WOMEN THEN AND NOW

Position of Man's Helpmate Under Paganism and Christianity.

An Eloquent Exposition of the Subject by a Visiting Orator.

The Equality of the Sexes Logically Upheld.

The Christian Church, corner Dundas and Elizabeth streets, was well filled last night, when Rev. J. F. Parsons, of St. Louis, lectured on "Women—Pagan and Christian." The church has been very handsomely fitted up, and is now one of the most comfortable, as it is the cosiest of places of worship in the city. Rev. Mr. Fowler, the pastor, and his able coadjutor, Dr. Leonard, have received numerous congratulation on the progress of the body. Sunday was the first anniversary. A year ago the church had five members; now it has 80, and there is a Sunday school with between 130 and 140 pupils.

The lecturer began by referring to the splendid intellectual accomplishments of the pagan world when the Christian era dawned. With all their accomplishments, however, the Greeks and Romans were the most miserable people morally. People, poets, kings were corrupt. The picture of their lives is to be found in the last part of the epistle to the Romans. In all ages men have never been superior to the women, and to whatever extent the men compel the women to be degraded, the men will always sink a degree lower. In the heathen countries—and all nations were heathen, except the Jews—they were in a state of slavery; no woman had her freedom. She had no civil, religious or social rights, and even in the time of the Roman Empire a husband could put his wife to death with impunity. He could put her away and marry another woman if he did not like her. She was his slave. To come to modern times, a woman in China is on the level of a beast. She is bought and sold. In India, a woman is not even a man's equal. She is kept walking behind him, with her head bent. There is no courting in India. A man's father buys a wife for him just as he buys a Jersey cow. A woman is a vile creature. There is nothing good for her. They have no hospital for her—no protection whatever. They build hospitals for sick cats and cows, but they take no care of their women. The greatest misfortune for a man in India is to have a family of girls. A mother thinks nothing of killing her daughter if she has not a husband when she is 10 years old. It was so in Japan until twenty years ago. It is so in all pagan countries. In Africa, Bishop Taylor says that every little girl has been purchased by some wretched old man. He can get her for a mere trifle—an old gun or a small sum of money. What were the causes leading to this condition of things? In the Roman Empire, one-half of the 120,000,000 of people were miserable slaves. A man had just as many wives as he wanted. The basis of paganism is brute force. Originally man was in a perfect state of civilization, but he lost God out of his mind, and worshiped and served the creature instead of the Creator. Moral principle and truth ceased to be the governing principle, and thus brute force became the ruling principle. This first brought about human slavery. Human slavery originated in the darkness of the pagan world, when man did not recognize the living God. It never had the sanction of the divine. Polygamy originated in much the same way. Man found he could make two women serve him, and three and four, and there was no limit except his tastes. This had a dark and damnable origin in paganism; God ordered that man should have one wife. Woman reached her lowest degradation in paganism through her religion. The pagans worshiped drunkards, adulterers and hideous things. The ancients worshiped Venus. At the rich city of Corinth, Paul preached. It was a very immoral city. On the summit of a hill there was a splendid temple dedicated to a female deity named Venus, the personification of lust and immorality. The city law ordained and commanded that 1,000 of the most beautiful women be compelled to officiate there. All the domestic women were compelled to wear veils in token of their subjection. But the women that officiated in the temple were permitted to adorn themselves, to doff their veils. They were most dissolute in their habits. The people sank into the lowest depths. It was the civil law which Paul spoke about, when he told the women they should keep in subjection. Paul never approved of subjection, though he counseled it, because it was the best thing in the circumstances. The vile women were allowed to speak in the temples. Paul said "Don't do as these heathen women do because you may be misrepresented." Then Paul said "Don't follow the example of these vile women by dressing like them." The same advice holds good to-day, but it gives no warrant to those who interpret the Scriptures without taking into account the fact that Paul talks always with pagan society in view. The silent and potent influence of Christianity dug out the pagan tree. When the tree falls, down goes all the great evils of paganism. That's God's method; that's what sets the world free. Slavery goes down where Christianity makes its way. So fares polygamy. Woman is set free, God is glorified, society is purified and the world is elevated. Christ taught the equality of men and women. They have equal rights to teach the religion of Christ. Paul proved that Christianity equalized all nationalities. There was no master, no slave—liberty and equality to all; women were all slaves then, but Paul showed they were to be all free, and he rose a step higher and says there is to be neither male nor female. Neither Christ nor Paul teach that there is sex in religion. Paul, indeed, commands the men to keep still at times, just as he commands women to keep still. It is good for both to be silent sometimes. Christianity set woman free, and now she is at liberty to speak whenever she feels called upon. England and the United States are the greatest nations on earth. Why? Because the governments exist for the people, not the people for the rulers, as in Paganism. The men are free, the women are free. Woman is free to enter the school, the college, to read and think. She stands by the side of man, his equal in every respect, and if the boys don't look out the girls will get ahead of them. The girls have no tobacco, whisky, or bad politics, and that is greatly in their favor. The Bible, religion, philosophy, and common sense all aver that woman is a human being, and she is every whit the equal of man. She has inalienable rights. We don't claim that she should do the work of man, but she has the right to do what her strength and her inclination lead her to do. Christianity is the author of this doctrine. Women are in the lead in our homes, our churches, and our schools. I have never asked a girl when I married her to obey her husband. At first, I hardly knew why; but I did not like it. But I have learned since that this doctrine is a pagan one. I believe in the equality of marriages. That was how God made it at the beginning. He gave the man and the woman jointly dominion. Christ combined this arrangement under the new dispensation, and it exists to-day. In conclusion, he pointed out in graphic language the difference in the effects of paganism and Christianity on woman's work in the world. Look at these dissolute women in Corinth, organized and supported by the civilized law. Look again at the wonderful work of the Women's Christian Temperance Union on this continent. That work is presided over by Frances E. Willard, one of the grandest women that the world has ever known. Go to the World's Fair in Chicago, and you will see a magnificent temple, erected by these women. It is a splendid triumph. Thirteen stories in height, and costing $111,000. It is a magnificent exposition of the energy, industry and progress of these temperance women, who are united by the stoutest of bonds to elevate their sex, protect the home, and to save the rising generation from temptation. They afford one of the best evidences of the triumphs of Christianity in the elevation of women and the consecration of her talents for the most noble of purposes.

A vein of exquisite humor ran throughout the lecture which was thoroughly enjoyable. The attendant services were participated in by Rev. Mr. Fowler, Dr. Leonard and an excellent choir.

ELI PERKINS IN JAPAN.

What He Saw in the Course of a Jinriksha Ride.

The passengers could hardly wait for the Empress of India's launch to land at Yokohama before they jumped into the dozens of jinrikshas, two-wheeled Japanese baby carriages which surrounded the landing, and told the runners to run.

"Where?" asked the runners as they stood with bare legs and naked breasts between the shafts of their baby carriages.

"Anywhere, go it!" exclaimed almost everyone, and soon 50 coolies were chasing pell mell all over Yokohama. Some started for Tokio, the capital, sixteen miles from Yokohama, some for the Yoshiwara, where acres of frail beauties are to be seen in a section given up to them, sitting publicly painted and decorated, on street balconies, and some went to curio shops. Our jinriksha men tore off like a college football team, passed the Grand Hotel, the main hotel of the city, and landed us in the center of the old native town. What a change. The houses are all built of raw wood, a story and a half high, and thatched with brown terra cotta. Not a glass window nor a chimney on the street. The outside window is of lattice work and the inside window has thin paper panes for light. Both slide, and when open the whole interior of the house and its inmates are in view. The floor is covered with cheap rush mats, six feet by three and an inch thick. The whole structure is a miniature doll's house. The ceilings seem to touch your head and when you walk the whole house shakes and teters as if you were walking on a rustic bridge. There is no paint and no paper in the house. No stove, fire place, chairs, tables or seats of any kind. I could build the average Japanese house in New York for from $250 to $1,000 and furnish it for $50. The bed is a padded blanket laid on the floor and the pillow is a piece of wood with a few folds of paper on it. This is the house of 99 out of 100 of the people of Japan. The only thing in it is a screen or two, one vase and a flower pot and plant. They have snow and ice in Yokohama and Tokio, but the only fire used is the little square box about a foot square called a hibachi, in which is an earthen bowl containing a teacup full of burning charcoal. This is in every house in Japan, and is used to warm one's hands, light a pipe or make a cup of tea. It is placed before every guest in shop or residence as soon as he arrives."—[Eli Perkins.
