MEXICO'S FIGHTING STRENGTH.

Able to Put in the Field a Quarter of a Million Men.

New York Herald.

Mexico contains at the present time a population of over eleven millions. It is true that seven-tenths of this population are composed of docile indians or half-breeds, but it must not be forgotten that this same class of people furnishes the most excellent fighting material. They can live on the smell of an oil rag, march almost incredible distances, suffer all sorts of hardships uncomplainingly, and are, as a general rule, fearless of death. If Mexico could apply to her people the same principles of military organization that are applied in Germany, France, and some other European nations, she could place in line an army of not less than 450,000 fighting men. The financial resources of the country would not, however, admit of the calling to arms of more than one half of this number of men at one time. Thus, while the resisting power of Mexico might be set down at about 500,000 men, to be employed successively, as occasion might require, she could hardly by her greatest effort place in campaign at any one period over 250,000 soldiers. During the wars with France and with Maximilian the government of Juarez had under arms about 97,000 poorly equipped troops; but this was at a period when the old church party had at least 35,000 Mexican men under arms in the service of France and of the Archduke Maximilian. This shows that even in those days, when scarcity of arms, and not a lack of men, afforded an inadequate measure of Mexico's fighting powers, she had arrayed under one or the other of the contending parties an aggregate of 132,000 men.

The army of Mexico is organized in a method analogous to that of France. It is in four divisions, each under the command of a general of division, a rank that corresponds to that of major-general in the American service, the highest grade that can be attained in the Mexican army. Some of the best known generals of division are Porfirio Diaz, President of the Republic; Mariano Escobedo, the conqueror of Maximilian; Ramon Corono, Felipe B. Berriozabal, Sostenes Rocha, Pedro Hinojosa, the Minister of War; Manuel Gonsales, ex-President; Geronimo Trevino, Jose Justo Alvarez, Ignacio Antillon, and a dozen of others, more or less. Some of these general officers, such as Sostenes Rocha, Jose Justo Alvarez, and Ignacio Autillon are graduates of the Chapultepec National Military Academy, while the others attained their rank through long continued and distinguished services. Escobedo is now on the retired list, and Corona and Gonsales are not on very cordial terms with the present government. Porfirio Diaz is by far the most brilliant and successful commander that his country can boast of. He is a revolutionist by profession and predilection, and somewhat of a tyrant by nature. Some of his operations in and around the city of Puebla during the last days of Maximilian's reign were of such a character, although on a smaller scale, as to entitle them to be compared with those of Bonaparte's first Italian campaign.

TO RID THE OCEAN OF WRECKS.

A Plan to Remove a Great Danger from the Track of Transatlantic Commerce.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The officers of the Hydrographic Office of the Navy Department are engaged in outlining a plan which, if perfected, will be of inestimable value to mariners on the Atlantic Ocean. The plan contemplates the division of the north Atlantic into sections, over which the different maritime nations shall have control, the object being to rid the track of vessels from the derelict wrecks which now cause so much anxiety and danger. A glance at the pilot charts issued by the Hydrographic Office during the past two or three years shows an enormous number of abandoned hulks in the track of vessels plying between European and American ports. The August chart, issued a few days ago, shows about twenty dangerous wrecks scattered along the path of vessels taking the international route, and under the existing arrangements no nation is responsible for them. These wrecks are mostly abandoned lumber-laden vessels which have become waterlogged, and which in many instances drift for months, making navigation near them exceedingly dangerous. The fact that their course is excessively erratic and that it is difficult to locate them from month to month until reported by vessels encountering them, makes it very hard to guard against collision. A derelict is far more dangerous than an iceberg, because the latter can usually be seen at a greater distance, and the temperature of the water in the neighborhood is always some indication of the presence of floating masses of ice from the northern seas.

During July the United States steamer Despatch, acting under instructions from the Navy Department, and upon data furnished by the Hydrographic Office, located and destroyed by torpedoes three wrecks which have for some time been dangerous to ships bound to and from New York. But there are always many others which it is found difficult to remove, because no understanding exists between the United States and other countries having an equal interest with us in clearing the ocean path of these dangers. If the above plan goes into effect it will be the duty of each country entering into the agreement to send vessels to destroy these wrecks when reported within the section of the ocean assigned to it. The officers interested have reason to believe that England, France, Germany, and the Netherlands would readily join in the proposed work if proper overtures were made to them, and efforts in this direction will probably be made through the secretary of state in time to season an understanding which may be sanctioned in congress, it it shall be considered that such sanction is necessary.

A WISE PRECAUTION.—During the summer and fall people are liable to sudden attacks of bowel complaints, and with no prompt remedy or medical aid at hand, life may be in danger. Those whose experience has given them wisdom, always keep Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry at hand for prompt relief, and a Physician is seldom required.

Wit and Humor.

He—"How do you like Signor Wilkinsonio's voice? Beautiful, is it not?" She—"I don't think so. I prefer yours. But then you know I am peculiar!"—Punch.

All leading druggists will gladly inform anyone as to the wonderful merits of West's Pain King. The standard remedy for flux, dysentery, summer complaint, cholera morbus, cholera, colic, etc., 25c.

Our barber—"What you want, sir,"—(running his fingers through his customer's few remaining hairs—"is a bottle of my hair restorer——.") Customer violently—"What I want, sir, is a divorce." (The conversation taking this portentous turn, our barber drops it.)—Punch.

Thousands of lives saved annually by the use of West's Pain King, the household remedy for chills, colds, flux, summer complaint, dysentery, colic and cholera. Only 25c. All druggists.

Maude: "Don't sit here all alone, Auntie. Come, let me introduce you to some of my friends." Auntie: "Your friends would be far too flippant and familiar to my taste, Maude. Remember, I am of a retiring, reserved nature." Maude: "Yes, I know, Auntie. Your manners are so reserved that some people suspect you haven't say at all."—Fun.

West's Pain King is a purely vegetable compound for the certain cure of chills, colds, flux, dysentery, diarrhoea, summer complaint, colic, cholera morbus, cholera and cholera infantum. 25c. All druggists.

An eastern man who was travelling in Arkansas entered a bank in a certain village and asked for a draft on New York. "Don't keep 'em," was the prompt reply. "Don't you do any business with New York?" "No, sir." "Isn't that a little singular?" "I don't see it. When a bank has got mortgages on every farm in the county, a lien on every mule which comes into town, and a first claim on every stalk of corn and cotton for 20 miles around, what does it want to fool with New York for?"

Why will you suffer when 25c. will buy a bottle of West's Pain King and one dose will cure the worse case of colic or cramps and a few doses will cure summer complaint, dysentery, diarrhoea or flux. All druggists.

"Pa, who was Mr. Gardens and what did they hang him for?" "I don't know what you are talking about my son. I don't remember about any Gardens being hanged." "Oh, yes, there was. His was of Babylon, the papers said." "Why, my son, Babylon was the name of an ancient city of Asia that was destroyed ages ago." "Well, I don't care, Gardens lived there and he was hanged, for I saw a long article in the paper headed, 'Hanging Gardens, of Babylon.'" The overjoyed father wants to apprentice his son to some humorous paragrapher to learn the trade.

West's Pain King acts promptly, cures quickly. Never fails to cure bowel complaint, colic, cholera morbus, cholera—even but 25c. and is always ready. Enquire regarding its merits of any druggist.

A large bull-dog owned by a city hotel keeper is a great mouser. The other day, it is said, he cornered a mouse among a lot of pots, pans, etc., and while upsetting these, one after another, to reach it, frightened the little creature so thoroughly that it at last jumped into his open mouth and ran down his throat. Not counting upon this sudden change of programme, the dog turned and ran retching and sputtering in great agony toward the yard, which he no sooner entered than the mouse, also tired of his new premises, suddenly leaped out on the grass and made off again, followed, however, by its pursuer, which this time captured and killed it.

It is of the greatest importance that all bowel and stomach complaints should be attended to at once, especially at this season of the year. West's Pain King is prompt, reliable and certain never to fail. Only 25c. All druggists.

Young James Blank, whose father is among the millionaires, lounging into a tailor shop the other day, ordered a suit of clothes. The suit was sent to the young man's hotel, but, of course, the tailor got no money for it. A few days ago, as Master James was passing the tailor shop, the bland proprietor hailed him with a smile.

"Why, Master James," he said, "that coat is horribly wrinkled; come in and we will press it for you." Unsuspectingly he entered and surrendered the coat. Then something was wrong with the vest, and that too was taken downstairs for treatment. The tailor next declared that the trousers might be improved upon. They were given up, and the youth accommodated with a seat in the dressing-room.

"Now," said the wily tailor, "you will have to send a messenger boy to your room for your clothes, for I am afraid we cannot let you have this suit again unless you liquidate the bill in full."

Young Master James begged hard for his clothes, but the tailor was inexorable, and, much to his disgust, he resumed his winter garments and departed.—San Francisco Post.

West's Pain King excels all other remedies in promptly curing dysentery, diarrhoea, flux, colic, cholera, cholera morbus and all diseases of the stomach and bowels. Price only 25c. All druggists.

A reporter called upon a prominent citizen and said: "I would like to interview you with regard to the strike." The prominent citizen frowned, reflected a moment, and replied: "No, sir, no. It is a rule of my life never to be interviewed, but I don't mind telling you privately what I think." "All right." "But mind now, you must promise not to print a word I say nor an idea I advance." "I promise." The prominent citizen freely expressed himself, and the reporter, after again promising that he would make no note of the conversation, departed. Early the next morning, the prominent citizen seized the paper and eagerly looked for the interview. "What are you looking for?" his wife asked. "Nothing," he replied as he threw down the paper; "you can't place any confidence in those confounded reporters." "Has he printed what you said?" "No." "Then it is all right." "No, it's not all right." Do you reckon I want to talk two hours and then be treated with contempt? He ought to have said I refused to be interviewed, and then to have stated what I said. A reporter is nuisance."
