Public Schools and Dogma.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

The statement appearing in your issue of the 25th of March anent the lack of knowledge of the Bible among "professing Christians especially," is a sad commentary indeed, when we consider the much-vaunted spread of Biblical teaching, even in "heathen" lands—made by the Protestant church.

It is, however, gratifying to find that the reverend speaker of the 24th ult. paid a compliment to the Catholic Church regarding her teaching of religion in the separate schools, but it is regrettable that he has gone out of his way to misrepresent the same church.

In a sermon recently delivered in London, one of the prelates of the Catholic Church stated that unless the church which Christ founded was constantly attacked by dissenting ministers of some of the other churches, they could not half-fill the pews; and that half the education of some of these gentlemen consisted of "firing broadsides" of slander, calumny and abuse at the old bulkark of Christendom, the Catholic Church. That he was right is, alas, only too true.

Your reverend preacher of the 24th of March said that the "dogma" of the Roman Catholic Church begins and ends with the infallibility of the church, while that of the Protestant Church begins and ends with the infallibility of Christ. This will be as new to the intelligent Protestant as to the average Catholic, because both are under the impression that the word "infallibility" has no meaning in Protestantism, beyond a weapon of attack or abuse when the Pope is mentioned by members of the "dark yellow" order, or uneducated Protestants.

The reverend preacher attempts to speak of whereof he knows not; for the Catholic Church educates her children to believe that the church was founded by Christ. (Ephesians, v. Isaiah, xxxv., 8.) Hence to believe in the church is to believe in Christ. What the reverend preacher evidently omitted to tell his hearers was the fact that in the very Bible which he apparently desires to be taught in the schools there is also the statement made by Christ, that "if I should deliver my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing." (I. Corinthians, xiii., 3.) Hence it is all-important that when one speaks, he should speak in charity; this is particularly applicable to those speaking with even a pretence of authority.

The reverend gentleman makes special use of the words, "teaching and admonishing." I desire to emphasize them, and would respectfully refer him to the files of the Catholic Record of very recent date; therein he will find that the leading Protestant ministers are constantly deploring the fact that the Catholic Church, and the Catholic Church only, is the true guide in teaching religion in the schools, if we are to rid the country of anarchism, and all the other "isms" that threaten to disrupt, not only Christianity, but the harmony that is necessary to the proper conduct of the affairs of the nation. After the reverend gentleman has read the papers referred to, perhaps he would kindly read Butler's Catechism, taught in the separate schools, and therein he will find that according to the Bible, which is so frequently used as a means of attack on the Catholic Church, we are taught that there is but one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all. (Ephesians, iv.; I. St. John, iv., 5, 6; Hebrews, xiii., 7, 9.)

Now, as to the necessity of teaching religion in the public schools—so-called—in Ontario. That such is required is becoming more apparent every day to the man who gives the subject a moment's serious consideration; and it is because the various Protestant sects cannot agree on a definite course of action, that the matter has not taken concrete form long ago; much to the detriment of the children. I am safe in saying that one of the principal differences between the Catholic and Protestant church is that in the former going to church is obligatory, while with the latter it is largely a matter of taste or "style." Consequently the children of many Protestant parents—where there are any—are growing up without any religious teaching whatsoever. The teachers in the Protestant schools in a large number of cases are deploring the lack of morals and lack of discipline among the children. Let me give only one instance: I entered a public school a few weeks ago not a hundred miles from London. I found the teacher in a somewhat excited state of mind. He told me that he had a deal of trouble to contend with. And after reciting the woes of the teacher owing to the lack of proper training, he showed me a drawing he had just taken from a little girl of 10 years of age. For filth, indecency, and moral corruption, it would be impossible to surpass. It had been handed to her by a male pupil of the same school of her own age, or thereabouts, and this, too, after he had made improper proposals to her and to another little girl at the same time. I asked the teacher to what he attributed such a condition of affairs, and he replied that he did not know. I told him it was on account of the lack of religious training in the school, and he did not contradict me. Now, sir, this was in what would be called a "good school," because the teacher was above the average in Christian belief; and if he is unable to find a remedy for the evils rampant in the schools, what about the teacher who has no Christian belief at all?

Is it not a problem for the reverend preacher of the 24th, rather than attempting to define Catholic "dogma," which he is not called upon to discuss by those most interested?

Yours faithfully, JUSTITIA.

When a Man Marries

WHEN a man marries he quickly discovers his need of innumerable things he had never thought of before.

And the butcher, the baker and the cabinet maker have a new home to supply.

The new husband and wife must buy things to which they had previously given little thought.

A thousand marriages mean a thousand new homes.

Right here is a fact overlooked by many merchants.

They say, "How could it pay us to keep on repeating the story of our goods or service?"

If they could reach every possible customer with one advertisement—and if people didn't forget—there might be no object in "keeping everlastingly at it."

But because every possible customer does not read every advertisement, you must repeat.

And because these thousands of new homes are every day coming into existence, continuous advertising brings increased results.

Perhaps some people knew your goods or your store five or ten years ago. Since then new generations have come into existence.

The boy of to-day is the man who will sign the cheques to-morrow. To-day your advertisements are of small interest to him. To-morrow he is your customer, if you solicit his trade through advertising.

Every day thousands of people discover for the first time their need of your kind of goods.

Will you be there every day with your bid for their business?

Or will you leave the field to your competitors?

Advertising is the key that opens the door of these new homes to your goods.

Is Advertising on your key-ring?

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any good advertising agency or the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write if interested.

COULDN'T GET NIP IN LEGISLATURE

Plenty in House Cellars, But Minister Reaume Sat on Lid.

[Canadian Press.]

Toronto, April 4.—The "abolish the bar" debate in the Legislature yesterday disclosed the fact that while there was liquor in the cellars of the House restaurant, a drink could not be purchased by any member, no matter how bland, to say nothing of any official in the building, no matter how thirsty. After the House began this year it seemed to Hon. Dr. Reaume, the minister of public works, that opportunities for members and officials during the session to get drinks were frequent enough without placing them within their reach in the Legislative pile itself.

Recent night sessions, with their accompanying fatigue, reveals to the members who depend on "case goods" for stimulants that the restaurant dispensed no refreshments such as they wanted. The Minister of Public Works has the lid on tight, and even the fellows who like a nip are commending him for the action that some of them have just found he has taken.

RESERVOIR FOR WHEAT

C. P. R. Said To Be Planning Big Improvements at Smith's Falls.

[Canadian Press.]

Smith's Falls, April 4.—It is rumored here that the C. P. R. is contemplating extensive improvements at this point. The Smith's Falls yard, it is said, will be a sort of reservoir for all the wheat from Port McNicoll. That is, that it will be held here in cars until it is taken to the ships at Montreal. When this line is in operation Smith's Falls will then be the terminal of three great divisions of the C. P. R., the northern, the western, and this new grain route from Port McNicoll. The line from here to Montreal has just been re-made and double-tracked, and it is expected that record time will be made in handling freight to those points. An appropriation of a quarter of a million dollars was made a short time ago for yard improvement at Smith's Falls, and this money has not yet been expended.

WILSONS INVALIDS' PORT

(A la Quina du Pérou)

Because of the great popularity of Wilson's Invalids' Port with the Medical Profession, there have been put upon the market several attempts at imitation of this well-known standard wine tonic.

Why be cajoled into trying imitations because of their cheapness? The best is better than any—nothing but the best should satisfy you.

The name "Wilson's Invalids' Port" is registered at Ottawa, as also the signature of the proprietor of this preparation: which appears on all labels and neck bands of the genuine preparation—to imitate them may be the sincerest form of flattery BUT it is a criminal offence punishable by law.

Insist on getting genuine Invalids' Port as THE BEST IS BETTER THAN ANY.

Dr. A. COWAN MOFFATT, Member Pharmaceutical Society of N. B. Kilburn, N. B., says:

"I have used "Wilson's Invalids' Port" It is certainly THE BEST of tonic wines, and I have much pleasure in prescribing it".
