SECOND ATTEMPT TO GET INTO CANADA PROVES SUCCESSFUL

John Cassidy of Glasgow and his family, who have arrived in Canada with the third Hebridean party of settlers, destined for Alberta. Cassidy's second attempt to get into Canada was more successful than his first. He came as a stowaway in September last year, on the Cassandra, and was handed off the ship to the tender mercies of Judge Choquette. The kind-hearted Judge was so impressed with Cassidy's sincerity that, although he deported him under the law, he promised to facilitate his speedy return to Canada. Father MacDonell in the meantime brought him with his Scottish and Irish settlers, and the Land Settlement Branch is placing him on a farm in Alberta.

LAWN TENNIS ENTHUSIASM

Points on Play: Observation and Practice the Road to Improvement.

If you are keen to reach the front ranks of lawn tennis players you must learn to make four strokes, the forehand and backhand drives, the service and the volley, in correct manner.

Unless your club is a very good one there are several points about the game you are not likely to learn there. Chief among these is that—in singles—you must, immediately you have hit the ball, run back to the middle of your base line. Don't wait for your opponent to make her return. Run at once for this central position. You then protect your whole court

Secure Advantages

Should your shot have brought you up near the service line, you may run to the middle of the net.

There is no need to stand at the extreme end of the base line when serving. Stand as near the middle as you fairly can. You then secure a great advantage when you go to meet your opponent's return.

Hit every ball right back to your opponent's base. In tournaments you will find balls that drop short are severely punished. The other player can do little while you keep her down at the back of the court.

Most first-class players have reached front rank because they took trouble to school themselves in concentration. You must watch the ball. Shots which go into the net are frequently caused by wrong footwork. Turn round so that your toes point to the sideline—never the net. Advance one foot in front of the other. This enables you to bend over the stroke and control it.

If you find you drive the ball out of court, you need to get the knack of turning the racket face over the ball as you strike. This not only keeps the ball in bounds; it adds that valuable asset "top spin".

Watch First-Class Players

Many of our championship winners were never coached. They learned from books and by watching first-class players at tournaments. At the club they strove to put what they had learned into practice, even if it meant losing a few games at first. That is the road to improvement.

1924 FISHING OUTPUT LIKELY TO BE RECORD

Present Rate of Catch is Greatest for Some Years—General Outlook is Much Better

After a period of extremely small profits the progress of the fishing industry in Canada so far this year indicates that 1924 will probably be a better year than any for some time. The value of the output for the first quarter showed an increase of 56 per cent. over the same period last year, and the improvement has been well maintained during later months. The continuation of the present rate of catch would bring the year's total up to the record of 1918, namely, $60,000,000, when prices were considerably higher than is the case at present. The increase has been contributed to by practically all varieties.

The greater proportion of Canada's fish catch is exported. The normal home consumption is only about 20 per cent. of the total. Last fiscal year our fish exports reached a value of $30,547,000, as against $27,557,000 during the previous year. Exports of canned salmon alone increased from $4,489,000 to $7,721,000. The total export figure was exceeded only during the war and post-war years, when the demand for Canadian fish abroad was quite large.

In view of unsatisfactory conditions in the fishing industry of late, even the relatively small improvement which has taken place is unusually welcome. With her spacious fishing grounds on the two coasts, as well as in the lakes and rivers, Canada is remarkably well adapted to produce many times the volume of fish now caught, and there is every opporcunity for a large and important fishing industry to develop in the Dominion. This is one of those Canadian industries which are exploited only in an extremely small way.

When the term of the negro preacher had expired, he arose and said: "Breddren, de time am heah fo' a relection ob yo' pastoh for anudder yeah. All dose faborin' me fo' yo' pastoh will please say 'Aye'."

The preacher had made himself rather unpopular and there was no response. "Ha", he said, "silence gibs consent. I'se yo' pastoh fo' annudder yeah."
