The Scrap Bag.

I have another word on the subject of housecleaning, and that is for those women who turn their homes upside down and make everybody uncomfortable. Why do you do it? A thoroughly good housekeeper has assured me that this is entirely unnecessary. "One room a day" is her motto for spring and housecleaning time. Don't rip up all your carpets at once, leaving the house looking like some dreary sort of barracks. When the dining-room is under way, let the sitting-room or library be a "shelter in a time of storm," an unmolested spot, where the weary may take refuge. I have observed this comfortable and sane method of cleaning house in a domicile which presents a clean and cosy appearance in all parts, unless you should stumble upon the particular room which happens to be turned upside down for that day. "Why," I demanded of this housekeeper, 'do not all women adopt your method. It is very sensible, and you seem to get through a little ahead of the others." "Oh, because they don't think," was the terse reply. But why don't they? I like to see brains in everything that brains can be put into, and surely housekeeping is one.

* * * *

That brown-eyed nurse with wavy hair,
And voice just like the voice of June,
Is false to me—she's false, I swear!
And fickle as the changeful moon.
She lays her velvet hand on me,
And smiles and talks so softly sweet,
And makes me thrill and seems to be
So pained that I'm not on my feet.
And then when I'm on fire for her,
And strike love's impulse to resist,
She thrusts a glass thermometer
Into my mouth and feels my wrist.
Then scores she down upon the chart
A rising fever, though I'm sure
'Tis wrong that she who steals my heart
Should likewise take my temperature.

A blue breakfast that Edward Russell tells about is both suggestive and amusing. It was in summer time, of course. He says: "In a city where I was lecturing a society dame asked a number of friends to a little breakfast. They found their hostess exquisitely gowned in blue, presiding over a beautiful breakfast table, the center of which up to the plate line, was one mass of lovely blue morning glories—bloom and tendril. This artistic effect was produced by fine wire netting adjusted over graduated glasses of water, in which the delicate stems of the vines were kept moist and fresh. The harmony of blue and green was carried out through the entire service; one course in old blue Canton china, then one in green majolica, followed by a third—a grandmothers' set of green and blue and gold bands. But what excited the most interest and admiration was a set of pale blue open dessert plates, just the tint of the blue morning glories. When asked about these unique dessert plates, the hostess touched with her slender, turquoise-decked hand, her plate which seemed almost as rare and fine as her jewels, and said: "Yes, I purchased these on my last trip abroad; they were my greatest extravagance, and are said to be literally unique. I could secure but nine, so when I wish to use them I have to limit my guests to that number." These unique blue plates were for a number of days the talk of society. A few weeks after the little blue breakfast one of the guests, visiting an unfrequented part of the city on an errand of charity, discovered on the pavement before a small, shabby china store six baskets of the identical pale blue china plates—marked 12 1-2 cents each. Was the hostess of the pale blue breakfast, attempting art, cleverness or impudence?"

Duck will be worn more than ever this summer by maids who are a dozen years older, and it was shown as stiff as a board and so heavy that tailors will have to handle it. Indeed, the tailor cut will monopolize it in white, at least. Skirts will stand out immensely, and are in many cases to be ankle length. This is a wise provision, for a duck skirt of ordinary length loses its freshness in a very short time.

The New York World has several young ladies on its staff who are continually surprising people by their courage and enterprise. "Nelly Bly" and "Meg Merrilles," the two principal girl reporters, have secured an international reputation. The latter lately persuaded Nikola Tesla, the scientist, to pass a current of a million volts of electricity through her. A current of between one and two thousand volts is considered sufficient to electrocute criminals, but it is thought that a much higher current would prove harmless. To test this Miss "Meg Merrilles" had the experiment made on herself. She survived, and wrote four or five columns describing her feelings during the critical moments.

The $100 paid to Constance Cleveland Robinson, the little 6-year-old girl who first sent in the name "Defender," chosen by the yacht syndicate, will amount to $200 when she is old enough to be married, if she invests it right—Boston Globe. But think of the candy now.—New York Morning Journal.

DAILY HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

Do we know anybody? Ah! dear me, we are most of us lonely in the world; you who have anybody who loves you, cling to them and thank God.—Thackeray.

BREAKFAST — Bananas. Pearl Hominy. Breaded Lamb Chops. Fried Potatoes. Baking Powder Rolls. Coffee.

DINNER—Cod Steak. Mashed Potatoes. Baked Tomatoes. Spinach. Celery. Radishes. Apple Pie. Cheese.

SUPPER — Fresh Graham Bread. Butter. Omelet. Apple Sauce. Cookies. Cocoa.

GRAHAM BREAD.

One pint warm water, 1-4 cake of compressed yeast, 1 scant tablespoon of salt, 2 tablespoons of molasses, 1-4 teaspoon of soda. Mix altogether and stir in graham flour to make a dough as stiff as it can be stirred. Fill small tin pans half full; keep warm; when pans are full put into quick oven. Bake from 1-2 to 3-4 of an hour. Excellent warm for tea.
