NEW ORLEANS RACE GOSSIP.

Horses Go North—Cup for Fitzgerald—Turf War Continues.

New Orleans, March 13.—The exodus of horsemen and thorobreds to the north will begin to-morrow and continue during the week. Altho purses at the Crescent City and City Park tracks are much more valuable than those offered by the Washington Jockey Club, owners believe that it will be much easier to secure first money at the Bennings track than here.

M. L. Bayman is the leading winner among horse owners here. He will take away with him as a result of the winter race meeting close to $22,000. This is the largest amount ever won by a single stable at the Crescent City track. The lion's share he won on Right Royal's victory yesterday in the Crescent City Derby. The race was worth $7165.

Other big winners for Bayman were Leonard J. Bayman, Garnish and Rapid Water. The latter horse, besides winning purses, proved very profitable to Bayman, as he sold him to E. E. Smathers. It is said, for $10,000, nearly $4000 more than the eastern horseman paid for him at Jordan A. Drake's clearingout sale last fall.

The turf war between the New Orleans Jockey Club and the Crescent City Jockey Club goes on without a prospect of a settlement. Each association is losing $500 daily. Under the free-gate system a big crowd attends each course, but there is no revenue from any source except the pring, restaurant, bar and telegraph, and the money thus received doesn't come within many hundreds of dollars of paying the running expenses. The big increase in the values of purses has made horsemen the real winners.

Chris Fitzgerald, who started the horses all winter at the Fair Grounds track, will leave here at the end of the week for New York to become manager of the Brighton Beach Racing Association. His work with the starting gate was satisfactory all season, and horsemen yesterday gave him a handsome loving cup. William Murray, for years one of Fitzgerald's assistants, probably will act as starter until April 15, when, it is expected, the sport at the old course will end.

Racing began to-day and will continue thru the week at the Fair Grounds track under the auspices of the New Louisiana Jockey Club, the owners of the ground. The new managers have cut off one race a day from the old program of eight events. At the conclusion of the six-day meeting the Crescent City officials again will take charge of affairs and continue the game as long as the City Park track remains open.

Style is as Essential to being well dressed as air is to Life. . . . .

The best tailoring in the world, backed up by the best material, would make mighty poor clothes if they lacked style.

Style with Semi-ready is a science. It means a great deal of figuring and working. There's no guess work about it.

Model garments are made and discussed by our designers, and re-made, until they are just right.

From the accepted model we make the garments.

Rowing Association for Buffalo.

Buffalo, March 13.—The plan to hold a big regatta here next summer looks like a go. It took definite form to-day when the local rowing clubs got together at the Iroquois and formed an organization to be known as the Buffalo Association of Amateur Oarsmen. The meeting was called to order by the temporary chairman and the following organizations were represented: Germania, Celtic and Lighthouse Rowing Clubs.

The Buffalo Canoe Club did not send a representative, but Commodore George R. Montgomery sent a letter saying that the club would lend its hearty co-operation in promoting aquatic sports. After routine business the delegates elected the following permanent officers: President, Thomas Myers, Lighthouse B.S.; secretary, William Desmond, Mutuals.

President Myers appointed Messrs. Aman, Morris and Egan a committee on constitution, and the meeting adjourned until Wednesday evening, when the committee will make its report to the delegates at the Iroquois. At least one big rowing regatta will be fathered by the new association this summer, and the prospect is that the Fourth of July will be selected as the date.

STANLEY CUP AFTERMATH ROUGH GAME WAS GREAT

Rat Portage Players Were Most Frequently Penalized—Ottawa Most Skilful.

Was the final game for the Stanley Cup rough? Why, yes. And don't think that Rat Portage had no hand in it. Subjoined are excerpts from three special reports—Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto. The Gazette calls it the greatest game that ever was played on any ice, and goes on:

"The first half of the game had been swift, but it had been rather free from any very heinous offence. The checking was hard and close. At one time Gilmour and McGee were prisoners in the three-seater box at the one time. Later Fulford struck Griffis in the mouth and was penalized. In the first half Shirley Davidson, as judge of play, had been strict, and the presence of two officials tended to keep the game clean. Remarkable to relate that in the second half the challengers showed more tendency to mixing up things, and usually were caught red-handed in their sins and benched. Hooper and Griffis were the first to fall. Then Billy Gilmour was retired for cross-checking McGimsie. Then, when Hooper had returned, Fulford rubbed him, but the Rat Portage man broke for cover, and the big Ottawa fellow measured his length on the ice and received a severe shock. Right after this Hooper was sent off for tripping Smith, and then Phillips met a like fate for selling at Fulford. With four Rat Portage men and six Ottawa players on the ice, the champions pressed the visitors hard, but the little band of four resolutes made a great stand and held off the Ottawa rushes, but finally, when the sides were again even, after Gilmour had been further penalized, Smith found the net. Bellefeuille was punished for a trip, and when Ottawa forwards began to loaf offside in the hopes of landing another, Hooper received a nasty crack in the mouth. Then there was a great attack on the Rat Portage net. The defenders gathered round their post as tho making a last stand, and there was a battering struggle in front of the citadel. During the crisis McGimsie dropped to the ice and remained at full length across the mouth of the net. For this he was benched for three minutes. This left Rat Portage with five men to act as service, while Ottawa had their full quota of seven men.

The Ottawa Citizen had to say:

"In short, there was no water, no salt, sand, ashes or anything else in evidence: nothing but fast play, everyday ice—nothing to furnish the vestige of an excuse for a beaten team to seize upon and explain away its failure. Upon such an arena and with gladiators of such calibre it was no small wonder that the thousands swarmed into the rink, and clung to the girders, posts, rafters and every available spot from which a glimpse could be obtained, expected a contest greater than had been.

"Expectations were great, but what followed gulfilled them amply. Equally important with the holding of the Stanley cup was the fact that Ottawa disposed of all the talk to the effect that they wanted the soft ice. If their play had been scientific on Thursday evening it was a hundred per cent. more so on Saturday night. Rat Portage depends upon speed and Ottawa on science. In these points the chief difference between the two teams lies, and conditions were such that each had every opportunity to get the best results from its own particular style of play.

"The game, in short, resolved itself into a battle of science v. speed. The two were sawed for supremacy, and until in the stretch science came with a burst, so to speak, and nosed her opponent out as they went under the wire."

The World's own story had it not unduly rough, the defenders not being charged with acts they committed a year ago when the Marlboros went east. Yet The Star looked at the incident this way:

"In the first half, which was played under Manitoba rules, there was a judge of play, a sort of a second referee. The two officials did not divide their duties as is the case in other games called off-sides as well as rough play. His presence on the ice had a good moral influence, and the Ottawas were under restraint a bit in the stage of the game. In the second half they made up for lost time, however, and hacked and jabbed their opponents until they were sights to behold. McGee, Fulford and Gilmour were the chief offenders, altho Smith, Rupert and Moore had their men out when it was necessary. Mr. Grant allowed nearly everything to go. Even the
