THURSDAY MORNING, JULY 1, 1886.

To-Day.

It is nineteen years to-day since the first procession passed. We mean the Dominion Day procession. What has those two decades accomplished for us as a people? can fairly be asked. Has the Dominion been a success—has the Dominion been a failure? The World thinks it is viewed as a success by those who started out to make it one. We in Canada are blessed with a liberty that should be cherished and honored as our dearest possession. Talk about the freedom of the Republic to the south of us. With ours it may be comparable, but it is not superior. Oh, no. Canada can, and will, be made the happiest country on God's footstool. Since confederation we have had a share of internecine quarrels, but we were quite equal to the occasion, and proved to the monarchies of the old world and to the people of the new that we knew how to take care of ourselves. The World sincerely hopes that we will always be able to do so. We have not yet seen the glare of the incendiary torch, the flap of the red flag, or the deathly wake of the anarchists' bomb on our shores. God forbid that we ever should. In our country all men are equal. Our democracy is a true one.

A pronounced element in our destinies is the prominent part that the young men of the Dominion are taking in business and politics. They are now found in our great commercial houses, they crowd the ranks of journalism, compose the militia, and are beginning to lead the van in the political arena. Two hundred young men are attending a political convention to-day in Montreal.

Vive la Canada.

The Hamilton Spectator ought to be and is read in this and other offices throughout the land. But we miss the accustomed article on pumping machinery. If there is anything more than another that this journal hankers at or it is something else. We desire to know about your pumping machinery and we want to know it quick.

Perhaps the busy man who is pushing a big business on King, Yonge, or Queen street don't think that the best Dominion Day he ever spent was in catching sunfish with a pin and no bait on it. Perhaps he don't. He may not be built that way, but if he is not he was never reared in this glorious climate. He ought to be sworn when he votes.

The elections are ripe in Manitoba. It is about time for John Norquay to taste sour grapes, but the chances are that he will not do so as long as there is a green way wide open before him.

A Chicago despatch states that the anarchist who threw the first bomb in the Haymarket massacre is dead. His was not a case of premature demise. It would have been money in several people's pockets—including his own—if he had never been born.

Trial by jury is an affliction to which few men submit gracefully. Having had that kind of a trial the workingmen of Toronto have appealed.

It has not yet occurred to any of the party organs to make the able remark that the Conservatives of East Simcoe are suffering from an attack of Quinnsey.

There are so many elements of the pathetic in "Doc." Andrews' case that his plea of "blackmail" cannot be described as ridiculous, but it is certainly without justification. He could have more correctly said, in the words of Charles Dickens: "I am an old man, my Lord, a very old man." After all it was his years that spoke for him, and not altogether in vain. His has been a career fit for morbid analysis. Zola might make a great and dirty book out of it. He had many warnings and some narrow escapes, but he persisted until the end, and such an ending! Advanced in years, not without means, and with a legitimate business under his control, there was no reason why he should not have repaired his wrongful past. He preferred not to. He preferred to carry his pitcher to the well until it was broken. The pitchers of his patrons, wealthy or otherwise, have not yet been shattered, but most of them will go to the well once too often. Let the conscience which reads these lines think of that. Don't do it again, old fellow, don't do it again.

A cooper named Graham, who certainly cannot have been Graham bred, his name to the contrary notwithstanding, proposes to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel. We are awfully sorry—for the barrel.

That cable story about Parnell, the League funds, and the assassination of two of Ireland's best friends, does not fizz on this side of the water. It displays all the symptoms of a roorback. Parnell has appeared in many guises, from the role of a graduate of Oxford University and denouncer of "Papist rats," down to that of a Kilmainham jail bird, but when anybody asks us to contemplate him in the character of an accomplice to a crime ruinous of his own ambition that body makes us tired, and is cordially requested to go away.

Did you ever see the politician who never made a dollar out of politics, dear reader? No! Well, he is now in our midst. We would not have him there if we could help it, but he says he is willing to sleep any place. He has just come to town, you know. We propose to have him shipped.

Our friend the poet may rest assured that nothing is so rare to-day as a day in June.

The war of the boycott has been literally carried into Africa. The natives of Camaroon and Bonny have put it into use against the German and French colonists who, they think, have not treated them well. The result is that the colonists cannot buy even the necessities of life, for which they have always relied on the natives.

The Young Liberals propose that the fishery question shall be "settled by Canada alone." The idea is all right, though not happily expressed; but the one thing certain is that Canada desires the fishery question settled on its merits, with the intervention of Great Britain or without, as the case may be.

The Montreal Herald is "given to understand" that the Toronto Globe is "edited by a deacon." The Herald's understanding is all right. The Globe is edited by the only old and original deacon on the Canadian press. Attempts have been made by jealous journalists to invent other deacons, but all such attempts to infringe upon The World's invention have met with ignominious and deserved failure. There is but one Deacon in Canadian journalism, and we hold the patent, and will continue to hold it so long as the rights of exploirers are respected by the consensus of law and public opinion.

Men about town—and their name is legion—will promote their own interests by quitting when they are through. If you have anything to say to a business man fire it at him. He wants to get through, and, even if he be dyspeptic, palaver can't cure dyspepsia. If he be a dyspeptic and you fire it at him he will probably fire you out, but if you are looking for an advertisement you will not mind a little thing like that, but come again. An advertising agent always does. Unless he did so he would not be with us, as it were. If you have anything to say to a newspaper man, say it and go. We always do hanker to look upon the back hair of a man who is through. Demosthenes quit when he was through. This is one of the characteristics in which Demosthenes resembled The World.

The coroner's jury summoned to investigate the circumstances of the death of the late Thomas Broomhall have made several good suggestions. We often make good suggestions ourselves, but they are not acted upon with startling frequency. Upon the present occasion we supplement the suggestions of the jury by advising young men and women not to emulate the men of Gotham. The marvel is that so few meet an untimely death upon a bay to which so many swarm, without regard to their knowledge of boats or boating. Dominion Day is a good day to keep your eye on the possibility of just such accidents.

Lord Randolph Churchill and the editor of the Esteemed Mail appear to be two of a kind. That sort of kindness don't work, however. We are instructed that some other kind would be kinder—to the party of the second part.

Rosedale and Its Water Supply.

Editor World: I have been fairly overwhelmed with condolences upon the melancholy fact that my water supply in Rosedale is to be cut off. As I draw my ample supply of soft water from the clouds and have a very good well, I am personally independent of the city and have consistently opposed annexation, as being in my opinion against the interests of the resident land owners. I have never applied for, nor used city water and wish to correct the statement as regards myself. Looking at the very large items of expenditure to be voted for on Friday, it does appear strange that, whilst professing to be annexing Rosedale only at the request of the land owners, the city should be taking a step which will involve under any circumstances a heavy expenditure when by supplying water, they could collect a revenue out of the district, instead of incurring expenses. Personally the water question does not affect me.

The rise in the price of tin to £104 per ton, which is a higher point than has been touched since 1882, has caused a corresponding rise in the price of British mining stocks. Shares have in some cases nearly trebled in value since Jan. 1. The supply of metal from the East has decreased, as well as the British supply, while the consumption demand is as large as ever.
