Immediately after this the 30th Regt. was marched down, with a six-pounder gun; and at the present time all is tolerably quiet. But that it is all over no one believes, and the most disastrous consequences are to be feared from these violent ebullitions of party and religious feeling.

In politics there is nothing new, but the hundred stories of the day—rumours of splits in the Cabinet, of divisions among the Opposition—and all sorts of chimeras to suit all kinds of parties.

The House will meet in an hour, when a long and violent debate is expected; indeed the indications already given by the House of its temper, are anything but amicable.

In the Council it is considered there will be little opposition; and of course there will be a majority in the Assembly.

MONTREAL, Tuesday afternoon.

I regret to state that my anticipations of further bloodshed has been too truly fulfilled. In the afternoon of Monday, after my letter was closed, a party of the Constitutionalists, while proceeding thro' Griffintown, to gather and protect voters, were fired upon from the houses of several Catholic Irishmen, and one young man named Johnson, the son of a Cabinet-maker, while endeavouring to enter the house of Patrick Brennan, from which shots had come, was unfortunately killed, and several others severely wounded. The house was then attacked by the Constitutionalists, and set fire to. The military were brought down, and while attempting to enter Brennan's house, were attacked by those within, and one of the soldiers was wounded, and they were obliged to fire upon them. Thirty or forty shots were fired from the house before it was taken. Twenty-seven prisoners, including the brother of the man killed on Saturday night, were captured on the premises. I enclose you the report of the inquest as far as it has gone.

The city is, as you may suppose, in a dreadful state of excitement; and it is to be feared some further popular outbreak will take place. The Montreal papers of the day contain the inquest on Fennall, and other particulars too lengthy for my letter.

INQUEST ON JOHN JOHNSON.

On Tuesday morning, at 12 o'clock, the following Jury was summoned at the residence of the deceased:—

William K. Hodges, Foreman; Isaac Moffatt, Alexander Murphy, Samuel Knowlton, Robert Robinson, Andrew Feeny, William Lillie, William Miller, James Thompson, Patrick Muldoon, John Wilbee, John McLean.

After viewing the body, which was terribly cut by the balls which had passed across and through his chest, the following evidence was taken:—

James Brown deposed, that he was a painter, resides in Montreal, and entered Patrick Brennan's house in Griffintown, about 3 o'clock in the afternoon of Monday, in company with the deceased, and others. People were firing out of the windows of Brennan's house, and Johnston and others went in to seize those who were firing. As they advanced to the foot of the stairs, which were shut in by a door, shots were fired from it, through the door, and deceased exclaimed—"I am shot!" Witness assisted to carry him out; he fell near the door; upon opening his shirt, saw ball holes through the breast. Shots were fired from Brennan's house before the party, of whom deceased was one, got opposite to it; saw also one man come out of it with a musket and bayonet, and advancing within thirty paces of those who were coming up, fired upon them. No attempt was made to enter Brennan's house, nor was any attack made upon it until the shots were fired. There was no firing from the party who were fired upon. The troops were near the house when the firing commenced, and had arrived opposite to Brennan's, just as Johnson was shot. There was no cause of offence given to the people in the house until the shots were fired upon those passing.

James Egan, cabinet-maker, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith, that he was in Mr. Johnson's employ, but is not now; was in William street Monday afternoon in company with the deceased, going towards the poll. Were not personally assaulted, but shots were fired from Brennan's house as witness passed. No shots were fired from the street upon the house, nor any attack made on it. As witness passed with deceased, Patrick Brennan, the father, was standing at the door of his house in William street; there was no disposition to attack his house; and had not the shots been fired, it won'd not have been attacked. As the shots were fired, deceased left witness and ran into the gateway between Mr. Brennan's and Larkin's. Witness followed him, thinking he was running into danger, and found him lying dead in the gateway. Heard shots fired after deceased left witness. Deceased and witness were employed with a party collecting voters who were intimidated from coming to the poll. There were 30 or 40 shots fired from Brennan's, Larkin's, and another house, before the military came up, and some shots were fired after they came. Those who were fired on committed no assault on any one, but were solely engaged in collecting and protecting voters intimidated by the threats of the other party.

John Matthewson, J. P., being duly sworn deposeth—was at the poll in Griffintown; saw a disposition to quarrel, and advised the sending for troops but was overruled. About eleven o'clock fighting commenced, and at the requisition of the Returning Officer witness went for troops and returned with them, and marched into Griffintown with a detachment. In consequence of information received of shots having been fired from houses in Griffintown, he searched them, and took from one a loaded musket. About 3 o'clock information came that there was firing from Brennan's house, and that the people were killing one another. Hastened down with the troops and found a large body of people attacking the house. Shots were fired from the house after the arrival of the troops. Witness went into the gateway and found deceased lying dead. Went into Brennan's house with a soldier to take prisoners, as they went up stairs a man advanced with a musket and bayonet and presented it at them and was about to fire, when the soldier fired. The military then fired upon the house, took a number of prisoners, some concealed in the soap works, under the "leach tubs." Searched more for prisoners than arms, but took one musket and a bayonet on a stick. After the death of Johnson the mob attacked Brennan's, and attempted to set it on fire, as also some other houses which shots were fired from. Found a large cask of powder, nearly as large as a pork barrel, it was painted out by Mr. Brennan who stated it was there to be used for blasting.

The Riot Act was commenced reading, but the mob round the house dispersed immediately, before it was concluded.

John Magrath, plasterer, being sworn, deposed—was passing Brennan's house on Monday afternoon and heard shots fired. Went with deceased into Brennan's to take the persons who fired, when deceased was shot at the foot of the staircase; was close to deceased at the time; knew deceased well. Their motive for going into the house was because of the shots that were fired; and to take those who fired on the prisoners. Deceased was shot through the door of the staircase.

The Inquest was then adjourned until to-morrow to enable other witnesses to be brought forward.

Our correspondent has furnished us with a report of the inquest upon the body of Johnson, which is in advance of the Montreal papers. The Gazette of Tuesday last has a report of the evidence in the case of Fennell, for which we have no room to-day. We, however, give the verdicts of the jury, who were divided as to a decision. They were as follows:

We find that the deceased, James Fennell, came to his death by a pistol-shot wound, inflicted on his body by one Charles Colburn, in defence of his life.

Wm. Dickinson, Foreman, James Smith,
C. Cooper, Jno. Buxton,
William M'Donald.

We, the undersigned Jurors, assembled at an inquisition on the body of James Fennell, do return a verdict of wilful murder against one Charles Colburn.

Another Outrage.—We are told that another outrage was perpetrated yesterday morning on a gentleman who was going to Church at about eleven o'clock. As he was passing the main guard, he was attacked by several ruffians and severely beaten, his face being much disfigured. We understand that he attempted to take refuge in the guard house, but that the officer on duty would not allow him to remain near the place and ordered the sentry to turn him off. We can scarcely believe this, for the protection of any subject of the Crown, we should conceive to be one of the first duties of the Military as well as the civil authorities.—Montreal Courier.

[What think you of St. John now, Mr. Courier?]

QUEBEC Nov. 29.—The St. Lawrence yesterday morning was nearly covered with floating ice. In the night, the thermometer was down to about zero, and the cold continues to-day. One ferry steamer made a trip across yesterday morning, but the rest are all laid up probably for five months. The North America on Tuesday evening the 26th inst., was the last steamer for Montreal this season.

The last vessels for Europe sailed on the 24th instant, the John & Mary being the only square rigged vessel now in port.

The season of navigation has been open fully as long as usual; but the gales which prevailed this month have occasioned greater loss than usual to the homeward bound shipping in the river. It is feared that enough has not been done for the improvement of the navigation, and the assistance of ship-wrecked seamen in the lower parts of the river extending four or five hundred miles below Quebec. The natural consequence is an increased rate of insurance, which must ultimately fall on the trade and the consumers of goods imported by the St. Lawrence, to the encouragement of importations from the United States, and probable a decrease of the Provincial Revenue by smuggling.

NEWFOUNDLAND PACKET.—The steamer North America arrived from St. John's yesterday morning, after a disastrous passage of 9 days. At the beginning of the week, the most painful solicitude for her safety pervaded the community, as she would have arrived about the 1st instant, if she had not been impeded by stress of weather or a serious casualty.

On Wednesday last, however, the schr. Actress arrived from St. John's, bringing an account of the North America having been in company with herself and the schooner Waltron, off Cape Race on the 27th ult., and in all probability she had put back to repair the injuries she might have received from the storm. This report allayed in some degree the anxiety that was so generally felt; and her arrival at an early hour yesterday morning, diffused the utmost delight among the multitude who were interested in the fate of the worthy captain, the passengers and crew. Her detention was occasioned, first, from getting her steam-pipe broke, by the force of the sea, in the gale of 26th ult. The passengers shipped themselves, and a quantity of specie, at Trepassey, on board the schooner Waltron, which accompanied her into that harbour. It next became expedient to run the steamer into St. Pierre, for a supply of coal, and thence she managed to get to Arichat, and finally to reach this port, though in a condition so sadly strained and otherwise damaged that she will be incompetent to perform another voyage until she is completely refitted.—Halifax Recorder.

CHARITABLE BEQUEST.—We learn that Mrs. Phelan, lately deceased, among other bequests, left £50 to the poor of this city. During the week, the Executors of her Estate, with laudable zeal, no doubt feeling that at the present season, the expenditure of the money for the purpose bequeathed, would be most useful, sent a cheque for the amount to His Worship the Mayor, in whose judgement they confided, with the request that he would apply it in such a way as would best carry out the charitable views of the testatrix in relieving the necessities of the poor.—Ib.

Iron Collier.—Some curiosity has been excited by the arrival in the Thames of a Newcastle collier, a fine looking vessel, built of iron, and fitted with a screw propeller, worked with an engine of twenty horse power. She is 139 feet long, 27 feet 6 inches wide, and when loaded with 340 tons of coals her draught is only 11 feet 9 inches aft, and 10 feet 3 inches forward. Her hold is divided into seperate chambers, after the principle of water tight bulk heads, hermetically closed false floor, into which the water can be admitted by large traps, for the ballast, and when not required is pumped out again by the engine. Her bows are sharp and wedge like, and her stern unusually projecting. Though low, her counters are so flat that she lifts with every swell, and it is nearly impossible for a wave to break over her taffrail.

NEW SHIP.—A splendid new ship was launched on Wednesday from the ship yard of Messrs. W. & J. WRIGHT. We understand that unusual pains have been taken in her construction, and in making her a superior vessel in every point; she is named the Colonist, is 750 tons burthen, and owned by the enterprising builders.
