THE CHEESE TRADE.

Review of the Market in the Oxford District.

The Woodstock Sentinel-Review, in its usual weekly review of the cheese trade in the Oxford district, says:

The past week has been one of business in the cheese trade of the Oxford district. The slight improvement reported early in the week in New York has developed here into firmness, with a distinct advance of ¼ cent or better in prices. Here, as there, quality has had much to do with the forward movement. The cable stands where it has for weeks past, and buyers declare that the English market shows no new signs of strength; still they are willing to pay more for goods, and are anxious to get them. At Ingersoll on Tuesday one lot brought 9 1-16 cents; at Woodstock on Wednesday four lots brought this price, 9 cents ruling. There it was a one buyer's market; here the desire for stock at the advanced prices had spread, although some of the buyers still held back, declaring that their orders would not warrant them in keeping up with the procession. The explanation is that most of the cheese bought then is probably going into cold storage. The last half of July make is very fine. They will be good judges who will tell it from early August—if it does not get the preference. There is, therefore, a little speculation in the forward movement, of which the salesmen have been quick to take advantage. Some of those who had held early Julys were very glad to get out now on the rising tide; others, warned by the recent sag, were not disposed to hold. The result is that we have got down to a pretty healthy basis where buyers and sellers know where they stand. With the exception of an odd lot here and there there is no July cheese left. A careful buyer estimates that as much as 10,000 boxes have been bought since last market days at the factories. This, with what has been bought on the boards, would make a business of over 17,000 boxes in the Oxford district for the week. At any rate we will start with a clean slate with August make. Buyers will know what there is in the country, and the stocks in storage will probably be so small as to have no disturbing effect on the future.

What has been frequently said about the wisdom of selling so soon as cheese is ready for shipment is being continuously illustrated throughout the season. Salesmen have been getting top-notch prices in the few cases where goods have been held; and it may interest them to know that some English importers have lost heavily on stocks held over from last year.

Those who are "not in it" ruefully say that present prices mean dear cheese for August. They probably mean a firm market at least, but it is no safer to prophesy on cheese than on wheat.

With stimulated pastures and settled weather, the last half of August should make a fine showing both in quantity and quality.

Taking the sales at the two Oxford cheese boards and the estimated sales at the factories—and calculating on a basis of 70 pounds to a cheese, and the ruling price, 9 cents—over $100,000 has been paid for cheese during the week past. This will convey to the public a slight idea of the dairy industry in the county of Oxford.
