WAS IT FOUL PLAY.

Further Development in the Campbellton Mystery.

VARIOUS CIRCUMSTANCES WHICH POINT STRONGLY TO A CASE OF FOUL PLAY

About two months ago we reported in the ARC-LIGHT columns the discovery of a man's body at Duncan Brook, Campbellton, N. B, whose body was supposed to be that of Jeremiah O'Sullivan.

Says the Moncton Transcript:—This is an error, Jeremiah O'Sullivan being the son-in-law of the deceased, residing at Toronto. The remains are those of Michael Leary, who disappeared in in Campbellton, June, 27 1888. He had landed at Halifax on the 25th of that month and sent a telegram to his relatives in Toronto announcing his arrival. As he did not arrive at Toronto within a reasonable time his son-in-law informed the Toronto police, and they in turn communicated with Immigration Agent Clay at Halifax, but regarding him farther than that he left for Toronto, as stated in his telegram. They do not appear to have prosecuted their enquiries very far, not even communicating the fact of non-arrival at Toronto to the I. C. R. police, who would have solved the mystery then if it were possible to do so. The Toronto authorities were not, of course, aware that he had been at Campbellton on the 27th of June.

The matter was not communicated to the newspapers and nothing farther was ascertained untill the discovery of a man's body near Campbellton. Leary having been a passenger by the I. C. R. Detective Skeffington, as previously stated has been investigating the matter under instruction from the railway authorities. He had Leary's baggage, which they unclaimed at Toronto, returned to Campbellton, and among other things found in it were which Mrs. O'Keefe, of the O'Keefe hotel Campbellton, recognized as those of the man who was at her place last June and made enquiries as to the safety of ascending the Sugar Loaf Mountain. He was a middle aged man, about 54 years of age, and from information received from his son-in-law at Toronto, had been engaged as butler in London to a gentleman named H. B. Herrick the owner of land estates in England and Ireland. Leary belonged to Kilkenny, Ireland, and it is understood that Detective Skeffington is in communication with the chief of police in that city as well as with Mr. Herrick, with the object of ascertaining in what form the £200 or £300 was which Leary is supposed to have had about him when he left for America. If he really met with foul play, as many suppose, this would be a very good clue on which to clear up the mystery.

THE THEORY OF FOUL PLAY.

is much strengthened by various circumstances in connection with the discovery of the remains. The body was found by a crew of train men who were in the woods to cut poles and came upon the body in a glade only a few yards from the road. The man's pocket book, containing two British sovereigns, a dollar bill and a Newfoundland silver piece, was not found as might be supposed, in the clothes but several yards distant from the body. The hat, which is the same as shown by the photograph taken, no doubt just before Leary left London was found

ABOUT 40 YARDS DISTANT.

The photograph shows also a watch chain, but neither watch nor chain was found on the remains or in the mans luggage.

From the fact of the remains being so near a public road, it seems very strange that no one discerned any stench arising from the spot at any time last summer. It is said, in this connection, that when the body was first discovered there was about the remains which may possible have been lime laced on the for the purpose of destroying it and also as a deadorizer.

From him having money and valuables in his possession when leaving England which were not found on the body, the theory of foul play, with robbery as the motive, seems quite reasonable.

In the house of commons, London, the Rt. Hon. E. Stanhope, secretary of state for war, read the reply of Mad El Jumi, the dervish leader in Egypt, in response to a demand made by General Grenfell for his surrender. Mad El Jumi says. "Your force is nothing to me, I have been sent to conquer the world. I can not stop now, and call upon you to surrender. I will protect you. Remember Hicks and Gordon." In the despatches General Grenfell states the dervish leader's fighting men are well fed and in good condition.

Vacation Jottings.

From the Wolfville Acadian.

ACADIA MINES—In a slight twist, scarcely enough to make the drive from Londonderry station unpleasant, but enough to destroy the beauty of scenery and give the town a sombre aspect as we came upon it, nestling under the mountains at the south, magnificent in scenery and rich in minerals, we reached Acadia Mines, the Pittsburgh of Nova Scotia. Acadia Mines is a thrifty town of 3,000 inhabitants. The seat of the great iron industry known as the Londonderry Iron Works, it is of especial interest to strangers. Although having heard of the great magnitude of these works they were a surprise to me when when I visited them. In a future letter I shall attempt to give our reader some idea of the working of this enterprise, of which every Nova Scotian should feel proud.

And I drove from Londonderry to Acadia Mines on the day of my arrival, a distance of about two miles the thought struck me What a fine site for a city is this. Londonderry and Acadia Mines are by the nature destined to be allied. Every year they are growing nearer each other, the time will come, both I fancy, when the two will be incorporated into one town. The name will be Londonderry, Acadia Mines is a singularly inappropriate one for the manufacturing town bearing that title. That it should be named such has always been a mystery to me. The mines from which the ore is transported to the iron works, bear the name of New Mines and are a distance of two miles, being connected with Acadia Mines by rail, as is also Londonderry.

The drives in and about Acadia Mines are beautiful, several of which it has been my privilege to enjoy. On every hand are imprints of the late freshet which deluged parts of Acadia Mines and destroyed so much property here. The immense washouts caused by a single day's freshet show how mountain gorges and deep and precipitous river-beds are made. The fine iron bridge constructed here last summer and considered almost impregnable against flood or freshet succumbed to the torrent and lay dangling in the river at the end. However, work on this bridge is progressing and in a short time the bridge will be repaired and placed in a better condition than before. In view of the immense force the current has at this point the river should be dredged and straightened above the bridge and a breakwater constructed so as to turn the current directly under the bridge and form an abutment. When this bridge is completed the injuries caused by the flood will be about repaired. The scenery here is wild and grand it startles one almost as he comes suddenly upon some lofty summit or deep ravine—sublime and prodigious—and is received with awe and wonder and admiration.

The past week has been an interesting and eventful one in Acadia Mines. On Tuesday evening I had the pleasure of attending a literal concert given under the auspices of the Baptist Sabbath school of the place. It was a very successful effort. The church was beautifully decorated and presented a gorgeous appearance. I was surprised at the talent displayed—especially the musical talent. Musical renderings were listened to here which would have graced a Seminary closing season at Acadia. Friday was the "glorious twelfth" and Acadia Mines was the scene of an "Orange Walk" on that day. It was a brilliant affair. The procession was a very creditable one and was attended with three bands. On the platform among other speakers I notice a brother of the quill, Mr. Fanton, of the Victoria Standard who did credit to the fraternity in his able patriotic speech

On Saturday afternoon the Episcopalians held a strawberry festival, fancy sale and hop, all in one. It was a pronounced success. The hop was the first that had ever come under my notice. It is an ingenious invention. It consists of a separate brain, in which is secreted numberless a-ches and valuable articles.

The Halifax cycle carnival number was put on the market Friday evening last. The sale was immense.

The Springhill News says:—Parrsboro voted on the adoption of the Towns Incorporation Act on Wednesday and decided in its favour by a majority of 20. Hurrah for Parrsboro. There are some level headed people in the place after all. Here is a pointer for Acadia Iron Mines. Surely our heads are level.

The Carnival Echo, to be issued as a souvenir of the Halifax Summer Carnival, will be a triumph of modern Art and Journalism. It will illustrate Halifax in a style that has never been attempted before, while its portrayal of the Carnival will be unique and brilliant. The book is to be over 50 pages in size, with a cover of original and artistic design, beautifully executed in colors. The engravings will consist of Carnival scenes, views of Halifax, its unrivalled Public Gardens, Point Pleasant Park, and other surroundings, and portraits of prominent citizens. The reading matter, furnished by men of acknowledged literary talent, will describe the Carnival and its various attractive features, besides special articles on other appropriate topics. The Carnival Echo will be the only publication ever issued that will properly illustrate the capital city of the province, and will be warmly welcomed by the people of Nova Scotia. The Official Carnival Programme will be printed in it.

Died at the Altar.

A large crowd of people assembled at Mount Hope Church, Birmingham La., Marc County, on Sunday morning to witness the marriage of Julius Sawyer and Mamie Moran, two prominent young people of the neighborhood. Just as the preacher began the ceremony, Sawyer sank to the floor and died in a few minutes. He had heart disease and the excitement of the occasion brought on a fatal attack. Among those present in the church was Wm Langely a reporting editor of Miss Moran, at the first opportunity Langley's reporting editor of Miss Moran. At the first opportunity Langley approached the young lady and told her that Providence had interposed to prevent her marriage to Sawyer. He insisted that she ought to marry him, as he had cleared the way for his suit. Miss Moran finally consented to marry Langley as soon as Sawyer was buried. Sawyer's corpse was laid away the next day and were married the next evening.

Charged With Murder.

Some weeks ago a boy named Westbrook, living with Wm Warren, a farmer in Bolton, disappeared and subsequently warrants were sworn for a "Joe" with one end of a rope around his neck and the other end tied to the tree. It was at first thought he had committed suicide, but Mr. Warren has since been arrested charged with murder.

A Terrible Massacre.

The circulars announcing a demonstration for the 5th August, the 200th anniversary of the terrible massacre of 1689, when 1200 Protestants, men, women and children were slaughtered by the Papists, have been issued by the Protestant Association of the Province of Quebec.

Death of Abbe Ricards.

The illustrious Abbe Richards, curé of Maskinonge, an author, antiquarian and historical research author, Sheriff and Parliament have been so much in evidence, is dead. He was a member of the Royal Society of Canada and is said to have left behind a large quantity of precious manuscript relating to Canadian history.

Mrs. John Wanamaker was born a Brown. She is a daughter of her husband's first partner.

Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris under the will of her father-in-law comes into a fortune of about £150,000.

Rose Terry Cooke is said to be so much of an invalid that she has been compelled to lay aside her literary work.

Mrs. Oliphant lives at Windsor and is treated with much consideration by the queen, who is fond of her writings.

A movement is on foot under the leadership of Mrs. Cyrus W. Field to establish a Sunday afternoon Bible class for theatrical women.

The gossips now say that Secretary Whitney's wife will pass the coming summer chiefly as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain.

Miss Mary Fuller, daughter of the chief justice, has studied within five years in Germany, and it is her ambition to be a professional musician.

The only female alderman in the world is said to be Miss Cons, a member of the London board. She is said to be a remarkable woman, very philanthropic and intelligent.

A woman in Pasadena, Cal., makes an excellent living by taking home the bodies of strangers who came there too late to get the health they sought. The charges are $5 a day and expenses both ways.

Mme. Carette, some time reader to ex-Empress Eugenie, says in her new book that the empress was always oppressed with the weight of jewels worn at state occasions, and when they were over made haste to fling them off with as little care and ceremony as possible.

Fairly well settled in life, Valerie, archduchess of Austria, and Franz Salvator, archduke and half brother of the Grand Duke of Tuscany, will be married when they get married. The bride's fortune is a round $1,000,000; parliament adds $250,000, and papa Francis Joseph gives $60,000 a year as long as they live.

Lady Florence Dixie, well known in London for her originality, added the following to invitations for a ball she has just given: "Contrary to the ridiculous customary habit hitherto, ladies will not have to wait to be asked to dance, but will have the right to go directly to whatever gentleman they choose. In my house women shall enjoy the right of suffrage."

Dr. Mary Walker wears masculine apparel, but she cannot stand tobacco smoke. She attended a meeting of the house committee on District of Columbia affairs the other day. The committee room was blue with the smoke of many cigars when Mary entered. The disciple of trousered femininity stood it for a minute, then covered her face with her handkerchief and rushed from the room.
