A well born man is always a mother's boy, and all great men have not been afraid to be called 'mother's boy.'

The mother who brings her children up in truthfulness and sobriety to usefulness, and who looked well to the ways of her household when the passing of time has left the frosts of winter in her hair, and the beauty of youth is fled, then is she worthy of all honor. To our mind, no nobler epitath to a woman's memory could be written, than that she has been a good wife and mother.

"The sanctity of the marriage bond must not be broken by divorce," says seedy sentiment, as matter though the ever-present specter of bruises, wounds, perhaps of a fearful death, may hang over the head of the victim, she should walk unswervingly by the side of the despisable brute whose brawny hand, nerved by rum or reasonless passion, may at any time strike down her frail form. The man who lays his hand upon woman, save in the way of kindness, deserves no companion, but eternal banishment from her very presence.

Cheerfulness! How sweet in infancy, how lovely in youth, how saintly in old age! There are a few noble creatures who are very presence carries sunshine with them wherever they go; a sunshine means pity for the poor, sympathy for the poor, sympathy for the suffering help for the unfortunate, and benignity toward all. How such a face enlivens every other face it meets, and carries into every company vivacity and joy and gladness! But the scowl and frown, begotten in a selfish heart, and manifesting itself in daily, almost hourly fretfulness, complaining, fault finding, angry criticisms spiteful comments, on the motives and actions of others, how they thin the cheek, shrivel the face, sour and sadden the countenance! No joy in the heart, nobility in the soul, no generosity in the nature; the whole character as cold as an iceberg, as hard as an Alpine rock, as arid as the waste of sahara! Reader, which of these countenances are you cultivating?

[illegible] success of the home rests on the wives. Therefore, first of all teach our girls how to be successful wives. Begin early to train their character. Teach them that jealousy is immorality and gossip a vice. Train them to keep the smallest promise sacredly and to speak of people as they would speak to them. Teach them to look for the best qualities in everyone they meet, and to cultivate their own beauty only [illegible] Train them to do small things well and delight in helping others, that sacrifice made for other's pleasure is a dream of soul development. Once given a firm foundation of character like this, which the poorest as well as the richest parents can give to their girls, and no matter what necessity arises they will be able to rise above it.

Tempers

Tempers are queer things anyway. We snap, and growl, and scold, and fume, and fret for no cause under the sun that we know of and when trouble really comes we smile and take it as unconcernedly as though it was the most common place affair. We will sulk for a week over a slight that was all in our imagination and grow all the madder because we know that the whole matter is an invention of our own. The fact is, when we feel good, a cyclone can't spoil our equanimity, but if we chance to be out of sorts and have the blue, we are going to get mad and stay mad and if we don't find any provocation we will make one. The man who gets the blues ---and who is there who doesn't get them?---is a most unfortunate creature. Ten minutes after the attack begins he has concluded that he is the most abused man on the face of the earth. Every person in the town is working against him---he knows it and it is no use to deny the fact. If the unfortunate man is married, he wreaks his disgust upon his wife, the baby and the cow.

The poor man imagines that $100,000 would make him a man without annoyance for the balance of his life, and the man with three or four millions suicides because of the loss of one million. Your misery is mostly in your mind. Remember that the picture appears very much according to the glass through which you see it, and yet the lines of the picture are fixed and the modifying power of the glass is limited as compared to your control over your emotions. Be circumstanced as you may, there will be enough ragged edges in your life to keep you in a perpetual fret and fume if you so will it. Within limited bounds it is not what you have, or lack, it is not what you are or would like to be, that makes you cheerful and a source of happiness to those who must be with you. It is the way you things; a power within yourself, almost independent af all external affairs and surroundings. There is no position and no station in life in which many men and women would not be thoroughly miserable.

Don't Marry for a Home.

Every natural girl longs for a home of her own. Long before she falls in love, as long as when she played with dolls and 'make believe' houses, furniture and household [illegible] has an irresistible fascination for her; and the older she grows the more keen she becomes her desire for a home shelter where in her will shall be law, [illegible] ordering is concerned.

It is this feeling for home building that makes [illegible] with so love in her heart, so [illegible] entirely to secure a home.

Of how little joy that home brings them, what mockery it is to call it a home at all, only their own lips could tell!

No girl is really driven to marry for a home, and the girl who does so is lacking woefully in womanly dignity and self respect.

A Graceful Introduction

It was Mr. Swan's first experience as chairman of the entertainment committee with the task of introducing the lecturer of the evening, and he was to use his words "a little flustered.

The hum of conversation which had filled the hall ceased as Mr. Swan's squeaky voice to the platform, and the groups of chairs dissolved and sank decorously in to benches.

"This lady and gentleman, is the evening to give a lecture on How to know [illegible] and [illegible] varying [illegible] over the audience, [illegible] the visitor.

"It's now quarter before eight, and I just ask if the gentleman who is address [illegible] to wait longer for the folks enough [illegible] a few minutes longer, or whether he'll begin right off, and he thought he would. I therefore now present to you Professor Greenlore."--The woman's Companion.

Vigorous Committee Co-Operating With Art. Clubs All Over.

On a few isolated occasions the people of St. John and New Brunswick have been favored with quite extensive displays of art works, and numerous valuable consignments have been brought to these parts. This gallery, to be situated in a large portion of the new building and joining the main structure, and upon the final arrangements were made a guarantee of over fifty magnificent paintings was secured from the Art Union of London, as well as assurances from connoisseurs in the large Canadian centres that over one hundred rare work would be forthcoming in addition. The Maritime Provinces will contribute many more pictures, plastic art works, bronze, rare art fabric, etc., as well as an exclusive connection of ceramics. Great Wheat Crop in the North West.

Ottawa, July 31—W. J. White, Canadian immigration inspector, in making a report to the immigration department regarding the crop situation of the prairie provinces, says:

'After an extended trip through the wheat fields, chiefly in central Saskatchewan, interviewing farmers and dealers, I am inclined to think that the total wheat crop for the three provinces will be 1,000,000 bushels. The cool weather is filling out the heads and the yield will then be materially increased. The cat crops requires rain, and hay in many parts is scarce. The wheat crops along the various railway lines is good, excepting in a portion of southern Manitoba and southern Saskatchewan.

AN OPINION
"What impressed the writer (in the Educational Review) was the admirable system that prevails in the management in every department of work; the kindly personality and tact; the genial sympathy in the relations between teacher and pupil and the interest which each one seemed to feel in the work of the day. An Education Under Such Conditions Is A Great Asset."
