Indies. On Easter day, the thirtieth of the said month, we were encountered with a great storme, which seemed rather to be thunder then winde, which lasted the space of fourteene dayes, but not so great as it was the two first dayes; and during the said time we rather but way then gained.

The sixteenth day of Aprill the storme began to ease, and the Sea became more calme then before, to the contentment of all the Company; in such sort as continuing our said course vp till the eighteenth of the said moneth, we met with a very high Mountaine of Ice. The twentie after we discried a banke of Ice, which contained about eight leagues in length, with an infinite number of other smaller peeces of Ice, which hindered our passage. And by the [illegible] Pilot, the said flakes or Ice were one hundred, or one hundred & twenty leagues [illegible] try of Canada; and we were in 44. degrees and two third parts, & we [illegible] second of May, at eleuen of clocke of the day, we came vpon The Banke [illegible] part. The size of the said moneth, we came so neere the land that we [illegible] the shore, but we could not discrie the same through the thicknesse of the fogge, [illegible] these coasts are subiect to, which was the cause that we got further towards [illegible] vntill the next day in the morning, when we discried land, the weather being [illegible] was the Cape of Saint Marie. The sixth day following we were ouertaken with a great [illegible] of winde, which lasted two dayes. The fifteenth of the said moneth, we discried the [illegible] Saint Peter. The seuenteenth following we met with a banke of Ice [illegible] Cape de Rate, [illegible] leagues in length, which caused vs to stake sailes all the night, to auoide the danger [illegible] curre. The next day we set sail, and discried Cape de Rate, and the Ilies of Saint [illegible] de Saint Laurence, which is on the South side. And from the said Cape [illegible] Cape de Rate, is eighteene leagues, which is the breadth of the entrance of the [illegible] of Canada.

The same day, about ten of the clocke in the morning, we met with another [illegible] which was about eight leagues long. The twentieth of the said moneth, we discried [illegible] which contained some six and twenty or thirty leagues in length, which is [illegible] Assumption, which is the entrance of the Riuer of Canada. The same day we discried [illegible] which is a very high land, and began to enter into the said Riuer of Canada. [illegible] coast vnto the Riuer of Mantanne, which is from the said [illegible] fifteene leagues; [illegible] said Riuer of Mantanne we sailed as farre as the Pike, which is twenty leagues [illegible] South side also; from the said Pike we sailed south the Riuer [illegible] fifteene leagues. All these Countries are very high [illegible] foure and twentieth of the said moneth, we [illegible] we entered into the said Port, which is [illegible] gunny, where there is a very [illegible] sometimes strong winds [illegible] that the said Riuer is fast and [illegible] North North-west. The said Port [illegible] twelue Ships; but there is water [illegible] of Saguay along by a little hill, [illegible] the Countrie are very high [illegible] of wood of Pitch, Cypresse, [illegible] There is a little Poole neere vnto the said Port [illegible] Little entrance of the said Port there are two points, [illegible] into the Sea, which is called Point [illegible] containing a quarter of a league, which is [illegible] South-east, and South South-west winds do fetche into the said Riuer. But [illegible] shewes Point, to the said Point of all the Trouble, is very more a league: Both these [illegible] at a low water.
