BLAKE ENTERTAINED.

Hon. Edward Blake was entertained at dinner by the Eighty club, at London, on the 4th inst. Professor James Bryce, who will probably be a member of Gladstone's administration, presided, Mr. Blake occupying a position on his right hand. The dinner created special interest, not alone because it promised to elicit from the distinguished Canadian his first utterance in the presence of an English audience on the burning question that at present engrosses public attention, but also because this dinner was the first political social function that has been held by the club since the election. The company therefore was a large and thoroughly representative one. Prof. Bryce's introductory remarks were brief. He concluded by saying that he believed Mr. Blake would prove of the greatest value in arriving at the solution of the Irish problem. Mr. Blake was accorded a flattering reception. In responding he paid a tribute to Parnell and said he believed Ireland was on the eve of realizing the results Parnell fought for. He hoped the Irish minority would ultimately see the tactics of the majority were sound. Every one had the interests of Ireland at heart and desired the passage of an effective home rule bill. He said Canada had special, even though selfish, interest in a satisfactory and permanent settlement of such a question. The aggravation of Ireland's grievances had deprived Canada of her fair share of the stream of Irish immigration that had gone to swell the population of other lands. Irishmen whose knowledge of England consisted in the operation of coercion acts were likely, when seeking a new home, to choose one unconnected with the country which was associated in their mind with bitter memories. Doubtless this had operated against other colonies of the empire equally with Canada. He went on to say that all of Canada's experience with home rule justified Ireland in seeking the same measure of self-government. It was now a matter of history that Canada's administration of her local affairs had never once given the least cause for alarm to English statesmen. It was true that occasionally her foreign relations had called for the services of imperial diplomacy, but had never been found beyond the resources of that diplomacy. What had been the fruits of home rule in Canada? The loyalty and affection of the masses in Canada for the old land were widespread and deep-rooted, and this was directly due and traceable [illegible] Canada had changed it from a rebellious dependency to a loyal colony.

Mr. Blake, acknowledging the hearty manner in which the toast of his health had been honored, said that he had left almost at a moment's notice. In coming across the Atlantic to do what he could for the pacific conciliation of Ireland he had severed the ties of a lifetime.

Justin McCarthy in the last number of the New Review eulogizes Mr. Blake's ability. He says, perhaps, Mr Blake's own fame suggests the greatest danger at Westminster. He feels sure, nevertheless, that he will triumph in spite even of over-charged anticipations.

Mr. Blake's address was the chief subject of political comment in Friday's papers.

The Pall Mall Gazette says the statement of Canada's experience as a Canadian argument for home rule was a most important contribution to the subject. Mr. Blake's remarks on the relation of home rule to other political questions were the voice of common sense.

The Daily News says that Mr. Blake's grasp of the situation was firm and thorough.

The Star says that the speech more than fulfilled the expectation of an authoritative review of the inner working of home rule.

The Times, however, makes a severe criticism, and says that Mr. Blake has no real acquaintance with the problem he purported to treat of. At the best he was but humorous. In his speech, when Mr. Blake was referring to a possible rejection of the bill by the house of lords, he quoted the proverb: "It is time enough to bid the devil good morning when you meet him."

Visit of Cardinal Gibbons to St. Teresa's.

Wednesday August 3rd was a gala day at St. Teresa's, and will be ever remembered by the present generation in that parish. On that day Cardinal Gibbons honored them with a visit, and they gave full expression of their gratitude to His Eminence for his kindness in condescending to visit them. There is an instinct in our nature that longs to do honor to whom honor is due. On Monday evening Father McMillan made known to those whom he could see of his parishioners, that the Cardinal was to honor them with a visit on Wednesday, and in a short time it was known throughout the parish, and everyone was eager to be at the Church on the occasion. Shortly after noon on Wednesday His Eminence, accompanied by His lordship Bishop McDonald, Rev T J Broyderick, of Baltimore and Rev. Dr. Doyle of Vernon River arrived at St. Teresa's and were welcomed with a Caede mill failthe by the pastor. At 2·30 o'clock the bell was rung for the people to go into the Church which was soon filled to its utmost capacity. The sanctuary was tastefully fitted up. The two altars decorated with flowers and a number of floating lights on the main altar. A seat was arranged for the Cardinal in the middle of the sanctuary, attended by Father Broyderick, another seat for Bishop McDonald, attended by Dr. Doyle. The choir sang a suitable hymn as they entered the sanctuary. The Cardinal, Bishop and Clergy after kneeling in prayer took their seats, then Father McMillan read the following

ADDRESS.

To His Eminence Most Rev. James Cardinal Gibbons Archbishop of Baltimore.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EMINENCE,—The love, respect and submission of the Catholic clergy and people of P. E. Island to the Pope's Cardinals, Bishops and prelates will always and everywhere speak well for themselves. The visiting clergy with the pastor and people of St. Teresa's have reason to consider themselves highly honored to-day, for the kind visit of your Eminence will be marked down as an important epoch in the history of the parish. From the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh, and we give full and happy expressions of the heart in welcome to your Eminence and hope that your visit to this Island may be pleasing in every way and conducive to your health and strength. You have come for a few days of rest and we desire to do what we can to contribute to that much-needed rest for a life so full of good works, and that you may feel perfectly at home among us, is the great object of our solicitude.

In the history of the Catholic Church and in the "Faith of Our Fathers" we find mention of great and worthy men, whose valuable lives like precious jewels, extend through many years of usefulness, reminding us strongly of the appropriateness of the words of the poet:

"Life is real, life is earnest
And the grave is not its goal.
Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time."

It is pleasing and instructive to read and to hear of the beautiful lives and worthy deeds of our beloved friends, the saints, doctors and prelates of the Catholic Church in the past and also in the present. They have been great and useful because they have been learned and holy and conspicuous instruments in the hands of God to establish among men the teachings of Virtue and Truth. Whenever any of those noble minds spoke to their people of their many spiritual advantages and cautioned them against the frailties of human nature, they always urged them to put their spiritual advantages into practice to enable themselves to correct and suppress rising abuses, just as our worthy and beloved prelates do to day. How clearly and and forcibly they tell the world that the knowledge and practice of truth and justice in all stages of life contributed more than anything else to the advancement of things temporal as well as spiritual. The human heart naturally feels the bounding desire to offer the homage of love and respect to noble and virtuous actions and to honor the memory of those [illegible] their heroes and [illegible] patron saints and their popular statesmen whose practice and teachings in well doing are proposed as models to succeeding generations. The honor given to the heroes extends to every thing that recalls their memory. It is admitted by all men that the veneration of illustrious and worthy men is as ancient and as universal as the human race, that it is consistent and legitimate in its principle and forms a part of the laws of humanity, it urges men to imitate and to follow them even though at a distance in their carreer of usefulness.

Our Blessed Saviour said "Be ye perfect as your Heavenly Father is perfect. This is the grandest principle or rule of development that Ingnite Wisdom could give. It is progress on the most improved scale for we cannot do a thing better than when it is for God. St Paul was a very learned, great, and holy man. We have the word of Divine Truth as Testimony to this. There were few men in the church who performed such eminent works in the establishment of Christianity and the men of his day knew it and were ready as far as they could to declare the fame of St Paul to the world. But St Paul was mindful of those words of our Blessed Saviour "Learn of me for I am meek and humble of heart" and also of the words "Let your light shine before men that they may see your works and glorify, your Father who is in Heaven" and he with that modesty, which was characteristic of him said. "I live now not I but Christ liveth in me." Hence it is no wonder that St Paul in all ages of the Catholic Church has been dearly loved, that the faithful were always ready and willing to give testimony of their love, respect and submission to him for they knew that Christ lived in him. St Paul and his friends have passed to their reward and so have many others, who continued the good work after them but they have their worthy and lawful successors in whom Christ lives. The Catholic Church in whom Christ lives and through whom he Holds communication with the world still continues and nothing can discourage her in the work of evangelizing the world. She declares herself a teacher from God and clearly proves her Divine Mission. Her office is to make known to men and to uphold the faith she received from the living God and from that sacred trust no power on earth can move her. In America she holds a very prominent place in the Christian world. The Bishops of America are learned holy and apostolic, her priests and people are true and faithful, striving to do good and they are aware of the obligation to correct their faults and avoid evil. They look to the Bishops with the respect and confidence of devoted and loyal children and Bishops Priests and people look to his eminence Cardinal Gibbons as the central figure among them and well they may. Long may he live. In the method of her teaching and Government we find clearness and distinction with a remarkable unity. Many of those belonging to the reformed churches of the 16th century may look on and wonder how this perfect organization is effected. But the intelligent Catholic understands it because he finds the words of St. Paul in the mouths of our beloved and trusted prelates. "I live now; not I but Christ liveth in me." He never hesitated in his duty and fidelity to the Church. The infallibility, unity and sanctity which she claims, result from the fact that God was her founder and that he promised to guide her and keep her in the mission on which He sent her. The Catholic Church in America, even in the living present, has been blessed with a St. Paul, a St. Thomas, a St. Francis De Sales, a St. Vincent De Paul and others. Their learning, virtue and apostolic zeal are well known. We do not want to be over expressive with our sentiments, for we must consider the feelings of those whom we address. We sincerely thank your Eminence for your kind visit. It does our people good to see and hear a Prince of the Church for it helps to develop and strengthen our Catholic spirit. There is one wish among others in which all Americans are very earnest, and unanimous it is—That your Eminence, (they know that God blesses you) you have health and strength, and that your valuable life which is justly regarded by Protestants and Catholics as very precious, may be prolonged many years. In this prayer we all join with heart and soul. We kneel to receive your blessing.

Yours most truly,

M. J. McMILLAN,
and the people of St. Teresa's.

August 3rd 1892.

The Cardinal then rose and blessed the large congregation after which he addressed those present in his own happy style. We regret that we cannot give a full report of his excellent discourse. His Eminence thanked the pastor and people for the address and reception given him. He spoke in the highest terms of the Island in general, its wholesome and prosperous appearance, its healthy atmosphere and the warm-hearted hospitality of its people. He could not forget it. The people here he said, have many reasons to be thankful to Divine Providence for they have many advantages and privileges of which those living in larger and wealthier countries were deprived. The people are blessed in many ways, they are free from many dangers and abuses to which those in other places are exposed. They are trying to better their condition and are succeeding. Good feelings exist between Catholic and Protestants which he was pleased to see and would strongly recommend at all times. He spoke in pleasing terms of the American Government and also of the Canadian Government. He would like to see the spirit of [illegible] ship grow stronger and warmer between [illegible] from as time went on. They sought to be up [illegible] to the requirements of the times, to advance the general good of their people as far as circumstances would permit. That the Catholic Church enjoyed more liberty under these Government than under any other Government in the world. He spoke of the duties of Catholics to the Civil Power and exhorted them on all occasions to unite the practice of the commandments with the profession of their faith, to love one another and to work with one another on the principles of mutual charity. It would be a great encouragement to the efforts of those who were trying to rule well, and a benefit to society. There are many Catholics who strive earnestly to be honest and upright in doing their duty when put in high places of trust, and when some failed in this respect it is much to be regretted. He said that this Island produced many good citizens, who held honourable positions in the different professions. And it sends to other countries many persons who are a credit to the Island. He als said the Island produced something more valuable than anything he had before enumerated and that was Christian Faith and Virtue. The Tree of Catholicity is taking root. Growing larger and producing good fruit He referred to Bishop McEachern, the first Bishop of the ediocse who laid the first foundation of religion on the Island he succeeded very well and was much beloved amid many difficulties. He was followed by Bishop McDonald who continued the good work, after him came Birhop McIntyre whom had the pleasure of meeting in Baltimore a few years ago and whose death a year ago they all regretted; after him came the present Bishop McDonald a man of Zeal and ability. He then exhorted them to be obedient to their prelates to love and respect them.

Our separated brethren look with admiration at the unity and harmony prevaling in the Catholic Church. It is the blood of Christ that cements the Catholic Church in unity and charity. The church of Christ like this holy Religion was organized as the infinite wisdom and goodness thought proper and we are not free to go beyond that. The faithful are all obliged to make due preparation for the reception of the Sacraments, and especially, for Holy Communion. It is the prudent and sincere confession with the worthy reception of Holy Communion that prepare the souls of the faithful for the blood of Christ to do its good work. When the faithful sincerely rejects what is bad and embraces what is good they then open the way for the spirit of Christ to enter the interior man where Christ loves to dwell. Thus when the true Catholic becomes strong and vigorous in the love, knowledge and practice of his holy religion, he becomes very anxious for the unity, sanctity and preservation of that religion. Then in eloquent terms he exhorted them to be faithful and obedient to the church, and to their prelates. Such are a few of the many good things said by his Eminence in his learned and instructive discourse that will long be remembered by the large congregation that assembled to hear him on that occasion. Com.
