ANOTHER TURF WAR IN PROSPECT

Latonia Track and Churchill Downs Will Be Affected.

Louisville, Ky., April 14.—The Courier-Journal says: Another big turf war is now threatened, and the result—if there is a result—will vitally concern the Louisville Jockey Club. From the indications, it will be the Latonia track, near Cincinnati, against Churchill Downs, and the prospect is not bright for the joint jockey club.

The first intimation that anything was in the wind became known yesterday, when it was learned that a secret conference of turfmen was held in this city. Those present at this meeting were Lawrence Young, president of the Washington Park Club, Chicago; Edward Hopper of the Latonia Jockey Club, and Edward Gardner, proprietor of the Avondale Stock Farm of Tennessee, who, it is said, represented the Cumberland Park Club of Nashville, a track unlicensed by the Western Jockey Club, under which the Louisville, Washington Park and Latonia tracks race.

Exactly what was done at this meeting is not known, but the peculiar feature of the conference was that W. F. Schulte, president of the new Louisville Jockey Club, was not invited to the meeting, and did not know the men mentioned, and they left town last night. The fact that President Schulte was not invited to this conference made him suspicious of its importance to the Louisville Club, and he held conversations over the long-distance telephone with James Fitzgerald of the Hawthorne track, Chicago, and Captain James R. Rees of the Memphis Jockey Club. The result is that Messrs. Rees, Fitzgerald and others held a meeting in Chicago to-day to consider what is to be done.

With the Wrestlers.

A despatch from Buffalo says that Dan McLeod, the best man in the heavy classes in and around Buffalo, will challenge the winner of the Harrison-McMillan championship bout on Saturday night. The plan will open to-morrow at Harold A. Wilson's 35 West Kingstreet, when a number of limited reservations may be had. Walter C. Kelly of Buffalo has been nominated as referee by the McMillan party. The official stakeholder is to select the referee in case of a disagreement on Tuesday, April 16. Both men are training hard. Arthur Grimes, the crack amateur heavyweight wrestler of the Queen City Bicycle Club, has joined McMillan's corps of trainers. Messrs. Turnbull Smith, Tommy Downey, John F. Scholes, sr., P.C. McArthur, and the local followers of the mat are all backing on Harrison's weight and strength to pull out a victory for him. The match is three in five falls to a finish.

The captain of the Willows Football Club is in receipt of a letter from the Shamrocks of Parry Sound, who are the junior champions of the northern district, challenging the Willows, who are the champions of this district, for a game to decide the Ontario championship, to be played May 24, and asking on what terms the Willows would play in either Collingwood, Barrie or Orillia. There will be a practice Monday night at Bayside Park, foot of Yonge-street, from 6 p.m. to 7.30 p.m., and all strangers who wish to play this spring will be cordially welcomed and placed on the team according to their ability, on the same footing as those who are already members.

FALL CAUSES ALARM.

Tomb in Westminster Abbey Damaged by a Column Dropping Down—Another One Unsafe.

London, April 14.—Some alarm has been caused by the fall of an 18-foot pillar in Westminster Abbey. The pillar stood in the side chapel, northeast of the chancel. It fell with a tremendous crash, was shattered into small pieces and damaged the tomb of Lord Norris. Investigation showed that a similar column in the same chapel was very unsafe. Steps have been taken to assure stability.

Fallen Is One of the Best Known Corners of the Abbey.

Next to Poets' Corner the spot in Westminster Abbey close by which a pillar has fallen, is, perhaps, the most frequented by visitors and the best known. One usually enters the Abbey thru Solomon's Porch, and immediately in the north transept finds on either hand a line of monuments of illustrious statesmen. Here are the graves of the two Pitts, of Fox and of Grattan, and a few feet from the base of Lord Beaconsfield's statue lies buried William Ewart Gladstone.

On the eastern side of the transept three chapels have been thrown into one, at the far end of which the tomb of Lord Norris, a warrior of the seventeenth century, is conspicuous. This is the tomb that has suffered in the unwelcome reminder of the constant repair necessary in the national sanctuary. The chapel possesses abundant interest in its monuments and inscriptions in memory of Sir John Franklin and Sir Humphry Davy. Chantrey's statue of Mrs. Siddons, after Reynolds' picture of the actress as the Tragic Muse, is in the same enclosure, close beside Flaxman's sculpture of her brother, John Kemble, in the character of Cato.

Mrs. Sinclair Passes Away.

The death occurred at the residence of her son-in-law, Dr. Charles V. Snelgrove, 105 Carlton-street, on Saturday, of Mrs. Catharine Clyne Campbell Sinclair, relict of the late John Sinclair. Deceased had reached the age of 71 years and until a short time ago had enjoyed good health. The funeral to-morrow afternoon will be private.

Balmoral to Duke.

London, April 14.—The King has given Balmoral, the Queen's favorite Scottish residence, to the Duke of York for a country house, and will keep Sandringham, his favorite palace, for himself.

The King has no liking for the Scottish climate and the seclusion of Balmoral, miles from anywhere.

Fire on Spadina-Avenue.

A small fire occurred about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon in a three-storey brick dwelling at 306 Spadina-avenue, owned by Charles Millar and occupied by J. W. Smith. The damage to the building is placed at $25 and to the contents $10, the latter being insured in the Scottish Union Co. for $1500.

The Guns From Africa.

Quebec, April 14.—The staff at the Dominion Arsenal in Quebec are working full time overhauling the guns which were recently brought back from South Africa, and expect to have them ready for the field battery camp to be held at Deseronto in the early part of June. One battery will be finished next week, and those alredy repaired are reported to look as good as new.

THE VATICAN AND AUSTRIA

Holy Father is Disturbed by Pan-Germanism and Anti-Clericalism.

GERMANS TO BE GOT TOGETHER.

The Pope Says the French Have Not Understood His Policy or Idea.

New York, April 14.—The Sunday Sun prints the following letter from a Rome correspondent:

The spectacle of Austrian anarchy with its attendant train of anti-clericalism and of Pan-Germanism disturbs greatly the mind of the Holy Father and the diplomatic ideas of his Secretary of State. When two years ago, after the obstruction brought into play by Herr Schoenerer against the "two-language" decrees of Count Badeni, The Sun pointed out distinctly the characteristics of Lutheran Pan-Germanism and the uneasiness of the Holy See, many persons could not believe that the danger was so close at hand.

While superficial observers laughed at the "bugbear" of "Greater Germany," the Vatican, thanks to its universal system of outlooks, clearly showed the relation of the "Austrian question" to general politics. An extraordinary book by M. Andre Cheradame, published with an abundance of documents, by an almost mathematical system of demonstration, has just shown that the fears and the precautions of the Papacy were justified. Pan-Germanism rests on a scientific system, on national peculiarities of mind, and an economic ambition. Semitism has created the Talmud, that is to say, the subordination of the world to the Jew. Ancient Rome set up the idea of universal power—sung in lordly fashion by Virgil. Herr Von Bismarck brought forth the Pan-Germanic spirit: "Wir furchten Gott und sonst Niemanden," "We fear God and no one else." It is no longer the Germany of the Burgraves and their chivalry; it is not the Germany of the Rhine, with its legends of gold and nymphs and harmony, no, the Germany of Goethe, of Schiller, of Geibel, and of Heine, nor the Germany of Kant, of Schelling, and of that intellectual movement; nor the Germany of the provincial universities and their idealism; it is the Germany of internationa Darwinism, of conquest, of pride and of domination.

Herr Von Bismarck, who was neither a Prussian nor a German, as his "Letters to his wife and to his betrothed" prove, was the dazzling teacher of Germany. A publicist of extremely keen observation, Herr Dernberg has demonstrated the transformation of the soul of Germany under the rule of the Bismarck pedagogy. It is the spirit of arrogance, which has created ethnographic science, applied to the domain of external politics. The German race, scattered thruout Europe, must be brought together in a national unity under the sceptre of the Hohenzollerns.

Forty years ago Paul de Lagarde almost alone unfolded this ambitious theory. Today few Germans can keep free from the penetrating and seductive witchery of Pan-Germanism. As a superior race Germany must assimilate the inferior peoples. By the side of English and Russian Imperialism Pan-Germanism will set up German Imperialism, the "Welt-politik," the vast outlines and geometric proportions of which the Kaiser is continually sketching. Germany shall be a "universal Empire," a "Weltreich" extending from Antwerp, from Amsterdam and the Baltic to Trieste and the Mediterranean, whence she will dominate the Balkans and the east. Austria may be the first victim of this prodigiously bold scheme. In the three million Prussophiles on this side of the Alpha Germany has an active and eager advance guard at her disposal.

It is they who have let loose the Eumenides of anarchy in order to give credit to the story that at the death of Francis Joseph Austria will come under a woman as ruler. Nothing could be more false or fantastic than this theory, invented by the Germans, spread about by the Protestants and repeated with pleasure by Freemasons of all countries. Never has Austria shown greater solidity. Before the rising of Slavism she had in her ethnographic household four distinct conflagrations: The Poles, the Hungarians, the Young Slavs and the Czechs. To-day these four peoples are no longer striving for independence, but for a confederation. If these fragments of national mosaic are fighting each other it is not for the purpose of bearing down the edifice, but in order to get possession of the first floor, the piano nobile, as the Romans say. The death of Francis Joseph will not cause grief nor mark the beginning of a break-up; it will be, on the contrary, the sign of deliverance and will open an era of strong guarantees against Pan-Germanism. Weak, fond of peace, desiring no trouble, Francis Joseph takes up neither the discussion nor the burdens which discussion would bring. M. Andre Cheradame's book gives a quietus to the legends which the theorists who talk of the end of Austria give credit to in order to let Pan-Germanism at the appointed time carry out its violence on the Bohmerwald.

Wilhelm II. and Graf von Billow have done a service to the cause of Europe. As skilful a tactician as Fouche and as close-mouthed as Cromwell, Prince Von Bismarck lacked his Pan-Germanism to the point even of opposing it. An experienced architect, he left the part of the old house standing until the new building was nearly completed. That is the way he acted with Napoleon III., that is the way he was acting with Francis Joseph. Whether out of impatient greed or superior security the Kaiser never leaves off announcing the coming German hegira. That is better. If Austria, if Francis Joseph, have a glimmer of the spirit of self-preservation, the imminent danger, admitted with no bashfulness, will force on them a policy in conformity with the interests of the dynasty and of the country.

Leo XIII., on receiving a deputy from Paris one day, said sadly: "The French have understood neither my policy nor my idea. If all parties, as we wished, had joined in establishing a broad, tolerant, peaceful and orderly republic, the alliance of Austria, Russia and France would have been assured." At the end of his timely book M. Andre Cheradame sees the salvation of Austria and of Europe in that alliance. But if the Franco-Russian alliance is to bear fruit, and if Austria is to join it, the republic must first rise out of the anarchy of socialism and religious war. The essential, unavoidable condition for a sound external policy is an administration that shall inspire confidence and security. In order not to irritate the Austrian Catholics the Kaiser has set up beside his Lutheran telegraph pole a Catholic telegraph pole over which his promises travel.

His intimacy with the bishops, his efforts to work together with the Centre, are presages that the new empire of the west will be founded on tolerance and the equality of creeds.

An Old Woman's Woes.

An old woman who gave the name of Margaret Stewart was found wandering about in the East End on Saturday night and was locked up on a charge of vagrancy. She told the police that she had left the home of her son-in-law, James Dempsey, who was supposed to live on Union-street, on Thursday night and had been unable to find her way back. After spending an hour searching for the woman's relatives, the police learned that she had really escaped from the House of Providence and was sent back to the institution in charge of an officer.

PAUL HEARD MOTHER'S VOICE.

Old Soldier at Dayton Home Could Not Sleep Because of an Irresistible Call.

Belleville, Ill., April 13.—When Mrs. Elizabeth Mueller, on her deathbed, murmured a prayer for her son who had left home and had been lost to her for 18 years, that prayer was wafted to the Soldiers' Home in Dayton, Ohio, and Paul Mueller heard it.

Back to the old home went the son. When he entered the sick chamber he saw the family gathered about the bedside. He heard his mother's voice calling his name. Then he realized that it was his mother's wish which had summoned him by some mysterious force over three states, and compelled him to obey the call. She died pressing his hand in hers, with his name on her lips and smiling.

It was thought by the Mueller family, all except the mother, that the son Paul was dead. No word had come from him for ten years. Efforts to locate him were fruitless, and the father died believing him dead.

But the mother was not convinced. She said that something told her that her boy was still alive. In her last illness, which began two weeks ago, the longing to be with her missing son grew and grew.

She would call "Paul, Paul," in her delirium.

The son had buffeted about the world, finally drifting into the Old Soldiers' Home at Dayton, Ohio.

On the evening that his mother was stricken he could not sleep. It seemed to him that he could hear her voice calling to him to come home. He asked himself if it could be possible that the old folks were still alive.

No sleep the next night nor the next, and that voice—his mother's—constantly in his ear. The family had almost passed out of his mind. He could not understand why he was haunted with such a citation as his mother's voice, which had become only a dimmed memory, but which had suddenly awakened into a keen remembrance of the familiar tones.

He became convinced that something was wrong at Belleville. There was a terrible dread at his heart. He resolved to go. His roommate told him it was only fancy; that he had better write; that he was probably getting insomnia.

But Mueller knew that he ought to go. Obtaining a permit from the institution he set forth for Belleville, arriving there yesterday.
