THE TORONTO WORLD.

SATURDAY MORNING, NOV. 14, 1885.

Federal Interference With Smallpox.

It is stated by an eastern contemporary that, at the request of the mayor of Ottawa, the minister of justice the other day detailed a dominion policeman for duty at the Union station, his business being to see that all arrivals in the capital "present arms," and either demonstrate that they bore vaccination marks of sufficiently recent date, or else submit to the operation there and then. When we urged that the federal government ought to take hold of the Montreal plague we were told that the federal authorities had no right to intervene for the protection of human lives, although it is their privilege and duty to intervene on behalf of hogs! If it be competent and just for the federal government to assist in preventing smallpox entering Ottawa, it must be equally competent to assist in driving smallpox out of Montreal. Ottawa is not like Washington, situate in a little territorial corner of its own, in which the government is supposed to exert greater and more paternal powers than in any other part of the confederacy.

Hear the Other Side.

We published yesterday a paragraph from the Chicago News, reflecting on the crew of the Algoma for having saved themselves rather than the passengers. The other side of the story, as far as Capt. Moore is concerned, has been thus told by one of the passengers, Mr. William R. McCarter, of Meaford, Ont., to a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune:

"The captain alone remained cool and steady. He showed what a man he really was just then, and did his duty like a man. When it seemed a certain death to run a life-line along the deck, he seized a rope and strung out the line, telling the excited people to hold on to the rope and not become panic-stricken. High rocks towered up in front of us, and the pitiless sea tried to snatch us in its icy clasp on every other side. In this manner we passed the night, until it was fairly daylight, the waves dashing over us every few seconds and bearing some one away from the life-rope. I was standing between the captain and another man when the cabin came crashing down on the captain and pinned him to the deck. He cried out: 'Oh, I'm done for now, but what will become of these poor people!' The man on the other side received a severe blow on his head and cried out: 'I'm crushed, I'm gone!' The next great wave carried him off without the slightest struggle, and he went to death without a groan. The night was terrible."

Other Fields Than Ours.

While lamenting the unremunerative price of Canadian wheat, our farmers are prone to forget that the development of wheat areas has been in silent but swift progress for many years past. At one time Russia was the premier source of Britain's breadstuff supply. Every Canadian who remembers the Crimean war will also remember the effect upon the wheat market of the blockade of Russian ports by England and France. Were a similar blockade to go into operation to-morrow, the effect on the wheat supply might be perceptible, but it could not be emphatic. A Chicago newspaper said the other day that Great Britain is dependent upon the United States for her wheat and flour. Fudge! The western states, east of the Rockies, broke Russia's monopoly of the British breadstuffs market, and then California and Oregon entered the lists with cheaper wheat than their sister states on this side of the "divide" could afford to produce. To-day Great Britain could obtain—at an enhanced price, of course,—all the wheat she needs if the United States refused to ship her a grain of the cereal.

English wheat is now selling in England as low as ninety cents per bushel, and a trifle lower, at the extreme limit. Wheat from India is reported on the market as low as seventy-eight cents per bushel. The Canadian Pacific railway, running through the finest and most extensive wheat belt on the map, has just been completed. Year after year henceforth that great line will pour settlers into the Northwest and British Columbia, and pour out of those territories the products of the settlers' farms. Let Uncle Sam take notice of the fact that India, with an inferior grade, and northwestern Canada, with a superior grade, are in the wheat business, and with unequalled facilities for the production of the "staff of life."

It will be well for the farmers of Ontario and Quebec to make a note of the same fact. Other fields than theirs will grow the wheat crops of the future, and, per consequence, regulate the wheat prices of the future. We feel that they know, better than any journalist can tell them, what this means to them. Many of them have already appreciated its meaning, and have diversified their industry in an intelligent and profitable manner.

The Walkerton Herald states that The World advocates "the democratic system prevalent among the nose biters and mattrass tramps of the United States." The Herald is either very stupid or very dishonest. We have never antagonized the principle of responsible government, and the Herald ought to know as much.

The Boston Pilot says that of forty-five delegates to the house of representatives from Boston and adjoining districts, twenty-five are Irish Americans. This is a remarkable showing for Puritan Massachusetts. The bean eaters appear to be disappearing before the potato eaters.

The irrepressible conflict has reached Lindsay. Sam Hughes and the Warder have got into trouble with the Roman Catholics of that town through an attack upon the French Canadians and their creed. Sam says that the grits are adding fuel to the fire with much glee. Of course. A row in a Canadian town would not be the proper thing if the politicians failed to mix partyism and sectarianism in the same cauldron. This makes their favorite broth.
