LONDON'S CHILDREN HAD BIG DAY AT SCHOOL PICNIC

LITTLE ONES AND GROWNUPS ALIKE ENJOY ANNUAL SPRINGBANK OUTING; FINE PROGRAM AND PLENTY OF EATS

Thousands of Pupils With Parents and Teachers, Crowd Popular Park.

RESULTS OF RACES

Ball Game Between Trustees and Teachers Big Afternoon Attraction.

Brides and tea parties and moonlight dialogues have no priority over the June days, in spite of all the publicity they get. Yesterday at Springbank London's school children held their annual picnic and the happy laughter of the little people made the far-famed wedding bell sound like a funeral march. From the time in the early morning when their elders were just shaking off sweet sleep until the last rays of the setting sun lit their homeward trail the kiddies made the green sward of the park their playground. Never once did their energy flag or their goodwill lessen. They "sang on their way down," as any street car conductor will vouch for. They ran races and chased balloons all day, except when they were busy with the refreshments around the long tables.

No Accidents.

And in every moment of the all-too-short-day lived a wild roving kind of life that provided memories, strong enough, and jolly enough, to make them happy in the cold winter days. There were no serious accidents to mar the day, and the spirit of high carnival held everyone in its thraldom. Pilots of the street cars, teachers, trustees, friendly policemen, and even the few dogs who strayed in, seemed permeated with the informality of the occasion, and radiated in their respective ways feelings of chumminess that must have been reflected from the 9,000 cheery faces all round them.

In the afternoon when the races were over, there were two "ball" games, exciting enough, of course, but very tame beside the encounter that brought the trustees and the teachers together.

Trustees Play Teachers.

The trustees were, in the opinion of many of the spectators, handicapped by the weight and girth which come with occupation of the seats of the mighty. The teachers were rather better off in this respect, and, as the result proved, swung a truer bat and hurled more biased ball than their opponents. Nevertheless, it was a great game. The children, sensing the return to youth of the players, and feeling that this was in the nature of a close-up view of the gods in all the glory of battle, gathered around the diamond and cheered every swipe, and barracked every miss with the enthusiam of the standard full-size ball fan.

Did some husky trustee smite the ball with the lustful pride of a Samson then they roared their delight, did the same trustee waste his energy in wild swings at the ether, they still roared with glee, and if there were a collision or the prospect of one on the bases then they were entirely satisfied and lay on their tummies and chuckled. Yes it was all good fun. Just over the way from the park was the only drawback in the arrangement, from papa's point of view. Over there were the ferris wheel, the hobby horses, the house of mirth and the roller coaster. These were the gods of the new age who overawed father and father's purse.

Some of the fathers thought of the happy picnic days when they went out to the old water hole with a tin of bait and a bag of sandwiches. Twenty-five cents covered all expenses. They were just as happy, and their dads much more so.

Fathers Resigned.

Yesterday they gazed sadly at the brilliant welcome sign over the gates of the amusement park, resigned to fate in the hands of their children, yet registering an inward comment on the rising values of the time that included even picnics in its overwhelming stream.

As the sun entered on the last lap of its course the excitement of the day began to tell its tale. Sitting was easier than standing, and as each car came in a row of eager bright little eyes welcomed it as the beginning of the road home. So they came home just tired enough to appreciate the ride, to watch the cool river running along past the dam, and to feel that this was really the end of a perfect day. They came back to their life in the city, dusty and tired and sleepily happy.

Park Deserted.

Another school picnic was over. Once more the grounds bore the trace of the paper bag and the empty popcorn box. The stolid animals in the zoo who had kept a watchful eye on the cars all day had turned in and gone to bed. Each bed in the city lucky enough to hold one of the children in its midst had nestled a little head into the dreamworld and was keeping guard over the sleeper.

The wealth of the picnic had been demonstrated. The trustees had gained another lease of youth, the parents had had a day in the country with their children which was a new revelation of their boys and girls, and the chief actors in the scene had filed away another memory of childhood that will surely come to their aid some day when they are in turn school trustees and in the seats of the mighty.

A school picnic wouldn't be much of a success if it did not have races. Any youngster will tell you that, and the hundreds of events run off at Springbank yesterday certainly contributed largely to the tired but satisfied feeling that seemed to overcome every child about the time when the sun sank in the west and the myriad lights began to twinkle in the amusement park and the pavilion, announcing that the evening pleasures of Springbank were beginning.

Running true to tradition, the school trustees and public school teachers engaged in a battle royal on the large diamond to decide the baseball championship of the educational executives. The tussle was the feature event of the afternoon, and hundreds of people cheered wildly throughout the seven innings. The "profs" came out on top, 16—10, although the trustes fought gamely till the final out was made.

The lineups were:

Trustees—George Copeland, W. A. Casselman, B. N. Campbell, A. E. Carrothers, Jack Hutchison, V. K. Greer, N. F. Wilmott, W. A. Tanner, W. M. Sims and Dr. Crawford.

Teachers—J. Campbell, H. Second, R. E. Dewar, S. R. White, C. Brown, Littleproud, Galpin, Bryant, Thompson and Fowler.

Marion Grant and Laura Cook handled the arduous duties of the arbitrators to the satisfaction of all.

Empress Wins.

In a semi-final boys' ball game between Empress Avenue and Aberdeen the former won out 14—9. The line-ups were: Empress avenue—White, Stilson, Rossiter, Thompson, Myers, Charlton, Waide, Fiddler, Nevin and Barclay; Aberdeen—Bell, Randall, Marshall, Hurle, Silverstein, Chambers, Levens, Penwarden, Bailey and Brown.

In the girls' softball league the Riverview squad was too strong for the Boyle Memorial team, and won by 22—7. Riverview will now play Chesley for the championship. The umpires for the boys' and girls' games were Mark Garrett and Dr. F. Bryant.

One of the most interesting and novel events of the picnic was the pogo race, made possible through the co-operation of The Advertiser, which supplied the queer sticks that spring their riders several feet. The races were run under the direction of Bert McGuffin of The Advertiser staff. The results: first race—Clifford Donovan, Lloyd Brodie and Harold Skinner, all of St. George's School. Second race—Frank Wolliston, Tecumseh; Rowlie Day, St. George's, and Harry Gerry, Victoria.

In addition to those published yesterday, the race results were as follows:

RUNS BASES LIKE A STEAM ROLLER.

The trustees and teachers' ball game at the annual public schools picnic was the great event of the day. Here The Advertiser shows Trustee Casselman running to second base. He made it this time, as you can see from the smile. He was the pitcher of the trustees' team and accomplished wonders with his special Springbank curve.

HE SWUNG A WICKED BAT.

Trustee Wilmot swung a wicked bat in the ball game at the school picnic yesterday. He is one of the newer members of the board, and showed the teachers one or two things about soft ball game, proving that membership in the board need not mean retirement. The game ended in favor of the teachers, fourteen to seven, but the game was better than that, and everyone, whether playing or looking on, got their money's worth.
