S. for Demerara.—Nov. 28, lat. 39 48, long. 64 10, brig Sarah Henrietta, from St. Andrews for Kingston, (Jam.)—had lost most of her sails.—Nov. 8, lat. 21, long 56, brig Sterling, 15 days from Yarmouth, N. BOSTON Dec. 16.

Snow Storm, and Gale.—This morning about 3 o'clock, a NE snow storm commenced, and altho' it was intermingled with rain, a considerable quantity fell up to about 2 PM. The wind was fresh during the fall of snow, and after noon increased to a gale, the most violent that has been experienced here for several years. The disasters in the Bay we fear have been very serious.

Further particulars of the Gale.—The Gale, of which we gave some account yesterday, continued up to midnight, when it suddenly lulled. During the last hour it seemed even more violent than at any previous time. To day the wind has been high from about N. with snow. It is agreed on all hands that since the gale of September, 1816, we have not had in this quarter so severe a gale.

From Gloucester we learn that of a large number of coasting schs and sloops which had put into Cape Ann harbour when the storm came on, and for the most part anchored in the outer harbour, twenty went ashore, and sixteen of that number went to peices, many lives were lost, as seventeen bodies had already been taken up on the beach. One of these is reported to be a female who was lashed to the bitts of the windlass of a Castine schooner, two others of the crew also perished. Among the vessels on the beach were the Splendid, of S——, lumber laden, and the Mary & Eliza, of Belfast. The place where most of these vessels struck was a reef of rocks called Norman's Woe, between which and the beach there was strip of water, so that the chance of saving life by the unfortunate mariners driven upon them was very slight. There is another report from Gloucester that upwards of twenty more bodies had come ashore. The sea broke with such fury upon the beach that no boats could venture near to the stranded vessels to save their crews. The crews of the vessels which went to pieces, a quarter part probably perished.

At Sandy Bay, on the N. E. side of Gloucester, a sch name unknown, laden with flour, in attempting to make a harbour drove upon a reef, and immediately went to pieces, with loss of all her crew. The cargo was strewn along the beach.

Should it be so favourably received by the members of the Church, as to satisfy the Compiler that he may do so without a serious loss, he will be happy to take the trouble of preparing in like manner for the Press, other Sermons by the same Author, on the Worship and Doctrines of the Church, which may be printed so as to match with those which are now offered: and should the sale of the whole collection produce any thing more than will pay the expences of publication, the excess will be presented to the "Church Society."
