Poetry.

"Whip-poor-Will."

(Supposed to be addressed to an Old Bachelor.)

Half way between my humble home
And Brahma Pootra Henbane's dome,
Perch'd on a bough, at twilight fell,
With lack luster voice in earnest call,
A Bird clad with lucky hill
Keeps ever harping "Whip-poor-Will!"
To warn me of some threatening ill,
Incessant harping "Whip-poor-Will!"

Some dark malignant spirit's plot
Would sicken more my ev'ry lot—
Would crush out hope, pollute my path,
Or blast me with a vampyre's breath;
Whilst in good, good fairy angel land,
With sympathetic zeal keep hold,
Keeps tapping out his warning still,
That some one means to "Whip-poor-Will;"
To guard me 'gainst some threatening ill,
Incessant harping "Whip-poor-Will!"

Good south, since I was born I know,
Some five and forty years ago,
For Error, Sin, or Folly's fault,
My chastisement ne'er seems to halt,
And often, for no crime at all,
I've had my stripes, and drops of gall;
But truce, let Fate her joke fulfil:
It seems her sport to "Whip-poor-Will;"
By force, device, or knavish skill,
She seems intent to "Whip-poor-Will."

Who can it be who means to gash
My body with the cruel lash?
Whose hand invisible would urge
The force of this impending scourge?
Who would my spirit downward tread,
And rob my children of their bread?
Who haunts me as a folded snake,
To slime my path with pois'nous slake?
Ha! Brahma Pootra Henbane still Insidious plots to "Whip-poor-Will;"—
His venom'd nature crouching still,
By demon wiles would "Whip-poor-Will."

'Tis true, Will is no star-gemm'd lord,
He seldom feasts at regal board,
He owns no glittering equipage,
He treads no menials in his rage,
His territorial range is small—
Just ten poor acres, that is all;
Which Brahma Pootra Henbane wants,
And hourly, inly for it pants;
For that his life's last spark he'd chill,
Perhaps for that he'd "Whip-poor-Will;"
But Will's best blood for that he'd spill,
'Tis therefore vain to "Whip-poor Will."

Alas! how oft vain selfish man
Gainsays his Maker's wisest plan—
How oft for scurvy lucre's sake,
The social band he strains to break—
How oft with air of seeming worth,
Profanes the holiest cause on earth;
With dire detraction's venom'd strain,
Pollutes the mind of honest men.
Now hush kind bird, forego thy trill,
I'm warn'd, he cannot "Whip-poor-Will,"
Still thanks for thy prophetic skill;
Great Brahma cannot "Whip-poor-Will."

WM. BANNATYNE.

Jemmy Slannigan's Ode.

AT THE CLOSING OF THE IRISH EXHIBITION, 9TH MAY, 1865.

Symbols, emblems, harps on the land and on the shamrock!
Thick as silver leaves, well a grath av a mouthful,
Will mark of the guns, yer honor, and all that, yer Jews
Till Dublin shakes down to the very foundhaytions.

Come, bright sun, from the rowlyest cloudy skies,
Laugh out a love smile from your sweet eyes,
Smile out the rain, wid yer golden extinguisher,
On the city we wish to be as fantastic like say.

Bring forth the cup, and the taste that's to illumine all,
Crack him wid gingerbread cakes in his mouth,
See how he's prancin' and capers'n', an' whisk'n',
Like the lively nergoats on the cowld Hill o' Howth.

Judy, acushla! sit down wid yer Jemmy;
Molly, avourneen, sarsa wan day yer mother;
Phadrick, an' Pledgin, and Polly mahoree,
How did ye like grain death, by the coal av yer father.

Hip! hurroo! off we go to the great Exhibition,
Manglin' wid dagoes, Chinks, Grecks, Turks and Arabs—
Jiminy!
See how the Turks wags his right wid amazement
At the rapid av the locomotive, it is an' thousands.

Whew! milliu murther! look Brown's av an eye!
Such waves av legs—such an elegant view!
Sez I, this to me Judy, wan day yer is dead, sure,
Since the charmin' goodnaysays av lowld Brian Boroo.

Granochree! there's the Prince rowlin' past in his coach!
Cannot!
I can't see his face, but I'll speak to the driver—
"Coachy, wan word av a word, yer Honorous, is one word!
Stop yer, I want yer!" Sez he, sez he, sez I.

"Arrah, why have you been so in a strange country?"
"An where's yer wife, the fair Princess, asthore Dawed?"
Sure her face will be wanted in Ireland, my lovely!
Oh, why could yer Honor leave her so lonely?

"How's yer royal Queen poorly?" may God save her kindly!
Right pop'lar she once was in the old country, sure!
But be sure av her health, I'm sure yer Honor is in the country,
An' the light av the family, wherever she is, sure!

"But you're young and happy, with sons and daughters,
An' a lovely mate, right like a Princess av crown,
Take care of her sons, yer Honor, an' the Princesses,
That show yer so lovely to them that have none!"

"Sure you couldn't leave what the rapparee Fenians
May look at Cashel, for peace in a place like
This! sure long ago I'd have—
An' their chains, an' their slavery—in me eye.

"But the I will spake! I know amongst stay wid
To have me an' Sez I, sez he, sez I, sez he, sez I:
Pitch away, Pat, Pat, Pat, Pat, Pat, Pat, Pat, Pat, Slanigan!
An' there won't be a happier couple under the sun.

"We're not discontented, yer Highness, a'moshal;
But the day's a grand one, an' we're all
Wid yer Highness, an' Prince Alfred, an' the children
An' the nations, an' the people, an' the children.

"Three cheers with us, good luck!" There he came to the
The trains are said, in a fine long row,
An' they're getting a foundation, sure enough,
Now, crawdy we end the Great Exhibitions
Thousand! What a sight! how my head! my!
Thousand!
Bands, fireworks, an' wonders, sure,
That will last admiration, shin the holes are scramin.'

There's one thing I'm sorry to mention, the time
I was in the wonderful wonders, I did not see
Ireland's
