FINDS LONDON CALM DESPITE GREAT ISSUES

LLOYD GEORGE JUSTIFIED

Think Stand of Turks Supports Actions of Former Premier.

Special Cable to The Advertiser.

London, Nov. 8.—The new war cry from the Near East does not seem to have alarmed London much.

The mighty traffic rolls on, and the multitudes of people forever hurrying back and forth pay not the slightest attention to rumors from anywhere. It is said that Fethi Bey, who is to preside over the Turkish delegation to the Lucerne conference, came to London last August and spent three days in this city without being able to meet the prime minister or the foreign secretary.

He went away huffed, but he expected too much. He would have had some reason for complaint if he had spent three days hunting for hotel accommodation.

London is crowded. Everybody is here for the motor show, and conversations are of a thousand things apart from war rumors or even the elections.

Fethi Bey may feel grieved because he did not see the foreign secretary, but if he saw the human tide on London streets he saw enough to set him thinking that compared to such a center as this, the Near East looks strangely smaller, and the position of Britain more dominating.

The new move made by the Turks has had the effect of justifying in a measure the strong lead taken by Lloyd George in dealing with them. The resignation of his government misled the Turks in supposing that Britain would yield anything they might demand, but now, no matter how the election goes, the result so far as the Turks are concerned will be pretty much the same.

Curious articles have been appearing in some of the London newspapers, telling how Curtis and Philip Kerr of the Round Table Club were the founders of the idea of a group of equal British nations, which prevails today.

These articles are meant to have some sort of bearing on the elections, and those who write them are not challenged. But the Lionel Curtis and Philip Kerr, known in Canada, advocated nothing of the sort. They aimed to set up a centralized empire, with its head office in London. They gambled and they lost.

These curious articles which stray so far from the fact may be meant to suggest that Mr. Curtis and the Round Table are indispensable to the Duke of Devonshire in his new post, but he must know, from his Canadian experience, that Canada is best pleased when managed from outside.

will go to Lausanne, and that I shall have the pleasure of meeting him there.

"Our friendship with America is a tradition and the principal of British policy. We shall pay our debt to America."

Meantime Canada has been finding new outlets for her foreign trade. Mr. Fielding himself is now in Paris negotiating with the French government a new and probably wider trade treaty than now exists. He has also opened negotiations with Italy with a view to extended trade relations along similar lines, and Hon. J. A. Robb, minister of trade and commerce, is on his way to Australia to negotiate a treaty under which it is hoped to secure for Canadian products in the Australian market the benefit of the British preference, giving similar concessions to Australia in the Canadian market.

Had an Awful Cold and Cough

Was Confined to Bed

Some coughs and colds seem hard to shake off—stick right to you in spite of all you do to get rid of them. These are the kind that are dangerous—the kind that weaken the lungs so that the germs of consumption find a ready foothold.

Obstinate coughs and colds yield to the grateful soothing properties of

NORWAY PINE SYRUP

It soothes and heals the irritated lungs and bronchial tubes, cuts the phlegm, and aids nature clear away the morbid accumulations.

Mrs. Geo. D. Langdale, Barton, N. S., writes: "In the year of 1920 I was taken with an awful cold and cough, and was confined to my bed for some time. I thought I was going into consumption. I commenced to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and found it to be an excellent remedy. I can highly recommend it to every sufferer from coughs and colds."

REPORTS HAVE IT ANDREW GUMP WINNING BY ONE NECK

WOULD MEAN LANDSLIDE.

BY JOHN T. WALLACE AND H. C. PLASS.

WHILE the tide of battle ebbed and flowed in Andy Gump's sensational race for Congress on the Independent ticket, 100 per cent for the people, and wearing no man's collar, Gump feverishly watched the returns, all night long, in his specially reserved headquarters, the parlor floor of the Hotel Desdemona.

Impervious to the thrusts of his political foes as is a hairless Mexican terrier to a Michigan winter, Gump's only comment, when things looked darkest was "O Min! Pack up little Chester, and the household things. We're going up Salt Creek."

As the battle of ballots swung to the Gump column, Candidate Gump remarked: "It is a great day for the People," and little crinkles of satisfaction were seen around his eyes.

But the old line parties were battling hard for their lives and during most of the early part of the night the race was nip and tuck. At this writing, Gump is 14 votes behind the leader. Fifteen minutes ago he was 36 to the good. He was just seen to slip a hand deftly under the tails of his Prince Albert coat and then he retired to the executive office.

His campaign manager assured a nervous woman that Mr. Gump was not discouraged, and carried no weapons, adding that the strain had been terrific, and Mr. Gump probably wanted to take a look at himself in a hip pocket mirror.

With the close of the polls Candidate Gump left his campaign headquarters for home. "I will receive the returns in the bosom of my family," he announced as he mounted the steps of his residence. "Oh, Min!"

Andy Gump has just departed hurriedly from home for his headquarters, having received word from his campaign manager that the election boards in some of the river precincts are counting him out. He showed great excitement, but refused to talk to reporters.

After reaching his headquarters and listening to his manager's report of crooked counting in certain precincts, Mr. Gump said: "I care naught for my own political fortunes, but the sanctity of the ballot box, the palladium of American liberties, must be preserved at all hazards. I would just as sternly demand that a crook who stole a vote for me go to jail as one who stole from me."

Candidate Gump has just been in telephonic communication with the chief of police. He demanded that the chief immediately send officers to the polling places where tampering with the count is said to be in progress. The chief listened attentively to what Mr. Gump had to say and promised to investigate the matter within the next few days.

The Widow Zander has arrived at Gump headquarters. She was cheered loudly by the crowd gathered in the street as she alighted from her car. An intoxicated individual, however, caused the widow to blush by shouting: "How's Uncle Bim?"

Little Chester just called up headquarters: "Is my papa elected?" he inquired. Mr. Gump went to the 'phone. "Go to bed now, Chester," he said. "You will never grow into a great man like your father unless you get plenty of sleep while you are young."

The first precinct to report gives: Andrew Gump, Independent, 102; the Republican candidate, 103; the Democratic candidate, 101. Mr. Gump looked serious as he scanned these returns. Then he retired to an inside room, took a flat object from his hip pocket and closed the door.

Shortly after the polls closed, Andy Gump, Independent candidate for Congress, 100 per cent for the people, cabled to Uncle Bim Gump in Australia: "The battle is over. I stand at the parting of the ways. One leads to the capital, the other to the poorhouse."

His friends and admirers pointed out that their candidate had always been for preparedness.

Gump's campaign manager, after a survey of the first returns that trickled in, announced: "Indications are that Gump wins by a neck."

Those in the room glanced at the candidate's neck and broke into wild cheering.

"A landslide for our candidate!" they shouted.

Early returns from the silk stocking district along the Boulevard indicated that Gump had been snowed under there. Candidate Gump's only comment was: "Oh, Min!"

Arrival of returns from the Widow Zander's precinct caused a stir in Gump's headquarters. The caller read: "Republican, 44; Democratic, 41; Gump, Independent, 0." Gump leaped on the table.

"The double-crossing, two-faced hussy; not even her own vote," shouted Gump. Just then the caller yelled, "Hey! A mistake in transmission—Gump gets 100; Democratic, 41; Republican, 44."

"I always said," remarked Candidate Gump, "that Henrieta Zander was one of the finest women in the world. I knew she would deliver her precinct strong."

Mr. Gump has just received the following cablegram from Australia: "Hope you are winning. Kindly take $100 from remains of your campaign fund and purchase some suitable gift for Mrs. Zander. Will wire bank draft to reimburse you. (Signed) Uncle Bim." Immediately after reading the cablegram, Candidate Gump was seen in deep conversation with his campaign manager. The manager was overheard to say: "That's all there is; there isn't any more."

"It seems to be nip and tuck," Andy Gump's campaign manager remarked to him as the returns began to filter in. "That being the case," the candidate responded, "we might as well have a little nip ourselves." They retired to the rear room and closed the door.

SEE DEMOCRAT VICTORY RESULT OF HIGH TARIFF

Ottawa Follows Outcome of U. S. Elections With Keen Interest.

AID TRADE RELATIONS

Duties Forced Canada To Seek Outlets for Commercial Enterprises.

Ottawa, Nov. 8.—(By the Canadian Press)—In no capital outside the United States, perhaps, will the results of the congressional elections be followed with keener interest than in Ottawa. The Democratic victories of yesterday, although, so far as announced, they are insufficient to secure a majority in the new House of Representatives, are interpreted as indication that recent high tariff legislation at Washington has not been favorably received by the people of the United States. And it is the possible effect of the congressional elections on trade relations between Canada and the United States that Canada is most interested.

The passing of the Fordney tariff bill,, followed by adoption of a permanent tariff, seriously affected certain classes of Canadian exports, particularly agricultural products, to the United States. With a view to improvement in the situation,, Hon. W. S. Fielding, minister of finance, went to Washington in March, and had discussions with President Harding and leading congressmen touching on reciprocity. But nothing came of the negotiations.

Speaking in the House of Commons later, Fielding intimated that for the time being Canada proposed to "hold her hand," and to "await the turn of events at Washington." The government would be open at all times to friendly negotiations. For the present Canada was prepared to make tariff reductions which she was not prepared to extend to the United States.

URGES FARMERS INTO CO-OPERATION

markets of over two thousand miles, mostly of desert, and the necessity for picking fruits green to ship.

The farmers got tired of throwing their wives out of bed to work at four o'clock in the morning.

"They were desperate. Out of their extremity was evolved the most proved thing in the world, co-operative marketing for agricultural products, which eliminates dumping of goods and starts merchandizing."

The speaker summed up as follows the results in five years in communities working on the co-operative basis, conditions that prevailed all over the state: "The farmer had steady, constant earning power. He didn't need to worry over bumper crop and top price years. The value of the land increased, as it always does where the land has steady earning value.

Insure Lives.

"(2) Reports of insurance companies showed that five times as many farmers were insuring their lives than in any of the other states of the Union or in Canada, not because they loved their wives and children more, but because they could be assured of income each year with which to pay the premiums.

(3) Co-operative marketing proved to be a community builder of the most substantial type.

(4) Children and women were not seen working in the field any more, with the exception of Japanese and Chinese. The children were at school, at play, or at the libraries, where they should be. The farm homes had running water. If they had hydro out there it wouldn't be a question of "being tied up" with it. They would seize on it as a good investment. The farms out there that lacked electric power installed Delco lights.

(5) From 1912 on California has had the best system of roads in the United States, rural, not city.

Leads in Education.

(6) California in the past seven years has led the United States in its educational system, with the best rural schools and highest paid teachers, the best rural churches and highest paid preachers. Libraries have been established everywhere, and where the community is too small to support an institution the advantages are enjoyed of traveling libraries on wheels.

Co-operative marketing started out to get money. When the farmers got the money, they used it to build up the things that let in the light. They used it for building up higher standards of living, for giving the cleaner and sweeter things of life to the children. California has proved that life on the farm can be just as comfortable, sweet and cultural as life in the city.

As a further illustration of the practicability of co-operative marketing of farm products, Denmark was cited as one which had tried out the system for two generations. As a result Denmark has the smallest tenantry of any country in Europe. Denmark is able to command a premium of 2 to 7 cents a pound on dairy and other products in the British market over those sent from Canada.

Outlines System.

The six steps essential for co-operative marketing were thus enumerated by Mr. Sapiro:

1. Grading and standardization, branding, standing behind the brand with quality. "There isn't any finer cheese than that made in Ontario," unwieldy-sized Canadian cheeses, wondered since coming here if you are ashamed of it. I cannot ever remember seeing branded cheese, or even cheese bearing the sentimental maple leaf."

2. Attending to packages, putting up commodities in parcels in which it will be most conveniently handled by the housewife. In this connection attention was drawn to the convenient-sized two-pound packages of California prunes for households, or five pounds for boarding houses. Amusing criticism was made of the unwieldly-sized Canadian cheeses, which present the problem of waste, and thus militate against the sale of cheese.

(3) Extending markets by time, place and intensive use.

Time Important.

The importance of extending market by the time method was pointed out by using cheese as an illustration. With the flood tide of production occurring in June and the early part of July, Mr. Sapiro pointed out that by storing the cheese through co-operative methods, the farmers might keep the price stable above the loss mark, and themselves reap the profits during the year, as the demand by the British consumer is practically constant, even if low tide of production occurs in November.

"Why let the dealers, who are clever enough to understand merchandizing instead of dumping, reap the benefit?" was the question asked.

In the fourth place he named as an important step in merchandising instead of dumping, "getting people to use the products all the time, to convert luxuries into staples."

"Raisins at one time were used only for Christmas or New Year's," commented Mr. Sapiro. "Now people eat raisins all the year round. Four hundred million of those little 5-cent packages of raisins were shipped out of California last year, and this year we are shipping 600,000,000 packages to supply the trade."

Controlling the flow of supplies was the fifth essential for merchandizing goods.

The distinction made between this and speculation was that the speculator considers his own pocket, the co-operative marketer the consumer.

The last point emphasized was fixing the price according to the supply at the place of consumption and not according to the supply at the place of production.

Co-operative marketing, Mr. Sapiro declared again and again in his address, cannot be achieved through any cheese board or small group, but by a commodity co-operative company, such as looks after the marketing of twenty-two farm products for the state of California, from "strawberries to baled alfalfa."

"Obstacles in the way of such a movement in Ontario," he declared, "were to be found in the inertia, stolidity and suspicion of the men on the trains. They are always ready to tell you what some buyer who has his hands in their pockets has to say on the subject," he said, rather than to take the word of the men who can lead them to the light."

Mrs. Sutherland Ross of Embro, led a discussion on "Women in Agriculture," expressing her view that in farming, husband and wife can be more truly partners than in any other calling.

Discover Belleville To Be Source of Liquor Supply For Hamilton

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 8.—Belleville is the source of some of the illicit liquor coming into Hamilton, according to the discovery made by the officers of the license department on Nov. 4, when they raided the restaurant run by David Little at 472 Barton street east. Inspectors Connor and Bleakeley seized a large bottle of whiskey and a six-ounce bottle. When Dave pleaded guilty in police court this morning he was given the minimum sentence on a second offense—two months in jail and a fine of $200, or an additional three months. Then Inspector Connor requested that the provisions of the act be applied to compel Little to divulge the source of his supply.

"Your worship," said Mr. Connor, holding up a bottle, "this whiskey left Belleville this year, and we would like to know how Little and others in Hamilton secure it, or where their source of supply is."

Magistrate Jelfs called Mr. Connor's attention to the fact that as Little was already in for a jail term, the threat of three months if he failed to tell would hardly have much effect on him, but he consented to have Little placed in the box.

"Where did you get this whiskey from, Mr. Little?" queried Mr. Connor.

"I got it from a man who brought it from Buffalo. I don't know his name or address," Little replied.

AWARD VICTORY TO DEMOCRATS

crat; Vermont, Redfield Proctor, Republican; Wisconsin, John Blaine, Republican; Wyoming, John W. Hay, Republican.

SHOWS REVERSAL.

New York, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Swinging back with a tremendous reversal to the trend of 1921, the political pendulum has carried the Democratic party into a commanding position in state and national affairs, results of Tuesday's election showed.

Men who stood close, personally and politically, to President Harding and his administration, and who, as members of congress actively helped make effective the Harding policies, were swept from their political pedestals and Democrats took their places.

While the incomplete character of the figures early today make it impossible to state exactly how the next house and senate will stand, it was apparent that the Republican control of the house will be retained by a slender margin, if at all, and may be lost entirely.

The Republicans now have a house majority of 163. That the Democrats have reduced Republican control of the senate from 24 to 16 or 17.

Exceeds Forecasts.

The victory exceeded the optimistic forecasts of Democratic party chieftains, who were frankly amazed at the extent of the popular revolt, as the returns came in. Not only were Democratic candidates for house and senate successful, but many new Democratic governors were chosen, together with Democratic tickets.

Possibility still existed early today that in some cases where the congressional and gubernatorial contests were close, Democratic gains might be scaled down somewhat, but on the basis of settled contests, the Democrats today had registered remarkable gains.

The outstanding feature of the off year upset included a tremendous Democratic victory in New York State, where A. L. Smith, Democratic candidate for governor; Royal S. Copeland for United States senator, and the entire Democratic state ticket, with the exception of a majority of state assemblymen, were elected.

The closest election in many years took place in Massachusetts, where Senator Lodge of the senate, Republican leader and one of the moving spirits of the Harding administration, was fighting for his political life against Colonel Wm. A. Gaston, Democrat.

Feel Defeat Keenly.

Defeat in New Jersey of Senator Jos. Frelinghuysen, confidante and intimate friend of President Harding, by Governor Edward I. Edwards, was most keenly felt of all by the administration, while the loss of Ohio, where Vic Donahey, Democrat, appeared to have beaten Carmi Thompson, Harding's choice for governor, was also keenly felt.

The Democrats made a strong bid for the governorship of Kansas, won a senatorship in Indiana, the governorships of Nebraska, Arizona, Oregon and Oklahoma.

All over the nation they cut down the huge Republican majorities of two years ago, and in States where they did not score overwhelming victories restored the normal balance between the parties as it existed before the Harding landslide, two years ago.

Gain Senate Seats.

The Democrats appeared definitely to have gained senate seats from these states: New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Indiana, West Virginia. They lost one in Nebraska. Seats now held by Democrats were in doubt in Ohio and Wyoming.

Republican senatorial seats in doubt were Massachusetts and Washington.

In the house, Democrats won back everything they lost two years ago in the south and scored heavy gains in normally Republican territory.

Scattering, the incomplete returns indicated the following Democratic gains: New York, 14 seats; Pennsylvania, 7; Ohio, 8; Illinois, 6; New Jersey, 6; Tennessee, 3; Virginia, 1; Kentucky, 3; Indiana, 5; West Virginia, 3; Washington, 1; Oklahoma, 4; Kansas, 3; Iowa, 1; Nebraska, 4; Maryland, 1; Massachusetts, 1; Michigan, 1; Minnesota, 1; Missouri, 11.

SWEEP NEW JERSEY.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 8.—Democrats appeared to have gained six New Jersey seats in the house of representatives, the Democratic sweep in this state carrying seven congressional candidates into office.

Governor Edwards has been elected senator over Jos. Frelinghuysen, friend of President Harding, and Geo S. Sisler, Democrat, has been chosen governor over William N. Runyon, Republican, in 354 districts out of 2,164. Edwards had 224,993 and Frelinghuysen 180,979. In 1,050 districts Sisler was 19,120 in the lead.

SURPRISE IN MICHIGAN.

Detroit, Nov. 8.—With but 641 precincts of the 2,906 of the state missing this morning, former Governor W. N. Ferris, Democrat, apparently had been elected to the United States senate over Senator Charles E. Townsend, Republican. Ferris steadily was increasing his lead as additional returns were received from Wayne County (Detroit).

The vote stood: Ferris, 235,525; Townsend, 220,450.

The missing precincts are located in Detroit and in scattered counties throughout the state. Many of the latter are sparsely settled agricultural districts.

The last time a Democratic senator was elected from Michigan was in 1852. The election yesterday closed one of the most bitterly fought campaigns in Michigan history, with interest centered chiefly in the race for the senatorship.

Ferris assailed Senator Townsend during the campaign because he supported Senator Truman H. Newberry, Republican, of Michigan, while the latter was under fire in the senate in connection with alleged excessive campaign expenditures.

Mr. Ferris also declared himself opposed to the tariff act and the Esch-Cummins railroad act.

Governor Alex. J. Groesbeck and the remainder of the Republican state ticket were assured of re-election by large majorities today.

SENATOR LODGE ELECTED.

Boston, Nov. 8.—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge was re-elected over Wm. A. Gaston, Democrat, yesterday by a plurality of 1,945. The vote of the state complete was:

Gaston, 414,730; Lodge, 416,675. A recount of the vote for senator undoubtedly will be asked by Col. Gaston, some of his associates said. The colonel himself had not awakened until some time after the complete returns were in.

Governor Channing H. Cox, Republican, won re-election over John F. Fitzgerald by a margin of 56,045. The vote of the state complete was: Cox, 468,277; Fitzgerald, 412,232.

FERRIS ELECTED.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 8. — Former Governor Woodbridge N. Ferris, Democrat, was elected to the United States Senate over Senator Charles E. Townsend.

REDUCE LEAD IN SENATE.

New York, Nov. 8.—Returns today supplementing those of last night showed that Republican senate seats from Indiana, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Michigan and West Virginia apparently had been captured by the Democrats and that the Republicans had captured senate seats held by Democrats from Nebraska and Ohio.

In Delaware, Montana and Minnesota the results still were too close to be counted in either column.

These returns, so far, would reduce the Republican majority in the senate from 24 to 16, with prospects of a further reduction.

HAWAII GOES DEMOCRAT.

Honolulu, Nov. 8.—Election of W. P. Jarrett as the first Democratic delegate sent to congress from territory of Hawaii, was conceded unofficially by Republican headquarters last night. Jarrett's lead over John Wise, Republican, was 2,682, with only a few scattered returns missing.

CALIFORNIA VOTES WET.

San Francisco, Nov. 8.—Defeat of the state prohibition enforcement act in California was indicated by returns from 465 precincts early today. The vote stood: For, 6,413; against, 11,249.

MAJORITY UNPRECEDENTED.

New York, Nov. 7.—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith, rolling up the greatest plurality New York City has ever given any candidate in any election, today was swept back into the gubernatorial chair from which he had been ejected in 1920 by Governor Nathan L. Miller.

Republicans not only admitted the defeat of Mr. Miller, but conceded that William H. Calder had lost his seat in the senate to Royal S. Copeland, health commissioner of New York City, formerly mayor of Ann Arbor, Mich., and until today an untested factor in New York politics.

With the success of their ticket leaders, Democrats were claiming gains in congress and the legislature, but the Republicans maintained stoutly that their majorities in the senate and assembly had been little impaired.

RETURNS UNCERTAIN.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 8.—Inability to get rural returns, due to bad roads in North Dakota, has left in doubt the senatorial contest between Lynn Frazier, Republican, non-partisan and recalled governor, and J. F. T. O'Connor, Democrat. Returns from 300 precincts, almost all urban, gave O'Connor 30,818, as compared with 18,686 for Frazier, but it is considered certain that county returns will cut this down materially, if not wipe it out.

REPUBLICANS LEAD IN N. Y.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Republicans will retain control of the next legislature by the slenderest of margins, according to practically complete but unofficial figures received by legislature officers at the state capital today.

According to these figures the Republicans will have 28 members in the senate, a majority of 1, and 80 or 82 members in the assembly, a majority of four or five.

The Democratic landslide eliminated all Socialists this year for the first in five years. In the Senate this represents a gain of fourteen for the Democrats. The previous makeup was: 39 Republicans, 11 Democrats, and 1 Socialist. In the assembly the political complexion was 96 Republicans, 52 Democrats and 1 Socialist.

HOUGHTON

Special to The Advertiser.

HOUGHTON, Nov. 8.—Mr. and Mrs. John Hazell of Kinglake were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Boughner.

Webber Williams of Fairground has returned to Toronto.

Mrs. Joseph Crawford and daughter of Maybille, N. Y., are visiting Mrs. James Crawford.

Delmer Misener left Clear Creek last week to spend the winter in St. Thomas.

Mrs. Arthur Ravin of Cullus has returned home after spending a few weeks with her mother in Laporte, Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Pattison were Sunday guests of Charles Foster and wife at Erieview.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Aspden and family of Woodstock were recent guests of Lewis Finch and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Willis spent Sunday with Harry Mitchener and wife near Port Rowan.

Mr. and Mrs. James Crawford and Miss Myrtle Crawford were Sunday guests of Mr. Hugh Crawford at Clear Creek.

The U. F. O. Club of Fairground are packing goods this week for the fire sufferers.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Marshall and son Stewart and family motored to St. Thomas on Sunday and spent the day with A. R. Willis and wife.

A pretty autumn wedding took place on Saturday, Oct. 28, when Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Campbell of Clear Creek, became the bride of Vernon Pegg, also of Clear Creek. Rev. Mr. Dale of Delhi was the officiating clergyman. After the ceremony the young couple left for Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Teeple and daughter Margery, and Owen Teeple of Peck, Mich., who have been on an extended trip to the eastern states, were recent guests of the latter's sister-in-law, Mrs. Charles Marshall.

Thomas Hollywood, an aged resident of Concession 1, Houghton, passed away at his home on Sunday. The funeral took place on Tuesday. Services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Howey of Fairground. Interment was made at Kinglake. Deceased leaves a widow, who has the sympathy of many friends.

The electric railway through this section from Port Rowan to St. Thomas, via Port Rowan, is still a live issue. William Frayer of St. Williams gave a talk on the electric road when the Houghton council met on Saturday, which was very much appreciated. A meeting was called at Fairground and Walsingham Center to discuss the electrification of the South Norfolk Railway.

REDUCE YOUR FAT WITHOUT DIETING

Years ago the formula for fat reduction was "diet"—"exercise." Today it is "Take Marmola Prescription Tablets." Friends tell friends—these friends tell others. They eat substantial food, live as they like, and still reduce steadily and easily without going through long sieges of tiresome exercise and starvation diet. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists the world over at one dollar for a case, or if you prefer you can order direct from the Marmola Co., 4612 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.

Miller's WORM Powders
Contain No Narcotics
When your child is restless, peevish, sleepless, or when convulsions threaten, it indicates the ravages of worms and that the little one's strength is being sapped and undermined. Miller's Worm Powders get promptly at the root of the trouble and restore the digestive organs to a healthy condition. Sold by all druggists.
