CHANGE MADE IN BRINDLE CASE

Judge Crocket Quashes Conviction in Seaman's Institute Matter

Rules Guilty Verdict Not According to Interpretation of Act

In Supreme Court Chambers this morning Justice Crocket delivered judgment quashing the conviction of Wallace Brindle in connection with a charge arising out of the trouble in the Seaman's Mission on the morning of Jan. 1. The defendant had been convicted of an alleged offence under the Intoxicating Liquors Act and fined $100 in the Police Court.

POINTS IN ARGUMENT.

It had been argued in support of the conviction that offence had been disclosed under section 24 of the Intoxicating Liquors Act, which, in substance, states that no person shall permit drunkenness to take place in the house or on the premises of which he is owner, tenant or occupant.

As Hiram Sees It

"I see," said Mr. Hiram Hornbeam to The Times-Star reporter, "that labor feller Tom Moore says railroad rates hedn't orto be made any lower. Now, I ain't sayin' he's wrong, but I don't like his way o' lookin' at it. He says it's better fer the railroad men to hev the rates up an' keep the pay up. If you folloed that line of argyment the rates orto be jumped up higher every day so's the men could git more an' more. But I ain't sayin' more workin' on the railroads ain't the only ones to think about. The rest of us dug down to help build the roads—'n' we don't want 'em to go broke or we don't want to grow broke ourselves. I've seen cases where lower rates made a lot more business without ruinin' anybody. I guess I'll hev to write 'Tom an' tell him us farmers hev somethin' to say about rates, too. It sounds kind of funny to hear a labor feller say: 'Giv' 'em all the traffic 'n' be—y—y—sir'!"
