the blessed assurance from your lips."

Laura laid her burning cheek against his, and, imitating Agnes' voice and manner as nearly as she could, whispered:

"Max, I do love you with my whole soul! How could I help it?"

"My heart's delight," he murmured, "I am afraid I do not deserve this happiness. And will you be my wife? Give me your promise, dearest, that I may soon call you by that most sacred of names."

"If you think me worthy, Max," were the low-breathed words that fell upon his waiting ears.

"Worthy! My only fear is that I am not worthy of you," he returned, and his tones trembled with the intensity of his emotion, "but my whole life shall be devoted to the endeavor of making you happy."

Just then the door-bell rang a sharp summons, and they knew that the guests were beginning to arrive, while, at the same moment, Mrs. Remington looked in at the lower door of the drawing-room and called:

"Max! Oh," she added, "he is not here. I thought I heard him come down."

"I must go, darling; my mother wants me," he said softly in Laura's ear, as he gently released her, but in so doing the roses on her breast became unfastened and dropped over the balcony railing to the ground.

"Oh, my flowers!" Laura murmured, peering down into the darkness after them, and drawing her soft hood more closely about her face, for the east was beginning to brighten with the rising moon, and she was not ready yet to have Max discover his mistake.

"Have you lost them, dear?" he asked. "Never mind; I can easily get them for you. But first give me the seal to our betrothal; then I must go."

He took her face tenderly between his two hands, and, bending, pressed his lips to hers in a fond and reverent kiss.

Then he vaulted lightly over the low railing of the balcony to search for her flowers.

He could see nothing, but he felt all about on the ground for them, and finally found them directly beneath his feet.

"I believe I have crushed them," he said, regretfully. "I fear, dear, that you cannot wear my colors, after all, tonight. Yes, they are spoiled, and you will have to substitute something in their place."

"Give them to me," Laura whispered. "I shall keep them always."

"Do you care so much for them?" Max asked, a note of even deeper regret in his tone. "But wait; losing them nearly made me forget something far more important. Reach down your left hand, love."

Laura's heart gave a great bound of delight at this command. He had gone much farther than she had dared to hope if he had already purchased the betrothal ring.

But she obediently held out her hand, and he slipped a ring upon her third finger.

"You see, I was very sure I should win you," he said, with a light laugh; then he added, in a tone of surprise, "But it goes on a little hard, and I feared it was so large that you would need a guard. I guessed better than I thought."

He touched his lips to the gleaming hand ere he released it, and then said:

"Now, good-bye for a little while. I will go around and enter by the door; but later, when our guests are gone, I shall claim you again. I must take you to my mother as her future daughter."

He turned and left her; and Laura, flushed with triumph, her heart beating with such wild, exultant throbs as to make her almost faint, glided in through the window and sped up to her own room before Max entered by the hall door.

She tossed her ruined flowers carelessly upon her dressing-table, though a slight shiver ran over her as it suddenly occurred to her that their fate might be ominous of her own when Max should discover how he had been duped, though she meant to make a desperate fight to hold him to his troth.

She was glad, on the whole, that she would not be obliged to wear the flowers, for now she could avoid the denouement until after the reception, though Max might wonder at Agnes' sudden change of manner when they should meet.

She lifted her hand and looked at the ring upon her finger, and a low cry of delight escaped her, for there gleamed upon it a magnificent stone of purest water—a great, blazing solitaire, the first diamond she had ever worn.

"Oh, if I may but keep it!" she murmured; then, with a resolute flash of her dark eyes, "I will keep it! I will hold him to his troth!"

She removed it and examined its inner surface. There was no mark upon it—Max had no time for that—and a smile of triumph lighted her face.

She went to her dressing-case, straightened out her slightly rumpled clothing, and smoothed her hair, laughing a little as she remembered the fond embrace of her unsuspecting lover.

Then she fastened a single blood-red japonica, with its dark glossy leaves, where her roses had been, after which she drew on her gloves, and, taking her fan, descended to the drawing-room, where she took her place beside Mrs. Remington, who was stationed at its upper end to receive her guests.

Max was standing beside her and Laura shot one quick, keen glance at him, crimsoning to the brow as her eyes met his, at which the young man wondered, for he knew that Miss Pomeroy was not in the habit of blushing.

"Why, Laura," exclaimed Mrs. Remington, as her eye fell upon her white-robed figure, "how does it happen that you are in white? Has any accident occurred to the other costume?"

"No, I have simply changed my mind," the young lady replied, with a smile and a shy drooping of her heavily-fringed lids. She meant to act her role of the newly-betrothed maiden as perfectly as possible.

"Well, I must confess I think it a change for the better," Mrs. Remington remarked, while she told herself that she had never seen the girl look so well before.

Max thought so, too, and that the tender, softened expression on her handsome face was far more attractive than the proud smile that usually wreathed her lips.

"Where is Agnes?" Mrs. Remington inquired, after a moment.

"In her room, I suppose," Laura returned. "I do not believe she can be quite ready to come down, for I saw her about an hour ago, and she had just awakened from a nap."

"I am sorry I did not go to her and ask if I could help her about dressing," said Mrs. Remington, regretfully.

"She can call upon Annie if she needs assistance," Laura suggested; "or I will run up myself," she added, considerately.

Max smiled quietly. He imagined that he could explain Agnes' tardiness; she was trying to calm her throbbing pulses and school herself to composure, before coming down to meet him in the presence of others.

The wild bees of Southwestern Texas find natural hives in the dark recesses formed by shelving rock, and they are used year after year by the insects. Bee hunters make good incomes by searching for these hives, which in many instances are filled with honey.

To attract the capricious race of tourists it was recently decided at a meeting of the Society of Hotelkeepers at Rome that brilliant fetes should be given next season in the Colliseum. Attempts will be made to revive, "under modern humanitarian conditions," the wild beast shows of the time of Nero.

LAXA LIVER PILLS

Those who have used Laxa-Liver Pills say they have no equal for relieving and curing Constipation, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Coated Tongue, Foul Breath, Heart Burn, Water Brash or any disease or disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels.

Mrs. George Williams, Fairfield Plains, Ont., writes as follows: "As there are so many other medicines offered for sale in substitution for Laxa-Liver Pills I am particular to get the genuine, as they far surpass anything else for regulating the bowels and correcting stomach disorders."

Laxa-Liver Pills are purely vegetable, neither gripe, weaken nor sicken, are easy to take and prompt to act.

BASKET BALL.

BLUES WIN CHAMPIONSHIP.

The Blues won the final game in the Y. M. C. A. basketball tournament last night in one of the fastest games ever played in the gymnasium. It was the last of a series of matches, and was considered to be the most important, as not only the championship rested upon its outcome but both teams were tied, and it was known that a very hard fight would result. The Bible Class team were the Blues' opponents. The latter club won by a score of 35 points to 21. Both teams, however, are to be complimented on the sportsmanlike manner in which they conducted the game.

As is usual in basketball games, a fierce rush started the game, the Blues scoring one goal in about half a minute. Then both teams settled down into a hard, earnest battle, each scoring with much regularity, and at the close of the first half the count stood 14 to 8 in favor of the Blues. In the second half the Bible Class team braced up, and until ten minutes before the finish gave the Blues a very warm run. When the first minute of the ten arrived, however, the Blues pulled up again and tallied strongly, winning the game.

The Blues did very creditable combination work. The other team made 9 points from fouls made by the Blues.

Those who conducted the game were: Referee, F. H. Holman; time-keepers, R. Friend and C. McCallum; scorer, W. H. Wilson.

Following are the names of the players, the same teams having participated throughout:

Blues—Forwards, George Tambling (captain) and W. Aust; center, E. Nelles; defense, G. E. McBride and C. Wickett.

Bible Class—Forwards, Melville Dale (captain) and W. R. Marshall; center, O. Gidley; defense, D. A. Sutherland and W. Corcoran.

The Bible class basket ball team from the Y. M. C. A. go to Detroit today, and this evening will play the Clark Coal Company team, winners of the Detroit Y. M. C. A. tournament. The locals expect to defeat the Detroit champions.

The Midgets, one of the Y. M. C. A. basket ball teams, will make another visit to Sarnia on Monday to participate in the closing exercises at the Boys' Brigade Hall there. This will be the Midgets' third visit to Sarnia, as the Tunnel Town boys are excellent hosts.

BASEBALL.

FLYS.

The Torontos are a little weak in the pitching department and two more experienced pitchers are needed.

With the exception of the Boston Nationals all the teams that went down south encountered bad weather, necessitating much indoor work.

Congalton, the Guelph outfielder, who is being tried out by the Chicago Nationals, is highly thought of by Manager Selee. He played in Tuesday's game, securing one hit and a stolen base.

It is reported that Major Hosie, the well-known local baseball player, will be seen on the London diamond again this season. He is at present in Chicago, but word has been received that he will arrive in this city on the 1st of May.

First Baseman Slater, who was with Worcester and Syracuse last season, will probably be with the Waterbury, Conn., club of the Connecticut League. Slater, who is a first-class fielder, but several points to the bad on hitting, has been offered a Waterbury engagement, and will in all likelihood accept.

Sydney White, the Cincinnati pitcher, who was signed by the Toronto ball club on the recommendation of Jack Suthoff, the ex-Toronto twirler, reported to Manager Barrow yesterday. White bears a marked resemblence to Jack White, the Indianapolis fielder, who will report at Toronto next week.

Wrigley will play third for Worcester this season, and Joe Delehanty will cover the middle bag. Madison is slated for short and either Sebring or Clancy will hold down first. The candidates for the outfield are Rickert, Frisbee, Sharrott and Foster. Catchers Crisham, Doran and Kelly are under contract, and the twirlers will be selected from Hastings, Griffin, Pappalau, Lindsay, Bresslau and McFall.

If Hargrove fails to report the Toronto team will start the spring practice minus eleven of the players who were on the list last year. The absentees are: Hargrove, Brown, Bemis, Bonner, Williams, Bruce, Carr, Altrock, McFall and Sullivan. Of the lot there is a chance that Williams will return, while Charley Carr and Bruce will not be on hand until the season is well under way. Manager Barrow has had his work cut out for him securing players, and his troubles are not over by any means.

TURF.

AT BENNINGS.

BETTING ON THE KING'S PLATE.

Toronto, April 11.—The latest reported speculation of importance on the coming King's plate is a wager of $500 from some Hamilton admirers of Maple Sugar, who is now at 5 to 1. Dandy Dick, 6 to 1, was also supported for a small amount. Mr. Seagram's Oneiros, the favorite, has been backed to 2 to 1, and Eastern Princess in the same stable holds his own at 4 to 1. Beautiful Dreamer has dropped three points to 12 to 1, and Elcho is at the same price, but Fly-in-Amber has gone up to 15, while Goshawk is dropped from the quotations. Caller Herrin is now a 10 to 1 chance, and Lady Bevys, Fernieticke and Dr. Smith's Fernie are at 20 to 1. Lady Bevys was 200 to 1 in the original quotations. The Dyment entries have gone back to 30 to 1 each, and a lot of the others have been raised, ranging now from 50 to 500 to 1, Mr. A. A. Reinhardt's Anticosti being the extreme outsider.

HOOFBEATS.

Starter Chris. Fitzgerald, now at Memphis, will not begin his season in New York until May 3, at Morris Park.

J. B. Haggin, who has second call on Otto Wonderly's services, owns the present favorite for the Suburban handicap, to be run June 14 at Coney Island. The 4-year-old, "Water Color" is the animal in question, and Wonderly is expected to ride it to victory. The Suburban is one of the blue ribbon turf events of the east.

CRICKET.

WIARTON CLUB.

The Wiarton Cricket Club has elected the following officers: Patrons, D. M. Jermyn and C. M. Bowman; honorary president, J. B. Ashley; honorary vice-president, Mayor Bernie; president, A. M. Tyson; vice-president, W. J. Ferguson; treasurer, J. R. Lane; secretary, J. L. Siemon; captain, Dr. Hough; executive committee, Dr. Hay, M. O'Hara, G. Kastner, N. M. Moore, W. Ashley, S. J. Cameron. Prospects for a good playing team in Wiarton this season are excellent.

Canadian cricketers will play four matches in Philadelphia this summer, as follows: June 2-3, Merlon; June, 4-5, Philadelphia; June 27-28, Belmont; June 30, July 1, Germantown.

FISTIC.

FITZ'S AMBITION.

New York, April 11.—If Bob Fitzsimmons has his say in the matter, his battle with Jim Jeffries for the world's championship will take place in England. Fitzsimmons has decided that he will not fight Jeffries either in San Francisco or Los Angeles, but he will gladly accept an opportunity to meet the champion abroad. For reasons of his own Fitz is not in favor of the Los Angeles or San Francisco offers, and, as California is the only state outside of Nevada where fights are permitted by law, it can readily be seen that the ring will have to be pitched in London if the pair ever comes together.

ERNE THE FAVORITE.

Buffalo, April 10.—Frank Erne has opened up a 4-to-5 favorite over Joe Gans, the Baltimore negro, whom he is scheduled to meet in a 20-round battle on the night of May 12. The money was posted yesterday. Erne has already started in doing light training.

RING TALK.

A Chicago dispatch has it that Martin Duffy has entirely recovered from his illness and has started training.

Some time this month Ole Olsen and Eddie Gardner will come together in a 15-round contest in St. Paul.

Tommy Sullivan has signed articles to meet Eddie Santry in Chicago on April 17. Should Sullivan win he will be matched against Yanger.

The Louisville Athletic Club has made official announcement that Tommy Ryan has flunked out of his match with Jack O'Brien. Tommy persists in dodging the good men and taking on fourth-raters.

LACROSSE.

THE ST. CATHARINES CLUB.

St. Catharines, April 11.—It is with great satisfaction that the lacross-loving public of this vicinity learn that in all probability Richardson, of the Athletics, will be reinstated. He certainly has been punished severely, two years being a long time to keep a lacrosse player under the ban. With Richardson and Chaplin, two of the best players St. Catharines ever turned out, and the addition of Louwe, a promising junior, the Athletics will be stronger than ever before, for any of the above two players will more than offset any loss ocasioned by Hagan leaving for Toronto and Hare quitting the game. All of last year's team are here, and signify their intention of playing, and, coupled with several juniors who give promise of springing a surprise this season, the rest of the team in the C. L. A. will have to look carefully after their laurels, as the St. Catharines "home brews" are after the championship.

MONTREAL'S NEW DEPARTURE.

Montreal, April 11.—The Montreal Lacrosse Club will support, at the annual meeting of the Lacrosse League on Saturday, the proposition to admit to the senior ranks the intermediate champions of the previous season and the relegating of the lowest team in the senior back to the intermediate league for the ensuing season.

LACROSSE NOTES.

The executive of the London Lacrosse Club will meet tonight at the Oriental Hotel.

"Billy" Greatrix, who played inside home for the Torontos last season; "Dolly" Darkin, of Ottawa, who figured on the Brantford team last year, and Sewell, of Brampton, will probably play with the Toronto Tecumsehs this summer.

According to Toronto papers "Sox" Clark, the Galt player, who wants the C. L. A. to reinstate him, is going to have his troubles before he succeeds in placating the members of the council. Clark played under a false name, was found out and suspended.

After being dormant for a good many years lacrosse has been revived in Aylmer, the following officers being elected: Honorary president, Rev. A. J. Vining; president, E. A. Miller; vice-president, D. H. Price; secretary-treasurer, C. Poustie; manager, E. W. Hill; field captain, Samuel Walker; captain, Russ Thompson.

Toronto Mail and Empire: All the crubs are on the still hunt for stars of the first magnitude, and the quality of lacrosse promises to be of the very best. Brantford has the nucleus of a strong team already. Fleury, of Orangeville, and Kane, of Newmarket, will be seen in the Telephone City. London claims five good players, Fred Westbrook has not been idle with the Indians, and the Tecumsehs have almost a complete team.

A great many women are subject to spells of dizziness, spots before the eyes, and a ringing noise in the head. These symptoms are commonly associated with liver "trouble" as the result of a diseased condition of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and the allied organs of digestion and nutrition. It cures through the stomach diseases seemingly remote from that organ, but which have their origin in a diseased condition of the stomach and digestive and nutritive system. Hence, cures of heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, and other organs are constantly effected by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

There is no alcohol in the "Discovery" and it is free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

Some dealers may offer a substitute as "just as good" as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. There's more profit in substitutes for the dealer. There's more health in the "Discovery" for you. Don't be imposed on.

"It is with the greatest pleasure I write you the benefit my mother has received from your 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" says Miss Carrie Johnson, of Lowesville, Amherst Co., Virginia. She suffered untold misery with uterine disease and nervousness, and had a constant roaring and ringing noise in her head. After taking six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery she was entirely cured."

When a laxative is required use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.
