PEARY'S PROOFS WEAK, DECLARES DR. STEBBINS

Chairman of Arctic Club Executive Says He Expected a Much Stronger Statement from Roosevlt's Commander

New York, Oct. 14.—Dr. Russell O. Stebbins, chairman of the executive committee of the Arctic Club of America, said he had been led to expect that Mr. Peary would make a much stronger statement than the one officially issued.

"Commander Peary," said he, "could have followed a much simpler course in this whole matter, and I am somewhat surprised that he did not do so. He should have at first presented his own proofs of his achievement and then waited for Dr. Cook to forward his. I believe both men reached the Pole, but as a matter of proof more than the testimony of Eskimos will be required to show who did and who did not accomplish such a feat. It is absurd to suppose that Eskimos who have no acquaintance with maps, and know nothing of longitude and latitude should be expected to indicate where they had been with any degree of accuracy.

As Witnesses Against Him.

"Commander Peary, when he came back from the north, said that Dr. Cook's Eskimos would not know where they had gone, and now he would have those same Eskimos appear as witnesses against Dr. Cook. If one of these views of the Eskimo intellect is right the other must be wrong. Certainly Mr. Peary could hardly expect the public to believe witnesses whom he had himself discredited first. At most these Eskimos, even were they able to define exactly where they had been, had been asked by Dr. Cook not to tell Peary. I do not say that Eskimo testimony is entirely valueless, for the natives of the frozen north might be very closely questioned as to the number of days they travelled and as to how long they had been on the move, but as to making sure of a map, I doubt very much if such testimony would be of any use.

Something Strong.

"From what Commander Peary said in his bitter attacks against Dr. Cook we had every reason to believe he would present something strong, such as an absolute demonstration that Dr. Cook's instruments were inaccurate, that he had been mistaken in his position or that he had been located definitely in some place many miles away when he said that he was at the Pole. The whole attitude of Commander Peary is that of a man who is sore, and unless he can produce something stronger than this he will hardly be able to injure Dr. Cook in any way in the estimation of the American people. His own story of the reaching of the Pole is a confirmation in every way of the narrative of Dr. Cook, for the conditions were practically the same. Dr. Cook meanwhile seems to have thoroughly convinced the American people of the justice of his claims to be the discoverer, and so far I see nothing which would justify them in a change of belief."

HUNGARIAN COUNTESS HAS BOUGHT A SAWMILL

Former Miss Gladys Vanderbilt Gives Old Country Ideals a Shock --- Admire Enterprise but Deprecate Move.

Budapest, Oct. 14.—Hungarian aristocratic circles are perturbed over the act of Countess Szecnenyi, formerly Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, who recently purchased a large sawmill at Remete Vasgyar. Connected with the mill there is an extensive manufacturing plant which turns out all kinds of cabinet work.

The Hungarian women of high rank admire the young American woman's enterprise and envy her business ability, but hint that it is a startling departure on the part of one of Hungary's noblest families. They deprecate the business move of the Countess on the ground that it is beneath the dignity of her station in life.

Many-Sided Morocco Mirrored! Is Fiercely Fanatical and Filthy

Graphic Account of a Quaint Country Peopled by Queer Inhabitants.

Mulai Hafid Plans a Holy War Against Spain and Squalls Are Looked For

Fez, Morocco, Oct. 14.—What kind of a country is Morocco? The question will be asked hundreds of times in the next few days. For this last of the once great Barbary states is torn by dissension and the approach of a holy war.

Of its three capitals, Fez, Morocco and Mequinez, this city is my far the largest. Here reigns Mulai Hafid, cruelest of the "bloody sultans." Here he likely will stay, for if he should venture out he might be assassinated.

Mulai is the religious as well as the political head of the country. He is a Chereef, or linial descendant of the prophet Mohammed.

Mulai has his ministers, but they are full of treachery. He dares not trust Europeans openly, because the natives are ready to kill any white man that to do so would mean death.

Like Other Towns.

This city is one of the richest and oldest of the great Moroccan cities. It is, like other tropical towns hereabouts, set in groves of orange and pomegranate. Hundreds of rills of running water, whose sound itself is sacred to Allah's hosts, traverse the capital from end to end. Neglected Arab art is seen everywhere. The old houses, the sultan's palace, even the wares in the curious old shops, are beautiful, reflecting even the glories of the Alhambra.

Great mosques rear their ivory like towers from halls of worship that shine like fire in the sun. All the buildings are of reddish stone or clay that is the principal formation here.

The very streets approaching the greatest mosque, that of Mohammed, are so sacred that Christians, Jews and beasts are not allowed on them. Natives take off their slippers before they enter.

It is hard to convey to an outsider the appearance of Fez.

Fez Different.

Of seaports like Tangier the world knows. But Fez is different from any half-modern city. Its streets are winding and in places noisome, for Islam and sanitation have nothing in common. Labyrinths and passages screen the palaces and houses of the rich from the gaze of passersby. There is the mansion of the sultan, with great outlying courts and gardens, and there is the filthy Mellah, the Jews' quarter.

Occasionally a woman will pass, but she will wear a white veil up to her eyes. Only the Jewish women are unveiled.

Long flowing robes are worn by the men; white ones by those able to afford the trouble of keeping them clean; various colors by the others. Next to his horse and his weapons, the Moor loves the fineness of his robes. From each girdle hangs a glittering Saracen knife, and from almost every face a look of hate is cast at a foreigner.

Thirst For Christians.

Some of the visitors from the southern country, who come here with their wares to sell, would willingly murder any Christian in broad daylight if they had the chance.

A wonderful crowd is that of any Moorish city during the day. You may be nearly knocked down by a passing camel. Then a donkey might kick you. In Fez the sultan's pet wild mountain goats take particular delight in butting into and knocking down strangers.

These goats and wild boars from the sultan's zoo roam all about.

Beyond you may be a Jew, downtrodden and humble; a richly-clothed merchant may go by slowly on his mule, and a half-starved idiot may kiss his robe. Strange, half-savage creatures from the mountains and beggars hardly less repulsive than the idiots, pass by. The religion of Islam teaches that all idiots are saints.

Noise Everywhere.

Without sound no one could imagine what a roar these people make. There is noise everywhere. Drums and droning and squeaking of the little horns like those at the midway shows are always going in Morocco. Weird cries are punctuated by the sharp commands of a passing soldier or rich trader.

Occasionally from all directions at once you may hear a sudden upraising of voices, as in alarm. No fear—it is only praying time, and the message toward Mecca dies down as soon as it has been sped on its way by the shouting, half-mad fanatics.

Only in the Mellah, or the Jews' quarter, does the Christian get a cheerful welcome. There, men, women and children will smile on him. All the Jews have their hidden hoards. Many are of great wealth, who prefer the hate of the Moors and the dirt of Morocco to the persecution in Spain.

Many Gates.

Soldiers are everywhere. Outside the gates—there are many gates, each for a different purpose, in each city—they may be seen carrying messages. Their horses are beautiful, their riding superb.

Every man and boy big enough to carry a gun would like to ride into battle and fight.

In fact, so great is the military spirit here that farming gets along as best it can. A forked timber drawn by a camel is the only implement, taking the place of the plow. Once the crop is sown, it must fight its way along with the weeds until it is harvested, without outside assistance.

Everywhere are ruins of old but beautiful buildings. They stand for what the people themselves are doing as a race. One cannot view all this lapse from luxury without regret.

"The scourge of the Christians"—Mulai Hafid, Sultan of Morocco. If he calls a "Holy War," hordes of fanatical Mohammedans will go on the warpath.

A human monument to religious frenzy—Face to face with a native Riffian, type of men the Spanish army is fighting.

BROTHER OF CZOLGOSZ DODGES THE CROWD

Relative Of Murderer Of McKinley Seeks Refuge In Los Angeles Police Station—Has Nothing To Hide.

Los Angeles, Oct. 13—"Lock me up; I don't want to be shadowed all day," said a clean looking, well dressed laboring man, who walked into Los Angeles police headquarters alone yesterday. "What do you want to be locked up for?" asked the captain in charge. The man hesitated, glanced about to see that he was not overheard, and said, quietly: "My name is Czolgosz." It was the police captain's turn to hesitate, but he caught himself quickly. "Well, go over there and sit down," he said. And so it happened that the brother of the man who died for having robbed the nation of the life of its President voluntarily sat in a police station while President Taft was driven through the streets. Aside from his relationship to one whose name is mentioned only in shame, the man has nothing about his life which he need hide.

Dr. H. S. Bridges left last evening for Chatham where he will lecture this evening before the Teachers' Institute of Northumberland county. While there he will also pay a fraternal visit to the Masonic Lodge, returning on Saturday.

NICARAGUA IN GRIP OF GREAT REVOLUTION

Entire Country Side Aroused Over Political Ferment in South American Republic---Rebels Flock to Capital.

New Orleans, Oct. 14.—A special to the Times-Democrat from Bluefields, Nicaragua, by wireless to Colon, says:

"The revolution headed by General Juan J. Estrada against President Zelaya has aroused the entire country and seems to be sweeping the republic. Everywhere the people are reported to be flocking to the armies of the revolutionists

"From the interior comes news that the revolutionists have seized Rivas and also that Corinto, the seaport on the Pacific, has declared for the revolutionists and have overthrown the Government there.

"News from Greytown today is that there was some fighting there yesterday (Tuesday) before the city was taken by the revolutionists. Colonel Ugarte, at the head of a force of several hundred revolutionists, arrived at Greytown before the main body of the insurgents under General Chamorro Ectrada.

Col. Ugarte called upon the garrison to surrender, but was met with a volley. His men returned the fire and after a fight rushed the garrison and captured it and then took possession of the town, with no further disturbances.

"In the fighting there were some fatalities, several men being killed on either side and a number wounded.

"Upon the arrival at Greytown later in the evening of Tuesday of the main body under General Ectrada the entire force left for the interior to attack the fortified town of Castillo."

ONTARIO RIDDEN WITH WOLF PACKS

Farmers Flocks Suffering More Heavily Than Ever Brfore---Lack of Game Drives Animals From Woods.

Special to The Standard.

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 14. — Farmers flocks in the back townships of Pontiac County are suffering more heavily this year from wolves than for many years previous. The animals seem to have been driven from their homes in the woods because the farmers state, there is a lack of game for them to live upon. Sheep and calves are the most favored food for the wolves.

Joseph Gilpin, bailiff, of Otter Lake, near Shawville, was coming along one of the bush roads in Huddersfield, a few miles from Shawville, in his buggy a few nights ago, when a pack of wolves took up the trail and soon dashed out of the woods into the road. The brutes snapped at the horse several times and one caught the animal by the knee and almost caused it to fall. Gilpin had no gun and it was only through driving ferociously that he escaped from the savage animals.

IS HARLAND AND WOLF TO BUILD BIG DOCKS HERE

Ottawa Hears of Big Project--No Absolute Arrangements With Government Arrived At Yet.

Special to The Standard.

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—It is announced on unquestionable authority that Harland and Wolff, the big shipbuilders of Belfast, will construct two shipyards and dry docks in Canada, one at Levis, Que., and the other at St. John, N. B., capable of constructing and repairing warships of the largest British type. The firm will invest $7,000,000, and will employ 1000 men, many of them skilled British workmen. The necessity for two plants is occasioned by Canada having winter and summer ports.

Levis Preferred.

Levis is preferred to Montreal as being nearest tidewater, and yet well above the fortifications which in time of war will close the St. Lawrence, and St. John is chosen as being the terminus of the Transcontinental Railway lines. The firm will carry on a general shipbuilding business and will tender for the proposed warships.

Under the legislation of 1908 Harland and Wolff will be entitled to an aggregate annual subsidy of $90,000 for twenty years, assuming that each dry dock will cost not less than $1,500,000. It is stated, however, that the Government is prepared to give them further financial encouragement and legislation may be looked for at the next session providing subsidies for shipbuilding in Canada. There is already a Government dry dock at Levis, sixty feet wide and 600 feet long, but it is not large enough to accommodate the large steamers of the C. P. R. and of the White Star Dominion line. It is reported that the C. P. R. and other Canadian interests are associated with the Belfast firm, and in this connection it is significant that the C. P. R. has already secured a desirable site for a dry dock at Levis. Under the federal act the dry docks must be built at places to be approved by the Governor-in-Council, and it is said that the locations at Levis and St. John have been approved by the Government. The pending application to Parliament for a charter by the Dominion Dry Dock and Shipbuilding Company of Quebec is supposed to be the forerunner of a Canadian corporation financed and controlled by the Harland and Wolff Company.

LATER.

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 14.—There is nothing definite yet regarding Harland and Wolff's proposals for the erection of docks. While it is practically certain that the docks will be built at St. John, no absolute arrangements with the Government or with Canadian firms have been reached.

County Court Chambers.

Before Judge Forbes in County Court Chambers yesterday, final judgment in the following cases was signed: Canadian Drug Co. vs. Thos. J. McCarthy, for $38.67. Mr. C. F. Sanford; J. E. Wilson Co., Ltd. vs. Arthur G. Stevenson, 52.60. Weldon and McLean.

ON WITH THE PLAY

DAVID WARFIELD.

Only a few years ago Warfield was playing cheap roles in a Yiddish theatre when David Belasco found him. He made good in "The Auctioneer," then found his greatest vehicle in "The Music Master," which made him one of the best drawing cards on the stage. He brought out "The Grand Army Man," but the public refuses to let him play anything but "The Music Master."

Makes the Glassware Fairly Sparkle

Mirrors and glassware are hard to clean with ordinary soap. The oily matter often leaves streaks and spots that are hard to remove.

But with Taylor's Borax Soap the result is wonderful. The surface is left without a single streak—it glitters and sparkles as though it were diamond.

And your work is only half as hard. For this soap reduces rubbing to a minimum—it works almost like magic.

Taylor's Soap

Borax is the most powerful cleanser in the world. It does wonders that are almost unbelievable until you once see the results for yourself. When you spend an hour cleaning the bath room, the tub, the wash bowl and the mirrors, you have wasted just half an hour. You would have done less than half the rubbing and finished in half the time with Taylor's Borax Soap.

For this soap does more than any other soap you have ever known. It loosens every bit of dirt instantly, it destroys every possible germ and leaves everything both clean and sweet. Hard water often hardens the hands—it leaves them red and rough. But this delightful Borax soap softens the water and softens the hands—it leaves them whiter and daintier than ever before.

We use only the finest cocoanut oil in this soap. We go more than 12,000 miles to the isle of Ceylon just to be sure this oil is pure and fresh. Then we boil it doubly long and run thousands of gallons of pure water through it to remove every impurity. It is the cleanest and purest of soaps.

It requires twenty-one days to make a single cake. The labor of more than 200 persons is needed.

Yet this soap costs no more than the ordinary. We make millions and millions of cakes every year and are thus able to buy at the lowest of prices.
