WOMAN SHINGLING HER VILLA'S ROOF

New York Lawyer Turns to Carpentry as a Summer Diversion.

New York, July 11.—For the last three days the summer visitors that saunter about the beaches near Valhalla, the summer home of Mrs. Jeanne B. Marion, at Nassau-by-the-Sea, Long Island, have spent much of their time watching Mrs. Marion, who is a lawyer in Manhattan, with a residence at No. 124 East Twenty-third street, shingling her handsome villa.

Mrs. Marion can climb a ladder as nimbly as a fireman, and she has evolved a natty working suit that is at the same time useful and ornamental, as all clothes should be but are not.

While the sun drove most women in the shelter of trees and tents and beach umbrellas, Mrs. Marion, attired in a canvas working blouse, or "sailor jumper," a short linen skirt, leggins and a soft felt hat such as men wear, took nails from a long pocket in her skirt, and without ever a miss drove them home through the shingles at an amazing rate and without ever hitting her thumb.

A timid newspaper reporter ascended the ladder and walked gingerly across the half-shingled roof, and to the astonishment of the merry clink of the hammer found out "there's a reason" for Mrs. Marion's unusual occupation.

"You see," said she, "I am in my law office all winter, and I feel that I need rest and diversion. Now, what could give me greater diversion than nailing shingles on my own roof after hammering at the law all winter? I was reared in Denmark, where there are many women carpenters, and one day when I saw that my roof needed reshingling I thought of that and determined that what one woman can do another can, and here I am. I am really succeeding very well, and each day is making me more expert."

Mrs. Marion was formerly official stenographer in the United States courts in Brooklyn. She was admitted to the bar several years ago, and has since been prominent in her profession, making a specialty of cases affecting women and children.

ARGYLE BUYS SANDHAMS

Great Many Pictures Finished and Unfinished Sold.

London, July 11.—A great many of the hundreds of pictures and sketches finished and unfinished, which were found in the studio of Henry Sandham, the Canadian artist, after his death a year ago, and which are on view at the Imperial Institute already bear the little red disks which denote that they are sold.

The Duke of Argyll has bought several works, including a gravure of the portrait of Sir John Macdonald, which is now in the Parliament House of Ottawa, and which Lady Macdonald, of Earnscliffe, the great Canadian statesman's widow, has declared to be "the most speaking likeness" ever painted of her husband.

The duke also has acquired a small picture of Mount Stephen which Lord Mount Stephen also wished to possess. His lordship, however, has become the possessor of twenty-six other pictures in the exhibition, including most of those which are paintings of Canadian scenes and characters, his purchases embracing the study of the late General Sir William Butler for the "March of Time."

Lord and Lady Chrawilliam, Mr. Russell Stephenson, and Mr. Robert Heward, whose wife was the daughter of Lord Strathcona, also have bought many of the pictures.

Henry Sandham was one of the original members of the Royal Canadian Academy, which was founded by the Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll thirty-one years ago.

THE STOKES CASE.

New York, July 11.—Ethel Conrad and Lillian Graham, who on June 6 shot W. E. D. Stokes, the millionaire hotelman, in their apartments, were held in $5,000 bail today for the grand jury on a charge of felonious assault.

OLD BOYS PROMISE A GRAND OLD TIME

Copy of the Invitation Which Is Being Sent Out Broadcast.

The following is a copy of the invitation being sent out by the London Old Boys:

"You, and every relative to the fourth generation, are hereby invited and urged to come to the 'Steenth Old Boys' Reunion, to be held in dear old London, beginning Civic Holiday, Aug. 7. You have not been forgotten, and when you come here everything necessary to brush up your recollections, kindle your imagination, and put you in the most joyous mood a mortal was ever in, will be provided. There will be entertainment that entertains, ball matches, races, with real and imitation nags, pretty girls, gay old sports, young blades, religious services—everything on the calendar that's good will be shown the home-comers. There is no use going into details—come and enjoy a few surprises.

"The railways have been approached in the proper spirit, and with a real Santa Claus kindness have reduced the rates and extended the time limit so that everybody coming can have a time worth mentioning.

"You had better come and accumulate an experience that you can recount in years to come to your grandchildren. Nothing like gathering a fine bunch of memories for your old age. These will be supplied, and if the kind you want is not on hand, start something yourself, and you will have the merriest bunch on earth to help you. Don't forget to start something anyway.

"The Irish have appropriated one day for their real old-fashioned, sorrow-killing picnic. This is worth mentioning. The travellers start the doings on Saturday, Aug. 5. There will be something doing every minute.

"Leave your slippers at the foot of the stairs, throw the hammer at the clock, but don't forget your latch key.

"It will be a time! Come!

"LIEUT.-COL. HARRY R. ABBOTT,
"President.
"JAS. O. WELDON, Secretary.

C. E. CONVENTION

Atlantic City Gathering Discusses Use of Esperanto.

[Canadian Press.]

Atlantic City, July 11.—The sectional meetings were held today in conjunction with the Christian Endeavor convention, the most interesting in many ways being the Esperanto conference. The Esperanto Society of Philadelphia attended the meeting in a body and endeavored to show how much the introduction of "the universal language" would aid the Christian workers of the world. The Rev. R. P. Anderson, of Boston, presided. While this meeting was in session, the presidents of the different state Christian Endeavor societies, the state secretaries and other workers, were holding meetings at different points for the purpose of mapping out plans for the ensuing year. This afternoon services of praise were held on one of the piers.

AUTOMOBILES STALLED

Fun for Spectators.

A large crowd of citizens who gathered had endless amusement watching the passengers in automobiles get drenched when they plunged unexpectedly into about two feet of water that had accumulated there as a result of the heavy rains of Monday afternoon. One of the first cars to get into difficulties was a little runabout which came over Oxford street bridge shortly after dark and turned south, intending to come up town.

Its occupants were chatting and not paying any particular attention to where they were going, when suddenly they found a wave breaking over the front of their machine, which drenched them to the skin.

In another second they were in water to the tops of their ankles. The driver in his surprise had stopped the car, and it was only a few seconds more before the engine stopped. The two occupants of the machine finally had to get out and stand in water nearly up to their nips and push the car out. Meanwhile what they said about a city which would allow such a spot to be unguarded was hardly fit to print. However, they were restored to good humor in a few minutes when another runabout came along and its occupants shared a similar fate.

All Were Angry.

"Why didn't you fellows tell us," they yelled at the first victims.

"Nobody told us," said the others.

It was not long before a big car came snorting down the hill, its passengers entirely oblivious to the miniature lake they were about to plunge into. With a great swash the front of the car dipped into the pond and in a moment the passengers were inundated. The big car, however, pushed its way through and out to the other side, those in it wringing the water from their saturated clothes.

The same performance was repeated at intervals throughout the whole evening, greatly to the delight of sundry small boys and a good sized crowd of older people, who enjoyed the fun thoroughly.

May Sue for Damages.

Some of the auto owners threatened very vaguely to sue the city for the damage they had sustained.

Today there is still a pond under the bridge that is 18 inches in depth. Many chauffeurs ignorant that it was there, ran up quite close, and then when they saw what they had to go through turned around, and went back the other way.

MAY CHANGE PLEA

But John Finney Said He Was Guilty of Theft.

John Finney, the young man charged with stealing a gold watch from his employer, Wilfrid B. Carmichael, of London Township, after being discharged, appeared before Judge Macbeth, and pleaded guilty this morning. However, as it is understood that his solicitor, who was unable to attend, desired to have the youth plead not guilty in order that the evidence be submitted before the judge, Finney was remanded until Friday when he will have the privilege of withdrawing his plea and calling upon a number of witnesses.

MOTHER EARTH WAS GIVEN A DRENCHING

An Old Fashioned Rain Storm Last Night and Another Today.

Probably never in the history of this district has rain been more welcome than the heavy shower which fell generally through Western Ontario yesterday afternoon. There was only one complaint, and that was that it didn't last long enough.

However, there was another fall today which did a lot of good.

A solid three days' rain would, in the opinion of the farmers, be none too much to make up for the long dry spell which has cost them so many thousands of dollars and damaged their grain and fruits to such an extent that even if a big rain came now it can never bring the crops back to where they were.

Thousands of people who have perspired and endured all the discomforts of the worst hot spell in years fairly chuckled with delight as they felt the fresh breezes blowing and the sultry, humid, stuffy feeling going out of the atmosphere.

Rain Was General.

The rain was general. In London it rained heavily for some time, and the shower passed eastward. People from Toronto state that there was a heavy rain down there late in the afternoon.

All through the district the farms show the good effects of the rain.

In a great many places the grain is either cut or is being cut. The yield of oats and wheat will not be up to the average, either in quantity or quality. Many of the stalks are not more than 12 or 14 inches high, and the grain has ripened rapidly, and in most places without the help of any rain whatever.

In some places the corn is not a foot high yet. In others it is up two and three feet, but it all looks well and the prospects are that the yield will be very good.

The fruit trees have suffered greatly. In many places they have simply parched under the terrific heat of the last ten days, and the leaves are drying up and falling off, and the fruit withering up and falling, too.

Small stuff, such as berries, cucumbers, etc., will not be half a crop, and people everywhere are complaining of the poorness of the flavor.

BEAMSVILLE MYSTERY NOT A DOUBLE MURDER

Every Indication That Woman Killed Child and Suicided.

[Canadian Press.]

Beamsville, Ont., July 11.—The inquest into the death of Edna Comfort and her young son, whose bodies were found in the Beamsville reservoir will show that there is no foundation for the sensational stories the village gossips have been spreading. Both bodies were exhumed yesterday, and an examination by outside physicians substantiated the post-mortem made by local doctors. The child died of contusion of the brain and the mother of drowning, indicating that she struck the child on the head, threw its body into the water after she was sure it was dead, and then drowned herself.

The motive for the tragedy is believed to be the fact that the woman was about to give birth to a third child, after the man who is said to she decided to kill her boy and suicide. The authorities believe that he the father of her children refused to marry her.

Detective Miller had no difficulty in finding the man the woman was talking to shortly before her death. The supposed father of the children will have to testify at the inquest.

BOLT AT HAMILTON WRECKS A HOUSE

Mother and Daughter Rendered Unconscious by Yesterday's Storm.

[Canadian Press.]

Hamilton, July 11.—The fierce electric storm of yesterday resulted in a great amount of damage here, and the most serious case reported was that of Mrs. John Martin and her daughter, who reside on the mountain top. A lightning bolt struck the house they resided in alone, and besides smashing it almost to pieces, left the two occupants unconscious. The daughter came to in an hour, but the mother's side was seriously paralyzed.

REVIEWS TROOPS IN PHOENIX PARK

King and Queen Have Long List of Public Engagements.

[Canadian Press.]

Dublin, July 11.—King George and Queen Mary had another long list of public engagements today, and Dublinites were represented in full at all of them. The review of the troops at Phoenix Park was the principal attraction of the morning, while this afternoon his majesty opened the P. F. Collier memorial dispensary for the prevention of tuberculosis.

EAST LONDON NEWS

MYSTERY IS SOLVED

Dark, Deep Tragedy of the East Is Unravelled.

A dark, deep mystery was solved yesterday by High Constable Hughes, who was called in by excited persons who had discovered a two-wheeled care in Nelles' bush, southeast of the city. The vehicle contained a couple of suitcases filled with clothing, and a horse had apparently been tied near by during the night.

Several theories were advanced, the one to which the populace took a particular fancy being that the owner had wandered away and died in the Thames.

It was soon learned, however, that a gypsy had slept in the bush overnight, and upon awakening discovered that his trusty steed was missing, having broken a tie-line. He left the rig in order to look up his means of locomotion, and in the meantime the outfit was discovered unguarded.

The gypsy was still hunting for his horse when the high constable left, but it was considered merely a matter of time, for it is not thought that the animal was appropriated while its owner slept.

East End Notes.

Miss B. McPhail and Mr. Arch Taylor, of East London, are visiting friends near Belmont.

Mrs. H. C. Barrows and family, will leave on Wednesday for a two weeks' vacation at Port Stanley.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Wright, and Miss Marion Wright, of Malone, N. Y., are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Steeves, of Egerton Street Baptist Church. Miss Wright contributed a well-rendered violin solo to the evening service in Egerton street Church Sunday. It was much appreciated.

Consecration Meeting.

Egerton Street B. Y. P. U. held their regular monthly consecration meeting last night. It was in charge of the president, Mr. George Graham. The meeting was large and enthusiastic.

An Open Meeting.

An open meeting was held by the Adelaide Street B. Y. P. U. last night, quite a number of the young people taking part. Miss Ruth Fleming contributed a solo to the musical part of the programme.

MEN WELL PLEASED

The Mounted Police.

"The Northwest Mounted Police led the procession when the King went to St. Paul's Catheral for the thanksgiving ceremony. In the opinion of all they were the finest body of men taking part in the coronation spectacle. They even appeared a finer lot of men than the Life Guards, and many comments were expressed to that effect."

"Signal stations were placed all along the line of march, and the moment the King was crowned it was signaled back to Buckingham Palace. I was able to intercept and read the message, and so knew immediately when the crown was placed on the King's head."

"There was not the slightest hitch in any of the coronation proceedngs or manoeuvres. The work of Lord Kitchener in arranging and carrying out everything was admirable. Nothing could have been improved upon. We were up at 4:30 o'clock and in position by 7, and all the many thousands of men were placed without the slightest difficulty or hitch. In the orders issued for the day there were no less than 212 pages.

Splendid Police.

"One of the things that struck us most forcibly, apart from the coronation parade, was the way the London police handled the crowds. There were millions and millions of people. There were millons of visitors, apart from Europe and America, yet the police handled the great crowds like so many soldiers in review. The Americans predominated among the coronation sightseers. Prices of almost everything were double the usual figure. Every house was transformed into a boarding-house or a hotel, and exhorbitant prices were demanded.

"The enthusiasm of the people was unbounded. No one could doubt that the English monarchy will last for 100 years yet. There were no disturbances of any kind from the suffragettes, socialists or others. There were several mammoth suffragist parades, but they were not interfered with sicialists, suffragists and other reformers were left in possession of Hyde Park, and they held their meetings there as usual. Side by side we observed a socialist, an anti-socialist, a suffragist, an atheist, a religious reformer and a variety of other orators, each with his or her following of interested hearers.

Liked the Soldiers.

"Whenever the suffragists held a special meeting they sent pressing invitations to the colonial soldiers. College women, society ladies and others took part in the meetings.

"We were given a magnificent reception on our arrival in England. The bands waited six hours at Liverpool to welcome the Canadian troops. We were expected at 6 o'clock in the morning, but did not get in until 12 noon. We had a trip to Manchester, where we were entertained by the city. There was also a special performance of the international horse show for the colonial troops on June 13. Here we saw Hon. Adam Beck, who was one of the judges.

"Fifty officers of the colonial troops, including ten Canadians, were entertained at Chatsworth House, the home of the Duke of Devonshire. A number of us were also invited out to Aldershot, where nothing was too good for us.

"We saw the Canadian Boy Scouts, who were drawn up in front of Buckingham Palace on the day of the coronation. One of the interesting things about the coronation was the motion pictures, which we saw at night, of the procession, and spectacles we had seen in action in the morning and afternoon.

A Wonderful Sight.

"The naval review at Spithead was a wonderful spectacle. There were 185 vessels taking part, of which number 18 represented the first-class foreign navies. At night the ships were illuminated, and on almost every one a ball was given. The lights and music made a veritable fairyland."

When asked as to the correctness of the reports that the Canadians were dissatisfied with their commanding officers, Sergt. Butler expressed admiration for the commands of Major Labatt, of Hamilton, formerly of London and the Seventh Regiment, and Col. Williams, of Toronto. Major Labatt was undoubtedly one of the best officers in the Canadian contingent, he said.

JOHN COUSINS HAS ESCAPED THE POLICE

Young Man Who Assaulted His Employer's Wife Still at Large.

Although it is a couple of weeks since the assault was committed, John Cousins, the Barnardo youth who attacked the wife of his employer, W. Conklin, a Lobo farmer, has not since been heard from.

Several times reports have come to High Constable Hughes of young fellows answering the missing lad's description, but as yet he has failed to put in an appearance. The county police are inclined to believe that he is being kept under cover by friends in the country for a while, and that he will turn up ultimately.

KILLED BY STEPFATHER

Russian Police Running Down Mysteries Boy-Murder.

[Canadian Press.]

Russia, July 11.—The authorities are said to have gathered what they regard as indirect evidence implicating Prkhodko in the murder of his stepson, Yushickinsky. The case attracted wide attention because the Black Hundreds attempted to lay the death of the youth at the door of a certain religious sect and so make an excuse for a Jewish massacre which, however, was avoided.

It is stated that Yushickinsky's father, a soldier in the Russian army, upon leaving him to join the colors during the Russo—Jap war, placed $300 in the bank in the name of his son. Then the father was killed and the widow subsequently married Prikhodko, who later made successful attempts to draw the money belonging to his stepson from the bank. After the boy's death Prikhodko, who is now under arrest, again made application for the $300 and obtained it. These circumstances, the investigators believe, tend to connect the prisoner indirectly with the murder.

TOTAL DEATHS

came to this country from Edinburgh several years ago, and six years ago came to London from Hamilton. He was acknowledged by all to have been one of the most capable officials that ever had charge at the asylum. His only relative in this country is a cousin who resides in Hamilton. Mr. Wyllie was very prominent in Masonic circles, and the funeral, which will be held tomorrow afternoon, will be under the auspices of St. John's 209a, to Woodland Cemetery.

A Baker Dies.

Mr. George Roberts, a baker employed at Bridle's bakery on Dundas street, and well known to many Londoners from a habit he had of preaching from the steps of the First Methodist Church, and also at the corner of Maitland and Dundas streets, was found dead in his room, 455 Dundas street, shortly after 9 o'clock last night.

Coroner Ferguson, after investigating thoroughly, decided that no inquest was necessary, as death was due to heart failure.

Mr. Roberts had undoubtedly been affected by the terrible heat lately, and last Sunday evening become so greatly excited that his friends were much alarmed.

It is thought that his death was due directly to the effects of the hot spell in weakening his heart.

Mr. Roberts' mind had never been very strong. He came to Canada from Dorsetshire, in England, 40 years ago, and as far as is known has no relatives. He worked in London for a while, and then went to Detroit and Goderich. Eight years ago he came back, and had been doing odd jobs about ever since.

Found Dead.

Yesterday afternoon he quit work, and went to his boarding-house about 5 o'clock. Mrs. Lang gave him his supper, and then had to go out. Mr. Roberts complained then of not feeling well, and went and lay down on a sofa. Later he went upstairs, and when Mrs. Lang came back she called him at 9 o'clock, as it was usual for him to go to work on the night shift.

Receiving no reply she went up to his room and found him lying across his bed. Calling again and receiving no answer she hurried down for Mr. Bridle. When he came up he saw that Roberts was dead, but at once sent for Dr. Macarthur, who in turn notified Coroner Ferguson.

The remains were taken to Smith, Sons & Clarke's undertaking rooms.

THE PARASOL IN ENGLAND.

The parasol, as we are reminded by St. Vincent's coronation gift of one to the Queen, is another of the insignia of royalty which do not appear to have been used in Europe. For the royal umbrella was always a sunshade, and had nothing whatever to do with rain. Egyptian sculpture shows us the use of the umbrella by various potentates at a very early date, while as late as 1855 the King of Burman showed his respect for the governor-general by addressing him as "reigning over the great umbrella-wearing chiefs." Even in Europe man seems to have thought first of protection against the sun. Montaigne mentions the use of sunshades in Italy, but as soon as the sunshade reached England it became an umbrella, with no remembrance of "umbra"—"shade."—London Chronicle.

ANTS THAT GARDEN.

"In this divine spring weather," said the entomologist, "man is not the only being whose thoughts turn gardenward. Come and see my gardening ants."

The ants, which were natives of Trinidad, lived in a huge, shallow box. The queen was as big and fat as a chestnut. The workers were small and yellow. The policemen, or formen, were twice the workers' size, and had formidable jaws.

The working ants marched in procession, each carrying over his head like a parasol a circular disc of pink rose petal. This strange, silent procession began at a rose bush filled with ants that cut petals busily, and it ended in the corner of the box, where a mound of petals were already heaped up.

"Here on top of the mound," said the entomologist, "those busy yellow creatures are pulping the rose leaves in their mouths, rolling them into balls, and planting a kind of mushroom spawn on them. In fact the cut petals are mushroom beds. They grow a fungus that is the gardening ant's staple food."

The ants, as he spoke, marched continually, in endless, silent procession, from the busy rose bush to the busy mushroom bed, holding their pink parasols above their heads.

"See the big policemen!" said the entomologist, enthusiastically to the Washington Post. "When they find an ant loafing in the sun, they pick him up and carry him bodily back to work."

A young woman tried to be aristocratic, and did not look at the money that she gave to the street car conductor; but he meekly gave her back the lozenge on which was written: "I'll never cease to love thee," and said that he was an orphan with five little brothers to support, and must be excused.
