FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

—A man in Lyme, N. H., has received from the State Treasurer bounties for 729 woodchucks.

—The pleuro-pneumonia has made its appearance among several herds of Jersey cattle in Illinois.

—Our Country Home says that rubbing clothes before boiling them is the very perfection of washing science.

—English farmers are paying "a bounty of six cents for sparrow's heads, and six cents per dozen for their eggs."

—Abner Schofield, Lubec, Me., gathered 1100 quarts of strawberries this season from one-fourth of an acre of ground.

—In sharpening edge-tools, says the Popular Science News, "substitute common bar soap and water for oil on the hone."

—A strawberry grower in Western New York gathered 2,000 quarts from one-third of an acre—mostly Sharpless and Crescent.

—The Hampden Agricultural Society of Massachusetts offer premiums of $15, $10 and $5 for the best gardens in the country, of at least one-eight of an acre each.

—The total yield of the wheat crop of the United States for the current year is 360,000,000 bushels of winter and 105,000,000 bushels of spring, making an aggregate of 465,000,000 bushels.

—A large crop of potatoes is promised this season in Aroostook County, Me., and preparations are being made to convert a considerable part of the yield into starch. Twenty-four starch factories are already in operation, and six new ones are promised.

—Real profit does not come so much from the number of acres one goes over as from how much he gets off each acre. It costs about the same number of dollars to own, or rent, prepare seed, and work an acre for a small or large crop. The profit comes from the second quarter or half of a good crop.

—Mineral wool is used for a packing to deaden the sound between floors in building, and being incombustible it is now pretty generally used between the floors and ceilings in new houses. Mineral wool is obtained from the slag from blast furnaces, and is produced by throwing a jet of steam against the stream of slag as it flows from the furnace.

—The Ohio Experimental Farm which is conducted in connection with the Ohio State University, will send to the World's Exposition at New Orleans a large exhibit of the results of its work, a single item of which embraces 160 varieties of wheat to be shown in grain and in the straw.

—Delicious fig candy is made by boiling one pound of white sugar with one pint of water. When it hardens in cold water pour it over the figs which you have split and placed on buttered plates. Just before you take the candy from the fire add a small lump of butter and one table-spoonful of vinegar. If you prefer it, the figs may be chopped and mixed with the candy.

—The value of the cattle in the United States is estimated at over $1,000,000,000 and the capital invested in lands, fences and buildings for their raising and care would be, at the least, as much more. It is proposed to hold a national convention at St. Louis next November to form a permanent organization for the protection and advancement of this great industry.

—Connecticut papers tell the story of a Yankee youth who intoxicated "hundreds of crows" by scattering over a newly planted field kernels of corn soaked in a mixture of hard cider and laudanum. They "rolled about on the ground, flapping their wings, cawing and making themselves generally ridiculous. In fact they were drunk as lords, and numbers of them were easily dispatched."

—Certain foolish farmers have been victimized by sharps, who obtained from them $10 a barrel for "Canada Crystal Seed Buckwheat," and signatures to alleged agreements to sell the whole resulting crop to the company for five cents a pound. So they paid not only a big price for the seed, but the papers to which they attached their names turn out to be promissory notes, payable in the fall of 1890.

—The World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition, which is to be opened at New Orleans the first of next December and closed the last next May, was at first intended to commemorate the shipment of six bags (about one bale) of cotton from Charleston, S. C., to England in 1784, but its scope has since been enlarged so as to include all industries. The buildings will be larger than those of the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia, the machinery hall alone being 1,385 feet by 900 feet and covering thirty three acres. The Exposition will be held by the authority and under the auspices of the United States Government, which has appropriated $1,300,000 for its purposes, and judging by the liberal contributions from different sources and its numerous applications for space already made, the coming World's Fair promises to be the most successful ever held.

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

—Dr. Harris, the entomologist, fed a toad with "black caterpillars about three-fourths of an inch long," up to the number of a hundred, when he became tired, but the capacity of the jewelled insect-destroyer did not seem to be tasked by the meal.

—The whole county of Laprairie, in the Province of Quebec, has been quarantined because of a disease in the sheep; and an order passed by the Governor-in Council has directed the slaughtering of all the animals infected. This has caused great consternation among the farmers, as the Government pays only one-third of the value of the animals so slaughtered.

—The late Mr. Nicholas Anchorena, who died two months since at Buenos Ayres, was probably the richest farmer in the world. His executors report his rural estates as follows: Land 1,710 square miles? cows, 152,000; sheep, 410,000. He aslo owned much house property in Buenos Ayres and his assets have been valued at £2,400,000 sterling. He inherited £200,000 from his father thirty years ago.

—The ranch-men of Wyoming, are making a strong effort in England just now for obtaining the privilege of shipping live cattle into that country by way of Canada—direct American imports being prohibited for fear of introducing any one of its several plagues affecting cattle in the Middle, Southern and Western States. If Wyoming only proceeded to annex herself to the Dominion, her ranch-men would find an easy way out of their difficulty. —Rural Canadian.

—At certain seasons of the year it is pleasant and profitable to know how to cook palatable dishes without using eggs. Here is an excellent rule for making rice pudding without eggs. Wash a coffee cupful of rice in two or three waters, then let it soak all night in one quart of new milk. In the morning add a little salt, a large spoonful of butter, a little ground cinnamon and grated nutmeg. Put in the pudding dish and set in the oven, allowing ample time, say two hours, for it to cook. Stir it frequently, but without removing from the oven. When it is beginning to bubble add a quarter of a pound of stoned raisins. Serve with powdered sugar sprinkled over it, when it is put in saucers.

CLEVELAND'S ACCEPTANCE.

Governor Cleveland has issued his letter accepting the presidential nomination of the democratic party. He says: "I accept the nomination with grateful appreciation of the supreme honour conferred, and a solemn sense of the responsibility which in its acceptance I assume. I have carefully considered the platform adopted by the convention, and cordially approve the same. So plain a statement of democratic faith and principles upon which that party appeals to the suffrages of the people needs no supplement as explanation. We proudly call ours a government by the people. It is not such when a class is tolerated which arrogates to itself the management of public affairs, seeking to control the people instead of representing them. Parties are a necessary outgrowth of our institutions, but government is not by the people when one party fastens its control upon the country and perpetuates its power by cajoling and betraying the people instead of serving them. A government is not by the people when the result which should represent the intelligent will of free and thinking men is or can be determined by the shameless corruption of their suffrages. When an election to office shall be the selection by the voters of one of their number to assume for a time a public trust instead of his dedication to the profession of politics, when holders of the ballot, quickened by a sense of duty, shall avenge the truth betrayed and the pledges broken, and when the suffrage shall be altogether free and uncorrupted, a full realization of government by the people will be at hand. And of the means to this end, not one would, in my judgment, be more effective than an amendment to the constitution disqualifying the president from re-election. When we consider the patronage of this great office, the allurements of power, the temptation to retain public place once gained, and, more than all, the availability a party finds in an incumbent whom a horde of office-holders, with zeal born of benefits received, and fostered by the hope of favours yet to come, stand ready to aid with money and trained political service, we recognize in the eligibility of the president for re-election, a most serious danger to that calm, deliberate and intelligent political action which must characterize government by the people. A true American sentiment recognizes the dignity of labour, and the fact that honour lies in honest toil. Contented labour is the element of national prosperity; ability to work constitutes capital, and the wage of labour the income of a vast number of our population, and this interest should be jealously protected. Our workingmen, not asking unreasonable indulgence, but as intelligent and manly citizens, seek the same consideration which those demand who have other interests at stake. They should receive their full share of the care and attention of those who make and execute the laws, to the end that the wants and needs of employers and employed shall alike be subserved and the prosperity of the country, the common heritage of both, advanced. As related to this subject, while we should not discourage the immigration of those who come to acknowledge allegiance to our government and add to our citizen population, yet as a means of protection to our workmen a different rule should prevail concerning those who, if they come or are brought to our land, do not intend to become Americans, but will injuriously compete with those justly entitled to our field of labour. A proper regard for the welfare of the workingman being inseparably connected with the integrity of our institutions, none of our citizens are more interested than they in guarding against any corrupting influences which seek to pervert the beneficent purposes of our government, and none should be more watchful of the artful machinations of those who allure them to self-inflicted injury. In a free country the curtailment of the absolute rights of the individual should only be such as is essential to the peace and good order of the community. The limit between proper subjects of governmental control and those which can be more fittingly left to moral sense and the self-imposed restraint of the citizen should be carefully kept in view. Thus laws unnecessarily interfering with the habits and customs of any of our people which are not offensive to the moral sentiments of the civilized world, and which are consistant with good citizenship and public welfare, are unwise and vexatious. The commerce of the nation to a great extent determines its supremacy. Cheap and easy transportation should therefore be liberally fostered within the limits of the constitution.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

Selection and retension of subordinates in government employment should depend upon their ascertained fitness, the value of their work, and they should neither be expected nor allowed to do questionable party service. I believe that the public temper is such that the voters of the land are prepared to support the party which gives the best promise of administering the government in an honest, simple and plain manner, which is consistent with its character and purposes. They have learned that mystery and concealment in the management of their affairs cover tricks and betrayal. The statesmanship they require consists in honesty and frugality, prompt response to the needs of the people as they arise, and vigilant protection of all their varied interests. If I should be called to the chief magistracy of the nation by the suffrages of my fellow citizens I will assume the duties of that high office with a solemn determination to dedicate every effort to my country's good and with an humble reliance upon the favour and support of the Supreme Being, who, I believe, will always bless honest human endeavour in the conscientious discharge of public duty.

(Signed) GROVER CLEVELAND.

Hygienic Soups.

Before leaving the subject of peas, I must here repeat a practical suggestion that I published in "The Birmingham Journal" about twenty years ago, viz., that the water in which green peas are boiled should not be thrown away. It contains much of the saline constituents of the peas, some soluble casein, and has a fine flavor, the very essence of the peas. If to this, as it comes from the saucepan, be added a little stock, or some Liebig's extract, a delicious soup is at once produced, requiring nothing more than ordinary seasoning. With care, it may form a clear soup such as just now is in fashion among the fastidious; but, prepared however roughly, it is a very economical, wholesome, and appetizing soup, and costs a minimum of trouble.

I must here add a few words in advocacy of the further adoption in this country of the French practice of using, as potage, the water in which vegetables generally (excepting potatoes) have been boiled. When we boil cabbages, turnips, carrots, etc., we dissolve out of them a very large proportion of their saline constituents—salts which are absolutely necessary for the maintenance of health; salts, without which we become victims of gout, rheumatism, lumbago, neuralgia, gravel, and all the ills that human flesh, with a lithic-acid diathesis, is heir to i. e., about the most painful series of all its inheritances. The potash of these salts existing therein, in combination with organic acids, is separated from these acids by organic combustion, and is then and there presented to the baneful lithic acid of the blood and tissues, the stony torture-particles of which it converts into soluble lithate of potash, and thus enables them to be carried out of the system.—From "The Chemistry of Cookery," by W. MATTIEU WILLIAMS, in Popular Science Monthly for September.

—An old lady visiting the antiquarian museum the other day, on inspecting the old weapons very earnestly, and failing to find what she was apparently looking for, asked a visitor if he could tell her whereabouts they kept the Ax of the Apostles.

The Captain's Daughters.

With her chin upon her palm, Alice Denver looked thoughtfully out of the window.

Upon a broad, old-fashioned hearth, a mild, inconsequent flame rambled fitfully among the embers of a morning fire, while through an open door came the moist fragrance of a sunny April noon.

In the lap of the young girl lay a purse — open — with no plethoric yawn, but idly, as if its office were a sinecure.

She dropped her hand, and turned a piquant head to contemplate, with half comic scorn, a well-worn but shapely boot.

"I despise being veneered into respectability by the blacking bottle," was her comment.

She glanced at her sister, who sat before an easel absorbed and unheeding.

"Ruth! Wake up! I want somebody to growl to! My last summer's hat is a mere limp wreck, and look at these boots!"

With an inarticulate murmur the young artist came to life, pushing back her chair with a lingering eye still upon her canvas.

Alice continued:

"I am trying to be fine on three dollars. Sympathize with me."

Ruth smiled:

"One more than I have, sisterkin."

"But your picture is almost done."

"Oh, yes—I have painted, but—(grimly) who will buy?"

"Pray don't start another conundrum till you have answered mine."

"Yours?"

"Yes. Which is worse, a shabby head or a shabby foot—one seems inevitable?"

"Perhaps not," said Ruth cheerily.

"Let us cudgel our brains.

Alice smiled mischievously.

"You might send your story to another magazine."

Ruth shook her head.

"Return postage is too expensive."

"But it is so good, it must be accepted sometime," persisted Alice.

"This! from you! cried Ruth. "Who was it that dubbed my precious story 'Bread-upon-the-Waters'?"

"But you know, Ruth, it always did 'return after many days,'" was the demure reply.

"I wonder if it is worth while to risk loss of postage and fresh chagrin by trying again," said Ruth.

"Look at us!" exclaimed Alice, with sudden vehemence. "On Turkish rugs, stared out of countenance by snub-nosed Eastern teapots and grinning dragons, that know we cannot even pay our postage!"

"Don't be savage, Alice, you are proud of them, too."

"Proud! Of course I'm proud. There's the rub!"

"A meagre wardrobe is better than a meagre home," said Ruth, with a loving glance around the room.

It was a room with a history, evidently. Its career had opened in the rigid decorum of haircloth and mahogany; and a generation of slippery gloom had ill-prepared it for the invasion of the Vandal horde which one day took possession. The bleak sofa muffled in luxurious Eastern stuffs, barely preserved its self-respect by the solemn contemplation of its own claw-feet, while the prim, high-backed chairs, with their feet tucked under them and their heads in the air, ignored the effeminate cushions thrust upon them. But nobody cared; for bamboo chairs, untroubled by back-bone and prejudice, and Oriental divans fulfilled all hospitalities; while the ancestral andirons, weary of a cold hearth and uselessness, rejoiced in the change and warmly hugged the blazing logs of the new regime.

"Choose boots," said Ruth. "A princess like you should be daintily shod."

"But that flabby, jaded hat," sighed Alice.

"Where is it?"

"It ought to be in the ash-barrel, but of course it's here, tenderly bandboxed."

"Very well; we'll try variety, and black your head instead of your feet."

"What?"

"Wait." And Ruth, hat and blacking-bottle simultaneously disappeared. Presently, she returned, holding a crisp, jet-black hat aloft.

"As good as new! You crafty darling!" cried Alice.

Ruth produced a long feather. "Now twist this around, and be irresistible, as usual."

"Your best feather? No, no," said Alice.

"Yes, yes," answered Ruth, with an imperative elder-sister kiss.

When Captain Denver retired from sea, twenty-three years before, and gathered the accumulated treasures of his Eastern voyages into the old seashore homestead, near New York, all the girls in Stirling envied the shy bride from Boston who came to take possession.

Here two lovely daughters grew into joyous girlhood, adored by the gallant Captain, who treated both wife and daughters with an exquisite mingling of old-fashioned formality and tenderness. His air of command, nautical phrases, and courtly bearing, his stories of adventure by sea and land, and the ever-present souvenirs of foreign travel, captivated the imagination of his daughters, to whom life became a sort of enchanted voyage.

Sea phrases flavored the daily speech of the family. The piazza was "the deck," the little square staircase "the companion way"; passing friends were invited to "come aboard," and the merry girls "turned in" each night without a fear of storm or shipwreck. Never were happier voyagers on snugger craft or smoother seas.

But one day a financial hurricane burst upon them. The brave old Captain at the helm held fast with trumpet voice of cheer, while crash followed crash. But he was old now, this captain of a hundred storms; suddenly the voice broke, the strong hand loosened; he was gone.

When the storm was past "the deck" was empty. The ship had lost its master, and wife and daughters were drifting in the narrow straits of poverty.

Miss Tibbs, the dressmaker, was an authority in Stirling.

"They've got the Capt'n's own grit," she reported of the daughters, a few months later. "They don't set down an' whine, but jest pitch in, an' work like mad. Miss Ruth's sold some of her paintin's already, an' Miss Alice ain't ashamed to git sewin' from me, to pay for her lessons. She's goin' to make pictur's for books, an' they ain't goin' to do half-way work neither—jest like the Capt'n—fust class or nothin'."

TO PERSONS OF A
Nervous Temperament
WE WOULD RECOMMEND ESTEY'S
Iron and Quinine Tonic.
IT WILL REMOVE that low, despondent feeling so peculiar to nervous persons. After using it for a short time they will find their appetite improved, and their spirits become more cheerful, sleepless nights, twitching of the muscles and trembling of the limbs will all disappear, and they will feel and know that every fibre and tissue of their body is being braced and renovated. The peculiar operation of this medicine has undergone long and close observation, and it is believed it will never fail if properly and judiciously administered, unless other diseases predominate of a different character. Pale, sickly females will derive the greatest benefit from using a few bottles of ESTEY'S IRON AND QUININE TONIC. It is stimulating, appletizing and strengthening, and that power in it depends upon the Iron and Quinine which it contains, and not upon alcohol or opium, or any narcotic whatever. Price 50 cents. MANHOOD:
HOW LOST! HOW RESTORED!
We have recently published a New Edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.
Price in sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land. Address

CHIGNECTO POST AND BORDERER.

SACKVILLE, N. B., AUGUST 28, 1884.

SIR LEONARD TILLEY.

A correspondent of the POST called on Sir Leonard Tilley at St. John on Tuesday on his return from England. He found the Minister in excellent spirits and enjoying greatly improved health. He stated he had been suffering from exhaustion resulting from over-work. Rest and care was all he needed. He was particularly pleased with the position Canada was beginning to assume in the minds of the English people. The North-West, the Pacific Railway, and in short Canada was a leading topic of discussion everywhere. Great interest in this country had been stirred up. Next summer he anticipated a great many old country visitors to Canada. He appeared particularly well pleased with the present position and prospects of the Pacific Railway. It would cost a good deal below the estimate and would be completed in 1886. The traffic this fall would be exceedingly good. The Syndicate estimate the surplus wheat output will be seven millions of bushels—enough to pay the 2 per cent. guaranteed on their bonds. English capitalists are already moving to establish a line of steam ships between China and Japan and British Columbia—for which this route offers the advantages of being 500 miles shorter between China and London than any other route.

HIGHER TAXATION.

The Toronto Globe figures out that as the population in 1874 was 3,754,000 and the revenue $24,200,000, that the taxation per head was $6.46. Also the population in 1883, being 4,500,000 and the revenue being $33,794,000, the taxation was $7.50, or $1.04 increase per head in nine years.

This is all true.

But the Globe indulges in the fashionable weakness of all good Grit papers and omits to tell the whole truth.

It is too eager to pile up crimes against the Conservative party ever to admit that increased revenue means increased taxation. The increased business of the country has been such that the revenues derived from post offices, public works, &c., has increased more rapidly than the population. For instance, the increased business on the Intercolonial Railway alone is guilty of about 50 cents of this $1.04 increased taxation. The total receipts in 1874 were $893,430; in 1883, they were $2,370,921.

Probably the people of Canada can see their way clear to pardon increases of revenue secured by more business on I. C. R., or more letters passing through the post offices paying postage.

—The influence of the United States upon Great Britain has been very great and has made itself felt in many ways. American inventions and scientific discoveries have very materially modified the course of industrialism and science in the mother country; the wheat of the far west has completely demoralized the British farmer; and the successful working of the great republic has given a mighty impulse to the development of radicalism among the English middle and lower classes. But now, if English papers are to be believed, a direct attempt is being made to Americanize British institutions by destroying the Crown and the House of Lords and erecting a republic on their ruins. A Mr. Carnegie, an immensely wealthy iron-manufacturer of the United States, who has taken up his abode in England, has obtained control of several widely circulated papers and acquired a good deal of political influence. These resources he is charged with employing for the destructive ends mentioned above. The Conservative papers state that the whole of the present political agitation respecting the Franchise Bill owes its origin to America and that the recent processions, monster meetings, &c., have been got up by Mr. Carnegie and his gang. The St James's Gazette stigmatizes the whole movement as "a conspiracy which is more subtle and more dangerous than that of the dynamiters." We confess, however, that Mr. Carnegie's ambitious operations seem to us to be conducted in a far neater and more unobjectionable manner than if he had invested his millions in iron-clads and fire arms and invaded Great Britain with "all the pomp and circumstance of war."

—The Rev. C. P. Mulvaney, late Rector of St. Paul's Church, Sackville, like Cardinal Wolsey, was a "scholar and a ripe and good one." In 1870 he published in the Dublin University Kottabos a series of articles entitled the "Oxford Solar Myth" in which he with brilliant humour satirized Max Muller, the great Oxford professor, who explains all mythology as resting ultimately on personification of the sun. The professor was explained away as being himself only a myth, and it was carefully shown by an ingenious use of the methods of comparative philology how it ever came to be believed that any such man in reality existed. These articles excited a great deal of attention and received the warmest praise on all sides, not only from wits and literary men, but also from scientists who regarded them as shewing up effectually the wild fancies of the solar mythologists. Last month they were translated into French by a distinguished literary man with the addition of notes and a second part conceived in a similar vein. Mr. Mulvaney, we believe, is at present engaged in literary work in Toronto.

ADMISSION OF JAMAICA.

Sir Charles Tupper and Hon. M. Solomon, leader of the Jamaica Legislature, have been in communication some time with reference to the admission of the B. W. Indies to the Dominion. The proposed scheme is attracting a large amount of attention and has already aroused the opposition of a portion of the Grit press. The proposal comes from Jamaica, the largest and by far the most important of the British West India Islands, and the nearest to Canada, but the scheme is warmly supported by the colony of the Leeward Islands, and in fact all through the British West Indies there is a strong feeling in favor of a closer union with the Dominion. The island of Jamaica is about one hundred and fifty miles in length and its greatest width is fifty miles. It lies about 1800 miles from Halifax, or less than half the distance to Liverpool. It population is 580,000, and of this number no less than 444,186, or over 76 per cent. are black. Half breeds and those only partially black make up about 19 per cent., and about three per cent. are East Indians and Chinese, while the white population is but 2.08 per cent. of the whole. The other British islands are the Virgin Islands, Anegada, Anguilla, Barbuda, St. Christopher (or St. Kitts,) Nevis, Antigua, Montserrat and Dominica in the Leeward group, and St. Lucia, Barbadoes, St. Vincent, Grenadines, Grenada, Tobago and Trinidad of the Windward Islands. The colony of the Leeward Islands alone will export this season nearly 40,000 tons of sugar. One third of the sugar imported into Canada is from the British West Indies, and the amount would be largely increased if the duties were removed. The total Canadian imports from the British W. I. in 1883 were valued at $2,477.575, and the duty collected amounted to $931,577. The exports from the Dominion to the B. W. Indies in the same year amounted to $1,771,935, and of this sum $1,286,760 was for the products of the fisheries, $303,818 for lumber and other products of the forest, $102,135 for agricultural products, and $18,882 for animals and their products. A very large proportion of the exports was from Nova Scotia, and the trade of that province will, undoubtedly, be still further increased if the proposed union be carried into effect.

While the introduction of another race into the problem of Canadian Government together with the great distance of these islands would prove sources of difficulty, yet, on the other hand, the removal of duties on Canadian fish, lumber and produce would be an advantage to us, and considering the close commercial affinity between these Islands and the Dominion, they are really far less removed from us on the score of reciprocal interests as well as distance in miles than say British Columbia. These Islands will not come to us paupers; their tropical wealth will make them prizes, while the debt of Jamaica is less than one quarter per head that of Canada.

ATTORNEY-GENERALSHIP OF NOVA SCOTIA.

It is reported that Hon. Mr. White, Attorney-General, is to retire into the Registrarship of Deeds of Halifax and that his place is to be filled by Hon. Mr. Pipes. This news seems probable, and if true Mr. Pipes will return for re-election. As the Government of Nova Scotia is safe, even if the Conservatives of Cumberland defeated Hon. Mr. Pipes, no possible advantage can result to the party by opposing him, but on the contrary great disadvantage if he be put to the trouble and expense of a contest and then be elected. He is now charged with the care of important local interests—notably the construction of the Joggins Branch, to which Hon. Mr. Townshend is also fully committed, the prospects of which would not be improved by his defeat. Anyway, it has never been the policy of the Conservative party to prefer party to country and to offer factious opposition when large public interests were at stake.

BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

The Men who Compose it.

The British Association for the Advancement of Science met yesterday at McGill College, Montreal. It is the most learned and influential body in existence. It was established in 1831, and has attracted the ablest men in all departments of science. During its brief existence the world has made a greater stride forward than was probably achieved in the previous ten centuries in research and invention, in telegraphy, photography, spectrum analysis, anæsthetics, steam navigation, railroads, telephone, &c., &c.

The President is Lord Rayleigh, (John William Strutt) a young man of 42 years of age, stout and possessing full round features, hair already beginning to disapear from the crown. He was a brilliant Cambridge student, a Senior Wrangler, &c. He is the author of a work on Sound and ome scientific memoirs. He is the Professor of Physics at Cambridge.

Dr. R. S. Ball, Astronomer Royal of Ireland, will lecture on the subject of "Comets." Dr. Ball is two years older than President Rayleigh; he possesses large, strongly marked features, and has published many works on astronomy, mathematics and physical science. He has received many honors, and is said to be particularly attractive and racy as a lecturer.

Sir John Lubbock, permanent trustee of the Association, who presided at the semi-centennial meeting held at York three years ago, will attend the present meeting. He is a successful author, a member of Parliament, an energetic reformer, who has carried a number of important measures through the Commons, and the head of the banking institution that has existed for generations. He is fine looking, full-bearded man, about fifty years of age, who has done an immense amount of work and is a man of great distinction.

Sir Joseph Dalton Hooker is another of the former presidents of the Association who will be present. He is the greatest English authority on botanical science, and has published several important works on the subject. He has been president of the Royal Society and is director of the Kew Gardens. Although sixty-seven years old he yet retains the vigor of youth, and his hair is still dark and abundant.

Sir William Thomson, the well-known mathematician and physicist, who will be present at Montreal, has also been president of the Association. He is a practical inventor and a skilful experimenter, and is most popularly known through his valuable inventions in connection with sub-marine telegrapy, for which he received the honor of knighthood on the successful completion of the Atlantic cable in 1866. Since 1846 he has occupied the chair of Natural Philosophy in the University at Glasgow. Born in Belfast sixty years ago, he carries his years well, and would pass for a much younger man were it not that his flowing beard gives him a somewhat patriarchal appearance.

The secretary of the Association is Rev. Thomas G. Bonney, Professor of Geology in University College, Loudon. He has been conpicuously successful as an original worker in geology and petrology, and has made numerous and valuable contributions to the proceedings of the Royal Society and to the British scientific journals. For two years after his ordination in 1857 he held a curacy in St. John's Church, Westminster, but his subsequent life has been entirely devoted to science. He is only fifty-one years old, but his locks are thin and his beard is silvered.

The credit of suggesting the bold and original idea of holding a meeting of the Association three thousand miles from home is due to John T. Lewis, D. D., LL D., Bishop of Ontario; but the credit of reducing the suggestion to practical shape belongs to Captain Bedford Prim, who appears to be admirably adapted for carrying through an enterprise of this description. For many years he was an adventurous navigator, but he left the sea at length, studied law, and ten years ago was returned to Parliament. He is a member of several scientific societies and has published a number of works on geographical and kindred subjects. His appearance indicates great determination and he looks as if he might still be at home on the quarter deck.

Mr. E. B. Tylor is president of the Authropological Section of the Association and will attend the present meeting. He is a member of the Royal Society and is the author of various celebrated works on anthropological, ethnological and archæological subjects. Mr. Tylor is fifty-two years old and has a beard like unto Aaron's.

The president of the Chemical Section is Professor Henry E. Roscoe, who fills the Chair of Chemistry at Owens College, Manchester. He is a member of the Royal Society, the author of a book on spectrum analysis, and joint author of a standard work on chemistry. He has seen fifty-one years, and is full-faced and clean-shaven.

Dr. Thomas Sterry Hunt, the distinguished chemist and geologist, who has taken a prominent part in the preparations for the Montreal meeting, is a native of Connecticut and a student of Yale, but became connected with the Geological Survey of Canada many years ago and is still a resident of Montreal. He has devoted himself chiefly to chemistry and chemical geology and has made numerous contributions to European and American scientific journals and societies.

Among the prominent men at the Montreal meeting will be Sir Lyon Playfair, who was a student of Thomas Graham and afterward of Liebig, whose works he translated into English. His fame as a scientist has been before the British public for a generation, for, after being Professor of Chemistry at the Royal Institution, and subsequently at the Museum of Practical Geology, he was, in 1857, elected president of the Chemical Society of London, and in 1858 was appointed Professor of Chemistry in the University of Edinburg. He had charge of the department of juries in the great exhibition of 1862, and was entrusted with choosing the jurors, some six hundred in number, including the most eminent men in science and industry in all Europe. Dr. Playfair was born in Bengal in 1819, and is a grave scholarly-looking man who would attract attention in any assembly. The universities of Edinburg and St. Andrews elected him to Parliament in 1868, and he held for a time the office of Speaker of the House of Commons. He has written many scientific works and honors have been showered upon him with a lavish hand.

A prominent man in geological matters is William Boyd Dawkins, F. R. S., who was born in 1838 and was the first Burdett-Coutts geological scholar at Oxford. He became connected with her Majesty's Geological Survey of Great Britain in 1862 and Professor of Geology in Owens College in 1874. He holds independent views on prehistoric man, and he is best known by his works on "Cave-Hunting and the Early Inhabitants of Europe," and "Early Man in Britain and his place in the Tertiary Period." He is clean-shaven except a moustache, and has a decidedly youthful appearance.

The fame acquired by Mr. James Glashier is largely in connection with meteorology and aeronautics, and the results of his observations in this direction were so highly appreciated that he was in 1849 elected a fellow of the Royal Society. In 1865 he succeeded Admiral Fitzroy in the management of the Meteorological department of the Board of Trade. His face, framed in a mass of grey hair and whiskers, will be one of the most striking at the meeting.

One of the most distinguished of the English chemists is Dr. Edward Franklin, who was born in 1825, and who pursued his chemical studies both in England and on the Continent. His scientific labors and researches have been highly appreciated and have brought him many honors both at home and abroad. Dr. Franklin is apparently still in the prime of life and has abundant dark hair and a full beard.

Professor Arthur Cayley, the retiring president, is a celebrated mathematician, and a fellow of all the leading learned societies. He is the author of many abstruse papers, and in 1882 received the Copley medal from the Royal Society for his profound mathematical researches. He was born in 1821, has thin, white hair and a clean-shaven face.

Not least by any means among the intellectual giants of the British Association, is Dr. John William Dawson, principal of McGill University. Born at Pictou, N. S., in 1820, he studied at the University of Edinburg, and returning home, devoted himself to the natural history of his native province and New Brunswick, embodying the results of his researches in his work on "Acadian Geology." He is the author of many important scientific works, and has spent a busy and useful life. At one time he was Superintendent of Education for Nova Scotia and had charge of the Normal School, and he has done much to raise McGill University to its present high position. He is a high authority on everything connected with fossil botany, and his services in the cause of science have been recognized by numerous honors from both sides of the Atlantic. In Dr. Dawson Canadian science finds her ablest representative, and there is no doubt that the meeting of the British Association at Montreal is largely due to his influence.

THE TALLAPOOSA SUNK.

Collision between the United States Steamer and a Schooner.—Four Lives Lost, one a Sackville, N. B., Man.

We regret to-day to record the death, by drowning, of Dr. Clarence Black, son of the late Samuel F. Black of this place. The particulars will be found below. Dr. Black left here when still a youth and studied medicine at Philadelphia. After obtaining his profession, his merits were such that, though amongst strangers, he secured a medical appointment in the Naval service of United States, and was finally promoted to the rank of surgeon, in which position he served in a number of stations, foreign and at home. He was a man of generous instincts and his past success was full of promise for the future. His untimely end is, therefore, acause of bitter grief to his friends. He was unmarried and aged about 35 years.

THE COLLISION.

The United States steamer "Tallapoosa" was sunk last Thursday night by collision with a schooner. While on her voyage from Boston to Newport, where she was to await the arrival of Secretary Chandler and family, she came in collision with the schooner "James S. Lowell," a large three-master, with a cargo of nearly one thousand two hundred tons of coal. The schooner's officers were evidently a good deal astray and luffed across the "Tallapoosa's" bows, and before the ship could be handled to ward the danger she was struck on her starboard bow and sank within ten minutes. There appeared to be no confusion on the "Tallapoosa." The boats were rapidly but carefully lowered and the crew safely placed on board. Among the missing were Past Assistant Surgeon Black and one of the boys named Foster.

THE LOSSES.

The effects of the officers and crew were entirely lost, and Secretary Chandler's private baggage went with the ship.

CAPTAIN REED'S ACCOUNT.

Captain Reed, of the schooner "James S. Lowell," states in relation to the collision that he was passing through the Sound Thursday night with a strong south-west wind, having all sails set. The vessel was going at least nine knots. The night was clear but dark, when, two miles away, the lookout reported a light ahead. "Shortly it was seen to be a red light, and I said, speaking to the wheelsman, 'Red, Lord; keep her straight.' I stood near the wheel during all the time, and the course was not altered until word came that the green light could be seen. To avoid a collision, seeing that the steamer was doing nothing to avoid us, I ordered the helm hard down, but before it could be done, and before my vessel had altered her course at all, the two vessels struck each other, their stems seemingly coming together exactly. Our vessel's stem glanced by the "Tallapoosa's" and penetrated her hull.

PAYMASTER TARBELL'S STATEMENT.

Paymaster John F. Tarbell, who was a passenger on the "Tallapoosa" gives an interesting account of the collision and subsequent sinking of the "Tallapoosa," to a Journal reporter. He said:—"We left Boston for Newport at nine o'clock Thursday morning. Everything went well until we reached Martha's Vineyard. About half-past eleven o'clock, as near as I could judge, we were about six miles to the eastward of West Chop light, running about eight knots an hour. I turned in at ten o'clock. At that hour the weather was clear, and we were steaming along at a fast rate of speed. The first I knew of the collision was when the schooner struck us. I was sound asleep, and at first supposed we were aground. I tumbled out of bed, and just then some one called down the companionway, 'All hands abandon ship.' The men rushed on deck, but there was no excitement. The officers and men were very cool. A few who were near the bow jumped overboard, but most of us took to the boats. As soon as we were clear from the ship we could see the result of the collision. We were in the channel and the schooner had struck us square on the starboard side by the foremast.

THROUGH THE SHIP'S SIDE.

"The schooner's bow had cut half way through the ship, tearing a terrible hole in the side, through which the water was rushing. The foremast was cut away by the force of the collision, and the schooner's bow was shattered. The "Tallapoosa" sank in ten minutes. All that can be seen of her now is about half of her smokestack. She sank bow first. There was, of course, no time to save anything. We had to leave just as we turned out of bed. The schooner sent out a boat to help pick up those who were in the water, and to render any assistance necessary. Another schooner also came up and took part of the men, while the remainder went on board the schooner that had run us down. She was leaking badly, and the captain said he was afraid he could not keep her above water. The water was gaining on him, so our men took a turn at the pumps until he could get his steam pump working. After that he was all right. The "Gate City" came in a few minutes and took all the "Tallapoosa's" crew.

The statements of others of the "Tallapoosa," however, would tend to show that a different set of movements were followed. The general opinion among the sailors is that the schooner was going, in such way as to leave to the "Tallapoosa" the option of passing astern or across her bows. The "Tallapoosa" chose the latter course, and in endeavoring to glide in front was run into by the schooner.

Says a sailor, who claims to have been in the pilot house at the time of the disaster:—"The captain, navigator and mate saw the lights of the schooner, but disputed whether it was the green or the red light, and finally the captain exclaimed, 'Well, do something; turn her one way or the other,' and then we struck." One of the men at the wheel declares "they gave the order hard a starboard when it ought to have been hard a port."

SURGEON BLACK'S FATE.

Four men are reported lost, but of these only two are known certainly to have perished. Surgeon Clarence E. Black at the time of the disaster was below in the wardroom. The carpenter's mate being injured in the hand when the mast fell hurried to have the surgeon attend to the wound. As he was so doing the cry of "Abandon ship!" rang out. The two men hastened on deck; the surgeon made his way aft to the hurricane deck. Here he stood under the awning, which was spread, holding fast to a settee. He did not seem to realize his perilous position, and when Lieutenant Everett, perceiving him, called out that he had better provide himself with a life preserver, the Surgeon responded, "Where are they?" The Lieutenant pointed them out, but his friend did not move.

A sailor, hurrying by, heard the fated officer remark to himself, "Well, I guess this is the last of Black," and almost immediately the vessel sank.

It is supposed that the awning prevented the officer from clearing himself from the wreck. He was immediately drowned.

THE VESSEL'S HISTORY.

The "Tallapoosa" is a wooden sidewheel doubleender steamer and was used principally as a transport and despatch vessel. She was originally built of white oak at the Boston Navy Yard in 1863 and was rebuilt at Baltimore in 1874, when extensive internal improvements were made, including a large and elegant cabin. During the war she did blockade duty on the Southern coast and was frequently used in the transportation of troops and sailors. Since then she has been engaged in carrying freight to the different yards. She was also in demand as a pleasure boat, possessing peculiar advantages and facilities for the accommodation of passengers. Secretaries Robeson, Thompson, Hunt and Chandler have frequently used her in making inspection trips. She was frequently the subject of ridicule, but nevertheless was regarded as a good vessel of her kind. Her average speed was about ten knots an hour. Her dimensions were:—Length on load line, 240 feet, and extreme breadth 35 feet. Her tonnage was 650.

LOCAL MATTERS.

THE TEA MEETING announced in last issue to take place at Pugwash on Sept. 11th, is to be held at Port Howe.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE. — Mr. Alex. Ford has sold his house and premises on Bridge Street to Mr. William Richardson for $1,300.

BRICKS.—MR. G. W. Milton has just burned a kiln of 80,000 superior machine made bricks. He intends to burn several other kilns this season.

VANDERBILT, it is to-day reported, parted the more willingly with Maud S for only $40,000 as he had lately heard of the performances of St. Julien, Jr., of this place, whose value is now stiffening.

AN INDIAN RELIC.—A few days ago Mr. Ovid Weldon dug up a large stone axe in the marsh near his bakery. The axe, which is quite a formidable looking weapon in a good state of preservation, may be seen at this office.

CAPE BREAKWATER.—Mr. Eugene Lafleur, C. E., and party, have completed their surveys for the breakwater at Cape Tormentine, and he left for the West on Monday night. It will probably be a month or two before the location is finally decided.

PERSONAL.—Hon. Samuel Prowse, M. L. C.; of P. E. Island, was in town yesterday.—Thos. Robertson, M. P., of Shelburne, N. S., was registered at the Brunswick last night. —Rev. B. Longley, formerly Principal of the Male Academy and at present pastor of the Dominion Church at Ottawa, has been visiting his friends here. He preached an eloquent sermon at the Methodist Church on Sunday evening.

FROM PARRSBORO.—On Monday last as Albert Smith, wife and three children were returning from Advocate Harbor, by sme means or other, one of the horses became frightened and in his jumping broke the pole of the wagon, and the part attached to the wagon stuck in the ground causing an upset, and injuring each of them, more or less, Mr. Smith having his arm very badly bruised. Providentially no one was seriously hurt.

FIRE.—Mr. Crane Charter's hotel at Memramcook was destroyed by fire on Monday night. The fire originated in the wood-shed at the rear of the house and had made such rapid headway before it was discovered that but little could be saved. The barns and other building in the vicinity were with difficulty rescued from destruction. A part of the furniture was saved in a damaged condition. Mr. Charters is a heavy loser as the amount of insurance was small.

GENERAL NEWS.

—The potato crop along the St. John river will be very good.

—Seventeen workmen were suffocated last week at Bray, in France, while in an underground canal.

—The Salvation Army was attacked in Worthing, England, on Wednesday. The assailants were dispersed by dragoons.

—Charles Broadhurst, a young man belonging to St. John, was drowned last Sunday, near Indiantown, while canoeing.

—Abyssinian envoys have arrived in London with gifts from King John to the Queen. Among them are an elephant and a monkey.

—The Conference of the Young Men's Christian Association of the world met in Berlin, on Wednesday, with Count Bernstorff presiding.

—Captain Renard, of Paris, claims that a balloon postal system is as easy as the railroad system, and that he can construct a balloon capable of carrying a hundred soldiers.

—"Death from excessive use of alcohol," was the verdict of the jury in the case of a Mrs. Holman who was found dead at her residence, in St. John, on Saturday morning last.

—A notable piece of work was done at the Pullman Car Works, Illinois, on Monday. One hundred cars were constructed, painted, and all complete within regular working hours.

—It is a dangerous thing to allow the diarrhœa or dysentery to go unchecked and there is no need of it. A small bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment will cure the most stubborn case that can be produced.

—Messrs. Morrice & Co. of Montreal, have an order to ship five hundred bales of grey cotton to the Old Country, the price paid therefor being higher than is obtained for the same class of goods in Canada.

—Fever and ague, malarious fever, bilious and typhoid fevers all originate in one producing cause and may all be easily prevented by Parsons' Purgative Pills. These pills act directly and powerfully upon the blood.

—At Markdale, Ont., on Monday last, a school-teacher, named Norris, aged 28 years, entered a class-room in which a young girl, aged 20, by the name of Miss Ford, was and to whom he had been paying attention for some time past. He asked her to marry him, and she replied, "No." He then drew a revolver from his pocket and fired at her three shots, which struck her in the face and head. He afterwards fired at himself and died one hour later. Miss Ford lies in a critical condition.

—The thirty-ninth annual meeting of the Baptist Convention of the Maritime Provinces was opened in the Baptist Church at Moncton last Saturday, Rev. John Marsh, President in the Chair. The following officers were elected and installed for the ensuing year:—President—Rev. Dr. Sawyer, of Wolfville; Vice Presidents—Arthur Simpson, of Bay View, Prince Edward Island and Jno. S. Trites, of Moncton; Assistant Secretary—Rev. J. O. Redden, of Alexandria, P. E. I.; Treasurer—Harvey Ayer, of Moncton; Assistant Treasurer—C. W. Roscoe, of Wolfville. The Convention was largely attended and included many of the leading men in the Denomination, and some highly important business was transacted. The closing session was held on Tuesday evening.

Botsford Items.

—A meeting of the creditors of Crane & Harper, Bayfield, took place a few days ago. The creditors seemed to recognize that their losses arose principally from failures in the lobster business, in which they were largely interested, and that their other trade was in a very satisfactory condition, and expressed themselves desirous of using their influence towards sustaining the firm and assented to a proposition made to pay 40 per cent., which will, no doubt, be accepted by the other creditors. This arrangement is received here with pleasure, as since new blood in the person of Mr. Harper was let into the business, it has shown a great deal of energy and enterprise, and we should all be glad to have their business go on. X.

—Potatoes are about half a crop. Hay has been gathered in; it was estimated as short of an average crop. The yield of late grain, especially barley, will be almost nothing.

—The N. P., with all its boasted benefits, has not improved the quality of our rum. Home industries are good, but an exception must be taken to the whiskey manufactured at Port Elgin, such as was furnished the electors on Scott Act election day. The partakers who were not fighting were doubled up under the fence.

From Amherst.

—The Church of England Sunday School picnic was held yesterday afternoon at Fort Cumberland.

—Rapid progress is being made in the building of the rink and exhibition building. Rhodes, Curry & Co. have the contract for the latter at $2,033. The building will be very plain, but quite suitable for district exhibitions for which it is intended.

—Two flat cars of the ballast train engaged in raising the track at the canal jumped the rails near Victoria Street Crossing on Monday evening. The two cars were so badly disabled that they had to be thrown from the track. No one hurt.

—Quite a sensation was caused here on Tuesday by the report of an attempted burglary early that morning. Some scoundrel, as yet unknown, disguised by a liberal coating of burnt cork or soot, had entered the residence of the Widow Tucker by a back window. After ransacking the house pretty thoroughly, lighting his way by matches, the ruffian entered the room of a boarder, Miss Boyce, who was awakened by the noise. She attempted to give an alarm, but was threatened with having her brains blown out should she stir. The man evidently knew whose house he was in and who the occupants were, and he doubtless thought that Mrs. Tucker would have money in the house. Luckily there was no money in the house, and the wretch departed doing no other damage than leaving the marks of his disguise on about every door and drawer in the house. No arrest has been made.

The New Toilet Gem.

Philoderma owes its immense success to the fact that it is radically different from any preparation in the market. It is a bland and soothing liquid, nicely perfumed, and when applied to the hands and face produces a delicious sense of coolness and comfort, exercising also a direct curative action. It is entirely free from the sticky quality of glycerine and the greasy nature of camphor ice or cold cream. To those who are unable to use glycerine, from its irritating effect, Philoderma is a necessity. Prepared only by E. M. Estey, Pharmacist, Moncton, N. B. Sold by druggists everywhere. Price 25c.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure

Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, For Pulmonary Troubles.

T. J. MCFALL, M. D., Anderson, S. C., says: "I consider Scott's Emulsion one of the best preparations in the market for Pulmonary Troubles. I have used it in my practice since 1876, and am well satisfied with it."

TRUTH IS STRONGER THAN FICTION.—The poet saith, "There is nothing half so sweet in life as Love's young dream." Correct! Nothing excepting Estey's Fragrant Philoderma.

Albert Co. Items.

—A meeting of the Albert County Teachers' Institute will be held at Hillsboro to-day and to-morrow. It is expected that the Superintendent of Education will address a public meeting this evening.

—A lad named German, who was working on the farm of Mr. Harris Steeves, Salem, was drowned in a creek in the hay-field last Thursday. He had been left alone in the field while the others went to the barn with a load of hay, and it is supposed that in going in to bathe he got beyond his depth.

From Southampton.

—Mr. Martin Hoeg, whose hundredth birth-day we noticed a few weeks ago, died at the residence of his grandsen, at Southampton, four days after his birth-day.

—The Methodists of Southampton intend holding a tea meeting at their new parsonage on Tuesday, Sept. 9. See posters.

—A week of fine weather has greatly advanced the hay-making. Other crops are promising. A few weeks of warm, dry weather will ensure a good return for the labors of our farmers.

From Shediac.

—The mackerel fishing has been good lately. On Friday last two men, in one boat, at Aboushagan, caught 1,146 mackerel.

—Dr. Bourgeois, who has been practising here for about one year, left last Thursday for Illinois, where he intends settling permanently.

—Some of the finest fields of wheat to be seen in the county are found in Barachois. On high land the crops are extra good.

—Scott Act rum is now only dispensed on a small scale—dealing it out in ginger-pop bottles, &c.—and drunkenness and rowdyism have largely disappeared.

Dorchester Items.

—The Methodist Congregation and Sabbath School of Dorchester and vicinity intend having an excursion and pic-nic to Point du Chene about second week in September.

—We understand that there is to be an "At Home" for the parishioners at the Rectory on Tuesday evening, the 2nd of Sept. No doubt the occasion will be very enjoyable.

—The Rev. Mr. Harris, of Amherst, will officiate in Trinity Church, here, on Sunday, the 31st. The Rector of Dorchester will officiate in Amherst.

—The barque "Queen of the Fleet," Capt. Wm. Pringle, master, grounded on Grindstone Island while coming up the bay on Sunday in a dense fog. The vessel was uninjured and got off all right next tide.

—Last Saturday night a convict at the Penitentiary fell in a fit and cut his arm badly, severing the arteries. The wounds were promptly dressed by Dr. Mitchell.

Baie Verte Items.

—Mr. Jerry Gooden, while walking on the railroad towards his home, last Saturday night, fell into one of the culverts and broke his shoulder blade.

—Mr. John McKinnon, late of Petitcodiac, has rented Mr. Amos Gooden's blacksmith shop, Harper's Corner, and opened up business with good prospects under the N. P.

—Farmers, all along the line, are busily engaged hay-making. The prospects of grain crops being good, are slim.

—Mrs. Frank Gooden has moved her stock, consisting of confectionery, &c., to the shop near Mr. Amos Gooden's. We hope the public will in the future as in the past, patronize this good lady.

—Messrs. Allen & Davis's rotary mill was on Monday conveyed to Rufus Fillmore's, Dorchester Road, where it will be set up and saw lumber for Fillmore and others.

—An assault and battery case, set down for trial on Saturday last, before Justice Hamilton, in which David Niles and Andrew Dale figured conspicuously, and which grew out of too much "Scott Act" on the brain, on polling day at Oulton's Corner, was by consent of parties taken out of court and referred to three men who, after hearing the evidence pro and con, awarded Niles damages to the amount of $8 and costs.

—On Saturday evening quite a number of people gathered on Capt. Weeks' wharf to witness the entering into our harbor of a neat, trim looking little craft which, with a gentle breeze after her, gracefully ploughed through the blue waters like a "thing of life." On arriving at the wharf we found her to be a "una" rigged boat, twenty feet keel, with centre-board, modelled by H. C. McLeod, Cashier of Halifax Bank, Amherst, N. S., built by Mr. J. S. McGlashing, of Bayfield, and owned by our enterprising townsman, Mr. Chas. Prescott. This splendidly medelled and thoroughly equipped pleasure boat will be hailed as a great boon by the pleasure seekers of this place, and too much praise cannot be ascribed Mr. Prescott for supplying a want long felt by the lovers of aquatic sports.

Shaker Blood Syrup

Is designed to meet the wants of a large portion of our people who are either too poor to employ a physician, or are too far removed to easily call one, and a still larger class who are not sick enough to require medical advice, and yet are out of sorts and need a medicine to build them up, give them an appetite, purify their blood, and oil up the machinery of their bodies so it will do its duty willingly. No other article takes hold of the system and hits exactly the spot like Shaker Blood Syrup. It works like magic, reaching every part of the human body through the blood, giving to all renewed life and energy.

My friend, you need not take our word. Ask your neighbor, who has just taken one bottle. He will tell you that "It's the best dollar I ever invested."

Shaker Syrup Company: Dear Sirs—Although greatly prejudiced against patent medicines in general, I was induced, from the excellent reports I had heard of your Blood Syrup, to try a bottle, last December, for dyspepsia and general prostration, and I have received very gratifying results from its use. I am now using the second bottle, and consider it a very valuable remedy for indigestion and its attendant troubles.

Yours truly,
O. F. Twitchell,
Gorham, N. H.

☞A gentleman who has been suffering from the Debility and Languor peculiar to this season, says: "Shaker Blood Syrup is putting new life right into me. I have gained ten pounds since I began to take it." Has taken two bottles.

Shaker Blood Syrup is sold by all Druggists, Price, $1.00 per bottle, or six for $5.

Anderson vs. Fawcett.

We see by the papers that the Supreme Court on Saturday last gave judgment in this long pending law suit, ordering that a verdict be entered for the plaintiff with nominal damages. The circumstances which occasioned this litigation were as follows: Anderson, as agent of Wilkinson, sold at auction a farm belonging to the latter and Fawcett became the purchaser, the terms of sale being a certain per centage down and the balance in one and two years with interest, secured by satisfactory joint notes. Fawcett paid the percentage, and on Anderson presenting the deed of the farm, Fawcett wished to send it to his lawyer to examine. If correct Fawcett was to keep it and pay the purchase money, and if not correct the deed was to be returned to Anderson, and a paper to that effect was prepared and signed by Fawcett and given to Anderson. The deed was satisfactory, Fawcett recorded it, and took possession of the farm, and upon Anderson making application for settlement of the balance of the purchase money, Fawcett produced P. E. I. bank bills to the amount, and offered them. These were refused as they were at a discount of one half per cent. Fawcett declined to pay in any other money, and Anderson would not accept it without the discount. Upon this Anderson brought an action in his own name on the agreement Fawcett had given him at the time he received Wilkinson's deed from Anderson. The cause was tried before the Chief Justice some six years ago and a verdict was given for Anderson for amount of balance of purchase money. This verdict the Supreme Court set aside and a new trial granted on the ground that there was nothing to show that at the time the writing was given there was any intention to vary the terms of the sale at auction, and a new agreement substituted, that there was nothing to prevent Wilkinson from bringing an action, that Wilkinson was no party to the written paper, and not being bound by it, the original agreement of purchase was not extinguished.

The cause was tried again in January last and a consent having been entered into by the counsel trying the law that the Court at Fredericton should have power to enter a verdict for plaintiff for nominal damages if entitled to it in the whole case. The defendant went into evidence and a verdict passed for Fawcett. It was argued by Anderson's counsel that Anderson having been entrusted by Wilkinson with his deed to give to Fawcett and receive the purchase money, was liable to Wilkinson for the purchase money, he having delivered the deed, and that this liability was a sufficient consideration for Fawcett's promise to pay him the purchase money, and by Fawcett's counsel it was insisted that Fawcett being indebted to Wilkinson the principal the action should have been brought by him, and not by Anderson his agent, who could not discharge Fawcett from his liability to Wilkinson and that there was no new contract. We hear Fawcett intends appealing from this decision to the Court of Appeal at Ottawa, so there is a prospect of the lawyers having more business in this matter.

The Noonan and McDonald Affray.

DEAR EDITOR:—I was sorry to see so grossly incorrect a statement of the unfortunate affray between Noonan and McDonald published in the Transcript and Telegraph and also from your Cape Spear correspondent, in your last issue. These statements all evidently emanate from the same source, and we think it unworthy of a person aspiring to high positions to spread broadcast through the newspapers such falsehoods against an injured, though worthy family—thinking thereby to prejudice jurors and, if possible, judges. The facts of the affray referred to are set forth in the evidence given at the examination of McDonald, and we think it would be more in the interest of justice for such newspapers to publish the evidence of a Court than give space to prejudicial correspondence. Mr. Noonan is not well and about his work, as stated in your last issue, but remains in a critical condition; the ball still remains in him and he is weak and unable to set up more than half an hour at a time, and, although the doctor thinks it will not prove fatal or may not give him further serious trouble, his present condition is far from assuring.

Yours, &c.,
JUSTICE.

BOLD BURGLARY.—On Tuesday night the house of Mr. Henry Allison was broken into and robbed of jewellery valued at about one hundred dollars. An entrance was effected by breaking a pane in the pantry window and undoing the fastenings. The burglar appears to have acted with great coolness, for he visited the room occupied by the two servant girls, who were awakened by his entrance, and held quite a prolonged conversation with them after threatening to kill them if they gave an alarm. He told them which rooms he had been in and inquired where the money was kept, and, failing to get the desired information, threatened to come back and shoot them if they stirred before he got out of the house. The girls were so terrified that they did not give the alarm till after the family were stirring, but they think they would be able to identify the thief. The house of Mrs. Tucker, at Amherst, was burglarized the previous night, and the description of the robber given by the servant girl, who was awakened by his entering her room, leads to the belief that he was the one who plundered Mr. Allison's house.

—The best medical authorities acknowledge the great value of Ayer's Cathartic Pills, and frequently prescribe their use with the utmost confidence, well knowing that they are the most effectual remedy ever devised for diseases caused by derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

—Do you wish a beautiful complexion? Then use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It cleanses and purifies the blood, and thereby removes blotches and pimples from the skin, making it smooth and clear, and giving it a bright and healthy appearance.

Indulgent parents who allow their children to eat heartily of high-seasoned food, rich pies, cake, &c., will have to use Hop Bitters to prevent indigestion, sleepness nights, sickness, pain, and perhaps, death. No family is safe without them in the house.

In purchasing Estey's Iron and Quinine Tonic, be sure and get the genuine. See that our Trade mark and Signature is on every bottle. There are lots of spurious preparations on the market.

PERSONS of a Nervous Temperament should use Estey's Iron and Quinine Tonic, it removes at once that low, despondent feeling. Try it.

Explanation from Bayfield.

MR. EDITOR:—In looking over the columns of your valuable paper, I observed a reference, in the Botsford news, to a "ranch run by the notorious Jim." I was not a little surprised as I read the statements contained therein, as I could not imagine that any person in this community could be so devoid of honor, principle and truth as to make such assertions. I affirm and am prepared to prove by the people of Bayfield Corner that their slumbers have not been disturbed in any way or form (since the "notorious Jim's" house has been built) that is, by persons who were under the influence of the ardent. And I am very doubtful as to whether your correspondent knows or can ever make good his insinuation that intoxicants are sold in the "ranch." Now, Mr. Editor, I do not uphold the selling of liquors illegally, much less would I like to know that it was sold in our quiet community. And further I believe that if the parties who talk so loudly and so extravagantly about selling rum would refrain from drinking so much in the Corners, there would be less places such as he chooses to call "ranches."

Your correspondent's stomach must have been in bad order, as a great many of his remarks were very ill-timed, and the public generally trust that he may adhere more strictly to the truth when next he wields the pen. MOSES.

—The numerous friends of Mr. H. H. Pitts, the genial versatile manager of the Fredericton Reporter, author of "Our Josiah," and other works of fiction, will be surprised to learn that he has gone over to the great majority. On the 19th, he was married to Miss L. A. Sterling McLeod, of Springfield, K. C., Rev. Rev. Lewis Jack officiating.—Telegraph.

—The Rev. Ernest Wilberforce, Bishop of Newcastle, is an eloquent and persistent advocate of total abstinence. Now and then, from a sense of duty he arrays himself in well-worn clothes, and goes about incognito among the poor and criminal classes on tours of observation. On one occasion he was riding in a third-class railway carriage, of which the only other occupant was a pitman. The latter, viewing the Bishop's clerical but "seedy" garments, remarked:—"I'se war'nt ye're a poor curate, noo, travellin' wi' the likes o' huz?" "I once was, my friend," replied the Bishop, "but—" "Oh, aye, I see!" cried the other, all in good faith. "That wretched drink! Aye, aye! Too bad!" The incident—without naming the bishop—has since formed the topic of a cartoon in Punch.

DOCK STREET, ST. JOHN, N. B.

This was three years ago. Persistent study was bringing them through the slough of amateurism on to the high ground of professional skill.

The winter lessons in New York drained their small hoardings, and each spring witnessed progress and bankruptcy.

But incorrigible cheerfulness and ingenious devices ameliorated even this barren period.

"Why is not every girl taught a trade?" said Alice on one occasion. "What a breathless scramble we should have been saved if we had mastered our art before we needed to live by it."

"My daughters," announced Ruth, "shall be trained to do one thing thoroughly, if it is only to scrub floors."

A winter studio in New York was their goal, and plans for a golden future, when fame and fortune should hobnob with them there, filled their sanguine brains.

The fine old parlor, with its Oriental coloring and flavor, had become their home studio.

"Let us be esthetic if we are daughters of toil," Ruth had said. We must spend the greater part of our time in the studio, so the studio should be our very pleasantest room. If we have visitors, we can toss our painting aprons behind the screen, rub the paint from our noses, and smile a bland welcome, in just two seconds."

It was the theory of the girls that a policy of stern repression alone saved their fragile mother from over-work. Hence that gentle reprobate was kept under constant surveillance; even then her encroachments upon the self-appointed household tasks of the girls were scandalous, and family discipline was maintained with difficulty.

The episode of the hat had just occurred, when a clandestine sound of tinkling glass came from the next room.

"Listen!" said Ruth. "Mother is in mischief again."

Instantly two imperious girls descended upon the culprit.

"This is our work!"

"Surrender those goblets!"

"Now go aft and rest!"

And the little mother was whirled into the studio and tucked up on the sofa, with a parting kiss, before she could protest.

"Such a rebellious parent!" said Ruth. "Look at this table nearly set, and the things all brought up from the cellar. I wonder she doesn't sit up nights to take in surreptitious washing!"

"I advocate eating on clam-shells with chop-sticks, to be burned with neatness and dispatch after each meal," said Alice.

"Dish-washing is a waste of time," assented Ruth.

"Let us dignify it hereafter by repeating poetry. We might learn——"

"Oh, don't," cried Ruth, "I've tried that. One day I marched solemnly around the table four times, with the soup tureen, and emptied the milk into the flower pots besides. All in perfect time, and to the 'Ode to the Duke of Wellington.'"

"We talk," said Alice, meditatively, "as if poetry were a useful art and dish-washing profitless, yet we could live serenely a thousand years without a poem, and would be discouraged in less than five hundred without a dishcloth."

"That is one of the rasping things about life," scolded Ruth. "All great things are accomplished by means of so many aggravating small things."

"I found that out long ago," said Alice. "The only way to be really comfortable is to do cheerfully lots of uncomfortable things.'

"I would much rather do something heroic once a week and omit bed-making every day," was Ruth's comment.

A few weeks later two stalwart young men were tramping through Central Park, talking together earnestly.

"Stirling?" repeated Jack King, in amazement, "do you know anything about Stirling?"

"Rather! My cousins live there, and I went to school there—but why this sudden blare about Stirling?"

"To think that you knew all this time," muttered Jack.

"Knew what?"

"Oh, nothing."

"I like this," exclaimed Joe, "backing out just when you've worked up a fellow's curiosity.'

"You would chaff me."

"So that's it! Who is she?"

"That is just what I want you to tell me."

"I thought you were fire-proof. How did it happen?"

"I saw her coming out of Cooper Institute, one day last March. The first look finished me."

"You, of all men! Jack!"

"Don't chaff, old man, I'm hard hit. No woman ever before——"

"Yes, yes! But what is she like?"

"Like my dreams—and I'll chop your head off if you grin again."

"All this is very interesting, but what has it to do with Stirling and with me?"

"Well, you see, I hung around there until I barely escaped arrest on suspicion of vagrancy, and discovered that she came on Wednesdays. I saw her go in and come out three more times—and then, in April, she stopped coming. I've made all sorts of inquiries, and I'm confident they live in Stirling, because——"

Joe started.

"They?"

"Yes, there were two; sisters, I fancy."

"I know them; which did you admire?"

"The stylish blonde. Such a spirited air, and yet the sweetest home face. The other I scarcely—"

Joe interrupted bruequely:

"'The other' we'll not discuss. Your friend is Miss Alice Denver—a royal girl."

"And you'll help me?"

"Well—yes—I believe in you, Jack, you are sound; you'll make a capital—brother-in-law?"

"Brother-in-law?"

Joe continued, dryly: "Yes—that 'other girl' whom you scarcely noticed—"

Jack interrupted, in hasty trepidation: "Oh, yes! A regular daisy! Lovely eyes!—"

Joe ignored him.

"—is Miss Ruth Denver, whom I intend to marry."

"So you are engaged, old fellow!"

"Not exactly. She refused me last year, and may refuse me this year, but I shall marry her."

"Umph!"

"Unless you are prepared for a slow seige, don't begin, Jack—they are not on the threshold, with a smile and a giggle, for the first fellow that comes along. They are happy and absorbed in their work, with a bright, contented home-life. They don't need us, Jack. They won't fall in love from mere inertia and lack of occupation, like some girls. We must steal into their lives, make ourselves necessary to them, and take them by surprise—they may surrender."

"She shall," muttered Jack.

"Amen!" said Joe. "Now, there's to be a tableau party in Stirling next week. I am going, and can take you—to get your seige guns sighted."

"Are they sure to be there?"

"Sure; they lead in all the fun."

Never did man walk to more certain destruction than did Jack King, upon the night of that tableau party. The maiden who had been charming in demure street dress, was altogether bewitching and bewildering in the varying and ravishing costumes of the evening. Joe cleverly captured both sisters for a moonlight walk home with himself and his friend, and displayed more zeal than discretion in prolonging the last words on the doorstep. Even after the door had closed upon the sweet girlish faces, the young men lingered outside, loth to depart.

Jack leaned on the gate-post with a tragic air.

"Routed, foot and horse!" he gasped; "rally me, Joe, and lead me home."

The next morning, as Ruth was touching up the faces of a family portrait of daisies, she said:

"Alice, I fear mother needs investigating; I hear suspicious sounds"

"I will go out and quell her."

"Send for me if you need the riot act read."

"I was just in time," reported Alice, upon her return. "She had close-reefed her skirts and was swobbing off the deck."

"Where's the cabin-boy? It's his duty, isn't it?"

"Bob is here, but he has a toothache, so mother wraps him in flannel by the fire and does his work."

"Bringing up a mother is beset with difficulties," sighed Ruth.

"Don't grind so at your work, Ruth. It is a beguiling day. Let's go down to the beach."

"I do feel rather limp after last night's dissipation," confessed Ruth.

"Then why not make a day of it, with a camp-fire and a potato-roast?"

"Good! And then mother can go over to Aunt Sue's for a holiday."

In an hour the house was deserted save for Bob, convalescent in red flannel, chopping kindlers in the woodshed.

"This wind sweeps the cob-webs away, doesn't it?" said Ruth, as they came around a promontory, and took the cool, vitalizing breeze from the water, full in their faces.

"As I am steward of the mess today, I suggest that we start our fire now, so as to have a good bed of coals when we want to roast our potatoes," said Alice.

Dry sticks were on every hand, and a creditable campfire was soon laid.

"Now give me a match and I'll start it," said Ruth.

"Forgotten!" cried Alice, in dismay.

'Oh unfaithful steward!" mourned Ruth.

"We have plenty of sandwiches," suggested the meek culprit.

"It isn't sandwiches; it's defiant independence we want, young woman."

"Symbolized by a bonfire?"

"Of course. We are ruined, Alice! Gone is the glory of the independent-feminine-potato roast. Fallen is our pride. Already we covet a man with his pocket full of matches."

"Alas! and has it come to this?" sighed Alice in the same theatrical tone.

"How lovely it is here. I wonder we do not come oftener to sketch," said Ruth. "I am going to try the effect of those shadows in the water," and she seated herself on a jutting rock.

"And I shall try the effect of you on that gray rock. Don't stir—you are perfect."

At this moment two conspirators, halting in the edge of the woods, watched them.

"This is too audacious," faltered Joe Beach.

"I am lost to discretion—go on," urged Jack King.

"It didn't really seem civil not to follow the directions of that red-flannelled guide-post in the shed, now did it?" argued Joe.

"Certainly not—go on! Isn't she tip-top in that yachting dress?"

"Then we must raise a flag of truce, and be very abject."

Whereupon Mr. Beach advanced, waving a conciliatory white handkerchief from the end of his cane.

"Ladies! At your service. Humble, though intrusive! We know we're intrusive, and hope we're humble! Smile upon us and we will tend fires; be sublimely picturesque; inspire your pencils; protect you from pirates; dig clams, or die for you! Jack, you rascal, plunge into the sea and pose for a drowning sailor, while I do the mermaid on a rock! Anything, ladies, to placate you."

"On one condition, have you matches?"

"We have! We have!" in joyful chorus.

"Then light our fire."

As if by lightning stroke the pile sprung into fiery life. "Men have a certain utilitarian value," condescended Ruth.

"Thanks, matchless maiden," bowed Mr. Beach.

—A contributor to a recent number of Chambers' Journal drove away a large colony of rodents from an ancient house by the following simple expedient: He trapped two rats alive, smeared them all over with tar, the head excepted, and then turned them loose into their favorite run. It is to be presumed that the victims were able to make their unpleasant experiences known to their companions, as we are assured that from that day in 1875 to the day of writing in 1884 not a single rat has since been seen or heard in the house. It should be added that before trying a personal application, the writer had poured tar into the rat holes and put broken glass in the same places without any good result.

—To three Milwaukee lawyers who put in bills amounting to $25,000 for services in settling an estate worth $32,000, Judge Thomas Drummond said:—"Gentlemen, you consider yourselves good lawyers. How much more are your services worth to your clients than mine to the people? You have charged $25,000 for sixty days' service. Could you not be content, each of you, to take my pro rata for the same time? These charges are infamous. They are such as men who are scoundrels and thieves at heart would make. This charge of $15,000 is cut down to $1,500, those of $5,000 each to $500. Repeat such a piece of rapine in this court and I will disbar every one of you."

—A very difficult problem in molecular physics is raised by the operation of a buzz saw (or rather, wheel without teeth) for severing bars and shafts of iron, devised by an American inventor. It seems that when a disc of steel is caused to revolve at a high rate of speed nearly (but not quite) in contact with a bar of iron revolving in the same direction at a lower rate, the latter is a most instantaneously cut in twain, although there is no contact action of the two metals. Drops of melted iron fall rapidly while the process is going on, but they are not hot, though liquid.
