INDEPENDENT VIEW OF BYE-ELECTIONS

Illuminating Comment by the Noted E. W. Thomson.

POINTS WORTH THINKING OVER

Defeat of Conservative Candidates Would Be in the Best Interests of the Conservative Party.

Mr. E. W. Thomson, Canadian correspondent of the famous and impartial Boston Transcript, touches on the London and North Oxford bye-elections in a letter written for the information of New Englanders. Mr. Thomson has lived many years continuously in the States, as well as Canada, and there are few writers for the press in either country who carry as much authority. Of the school controversy he says:

The Canadian Parliament, when it assembled early in January, was thought likely to prorogue after Easter. Its debates are still drooling on, at an expense of $28 per minute, because leading worthies of the Orange Order consider the country to be offended by Sir Wilfrid Laurier's proposal to confirm the territorial school system. That system is based on a most reasonable compromise between the secular and the denominational. It secures state inspection, the use of state-authorized textbooks, teaching by state-certificated teachers only, and liberty for Protestants and Catholics alike to maintain separate schools, in which religious instruction shall be permitted from 3:30 to 4 p.m. Obviously, no local creed minority will start a separate school under such laws, unless there be some good local reason, such as a very intolerant majority element, for segregating the minority's children. In fact, to the credit of the Territories, there are in them but nine separate schools. This fact is, with curious stupidity, urged as a reason for abolishing the separate schools privilege. It may testify to the usefulness of the existing law. Where a creed minority has a legal right to establish a separate school there, the trustees, the chosen teachers, and the majority parents, are all alike under a sort of bond to take care that the minority and their children shall be kindly treated. For if the local majority exhibit bigotry to the local minority, it may and probably will take its school rates away from the established school, set up one wherein its children shall be unmolested, and thus divide the educational fund, to the detriment of the original school.

How admirably the system works to ameliorate religious animosities was illustrated to me some evenings ago by a very well known Canadian Protestant publisher. He had been bred in a school district where Catholics were much in the majority. They controlled the only public school. The Protestant minority received no reason or provocation to establish a separate school. Their children were treated by the Catholic teachers, trustees, children and people with a beautiful consideration that had, curiously, always remained in his memory as a reason why the law should not recognize nor aid any separate school. He wished children of all creeds to be bred together. Who does not? But that desideratum appears to have been secured in his school district by the known liberty of the creed minority to set up a separate school.

It is not easy to see any reason why Sir Wilfrid's ministry should be rebuked by any national constituency. The mere fact that his bills for the new provinces are attacked from one side by Orangemen and from the other by Ultramontane Catholics, indicates the good sense and moderation of his purpose to leave the west in possession of the school system the west devised. In assailing that system as itself not good, the Opposition were so completely worsted in argument that they gave up two months ago, and have ever since been hynotizing themselves by repeating the one word "coercion" in lugubrious accents—as if there were some coercion in leaving people to enjoy what they testify they like! With a west satisfied, and only the lodges and certain Energetic Eccentricities of Toronto and Quebec vexed, as they always are with Laurier, it would seem rash to presume that his ministry is about to be hammered by intelligent electors. If some of his Ontario associates did not seem a bit rattled by the "Coercion" bawl, he and they might be presumed on the eve of a striking victory. For every reason which induced Canada, London and North Oxford, to back him last November is not only in full force today, but reinforced by considering the possible effects of hitting him a staggering blow.

In November he won on the strength of a full treasury, light taxation, good business administration, and more particularly on the merits of the transcontinental railway project. The treasury is fuller, taxation unchanged, the admistration still careful and energetic, and the transcontinental, which its opponents denounced as a wild scheme of impossible grades, through a horrible wilderness, and incapable of being financed advantageously, has been proved sound in every respect, just as he prognosticated. The grades from Moncton to Quebec, which the Opposition prophets visioned as making that section an absurdity, are reported excellent by the engineers. As equally easy grades are assured between Winnipeg and Quebec, it is certain that the line will be furnish very cheap transportation both ways. This all Ontario will be brought, in effect, hundreds of miles nearer the west than had the wise Opposition been permitted to burk the enterprise. Give them a striking victory now, and their power to embarrass it will be notably strengthened. Not only so, but the lengthy and fierce creed and race agitation which such victory would undoubtedly induce, could not but damage the business prospects of Canada. This is so clearly perceived in Montreal that every large financial interest and every paper in that great business city, without distinction of politics, rebukes the insensate agitation against the Government.

Increase that agitation, and what happens to the Opposition? It passes into the control of Dr. Sproule, the Orange grand master; Mr. Foster, who has lately distinguished himself as a firebrand, Mr. W. F. Maclean, who has been dragging Mr. Borden for a year past at his heels, and all the minor grooms of the Protestant Horse. If their wildest dreams be decisively beaten in London and North Oxford, then the moderate elements of the Conservative Opposition will be enabled to resume its direction; Mr. R. L. Borden will be no longer compelled to remain in virtual abdication to his more fanatical supporters, and the business interests of the country will be reassured of quiet times.

In the past Sir Wilfrid has been materially aided by votes and abstentions of truly Conservative elements. As they have everything to gain by a restoration of the Opposition to courses of sanity, it seems probable that they will not turn out in the imminent bye-elections and vote that Mr. W. F. Maclean shall be enabled to give Mr. R. L. Borden the quietus at his good pleasure. As Canada has stamped down successive generations of trouble-makers, it may almost be presumed that those now operating will find that they have cut a stick to beat their own backs on the 13th of June.
