AT OSGOODE HALL.

A Suit Over a Will—A Tangled-Up Property Case—Second Division of the Court of Appeal.

Judgment was reserved to the Court of Appeal in Sample v. McLaughlin. The action was for the construction of a will. Judgment was entered by consent. Two defendants now appeal from the judgment of Justice Rose, refusing to set aside, at their instance, all proceedings in the action, on the ground that the solicitor who entered an appearance in the action, and made what he alleged was a favorable settlement, had no authority to act for them.

A TANGLED-UP CASE.

Small v. Thompson, before the same court, was not concluded. The defendant, Mary Callendar Thompson, appeals from the judgment of Chief Justice Armour, directing her to pay out of her separate estate $4600, the amount due under a mortgage made by the plaintiff. After the plaintiff made the mortgage, she sold her equity in the land, subject to the mortgage, to Sinclair, who covenanted to pay. Sinclair sold to defendant, the conveyance containing a covenant to pay the mortgage. Sinclair then assigned the covenant to plaintiff. The defendant, who is the wife of the Hon. John Hoch Thompson, alleges that the property was really purchased by the Consul of Liberia and Hawaii, and, as innumerable instances in Toronto, the conveyance was taken in the wife's name, and that she was not aware of the conveyance and certainly not of the covenant, and is in no respect liable.

GARTERS AND SUSPENDERS,

The Historic Girdle Gives Way to the Harness.

The suspender is gaining the day over the garter, and is indeed much more worn by the really smart woman than the round garter. The secret of which is that she has learned to make it serve a two-fold purpose. The old way of wearing these suspenders fastened to the sides of the corset has a tendency not only to push the corset out in front, but what is much worse to force the abdomen forward. But the clever woman has hit upon a trick worth two of that; one so simple that it seems strange she should have been so long finding it out. She has discovered that one strap holds up the stocking exactly as well as two and this she wears fastened to the front of her corset, just back of the steel, the effect of which is to press the abdomen back. Broad bands of elastic with strong fastenings at either end come ready to be worn in this way; but there is a scheme even better than that which any woman can make for herself. Take a rather wide piece of silk elastic and incase it in two pieces of ribbon stitched together and of the length of the elastic when stretched to its utmost limit. Stitch one end of this to the corset just back of the steel. In the other end work two strong eyelets, or, better still, have two corset eyelets clamped in through which to pass a yard of ribbon. Then sew a loop of wash ribbon attached to the elastic and tie in a dainty bow.

This is exceedingly pretty in effect, holds the stocking absolutely secure, and keeps an obtrusive abdomen in place. If it needs anything more to recommend it, let it be said that such an arrangement has just been put upon a corset the exact counterpart of the $200 one worn by the Duchess of Marlborough at her wedding. Of course, the eyelets in this case were of gold, as were the eyelets and hooks of the corset; but this is fortunately not absolutely necessary to the perfect security of the stocking.

If the round garter is tight enough to hold up the stocking without fold or wrinkle it is too tight to allow the blood to circulate unimpeded, and this stricture is apt to bring varicose veins and kindred ills. Where one is afraid to trust herself entirely to the security of the suspender, it is a very good plan to wear also a round garter tight enough to hold up the stocking in case of accident, but not sufficiently so to affect the circulation.

NIAGARA FALLS POWER.

Mr. W. T. Jennings Argues Against an Extension of Time for the Cataract Construction and Power Co.

Toronto Globe, Jan. 21.

As one having the interest and advancement of the whole of Canada at heart, but in this instance more particularly that of the Province of Ontario, I am persuaded to seek the use of your columns to draw the attention of our legislators to the fact that it is high time for them to waken up and see that our people at once obtain the advantage of one of nature's greatest gifts to us by the immediate development of the immense power to be had at Niagara Falls, and at other points on the Niagara River, all now lying practically dormant, so far as Canada is concerned, apparently because the Niagara Falls Park Commission, a body subordinate to the Ontario Government, and no doubt acting under its instructions, has, in its wisdom (?) seen fit to sell to an American Company the privilege of utilizing this grand power, and, having made the sale, they seemingly rest content with the receipt of the stipulated annual rental money, which I understand is to be used for the payment of debts incurred on their present park account and in the purchase and improvement of other parks along our Niagara frontier, and perhaps in the wilds of the Algonquin district.

Now, sir, while I admit that it is good for us to have convenient and commodious breathing spots, where fresh, pure air and contentment are to be had among a profusion of beautiful flowers and shrubbery, and surrounded by grand scenery, I cannot forget that the practical side of the question must also be considered, and that before we can enjoy these beautiful groves and their grand surroundings we must first obtain the means to enable us to do so. Therefore, to the purpose. I may put the question, Is pleasure to be placed before business? If so, the park commissioners are right in accepting the rental money, preserving the natural landscape and providing us with a pleasure ground. But, on the contrary, if we are to be a great people, self-contained and able to successfully cope with not only immediate neighbors, but with the whole world, in the production of manufactured articles, why in the name of business advancement is the Cataract Construction and Power Co. not compelled to at once go on with its undertaking, and this year furnish our people with hydraulic and electrical power for local and distant use, that all cities, towns and works situated within the range of economical electrical power transmission may derive advantages therefrom at a minimum cost?

With such a power ready, undoubtedly new hives of industry would be established, and pleasant towns built up in the vicinity (an agreeable and profitable change from the present quiet, pastoral aspect of the countryside); and in support of this, sir, it is only necessary to point to the American side of the river, where only a few years since even the farm lands then existing were not as well cultivated as our own, but now, owing to the advantage of power works, such as we desire, these once unproductive acres are well covered with an ever-increasing number of factories and dwellings for those engaged in connection with them.

Sir, let the members of the Government take a trip to the top of the Niagara Falls Tower, and therefrom learn an object lesson. What will they see on the Canadian side? A park, some farmhouses and cattle; on the American side, many factories in operation, more in course of construction and a considerable area covered with comfortable dwellings.

Our Ministers might carry the comparison still further, and cast their eyes along our frontier line from Sault Ste. Marie to Montreal, and at Quebec, and they will observe that at almost every available point, excepting on the Niagara River (the best site of all for the production of cheap power), extensive and costly works are now in process of construction, or are already completed and in use.

Sir, it is, in my humble opinion, a reflection on the business capacity of our financial men, manufacturers and citizens generally, that our share of the great power to be derived from the Niagara should be held subservient to an American company, who doubtless see the advantage of keeping back our opportunities to enhance the value of their own, and the general advancement of industries in their country; and, feeling this to be the case, sir, I beg to express the hope that the Hon. Mr. Hardy and his colleagues will give this subject their immediate and serious consideration, with the determination that Canadians be at once afforded the much-needed power, and that, should the Cataract Construction and Power Company apply for an extension of time beyond this year (which is the date mentioned) for the development of power as required by their agreement, it be emphatically declined, and an opportunity afforded other companies, which, I am told, are ready to accept this important undertaking in a live, business-like manner, and carry it through to completion.

Thanking you, sir, for the space, I remain. W. T. Jennings,

TRADE IN CANADA.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Daily Bulletin says: Montreal trade as a whole does not as yet show any very appreciable improvement. From all parts of the district, and as far east as Quebec reports are received as to the severe handicap on country trade occasioned by the almost total absence of snow, a state of affairs very unusual at this season. Lumbering operations are impeded from the same cause, and the effect on general collections can readily be imagined. Serious damage to meadows is likely to ensue, the grass roots being unprotected during the late heavy frost, and the city markets have suffered to some extent from the difficulty farmers have in getting their produce to town. The shoe factories are all busy on goods for spring delivery, and some of the larger dry goods houses report fair orders for spring fabrics, but in groceries, hardware and other lines the movement is a restricted one. Both the local, sugar refineries are shut down. The cheese market shows some improvement in demand and values, under favoring conditions in Britain, and there is also some little strengthening in the prices of leather.

This week's wholesale business at Toronto is unimportant. The more seasonable weather has created an increased demand for sorting-up parcels and a better tone prevails. Spring goods are moving out slowly, but from this out improvement may be expected. A good many bankrupt stocks are on the market, and of course this militates against the trade and prices. Some dry goods jobbers are sanguine while others are anything but hopeful. There is a moderate movement in hardware and groceries. Prices generally are steady, but some classes of metal goods are lower, the discounts allowed dealers by manufacturers being increased. The grain trade remains quiet, with prices of wheat and flour somewhat lower than a week ago. The higher freight rates and large contracts made by the Grand Trunk for the movement of Western grain via Portland shuts off exports from Ontario to Liverpool to some extent, and shippers are not inclined to buy any considerable quantities of grain at present.
