W. H. Odell,

The Standard Bearer of East Middlesex Liberals

In the Coming Provincial General Elections.

Mr. Odell Accepts — An Enthusiastic Gathering—Election of Officers—Robt. Boston, M.P.

The Liberal Association of East Middlesex met on Saturday afternoon in the Liberal rooms on Dundas street and unanimously tendered the nomination for the Local House to Mr. W. H. Odell, Belmont. Mr. Odell was not present, being detained at home on pressing business. A telegram was sent to Belmont, notifying him of the choice of the convention. A reply was received in a short time stating that Mr. Odell cordially accepted the nomination. The news was heartily cheered. The hall was crowded as it was a week before and enthusiasm ran higher than ever.

The following nominations were made:

Nominee.	Mover.	Seconder.
Dr. Routledge	H. Wilkerson	M. Sadler
R. W. Jackson	D. B. Burch	Mr. McDougall
W. H. Odell	Jas. Anderson	W. Cousins
J. W. Rosser	J. B. Little	E. Grieves
J. H. Elliot	C. Trebilcock	J. Florence
J. D. Saunby	Mr. Griffiths	J. W. Rosser

Ald. E. Parnell was voted to the chair and Mr. Robt. Boston, M.P., sat beside him. The chairman read a letter from Mr. Thos. H. Purdom, who was called out of town. Mr. Purdom stated that no obstacle that he could overcome would prevent him from accepting the nomination so kindly offered to him. He found, however, that it was impossible for him to enter into the contest, but he would be only too pleased to assist the choice of the convention. In conclusion Mr. Purdom said: "I believe the Reformers of East Middlesex are much better organized now than when I entered into the contest. I believe they are more enthusiastic, and I believe that they can undoubtedly carry the riding if they are united."

Dr. Routledge declined for business reasons. Mr. R. W. Jackson left his name before the convention, while he advised the delegates to choose the strongest man and the one who would poll the biggest vote. While he would be proud to be the standard bearer of the party in East Middlesex, yet he would work just as hard for the candidate, whoever he was.

In the absence of Mr. Odell, Mr. James Anderson, who proposed him, spoke. He denied that Mr. Odell was a P. P. A., as some people had been saying. He had attended one meeting, but withdrew and would have nothing to do with the organization. Fair play to every creed and every nationality was Mr. Odell's motto he, could assure them. (Cheers.) Continuing, Mr. Anderson said it would be a calamity to the Province if Sir Oliver Mowat was defeated.

A voice—They are not going to do it.

Mr. Anderson, in closing, deplored the sectarian cry.

Mr. J. H. Rosser followed. "There is nothing," said he, "in political circles that would give me greater pleasure than that the Hon. Sir Oliver Mowat should be sustained at the coming election. (Hear, hear.) I cannot think that an intelligent Province such as Ontario is could for a moment be led astray by such clap-trap talk as we hear at the present time. I have too much confidence in the intelligence of Ontario; I have too much confidence in its integrity and in the good morals of Ontario to think that the electors could be led astray by any such talk as is going abroad. I am surprised that these stories, circulated by people of at least doubtful reputation and character, should be taken stock in at all or even repeated. However, this is one thing that will have to be met on the platform in the coming election. Although I withdraw my name from the convention I do not withdraw from the work. No matter who the choice of this great meeting falls upon, I am your humble servant. (Applause.)

Mr. J. H. Elliott said that when he took a prominent part in the proceedings of two weeks ago he had not the least conception that his name would come before the convention. The reason he wanted a man brought out was because of the principles that the party had upheld for so many years. He advised all to put down any sectarian talk and continue to support equal rights to all men. Mr. Elliot believed that every man should have ambition to serve his country, and he fearlessly submitted his name, hoping that the convention, in its wisdom, would choose the best man. The speaker thanked his mover and seconder before sitting down.

Mr. J. D. Saunby was not present, but it being understood that he would stand if chosen, his name went before the convention.

The ballot resulted in favor of Mr. Odell in the first poll. The choice was made unanimous amid cheers.

While awaiting Mr. Odell's reply Mr. James Anderson moved and Mr. John McDougall seconded the following resolution, which was carried with renewed enthusiasm. "That this meeting expresses its entire confidence in the Government of Sir Oliver Mowat, and also in the leader of the Dominion Opposition, the Hon. Wilfrid Laurier."

Mr. Robt. Boston, M.P., also addressed the meeting, and was accorded an enthusiastic reception. Sir Oliver Mowat was on his trial, he said. He reminded his hearers that the great little man had been like a father to Ontario and had laid the foundation of this splendid Province. He advised the young men especially to support the Premier, who was getting aged and would soon retire from political life. The older men knew Sir Oliver's record and would support him on that. Mr. Boston then urged unity, and spoke very favorably of the candidate-elect. He referred to that gentleman's honorable career in the county council and of his great popularity in the riding. He was a man who had no enemies and many friends. Mr. Boston closed a very practical and well applauded address with some pertinent remarks with reference to organization.

Mr. W. H. Jackson believed that the delegates had done their duty and selected the best man. He wished them the best of success and thanked the electors for all past favors, saying that he would work as hard for Mr. Odell as he would for himself.

Mr. J. H. Elliott was more than pleased that he was not a candidate, and said that he would work heart and hand to elect Mr. Odell.

Messrs. J. D. Clarke and Ald. Parnell also addressed the convention on invitation. They urged united work, and victory would be assured.

The election of officers was then proceeded with and resulted as follows: President, R. W. Jackson, London township; vice-presidents, James Anderson (Westminster), E. T. Shaw (Dorchester), Wentworth McGuffin (Nissouri), Alexander Grant (London township), Wm. Spence (London West); treasurer, Elisha Ironside, Ilderton; secretary, Ald. Parnell.

Mr. Odell's acceptance was then announced, and the meeting broke up with cheers for the candidate, Sir Oliver Mowat and the Queen.

A TERRIBLE ORDEAL.

Without Hands, Without Feet, Without Nose, But Not Without Courage.

MONTREAL, May 13.—Into the Windsor street station yesterday morning, from the "Soo" train, was carried, to the no small astonishment of passengers and others, a gentleman minus feet, hands and nose. He was young and robust, with rosy cheeks, and wore an air of repose and happiness. Accompanying him was a lady, who was most assiduous in attending to his comforts. The name of the gentleman is Mr. Arthur Lyon. He is a rancher from Manitoba. Last year Mr. Lyon had a tragic experience. He was caught in a blizzard, lost his way, and was so horribly frozen that his hands, feet and nose had to be amputated. His youth and health and vitality pulled him through this terrible ordeal, nor did he lose heart when he found himself reduced for life to a state of childish helplessness. He still attends to business, and is at this moment a wealthy man. The lady who accompanies him is his sister, who came out from England to bring him home, where, Mr. Lyon stated, he intends to procure artificial arms, hands, feet and nose, and return in two years to resume the ranching business. Many were the encomiums passed upon Mr. Lyon's fortitude in rallying from so frightful an experience, and finding still a comfort and happiness in life.

QUERIES ANSWERED.

WILL—In 1893 Mrs. B willed her farm to her children, subject to a small annuity to her husband. Can he claim nothing more? ANS.—No, unless she was married before 1872, in which event consult a lawyer.

MITCHELL—A died thirteen years ago leaving a husband and two sons, and a farm of 100 acres given her by her father—no will. When the sons are of age what will the husband's claim on the land be? ANS.—The whole for his life.

WATERFORD—A and B put a promissory note for $50 in a bank to be at the credit of A. The money was not all drawn out and the bank broke. Can A hold back the amount not drawn as payment against the note when due? ANS.—Yes, if the note is held by the bank or its liquidator or by anyone having notice of the facts.

LUCAN—I signed for a paper from the States for one year, after the time was up they sent on. I refused it and sent a postmaster's form but still they sent it. A short time ago they sent me a notice for two years' subscription. Am I liable for taking it out of the postoffice? Shall I return the notice or how shall I proceed? ANS.—Write them again that you refused to continue your subscription, and that you will not pay this claim, SARAWAK—The railway is building a branch line. B has the contract and let a portion to H and M, who relet a part to R, who has failed and is not able to pay the men. Who is to pay the men? Is the first contractor responsible? Can we collect our wages, and from which of the contractors? ANS.—The Mechanics' Lien Act does not apply to such contracts, so that you can only look to the contractor who employed you, unless you can garnishee any moneys coming to him from the prior contractor or contractors. Your wages to the extent of three months' arrears are a prior claim to general creditors on the estate of R. Your claims should be filed with his assignee. Consult a lawyer.

TUPPERVILLE.—Upon the facts stated by you the agent of the Farm Pupil Association is not liable, nor is his son, if either of them did send your baggage on to Wallaceburg, as they allege, which should be capable of proof by the railway receipt, which should be furnished by him to you in order that you may claim your baggage from the railway company. If the agent cannot prove that he forwarded the baggage, then both he and his son are liable to you for its value and such damages as you may have sustained. You had better ascertain whether he is financially responsible before suing and retain a solicitor to act for you. We cannot publish the names of parties to disputes when we have not investigated the facts in the public interests. Any statement of facts over your own signature would be considered and published if of public interest.

PERPLEXITY.—A's wife deserts him and goes with another man to the States. If she returns A will not allow her to live with him? What claim would she have on him? ANS.—None, and she cannot compel A to support her if she is willing to live with him unless he is also willing and receives her into his home again. 2. If A's wife and the man are living together can they be prosecuted, and to what extent? ANS.—The man is liable to a civil action for damages, which is a private remedy. If living together as man and wife he is also liable to a criminal prosecution. 3. A wishes to secure a divorce in some part of the States. Is a residence there necessary, and what would it cost to secure a divorce? ANS.—Residence is essential and the terms vary in different States. The cost depends upon the facts required to be proved. Write to a lawyer in the State in which you propose to reside.

INQUIRER.—If B has had ten years actual possession of the land on his side of the fence he can now hold it as against A, who can compel him to pay for or put up half the line fence by an award of the fence viewers. The fact that B was once willing to move the fence does not affect his legal rights. The question involved is not whether the fence has been up ten years, but whether the land on B's side had been actually occupied for ten years, and, therefore, the fact that B's lot was uncleared at the time the fence was built may be material in showing that B has not had possession adversely to A. The fence viewers cannot determine the title to the property, but may employ a land surveyor to describe the locality by metes and bounds; if proceedings are taken before then and the dispute is confined simply to the location of the fence, as in cases where the amount of land thereby involved is comparatively valueless, or of little importance. If A is reasonably satisfied that B has not had actual occupation for ten years his course would appear to be to move the fence to the proper line and then call upon B to pay for or build his half. Consult a lawyer.

FENCE.—1. A and B verbally agreed about 20 or 25 years ago to build a line fence between their farms, A building the fence between the west half, and B between the east half. A sold his farm to C who still owns it. B dies leaving the east half of his farm to D, and the west half to E. D claims all the line fence between the east half, and has given C notice that he is going to take away half of it in six months. Can he do so? ANS.—Yes, unless C refuses to pay the amount awarded by the fence-viewers, which must be fixed before the notice can be acted upon. 2. Should any of C's stock get on D's farm (before the removal of the fence) can D impound them, D having forbidden C to touch the fence? ANS.—Yes. 3.—E claims C cannot move half of the fence between the west half, as it has stood there ten years. Is that the law now? If not, what steps should C take to recover, as he certainly owns half of the line fence? ANS.—C owns the line fence on the west half and has the same rights as D to the fence on the east half. The possession of the fence has never been exclusively in either owner, and the law on ten years limitation does not apply.
