REINFORCED CONCRETE

Description of How it is Constructed - - - Buildings in Montreal the First in Canada

(Montreal Herald.)

In spite of the hot weather, hundreds of persons may be seen daily watching with interest the reinforced concrete construction on the new factories of the American Tobacco Company now building at St. Antoine and Bourget streets, this city.

One builder on the ground today said that he had never seen portable wooden forms used before in Canada to shape concrete beams and girders. These forms are made to measure, in the shape of hollow blocks, laid as though they were to serve for a floor, and kept level by supports and underpinning. They are so put down that grooves, the depth of the block make a series of what might be called empty canals at right angles. Thus each block is cut off from every other block by four canals.

Into these canals is placed the reinforcement, that is, steel rods to which are tied smaller steel rods, the ends of which are twisted at various angles with the rod. Over the reinforcement is poured the concrete, wheeled along the sides of the canals in barrows. The wet concrete covers the rods completely, and settles against the sides of the forms, which have been washed with grease to prevent sticking. As soon as the concrete hardens, which it does in seven days, the forms are taken down and nothing but the canals remain, now transfromed into solid beams and girders of reinforced concrete.

It is a common thing to hear spectators asking what the steel rods are for, and why the concrete is poured over them. The explanation is simple. The concrete by itself, without the steel rods, is capable of withstanding great compression stresses, but it is not so able to withstand tensile or pulling stresses. Consequently, in a factory or other large building where there are various kinds of strains, the concrete needs aid in bearing this additional burden. Steel is the best medium known to withstand tensile stresses. The engineer therefore calculates the tensile and compression stresses of the building in question, and uses just enough steel rods to remove from the concrete the necessity of standing the tensile stress.

Henry Holgate, vice-president of the Dominion Engineering and Construction Co., which is doing the work, said that the plant will be ready for operation on schedule time.

GAME PICTURES FROM N. B. WOODS

(Boston Herald, Friday.)

R. E. Follett, who is well known to Bostonians on account of his connection with the Sportsmen's show here, A. H. Hanscom, J. A. Page, Dr. F. Z. Johnson of this city, and G. W. Bitzer of New York arrived in Fredericton, N. B., Wednesday, on the first stage of their extended trip for the purpose of taking biograph pictures to be exhibited at the next Sportsmen's show in this city. From Fredericton the party will go to Perth, and then up the Tobique river and to Neposiquit, pictures being taken all along the route. It is expected that about 4,000 feet of films will be used on the trip. George Armstrong is acting as guide.

BOND MARKET DEPRESSION

(Bradstreet's)

Bond market conditions continue to be decidedly unsatisfactory. Dealings in this class of securities at the New York Stock Exchange show a marked decrease in spite of speculative activity in certain issues, and bond dealers generally admit that 'over-the-counter" sales are limited in volume and hard to effect. The demand for bonds which would ordinarily have made itself felt after the July interest and dividend disbursements has this season been conspicuously absent. The bond market ,in short, is bereft of the needed buying power, and while stock values have shown a tendency to advance in response to manipulation, prices for bonds exhibit a general decline, high-grade securities of this class suffering proportionately even more than issues which may be considered as being to a greater or less extent vehicles of speculation.

This state of affairs is attributed by the financial community—with undoubted truth—to two leading causes. Relatively high rates for money and the active demand for loans naturally divert large amounts of bank funds which would otherwise be invested in railroad and other bonds for an income return. The other case is the absence of bond buying by insurance companies. Unsettled conditions in the life-insurance business and the reduction of their revenues keep that class of organizations out of the bond market, while the fire losses incurred at San Francisco have made the fire insurance interets a seller instead of a buyer of investments. With such leading factors eliminated, the bond market is largely dependent upon the demand from individual holders of capital, which, though considerable, is not sufficient to furnish a normal absorption. Numerous incidents have occurred of late which illustrate the conditions referred to above.

SENSATION IN GERMAN SOCIETY

A special cable to the New York Sun from Berlin says:

The gambling case in the garrison town of Dieuze, Lorraine, will come up before a court-martial on Aug. 17. This is the case in which a number of Bavarian officers, including the son of Duke Carl Theodore of Bavaria, are involved.

Fresh facts have come to light. Balls, for instance, were given by the club, at which guests were practically unclothed, and at which, in cases of last resort. the mistresses of the gamblers were the stakes. There is great excitement over the case in military, art and theatrical circles in South Germany.

A REAL CELEBRITY

The local pride of the natives of Cape Elizabeth, Maine, is so intense that it takes on an attitude of pity for all who have the misfortune to dwell elsewhere. This is known to regular summer visitors, and by most of them is respected.

One rainy day a newcomer, who had joined the gathering at the store, composed of fishermen and summer visitors, ventured to enumerate some of the distinguished men who had come from Maine.

"There's Longfellow," he said, "and Hannibal Hamlin, and James G. Blaine, William Pitt Fessenden, Thomas B. Reed, and—"

Here an old fisherman looked up from his work of splicing grass blades, and broke in:

"Smart? Those fellows smart?" he questioned. "You just come down an' see Josh Pillsbury skin fish!"—Lewiston Journal.

MORE CAPITAL FROM THE STATES

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 14 (Special)—It is understood that a big Pittsburg steel firm is planning to erect in Canada a big electric smelting plant. This is the result of Dr. Haanel's investigations into the possibilities of the electric smelting of iron. The Americans are reported to have received options on several large water powers where iron ore is available.

JAPAN'S MEAT SCANDAL

The steamer Tosa of the Japanese Mail Steamship Line, which arrived at Victoria, B. C., last week, brought news of a Japanese canned meat scandal. As a result of an official investigation into the canned meat industry at Hiroshima, consequent on the agitation in the United States, it was found that cans labeled "boiled beef" contained horse flesh, which had been prepared so ingeniously that it could be identified only by careful analysis.

WELL WORTH TRYING.

A Swedish servant maid, finding that her mistress was troubled with sleeplessness, told her of a practice of the people of her country who were similarly afflicted. It was to take a napkin, dip it in ice cold water, wring it slightly and lay it across her eyes, says the Philadelphia Record.

The plan was followed and it worked like a charm. The first night the lady slept four hours without awakening—something she had not done for several months.

At the end of that time the napkin had become dry. By wetting it again she at once went to sleep, and it required considerable force to arouse her in the morning.

The tea gardens of Northern India extend over 500,000 acres, and they produce 190,000,000 pounds of tea per annum at a profit of about $100 an acre.

Billiards was brought into fashion by Louis XIV of France in the seventeenth century, because his doctor ordered him to take exercise after his meals.

A leather belt for driving machinery will last thirty years if cared for. The largest ever made was 15 feet long, 5 feet wide, and weighed just over a ton.

A tri-weekly "train de luxe" is to be placed in service over the new Simplon route for passengers between England and Italy, via Calais, Paris, Lausanne and Milan.

A LIFE STORY IN CLASSIFIED ADS

CHAPTER VI.

There was one room not needed, convenient and nice;
And a good one to rent at a reasonable price.
Said the wife: "It's all furnished, and clean as a pin,
In the Times a Want Ad I think I'll put in.

Then she acted at once on her own little plan,
And rented the room to a young business man.
In reply to ad he applied with the rest
But of all the room seekers, she said he was the best.

Now, if you desire roomers or boarders as well,
Her little experience surely will tell
Of a method of getting them without vexation—
An Ad in the Times gets the best circulation.
