half of the members of the association, and which was in part as follows:

"You have, sir, for many years been a cordial supporter of this exhibition, and have taken a keen interest in its development from a local institution into one national in scope and character. We are therefore assured that you will examine with pleasure the various departments of this Canadian National Exhibition within whose bounds you will find, not only artistic treasures of much interest and value, but also many evidences of the increasing wealth and producing power of the Canadian people, in manufactures, agriculture, live stock, and in every other sphere of industrial and commercial activity."

The lieutenant-governor, responding, acknowledged the high honor of being called upon to open the greatest exhibition ever held in this country. He would treasure the address given him, and declared that but for his wife and daughters he could not have performed satisfactorily the duties assigned him.

In forty-five years he had not missed one of the exhibitions of the past, and in all these years there had been a steady advance. This was but the precursor of greater successes. Canada was essentially an agricultural country, and it was right and proper that prominence should be given to farm products. Progress there had been remarkable, and he regretted the restraints imposed in the British cattle market. Exports honestly and carefully prepared would advance their trade, while a few careless packages would discredit their whole commerce. Th exhibits by manufacturers would show what we owe to their enterprise and the skill of their artisans.

In conclusion, he trusted none could be found to loose the connection which bound the splendid constellation of the British empire.

His honor then pressed the button setting the machinery in motion, and declared the exhibition open.

The ladies of the party were separately entertained at luncheon, and Mrs. Mortimer Clark, Lady Kirkpatrick and a large company were present.

Evening Spectacle is Grand.

In the evening the variety performance went with greater swing than during the day, and the military spectacle at the close surpassed anything of the sort before attempted in Toronto. The oriental splendor of the panorama was illumined with a great battery of searchlights on the second tier of the grand stand, and by numberless colored fires in front. Such brilliant costuming is never seen outside the great metropolitan theatres, and the horde of supers who took part in the evolutions was most impressive. The attack of the Sepoy mutineers on the British officers and the rush for the residency was conducted with a good deal of realism, to which the explosion of mines, the fierce rattle of musketry and the thunder of big guns, which jarred the grand stand gave the spectators some faint conception of the devildom now regnant in Manchuria.

The great pageant of the coronation procession of the King and Queen of Oude, and the arrival of Nana Sahib was followed by the final attack on the garrison. Then the pipers are heard in the distance, and the history of half a century ago brings the hot grip of old memories to choke the throat and dim the eye. Where the sailors come from nobody enquires, but when they roll a gun into action and the fury of the cannon fire reaches its climax nobody thinks of the Peace Society at all.

Pyrotechnics Best Ever.

The fireworks supplied by Hand & Co. of Hamilton were elaborate and ingenious to a degree worthy of an art almost as old as any in the world. The Chinese are pastmasters in pyrotechny and have been for thousands of years, their creations being intended to rival the marvelous things described by Charles Leadbeater and other astral authorities as existing on ethereal planes. Perhaps the Messrs. Hand have been doing some astral gazing, and derived their inspirations from the same realms, but wherever they came from they transformed Exhibition Park into a starry way last night. And every night of the exhibition will be the same.

The rain of silver fire which opened the display was followed by mines of serpents, great golden gyrating wheels, squibs that whirled up into the blue darkness, and green and gold flames that flew skywards and fell in fiery rain at last. Rocket stars ascended and flung their green and ruby shining wide abroad, and garnet and sapphire and emerald died into cascades of gold. Then with a hiss and a report a set-piece burst into light and "Welcome to the Fair of 1904" burned in silver for a moment and gave way to green and crimson and topaz glory.

Another hiss and crackling and a huge peacock spread gorgeous and fire-gemmed plumes to the sparkling eyes of the crowd. Rockets climbed from behind the long terraces of Lucknow and pierced the night with lessening force to toss a glory of streaming stars earthward. Following these came many sets of combination wheels, a set revolving horizontally and swinging pendulous star trails of green and crimson and amethystine blue touching the darkness with lovely color. Then a great elephant walked across the stage throwing yellow fire from his giant frame, and followed by a little baby elephant whose trunk and tail burned brighter than its parent's and lasted longer. This was a decided novelty and won great applause. Another burst of rockets filled the night with floating fleeting stars, and then three great wheels interblending gold and blue and red and green flashed into flame. The next set was a maple wreath with a beaver in the centre and this also won applause. A forest of silver trees across the stage broke into foliage of fire and threw starry fruit on all sides. In conclusion a row of mines was lighted across the stage and in their dying scintillations "God Save the King" shone out for "Good night."

High Dive a Thriller.

The concluding item of the variety program was the phenomenal bicycle dive by "Dare Devil Schreyer." The management consider this to be the greatest drawing card in the Exhibition. The leap in the air is certainly beautiful and a daring performance, and if the assurance of those concerned be correct that there is absolutely no risk or danger, no more need be said. A large number of prominent people present told The World that they did not approve of it.

"I do not favor it at all," said a city controllers.

"It is a senseless act," said a Toronto M.P., "and if it were not for the risk to human life, there would be no attraction in it. The acrobatic performances are not nearly so dangerous, but the law compels nets to be used. There have been more people killed in these dangerous leaps in the comparatively short time they have been popular than in all other acrobatic performances."

"It lowers the tone of the whole show," said a bandsman. "They have stopped bull fighting and cockingmains and bear baiting, and now they are getting back to the gladiatorial spirit of Rome."

On the other hand a lady said:

"I expected to be frightened to death, and I wasn't scared at all."

EXHIBITION NOTICES.

Fairweather & Co.

If the skins of any known animals are lacking from the Fairweather exhibit in the manufacturers' building it is because the hides possess no commercial value. A great many of the furs are made up into fashionable attire for the winter season, and the greater part of this is fur garments for women. In the big show case is an Alaska seal and natural Hudson Bay sable blouse, with long skirt effect, that is both handsome and new. A moleskin sacque, trimmed with ermine, which is to be seen is one of the most fashionable fur garments that is to be seen this season. Another exhibit which will be of great interest to the women is an olive broadcloth carriage cloak, lined with Russian lock squirrel and trimmed with fine Canadian beaver. A handsome cardinal opera cloak is also to be seen. It is built on the same lines as an academic gown, and is trimmed with passementerie. The lining is of imperial Russian lock sable, and altogether it is one of the most magnificent pieces of female apparel to be seen at the exhibition. There is also a moire lamb blouse with natural mink and mink tail trimming and a splendid showing of stoles, each worth a small fortune, scarfs, boas, pillow and empire muffs.

In the undressed fur section there are skins of the silver fox, worth fabulous sums of money, big bundles of the finest natural Hudson Bay sable, mink, chinchilla, seal and Persian lamb. The floor is covered with rugs and robes of all varieties. Some of the special features in rugs are particularly handsome. There are mounted polar bear skins and mounted leopard skins are really beautiful furs.

T. Eaton Co.

One of the most elaborate displays in the Manufacturers' Building is that of the T. Eaton Co. It is not confined to that section of the Exhibition, however, but extends to the process building, where the Eatonia shoe is made under the gaze of hundreds of people, and to the woman's building, where a model kitchen shows the possibilities of kitchen furnishings to the female visitors at the fair. The methods of furnishing the other rooms of the house are exemplified in the main exhibit, where a dwelling of five rooms is beautifully furnished for the delectation of sightseers. The dining room is a handsome tapestried apartment with set table and massive Antwerpen furniture elaborately hand carved. The cloth is of snowy white, the dishes of blue and white Doulton ware, and amongst all is the gleam of silver and cut glass. The drawing room is done in cream and pink with tapestried and hand carved mahogany appointments. The bedroom is in blue and green with mahogany furniture and a Napoleon bed, in the fitting of which the latest modes in drapery are to be seen. The hall is a beautifully furnished apartment, and the oriental room with its weathered oak furnishings and its Turkish hangings and rugs that give it a true eastern flavor. In an immense glass case are the ladies' goods, a splendid array of lingerie, gowns, cloaks, furs and millinery, all as the numerous cards state, "Made in Canada" and moreover as the attendant states made in the T. Eaton Co.'s own premises. In the gallery is the waiting room for visitors at the Exhibition, where they may wait for their friends and keep their engagements. There, too, is the transforming picture. This is a big oil painting worth a large sum of money, which completely changes its face every few seconds to the delight and amazement of the onlookers.

Canadian Pacific Railway.

The Canadian Pacific Railway have added a couple of distinct novelties to their exhibit. They have dragged the continent from east to west and have brought in typical specimens of the products of the continent which they traverse. Animals' heads, from the fox to the moose, every variety of grain, and numberless other exhibits make their building a centre of activity for the sightseers. But these are not the novelties. Down by the grand stand is a real wild west "shack," built from the rough hewn logs, with the crevices filled with mud. A glance at the interior, where two burly guides, dressed in the garb of the west, sit smoking, cannot help but revive memories of Daniel Boone, Buffalo Bill and the hundred and one heroes of the western romance. Down at the water's edge on the beach sit two red men, with a birch bark canoe. They are there to show the effete east the Indian methods of travel. All day long they sit beside their camp fire and smoke, or if the humor is on them they take sightseers for a trip on the lake.

Robert Simpson Co.

At the western end of the manufactures building is a gigantic red show case, which makes up the display of the Robert Simpson Company. It is divided into several compartments, and all is given to ladies' wear. First comes the lingerie section, and in it is contained whitewear of every description, elaborately embroidered and made of the finest material. Passing along one comes to the cloaks and dresses. Among them are some of the most magnificent creations, after models by Gerson, Beers, Solovic, Elise Poiret, Pach, Callot, Soeurs and a host of other European authorities on women's garb. Each is displayed on a wax figure, in what represents a handsome apartment. There are waists of shimmering silk, opera cloaks in greys and creams and fawns, automobile cloaks, street gowns and long-trained evening gowns that are a source of envy to every passer-by.

Furs, too, are there in profusion, sealskin sacques, Persian lamb sacques, ermine and mink stoles, with delicate lace pendants; fur blouses, fur cloaks, till the beholder is amazed. And hats! Hats of nearly every known description and some that will not be known for some time to come—until they have become the mode. The exhibit is one that by yesterday's indications promises to be one of the most popular in the Exhibition.

Christie, Brown.

Christie-Brown Company is the inscription over one of the most lavish and complete exhibits in the manufactures building. The make-up of the display is summed up in the one word—cakes. But that word in its ordinary significance does not begin to describe the extent or variety of the exhibit. Columns of tins with glass sides set with their opposite corners touching, form a miniature temple to the pastry-maker's art. There are no two cans containing the same variety, and there are over 500 cans. Wafers of all descriptions, biscuit sandwiches containing meat, candy and fruit, the staid old soda rubbing shoulders with the dainty lady's finger or the macaroon. Here in a corner the tiny shrimp cracker hob-nobs with the massive and substantial "Klondike," a biscuit akin to the hard tack of the mariner, and built for the use of the miner. It is a most creditable offering and reflects credit on its author and builder, Mr. E. Gibbons.

Bell Organ and Piano.

Both the connoisseur and the dilettante in the art of music will be delighted with an inspection of the exhibit of the Bell Piano and Organ Company. In their section of the piano aisle in the manufactures building is about as representative a collection of up-to-date pianos and organs as can be found. The pianos are in the staple lines that have made the company famous, and in a number of special lines. The special piano is a magnificent instrument of choice American walnut, built on the colonial lines and decorated with massive hand carving. It is fitted with the Bell illimitable repeating action. There are a number of organs, both church and house. The church organs are big pipe affairs, fitted with double bank pedal apparatus, handsomely carved mountings and sonorous in tone. There is also a fine display of parlor and portable organs.

Intercolonial Railway.

Along the first staircase and on the second floor of the transportation building the walls are lined with big photographs that will bring many a pleasant reminiscence to those who have traveled over the Intercolonial Railway and will hasten many a decision as to next year's outing for those who have not. Typical bits of scenery, camping parties in the full flush of summer vacation, hunting groups, trophies of the chase and of fishing expeditions, views of palatial trains running at full speed, all portrayed by an instrument that cannot lie, go to make up such a collection of railroad pictures as is rarely to be found. Few people who pass thru the transportation building but will spend a long time with these views of Canada's great eastern railroad.

Grand Trunk Railway.

Up over the main entrance of the manufactures building is the pictorial display of the Grand Trunk Railway, and very few of the visitors but stop to look over the fifty or more characteristic views of points on the wide-spreading trunk line. In view of the approaching hunting season, the pictures of nimrods in the north country are most popular. There are photographs of good bags, of hunters in camp and many another that goes to the heart of the sportsman. A second very popular series is that dealing with the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis. There are some magnificent scenes of the big American fair. In addition to these, one may see idyllic scenes on the Moon and on the French Rivers, and here and there pictures of summer tourists and campers in the Highlands of Ontario.

East & Co.

Every requisite of the traveler in the way of trunks, bags and suit cases, every item of leather goods necessary to the outfit of the lady, and all the possible necessities in the line of parasols and umbrellas are to be found in the East and Co. exhibit. There is a handsome showing of the last named articles, in gold, silver, mother-of-pearl, horn and earthenware mounts. The wrist bags, and hand satchels are present in great profusion and amongst them there is one variety for which the leather dealers thruout the country predict an immediate fad. This is the Peggy from Paris wrist bag. It is a loosely built affair of soft fine leather, made very full and with very little metal work. Another feature of the East exhibit is the dresser trunk, with its tier of drawers which can be pulled out when the contrivance is to be gotten into and which can be closed and locked into a compact trunk when the owner is en route.

Heintzman & Co.

In their section in music row, Heintzman & Co. are showing some new things in the piano line. The instruments are various in style—grand, baby grand, upright—in different sizes, and all are remarkable for the simplicity and chasteness of design. They come in mahogany and walnut of handsome and regular natural grain, and are built on rich and massive models. The line of pianos, however, of which the company are specially proud, and which they are exhibiting more particularly, are of dark wood and decorated with satinwood and rosewood marquetry. Some of these in Chippendale style are handsome instruments, and others, a trifle more ornate but equally handsome are decorated with delicate satinwood tracery from designs specially imported from Paris.

Organ Recital.

During the Exhibition many visitors will be in the city, and those who have heard of the grand new organ recently placed in the Metropolitan Church will be pleased to hear that an opportunity will be given them of hearing it. A series of organ recitals have been arranged, the first of which will be given this evening by W. H. Hewlett, Mus. Bach. of the Centenary Methodist Church, Hamilton.

Famous Glass Blowers.

One of the most popular attractions that visit the Midway every year is Prof. Johns' famous company of glass blowers. The marvelous work of these skilful artists attracts large crowds. They manufacture all kinds of beautiful and dainty articles and trinkets. No one who visits the fair should fail to call and see Prof. Johns.

A Wonderful Exhibition.

One of the prettiest and most pleasing features of the Midway this year is Zarrow's Palace of Illusions. It is a wonderful exhibition, and one that every one should see. The changing of a marble statue into a beautiful living woman filled every one with amazement. There are a number of other features just as clever.

The Old Plantation.

A show that is going to do a big business on the Midway is McMahon & Dee's "Old Plantation." It will certainly draw a host of people when its merits become known. There are 20 colored people in the company, singers, dancers, comedians and coon shouters, who present interesting scenes from life on the old plantation.

GOES TO NEW YORK.

P. D. Crerar, K.C., Interested in McCauley's Arrest.

Hamilton, Aug. 30.—(Special.)—The arrest of Thomas N. McCauley in New York on the charge of getting $4300 of C. S. Wilcox's money will likely be followed by some interesting developments here. It is said that other prominent business men of the city are in the same boat. P. D. Crerar, K.C., who is acting for Mr. Wilcox, has gone to New York. It was at a meeting of the shareholders of the International Mercantile Agency, of which the prisoner was a former president, that his arrest was decided upon. McCauley visited this city three or four years ago as the promoter of an iron foundry trust that was to take in all the foundries in Canada. This turned out to be a failure. The Mercantile Agency was said to be another of his schemes, and there are a great many shareholders here who will suffer considerable loss if the concern is wound up.

THE WAR SITUATION

moment has arrived and the battle of Liaoyang is in progress.

"It was not till 6 o'clock this morning that the first gun was fired, but soon afterwards hundreds of cannon were thundering along our southern and eastern fronts.

"The centre of our position is located near the famous tower of Liaoyang, about seven miles to the southeast. The fighting there was of the most desperate character, but is now going much nearer at the flanks.

"The hissing of the shells is distinctly audible, and from the city it is easy to see the shells bursting.

"Heavy guns were brought into action by both sides to-day, and their dull roar was discernible above the sharper detonation of field and mountain guns.

"The Russians are using big ordnance, which is in position in the inner ring of the Liaoyang forts."

BATTLE OF LIAOYANG.

London, Aug. 31.—A despatch from Liaoyang to a news agency, dated Aug. 30, says: "The Japanese artillery fire only ceased at 8 o'clock this evening. The casualties have not yet been ascertained.

"The third Russian corps repulsed a hot Japanese assault, the Japanese being hurled back by bayonet charges, firstly by the 23rd and then by the 24th Regiments, which received and repulsed the enemy no less than six times.

"Two Japanese companies which succeeded in occupying a Russian position were mistaken for Russians and annihilated by Japanese artillery fire.

"At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the Japanese concentrated their fire on a Russian southern detachment, and also tried to flank the detachment from the right under the protection of the batteries.

"One company after another was noticed running swiftly to the westward in an attempt to outflank the positions, but a Russian regiment and a battery were ordered to advance and succeeded in forcing the enemy to retreat in disorder, evacuating positions they had previously gained.

"There has been an immense expenditure of ammunition thruout the day, especially on the southern front against the Russian third corps.

"It is believed that the Russian losses so far have not been very heavy, except to the regiments which sustained bayonet charges. All the men serving one Russian gun except one were killed by shrapnel. The survivor, who was badly wounded, heroically brought his gun to headquarters, and even then refused to quit his place until the general peremptorily ordered him into the hospital.

"A more energetic attack is expected to-morrow.

"It seems that Gen. Kuroki's force did not participate in to-day's engagement.

"The morale of the Russian troops is excellent."

On the occasion of severing a 10-year connection with the Central Business College staff, A. M. Kennedy was last night presented with a gold pen by his late colleagues.
