LAST OF THE RUTLEDGE GANG

Fred Lee Rice Pays the Supreme Penalty for the Murder of Officer Boyd.

EXTRAORDINARY BEARING OF THE MAN

Went to His Death With Remarkable Composure—Close of a Hideous Chapter of Crime.

The sorrowing mother of Fred Lee Rice left last evening for her Illinois home with the body of her son who expiated his crime on the gibbet. She purchased the most expensive casket in the city. The drawing of the veil over the dark deeds of the Rutledge gang of desperadoes is received with satisfaction by the people of this section. Certainly Toronto has had more than its share of odium as a result of the operations of these birds of prey. The extermination of Rice, Rutledge and Jones is a grim warning to other desperate characters who seek this part of the country with a view of preying upon the community.

The grief of the aged mother of Rice is one of the sad features of the tragic affair that cost four lives and much suffering. The pathetic picture of this innocent woman, supplicating for her outlaw son and finally waiting with Christian resignation for the law's vengeance to be satisfied, is one that appeals to every individual who ever knew a mother's tender love. If there is a single thing in the career of this desperate product of the criminal element worthy of commendation it is his apparent love for his wretched mother in the darkest hour of his life. If Fred Lee Rice had been inspired with such filial devotion in his youth he would never have been brought to such an ignoble end.

Six Years Bring Changes.

Six years is not a very long period in the life of a man, yet six years ago the man who yesterday suffered the severest penalty of the law for destroying human life was a respected memberof society, petted and courted by gold people, with a future as bright as any young man could crave. What could induce an evenly balanced individual to deliberately plunge into a career of crime with every surrounding incentive calculated to lead him into paths of righteousness is one of those mysteries that puzzle the sages of all ages and furnish food for speculation the world over. Yet this is the history of the man for whom the black flag was raised over Toronto's jail yesterday.

Here is the story of a young man's rise, decline and fall to the lowest depths of infamy that ought to serve as a warning for every person who has not reached mature years. If there was ever a case that stands out in bold relief as the acme of all that is horrible in a criminal's life it is this career that was cut short by the hangman's rope on the scaffold. Rice had been surrounded with every luxury that fond parents could supply. Dame nature smiled upon him, and in face and physique he was finely proportioned. He received a college education and associated with good people. Until he was twenty years old no particular criminal tendency developed. The wild to a marked degree Rice was not thought to be dangerous in any sense of the word. Then the turning point was reached, and rapidly he degenerated into one of the most desperate of criminals.

As to Sympathy Expressed.

Because of his early surroundings and opportunities to take a high place in the affairs of his community the murderer deserves less sympathy in his extremity than a poor devil brought up in the slums and familiar with crime from childhood. His depravity is the more hideous because of the fact that it was deliberately sought and cultivated. It was not his environment, and from the surroundings calculated to inspire in man the loftest sentiments he sank by virtue of the depraved appetite which he cultivated in schools of vice, to the dregs. It is singular that good men can find it in their hearts to express sympathy for a criminal of this character, and yet there were many evidences among those who witnessed the execution that there was some sincere sympathy manifested for Rice in his direplight. The probabilities are that much of this was the reflection of the deep feeling for the mother of the convict.

On Eternity's Brink.

While on the brink of eternity, the best quality remaining in the soul of Rice was undoubtedly aroused. His early refinement was sufficient to assert itself in such a way as to permit the criminal to make himself agreeable to those with whom he came in contact during his last hours. After his conversion, the nature of the desperate man apparently underwent a sincere change. Then it was that his love for the mother, whose anguish he witnessed, flamed forth. The display of this latent quality was calculated to provoke a measure of admiration in the limited circle in which the condemned man moved.

It is the belief of those most familiar with Rice in his last moments that he was converted in the best sense of the word. Certainly he was buoyed up to a powerful degree when the extreme moment arrived. If the scene enacted was trying on the nerves of the half-hundred people gathered in the jail yard to witness the execution it must have been infinitely more trying on the nerves of the man who was forced to face death in its most terrible form. Yet Rice was the coolest person present.

His Bearing Extraordinary.

His bearing was most extraordinary. He carried with him the air of a man resigned to death, yet fully alert to the awfulness of the fate about to overtake him. There was nothing of the braggart in his manner, yet he was serene to an amazing degree. The quality known as "gameness" in criminal parlance was wholly wanting in his conduct, yet his composure was in extraordinary contrast to the perturbed state in which most of the other persons present found themselves.

He walked the full distance of the jail yard to the gibbet, probably 50 feet. He did not raise his eyes from the ground, but his head was erect and his shoulders well thrown back. His attitude was the same on the scaffold, and there was not the slightest suggestion of fear. If he was coward there was nothing in his calm bearing to indicate the existence of the craven. Yet this is the same man who murdered in the most cowardly manner Officer Boyd a little over a year ago.

Rather Contradictory Situation.

Here is a contradictory situation that is hard to understand, except on the theory of the regeneration of the man as a result of the religious training. It was the consensus of opinion among those familiar with Rice's last hours, that the man was a sincere convert to his religious teachings. It is not too much to say that his demeanor at the last moment could scarcely be attributed to anything else than his faith in the religion he had embraced. Rice refused stimulants. It is usual on such occasions to supply a condemned man with strong stimulants just prior to the final act, but in this case Rice waved them aside. He said he could bear it, and he did.

Officers on the Alert.

The officers were prepared to anticipate any effort the condemned man might have made, however, to throw himself from the balcony, as did Rutledge, his companion. This phase of the case was discussed in all its details several nights ago, and the man was watched too closely to permit him to cheat the gallows in this or any other way. The probabilities are that because of his mother's pleading the wretched murderer would not have attempted anything of the kind.

Rice's vanity was a distinguishing trait of the man, and it did not desert him in his last moment. He was careful to select the dark suit in which he was to be robed after death, and even explained the shape of the collar he desired to have placed around his neck. The appearance on his coat lapel of a dainty carnation was an incongruous contrast to the doleful surroundings.

Executioner Was Nervous.

The manner of the executioner was one of the real startling features in evidence in the jail yard. He seemed terribly nervous and keenly alive to the character of the service he was about to perform. Perhaps it is to the man's credit that he was excited to a degree. He seemed to want to talk to some one constantly prior to the execution, and he could not be still a moment. When he sprung the trap that launched a soul into eternity he rushed rapidly into the interior of the jail and paced up and down the corridor until his services were again required. In one breath the hangman seemed to desire to impress upon those present his perfect indifference to emotion, and in the next breath his tactics changed to the opposite position.

Air of Depression at the Jail.

As soon as possible all evidence of the affair was removed from the jail yard, and an effort made to have the prison routine again continued, but the air of depression was very apparent all day around the buildign. It permeated the air and felon and official alike seemed moved by the same doleful spirit that the presence of the black flag had evoked.

The little worldly property of the condemned was distributed among the prison officials, and seemed to be much prized by the recipients. A Bible here, a card of thanks there, and a memento in the way of a pipe to another constituted the extent of the distribution, but the tokens were accompanied by simply worded messages of thanks for the favors the guards had shown the prisoner.

Letter to the Governor.

The following letter was written to the governor of the jail:

"Toronto, Ont., July 17, 1902.

"Governor VanZant, Toronto. My Dear Sir,—I want to express to you my heartfelt gratitude for all the kindness and considerate treatment that has been shown to me all along by you and the officers of the jail. It has been a long, sore trial to all, and I know that you have found your duty often a bitter task, but I am thankful to all for continuous kindness and sympathy. Kindly convey to each and every one of your officers my esteem and gratitude. Sincerely and faithfully yours,

"Fred Lee Rice.

"P.S.—Please do not mention this to the officers until after to-morrow.

The crime for which Rice was hanged grew out of the foul murder of County Constable William Boyd on the evening of June 4, 1901, while Fred Rice, Frank Rutledge and Thomas Jones were being conveyed to the jail from the court house. The three crooks were desperate characters, who had come to Toronto a year before from Chicago for the purpose of robbing banks. Rutledge was known here, and, after breaking into several banks, the men were chased back to Chicago and extradited after a bitter fight. It was while being tried for this series of crimes that the greater crime of murder was committed.

An unknown man threw two revolvers into the vehicle carrying the men to the jail. Rice and Rutledge grabbed the weapons and Boyd was instantly killed by Rice. Officer Stewart pretended to surrender, and the three thugs jumped from the cab handcuffed together and ran for a street car. Stewart began shooting at them as they ran, and shot Jones twice. After a desperate struggle, the men were captured. The effort to escape was foolish, but showed the desperate character of the ruffians.

Jones died the next day in the hospital, while on the surgeons' table. A day later Rutledge threw himself from the upper jail corridor and dashed out his brains in a most dramatic manner. Rice boasted that he would never be hanged, and was in consequence watched so closely that suicide was impossible.

His case went to the court of last resort, and a desperate effort was made to save his neck. His family were wealthy and were practically impoverished by their criminal son.

As a special mark of esteem for the mother of Rice, the body of the murderer was released by the authorities and permitted to be taken to the States for burial, one of the first cases on record. Rice was born and raised at Champaign, Ill., and was a college graduate. He was a man of desperate daring, and with Jones and Rutledge formed a gang that terrified this section for some time. Their fight in Chicago to avoid extradition was a spectacular affair, and their friends delayed their return for a year. They had powerful friends and many crooked acquaintances to help them, but they could not be saved.

DAVID AND GOLIATH.

A Little Shot Put Old King Coffee Out of Business.

When medicine fails, they sometimes send sick people away to another climate for their health. Sometimes the climate does it, but more often they stumble on the proper food to take, and then get well.

A lady in San Diego tells of a friend who left her home each December, for the past two winters, to go to Cal. for her health. She says: Almost all of her time was spent in visiting the doctor and sitting in a big chair and watching the clock to note the time for her next dose of medicine. Nervousness was her principal trouble, and with others of kindred nature made life for her a burden.

On the occasion of her last visit, I begged her to give up the use of coffee, and use Postum Coffee. She replied that she could not stop coffee. I said no more at the time, but the next morning at breakfast I passed her a fragrant, steaming cup of Postum, making it as it should be made. After that I had no more trouble, and my friend drank no more coffee. But the most surprising part of the experience was the change that soon came over her.

We began to notice it in less than a week. In less than a month her nervousness had left her, and in three months she was a new woman in face, figure and health. I had not dared to hope for so much benefit, altho I had been greatly benefited myself by Postum, but coffee to her system was simply poisonous, and I believe this is the case with many others. She returned to her home in December, and was married within less than two months after. She never fails to give credit to Postum for her health or thanks to me for teaching her to make it properly, and well she may, for Postum has done for her what travel, doctors and medicine failed to do. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

CHINESE REFORMS DEFEATED.

Revival of Customs Corruption and the Tribute of Rice.

Pekin, July 18.—The Throne has issued orders to Sir Robert Hart, Imperial Commissioner of Maritime Customs, to remit only the excess of former collections of native customs toward the payment of the indemnity to the powers.

This action is taken, it is believed, in order to safeguard the immemorial corruption to which the customs revenues have been devoted heretofore, and to defeat the reform provided for in the protocol. It also violates the letter of that document.

The Chinese could find it easy to pay the indemnity, and it is possible that the government could settle all the claims in the short time, if it was disposed to apprehend the guilty.

The tribute of rice, which was commuted to a tribute of silver, in a long edict, issued last year, because it was regarded as the cause of China's greatest frauds, and embezzlements, and was said to be consuming the life of the people, is again arriving. This edict was issued at the time, ostensibly for the purpose of saving millions to the people.

The preparations for railway extensions and the continuance of reforms, including the reconstruction of government boards and yamens and the destruction of records, have actually been annulled.

SUMMER SCHOOL CONVENTION.

Methodist Young People Will Be in Session at Victoria University.

To-day the convention of the Young People's Summer School will open in Victoria University, and will be continued until the 29th inst. Victoria University is a peculiarly fitting home for the Summer School Mission, being one of the finest of the University group, and being retired from the hustle and bustle of the city, and yet convenient of access from the Belt Line and Yonge-street car services.

The object of the Summer School is to train workers, who shall lead in an organized effort to develop a prayerful, intelligent, systematic, giving, interest in the missionary work under the management of the General Board of Missions of the Methodist Church of Canada.

The principal business to-day will consist of the registration of delegates. In the evening a reception will be given in the college to delegates and friends.

Among those who will be in attendance is Dr. Hart, Superintendent of the Methodist Church Mission in West China. Japan will be represented by Dr. A. Sutherland, the General Secretary. Dr. McLeod, so well known by his books on the Indians of Canada, their customs and religions, will tell of the Indians and strangers now coming to Canada. Prof. Villard will speak of the French Methodist Institute and the work accomplished in it.

CABINET RECONSTRUCTED.

London, July 18.—The Duke of Devonshire, president of the council; the Marquis of Lansdowne, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs; Joseph Chamberlain, the Colonial Secretary; the Earl of Selborne, Fist Lord of the Admiralty, and the Marquis of Londonderry, Postmaster-General, it is understood, have consented to retain their present portfolios in the new cabinet.

Lord George Hamilton, Secretary of State for India; C. T. Ritchie, the Home Secretary; R. W. Hanbury, President of the Board of Agriculture; W. St. John Brodrick, Secretary of State for War; A. Akers Douglas, First Commissioner of Works, and Walter Long, President of the Local Government Board, will remain in the cabinet, but their portfolios may be changed. George Wyndham will re main Chief Secretary for Ireland, but with a seat in the cabinet, the new Lord Lieutenant having no seat in the cabinet, and being rather a social representative of the Sovereign than a political representative of the government.

BUGLE MAJOR SWIFT RESIGNS

But His Resignation Has Not Yet Been Accepted.

There is some little trouble among the members of the Queen's Own Bugle Band, but it is not so serious as the rumor abroad yesterday, that the buglers would resign in a body. The grievance the men have is against a certain officer, whom they accuse of officiousness beyond bearing. They say he made himself decidedly objectionable. The officer in question was not Lieut.-Col. Pellatt, who, on the contrary, was as thoughtful and kind as possible to them all, and did everything in his power to make the coronation trip a pleasant one.

It was said that the men would take their cue from Bugle-Major Swift, and, if he resigned, then they would follow suit.

When seen by a World reporter last night, Major Swift admitted there was some little friction, but it was not serious enough, he said, to lead to a general resignation of the band.

"I have been anxious to retire from the leadership of the band," he added, "and I thought of just quietly dropping out. I sent in my resignation a short time ago, but no action has as yet been taken regarding it."

The major's decision to drop out of the band is not a result of any trouble in connection with the coronation trip.

CLERGYMAN LOST HIS RIG.

Five Roysterers Took It for a Time—Policeman Found It.

The horse and rig stolen on Thursday from Rev. G. W. Stevenson, pastor of the Methodist Church at Newtonbrook, were found early yesterday morning underneath the C.P.R. subway on the Don Flats, opposite Winchester-street. The outfit was abandoned by five young men, who had driven about during the afternoon, and spent the evening carousing in Riverdale Park. The horse and carriage were taken by a policeman to Stone's livery stable on East Gerrard-street, where the outfit was subsequently claimed by the owner.

APPEAL TO LOCAL UNIONS.

Alien Miners to Pass Thru Toronto to Fernie, B.C.

The Miners' Union have wired from Fernie, B.C., to James Wilson of the Typographical Union, Toronto, stating that Pennsylvania miners are coming that way by carloads. The telegram continues: "Stop others from coming; strike is still on; Crow's Nest Company having them enter via Toronto. Could Council bring to bear alien labor law?" The telegram is signed by Daniel McKenzie, secretary of the Miners' Union, and the local union men will do what they can to comply with its request.

FIREMEN'S FAMILIES FUND

liberality of the citizens. Secretary Jarvis of the Board of Trade is really a busy man, receiving subscriptions. Members of the committee canvassed business men yesterday, with the splendid result shown below.

The last subscription registered last night was the handsome sum of $1000 from Mr. Timothy Eaton, who is in Muskoka. In response to a query from the committee, Mr. Eaton wired that he could be counted upon for the amount stated. This is the most generous contribution from a private citizen.

All in a Few Days.

The small subscriptions are expected to make a large total, and the $50,000 fund will, doubtless, be ready for investment in a few days. The income from it will be used, at the option of the trustees, to keep from want the families of the brave fellows of the fire brigade who met death in the path of duty.

At Hanlan's Point.

The 65th Regiment Band of Buffalo, which has attracted immense crowds at every concert at Hanlan's Point this week, will give two concerts, this afternoon and evening, and will close one of its most successful engagements with two concerts, on Sunday afternoon and evening. For next week the Ferry Company have engaged, direct from New York, one of the most expensive vaudeville shows on the road, every act being entirely new to Toronto. The opening performance will be given on Monday evening, with two concerts daily the remainder of the week.

Why go limping and whining about your corns, when a 25-cent bottle of Holloway's Corn Cure will remove them? Give it a trial and you will not regret it.

Play at Glenview Golf Course.

Glenview Golf Course, Ill., July 18.—Either E. B. Byers of the Alleghany Club of Pittsburg or Louis James of the Glenview Club, Chicago, will wear the amateur gold championship laurels to-morrow night. These two won their way thru the semi-finals to-day, Byers rather easily from Dr. D. P. Fredericks of Oil City, and James after a close game with F. O. Reinhart of Baltusrol to-morrow will meet in the finals at 36 holes, for the championship.

If Byers and James play in the form they showed to-day the game may not be decided until the home green is reached, the Byers, on account of the marvelous golf he played yesterday, when he put Champion Travis out of the running, is perhaps a slight favorite.

The game will be played over the first nine holes of the Glenview course, unless the players shall elect to use row boats.

The low-lying lands, embracing the fair greens to the tenth, eleventh, thirteenth and seventeenth greens and the greens of the latter two are covered with from two to ten inches of muddy water, the result of last night's terrific storm. Even the higher ground of the first nine holes is in exceedingly poor condition for play, while the whole course is soft and treacherous. Consultation of the U.S.G.A. officials saw the championship contest must be finished. A steady drizzling rain was falling tonight.

The element of luck entered largely into to-day's game, altho it did not affect the ultimate results. Against this was golf under adverse conditions that was beautiful. Reinhart's iron shots, as a rule, were perfect, while James' and Byers' putting won them many holes. James especially excelled in this and he practically won in the afternoon by twice putting the gutta percha in the coop from distances of about 20 feet.

Should the weather clear to-morrow it is probable the largest gallery that ever witnessed a championship game will follow the play.

20 Years of Vile Catarrh

Wonderful Testimony to the Curative Powers of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder.

Charles O. Brown, journalist, of Duluth, Minn., writes: "I have been a sufferer from Throat and Nasal Catarrh for over 20 years, during which time my head has been stopped up and my condition truly miserable. Within 15 minutes after using Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, I obtained relief. Three bottles have almost, if not entirely, cured me."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated publicly in court that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne, that the whole story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—Times, July 13, 1864.
