Derry-Na-Mona

By Victor Power.

Nora Brien withdrew shortly after this, and Eily was again alone in the school-room She stood by the centre table, on which her younger sisters' and her brother's books and slates lay scattered. She had lapsed into a kind of dream—from which she was aroused by the sudden tapping of fingers on the window pane. The one window of the school-room looked into a small orchard at the back of the old house.

Eily started, and turned her eyes upon the pane; and, as she did so, she faintly distinguished the outline of a man's face pressed against the glass. Then a wave of carmine rushed over her pale cheeks. It was Frank Carroll himself—no other!

A moment later she had lifted the window sash, with shaking hands. The wind rushed in, with angry violence, and the mellow voice that the girl loved of all the voices on earth, rang in her ears.

"I am my own messenger, Eily, darlin,! I reached home only an hour ago ; so, you see, I've lost no time in coming here."

He was leaning in through the open window. He held the girl's trembling hand in his. Presently, with a laugh of joyous triumph, he drew her nearer to him and kissed her.

"I wonder shall I venture in, Eily? Is there any danger?"

She hesitated a moment, but her passionate love for him silenced fear.

"No, no; — come in! The door is locked. Papa, Aunt Susan, and the children are in the dining-room."

He was a stalwart, handsome fellow, with a bright, open, generous face, all lit up with a pair of flashing brown eyes.

Just now the fire was throwing out cheery little tongues of flame between the red coals, and as prepossessing a pair of lovers as one could wish to see were raveled in the ruddy light.

"I guessed you were here, Eily, so, I stole to the window and looked in. I knew this was always your favorite room. Had I not seen you, I would have gone to the kitchen window and called old Nora. Well, darling, and how are you? I must not stay long, you know. It is rather risky."

It was more risky even than he supposed. He was not aware, as he stole through the orchard, that a stealthy pursuer was behind him. He was not aware, as he now held Eily in his arms, close to the open window, that a hidden eavesdropper was at hand.

"Oh, Frank, I am in a most miserable state of mind. Listen, dear! I will tell you all about it."

And, in as few words as possible, she did tell him, while Frank Carroll listened, with a darkening brow.

"This is a hateful position for you, Eily, darling!" he cried, wrathfully, when the girl paused at last. "But keep up your courage, Eily. All will yet be well. We must be more cautious than ever now, though, for your father will stop at nothing to force you to marry this Walter Hamilton. By the way, Eily, what is the fellow like? I don't think I've ever seen him."

"I suppose one would call him handsome in his own stle — but it is not my style!" Eily answered, with a flash in her eyes. "I've spoken to him only twice, Frank—once when he called here, and once on the road, near the Castle gates. I believe him to be an unscrupulous, bad man, Frank; and I almost fear him! He has a way of looking at me that makes my blood run cold."

The members speaking on the Government side were the Premier (Mr. J. J. O'Sullivan), the Minister of Finance (Mr. E. V. O'Sullivan), Mr. J. M. Ferguson and Mr. F. O. Meader, and for the Opposition, Mr. R. Conners (the acting leader), Mr. J. Hynes and Mr. Walsh. Toronto Live Stock.

Trade was of only average briskness at the Toronto Cattle Market this morning There was a decided improvement shown over the last two days of last week, but compared with Tuesday of last week the trade was not so lively. Every class of animals, however, did fairly well to-day with the exception of stockers, which were very slow, on account largely of a poor demand. Export cattle sold well, though the quality of the offerings was not of the best. Good exporters would have brought just as good prices as they did last week, but they were not offering Feeders were in good demand and sold well at unchanged prices The quality of the offerings is still light, and though the prices to-day showed no decline the cattle offered, being light, brought low prices. Butchers' cattle were in good demand, selling at steady prices and being easily disposed of. Stockers were the poorest sellers on the market to-day There was but little demand for them and the offerings were not of a sufficiently good quality to ensure easy trading. Milch cows were steady, there being only a few offering. Sheep were easier, there being no room for them. There will not be any space for them now for probably a couple of weeks. Lambs were higher and in good demand Export lambs were in demand for ewes and wethers, weighing 100 lbs and more. Butchers' lambs were in poor demand. Hogs were steady. There were 51 loads received at the market, which included 841 cattle, 1,280 sheep, 500 hogs and 15 calves.

Export Cattle—Were steady, selling well at unchanged prices. The offerings were not first-class and so the prices did not touch high marks. Choice animals would have brought $4.70 per cwt. The highest price was $4.65.

Butchers' Cattle—Were in fairly good demand, selling at the prices of last week and being easy to dispose of. Picked lots sold at $4.25 to $4 40 per cwt, choice at $4 15 to $4 25 per cwt and common to fair at $3 to $3.75 per cwt.

Feeders—Were selling well, there being only light offerings. The prices were steady, though on account of the light quality of the offerings they were not what they had been last Tuesday Shortkeeps sold at $3 75 to $4 per cwt, steers at $3.25 to $3.60 per cwt and bulls at $2.50 to $3 and $3.12½ for an occasional fine lot.

Stockers—Were in poor demand, selling at unchanged prices. Heavy animals, weighing from 1,000 to 1,100 lbs, brought $3 to $3 40 per cwt and light ones $2 to $2.00 per cwt.

Milch Cows—Were scarce and sold at $35 to $50 each.

Sheep—Were easier. Export ewes sell at $3 to $3.25 per cwt, bucks at $2 to $2.50 per cwt and culls at $2 to $3 each.

Lambs—Were higher and in good demand, selling at $3 to $3.45 per cwt Export ewes and wethers for export would bring from $3.40 to $3.60 per cwt, if weighing 110 lbs and over. Butchers' lambs are in poor demand.

Hogs—The run was light and prices remained unchanged at $5.50 per cwt for choice, $5.37½ for heavy fats and $5.25 per cwt for lights.

THEY ARE NOT VIOLENT IN ACTION. — Some persons, when they wish to cleanse the stomach, resort to Epsom and other purgative sals. These are speedy in their action, but serve no permanent good. Their use produces incipient chills, and if persisted in they injure the stomach. Nor do they act upon the intestines in a beneficial way. Parmalee's Vegetable Pills answer all purposes in this respect, and have no superior.
