This Law is a Fraud.

Summer is here in earnest. Yesterday was close and sultry. The people who live in the crowded districts of the city were fairly gasping for the oxygen necessary to keep the blood from coagulation. The ministers in the city attending the Methodist conference found the weather exceedingly unfavorable for getting about to the various churches to which they had been assigned to conduct the services. Walking on the sunny streets was anything but pleasant, and in a great many instances the distance between the preacher's stopping place and the church which he attended was two, three or four miles. The inconvenience of getting about, however, was mitigated by the use of cabs and other vehicles. These were liberally called into requisition by the clergymen in cases where private conveyances had not been placed at their disposal. Twenty-five vehicles were counted at the morning service of the Metropolitan.

The clergymen, those who interpret the will of God for us, yesterday deprived scores of men of their Sabbath rest, and made the sweat pour forth from tons of horseflesh. This they did for their own personal convenience. We don't object to their conduct in this matter; and, furthermore, if any of them paid their drivers fifty cents conscience money (a practice adopted by one well-known city preacher to square himself for violating the sanctity of the Sabbath) we think they were doing what was quite unnecessary from a business or religious point of view.

But what we do object to is that these clergymen should refuse to give others a chance to administer to their personal convenience. To the workingman the minister says: "I forbid you and your little ones and your wife and your aged parents from leaving your house during the 24 sacred hours of the holy day." Our modern minister not only says that, the original Jewish Sunday law is binding upon us, but he goes further and says that his interpretation of that law is binding upon us.

In regard to himself he interprets the law in a way that enables him to escape the sultry rays of the sun and to avoid the discomfort of walking through the hot streets.

In regard to others he interprets it in a way that forbids the sick from partaking of a more potent medicine than human physician has yet prescribed, and the weary worker from enjoying the recreation he is so justly entitled to.

How much longer, fellow-citizens, are you going to allow this tyranny to exist?

There is in the Provincial statutes a Sunday observance law that applies to the city of Toronto alone. No other city and no town or village in the province is amenable to this tyrannous enactment.

We say that so-called law is a fraud. It is no law at all. The Legislature has no power to make one law for the people of Toronto and another law for the people of Ottawa. Just as reasonably and as legally might the Dominion Parliament make stealing a crime in Toronto and no crime in Montreal.

The people are not supposed to obey partial and tyrannous enactments. If the Sunday law that has been imposed upon Toronto is good enough for us it is good enough for Hamilton and London.

The law is a fluke sneaked into the statutes by fanatics. If it were carried to the Supreme Court or to the Privy Council this law would be thrown out without argument. The Toronto Railway Company has been subjected to an illegal condition which it is not bound to respect. The company ought to put on a Sunday service at once and make the restrictionists defend their so-called law which, with the connivance of that disturber of the peace, Sir Oliver Mowat, was sneaked into the statutes.

If the Toronto Railway Company won't take this sensible view of the situation then we can tell them that before long another company will be in the field and that it will defy the restrictionists to do their worst. They cannot stop the busses from running on Sunday. Neither can they prohibit a car service.

The Consumptive Sanitarium.

The medical profession ought not to throw cold water on Mr. Gage's project by naming excessive figures as to cost of building and maintaining the proposed consumptive sanitarium. It is stated that $150,000 will be required to erect the building, and $50,000 a year for maintaining the institution. No such large sum as this is necessary to start with. In the first place the city ought to grant a site of five acres in High Park. We do not think much of the proposal to locate the institution on the General Hospital grounds. The sanitarium, as we understand it, is to be a place where consumptives in all stages of the disease may be treated. The General Hospital has not the outside accommodation that will be found effective in treating the disease, especially in its early stages. The patients will be subjected to outdoor treatment, and for this purpose at least five acres of land ought to be attached to the sanitarium. If the city will grant such a site the sanitarium could be started on the cottage plan. There is no doubt in the world that funds would be forthcoming to increase the accommodation from year to year as fast as it was required. Mr. Gage and some others, we understand, have come forward with their good intentions and their money. They ought to be met in the friendliest spirit possible, and no obstacle should be put in the way of the establishment of so commendable an institution as the one proposed. In the meantime there is nothing to prevent individual citizens coming forward and reaping some of the glory and good—will that is being lavished so freely on Mr. Massey. Up to the present no great extravagance has characterized the charity of the citizens of Toronto. Montreal has received ten dollars for every one that has been given or bequeathed to charitable, religious and educational purposes in Toronto. This rare virtue of giving is one that will admit of a great deal of cultivation and development in this city.

The Cunning of a Christian Premier.

This journal and other papers have frequently characterized Sir Oliver Mowat as wanting in a sense of public honor in acceding to the wishes of the leading men of the local Reform party to have his son appointed sheriff of Toronto. Nothing that any of the papers could say was able to wring from The Globe any manner of a defence of Sir Oliver's share in this appointment. The Globe has answered in some shape or other all the charges, trivial and serious, that have been made against the party, but this one which concerns Sir Oliver Mowat especially it has ignored.

Why is this?

The fact of the matter is Sir Oliver Mowat has acted on the principle of allowing sleeping dogs to lie. That is why The Globe has so sedulously avoided every reference to the charges in regard to the Toronto shrievalty. Sir Oliver Mowat has remained mum about this charge, because he feared the disclosures that have been brought to light through the publication of the correspondence between himself and Mr. John Leys, ex-M.P. Until that correspondence was published we were all under the belief that the leading men in the Reform ranks had concocted the scheme to appoint young Mr. Mowat to the shrievalty, then just vacated by the death of Mr. Jarvis. We were all under the impression that Sir Oliver had been taken to a high mountain and there tempted by that wily sinner Peter Ryan and the rest of them, and that hypnotized by the glamor of their words, he yielded to the temptation and, while yet under the spell of the tempters, appointed his own son sheriff of Toronto, then an office worth from $10,000 to $15,000 a year.

But Mr. Leys' correspondence discloses a shameful conspiracy. We are not now surprised at Sir Oliver's preferring the sleeping dogs to lie. Sir Oliver Mowat was ashamed to let the public learn that it was in his (Sir Oliver's) own brain where the design originated to get his son into this lucrative office. Sir Oliver thought it would not look decent for himself to recommend his own son to the office, so he called in Mr. John Leys to act as a confidential agent in inciting the Reform leaders to urge Sir Oliver to make the appointment. That's the nature of the conspiracy that Mr. Leys' letters brings home to Sir Oliver Mowat, author of the Evidences of Christianity, and the man whom Ontario cannot afford to dismiss! Before the election is over we imagine Sir Oliver Mowat will be brought down from the high pedestal that his friends claim he occupies in the estimation of the people of Ontario.

Stop the Sacrilege.

By the way, have you seen that lithographic picture of the Reform candidate for South Toronto? What an expression of benevolence and of good nature in that ox-eyed countenance! Run a lawn mower over those straggling whiskers and embellish the crown with a halo and you will have a photograph of one of Murillo's angel boys grown into a man. What a shame it is that this vision of beatific loveliness should be dragged low down in the political arena! If politics will change the amiable countenance of Charlie Moss into anything resembling the stony, blase expression that distinguishes a hardened political sinner, like the Commissioner of Crown Lands, for instance, then we appeal to Charlie's friends to call him off. Those who have seen the picture will agree with us that it is nothing short of sacrilegious to attempt anything that will detract one iota from the beatific self-satisfied expression that illumines the countenance of the Reform candidate for the South. We are glad for Mr. Moss' own sake and that of his family and friends that he will be kept to them in all his pristine blamelessness of life and expression. After the stormy days between now and the 26th have passed, the disappointment and weariness that is now beginning to tell on that countenance will begin to fade away, and within a reasonable time Charlie will become himself again, an angel boy grown into a man and sporting side whiskers.

A Model Candidate.

Mr. Ryckman is surprising everyone, especially his opponents, by the fight he is making in East York. He is an exemplary young man and, thank Providence, we have thousands like him all over the country, and courageous as well.

It is true that he is a lawyer and that he lives in the city, but it does not become Reeve Richardson and those who elected G. B. Smith, a Toronto merchant, to support the Mowat clique of lawyers, to taunt Mr. Ryckman with his profession or his place of residence. Mr. Ryckman is fighting the issue on its merits, on the superiority of the Meredith platform to that of the Mowat one, and he is calling on the voters of the Riding of East York to join with him in putting an end to maladministration, to forever separate state and church and to assist in doing something for the encouragement of Ontario industries, such as mining and lumbering. East York will do itself honor by electing him.

A Water Service for the Island.

Engineer Keating ought to abandon his expensive scheme for supplying water on the Island. We fail to see why the present requirements of the Island cannot be met by a capital expenditure of from five to ten thousand dollars. Two reservoirs, one on the west side and the other on the site of the present tank in Island Park, would furnish an ample supply for all the cottages. Each reservoir could be supplied with water by means of an electric pump, and the distribution could be effected through a 2 or 3-inch pipe laid temporarily on the surface of the sand and disconnected and stored away during the winter. We don't see why a $5000 plant should not be sufficient to give the Island an adequate water supply for ten years to come. If a service of this kind were decided on, it could be completed in a couple of weeks. We ought to get the benefit of it during the bigger half of the present season.

Athlete Cigarettes have no rivals.

Fagged Out—None but those who have become fagged out know what a depressed, miserable feeling it is. All strength is gone, and despondency has taken hold of the sufferers. They feel as though there is nothing to live for. There, however, is a cure—one box of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will do wonders in restoring health and strength. Mandrake and Dandelion are two of the articles entering into the composition of Parmelee's Pills.

The Army in Congress.

Free and easy expectoration immediately relieves and frees the throat and lungs from viscid phlegm, and a medicine that promotes this is the best medicine to use for coughs, colds, inflammation of the lungs and all affections of the throat and chest. This is precisely what Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup is a specific for, and wherever used it has given unbounded satisfaction. Children like it because it is pleasant, adults like it because it relieves and cures the disease.

CLOSE OF THE MASSEY FESTIVAL.

Two Grand Concerts on Saturday—The Building Crowded to the Doors at Both Entertainments.

Saturday afternoon at the Massey Music Hall was devoted to selections by the children of the public schools, under Mr. Cringan's baton, and the Orchestral School under Mr. Torrington. Interspersed throughout the program were interesting solos by Miss Lillian Blauvelt and Mr. Arthur Friedheim, and a duet by Miss Blauvelt and Mrs. Carl Alves. The pretty soprano, late prima donna of the Royal Opera House, Brussels, gave as her first number Gounod's grand valse, "Mireille," and was rapturously encored. She smilingly responded with the simple and ever popular—what a certain Highlander in this city calls the "Grand oold hot Scotch"—"Comin' thro' the rye." Mr. Friedheim had had a good rest and appeared as fresh as a daisy. He was in one of his most favorable moods, and gave a splendid interpretation of Liszt's "Rhapsodie Hongroise, No. 2," the most popular of the series of pieces which the composer wrote for his own particular school of pianists. It has two themes, the first being slow and mournful, while the second is in lively dance time illustrated with many fantastic effects. On its conclusion the great pianist was enthusiastically encored, and the audience would not be denied. The duet, "D un Cœur que l'aime," by Gounod, sung by Miss Blauvelt and Mrs. Carl Alves, was transposed on the program in order to allw Mrs. Alves to catch the New York train, her engagement having been concluded. The two singers' voices blended beautifully, and especially in the forte passages were they heard to full advantage.

The Orchestral School Selections.

The Orchestral School, assisted by several members of the Festival orchestra, did remarkably well, considering the youth of some of the performers. Their first selection was the "Martha" overture, rendered capitally. They also played the brilliant and ever popular "Semiramide" overture and the overture to "Tannhauser," in all of which the orchestra showed evidences of the careful training received from their conductor.

Mr. Cringan deserves more than passing credit for the excellent results he has achieved with his juvenile chorus. All of the choruses were sung with a precision of attack and admirable adherence to time that was truly astonishing. The most pleasing numbers were "The Maple Leaf," in which a pretty and appropriate effect was produced by the simultaneous waving of sprigs of maple at the conclusion of the last verse; the "Fire Brigade, in which a perfect imitation is given of the sound of the hose reel and bell and the galloping of the horses; the solo, "Angel of Hope," with humming chorus; Mr. Torrington's "Canada," which is a fine compositION and more stirring even than the "Maple Leaf"; the chorus in unison, "He Shall Feed His Flock," and solo, "Come Unto Him," from the "Messiah"; Geibel's pretty waltz song, "The Oars Are Plashing Lightly," and the old nursery song, "Cockey—Ridey—Roosey." All of these were rendered admirably, and called forth much applause and several encores.

Singing From Manual Signs.

Mr. Cringan gave an exhibition of the pupils singing from manual signs, and to show that the trial was a perfectly genuine one he called upon Mr. Johnston, singing master in the Hamilton Public schools, to give the children some musical sign exercises, which were practically readings at sight. It is certainly a wonderful and most efficient method of teaching young children to sing, and has brought about very remarkable results. Great credit is due Mr. A. W. Hughes for his excellent arrangement of the accompaniments to the children's songs.

A Letter From The Governor-General.

During the intermission Lieutenant-Governor Kirkpatrick announced that he had a message for the children from His Excellency Lord Aberdeen, which he proceeded to read.

In addressing the children for a few moments the Lieutenant-Governor said, referring to Lord Aberdeen: "How the loyal, patriotic heart would have throbbed if he had heard the songs and seen the waving of the maple leaves and Union Jacks." His Honor also announced that the concert would be repeated on Tuesday afternoon, the proceeds to be handed over to the Children's Aid Society.

The Last Concert.

The fifth and last concert of the Massey Music Festival opened before the largest audience that has yet appeared within the walls of the new auditorium. The first number was the well-known overture to Rossini's "William Tell," rendered in a brilliant manner by the orchestra. In this piece Mr. A. Russell of Hamilton took the difficult oboe solo in a highly creditable manner. The second orchestral number was the andante con moto and finale of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, which portrays the struggle of the individual with fate, the alternations of hope and despair, and the final triumph of the former. The orchestra gave a pleasing interpretation of this and received a hearty encore.

A serenade, in andante cantabile movement, by Tschaikowski, for strings alone, was also rendered creditably. It is distinguished by its mood of profound melancholy which prevails throughout. The melody is original and striking, and a unique effect is produced at the entry of the second theme, where a pizzicato accompaniment in descending semi-tones adds a weird intensity to the mournful song of the first violin.

Mr. Arthur Friedheim was in a particularly felicitous mood, and in his first number —"Etude" G flat, valse C sharp minor, and "Barcarolle," by Chopin—immediately made friends of his audience, who demanded to hear him again. His second program number was Liszt's Concerto in E flat and was rendered in masterly style.

Miss Juch in Fine Voice.

Miss Juch gave a grand rendering of the aria, "Inou Halls of Song," from "Tannhauser," and was vociferously encored. Her next number was to have been a group of songs, but by special request she substituted the jewel song from "Faust" instead, and rendered it in a manner never before approached in this city, save, perhaps, by Albani.

Ever charming Lillian Blauvelt added fresh laurels to those already garnered in this city by her fine rendition of the aria from Bemberg's "Nymphs et Sylvain," and received a recall. Her other number was the Bolero from Verdi's "Sicilian Vespers," also sung beautifully. No soprano who has ever visited Toronto has given such general satisfaction as Miss Lillian Blauvelt. Petite, pretty and possessing a glorious voice, it is to be hoped it will not be long before she again visits us.

Herr Hofmann, the Detroit cellist, was obliged to leave the city early, therefore his solo, which appeared very near the end, was transposed to allow him time to catch his train. He gave Golterumann's concerto No. 2 in D minor with fine execution.

Herr Yunck's violin solo, "Adagio," from F sharp minor concerto by Vieuxtemps, and "Rondo Papageno," by Ernst, was the cleverest and best work he has done here yet, and the audience recognized the fact and recalled him with as much enthusiasm as the heat and late hour would permit.

The Detroit Philharmonic Club's number was a quartet in E minor, "Aus Meinem Leben," by Smetana, the late Bohemian pianist and composer, whose works are comparatively unknown in this country.

Herbert Clarke's "Lost Chord."

It was decidedly late and most decidedly hot when Herbert Clarke at length stepped forward to play the "Lost Chord." A great many of the audience had gone home, but those who stayed out the interminable program were exceedingly glad that they did, for Mr. Clarke never played Sullivan's beautiful song better, and with the greatest ease reached the altitude of that high note at the end which has been the despair of innumerable cornet soloists.

Notes.

Members of Lieut.-Governor Kirkpatrick's family have been constant attendants at the festival ever since the opening night. So has His Worship the Mayor.

Mr. Herbert L. Clarke was among the audience at the children's concert. Mr. Clarke is now with Gilmore's Band, conducted by the world famous Victor Herbert.

When Arthur Friedheim made his first appearance on Friday afternoon, he looked as though he had been surprised in his bath by a cry of fire, and had tumbled into the first habiliments he could lay his mit on.

Wanted—A concert organ. Apply at the Massey Music Hall. The more stops it has the longer it will stay.

Among the Hamilton musicians noticed in the festival orchestra were: Mr. Thomas Littlehales, double bass; Miss Lillian Littlehales, second violin; Mr. Sidney Littlehales, viola; and Mr. Albert Russell, oboe.

In the "Wreck of the Hesperus," a piece of high comedy was enacted. After his solo, Dr. Carl Duffy (the father) sat down with the perspiration bursting from every pore, while the chorus sang: "But the father answered never a word—a frozen corpse was he."

Particular attention was directed on Saturday afternoon to Miss Lillian Blauvelt's tasteful and highly becoming costume. Her dress was of some light material with a small green flower, the waist being covered with cream lace, with a light green velvet collar and girdle. On her head was a dainty little confection of a hat trimmed with violets, and on her hands violet-colored gloves, while from her corsage at the left side dangled a 6 by 8 Union Jack.

Mrs. H. M. Blight deserves unstinted praise for the able manner in which she played the organ and piano accompaniments throughout the festival. Her work in this respect places her among the ranks of our most successful and accomplished native musicians.

Investors and Savings Bank Depositors.

Savings banks pay but 3 or 4 per cent. Many other investments pay less and oftentimes nothing at all, particularly during times of depression.

Investors of large or small means wishing a safe and steady income should invest now in the stock of the New England Theatre Company, incorporated in 1891, with a guaranteed dividend of 12 per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually (Jan. and July).

This corporation, with the assistance of well-known citizens of Toronto, will erect a magnificent theatre in the city of Toronto at an estimated cost approaching $100,000.

We desire to make this a co-operative enterprise, which will be safe, sure and solid and, as it is a well-known fact that enterprises of this description offer large returns, and when properly managed are absolutely safe; we have, with this in view, decided to offer a limited number of shares of the treasury stock for sale at the par value of $10 each (full paid and non-assessable).
