A. W. H. S [illegible] "[illegible] Stewart [illegible] decided to go and [illegible] the country and pick some [illegible] We made a rocker and during [illegible] days [illegible] rocker [illegible] [illegible] We [illegible] we had [illegible] from seventy cents a day. [illegible] We [illegible] bars that we worked had been worked previously by others."

Ralph Condon, a [illegible] of many years' experience, in a signed [illegible] before [illegible] the Yukon Commissioners at Dawson recently made the [illegible] "I have mined and prospected on the Stewart River, and [illegible] I started in to prospect on said [illegible] and worked [illegible] the [illegible] On a bar known as Nelson Point [illegible] between $90 and $500 [illegible] for dredging, as the ground [illegible] and from its known richness the Stewart River offers great [illegible] facilities."

The Dredgability of Our Leaseholds

THIS [illegible] immediately answered by quoting from a [illegible] Mr. Robert Henderson of Dawson, Yukon Territory, [illegible] the past four years has held the position of Assistant Gold Commissioner Mining Log [illegible] by appointment of the Dominion Government. Mr. Henderson says: "I have been in the Yukon Territory since the year 1898, without being absent from the Territory for more than six months during that time up to the present; and I have prospected on nearly all the principal streams of the Territory. [illegible] I have prospected on I am more impressed with the Stewart River than I am with any other. My reasons are that there are a hundred tributaries feeding into it, all of which bearing more or less gold."

Enough machine [illegible] prospecting has been done in these localities to show that for a vast portion of the ground the dredge is not only the most efficient, but in fact the only really adaptable machine for effecting large results. Those who know the region best are unanimous in the opinion that the possibilities for successful and profitable gold dredging there are practically unlimited, and that any well conducted company that can get a good hold now can count upon enormous and continuous profits for years and decades to come.
