"THE DOMINION"

WE are accustomed to take the expression of the "Dominion" of Canada for granted, but the original of that somewhat unusual word is known to very few. When at length the great scheme of Sir John Macdonald was realized, and nine provinces grouped themselves together into one great confederation, a serious difficulty was presented by the choice of a suitable name. For a time almost a deadlock ensued. At length one old member of Parliament rose from his seat and told his colleagues that he had read in his Bible that very morning the words: "His dominion shall be from the one sea to the other." Accordingly he suggested that Canada should be known as the Dominion, or God's Land. The suggestion seized upon the hearts and imaginations of those present, and it was sromptly acted upon.—North China Herald, June 26, 1915.

 We reprint this story from our esteemed Shanghai contemporary, but have no hesitation in pronouncing it apocryphal. It is hardly necessary to point out that nine provinces did not at once "group themselves together into one great confederation." The provinces on which the name Dominion of Canada was conferred in 1867 were four only, Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

It is quite true that the fathers of the confederation contemplated that the whole of British North America would be included in the Dominion, but British Columbia did not join till 1870, and Prince Edward Island remained out till 1873. Manitoba was made a province in 1870 and Alberta and Saskatchewan in 1905. Newfoundland has not yet thrown in her lot with Canada; and to Newfoundland belongs a long strip of the coast of Labrador. It is to be hoped that some day, and soon, Canada will embrace the whole of British North America.—Ed.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN RECEIVES THE FREEDOM OF THE CITY OF LONDON

(Canadian Associated Press.)

LONDON, July 29.—Not even a crowned head could have a more magnificent reception than was accorded Sir Robert Borden this afternoon, when he received what has always been regarded as one of the highest honors, the Freedom of the City of London.

The citizens assembled in large numbers outside the Guildhall to greet Canada's Premier, while within the magnificent hall—that historic link with the past, where monarchs have enjoyed the hospitality of the Empire's capital, and statesmen have proclaimed policies—the highest dignitaries in the land gathered to honor him, and at the same time indicate the grateful recognition by the Mother Country of the splendid part taken by the Dominion in the present times of tumult.

When, at 3 o'clock, Sir Robert, accompanied by the Master and Wardens of the Leather Sellers Company, of which he is a member, and by whom he was presented, arrived at the Guildhall, with its wonderful statuary illustrative of the heroic incidents which have led to Imperial expansion, the hall rang with cheers. With that quaint picturesque ceremonial which the City of London continues throughout the ages, and which makes the past an inspiration for the present, the ceremony was immediately commenced.

In the centre of a platform at the east end of the hall, wearing his crimson robe, sat the Lord Mayor, and on the other side were the distinguished representatives of Church and State, many in the uniforms of their office, which gave color to the brilliant scene. Sir Robert having taken his position on the platform, Mr. Adrian Pollock, the Chamberlain of the City, addressed him in the name of the Corporation and handed him the scroll of the freedom, at the same time extending to him the right hand of fellowship.

Sir Robert, who was cheered again and again, said: "I am deeply conscious of the high honor conferred upon me, but I am equally conscious that it is not so much a tribute to me, as to the great Dominion beyond the Atlantic which I have the honor to represent in this great testing time of our manhood. (Cheers.) The love of liberty and the insistence upon the rights of the people, memorable everywhere within these islands, have especially distinguished the citizens of London, Nor do I forget that the same qualities characterize the people of the neighbouring country within the quiet of whose churchyards sleep those whose blood runs in my veins.

"For a thousand years the progress and advancement of this great city have kept time with the march of civilization across the centuries. In the beginning within those islands the founding of a nation and the consequent necessity for orderly government compelled a system autocratic in character and methods. Then came the great charter of freedom and the will of the people to make their own laws and to govern themselves. Orderly government on the one hand, and individual liberty on the other, justice, and the equality of all men before the law—upon these secure foundations the fabric of national life was built, and in these later years there has come the not less noble ideal of democracy, founded upon equality of opportunity for all the people.

"In the Dominions beyond the seas the same ideals of liberty and justice have inevitably led to the establishment of self-governing institutions. That principle which in the eyes of the short-sighted seemed destined to drive the farflung nations of our Empire asunder, has but united them by ties stronger than could be dreamed of under any system of autocratic government. (Cheers). For this I call witness the events of the past twelve months. Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Canada, all these great free nations enjoying the full rights of self-government, possessing parliamentary institutions, living by the voice of the people. Why have they joined in this conflict, and why are their citizens from the remotest corners of the earth fighting side by side with the men of this Island home in the greatest war the world has ever known? Why are the descendants in Canada of those who fought under Wolfe and of those who fought under Montcalm for possession of the northern half of the American continent, now standing together in the Empire's battle line to-day?

"And to speak of later events, why do we find beyond the channel in France or in Belgium, the grandson of a Durham and the grandson of a Papineau standing side by side in this struggle? When the historian of the future comes to consider and analyze the events of this war he will realize that some great overmastering impulse contributed mainly to this wonderful result. One such impulse is found in the love of liberty, the ideals of democracy, and the spirit of unity founded thereon, which make the whole Empire united in aim and with a single purpose. But there is also the intense conviction that this war was forced upon our Empire. (Cheers).

"In honor we could not stand aside and see trampled in the dust a weak and unoffending people whose independence and liberties we had guaranteed. (Cheers). Beyond and above all we realized the supreme truth that the issue forced upon us by this conflict transcends even the destinies of our Empire and involves the future of civilization and of the whole world.

The greatest test to which modern democracy has ever been subjected now confronts us, and it remains to be seen whether this liberty which is so closely interwoven with our national ideals carries with it so strong a sense of duty and service to the state in times of peace and war as to enable us to withstand the onslaught of the most highly organized and formidable autocracy the world has ever known. It must be apparent to all thoughtful men that civilization and institutions which have been so slowly and laboriously built up with the toil and blood of a thousand years hangs in the balance to-day, and that we are called upon to face the ultimate test of national existence. A confession of failure in this war, or even a serious doubt as to its issue, denies the capacity of the British people to govern themselves (cheers) and may herald the downfall of democratic institutions.

"During the past week I have visited France. That visit was the most interesting and inspiring event of my life. I have seen a whole nation in arms, and yet the entire country, even up to the line of trenches, is covered with a bountiful harvest. It would be impossible to describe too vividly to you the intense impression made upon me by the courage, patience, seriousness and self-control of the French nation. No people so inspired can ever perish or be subdued. We are proud to remember this great allied nation is of our own kin, because you in the British Isles look back to Celtic and Norman as well as Saxon ancestors, and if this be true of you in Britain, it is still more true of us in Canada.

"During my sojourn here and my recent visit to France, many men have spoken to me with the warmest appreciation of the Canadian troops at the front. I am very proud indeed that they have proved themselves worthy of the highest traditions of the great races from which they sprang. Canada is not a military nation, but Canadians have not lost the fighting spirit of their ancestors.

"While in France I watched the eager, intense faces of ten thousand Canadians, to whom I spoke within the sound of the German guns. Three days ago, within these islands, I looked into the clear undaunted eyes of a thousand convalescent Canadians who had returned from the valley of the shadow of death. In the eyes and faces of these men I read only one message of resolute unflinching determination to make our cause triumphant and preserve its institutions and liberties, to maintain the unity of our Empire and its influence throughout the world. The message which I have thus read I bring to you also from the great Dominion which has sent these men across the seas. While the awful shadow of this war overhangs the Empire I shall not pause to speak of what may be evolved in its constitutional relations. Those who are to be its architects will have a great part to play, and I do not doubt they will play it worthily. That structure must embody not only the autonomous self-government of each inter-Imperial nation, but the majesty and power of an Empire united by ties such as those of which I have spoken, but organized more efficiently and thoroughly for the preservation of its very existence. To those who shall be called upon to design and erect so magnificent a monument, crowning the labors of the past and realizing the hopes of the future, let us all bid god-speed in their great task." (Cheers.)

That the enfranchisement of women would have prevented the outbreak of European war is the opinion held and expressed in a resolution by the Men's League for Woman Suffrage in Hungary. The Men's League was a thriving organization before the outbreak of war which called to the front all men of age for military service. The remaining members, older men, most of them of high standing in the academic and business worlds, called a meeting in Budapest in which speaker after speaker supported the opinion that woman suffrage would be efficacious to prevent war.

EXECUTION OF BECKER

Charles Becker was put to death in the electric chair at Sing Sing Prison, Ossining, N. Y., on Friday morning, July 30, for the killing of Herman Rosenthal, the New York gambler. The former New York police lieutenant retained his composure and protested his innocence to the last. He went to his death with a photograph of his wife pinned on his shirt over his heart. Three shocks were given before the prison physicians pronounced Becker dead at 5.55 o'clock.

Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, for whose murder Charles Becker was sentenced to die in the electric chair, was shot to death by hired gunmen in the early morning of July 16, 1912, in front of the Hotel Metropole on Forth-third street, a few steps from Broadway. The murder was the swift culmination of sensational charges made a few days besore by Rosenthal against Becker, in which Rosenthal asserted that Becker, then head of the "Strong-Arm" squad of detectives, freely sold police protection and had acoumulated thousands of dollars of graft money.

Rosenthal went further than that. He swore that Becker was his silent partner in a gambling enterprise that failed, and that Becker, angered by losses where he had expected large profits, raided the Rosenthal establishment and drove Rosenthal out of business by stationing uniformed policemen on his premises day and night.

These charges were published, and District Attorney Whitman began an investigation of them. He summoned Rosenthal to the Criminal Courts building and listened to his story. An appointment was made with Rosenthal for the next day. Before the time came, Rosenthal was murdered.

Then came the arrest of the four gunmen, "Lefty" Louis, "Gyp the Blood," "Dago" Frank and "Whitey" Lewis. These were finally convicted and electrocuted. It was on their testimoney that Becker was finally convicted and has now paid with his life.

The great modern force of civilized man's advanced needs to-day is not military force, but the force of intelligence, education, industry, character, patient self-control and human service. Woman is a potent force in public life, and never in the history of the world was as powerful as to-day. She must be recognized.—Frances S. Whiteside.

MEETING OF TOWN COUNCIL

St. Andrews, N. B., July 29, 1915.

A special meeting of the Town Council was this day held in the Council room at 8 o'clock p. m.

Present, the Mayor, G. King Greenlaw, Aldermen, Douglas, Finigan, Gardiner, Hibbard, Lowrey, McFarlane, Shaw.

Absent, Alderman Keay.

The Mayor stated that the meeting had been called to consider a communication from Lt.-Col. J. R. Kirkpatrick, O. C. N. B. and P. E. I. Battalion, requesting that the Town Council assist in procuring a machine gun or guns for the above named Battalion.

Moved by Ald'n Douglas seconded by Ald'n Lowery, that the sum of one thousand dollars be raised for the purpose of providing a machine-gun for the use of the 55th Battalion, and that the money be raised by temporary loan from the Bank of Nova Scotia or otherwise, payment to be made by assessment in 1916 as provided for in Towns Incorporation Act.

Ald'n Hibbard agreed with the mover of the resolution, that in this great struggle now being fought out, it was the duty of all true Canadians to assist our boys who have gone to the front, so far as we can in providing them with the necessary and up-to-date weapons of warfare and was in favor of the Town supplying one machine gun, costing say one thousand dollars, and suggested that the amount be provided for, say, five hundred dollars as proposed by this resolution and five hundred dollars by contributions from the citizens of the Town of Saint Andrews.

Ald'n Douglas thought that the Town should appropriate the amount of one thousand dollars for a gun, the amount could be obtained from the Bank of Nova Scotia, and that the rate of interest would not exceed 6%

An appeal to the people of New Brunswick, from J. R. Kirkpatrick Lt.-Col. O. C. commanding 55th N. B. and P. E. I. Battalion, in the BEACON paper of July 29th, was read, also a letter from Lt.-Col. H. F. McLeod, in the St. Croix Courier of July 29th, showing the great need of having our forces supplied with machine guns at the earliest possible moment.

Ald'n Gardiner, Lowery, McFarlane, Shaw, individually expressed themselves in favour of the Town furnishing one gun, Ald'n Finigan would favour furnishing two guns.

A number of citizens being present, were invited by the Mayor to give their views on the subject before the council.

M. N. Cockburn, K. C., discussed the importance of the Town granting any and every assistance possible, and felt the contribution of one machine gun would not be too much for the Town to do, and felt sure that the ratepayers would back up the action of the Council in so doing. In the matter of borrowing the money, he stated, that he had clients in St. Stephen who had authorized him to invest $2000, on unquestionable security. He felt sure that $1000, of that money could be obtained at five per cent, and that if the Town failed to secure the loan from any other source on terms as favorable, he would undertake to finance the loan at that rate of interest.

T. A. Hartt, M. P., expressed himself as much pleased with the action the Council had so promptly taken. Sheriff R. A. Stuart, Messrs. R. D. Rigby, G. H. Stickney, P. G. Hanson, Fred Young, also spoke in terms of approval of the Council's action.

The Mayor then submitted the resolution which was unanimously carried.

Moved by Ald'n Douglas, seconded by Ald'n Gardiner. In accordance with the forgoing resolution. It is now resolved that the sum of one thousand dollars be raised by note signed by the Mayor and Town Clerk, and payable to the lender, interest not to exceed 5%.

On motion seconded Council adjourned.

E. S. POLLEYS,
Town Clerk.

CONTRIBUTIONS TOWARDS THE PURCHASE OF MACHINE GUNS

At a special meeting of the Town Council for the Town of Saint Andrews, held on Thursday evening, July 29th, the Council unanimously voted an appropriation of $1000 for the purchase of a machine gun. On Friday, twenty citizens, by a contribution of $50.00 each, provided a fund for the purchase of a second gun, and by a general collection among the citizens, prosecuted by a committee of members of the St. Andrews Women's Canadian Club, and ten gentlemen, a fund was raised towords the purchase of a third gun.

Numbers of visitors are on the Island enjoying their annual outing.

Strong influence is being used to get a new wide road, built through the centre of the Island, which would be comparatively level and would open up a quantity of good land, as well as furnish a short cut, and a wider road than we now have on the Island, and as there are a number of autos here the idea of widening the old roads would be hard to carry out and some places impossible.

An idea of raising money to buy a machine gun will probably meet with success if in the right hands to canvass.

The People of Charlotte County Want to Spend Money

MONEY is for use, not for hoarding. Most of us want what money will buy more than money, so we are always spending our money. Also most of us do not make money enough to hoard it—we must spend it on necessities.

Much Charlotte County money is spent with firms outside of this community—with the big city mail order houses; money that ought to be spent at home.

More money would be spent in the County if more of our merchants would advertise, and if those who do advertise would advertise more.

To the People in Charlotte County

Spend your money in the County. Sending money out of this community makes the community poorer for you and everybody else. Building up outside businesses won't help you any.
