tween them this burden of cost. The agreement provides for this arrangement because the Act as originally framed would not apply to leasehold property. By reason and as a result of the conditions it was impossible to secure terminals in fee simple. The Canadian Northern itself only had a leasehold of a portion of the property and that leasehold is encumbered by every issue of bonds or debentures by the Canadian Northern Railway, so that it is impossible to free the property from that encumbrance. Therefore a valuation is agreed upon, an interest charge is fixed and the payment of that interest is apportioned and the division made as respects the interest whereby you are following a course analogous to that laid down in section 20 of the agreement of 1903, bearing date the 29th July of that year. It will be seen that ample provision is made in this Bill protecting future contingencies as respects the eastern division, protecting the government, should it be called upon at any time to enter in, take possession of the eastern division and operate it itself apart from any lease which has been entered into with the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time, and House went into committee thereon.

On section 1,—agreement in schedule confirmed.

Mr. HAGGART. If I understand the explanation of the minister correctly this is for the purpose of enabling the government to do with a leasehold property that which they could do under the Act that they have at present with a freehold property.

Mr. EMMERSON. In its relationship with the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Mr. HAGGART. In reference to the Grand Trunk Pacific. If this were a leasehold property under the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Act we would have the power to make an expenditure for this purpose ?

Mr. EMMERSON. If it were a fee simple.

Mr. HAGGART. If it were a fee simple. The only part of the explanation which I am not clear about is this : There is to be an account kept as to the user of the terminals by the government portion of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Grand Trunk portion ; that is the western portion. How are you to distinguish between the user of the terminals by the eastern portion and the western portion when they are both operated and all the trains are owned by one company—the Grand Trunk Pacific ?

Mr. EMMERSON. There is no necessity for that. This Bill makes provision for the procuring of the terminals originally, and as to the terminals as they now are there is a fixed valuation upon which an interest charge is made at the rate of four per cent. The payment of that interest is made by one-half thereof being contributed by the Grand Trunk Pacific and the other half by the government as a part of its eastern division. The terminals must necessarily be completed and there must be expenditures in addition to the present status of those terminals in connection with their completion. The completion work is to be carried on by the Canadian Northern, as provided in the agreement, under a superintendent of construction who shall be selected by these companies, and the selection of that man is subject to the approval of the government, and all the expenditures made in the construction shall bear an interest charge of 4½ per cent, half being met by the Canadian Northern and the other half by the Grand Trunk Pacific and the government conjointly. The Bill provides as to the accounts against which these expenditures are to be chargeable. After they are completed and the lines are in operation the subsequent cost of maintenance and operation is not a matter of interest to the government or chargeable in any way to the government so long as the lease to the Grand Trunk Pacific is in operation. The very moment the government is obliged to operate the eastern division, then the government becomes a one-third partner with a one-third interest and is responsible for one-third of the cost of maintenance and operation to be apportioned on a wheelage basis.

Mr. HAGGART. The user is to be paid on a wheelage basis, and if the Canadian Northern uses twice as much as the others do, it pays twice as much.

Mr. EMMERSON. But the government does not pay anything for user while the lease is in operation.

Mr. HAGGART. If the government should take possession of the eastern division how are you to apportion the amount as between the western division and the eastern division of the Grand Trunk Pacific ?

Mr. EMMERSON. On a wheelage basis.

Mr. HAGGART. It does not contemplate the government being in possession of the eastern section and the Grand Trunk Pacific operating the other section. It might occur that the government would be operating the two sections at the same time.

Mr. EMMERSON. It might be that the government would operate the eastern division and the Grand Trunk Pacific the western division, and if so there would be no difficulty in imposing one-half the cost of maintenance between the government and the Grand Trunk Pacific on a wheelage basis. If the government had to acquire the eastern division and operate it, and at the same time the western division, the Grand Trunk Pacific would cease to have any interest and the government would be subrogated to the position of the Grand Trunk Pacific, absolutely and wholly.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The minister speaks of compensation upon a one-third wheelage basis ; I do not understand that.

Mr. EMMERSON. I used the expression one-third in the sense that each partner has a one-third interest and has to pay on a wheelage basis.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. These terminals are to be built on land acquired by the Canadian Northern, and the government is to pay interest at the rate of four per cent?

Mr. EMMERSON. The land is now there, and that, together with the expenditure already made is given a value of $2,625,000. One-half the interest thereon at four per cent is paid by the Canadian Northern, and the other half at four per cent is to be divided equally, the government and the Grand Trunk Pacific paying each one-fourth.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Then there is to be further expenditure for extending these terminals and the same proportions are to be maintained, but there is to be a different rate of interest ?

Mr. EMMERSON. Yes, four and a half per cent.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There is no provision made for further improvements or extensions beyond those now contemplated.

Mr. EMMERSON. No.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The construction is to be carried out by this board and the maintenance is to be assessed by this board upon the Canadian Northern, the Grand Trunk Pacific, and the government.

Mr. EMMERSON. Not upon the government, until they are obliged to take the eastern division.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If the government has to undertake the operation of the eastern division, the government is to come in upon the same basis so far as maintenance is concerned, and the government would have to bear the increased proportion of the cost of construction by paying interest upon one-third of the total cost, instead of one-fourth as at present. I agree with the minister that it would not necessarily follow that if the government were obliged to undertake the operation of the eastern division, they would also be obliged to undertake the operation of the western division. In fact, the government, under the agreement which I regarded as extraordinary, are only able to operate the western division as mortgagees in possession, and I suppose the working out of the agreement would be in this way : That the government operating as mortgagees in possession, would, pro hac vice take the place of the Grand Trunk Pacific and, therefore, so far as the maintenance of that part of the road is concerned, would be responsible as mortgagees in possession for exactly that proportion of the cost of construction and the cost of maintenance upon a wheelage basis, as the Grand Trunk Pacific themselves would be responsible for, if they continued to operate the western division. This agreement is a very long document, and some of us have not had an opportunity to investigate it to any extent. Can the minister assure us that the explanation he has already given to the committee is full and complete, so far as all the material provisions of the agreement are concerned ?

Mr. EMMERSON. I think I have gone over, perhaps imperfectly, all the salient clauses of the agreement. The site selected is certainly, beyond all question, in the interest both of the railways and of the whole country, the best that could be secured at Winnipeg ; and the agreement, as I read it, not only meets the views of the railway companies themselves, but meets the views of the public at large, and it also protects the country in so far as its reversionary interest in these railways is concerned.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. May I ask the minister one question ? So far as the cost of construction is concerned, the Grand Trunk Pacific will pay interest upon one-fourth and the government will pay interest upon one-fourth, that is, under present conditions ?

Mr. EMMERSON. Yes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. And that will continue during the lease by the Grand Trunk Pacific of the eastern division unless the government should be obliged to take over the operation of that division ?

Mr. EMMERSON. Yes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Then, as I understand, the government will pay interest at four per cent on one-third ?

Mr. EMMERSON. Yes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How are the remaining two-thirds to be distributed in that case ?

Mr. EMMERSON. It is wrong to say one-third. It is one-fourth because the Canadian Northern is in every instance chargeable with the payment of one-half. If, and when the government becomes interested in the operation of the eastern division, the terminal board is to be constituted, with two representatives of the Canadian Northern interest and one representative each of the Grand Trunk Pacific interest and the government interest ; and while the Canadian Northern is to have one-half interest in the representation, it is to continue to pay half the interest on the expenditure.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not yet understand it; I suppose it is because I have not read the agreement. The Canadian Northern has paid out $2,600,000, and it will pay out something more before these terminals are completed. Of that amount the Grand Trunk Pacific will pay interest on one-fourth and the government will pay interest on one-fourth, that is, during the currency of the lease to the Grand Trunk Pacific. What difference arises when the government takes over the operation of the eastern division? That is what I do not understand.

Mr. HAGGART. There is no difference.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There are two different things. One is the cost of construction and the other is the maintenance. As I understand, the maintenance is dealt with altogether on a wheelage basis, and we can leave that out; but so far as the cost of construction is concerned, I understood the minister to say that some new condition would arise as to the government's proportion whenever the government took over the eastern division, and I wanted to know just what the difference would be.

Mr. EMMERSON. I will repeat what I stated in the first instance, to make it clear. Upon the cost of all the improvements to be made both in the first instance and from time to time as further improvements are determined upon, four and a half per cent of interest is to be paid, the Canadian Northern assuming one-half of that interest and the Grand Trunk Pacific and the government together assuming the other half. This is prior to and during the time that the Grand Trunk Pacific is the lessee of the eastern division. If and when the Grand Trunk Pacific ceases to be the lessee of the eastern division, this compensation, which means interest, shall be divided equally between the Grand Trunk Pacific, the Canadian Northern and the government.

Mr. BARKER. As I understand the hon. minister, the interest charges are to be borne in the proportion of fifty per cent by the Canadian Northern and fifty per cent by the Grand Trunk Pacific and the government combined. Is that not so?

Mr. EMMERSON. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. If that be so, why should there be a change in the division because there is a division of interests between the Grand Trunk Railway and the government? If the Canadian Northern are to bear one-half, why should the fact that a change takes place as between the government and the Grand Trunk Pacific make any difference in what the Canadian Northern have to pay?

Mr. EMMERSON. Because there are three separate interests instead of two as before.

Mr. EMMERSON.

Mr. BARKER. Let me put it this way. We are dealing only with the question of interest, and it does not make the slightest difference whether the interest is four or four and a half per cent. The minister says the Canadian Northern bear one-half the interest and that the other two divide the remaining half between them. Is not that so?

Mr. EMMERSON. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. Suppose those two change their relations to each other, why should that make any difference to the Canadian Northern?

Mr. EMMERSON. Because in that instance the Grand Trunk Pacific have ceased to be interested in the eastern division.

Mr. BARKER. But the price was not changed in the least.

Mr. EMMERSON. But the user is most materially.

Mr. LANCASTER. The Canadian Northern has the same benefit in both cases.

Mr. EMMERSON. The Canadian Northern have one-third interest, the Grand Trunk Pacific have one-third and the other has one-third. And as each has an equal interest in the use of the terminals, each has equal ownership, and should pay equal interest on the expenditure made in furnishing that accommodation.

Mr. BARKER. Let me put it in another way. The Canadian Northern own a portion of the property which imposes upon them fifty per cent of the interest. The other two parties own the rest of the property. The Canadian Northern will always retain its own, why should it pay less than its original share? The Grand Trunk Railway and the government together own one line and the Canadian Northern own another. The two divide the whole interest between them. Why should any change in the ownership of one of the lines affect the other?

Mr. EMMERSON. Because then the relationship is entirely changed. Up to that moment there have been two independent companies operating.

Mr. BARKER. Two lines.

Mr. EMMERSON. When this comes about and each pays one-third, you have three independent companies operating the terminal.

Mr. LANCASTER. What worse off is the Canadian Northern than before?

Mr. EMMERSON. Because there is another element which comes in and which should contribute.

Mr. BARKER. But the railways remain precisely the same.

Mr. EMMERSON. There would be a difference as to the user where three companies are interested instead of only two.

Mr. HAGGART. Under the original arrangement the government would be paying $25,000 per year on the purchase money of the terminals alone, without any expenditure at all for improvements. Under the changed relations, it will be paying $33,000 a year.

Mr. EMMERSON. And properly so because it gets an additional advantage. It gets accommodation which previously was not required. There would have to be separate offices. The Grand Trunk Pacific, the Canadian Northern, and the government, in connection with its eastern division, would each require its portion, and to that extent the Canadian Northern would have to relinquish a part of its user. That would take away from its one-half the use of those terminals.

Mr. HAGGART. Is the hon. gentleman sure that is in the agreement? I do not think it is.

Mr. EMMERSON. You will find it in the agreement.

Mr. HAGGART. What clause?

Mr. EMMERSON. I am not familiar with the clauses.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If the hon. gentleman is not, I do not think anybody else is.

Mr. EMMERSON. I am familiar with what the clauses contain, but as to the numbers I have no more time than my hon. friend to charge my memory with the numbers of the clauses. Whenever the eastern division would be operated by the government itself, it would have one-third user. Previous to that it would have no user at all, and the Grand Trunk Pacific would have one-half user and the Canadian Northern one-half user. But when the government became interested in the operation of the eastern division, then the position was entirely changed, and each would have one-third user. Under those circumstances it was certainly only fair and reasonable that there should be an equal division as to the original cost of furnishing the accommodation necessary. As to the wheelage and the extent of the use of the yard and the tracks, there is a division made on a wheelage basis, which is customary and in accordance with the agreements entered into between railway companies all over this continent. To-morrow if the Intercolonial Railway were to give one-half user in its terminal at Halifax to the Grand Trunk Pacific, in so far as the original expenditure is concerned, the Grand Trunk Pacific should pay one-half; but if the Canadian Pacific Railway came in and enjoyed one-third the user, it seems to me that the Canadian Pacific Railway should pay one-third and the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Intercolonial Railway each one-third.

Mr. BARKER. I do not think the case put by the minister is an analogous one. There are two through lines in this case, the Canadian Northern and the government, and the Grand Trunk Pacific. Let us suppose that each of these through lines is 1,000 miles long, and that midway is a station, say Winnipeg. The companies owning one of the through lines divide and control 500 miles each. Why should each of those lines, with only 500 miles pay as much as the Canadian Northern, with 1,000 miles?

Mr. EMMERSON. Because each requires just as much room in the station for ticket-selling, advertising and other facilities, whether it realizes the same profit or not. When you come down to the bringing in of trains and the use of tracks, they pay only in proportion to the use they make of the facilities.

Mr. BARKER. I can understand that, if the two companies dividing their property were to require separate offices and so on, there might be an allowance for that. But when you are considering the interest upon the capital cost, surely the Canadian Northern, which retains half its whole traffic will not be injuriously affected by combination of the Grand Trunk Railway and the government parts of the road. But that the Canadian Northern should make money out of the division of the property between the Canadian Northern and the government is what I do not see. Perhaps there should be a charge made against the government and the Grand Trunk Pacific for dual offices for their portion of the business, but that is a very different thing from dividing the whole interest on the capital cost.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. I would ask the minister if he is aware of any contract which was entered into between the Canadian Northern which is one of the parties to this agreement and the city council of Winnipeg in reference to what is called the Broadway site, and whether this Bill at all interferes with that agreement?

Mr. EMMERSON. I have no personal knowledge of that matter. The negotiations were carried on by the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific together with the commissioners of the Transcontinental line, and these details did not come under my personal supervision. I am therefore, not familiar with the names of the properties, nor do I know, except in a general way, the location and extent of the property.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. I just wondered whether this contract would over-ride or interfere with the contract entered into between the city of Winnipeg and the Canadian Northern. I understood that the site was purchased from the Hudson Bay Company with the condition that the depot would be put on what is called the Broadway site. I know that a great deal of influence has been brought to bear by the Grand Trunk Pacific in favour of what is called the Water Street site.

Mr. EMMERSON. Personally, I am not familiar with that matter. I would refer my hon. friend to section 13 of the Bill, which is the compensation clause. The property is divided into halves while there are two independent lines operating their railways, but it is divided into thirds when there are three independent concerns operating the railways.

Mr. SPROULE. I do not understand that. What does it refer to ?

Mr. EMMERSON. To the rentals for the terminals practically. That is to say, so far as these rentals are payable apart from the use of the yards and tracks and the movement of cars and trains. In the use of the terminals themselves, that is of the freight sheds, baggage rooms, passenger accommodation and so on, the division is into three so long as there are three concerns operating the road, but into two when there are only two concerns operating the road.

Mr. SPROULE. Suppose the cost is $2,000,000. The government and the Grand Trunk Pacific jointly pay 50 per cent of the interest and the Canadian Northern pays the other 50 per cent. But if either the Grand Trunk Pacific or the Canadian Northern buys out the other they would pay 63⅔ per cent instead of 50 per cent.

Mr. EMMERSON. As I stated, while there are two companies really enjoying the rights and all the privileges the rental is divided equally; when a third company comes in and there is another sub-division then the rental is divided into thirds, and in my judgment properly so. Outside and beyond the station itself there is the use of tracks, the wear and tear and the use of the yards and all the incidentals in connection therewith, and in the operation of that station in that respect, and in that respect alone, the division of cost is upon a wheelage basis.

Mr. SPROULE. In the event of there being two companies instead of the one, which had been paying 50 per cent of the interest, will these two, when they commence to pay 66 per cent of the interest, receive more office room or other consideration?

Mr. EMMERSON. Necessarily so, otherwise the railways could not be operated as separate systems.

Mr. LANCASTER. Will there be more building done to create room or will the Canadian Northern give up some of the room it is occupying ?

Mr. W. J. ROCHE.

Mr. EMMERSON. Necessarily the Grand Trunk Pacific would demand room and the Canadian Northern would have to furnish it.

Mr. HAGGART. What will this improvement cost the government a year ? There is the interest of $24,000; what is the calculation of the cost of the improvements to be made on the terminals?

Mr. EMMERSON. I have not the information under my hand as to what the total cost will be.

Mr. BARKER. Taking the 4 per cent upon the present property which is agreed to be taken at $2,625,000, let us see how that will work out in order to compensate the Canadian Northern for the division between the government and the Grand Trunk Pacific. The total interest upon the $2,625,000 will be $105,000 per annum. So long as the government and the Grand Trunk Pacific are working together the government will pay $26,250, the Grand Trunk Pacific will pay $26,250 and the Canadian Northern will pay $52,500 a year. The hon. gentleman says that if the government and the Grand Trunk Pacific divide their interests there will be additional offices. I suppose there will be ticket offices and baggage rooms, but no doubt under modern arrangements the general passenger station and all that will be common under any circumstances.

Mr. EMMERSON. But each railway will have its independent connections.

Mr. BARKER. Yes, but what does the hon. gentleman think? He is allowing the Canadian Northern because of that division between the Grand Trunk Pacific and the government a difference in favour of the Canadian Northern of $17,500 a year. Does he mean to assert that that change, involving some additional separate offices, baggage rooms, ticket offices and some freight rooms, should be worth $17,500 a year?

Mr. EMMERSON. The Canadian Northern has to-day certain exclusive privileges in Winnipeg. There are no other facilities at all equal to these facilities there, and the Grand Trunk Pacific is granted by this company the right to one-half the enjoyment of all these advantages at a certain rate. If the eastern division of the Transcontinental Railway wishes to set up business there on an independent basis, operating its line independently of the others, with independent connections, and it requires accommodation, is the Canadian Northern to be expected to give them a sufficient user for their purposes when there are two companies for the same rate as they are charging when the companies are operating jointly? It seems to me not an extravagant basis to say that the three shall each contribute an equal amount.

On section 2—restaurants, hotel, &c.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What is the policy of the government as to going into the hotel business?

Mr. EMMERSON. I presume that is under very grave and very serious consideration.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It is provided in clause 13 that unless the government give written notice it becomes interested in the hotel and restaurant. I suppose it must have been under consideration.

Mr. EMMERSON. While provision is made in this Bill for the future taking over of the road, certainly the Department of Railways has not thought that it was so imminent that provision in detail should be made now for that future contingency.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. You might turn that over to the Department of Inland Revenue.

Bill reported.

SUPPLY—COLONIAL CONFERENCE.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Minister of Finance) moved that the House go into Committee of Supply.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton, Ont.) Mr. Speaker, before you leave the Chair, I would like to say a few words in connection with the approaching colonial conference. I observe that the papers as brought down do not contain any correspondence between this government, or the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and Mr. Deakin. That correspondence has already been referred to in the public press. The Prime Minister has told us in response to a question by the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) that the correspondence related to matters other than those which had been alluded to in the public press.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Not with Mr. Deakin but with Sir Joseph Ward.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Yes, the right hon. gentleman is correct. It does not seem to be included in the official correspondence. Is there any explanation of that?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). I stated that I have had no correspondence, private or public, with the government of New Zealand with regard to the subject which was mentioned by the hon. member for Labelle, that is in reference to the colonial conference. The only correspondence that I have had with the government of New Zealand is upon purely formal matters and not at all in connection with this subject.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Then, if my right hon. friend has the return before him and will refer to page 20, he will observe that in the despatch of Lord Elgin, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, under date of December 6, 1906, paragraph 3, is as follows:

> In connection with the penultimate paragraph of the second resolution I may draw attention to my despatch No. 31, of January 19, and its inclosure.

I thought that despatch No. 31 was not included in the correspondence, but my hon. friend from North Toronto (Mr. Foster points out to me that it is. It is altogether out of its place. I might say in this connection that the return is brought down in very bad arrangement. There does not seem to be any arrangement at all. I have pointed out to the government on previous occasions that with little more care these returns might be brought down in such form that we would not have to spend so much time upon them. There is absolutely no arrangement whatever of the correspondence or of the documents which are included in this return. I searched through this return from one end to the other without noticing the particular document to which my hon. friend has called my attention, simply because it was not in its proper place.

Now, coming to the general subject, it seems a little curious that this country has made no suggestions or proposals whatever. The men at the head of affairs in other dominions of His Majesty seem to be of a somewhat different type because they have brought forward matters of very great interest which are to be discussed at the conference and which are included in the agenda proposed by Lord Elgin. I might allude to some of these for a moment. The Australian proposals which are to be found on pages 20 and 22 include the following: 1. Imperial council; 2. Preferential trade and international relations; 4. Imperial defence; 8. Islands of the Pacific. That comprises the general subject of the interests of the empire in the Pacific. 9. Emigration. New Zealand's proposals are to be found on pages 24 and 25. Amongst them are: 2. Preferential trade; 4. Naturalization; 9 Preferential trade between self-governing dependencies. Looking for a moment at the first Australian proposal, and I shall allude to all of these only very briefly, it is as follows:

> That it is desirable to establish an imperial council, to consist of representatives of Great Britain and the self-governing colonies, chosen ex-officio from their existing administrations.

That part of the Australian proposal seems to be very much in line with the only matter brought by this government to the attention of the imperial government, that being the constitution of the council and the representation of each colony. It continuous as follows :

That the objects of such council shall be to discuss at regular conferences matters of common imperial interest, and to establish a system by which members of the council shall be kept informed during the periods between the conferences in regard to matters which have been or may be subjects for discussion.

That there shall be a permanent secretarial staff charged with the duty of obtaining information for the use of the council, of attending to the execution of its resolutions, and of conducting correspondence on matters relating to its affairs.

That the expenses of such a staff shall be borne by the countries represented on the council in proportion to their populations.

There does not seem to me to be very much one way or the other for comment in regard to the name. In so far as my personal preference is concerned, if there were any change in the name, I would be inclined to think that the proposal by this administration of the expression 'Imperial Conference' would perhaps be better than the one which has been suggested ; but the main point which arises in connection with this proposal is that the conference, or council, or whatever it may be called, is to be a council for discussion only and that useful discussion might be facilitated by the establishment of a permanent secretarial staff which shall be charged with the duty of collecting and collaborating information for the information of the council. We should have the views of the government upon this particular proposition which, although it does not seem to involve any very far reaching consequences, nevertheless is of material import in so far as the future usefulness of the council is concerned. The next proposal of the Australian government is of more importance and certainly would very considerably attract the attention of the people of this country. It is as follows :

That the following resolutions, which were adopted by the conference of 1902, be reaffirmed :

1. That this conference recognizes that the principle of preferential trade between the United Kingdom and His Majesty's dominions beyond the seas would stimulate and facilitate mutual commercial intercourse, and would, by promoting the development of the resources and industries of the several parts, strengthen the empire.

2. That this conference recognizes that, in the present circumstances of the colonies, it is not practicable to adopt a general system of free trade as between the mother country and the British dominions beyond the seas.

3. That with a view, however, to promoting the increase of trade within the empire, it is desirable that those colonies which have not already adopted such a policy, should, as far as their circumstances permit, give substantial preferential treatment to the products and manufactures of the United Kingdom.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN.

That is the resolution which was unanimously passed by the conference of 1902 upon the initiative of the government of Canada. It represents the views of the Canadian government as put forward at that time by the Prime Minister and his colleagues. It would be interesting to know what the position of the government will be on that particular subject at the approaching conference. We have not had an altogether consistent course of opinion from the government and its representatives on that question.

In 1897 the right hon. gentleman took the position before the British people and he expressed himself very strongly on it—that Canada did not desire any preference for her goods on the British market ; that Canada was as he expressed it, cursed by a system of protection which he did not desire to see inflicted upon the people of the motherland ; and he declared emphatically that the preference which had been accorded to British products on Canadian markets was given without the hope or the desire that there should be any preference in return. But, the resolution initiated by the Canadian government in 1902 expressed an entirely different policy. The Canadian government even went further, and they added to the resolution which had been initiated and moved by them, the following statement :

While urging that the benefits of the preference were such as to entitle Canada to the desired exemption from the duties on food products in the United Kingdom——

These of course have since been abolished.

—the Canadian ministers state that within certain limitations they were prepared to consider the request of Mr. Chamberlain for further concessions in return for the desired preference in the markets of the United Kingdom.

Then further on they say :

But the Canadian ministers point out that the Canadian tariff was by no means prohibitive; that large quantities of goods were imported, and that a great proportion of these came from foreign countries. In any lines in which it appeared that the goods would be manufactured in Great Britain, it might be possible to so readjust some duties as to give an additional advantage to the British manufacturer and thus turn over to him a volume of trade which at present is held by the manufacturers of foreign countries. The Canadian ministers state that if they could be assured that the imperial government would accept the principle of preferential trade generally, and particularly grant to the food products of Canada in the United Kingdom exemption from duties now levied or hereafter imposed, they, the Canadian ministers, would be prepared to go further into the subject and endeavour to give the British manufacturer some increased advantage over his foreign competitors in the markets of Canada. Meanwhile the Canadian ministers determine to present to the conference a resolution affirming the principle of preferential trade and the desirability of its adoption by the colonies generally, and also expressing the opinion of the Prime Ministers of the colonies, that His Majesty's government should reciprocate by granting preferential terms to the products of the colonies in the markets of the mother country.

Then they went on to use very strong and very expressive words as follows :

If after using every effort to bring about such a readjustment of the fiscal policy of the empire, the Canadian government should find that the principle of preferential trade is not acceptable to the colonies generally or the mother country, then Canada should be free to take such action as may be deemed necessary in the presence of such conditions.

Now, since that time we have had no statement by the government of Canada that they have withdrawn from the position which they assumed at that conference. In fact, the attitude of the government, was emphasized in the following session, 1903, by the Minister of Finance, who in making his budget speech used language still more forcible than that which I have quoted from the memorandum of the Canadian ministers. But, later on, the Minister of Agriculture undertook to deal with this subject, and I will quote a reference to his language which has been made in the British House of Commons. The Minister of Agriculture sometimes, as minister of state, discusses farming. On this particular occasion, as a farmer, he undertook to discuss matters of state, and he declared that speaking as a farmer and not as a Minister of Agriculture, the Canadian famers desired no preference in the British market. His words have been recently quoted in the British House of Commons by Mr. Lloyd George, a member of the British government. The subject of preferential trade within the empire was under discussion in the British House of Commons, and Mr. Lloyd George was speaking on behalf of the imperial government, and he quoted Mr. Fisher's remarks as follows :

The object, Mr. Fisher remarked, was to give Canadian food products an advantage in the English market. If any people were to make such a demand it would be the Canadian farmers who were producing and selling these products, but I say as Minister of Agriculture——

That is the way in which Mr. Fisher's remarks were reported in this country, but he afterwards corrected them in this House and declared that he did not use the expression 'I say as Minister of Agriculture.'

But, I say as Minister of Agriculture, that the Canadian farmers are not interested in that question, and have made no such demand. In this I represent the feeling of the Canadian farmers. We farmers of Canada, Mr. Fisher continued, want no preference in the English market. Why is it that we as farmers want no preference ? England, under existing conditions, takes and absorbs everything in the nature of food products that we can send. She opens her ports to us——

And she opens them to every other nation in the world just in the same way.

She opens her ports to us so we are able to sell everything there that we have to sell, and sell it at a profitable price. If we do not send more it is because the productive capacity of the agricultural population of Canada is not able to produce it. There has been no check in the export of these articles to England. The farmers of Canada are not worrying about preference for their food products, and if they are not worrying there is no necessity for other people to worry (cheers).

Mr. Lloyd George then says :

The farmers of Canada do not worry about it; they don't want this preference ; they are satisfied with the market that is made for them.

Then some reference is made to a discussion in this House and Mr. Howard Vincent, M.P. said that the opinion of the Minister of Agriculture was challenged in the Canadian House of Commons. To this Mr. Lloyd George replied :

His opinion was challenged in the House of Commons. Well, you have got a rump of protectionists there who are continually trying to worry the Prime Minister.

I do not stop to consider the delicacy of the expression of Mr. Lloyd George, of whom I know very little except that he is a member of the British government. I would be inclined to think that he is an individual who does not very carefully weigh his language, and that his language on this occasion was not very well chosen, nor very dignified coming from a member of the British government.

My hon. friend from Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) has told us that he is a British Liberal. Well, I do not profess to be either a British Liberal or a British Conservative. I would not stand here as the champion or the advocate or the follower of any political party in the British islands. These are matters of domestic economy. The people of the British islands must settle all their domestic matters themselves, as we in Canada propose to settle all domestic matters for ourselves. I would not be prepared to express the slightest preference that the government of Mr. Balfour or the government of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman should be in power in the British islands, and I would not have expected that any member of the British government, having a due regard for the responsibilities of his office and for the delicacy of his position with regard to political parties in this country, would have seen fit to make use of the somewhat reckless and extravagant expressions which seem to have fallen from the lips of Mr. Lloyd-George, who on this occasion displayed not only a remarkable pettiness of outlook, but a most deplorable ignorance of political conditions in this country. If Mr. Lloyd-George had been well informed of the principles on which the tariff of Canada has been framed and brought down to parliament at the present session, he would have known that every item in that tariff, so far as it concerns Canadian industries, has been expressly defended by my hon. friend the Minister of Finance upon the principles of protection, and he would have known that, however much the Prime Minister of Canada may pose as a free trader in Great Britain, he does not pose as a free trader in Canada when he is considering the question of a tariff for the people of this country. However, the remarks of Mr. Lloyd-George are not worthy perhaps of too much consideration. He obviously did not understand the attitude of my hon. friend the Minister of Agriculture, because he thought that hon. gentleman was speaking as such, whereas the Minister of Agriculture has informed us that he was speaking merely as a farmer, and I do not know whether he makes the worst breaks when as Minister of Agriculture he is discussing farming or when as a farmer he is discussing matters of State.

The subsequent paragraphs contained in the resolution proposed by the government and the commonwealth of Australia might well merit the consideration of my right hon. friend the Prime Minister, and might well deserve a word of explanation as to his policy when he comes to address this House. The government of Australia proposed that the following resolutions be added to those I have already quoted :

> That it is desirable that the preferential treatment accorded by the colonies to the products and manufactures of the United Kingdom be also granted to the products and manufactures of other self-governing colonies.

What is the attitude of this government to that ? I think we have a right to know and to have the explanation of the Prime Minister. There is this other paragraph in the same resolution :

> That it is desirable that the United Kingdom grant preferential treatment to the products and manufactures of the colonies.

My hon. friend from Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) said the other evening that so far as that particular matter is concerned, it is hopeless to expect any action by the government of Great Britain as at present constituted. That may or may not be. It is entirely a matter for the people of Great Britain as to whether or not they shall embark upon a policy of that kind. We can only express our own opinion as to its benefit to the various dominions of the empire, and we must leave to them, as they must leave to us, absolute and uncontrolled freedom of action in the matter. But with relation to what has been proposed by the government of Australia, we must not forget that there has been a suggestion in the public press—and I think it has been supported by the correspondence brought down to this House—to this effect, that the government of this country, by failing to reply to a communication from the government of Australia when its recent tariff was being prepared, and before it was brought down, has lost an opportunity of securing preferential trade relations between the Dominion of Canada and that Commonwealth of Australia. It is obvious that the policy of the Australian commonwealth is along these lines, from the terms of the resolution which I have already quoted. If the situation, so far as the mother country is concerned, is hopeless, it is not hopeless so far as the other dominions of the empire are concerned ; it is not hopeless so far as the Commonwealth of Australia is concerned. What position does the right hon. gentleman propose to take at the ensuing conference in regard to that particular matter?

The subject of imperial defence is also suggested by the commonwealth of Australia, in the following resolution :

> That it is desirable that the colonies should be represented on the imperial council of defence.
> That the colonies be authorized to refer to that council for advice any local questions in regard to which expert assistance is deemed desirable.
> That the provisions of the Naval Defence Agreement, 1902, be reconsidered.

The last sentence relates only to matters of interest to the colonies of Australia and New Zealand ; the others relate to matters in which this country has more or less interest. The Minister of Militia and Defence is a member of the imperial council of defence, as I understand. This resolution suggests that all the self-governing colonies should be represented on that council, and that they should 'be authorized to refer to that council for advice any local questions in regard to which expert advice is deemed desirable.' The government has given its sanction to a portion of that resolution ; what is its attitude as to its general scope and terms ?

The next matter suggested by Australia is with regard to imperial interests in the Pacific. There is no doubt that the construction of the Panama canal will be of great importance not only to the people of the United States but to the people of Canada as well. We have vast interests not only upon the Atlantic but upon the Pacific, and the enormous and ever increasing trade of the orient makes our interests in the Pacific of vital importance both to Australia and to Canada. The resolution as proposed by Australia seems rather to be concerned with Australasian interests; but the subject having been brought forward, it seems right that the government of this country, if in a position to do so, should announce to the parliament and people of Canada what policy, if any, they intend to propose to the colonial conference in regard to that particular matter.

The government of this country has not seen fit to propose the question of immigration to that conference. One would have supposed that having regard to the enormous areas of fertile land in our northwest, this subject would have occurred to them as one proper to be discussed at the approaching colonial conference, especially from the point of view that immigration from the United Kingdom should be directed to the British dominions over the seas rather than to foreign countries. That is the way in which the matter has presented itself to the government of Australia. Paragraph 9 of their resolution is as follows:

> That it is desirable to encourage British emigrants to proceed to British colonies rather than to foreign countries.
> That the imperial government be requested to co-operate with any colonies desiring immigrants in assisting suitable persons to emigrate.

The answer may be made that we are already encouraging in some measure immigration from the British Isles. It does not seem to me that in the past we have given as much encouragement to immigration from those isles as we should have done. Our efforts have been too much directed to the continent of Europe and not sufficiently to the motherland. It is desirable to secure the co-operation of the British government, and I think that the proposal put forward by the government of Australia is one which merits the consideration of this government and a statement of its policy to this House. Then there is a subject brought forward by New Zealand which merits some consideration. I refer to number 9 of the proposed New Zealand resolutions:

> Preferential trade between self-governing dependencies—That all doubts should be removed as to the right of self-governing dependencies to make reciprocal and preferential fiscal agreements with each other and with the United Kingdom, and further, that such right should not be fettered by imperial treaties or conventions without their concurrence.

That is a proposal which would hardly be regarded as debatable in this country. On both sides I think we would be prepared to conclude that the proposal of New Zealand is eminently proper. It is also eminently proper that we should have a statement from the First Minister as to the views of his government in that regard.

At page 18 of the report of the proceedings of the intercolonial conference of 1902 I find this:

> Sir Wilfrid Laurier informed me (that is the First Lord of the Admiralty) that His Majesty's government of the Dominion of Canada are contemplating the establishment of a local naval force in the waters of Canada, but that they are not able to make any offer of assistance analogous to those enumerated above.

I am not in so good a position as my right hon. friend to know how far this promise has been carried out. In what position is the establishment of a local naval force in the waters of Canada at present? What progress has been made along that line? Is the force under the control of the Minister of Militia (Sir F. Borden) or of my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Brodeur)? To what extent, if at all, has the proposal or promise made by the First Minister to the British government at that time been since carried out?

And if I might be permitted to allude to just one more subject, it is this. What will be the attitude of the Canadian government with reference to the cattle embargo? If one might be allowed to use the choice and delicate expression employed by Mr. Lloyd George, I might be justified in declaring that there seems to be a little rump of protectionists on the other side who prevent the removal of this embargo. We have a declaration to that effect from my hon. friend the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher), who has stated unequivocally in this House that that embargo is maintained, not because of any possibility or probability of disease in Canadian cattle, or by reason of any danger which could possibly result from the introduction of Canadian cattle into the mother country, but as a protective measure in aid of certain agricultural interests in the mother country. As I have said before, that is an eminently proper thing for the British government to do if they see fit. They have the absolute right to protect their agricultural interests by an embargo, by protective duties, by any other fair and reasonable means. But I do not think it is quite fair to the agricultural interests or the people of this country that protection should be afforded by an embargo which casts discredit throughout the world upon the condition of Canadian cattle. And it would be eminently proper for my right hon. friend, when he attends this conference, to present the matter in that light to the British government. I do not think I am presenting it in any stronger light than did my hon. friend the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher). It is perfectly proper for the British government to afford that protection to their own interests by any fair and reasonable means, but it is not perhaps quite in accord with fair play that they should adopt the means of placing an embargo upon Canadian cattle and of basing that embargo upon the theory that Canadian cattle, if admitted into the mother country, are liable to spread disease through British herds. I trust therefore that my right hon. friend the First Minister will give us the attitude which this government intends to take with respect to that particular matter.

In conclusion let me once more express the hope that in that conference which meets on the 15th of April next, Canada may not be unrepresented, but that my right hon. friend the Prime Minister will be present, ready to take part in its deliberations, and thus give Canada that voice it should have in the councils of the empire. My hon. friend will remember that years ago he said to the British people: Call us to your councils. He shakes his head, but if I am correct in the quotation it would seem most unfortunate that having extended that invitation to the British government: 'Call us to your councils,' and that call having been made, my right hon. friend should be so derelict to his duty as to remain on this side of the water.

Right Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). I find nothing to complain of in the general observations with which my hon. friend has favoured the House. He has not been very critical, and on the whole has rather sought information than given any himself. If I understood aright his introductory remarks, he rather complained that the government of Canada had no suggestions whatever to offer with regard to the matters to be discussed by that conference. I do not know how far this may be a cause for criticism. It seems to me rather a cause for rejoicing that the relations between Canada and the mother country are so happy that we see no particular ground for improvement, at least in the immediate future. We are satisfied with our lot as it is; we are satisfied with the measure of legislative independence which we enjoy; we are satisfied with being a part of the British empire, and are ready to go to London to perform the task which is sought of us. And we go not by the way of making any suggestions ourselves but rather receiving suggestions which may be made to us either by the home government or the sister colonies.

My hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) in his opening remarks, referred particularly to the proposed creation of what would be called the imperial council. He has alluded, and alluded favourably to one part of the answer which he made, that part in which he declined to agree to the change of name and insist rather on the terms 'Imperial Conference' for the periodical meeting to take place, rather than 'Imperial Council.' With regard to the creation of this new council, as a permanent organization in London, to be known by a certain name—whether it is called an imperial council, or an imperial conference does not matter much—my hon. friend has not commented very extensively, if at all, upon the attitude which we have taken. We have informed the authorities that we do not view with any favour the creation of such a council. I may, perhaps be allowed to quote the language in which we expressed our doubts in this respect:

> As regards the second suggestion of His Majesty's government, the committee are sensible that such a commission would greatly facilitate the work of the conference, and at the same time enhance the dignity and importance of that assembly. They cannot, however, wholly divest themselves of the idea that such a commission might conceivably interfere with the working of responsible government. While for this reason the committee would not at present be prepared to adopt the proposal for the appointment of a permanent commission, they feel that such a proposal emanating from His Majesty's government, should be very fully inquired into, and the Canadian representatives at the next conference, whenever it may be held, would be ready to join the representatives of the sister colonies in giving the whole matter their most careful consideration.

At this moment, I have no more to say than is conveyed in the language which is just read. I may say, and say quite plainly, that I do not view with favour the creation of such a body. It has been said that its object would be to collect information and make suggestions—it would have no more power than simply that of learning and suggesting. But in this there might be involved elements which would tend in the very reverse direction of promoting the happy relations which now exist between the colonial governments and the home government. It is easily conceivable at all events to my mind, that if this commission were appointed to sit in London, it might pass resolutions or make suggestions which would be embarrassing to the governments interested. It is conceivable as a proper thing, an eminently proper thing, that there should be inaugurated a body to which suggestions can be made, to which information can be conveyed. That goes without saying, and nobody can dissent from it. But it seems to me that we have such a body at the present time in the Colonial Office. And the Colonial Office is responsible to the British parliament, and matters dealt with by the Colonial Office are brought to the attention of the colonial ministers who are responsible to their respective parliaments. At present our relations with the Colonial Office are most happy. There was a time, and not in the far distant past, when the name of Downing street was a term of execration in the colonies and particularly in Canada. Happily these things are done with. At present, Downing street is not an object of terror for them; and the term 'Downing street' has passed away from the language of political discussion. Whether the Colonial Office is presided over by Mr. Chamberlain, by Mr. Lyttelton or by Lord Elgin, I bear testimony and cheerful testimony, that the efforts of the Colonial Office have always been in the direction of meeting, as far as possible, the wishes of the colonial governments. So far, I agree with the observation which has been made by my hon. friend that we here have no part to take in the politics of Great Britain. Whether the government of Mr. Balfour is in office or the government of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman is in office, the government represents the British people, and our relations with the British government are most friendly. But, coming back for a moment to the idea of the council that is proposed, it is not clear to me that it would improve our relations with the empire to deal with such a council instead of dealing through the Colonial Office as it has been carried on under the present regime—that is the regime which has existed since the institution in Canada of representative government. If this were a commission composed of officials, I should fear that all the faddists, all the men of one idea, all the men whose business it is to solve problems behind their desks and in the quiet of their offices, might reach conclusions which would come to the interested governments in the form of resolutions which might prove embarrassing to those governments. We have problems enough in every colony. If communications are to be made, if new ideas are to be developed and acted upon, the initiative, I submit, should come from the respective governments which compose the British empire. For these reasons, we do not view with favour, at present, the creation of the new council. But, we do not intend to pretend to speak ex-cathedra ; we have not said that our opinion on this subject is final and not to be reviewed. We have stated, on the contrary, that it would be our duty, as well as our pleasure, to receive the suggestions of the colonial conference which is to open in a few days. These are the views of the Canadian government on the subject. We made no representations and no suggestions, when these were invited, for the reason that I have already stated, that our relations with the empire are happy and we have no grievances. The only question in which we are interested, and the only question we intend to bring before the conference is the question which absorbed the most of the time of the last conference—the trade question. And upon the trade question we have nothing new to offer. My hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) has stated that the resolution adopted by the British conference in 1902, was adopted at the suggestion of the Canadian ministers. It is embodied in the blue-book, and was quoted a moment ago by my hon. friend—I need not repeat it. Such as our policy was in 1902 such it is in 1907. We have given to the British people a preference under our tariff.. This we have done for our benefit and for the benefit of the relations which exist between us and the mother country. But we have stated, that, if it suits the British people to reciprocate, we shall be prepared to discuss the question and to go a step further than we yet have gone. Now, we have nothing to say upon this point. This policy which we have suggested, has not met with favour in Britain. Well, Sir, it is not for us at this moment, and not for me on behalf of the Canadian people, to press this matter on the British people. It is for the British people to make up their minds whether the policy is acceptable to them and would be for their benefit. All I have to say, and in this I am sure I voice the views of every hon. gentleman in this House, is that the British empire can be maintained and can rest only upon the idea that every one of the nations which compose it must be allowed to determine for itself what is best for that nation.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. It suits us in this country to be tinged with protection more than perhaps I would like to have. I am sorry to have to make that admission. It does not suit the British people to be tinged in the same way. Their tariff is very different from our tariff ; our tariff is based largely upon customs duties and excise duties. This is the only method that we have in this country of raising the revenue. The British tariff is founded upon an entirely different basis. Well, we would not accept the idea that the British public should force upon us their own fiscal views and no more would they tolerate the idea that we should force upon them our own fiscal views, and therefore the only way in which the British empire can be maintained upon its present foundation is by allowing to every nation composing it the measure of liberty that it has and also the free choice of the fiscal policy which it is to maintain. For my part I may say frankly that if I had my own view, if I were asked what would be the ideal condition within the British empire, the policy would tend to build the British empire upon an even stronger basis than it is at present, if that were possible, it would be to have a universal system of free trade between all the parts that compose the British empire. This would be my view, but such a system is not possible at the present time, we could not carry that into effect in this country nor could it be carried out in Great Britain, and therefore all that we can do is to show the way, to point the goal, and let time develop it later on.

My hon. friend has desired my view upon the question of imperial defence. This is a delicate subject. I have nothing more to say, as I am about to sail for England to attend the conference of 1907, than what I said on a similar occasion five years ago upon the floor of parliament, that upon this delicate question for my part I do not know or believe that the relations which exist at the present time can be improved, and in so far as I have anything to do with the politics of this country and in so far as I am to represent the views of this country, I think I must adhere to the view I expressed five years ago that for no consideration would Canada be induced to be drawn into the vortex of European militarism.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The conditions which prevail to-day in Europe are deplorable to a degree. The condition which prevails in Europe is an armed peace, almost as intolerable as war itself. This cannot last for ever; it seems to me the date is not far distant when these nations, the wisest, the most advanced, the most civilized in the world, will recognize the folly that has been carried on for centuries and will come back to a more humane system such as we have on this continent. Therefore upon this point the attitude which we intend to maintain is exactly the same as that which we took in 1902.

To the subject of immigration we do not allude and we do not think there is any necessity of alluding to it. We have a good policy of immigration; it has borne its fruits and I am glad to say that, thanks to our efforts, our immigration from the British Isles to this country is increasing. It was larger last year than the year before and larger this year than last year. I believe that in this respect there is nothing to improve, nothing more to be done than to continue the system that we have hitherto pursued.

With regard to preferential trade between the self-governing colonies of the empire, which is an article put forward by the government of Australia in these words:

> That it is desirable that the preferential treatment accorded by the colonies to the products and manufactures of the United Kingdom be also granted to the products and manufactures of other self-governing colonies.

We have already two years ago made an exactly similar proposal to the government of Australia. In a despatch which has been brought down this session and laid upon the table of the House we offered to extend to them exactly the preference which we gave to Great Britain. The government of Australia has not thought it advisable to respond yet to our demand. There has been, I admit, some delay in the official correspondence but there has been no delay whatever in the negotiations between the Australian government and ourselves; our agents in Australia have been conferring with the Australian government, but up to this time to no purpose. The correspondence which was brought down a few weeks ago has shown that between Mr. Deakin and myself it has been agreed that we should meet in London and take up the subject with the view and hope of bringing it to a satisfactory conclusion. Whatever may be the views of our fellow subjects of Australia on this question I do not yet know, but if their views are the same as ours, there will be no trouble whatever in coming to a conclusion because what we have offered, as I stated, is exactly what is in the resolution which we want to discuss, that is to say that the same preference which is given to the motherland should also be extended to the other colonies. We are prepared to do this and if the government of Australia will reciprocate the matter is altogether in their hands.

The government of Australia go on and say also—and my hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) has particularly desired the view of the government upon this:

> That it is desirable that the United Kingdom grant preferential treatment to the products and manufactures of the colonies.

My hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) has asked what is the view of the government upon this? I have already stated our views. This matter, Mr. Speaker, is not in our hands. It is not a matter which I would think it proper to force upon the government of Great Britain; it must be left altogether to the judgment and the will of the people of Great Britain. If the people of Great Britain are prepared to extend to us preferential treatment for the products and manufactures of the colonies, we have already stated that we are prepared to meet them and to go one step deeper into the preferential system and to discuss what more we can do in order to meet that view. The answer must come from them and I repeat that it would be unseemly on our part, not to use a stronger expression, to try to force the views of the colonial governments upon the people of the motherland.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. As I understand the right hon. gentleman (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) he adheres to the resolution of 1902 in its entirety?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I have stated already that we have nothing to change upon that; our resolution is exactly the same to-day as it was in 1902.

I do not know that I have much more to say to my hon. friend, I have answered frankly and without any equivocation all the questions he has asked me. There remains only the question of the cattle embargo. This does not seem to me a proper subject for the colonial conference which is to open in London on the 15th of April. It is a question between the government of Great Britain and the government of Canada; it is a subject the discussion of which has been going on now for years, and if I may be allowed to use an expression to which my hon. friend took some exception a moment ago, when he referred to the words of Mr. Lloyd George, I may say that there is in Great Britain a little rump of protectionists who prevent the removal of the cattle embargo. The non-removal of the cattle embargo cannot be ascribed to the reason which has been given, that is to say that there is disease in our cattle, because it is perfectly well known that our cattle are free from any blemish. There must be some other reasons. Whether that is reason which I have given or not I do not know; I suspect it, but I have to say to my hon. friend that we shall not discontinue the efforts which we have been making and which were made before us, the efforts which have been made for the last fifteen years, to obtain the removal of what we believe to be an unjust restriction upon our trade.

Now, I have nothing more to say upon this subject. I have only to say to my hon. friend, that, as I stated the other day, it was a matter of deep concern to me what should be my duty—whether my duty should keep me here or whether my duty should take me to the other side. But, taking it all in all, I think there can be no doubt that I should try to meet the wishes of the House which were so kindly expressed by the hon. gentleman himself in allowing no duty to keep me here, but to perform my poor part in the conference which will open on the 15th of April, and in which we certainly take a deep interest. I do not know whether or not the conference will result in very much practical business, but at all events, even if there was not much accomplished by this conference there is always something done and even if there was nothing done I think it is something that we may all be proud of as British subjects that so many nations, coming from all parts of the earth, all owing the same allegiance to the British sovereign, meet together to discuss in a friendly and brotherly spirit the relations which make up the happy condition which is now the lot of the empire to which we have the honour to belong. I have to thank my hon. friend himself for the kind words he has spoken upon this subject, and further for his offer made privately and publicly to facilitate the business of the House in order that nothing may detain me, and for this I have, with all my heart, to offer him my sincere thanks.

Hon. GEORGE E. FOSTER (North Toronto). Mr. Speaker, I am sure we all will agree on both sides of the House with the sentiment with which the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) has ended his interesting remarks. We congratulate ourselves and congratulate the country upon the fact that he has found it possible to make arrangements to attend that conference. As was stated in this House the other day it would have been a deplorable circumstance that that conference should be opened and should be permitted to carry on its proceedings without a representative from Canada being present and without the premier as that representative. The premier started out with the idea that he had not committed himself to any subjects or in fact made any suggestions because of the happy state of the relations existing between Canada and the mother country, the idea being that everything was in such a condition, the relations were so happy that there was no need for any particular action. I think that can be carried a little too far. When a man is thoroughly self-satisfied with himself and his surroundings he has about ceased to make progress and he is about beginning upon the road to decadence. I would not have the Prime Minister and his government fall into the idea that everything is all that it should be and that therefore there should be no stimulus, no hope and no ambition and even no trial for better things than those which exist to-day. It is true that there are no grievances particularly between Canada and the mother country, but it is also true that there is a host of common interests, a host of interests which bind not only ourselves and the mother country, but ourselves and the sister colonies, that these interests are in a nascent state, that they can be cultivated and it does not do for us to sit down and say: There is nothing particular for us to do; we are in a happy state in so far as our conditions are concerned now. The whole world is progressing. Every nationality on the face of the earth is putting forth superhuman efforts to-day in the great competition for excellence and for progress and the country that sits down, pluming itself upon the fact that it is in a happy condition of circumstances and casts no eye out to the future in this great competition of nations as to what shall be done, the provision that shall be made and the paths that shall be chosen, the particular way in which they shall be followed, the aggregations of strength, interest and sympathy, that, massed together will make the journey all the more easy and make the outcome of the journey all the more successful, will be left behind in the race. So, I mildly protest against the Prime Minister falling into a state of desuetude on account of the fact that there are no grievances, as expressed by the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding), between Canada and the motherland to-day. Now, we come to the objection of my right hon. friend to the word 'council'; or 'commission,'—was it? I think it was the commission that my hon. friend chiefly discussed. If I may be allowed a remark, what struck me when I read this correspondence was the almost over-caution of the government of Canada, the almost over caution of the Prime Minister himself. He was so cautious that he had no suggestions to make, he was so cautious that it took him many months to answer communications, he was so cautious that there had to come a rush telegram from Lord Elgin praying that he and his office there might have word as to the despatches which had been sent long before. He is so cautious that even when he suggested that the term imperial council had better not be continued and that a better term would be 'imperial conference,' he straightway hastens to add a codicil to it: Please do not consider that I am suggesting it, but it is a thing that may be brought up in council when we meet together. This over-caution is not indicative of my hon. friend under other conditions. When Canada was to be launched into the great undertaking of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, time could not wait. My right hon. friend could not wait. It would make no difference as to whether there had been surveys or not in that vast undiscovered region that he proposed to traverse with a line of rails, if nothing else could be got in reference to that whole country but the diary of some old priest, of fifty or a hundred years ago, who saw a rose growing somewhere up around a lake there in the month of June, under the strenuous conditions then existing that would be sufficient to found a line of railway upon between this and the Pacific coast with its attendant millions of expense. Take the rose and the priest's definition and description of it and go on with our railway for the tides of time do not wait and we must hurry this thing along. No caution there! Not even as much caution as we thought there ought to be, but when great imperial interests, and I use that word as to the common interests which subsist between ourselves as a member of the great empire to which we belong and correlated with the other colonies whom we look upon as sister nations, whose growth we congratulate ourselves upon because it adds to our own strength and our own future progress and growth and makes our common country and common heritage greater and stronger and fuller in its development—when that is the only question my right hon. friend lies down in front of an excessive caution and dares not even suggest that the term be 'imperial conference' without immediately adding something to say: Please do not take that as a suggestion from us; that can be considered; we will take it up when we meet together.

What can be the objection to an intelligence bureau. Is it possible that we can know too much about our varied resources in all parts of the empire? The Prime Ministers meet, there have been three meetings already and there is to be another; it is impossible for these ministers to make original researches on the various questions that come before the conference. No man wishes to discuss a question there unless he is equipped with information. It is of the greatest importance that the prime ministers from every quarter of the empire should have at their command an efficient body which would collate the information of the empire on all these subjects, and put it in concise form so that when these great chiefs come to deliberate they may have that information close at hand, and be able to avail of it. In the name of common sense what objection can there be to that? The British government says they want it, that they will furnish the office and that each colony can furnish an official. The expense of it would be but a feather's weight as compared with the benefit that would be derived. How necessary is it that you shall have trained experts from all quarters of the empire who will make up for you the facts necessary to enable you to discuss such questions as come up at these conferences. That is all there is in this intelligence bureau. Do not call it anything of a council if you please; it is nothing but a bureau, as I understand it, which will put in convenient form that information which is absolutely necessary for carrying on the consultative and deliberative work of the conference. I should suppose that is a thing about which no caution is needed, and that all the colonies might readily say that they would contribute their quota to such an extremely useful work. I am just as jealous of the rights of Canada as my right hon. friend. I am just as jealous as he is of the right of every one of the constituent parts of the empire to have its own affairs under its own management, and to be solved by its own sovereign will. When the right hon. gentleman talks about us forcing Great Britain to a trade policy, or Great Britain forcing us to a trade policy, he is talking about something which cannot be. At this date, no one proposes to allow any one else to force it to do anything, and it is cheap talk to say here in Canada that we are not going to let Great Britain take from us a single iota of our self governing power. Great Britain does not propose to do anything of the kind. My right hon. friend has said that we view Downing street with very different feelings from what we did fifty years ago. Yes, and the converse is absolutely true; Downing street views us with very different feelings from what it did fifty years ago or thirty years ago. But that feeling is mutual and it has arisen through the interchange of fellowship, intellectual and physical, and commerce. We know each other better, we respect each others rights as we never did before, and there is no need to talk about 'forcing' one way or the other. But there is a force which is greater than armaments, naval or military—it is the force of applied common sense; it is the force of earnest discussion and of deep persuasion; it is centreing the interests of the minds of all parts of our country upon what may be to the advantage of all. And this inner force, and the working of common sense, and reason, and persuasion, we can apply to Great Britain as Great Britain apply it to us. I have a perfect right to go to Manchester or to London and to stand among my fellow subjects of the same King, and to argue with them and to persuade them to seek a more excellent way by which the blood of the mother should go to the child, and the blood of the child shall flow towards the mother; and, that instead of giving the best of our sons and the best of our products to alien climes, when changes are sought as change will always be sought, it is better that the mother country should seek its exploitation in the dominions beyond the sea than that she should look to alien nations. Let my right hon. friend ask himself whether there is not a practical field for him in this matter of trade and of immigration.

It is too bad that a member of the British government should have such a view of us protectionists on this side of the House as to designate us with that somewhat offensive name of a 'rump.' But my right hon. friend can put that right; he can tell Mr. Lloyd George, privately if he likes, that the 'rump' has grown into the whole carcase; that the whole body from the head to the tail is now protectionist in this Dominion of Canada and in this Dominion parliament. Just a word from the Prime Minister will prevent Mr. Lloyd George from using such an offensive term towards the protectionists of the olden time, for it does not appear that Mr. Lloyd George has yet found out that protectionism has affected the whole lump, and that the Liberal party in Canada is part of a coalescent body which stands for protection. Of course, sometimes our ministers do not declare for protectionism on the public platform; of course although they stand for protection in the tariff items they sometimes disclaim protection, just as the Minister of Customs does who is a protectionist but who does not like to avow it, and just as the Minister of Finance, who sometimes says he is a free trader but who is yet a protectionist all the way through.

And another thing could be done. If, as my right hon. friend thinks, we have been prevented from having the cattle embargo raised because of the rump of protectionists in the British parliament. Now, after the sweeping victory of a few months ago, with the Radicals and the Labourites and the Campbellites all in one vast mass, with an overbearing majority which has no truck with the heresies of protection—with this supreme power in the British House of Commons—my right hon. friend, with his persuasive powers, can just say to them: Here is a chance for Radicalism and Labourism of the true type to prove itself ready, triumphantly over that little rump of protectionists, to give to the Canadian cow her proper place on the markets and on the green fields of the old country.

With reference to immigration, have we not been wasting our financial powers? What better subject could my right hon. friend take up? What better thing could he bring back from that conference than to be able to state in the next parliament of Canada: We have practically made an arrangement by which the British government and ourselves will co-operate in the exchange of labour, the exchange of bodily material, the exchange of citizenship, when it must move itself from the old country, that it may move to Canada and find a place for its development on our broad acres. The British government and the British people, in vast organizations scattered all through the country, are earnestly studying and solving the question of getting employment for their labour; and one way to get it is to put that labour into other countries under happier conditions. If it be an object to relieve the congestion there, and if it be an object to us to have it relieved by planting it on our shores, there is a mutual exchange; and I have always held that a co-operation between the British government and British agencies and our government in the matter of immigration could give us many hundreds of thousands of sturdy and strong men, born to our institutions, born under our flag, not requiring a generation or more to understand the genius of our government and the working of our institutions—that they could by this co-operative effort be saved to the empire; because whether they be in London or in Ottawa, whether they be on the fields of England or on the prairies of the west, there is no loss, but there may be great gain from the change for the British empire as a whole. Better there, ten thousand times, than adding to the richness and the strength of foreign and alien nations.

With reference to the matter of defence, I noticed that my right hon. friend skipped over the question of a naval reserve. Was it so small that he did not see it and consequently did not mention it? I am afraid it looks a good deal like that. There is one sense in which my right hon. friend is absolutely right. We do not want to be drawn into the vortex of European militarism. That is a good sentiment. Look at it and study its vastness; look at its iron weight on the necks of the peasantry and the labouring men of those continental countries, and to a certain extent in Great Britain itself, and gather from that the lesson as we may, it is an evil and it ought to be remedied. Grant that as you may, the whole history of the race rises up on the other side and declares that the country and the people that is not able fairly to defend itself loses in the long run. If we have what is worth having, we have what is worth defending; and it is a long way between the inflated and heavy militarism of European countries and a just measure and system of training and defence for the yeomanry of Canada, so that the country they are so proud of and the homes they love so well may have the system as well as the courage, may have the plan and method as well as the desire, that if ever they are threatened they have at least a fair capacity to defend their country and their homes. Do not let my right hon. friend suppose as his statement seemed to indicate, that we are happy on this continent because we have no military preparations. Take the history of the United States for the last fifteen years. That history is double-sided. On the one side, the United States has at last thrown off its continental insularity, so to speak—that is a contradiction of terms, but let it pass; it has become imperialized; it has broken the confines of its old doctrine and its old territory; and to-day you find the flag of the United States from the Philippines to Cuba, reaching into the Pacific and into the Atlantic, with the feeling among these people and the consequent duty involved, that they have become a world power. Once that has been done, to my mind there is no retraction; there is no drawing back, but a reaching out farther and farther. The other point in the United States history is that they have been in the last fifteen years making preparations, and actually carrying them out, for a navy which will not be second to many in the world when all these plans are fulfilled. We in Canada have no navy; we in Canada have a small armament. But to the south of us there is a great people of eighty millions who are building progressively, with plans well laid and to be carried out in the future, and who are fitting themselves to become a first-class naval power and one of the best of the first-class naval powers. Now, it seems to me but common sense that we hold abroad to the sturdy, strong arms of six millions of Canadians here, destined to be many millions more by and by, the same in Australia, the same in South Africa—a mixture of English and Boer—and the same in other quarters of the world—that instead of each one of these either lying utterly defenceless or trying to become a sufficient provider for its defence against the world, it is common sense and wisdom for all of them to combine and to put their moral force, as well as their physical force, a naval and military force into one great aggregation which shall command respect because it is powerful, and command no less respect because while being powerful it is thoughtful and not aggressive. There is a difference between the aggressiveness of a people and the staid, calm, able preparation for defending their rights, giving themselves confidence that a certain amount of power is necessary to give. Are we doing that in this country, and can we not, by co-operation, without any one of these countries losing an iota of its own independence and its own proper regard for its rights—can we not, by pooling our issues, with the whole strength and wisdom of the empire in all its parts, frame a system of co-operation by which, with least cost to any part, the greatest efficiency for the whole shall be brought about? These are questions which we must think over. Happy as we are in Canada, we would soon stagnate if our horizon were not a little broader than simply our own happiness and our lack of grievances; but stretching before us is a condition which gives an inspiration, which calls to every young man in Canada and the British world over for action and thought and impulse and endeavour towards the progress and the prosperity and the linking together for both progress and prosperity of Anglo-Saxon, British hands the wide world over—for trade, for commerce, for protection, for defence, for the conquest of evil within, for the standing up for the rights of the best civilization and the freest civilization, and holding up the standard of that for the world as a whole.

Motion agreed to, and House went into Committee of Supply.

Lachine canal—rebuilding slope walls, $90,-350.

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals). This is a continuation of the work undertaken some seven years ago. The walls are old and tumbling down. They were built about thirty years ago. The sum asked is to build 2,000 lineal feet. The walls are partly of stone and partly of concrete. It is all contract work. The contractors are Heney, Miller, Quinlan and Robertson.

Mr. HAGGART. What will it take to finish?

Mr. EMMERSON. The total estimated cost is $235,000.

Soulanges canal—Manny's gate bars, $8,250.

Mr. EMMERSON. This is an apparatus which consists of two interlocking steel beams placed against the upper side of the gates, which secures them against being broken. Moreover both leaves of the gate being strongly locked together cannot be carried away. The apparatus has been given a trial on the Carillon and Grenville canals and proved satisfactory. There are five locks and each costs $1,500.

Bridge at Clement's gully, $12,000.

Mr. EMMERSON. This is a bridge crossing the public road. The present bridge was built of timber by the department and is no longer safe. It is proposed to put in a steel bridge.

Soulanges canal improvements, $16,080.

Mr. EMMERSON. This is for widening the bank, putting up mooring posts, isolated cabins, water supply, fire protection, blacksmith shop, &c.

Chambly canal—improvements at St. John harbour, $25,000.

Mr. EMMERSON. At times the harbour is so packed with boats that there is difficulty for a new tow to come in or get out. Serious delays and damages have already occurred. The proposed improvements are for enlarging the area by building crib work and dredging. Total cost $50,000. All given by contract.

Mr. J. D. REID. How much has the cost increased of maintaining that canal?

Mr. EMMERSON. The same proportion as in others. Increasing the wages of employees, increase in the cost of material.

Mr. J. D. REID. The other day I drew the minister's attention to the fact that he had increased from $265,000 to $860,000 the amount required for maintaining and operating the canals.

Mr. EMMERSON. That is largely due to improvements, increasing the number of lights, increasing the wages, and the increased cost of material.

Mr. J. D. REID. Take the St. Lawrence canals—for instance, the Williamsburg canal —there is no great increase there——

Mr. EMMERSON. Except in the wages.

Mr. J. D. REID. The wages have doubled —from about $17,000 to about $34,000.

Mr. EMMERSON. There have been no additions to the staff.

Mr. J. D. REID. Why, there are twice as many men as there were in 1896 though the number of locks has not been increased.

Mr. EMMERSON. I am comparing the present time with 1904. If my hon. friend wishes to go back to that time, I must look up the information.

Mr. J. D. REID. Take the Farran's Point canal. It is a mile long and has one lock. The number of men on it has been doubled. The Williamsburg canal has two locks, the same as before, and the number of men has been doubled. The cost for men and for supplies is very much more than was required on the canal formerly. It seems simply an outrage that there should be such an expenditure. There is another point I would draw the minister's attention to. The Minister of Customs and the Minister of Railways and Canals must have decided to appoint the same man as collector of canal tolls on the Williamsburg canal paying him $1,000 a year, and as collector of customs at Cardinal. I suppose I am right in saying that the collector of canal tolls is supposed to be in his office all day. Am I right in that?

Mr. EMMERSON. He is supposed to be there, when required, but I would not expect him to always remain in his office any more than I would expect a member of this House to remain always in his seat in this Chamber.

Mr. J. D. REID. The minister knows that the canal tolls office is at the head of the canal. Now, in order not to detain vessels he should be there.

Mr. EMMERSON. Whenever he is required for a vessel he is supposed to be there.

Mr. J. D. REID. Paying him such a salary, I suppose he is expected to be on duty, all day at least. But this gentleman also occupies the position of collector of customs at Cardinal. His office as collector of customs is a mile and a half away from his office as collector of canal tolls. To receive entries from parties who cross the river, he is supposed to be in his customs house all day. I would like the Minister of Railways and Canals to tell me how this gentleman is supposed to be in two places at once, for he certainly occupies two offices and is paid two salaries?

Mr. EMMERSON. One official was selected to attend to the customs house work and the canal work, thereby lessening the expense. The salary of the customs officer at that point was a very small one, and it would be difficult to find any one to do the work for that salary. I have not in mind the particular circumstances of this case, but I know that in a number of cases on the canals these offices have been given to the same man. I remember that difficulties have arisen when we were dispensing with the services of some of the collectors because the Customs Department found that they were called upon to increase the salaries of their officials, as they were deprived of the contribution which we had made. There has been no unusual expenditure as compared with 1903, except a gradual increase in the wages of the employees.

Mr. J. D. REID. Yes, and in supplies.

Mr. EMMERSON. Yes, and in supplies as well. But that is due to the general increased cost of supplies which has affected the administration of the public works of Canada, the Intercolonial Railway and the canals, through greater cost of material for operation and construction. But supplies are purchased by annual advertisement calling for tender, and, in every instance, the lowest tender is accepted. I should fancy that there would be a considerable increase in the cost of operation as compared with 1896. That is partly due to the increase in the size of the vessels.

Mr. J. D. REID. It does not take more men to open a gate for a big vessel than for a small one.

Mr. EMMERSON. But the opening of the gate is not all their work. There is more labour in protecting the gates from the vessels.

Mr. BERGERON. In what way ? Does the minister have his men protect the gates from the vessels by pushing on the boats?

Mr. EMMERSON. No, but more lines are required and more men to man them.

Mr. J. D. REID. The boat supplies the men.

Mr. EMMERSON. In some instances, but you must have additional men on the locks.

Mr. J. D. REID. I would like to ask the Minister of Customs how the officer at Cardinal is on duty all day to receive entries while he is supposed to be on duty a mile and a half away to give passes to boats ?

Mr. PATERSON. He must be earning his money.

Mr. J. D. REID. How is it done ?

Mr. PATERSON. I hear no complaints so far as the management of the customs office is concerned. It may be that he has regular hours that the business community know of.

Mr. J. D. REID. But the boats may come at any minute to the head of the canal.

Mr. EMMERSON. There is no doubt that he attends to his canal duties.

Mr. PATERSON. He attends to his customs duties.

Mr. EMMERSON. He is doing his work very faithfully. Perhaps by the aid of the telephone system he can tell when a boat is coming and arrange accordingly.

Mr. J. D. REID. He is never there.

Mr. BERGERON. How many men are employed on the Soulanges canal ?

Mr. EMMERSON. I have not the number of men on the locks but I can get the information.

Mr. BERGERON. Since the system of working the locks by electricity has been inaugurated fewer men should be required.

Quebec canals—to purchase cement, $55,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Will that be bought by tender ?

Mr. EMMERSON. All by public tender. I beg to move that this be reduced to $15,000. It was thought that by purchasing large quantities, sufficient for a year's requirements, there would be a considerable saving. The reason that the estimate for this large quantity was made was that certain works were contemplated by the superintending engineer, but on being referred to the department they were cut out by the deputy minister, and therefore the larger amount will not be required and we shall only ask for the $15,000.

Mr. HAGGART. Do you furnish cement to the contractors ?

Mr. EMMERSON. Yes.

Mr. HAGGART. On what contracts are you furnishing this ?

Mr. EMMERSON. This is in connection with all the works on the Quebec canals.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. As one-fifth of the vote has already been taken the item should be reduced to $4,000 which, with the $11,000, would make the $15,000.

Mr. BERGERON. Is it intended to improve that part of the canal at Valleyfield that has been spoken of in correspondence with the department ? I imagine that would take a good deal of cement and might explain the purchase of a larger amount than usual ?

Mr. EMMERSON. That will be covered by its own special vote and on that I can give full information.

Mr. LENNOX. Should you not there take the vote of $15,000 ?

Mr. FIELDING. It would be all right to take the $4,000 as $11,000 has been voted.

Cornwall and other St. Lawrence canals, enlargement, $7,000.

Mr. BERGERON. What is that enlargement ?

Mr. EMMERSON. This amount is to pay the engineering and office expenses of the engineers looking after the works on the canals in that district, closing up the final estimate. They have not completed the final estimate and this amount of $7,000 is to pay the engineer in charge and the other engineers engaged in completing the final estimates of those canals.

Mr. HAGGART. Is this all going for engineering ?

Mr. EMMERSON. Yes, wages and salaries of engineers.

Mr. BERGERON. It must include something else ?

Mr. EMMERSON. No, this item has always gone through, the enlargement of canals. There is a staff of engineers at work on it. They have not yet completed the work and this amount is required. Of course their services will be dispensed with as soon as this work is completed but we require the $7,000.

Mr. BERGERON. Why did you not finish the improvements on the Cornwall canal?

Mr. EMMERSON. This is all charged to the enlargement of the canal.

Mr. HAGGART. The enlargement was completed a couple of years ago.

Mr. EMMERSON. But this is part of the cost of the enlargement. You want to get the final estimates, and the services of the men who are employed there should be chargeable to the work, in which they were engaged and for which we appropriated money.

Mr. SPROULE. Why do you require it after the canal is completed?

Mr. EMMERSON. The Auditor General requires it.

Mr. J. D. REID. The canal was completed a couple of years ago.

Mr. HAGGART. How is this a final estimate of a canal that has been completed for a couple of years?

Mr. EMMERSON. They have been working on all of the St. Lawrence canals. This is to have a finished plan with all the details connected with the work so that it will be a matter of record in a permanent form, made in ink, and made as permanent as may be possible. The records of these canals have been very imperfect. There was no survey of the Welland canal with the result that we were obliged to vote $20,000 for the purpose of completing it.

Mr. BERGERON. I think you had better let that item stand.

Mr. EMMERSON. I am sorry you are not in a generous mood. I would like to get that item through.

Some resolutions reported.

Mr. FIELDING moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. HAGGART. What are we going to take up on April 2?

Mr. FIELDING. The Tariff Bill and then Committee of Supply.

House adjourned at six o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, April 2, 1907.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

Right Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) moved:

That commencing on Wednesday, the 3rd of April, to the end of the session, the rule of the House concerning the closing of the sitting on Wednesday at six o'clock, p.m., shall not apply, and that commencing with the same day, and until the end of the session, the House shall meet on that day and on each subsequent sitting day at eleven o'clock in the morning; that in addition to the usual intermission at six o'clock, p.m., there shall be also an intermisson every day from one to three o'clock, p.m.; that government orders shall have precedence at all such sittings, members having still the right to ask questions on Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Of course, if committee work is still to continue, some provision will have to be made empowering the committees to meet notwithstanding the session of the House; otherwise you would cut off all committee work after eleven o'clock.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. That will be subject to consideration.

Motion agreed to.

RESIGNATION OF THE MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called, I have a communication to make to the House. For some time past my hon. friend and colleague the Minister of Railways and Canals has been subjected to insinuations and rumours of a most injurious character—rumours and insinuations hitherto impalpable and intangible, but which have at last taken the form of a very injurious newspaper acticle. This article I have no doubt is familiar to the members of this House. My hon. friend the Minister of Railways and Canals absolutely denies the truth of the allegations set forth in that article, and, in order to better vindicate his character, has tendered his resignation and it has been accepted. The correspondence which has taken place between my hon. friend and myself is as follows:

Office of the Minister of Railways and Canals,
Ottawa, April 1, 1907.

Dear Sir Wilfrid,—You and I, and indeed the whole country have been aware that the attention of parliament has been interrupted by certain innuendoes against members of your cabinet. Mere gossip is difficult to meet; but when the medium of the press has been sought to name me as one of your colleagues in a slander, false on its face, I have directed that proceedings be taken against certain newspapers for the purpose of vindicating myself, not only against the direct charge, but also against the insinuation involved therein.

I am conscious that I am in a position to be exonerated in the eyes of the country and yourself.

My object in taking these proceedings is to vindicate my character, aside from all political considerations.

It is expected that you will leave here on Thursday for England in the interests not only of Canada but of the empire, and I would be very sorry to prove to be in any way an obstacle to that departure. Of necessity the decision of the courts will not be in time to make you feel free. Feeling as I do that it would be unfair to you, to my colleagues and to the party generally, that I should be under such an imputation while occupying a place in your cabinet, I have therefore to ask you to accept my resignation as Minister of Railways and Canals.

Assuring you of my personal esteem, and of my gratitude for the many kindnesses shown by you, and of my belief in and adherence to the policy of your government, and of the hope that my sure vindication will in the end be a matter of satisfaction to you.

I have the honour to be,
Dear Sir Wilfrid,
Yours faithfully,
(Sgd.) H. R. EMMERSON.

Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, K.C.M.G.,
Premier, Ottawa.

To this communication I sent to Mr. Emmerson the following reply:

Ottawa, April 1, 1907.

My Dear Emmerson,—I have come to the conclusion that the course which you take is, under existing circumstances, in the public interest. You owe it to yourself, to your colleagues and friends, to clear your character of the charges levelled against it. You could well ignore mere insinuations, but direct and specific charges you do well to face as soon as uttered.

I will place your resignation in the hands of His Excellency.

Let me assure you that I, as well as your colleagues, appreciate the efforts, labour and zeal with which you struggled to advance the public welfare in a most arduous department.

Believe me, my dear Emmerson,
Yours very sincerely,
WILFRID LAURIER.

The Hon. H. R. Emmerson, Ottawa.

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON. Mr. Speaker, it will not perhaps be necessary for me in any way to add more than a word to the announcement which has been made by the Prime Minister. I want to be definitely clear as to what my statement should be and with the indulgence of the House I shall read that statement so that it may be understood by this House and by the country as a definite and clear cut statement, and so that there need be no misapprehension as to the words:

I desire, at this time, to repeat my denial, explicitly and unqualifiedly, of the charge which has been made against me by the Fredericton 'Gleaner,' and to say that I have taken steps to secure vindication before the only tribunal having jurisdiction in the premises—the established courts of the land. To this end I have given instructions for the issue of writs for libel against the Fredericton 'Gleaner' the Halifax 'Herald' and the Toronto 'World', and I have been advised of service in at least one of these cases. It is but a question of hours in the other two cases, if, indeed, at this moment service has not taken place.

Mr. Speaker, with the indulgence of the House and with your permission I would like to say one other word. I, in common with every other hon. member in this House, recognize this fact, that gossip has caused more mischief in the world than have the decrees of tyrants, and while I have been aware, coming to me as they have come to me from time to time, of slanderous statements that were untrue, they have not been made in any tangible way and I could not, before my peers and before my fellows, take cognizance of them. In a way I feel relieved to think that this matter has come to a head, that it has reached a point where I will at least be in a position to meet my traducers face to face. I do not know, Mr. Speaker, whether it be a fact or not that every man in this House is willing to have his private life exposed. I do not know if there is any man within the sound of my voice, indeed within this country, who is in a position to say that he has not done wrong. I admit that I have had my weaknesses, I have had my foibles. Until this matter reached the point which it has reached, I had not thought it was a subject matter for parliamentary discussion or for parliamentary investigation. I had felt this at least, Sir, that the man who was without sin should be the man to cast the first stone, and while I, standing as I do before the bar of public opinion, and as, within a very few days, I will stand before the courts of justice, while I will tell the truth and the whole truth, I expect to be judged not by the standard that would be set up on the plea of 'you're another' while I ask no mercy from that standpoint, if the standard that should be the standard of the people of this country shall govern me, and if I am unfit and unworthy of recognition in this House or in this country, I am willing to go down. But, Sir, after that, and when that question has been fought out and determined there is one other question that the members of this House will ask themselves, that the people of this country will ask of this House and it is this: Are there others? Sir, in making that statement and in making the written statement which I have made strong enough,—I do not know if it could be strong enough because so far as the statements in that paper are untrue, so far as they are false, I want to be understood, but I want to go further and to say that they are unqualifiedly false and that anything I have ever done either in the city of Montreal or under any other circumstances I did to protect the innocent, and I have never been—mark my words, Mr. Speaker, and I make them with the full knowledge of the solemnity of the occasion and of the dignity of my position—that I have never been in a hotel in the city of Montreal in my life with anybody of ill-repute. I shall take occasion, Sir, to show that to be true, and in the protection which I have at all times afforded to the innocent I will never show to the country nor attempt to show it by building up on anybody else's downfall.

Mr. Speaker, it must be recognized, it is recognized as a crisis in any man's life, when statements of this kind are paraded before the country, and while I almost feel a sense of relief and gratification to know that I am now placed where I can and will meet my traducers, I have been in a position during the discussion in this House of not knowing whether these insinuations and these innuendoes have been aimed at me or not; there was nothing tangible, nothing that I could seize upon, nothing that I could take hold of. The occasion has come, the time is now here, and I hope, Sir, to be able to seize the opportunity so that every man who has been able to grasp my hand as a friend, as an equal, will be able to say hereafter, that he can grasp my hand and welcome me as heretofore, as a friend.

So far as my political opponents are concerned, I have no word to say. Political life has its difficulties, its troubles and its struggles. I have known it for over a score of years and I have met these difficulties, I have surmounted these obstacles, with all my weaknesses, with all my foibles—and who are there who have them not? Who are they who are above reproach? I hope they exist; I hope they are within the sound of my voice. But, with all the faults that may be mine—and I have them in common with humanity; I have a strong element of human nature about me—yet I believe, and I have always hugged the belief, that it has been a sympathetic and warm hearted human nature. It is not to leave me at this moment. And except as I ask for a fair hearing and for a suspension of judgment on the part of the members of this House and on the part of the people of this country, I do not make and will not make any plea for mercy. I make no appeal other than this: I want to be considered a man; and if I cannot prove myself a man even with all my weaknesses, I am willing to go down, down to the depths to which those who are beneath the level of true manhood must go.

Now, Mr. Speaker, at this moment I make no reprisals. I have had good friends; I believe I have them yet. And I say this—that my enemies do not include all those in the ranks of those who have been politically opposed to me. I have this to say, further—that I will do my duty fearlessly; and, if, on a future occasion, these matters come before this House; and if, on a future occasion, there is something to be said as has already been announced, I will be here to say my say; I will be here at least to challenge the bona fides of these accusers; I will be here to declare that, if political warfare is to be carried on with weapons from the gutter of slander and personal gossip—if the political warfare of Canada is to be degraded to that level—those on this side of your chair, Mr. Speaker, will not alone suffer in that warfare. And, if the country would know the facts; if the public press—which has had detectives on my track and on the track of other ministers of the Crown seeking out matters that are of private moment—would know the facts, the employment of detectives is necessary as against those on this side, but, without stooping to secure evidence in that way, there is evidence in existence against others, evidence that has not been purchased, evidence that will be strong, powerful, cogent. And if the great public press of Canada and the people of Canada want that evidence, it is within their grasp; it is within the grasp of this House; it is within the grasp of the country.

Now, Mr. Speaker, a number of motives join to cause me to take the course I do. But the first I would speak of is the high regard I have for my leader (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and the very great esteem in which I hold my colleagues. I would sacrifice myself, though it meant an irreclaimable sacrifice, in order that my great and honoured leader—not merely honoured by me and not merely great because I say so, but honoured by all the people of this country, and great not only amongst Canadians but amongst the men of all the world—may go to the conference in London and go there in no sense dragged down by me, in no sense besmirched because men have seen fit to make statements with regard to myself, statements that I can prove to be untrue, statements that in my heart of hearts I know and realize to be untrue, but yet statements that have been bandied about in hope of injuring me. Why, Sir, I know of officials of this House who, instead of devoting their time to the duties for which they are paid, have gone into No. 6 to circulate untruths, damnable untruths, with respect to myself—and this I can prove out of the mouths of men into whose faces I look at this moment. And this has been going on unfairly to myself, though it has not come to my knowledge until within a very few days, for these things truly are kept until the last moment from everybody who is particularly affected by them. Gossip is the weapon of the coward and the coward seeks out victims whom he thinks to be weak. I may be one. But I am here, and, if I am not a saint I am at least a decent sinner.

I have said all that I should say, and possibly more than needs to be said. But I speak in justification of myself as a man. I propose to stand here as a member of this House and I propose to conduct myself as a member of this House ought to do. And if those who stand upon pedestals of their own creation want to take action, let them do so—and they must take action now that they have gone so far as they have gone.

In what I do I am actuated by a sense of duty, first of all to myself. I am actuated, in the second place by a sense of the duty that I owe to my revered and honoured colleagues in the government and to my colleagues the members of this House. But higher and above them all is the sense of duty that I owe to my constituents, that I owe to the people of this country; and I ask them one thing, I ask the hon. members of this House one thing, and I think I have a right to ask it, appealing simply to their sense of British fair-play, that they suspend their judgment, and await the verdict; and if then I am convicted, and if then these words are proved to be untrue, I shall ask no more. Unfortunately, Sir, in life and with our weak humanity, we are apt to think ill of our fellows; we are too prone to accept the word and the idle utterance of the gossip, and to say that it must be true because it has been said, that it must be true because it has been written. I know that in my personal experience I have had more letters of condemnation, more letters of complaint, of fault finding, than I ever had of letters of congratulation or approval. No matter whether my duty was well or ill done, I have not experienced flowing in upon me a great many words of approval. But I have had that pleasure, even though sometimes, as I know, undeserved; and I have a right to ask this of hon. members of this House, that there shall be a suspension of judgment, awaiting the day when I can meet face to face those who have been striking me under the belt, those who have been stabbing me in the dark and behind my back, and in meeting them I have this confident assurance, that I shall be able to vindicate my honour, to vindicate my character. Reputation is nothing, character is everything, and my course will be taken with a view to vindicate my character, which is the only asset that I have, after a lifetime of struggle. I came into this House a poor man, I go out of this government a poor man; the man does not live who can say aught to the contrary. If I had devoted my life to my profession I think I could have gone on and on, laying the foundation at least of an independence. I have given my life to my country, I have done my best toward that country; and in the discharge of my duties as Minister of Railways and Canals, I have endeavoured to treat all men with courtesy, but I have endeavoured above all to be honest, straightforward and true in the discharge of my duties. I leave the government, I part from my colleagues from a sense of duty. I am here yet as a member of this House. I owe a duty to my constituency, I owe a duty to my friends and I owe a duty to my family, and I have eliminated them from any remarks which I have made. As I have been able to discharge that duty to others in the past, I hope that I may be able to discharge it in the future.

Mr. EMMERSON.

RESIGNATION OF HON. C. S. HYMAN.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to ask the Prime Minister whether there is any further information to be afforded to the House with respect to the attempted resignation of the Minister of Public Works (Hon. C. S. Hyman). The matter has been pending now ever since the opening of the session. We are all familiar with the report brought in by the Committee on Privileges and Elections. The present is not a proper occasion to enter into a discussion of all the circumstances, but we should at least have some statement from the Prime Minister as to the position of that attempted resignation, whether there is any more news, and what the attitude of the Prime Minister is with regard to the resignation of the Minister of Public Works as a member of the Cabinet. The subject has been more or less under discussion for about four and a half months, and that we are approaching a period when there should be some finality, and we should know one way or the other what is to be the outcome.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Mr. Speaker. I have no information whatever to give to the House at this moment. I have received no communication from Mr. Hyman, either direct or indirect, since the last time this matter came before the attention of this body. It has been stated in the newspapers, everybody has read it, that Mr. Hyman had started to come north again, but had returned to California. I know no more of that subject than any other member of this House. It is quite certain that Mr. Hyman will have to take action before he can enter this House again. Mr. Hyman has given us notice of his intention, and I have no doubt he will make his intention good. Mr. Hyman has been under the impression, and has acted under this impression, that his election having been proven tainted, he owed it to himself to go back again before his electors, and I have no doubt he will carry out his intention. But it is well known that the health of Mr. Hyman compelled him to be away from this House, and prevented him from carrying out the intention which he had. Personally, I have had no communication whatever with Mr. Hyman; but I am free to say that I feel sure that the first thing Mr. Hyman will do when he comes back to Canada, and when his health has been restored, will be to vindicate himself before his electors.

Mr. FOSTER. The Prime Minister might state whether any intimation has been made to Mr. Hyman that his attempted resignation was considered not valid; and therefore that it is, to use a common expression, up to him to make it good, or to notify the Prime Minister of his intentions.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No, I made no attempt whatever, the reason being that I was informed, and I have information, that since Mr. Hyman has been away south his correspondence could not be placed before him, he had been ordered to abstain from intellectual labour of any kind, and his letters had not been read by him. That was the reason why I did not make any attempt to communicate with Mr. Hyman.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

Mr. FOSTER. Before government orders are taken up I wish to call the attention of the Prime Minister to the fact that the Public Accounts Committee meets to-morrow morning and I think we should have a motion passed giving the committee permission to sit during the sitting of this House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I believe some witnesses have been summoned from a distance for to-morrow's meeting.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I move that the Committee on Public Accounts have leave to sit to-morrow during the sitting of the House.

Motion agreed to.

INTERIM SUPPLY BILL.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Minister of Finance) moved the second reading of Bill (No. 141) for granting to His Majesty certain sums of money for the Public Service of the financial year ending the 31st March, 1908. He said: I made the motion under the impression that the Bill had been printed but I find it has not If there are any objections I shall not press the second and third readings now.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. We might go into committee and consider whether or not we can secure sufficient information to proceed with the third reading.

Mr. FIELDING. The trouble is we have not the Bill to consider in committee. It is a purely formal matter and usually it is considered in committee very slightly. The missing document having turned up I now press my motion.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and House went into committee thereon.

Bill reported.

Mr. FIELDING moved the third reading of the Bill.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It is understood as before stated that the Bill simply provides for the expenditure of one-fifth the amount included in the estimates.

Mr. FIELDING. Some items which have already been voted are dealt with in full, but of the portion with which the Committee of Supply have not dealt, one-fifth is taken.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the third time, and passed.

WAYS AND MEANS—THE TARIFF.

House in Committee on Bill (No. 134) respecting the duties of customs.—Mr. Fielding.

Mr. FIELDING. I think that this Bill was practically disposed of in committee, but at the request of the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) it was not reported, so it is now in a state to be reported, unless any hon. gentleman wishes to make any remarks.

Mr. SCHAFFNER. Before this Bill goes out of committee, I wish to make a few remarks in connection with the proposed duty on mowers and binders. When I came to the House at the opening of the session, I considered this question of very great importance, and it was my intention to speak on it when the budget was submitted. However, as both sides of the House seemed anxious to end that debate without much discussion I refrained from speaking. I intended, then, when the item was reached in committee to move an amendment, but the item was allowed to stand, and when it was finally taken up I was of necessity compelled to be absent from the House. The present seems to be the last opportunity that I may have of stating my views on this question. I wish to say, Sir, that after twenty-five years going in and out among the people of Manitoba, I can fairly claim that perhaps there is no man in this House who is in a better position from actual knowledge to know the sentiments of the western agriculturists, than I am. Among the many promises made by the Liberal party and government to the people of Manitoba and the west, there are two which stand out very prominently. The first of these is the repeated assurance that the boundaries of Manitoba would be extended, and upon that question I will have something to say at an opportune time. The other promise made by the Liberal government to the people of the west was, that they would reform the tariff. Well, the tariff has been changed somewhat in shape but very little in effect, and so far as it has been changed in effect, I am of the opinion, and I think I can prove it, that it has been changed in the interests of the manufacturers rather than in the interests of the agriculturists. At this late stage of the session I have no intention of speaking at length, but I would be remiss in my duty to my constituents, and they would hold me responsible for it, if I said less than I propose to say this afternoon. Now, in order to give some idea of the importance of the tariff on mowers and binders, I shall give the House a little information, and perhaps a little surprise when I refer to the large number of mowers and binders that are used by the farmers of the west. I shall confine myself particularly to my own constituency. The constituency of Souris requires about 7,344 binders to take off the crop of wheat and other grain, and it requires about the same number of mowers. In making my estimate, I have allowed one binder and one mower to a half section of land, which I think will give a very fair average, and not one which is at all exaggerated. If you take the value of a binder at $150, there is therefore a sum of $1,101,600 that the farmers of the constituency of Souris have to invest in binders, and placing the mowers at $55 each, that would amount to $403,920, or a total of $1,505,520 which the farmers of Souris have invested in mowers and binders alone. You will easily see, if that large sum of money is invested in these implements in one constituency, what an immense sum of money must be invested in them in the whole western country. For that reason I feel that I need not apologize to the House if I take up some of its time in moving an amendment. I would like to say, Mr. Chairman, that I have every confidence that the amendment I shall propose will have the support of every member of this House from the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Customs down. Taking the record of the last twenty years, I hope to be able to show, in not too many words, that my amendment is consistent with the expressed sentiments not only of members on the other side of the House, but of members on this side as well. In this connection, I intend to put on record some of the statements which were made by my friends opposite when they were in opposition. Part of this may be ancient history but part of it is modern, and whether it be ancient or modern I believe I can claim that the citations which I shall make are strongly in support of the amendment which I propose to move. Whatever may be our individual opinions in this House as to protection and free trade, there is no doubt now that both sides of the House are protectionists. I think that can be laid down as an established fact. There is no doubt that while the government brings down a policy which is a protective policy, my experience has been that on the public platform and through their press, these gentlemen attempt to hold out to the people of this country that they are the low tariff party and that the Conservatives are the high tariff party. So far as newspapers go in that respect, I do not know of any greater sinner than the Winnipeg 'Free Press,' which, if the Auditor General's Report is correct, receives more government pap than any other paper in this Dominion. Last year it received some $32,000 for printing and about $5,000 for advertising, or in round numbers about $40,000. That newspaper never loses an opportunity of trying to show the farmers in the west that it supports a policy of low tariff, and it always endeavours to impress on the farmers that the Conservatives form the high tariff party. I have said, Mr. Chairman, that both sides of this House are advocates of protection. I am willing to admit, and I think I can prove it, that members of the government and former members of the government, went up and down this country for years, when they were in opposition, telling the honest farmers what slaves they were under this slave-making policy of protection, and telling the people of this country what free men they would be if they, the farmers of this country would only turn from power these men they had inaugurated and maintained such a slave-making policy and return to power a set of men who would all be Lincolnites and set the farmers free.

Now, I am going to prove everything I say to-day in regard to these hon. gentlemen out of their own mouths. After these promises had been made by the Liberals for a number of years, the country accepted them and returned them to power, and notwithstanding any free trade sentiments which hon. gentlemen opposite, from the First Minister down, uttered, notwithstanding any loud declarations which they made that they would for ever eliminate protection as a factor in our trade policy, I want to say that these very men have for ever eliminated free trade as a possible factor in the trade policy of this country, so that both parties in this House stand to-day as protectionists. I do not think these hon. gentlemen did this willingly; I think they worked hard and long to avoid it. I can imagine that the Finance Minister for whose ability and experience, and I may say honesty of purpose, I have a great deal of respect, spent sleepless nights and worked hard and long in the effort to bring down to this House a policy which would be to some extent at least in harmony with the promises which he and his associates had made to the people. But what did they find? It seems to me about like this: that they found that after all this hard work, it was absolutely impossible for them to improve on the policy which the Conservative party had spread on the statutes of this country, so they gave up in disgust, and said, we will be obliged to accept the Conservative policy holus bolus, because we cannot improve on it. I believe that is the true explanation of this tariff. Now, I want to show these hon. gentlemen, especially the Finance Minister and the Minister of Customs, that it is absolutely incumbent on them to support my amendment. I assure you that I am not talking to-day merely for the sake of taking up time. I am very much in earnest and I am going to quote sentiments expressed by hon. gentlemen opposite to show them that they should support my amendment. Sir Richard Cartwright can scarcely have forgotten how he declared :

I say our protective system was a huge mistake in so far as it was honest at all ; and in so far as it was not honest, it was a huge scheme of robbery.

Nor can he forget how on the same occasion he denounced the advocates of protection as 'a small ring and clique of combiners and protected manufacturers who were permitted to make a prey and plunder of the people of Canada.' He was speaking in Pembroke in February, 1890. How can these men think that the people of Canada can forget such utterances and pledges as the following :

Their ideal is protection ; ours is free trade. We will never desist until this country is freed from the incubus that has been weighing it down for fifteen long years.

This was said by Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the Ottawa convention in 1893. Speaking in the west in 1894 he made these remarks:

The people of this country, the inhabitants of the city of Winnipeg especially, are toiling for a master who takes away a very large portion of your earnings, the earnings for which you toil and sweat for privileged masters, for those who use protection which I claim is bondage. If the government take away from you any portion of your earnings, be they large or small, to give them to somebody else, that government is as much a robber towards you as is the highwayman who puts a pistol to your head and says : your purse or your life. I denounce against this policy of protection. Protection cannot be defended on any fair principle.

Sir Richard Cartwright in 1893 said this:

Our policy from first to last has been to destroy the villanous protection system which has been grinding out the vitals of the country.

Sir Richard Cartwright in 1894 said :

I oppose protection in all its aspects, because protection means slavery, because protection means corruption, because protection is arrant folly and I am bound to oppose such unholy trinity until I die.

But I have something better than that, something that applies to my own part of the country. I will not say who made these remarks until I read them :

Return us to power, and we will give you free trade as they have it in England. That is the liberal policy. We will no longer tolerate the policy of the Conservatives which robs you for the benefit of a handful of manufacturers. We will at once and for ever wipe off the statute-book the villainous protection policy which has stunted the prosperity of the whole country and taken the heart's blood out of the people of Manitoba. Free coal oil, free clothing, and free implements, you will have if the Liberal party are returned to power.

Now, I am not asking you to give us free implements; I am simply asking you to reduce the duties. Who said that ? The late Minister of the Interior, the Hon. Clifford Sifton, and he said it in my own constituency, in the beautiful little town of Deloraine. I have something here which I will give you for what it is worth. It is a matter of interest to contrast some of the utterances of the men who occupy positions from which leadership is expected. Sir Wilfrid Laurier said in 1876 :

I think that we require protection. We have within ourselves the ability to create an industry. If it is shown that we cannot maintain it unless by legislation, either in the way of premium or prohibitory tariff, then I should be ready to take that into consideration.

In 1892 he said :

I say that the only policy which would benefit this country is unrestricted reciprocity and continental freedom of trade.

Coming on further in 1894 he said :

We will give you free trade, and although it will be a hard fight we will not give in one inch or retrace one step until we shall have reached the goal——

The farmers in the west for whom I speak after ten years are still asking the question, how far away is the goal——

—which is the policy of free trade as it exists in England to-day.

In 1896 he wrote to Mr. Bertram :

The intention of the Liberal party is not and never was to establish free trade in this country.

In 1896 he came into power; he continued the policy of protection; in 1903 he increased the former protection by bounties and by surtaxes on German goods and in 1904 he exclaimed :

The Liberal party may contain those who are free trade doctrinaires and those who are protectionist doctrinaires. For my part, I incline neither to the one side nor to the other.

So much for what the Liberal party said they would do before they came into power along the lines of my amendment. I thought that the best way to induce hon. gentlemen opposite to support my amendment was to remind them of what they had themselves said. The Minister of Finance brought down a policy in 1896 and I can understand why that policy should not vary so very much from the policy under which this country had existed for eighteen years. He might have said : It will not do for us to change the trade policy of this country too suddenly. I admit that that was a very good argument. But, Sir, we have given them ten years and at the end of the ten years, in 1906, the Minister of Finance has been racking his brain again. Sir, he has been doing more than that; a Royal Commission went up and down this country, spent no doubt a great deal of money and received a great deal of information and after studying and restudying that information he came down to this House and said: There are no radical changes. I think they now call it moderate protection, well what's in a name as the Finance Minister said the other day a rose was as sweet by any other name. What a contrast that is to the policy of that old Liberal party! I think I have proved as far as it is necessary to prove that my hon. friends opposite must support my amendment.

I am now going to prove also by the utterances of our own men why hon. gentlemen on this side must support my amendment, because I want this amendment to pass unanimously. Sir John Macdonald and his colleagues, before they came into power, laid down a definite policy. Sir John Macdonald moved this motion:

That the Speaker do not now leave the chair, but that this House is of opinion that the welfare of Canada requires the adoption of a national policy——

And I ask you to pay attention to these words:

—which by judicious readjustment of the tariff will benefit and foster the agricultural, the mining, the manufacturing and other interests of the Dominion, &c., &c.

Again, Sir John Macdonald moved before going into Supply:

That this House regrets that His Excellency the Governor General has not been advised to recommend to parliament a measure for the readjustment of the tariff which would not only fully aid to alleviate the stagnation of business but also afford fitting encouragement and protection to the struggling manufacturers——

And I draw the attention of the House again to that word 'struggling':

—struggling manufacturers and industries as well as the agricultural products of the country.

Sir John made a prophecy and about the same time Sir Richard Cartwright also made a prophecy, and I would like to show in the light of what has since transpired and of present conditions which of these prophecies turned out to be the most correct. Sir John said:

Why should the United States want reciprocity?

I claim that while I may be going a little apart from the subject of my motion in referring to reciprocity I am justified in doing so in connection with the trade policy.

Why should the United States want reciprocity when they have our markets open to them now? Sir John said: 'They can send to our markets everything they produce agriculturally at nominal prices free of duty, as long as that exists we cannot expect reciprocity.

Mr. SCHAFFNER.

Has that prophecy proven true or not? Have we not been knocking and thumping away in past years at the doors at Washington trying to get reciprocity and how successful have we been? But when this prophecy of Sir John's was carried out and fulfilled, when we did shut our doors by the great trade policy introduced by the Conservative party what is the result? What did Mr. James Hill say and what did Mr. James Bryce say last night at the great banquet at the Russell House? They say that now the United States will be glad to give us reciprocity. But what is our position? Our position to-day is that while we were pounding and begging for it some years ago, to-day we do not want reciprocity. We have had our great trade policy; we have built up our country and there is no one prouder of that fact than I am, and no one more glad that we are in a position to say to our friends to the south that we are able to live without them; that we have built up our own country and are standing by it.

I shall now read Sir Richard Cartwright's prophecy. I have told you what Sir John Macdonald prophesied, and I think it needs no argument to show, I think that every one in this House and the country agrees, that this prophecy has come true. Sir Richard Cartwright about the same time said—and I think that this is the most childish prophecy in the light of present conditions, that was ever advanced, Sir Richard said:

I tell these gentlemen that their tariff is going to afflict them with competition to a far worse degree than anything they have now. They will find that this kind of tariff as it has done in the United States will infallibly produce the most vehement domestic competition and a competition as much worse in its results for them as a civil war is sure to be worse than a foreign war. These men whether they know it or not——

Referring to the manufacturers:

—are signing their death warrant.

I wonder if these gentlemen feel to-day that they were signing their death warrant when introducing struggling manufacturers into this country.

When the consent to a tariff which must assuredly create here as it did in the United States a most intense competition.

Sir Richard's prophecy was that by aiding struggling industries and building up manufactures they would come into competition and eat each other up, that was the final result of Sir Richard's argument. But he goes further, and getting into the department of our worthy Minister of Customs he says:

Worrying about smuggling, we find him introducing a tariff which gives every possible inducement for hundreds of miles to men to engage most actively in the business and occupation of smuggling.

Now, which of these two prophecies, made by two men has turned out to be in the interest of the country. I read these remarks made by Sir John Macdonald and supported by the Conservative party to show my Liberal Conservative friends, whether they be manufacturers or not—I think I shall be able to show why the manufacturers should be with us before I get through—should support this policy. Sir John Macdonald laid great stress on that part of his argument to show that his policy was to assist struggling industries. My amendment is confined to item 445 of the tariff which deals with mowers and binders. I have shown how many mowers and binders we use and I have shown their value. Sir John Macdonald said that he wanted to support struggling industries. And he carried out that sentiment and the Conservatives carried out that sentiment, because, when they felt that the manufacturers of agricultural implements had received sufficient encouragement, the government of Sir John Thompson in 1894 reduced the tariff on these manufactures from 35 per cent to 20 per cent. Our hon. friends have gone on all these years, and, while they have, perhaps, made an honest effort to reduce the tariff, they have succeeded in reducing it only 2½ per cent, I wonder if they think that they can fool the western farmers in that way? I wonder if they for one moment imagine that they have made the western farmers believe that the tariff has actually been reduced in a way to benefit them. It is true, they have cut down the tariff by 2½ per cent nominally. But they have taken care to benefit their friends in the Senate, the manufacturers of mowers and binders, by the drawback which they have given, and which was at first 95 per cent but is now 99 per cent. And that drawback is of greater benefit to the manufacturers than the injury done by the reduction of 2½ per cent. I have here a few figures that will show that. The reduced duties on materials entering into a five foot mower are as follows:

99 per cent drawback on cast iron, $2.50 per ton..	$0 49
99 per cent drawback on rolled iron and steel, $7 per ton..	0 43
2½ per cent reduction on malleables.. ..	0 07
	0 99
Deduct increase in cold drawn steel formerly 5 per cent, now 25 per cent..	0 27
Net reduction..	0 72

This is about 13 cents less than the reduction in the duty. If you were to take a small mower, the comparison would come out about even, but on the mower of which I am speaking, the loss to the manufacturer is about 13 cents.

Now, what about the binder? The reduced duties on binder with sheaf carrier, are as follows:

99 per cent drawback on cast iron, $2.50 per ton..	$0 28
99 per cent drawback on rolled iron and steel, $7 per ton..	2 17
2½ per cent reduction on malleables.. ..	0 21
	2 66
Deduct increase in cold drawn steel formerly 5 per cent, now 25 per cent..	0 41
Net reduction..	$2 25

A binder is valued for duty purposes, $97. 2½ per cent would be $2.42½. Deduct $2.25, and we have 17½ per cent that the manufacturers would lose by the 2½ per cent reduction.

I have referred to reciprocity. The statement made by Mr. J. J. Hill on this subject has already been read in this House, but I may quote again a few sentences from that speech to show the change that is coming over public opinion in the United States upon this subject. Mr. Hill says:

North of us lies a country of enormous possibilities for development, inhabited by between five and six million people. It has over 20,000 miles of railways with several other great projects under way. It has a foreign trade of over $500,000,000 a year. Its capital invested in manufactures is over $400,000,000——

I call particular attention to this point, because it was mainly to show what is invested in manufactures in this country that I have read.

—and the value of its product is $480,000,000. Its people have deposited in their savings banks $82,000,000,000.

And he goes on to make this statement, which seems to be correct:

It is perhaps the time when reciprocity with Canada can be considered with more favour than ever after.

Now, I am going to refer for a few moments to some remarks made by my hon. friend from South Grey (Mr. Miller), who seems to be, either by self-appointment or otherwise, charged with the duty of speaking for the government when it gets in a hard place. The hon. gentleman got up, or was put up, to answer the hon. member from North Toronto (Mr. Foster). I congratulated the hon. gentleman (Mr. Miller) when he got through the speech to which I refer on having made a first-class Conservative address. Nor have I changed my opinion. The hon. gentleman did not like it; he did not care to be told that he was a Conservative by his utterances. I shall read a few of his statements. Whether they are Conservative or not, they are what I believe, and I think it is our duty on the floor of this House to tell the people what we ourselves think:

The government then must not consider and support only the interests of any one or of any number less than all of our many industries or line of industry.

I am in sympathy with that expression; the government should take into account all our industries when bringing down a trade policy.

I believe, Sir, that in our tariff regulations we ought to be guided more by our own experience than by any matter of theory.

So our tariff should be of our own creation and should be adapted to our peculiar circumstances and conditions.

That is what I ask the government to do, to adapt this tariff, so far as it applies to mowers and binders, to the conditions which exist to-day and not to those which existed 20 or 25 years ago. Here is what he says again, referring to Mr. Foster:

But my hon. friend from North Toronto (Mr. Foster) asks why not make that reduction to the extent of ten per cent?

I did not know that I was thinking along the lines of so great a man as the member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster), in drafting my amendment, but that is what he seems to have had in his mind, for he says:

But I am confident that should the farmers want a reduction of duty on their implements, they will not go to the hon. gentlemen, or his party to which the hon. gentleman belongs.

Why not, pray? Why not go to that party, the party who went the furthest along the lines of reducing that duty? As I said before, the Conservative party reduced the duty 15 per cent; these gentlemen, after labouring ten years, have reduced it to the extent of two and a half per cent; and as I have shown, they took the best care to help their own wealthy friends in the Senate to reap a great benefit, they seemed to be more anxious to do that than to benefit the farmers of the west.

But, Sir, it must be remembered that changed conditions require, as well as excuse, change of method and a change of attitude, and the party or the government that is unable to change its method or its attitude because of changed conditions ought not to be entrusted with the management of the country's affairs.

That is my opinion, expressed in as good words as I could wish. I say the conditions have changed, and I ask this government and this House to support my amendment because the conditions have changed, because it is time that something more was done for the farmers, particularly in regard to binders. Mowers are not of so vital impotance to the farmers as binders. We have conditions existing there that many members of this House know nothing about, and I do not think this government has sufficiently studied the matter in connection with binders. Take last year, for instance, when our crop was going on in the orthodox manner, ripening day after day. But what occurred? One Thursday the crops were fairly green, and in a week or ten days the farmer could have started to cut his crops and have got them well housed. But on the following Friday and Saturday we had two unusually warm days, which ripened the crop prematurely, and it was absolutely necessary if that farmer was to receive a fair recompense for his work during the summer, that the crop should be cut quickly. Therefore it is of the greatest importance that there should be a good number of binders accessible, and that they should be in the best order. You cannot go in and cut your crops with a binder that you think will go through with the harvest, you must be absolutely certain that it will. Therefore I come to this government and tell them how important it is to that country that we should have binders cheap and plentiful, and I ask this government to assist the western farmer to give him that advantage, an advantage which my amendment is intended to secure for him, and which I think should receive the hearty support of this House.

Now I want to say a word about the manufacturers; they are not here, and I am very sorry. I do not want to be presumptous, I do not want to dictate to the manufacturers, but this I do say, that their market is in the west. They are manufacturing 27,000 binders every year, they are not a struggling industry. In 1901 they exported $1,742,946 worth of agricultural implements. In 1903, they exported $2,284,904; and in 1905, $2,313,620. But you may say, they import also. So they do, but they do not import to so large an extent as they export. In 1905 they imported $1,614,627 worth. Now take the capital invested in the manufacture of agricultural implements. In 1881 there was $3,995,782; wage earners, 3,656; wages paid, $1,241,279; value of product, $4,405,397. Those figures have been going on increasing until in 1901 they had $18,207,342 capital invested; they paid in wages, $2,194,241, and the value of the agricultural implements alone was $9,597,389. I think, Mr. Speaker, those figures show that the manufacturers of agricultural implements are not struggling. I believe in protection, I believe in putting these industries on a good foundation but when they are on a good foundation I claim the duty should be reduced. The Conservative government pursued that policy, and I ask this government to continue the same policy. A manufacturer said to me the other day, You must prove that these industries are not struggling. Well, I think the statement I have just read shows that they are not struggling. I will give you another proof, although it is somewhat homely there is a lot of truth in it. Out in the west when we see a farmer extending his business, building a bank barn and improving his home, when he is unfortunate enough to die, leaving a legacy to his children and giving something to charity, we make up our minds that he was not a struggling farmer. I think we are justified in coming to that conclusion. So I say that the farmers of the west, the farmers of my constituency, have a right to conclude, when they see the manufacturers of mowers and binders living in luxury, extending their plant, and when they are unfortunate enough to die, leaving large legacies, giving large sums of money to charity, besides what the government collects from them by succession duties—I say we in the west have a right to conclude that these men were not conducting struggling industries. Therefore we claim that the duty should be reduced.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I have spoken longer than I intended to speak. As I have said, I did not get up here to-day for the mere purpose of talking, I am much in earnest over this matter. I would give this advice to the manufacturers of this country, that they get in as close touch as possible with the farmer, the man who buys their products. Last year, as I said, the manufacturers produced 27,000 binders. The market for those binders will go on increasing year after year. Without desiring to be presumptuous, I have this advice to give to the manufacturers. Knowing the conditions out there as I do, I cannot understand why the manufacturer does not do his utmost, in his own interest, if not in the interest of the farmer, to come in very close contact with that farmer, to go into partnership with that farmer and to produce his product and place it in the western market, that very extensive and ever growing market, at the lowest possible figure.

I have said that I hoped to prove out of the mouths of the government and out of the mouths of Sir John Macdonald and the Conservative party that they should each support my amendment. I ask this House to go further than the 2½ per cent reduction. I therefore beg to move :

That the committee reconsider item 445 and that it be amended by striking out the figures 17½ per cent in the general tariff and inserting in lieu thereof the figures 10 per cent.

I have not dealt at all with the preferental tariff nor the intermediate tariff. The preferential tariff cuts no figure in this because we do not get our binders from England, and so far as the intermediate tariff is concerned, as has been well proven by the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) and the hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster), if it is not a snare it is certainly a delusion, so I do not deal with it at all but simply deal with the practical tariff that affects our people in the west, and I ask the House, in all sincerity and earnestness—I ask the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) and the leader of the government (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and every member of this House, to help these western farmers and to reduce the tariff in accordance with my amendment from 17½ per cent to 10 per cent upon these implements.

Mr. STAPLES. Mr. Chairman, I do not desire to take up much time in advancing arguments in support of the resolution, but I feel that I would not be doing my duty to my fellow farmers and to the western provinces if I did not say a few words in support of the resolution which has just been moved. My hon. friend from Souris (Mr. Schaffner) has covered the ground very fully and therefore I shall not undertake to repeat his arguments, but I would like to call the attention of the House for a few moments to the manner in which the manufacturers, and I might say the wholesale dealers, are treating the western farmers in regard to the prices we have to pay for binders. For example, if a retailer or a jobber goes to Winnipeg to purchase a carload of binders he is told that they would supply him with the American binders from either the Chicago factory or the Hamilton factory. He prefers, perhaps, to take the binder from the Chicago factory and they will supply the carload of binders at exactly the same prices as they will charge him for the binders from the Hamilton factory. This is something which I cannot understand, and which I think it is the duty of the government to investigate. The Chicago manufacturers will pay 17½ per cent duty on the imported article and supply it for the same price as they charge for the binder from the Hamilton factory. We have had investigations into the lumber industry in the west and I feel that it is the duty of the government to make a full investigation along this line and see if we cannot find why the farmers have had to pay the prices that we have been paying in the west for our implements. In the United States—and I have gone to the trouble to find out the exact figures—the Deering binder costs the consumer across the line at Milton, North Dakota, $130 cash, while the Canadian manufacturers charge us for their Canadian binders—and I consider that the Canadian binders are quite as good as the American—yet we have to pay $147.50. I might state here that while the tariff has been reduced 2½ per cent, the price of the binders has gone up $5 to the consumer. This advance in price was made in January last.

There is another thing which I cannot understand and I discovered it only yesterday in speaking to a man who is selling the Massey-Harris binder in Ontario. He offered me a binder—and he said he would sell me as many as I wanted—for $125. Now, we in the west have to pay for that binder $147.50. Surely it does not cost the difference between these two places to place that article on the market in the west! These are matters that I think the government, in the interest of the farmers of the west, should investigate fully and if it is found that the manufacturers are not treating the farmers as they should, if they are charging us in the west a higher price than they are justified in doing, I feel it is the duty of the government to try and force them to treat all portions of Canada fairly.

My hon. friend from Souris (Mr. Schaffner) has shown very conclusively how the Conservative party dealt with the tariff. In fifteen years they succeeded in reducing it 15 per cent. This government, in ten years, have succeeded in reducing it only 2½ per cent, and at the same time they have made other concessions to the manufacturers which practically mean that the manufacturers are to-day in a better position, so far as protection is concerned, than they were under the old tariff.

I do not wish to take up any more time as it is desired to expedite matters. But there are many other aspects of this question that might be discussed. I have much pleasure in seconding the motion of my hon. friend from Souris (Mr. Schaffner) and I think it is the duty of this House to adopt the amendment and reduce the tariff to the figure called for by the motion.

Mr. R. N. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, as this matter has been referred to by the hon. gentlemen who have preceded me as applying only to the west, I would say that there is a demand in the east along the same line. The district from which I come was honoured by a visit from the Tariff Commission, and I think that if the evidence taken before that commission is on record it will be found that the farmers in that district were asking even more than is asked by this resolution. In fact, I regret that the resolution does not go further and include more classes of agricultural implements than it does. The farmers of my district are asking for a reduction in the duty on all agricultural implements. It is found that the manual labour necessary to save the crop is becoming each year harder to get and every kind of labour saving device is necessary. It is thought that the American market would be a great advantage to our people living near the line. I am not now speaking on the abstract question of whether it is well to protect or not, of which party are the delinquents, but the farmers of this country are an intelligent and numerous body and their representations should receive some consideration. The reasons given for many changes in the tariff are that representations have been made by the people interested. I think representations have been made by people interested in the farming industries from one end of the country to the other. These representations made by the farmers should receive some consideration at the hands of the government. The farmers of Canada have been asked to pay bounties for the protection of the iron and steel industry, but the government never thought of proposing that a farmer should get a bounty for producing a bushel of wheat. I think the farmers made out a very strong case before the Tariff Commission. They may not be as aggressive as the manufacturers in following the government up and pressing their claims, but nevertheless they are entitled to consideration from the government; they expected it, and they should receive it. I believe a resolution was passed by the Liberal Association in my county, the members of which seem yet to be tainted with some of the old Liberal doctrines, and in that resolution they ask that the duty on farming machinery should be reduced. I am therefore voicing the sentiments expressed in that resolution, as well as the general opinion of the county, when I ask that the duty be reduced. I regret that the amendment does not go further, but I am ready to support it so far as it does go.

Mr. LAKE. I had intended to discuss the whole question of the tariff before the close of this session, but on account of the anxiety which is felt that the business of the House be so arranged as to permit our Prime Minister to attend the colonial conference, I have decided to wait for another occasion. Coming as I do from a section of the country so far distant from the manufacturing centres that the burden of customs taxation is more severely felt than in Eastern Canada, I feel that I should say just a few words in regard to the amendment. I shall confine myself to the specific question of the duties which come under this item in the tariff. The first question is: Will this reduction in duty of two and a half per cent reduce the cost of the article to the consumer? Frankly, I do not think it will, and the statement just made by the member for Macdonald (Mr. Staples) bears me out in that. That hon. gentleman states that while there has been a reduction in the duty, there is already notice sent out that the price to be charged to the western farmers for these implements will be increased. Now, the amount of duty payable depends entirely on the valuation for duty which is placed upon the article at the point of manufacture by the customs official. Not long ago the Minister of Customs informed the House that in 1895 the average value for customs purposes placed on the McCormick & Deering self-binders was $95; that in the year 1900 this valuation had been increased to $102, and that in 1905 it had been reduced again to $97 at which figure it remained last year. Therefore, the farmer who got a self-binder in 1895 had to pay an average duty of $19; in 1900, after this government had been in power four years, he had to pay $20.40 duty on every self-binder imported into Canada, and at the close of last year the farmer had to pay a duty of $19.40 on each of these implements. This means, that after the present government has been more than eleven years in office the farmer finds that he has actually to pay a higher duty on the self-binder than he paid in 1895. I do not know what accounted for this sudden increase of $7 in the valuation which occurred in 1900, nor do I know the reason why it was reduced by $5 in the year 1905. Now, a new factor has come into the situation by reason of what is called the dumping clause of the tariff. Formerly, the Department of Customs did not mind how much or how little the man who imported agricultural implements into Canada paid for them at the point of manufacture; they simply put on their fixed valuation for the purpose of getting what they thought to be the correct amount of duty. That has all been changed. Nowadays the importer of agricultural implements has to pay whatever the article is valued at by the Minister of Customs, so that the old excuse which used to be given by the advocates of protection, that it was the exporter who paid all or very nearly all the duty, falls to the ground. Just at this point I would like to read to the House an extract from the evidence which was given, in regard to the dumping clause, by Mr. J. H. Ashdown, mayor of Winnipeg, who, I think, is a supporter of the present administration. Mr. Ashdown said:

> That the operation of the dumping clause as a rule injures the consumer and benefits no one except it be the American manufacturer who generally raises his price accordingly.

Later, Mr. Ashdown gave a specific instance of it in the case of cement and he said:

> The duty paid on importations amounts this season to nearly forty-eight per cent (since a duty was put on the sacks). This is on actual importations and on values approved by the customs.

And Mr. Ashdown added:

> It was an outrage.

It will be clear to the House that the new dumping clause is going to affect very materially the price at which imported agricultural implements can be sold to the consumers in Canada. The customs valuation of $97 on a binder means that $97 must be paid to the manufacturer in the United States. In addition to that the importer must pay the full duty of 17½ per cent which on the value of $97 amounts to very nearly $114 as the first cost. In addition to that he has to pay the full freight, for under the law no allowance can be made for freight by the exporter of this machinery. Now, supposing evidence is laid before the customs authorities later, that the prices have changed in the United States, and that the United States manufacturers are charging the consumers a higher price than they were previously, and supposing that price is $100 instead of the $97 which had been charged, an increase of only $3, which is very small compared with the changes which have formerly taken place. This would mean that if the Minister of Customs decided that the evidence adduced before him was satisfactory, and the valuation were increased to $100, the consumer of agricultural implements would have to pay more for this class of implements than he had to pay before the reduction was made in the duty. One of my chief objections to the dumping clause, in its application to agricultural implements, is that a great deal depends on the decisions of the customs officials. I give them the utmost credit for desiring to do what is fair between the exporter and the importer, but a small mistake on their part may result in very serious consequences to the consumer.

In regard to this matter of valuation, let me show the ease with which the duty may be increased. Take for instance threshing outfits, to which attention was called by the Minister of Finance when he made his budget speech this year. He told us that the duty to be paid on threshing outfits would remain at practically the old figure, and working out the figures supplied by the Minister of Customs, I think that is probably the case; but he told us that this was arrived at, although there was a reduction of five per cent in the duty, by increasing the valuation. For my part I cannot see the ground on which that increased valuation was made; but I assume that it was made on representations to the Department of Customs that these threshing machines were being sold in Canada at a lower price than the price at which they were being sold to the American consumer. But this shows the extreme facility with which the actual duties which have to be paid can be raised or lowered at the discretion of the government. Now, I think I have heard lately, in this House and also outside of it, that the present policy of the government is a tariff for revenue only. I do not know whether that is correct or not: at any rate, I interpret it to be a tariff which will bring the largest amount of revenue which it is possible to screw out of the people. The total revenue which was received from the duties imposed on the goods brought in under this item last year was $26,882, which is quite an insignificant sum and can be no reason for making the vast numbers of farmers throughout this country who have to use these implements pay a higher price for them. I think it shows pretty clearly that the real policy of the government is a tariff for protection and not a tariff for revenue only. The estimated saving in duty, from this reduction in the tariff, according to the statements of the government, amounts only to $3,360, and I very much doubt whether even that small sum will go into the hands of the hundreds of thousands of farmers in this country.

In the district of Souris alone, as my hon. friend from that constituency pointed out, the farmers have to invest $1,500,000 in binders and mowers alone. I dare say the question would be asked, why have we signalled out this one particular item, and asked a reduction on it? It is not, I think, because the farmers would not wish a reduction in many other items, but we have taken this as a test case. In the first place, these are goods which are used universally throughout the country, and they are implements which do not last a very long time, and have to be constantly renewed. Indeed, it is absolutely necessary for almost any farmer to possess one or more of these implements. I also think this question has been looked at from the point of view that this article is the staple product of a large manufacturing institution of this country, which claims to be the largest manufacturer of agricultural implements under the British flag, an institution which exports an enormous value of agricultural implements during the year. It has been stated that its exports of these machines in the last thirteen years have amounted to $16,500,000, out of a total export of agricultural machinery amounting to something like $18,750,000. I notice that it is stated in a paper which has been brought down that some of the manufacturers claim that it costs 10 per cent more to manufacture in Canada than it does in the United States. Only some manufacturers claim that. Even if that be true, and I very strongly doubt it, surely it will be possible to meet the wishes of the great mass of the consumers of this country by making a reduction of 10 per cent in the duty rather than the miserable 2½ per cent to which we have been treated. The reduction in the duty to the consumer has been practically offset by a reduction of duty on the materials which the manufacturer has to import to build up the machinery. Now, in my view, agricultural implements are the raw material of the farmer. Without these implements it is absolutely impossible for him to go on producing. Why should the manufacturer have his raw materials brought in at a reduction of 99 per cent of the duty, while the farmer has to stand such large duties as are imposed upon him, varying from 25 per cent downwards, and at the same time has to sell his products in the market of the world, competing with all other producers? The farmer is thus handicapped by this very heavy duty which is placed on his raw materials the implements with which he has to produce his goods. I have seen it calculated that the general increase in the value of all goods which are consumed in this country has amounted to nearly 20 per cent in the last few years. In addition to that we find that the average taxes which are paid as customs duty by the consumer have nearly doubled in the last ten years. Therefore the farmer, especially in the west, is up against this problem, that he has to pay some 20 per cent more for all the things which he consumes, he has also to pay increased customs duties, while he has at the same time to sell his products in the markets of the world, where the value of these products on the average has not materially increased.

These taxes which I have mentioned are necessarily a drain on the resources of the farmer. For every extra dollar he has to pay in taxes he is able to do just so much less work on his farm and while it may only amount to two or three acres for each individual farmer of less crop put in, in the aggregate it will be found that the amount of restriction which is placed upon the cropping capacity of the farmers in the west is something enormous. Therefore I hold that it is not only a detriment to the farmer, but that it is a bad policy for the whole country and contrary to the interests of the Dominion that the great industries of the country should be handicapped in this way.

Canada is a country which has great undeveloped natural resources, greater perhaps than those of any other country in the world, so it should be the aim of good statesmanship to enable the development of those resources to be carried on at the very least cost to the person who is developing them. That is that the taxation which is imposed upon the raw materials which are used for the development of these resources should be reduced to the lowest possible point consistent with giving a reasonable protection to our manufacturing industries. The farmers in the west are practically unanimous in favour of a large reduction in the duty on agricultural implements, and I trust that when this question comes to a vote the House will decide to give a reasonable and substantial reduction, a reduction of 10 per cent rather than the miserable amount of 2½ per cent which is placed in the tariff before us.

Mr. J. HERRON (Albert). I wish to put myself on record as being in favour of the amendment, but I shall not take the time to make a speech or to advance arguments. The arguments put forward by the hon. member for Souris were my sentiments; I feel as the previous speakers do and I endorse their statements. As they have said, when our manufacturers of farm implements are able to compete in the markets of the world, I think that they ought to be able to compete at home. If there is an advantage gained by a low duty on these implements the people of the west are entitled to it, and I do not think that the reduction which has been made will benefit the farmers of the west in any degree. The 2½ per cent reduction from 20 per cent to 17½ per cent will never reach the man on the farm. I do not think it is sufficient, I think the manufacturers could afford to carry on the same business as they are carrying on to-day, with a lower protection than they have to-day, and for these reasons I am in favour of the amendment offered by my hon. friend from Souris (Mr. Schaffner).

Hon. WILLIAM PATERSON (Minister of Customs). Mr. Speaker, I do not want, of course, to enter into a long discussion; that does not seem to be the temper of the House, and the gentlemen who have spoken have spoken briefly. It is only courtesy though that I should say a few words in reference to the reasons which led us to deal with this item as it has been dealt with in the tariff. We were through the west as well as through other portions of the country and we met large bodies of the agriculturists of the country at different points. I need not tell any one who has travelled through the Northwest that in meeting a number of men selected by their neighbours or having sufficient public spirit to come, as some of them did, 100 or 200 miles to meet the Tariff Commissioners, that we met some of the brightest men that could be found in Canada. They presented their case in a very clear and lucid manner and I am bound to say they were not unreasonable. They recognized the fact that has been alluded to by all of the speakers to-day that, for instance, reapers, mowers and threshing machines were expensive items with them, that they bulked more largely with them than they did even with the farmers in other parts of the country because of their large holdings of land, and it was represented to us that they would be pleased if we could make a reduction in the duties on those articles. Different representations were made—I speak from memory, but I think correctly—in one case it was suggested that the tariff might be reduced to what it was under the McKenzie administration, 17½ per cent. That was at a time when the manufacturer had practically all the raw material that entered into the construction of his binder free of duty, so that if the McKenzie tariff was considered as being a revenue tariff, and if we have been accused of exceeding a revenue tariff in some cases, it would not be in this case, where we have adopted the 17½ per cent rate, but have not by any means given free material to the manufacturer as he had in a large measure at that time, although we have given him some advantage. At one place they said that they would like the duty at 15 per cent and I think in one case a gentleman suggested 10 per cent. We found them very amenable to reason. We said: Here is an industry going on, employing people in the country, an industry that has to pay duty on its machinery, oils, varnishes, bolts, nuts, steel, iron and everything entering into the implements; they do not get by any means the full benefit of the 20 per cent. They thought they would be content with that amount. They would rather no doubt have had 15 per cent and would have been still more pleased with 10 per cent. There is a difference of opinion about that. but here is a thing that we have to consider, why should this one manufacturing industry be placed on a different basis from any other. The gentleman who last addressed us has given us a reason that it is on a broader basis than the others. If I understood him aright he said that that is not the only article, that this is to be a test case and that others are to follow. I submit that if this were reduced by 10 per cent it would not be a revenue tariff basis.

Mr. LAKE. I may say that that is not my intention at the present time.

Mr. PATERSON. I beg pardon, I thought the hon. gentleman said that this was a test case, am I right in this?

Mr. LAKE. Yes.

Mr. PATERSON. Then that would follow because there is no reason particularly why these implements should be dealt with differently from other manufacturing products save and except the reasons put forward by hon. gentlemen opposite and which carry a certain weight with the committee and led us to recommend the 2½ per cent reduction. We were impressed with the importance of the reduction slight, thought it may seem to the people of the west. Why should they not expect us to go much below 20 per cent? Why, because 20 per cent is below the average duty upon other lines of manufactures.

And they are employing a large number of men. Therefore, it was only because we felt that the conditions of the west called for recognition and for special consideration and concession that this reduction was made. Otherwise it would not have been unfair to give these manufacturers 20 per cent where other manufacturers have 25 per cent, 30 per cent or 35 per cent. And, by the way, it is notable that none of these are moved against in this House. I do not agree with the hon. member (Mr. Schaffner) that we have more than offset the reduction in the duty by the drawback that has been allowed on raw material of this manufacture. At the same time, I do not disguise the fact that we propose to give these people nearly the amount of reduction in duty that has been made. For it must be remembered that 17½ per cent is no more than a revenue tariff. These manufacturers do not get a drawback on all their raw material, though they do have a drawback on certain articles. It stands to reason that they should not be placed in a worse position than other manufacturers. If this is to be a test case, it must be considered in its relation to the tariff generally. And I state with perfect confidence that you cannot carry on this country with a 10 per cent tariff. I am not going into the general question of protective or revenue tariffs; but I state only an obvious truth when I say, that, unless you offset a customs duty with an excise duty there must be some incidental protection in the duty levied upon the imports. But, without considering that at all, the fact still remains that, in order to raise the necessary revenue for this Dominion you must have the customs duties upon a wide range of articles. This means that you must begin at the base of many lines of industry. Take, for instance, pig iron. If you are giving incidental protection to other manufacturers, the manufacturers of pig iron are entitled to similar treatment. But, by placing a duty upon pig iron, whether the object is to raise a revenue or afford protection, you increase the price of the goods. Pig iron is the raw material of the manufacturer of steel. He comes and says: You have burdened me with this duty on the pig iron that I must use in my manufacture and there must be all the higher duty upon steel. Then come the manufacturers of files, cutlery, ploughs, agricultural implements and other users of steel, who represent that they have been burdened with this duty twice repeated and for that reason must have higher protection. And, even with the drawback that is given upon certain of the raw materials, 17½ per cent is a low rate of duty on agricultural implements. There are articles in the tariff—I am not suggesting them—that might be attacked with much better reason, and articles in which the farmers are directly interested.

Mr. SCHAFFNER. Not so far as my constituents are concerned.

Mr. PATERSON. I suppose the hon. gentleman's constituents wear woollens and cottons and that there is an occasional purchase of silk amongst them. It may be said that more money is spent in agricultural implements than in these things. Well, we went into that question, and we found that, considering the length of time a binder can be used, and considering how often clothing has to be replaced, we found that the cost of clothing to the farmer was a little, if any, less than that for agricultural implements. A strange argument used by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Schaffner), though one that had been used by hon. gentlemen opposite before, was that since the reduction of 2½ per cent in the duty, the manufacturers had increased the price by $5. Well if that is the case, if we were to reduce the duty by 10 per cent, they would increase the price by $20.

Mr. SCHAFFNER. Then, the manufacturers should not object.

Mr. PATERSON. But, if decrease of duty causes an increase of price, and the greater the reduction of duty, the greater the increase of price—and that is the logic of the hon. gentleman's argument—why does he favour this decrease? Of course, it is in line with the argument that hon. gentlemen have supported by their votes over and over again. They have declared that putting binder twine on the free list had increased the price. Yet, they have declared themselves in favour of adequate protection. Do they mean to say that 10 per cent is adequate protection for this implement industry?

Mr. SCHAFFNER. Yes, considering the need of protecting the farmers.

Mr. PATERSON. But, in other cases, 'adequate protection' means prohibitory duties.

Some hon. MEMBERS. No, no.

Mr. PATERSON. Why, the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) told us that if it took duties of one hundred per cent, he would favour them in order to keep out imports. And, we had one or two special illustrations. Under our duty of three cents a pound on cheese, it was shown that 368-631 lbs. of cheese comes into the country. And hon. gentlemen opposite wanted us to put on such a duty as would even shut out these small imports. Though our manufacturers supply all that Canadians would buy of them and exported $20,000,000 worth, they wanted adequate protection' to shut out imports completely, although our imports of cheese amounted to a bare one ounce per head of our population. They wanted to carry out the same policy with regard to butter, though our imports amount to only 143,000 pounds, or one-half ounce per head—barely enough to spread one slice of bread for every man, woman and child in the country. This is the 'adequate protection' that these hon. gentlemen call for; and we have been denounced over and over again for not yielding to their demands. That being the case, by what line of fair play or logic are you going to reach the conclusion that the duty upon this line of manufactures should be reduced to 10 per cent. If these hon. gentlemen propose to make this a test case, we shall be quite ready to meet them. There must be some sort of consistency and fairness in these matters. I can assure our friends from the west that it was because we recognized the importance of that growing country and its need of these implements that we reduced the duty by 2½ per cent. At the same time, of course, we arranged that it should not be the agricultural implement men alone who would bear the burden, but that it should be borne in part by the iron and steel producers also. The reason was that they only had 20 per cent when we attacked them while the other manufacturers had a much larger amount. We recognized the importance of the west, we recognized that with their large holdings and their immense fields, they needed threshing outfits that would thresh their grain as early as possible, so that they might get their wheat early to the markets of the world, and for that reason we reduced the duty on threshing machines 5 per cent.

But, as my hon. friend truly says, there had been a ruling of the customs about a week or ten days before the tariff was brought down which allowed a larger discount than was warranted under the law. That was changed, not arbitrarily, because the customs never acts arbitrarily; it was changed because the law passed by this parliament imposed that duty upon us, according to which law goods entering this country must pay duty no matter at what price they are sold. The manufacturers may sell their goods, or give them away if they like, but this parliament has enacted that whether sold cheap or high or given away, the value for duty has to be levied upon the value of that article as generally sold in the markets of the country whence it is exported. We had made a mistake, circumstances had changed, and there had to be a revision of the discount on threshing machines. That revision took place, and the effect of it was explained by the Minister of Finance, who wished to deal honourably by the House and who pointed out that while we had made a reduction of 5 per cent on threshing machines, it might be found after all that on another purchase they would not be so much cheaper because of the changed rulings, which we ascertained were the right rulings. These are now adopted after investigation at the head offices of the company that supplies these machines. But remember this, and I would impress this upon the hon. member for Qu'Appelle (Mr. Lake), that if this 5 per cent had been left on the 25 per cent instead of 20 per cent, as now, that 25 per cent would have been levied upon the value of the threshing machines. It is virtually a reduction of 5 per cent. It was a mistaken ruling, or at least a ruling that circumstances in the trade just now would not justify, to allow 40 per cent off. It is found that on certain lines of manufactures, I think there is only one that gets 30 per cent, or perhaps 35 per cent. We examined their price lists, these lists vary, and we reached by conference with these men what is the fair market value, and on that the duty is raised. The hon. member for Qu'Appelle has pointed out that since this government came into power the valuation on reapers, for instance, has varied. That on one occasion they went higher than under the old government, and then went down again. That is accounted for by the fact that the cost of these articles has increased and they were sold higher. We have periodical investigations of the prices at the headquarters of the various firms. You remember that a few years ago steel went up 50 per cent, nearly 100 per cent at one time, and of course that raised the price of implements.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Can the minister say if, in the course of the tariff investigation, they made inquiry into that point, as to the cost of producing one of these machines?

Mr. PATERSON. Yes, we inquired into the cost, but they would not give you the absolute cost.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Does the minister know, for instance, what it costs to construct one of these machines, say the Massey-Harris binder, or the Deering binder, or the McCormick binder?

Mr. PATERSON. No, I could not tell you. I have heard the figures, but I do not credit them as being correct. Now, there are one or two very large firms, perhaps more, that are very wealthy. But do not forget this: We must not conclude that because a few firms have become wealthy it is owing to an undue advantage given them by the tariff. Within my memory, I think there have been twenty or thirty agricultural implement manufacturers that have gone to the wall. A few firms have lived as the others dropped out; there was a large market for the remaining firms and they have made money. The hon. member for Souris (Mr. Schaffner) therefore must not say that because we find a few wealthy firms they are unduly oppressing the people. I may tell my hon. friend from Souris that I have heard, I do not know if it is a fact, of gentlemen in the medical profession who have made immense fortunes whilst other men have not made so much. Well, that was not the fault of the fees; one man has been fortunate and the other has not been so fortunate. I am told that it is the same in the legal profession, that some legal gentlemen make fortunes while others do not command so high fees.

Mr. SCHAFFNER. Will the hon. gentleen tell me what point he is trying to make now?

Mr. PATERSON. I am trying to refute the argument of the hon. gentleman that the duty on agricultural implements ought to be reduced from 17½ per cent to 10 per cent, because the Massey-Harris Company have made a great deal of money. That is what I am trying to do, and I think I have made my argument plain. The hon. gentleman argued this way: He said, If you go out into our country and see a man who has a nice farm, good house and barns, and so forth, you do not conclude that he is a struggling farmer, and in the same way when you see a wealthy manufacturer you do not conclude that he is a struggling manufacturer. Well, I am glad to know that we can go through the hon. gentleman's county and find scores and scores of magnificent farms and comfortable houses and we can conclude that those farmers are not struggling either. You have to look at the whole question; you have to consider what is fair and what is right. I have no objection to this motion coming before the House. My own course is clear. I think we have met the wishes of the farmers in this respect so far as could be done, and I think people will be satisfied with what we have done. We have done no injury to the manufacturer of these implements, because side by side with the reduction, we have compensated him in part by making the producer of iron and steel that goes into his products bear a share of the burden. I trust I have made the argument clear by these brief remarks.

Mr. HENDERSON. During the last 25 years or more I dare say there is no special item of the tariff that has received more attention than the one that is now under discussion, the duty on mowers and binders.

An hon. MEMBER. Why ?

Mr. HENDERSON. Possibly before I am through I will tell the hon. gentleman why. There is a widespread belief throughout this whole country amongst the farming community, not only in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta but in the older provinces—and I speak more particularly with reference to Ontario,—that the price of these implements is excessively high, higher than is absolutely necessary in order to give a fair revenue to the manufacturer, a fair profit and return on his investment and a fair living from the industry. To what cause is this excessive price generally attributed ? I am speaking now of the matter as represented by the farming community. Every farmer will tell you that it is due to the high duties on agricultural implements coming in from the United States. They believe honestly, as has been said by the hon. gentleman from Souris (Mr. Schaffner) that if the duty is substantially reduced the price will be correspondingly reduced and that is the source from which they expect relief. The farming community justly claim that they furnished the capital which has gone into this entire business of manufacturing reapers, mowers and harvesters in Canada. They have contributed out of their hard earnings the money which has built up these large industries and very naturally look for some return upon the money they have invested in them. It is true, I believe, that they have been receiving a return all along. They have been receiving a return inasmuch as the agricultural implement manufacturer, by reason of employing a large amount of labour, has given an increased market in Canada for the perishable products of the farmers. In that way, I contend, the farmers have been all these years receiving a reasonable return for the investment which they made. But the time has come when the farmers say : We want something more than that, we think the time has come when we ought to have a substantial share, a dividend from this business to which we have contributed so much money. They hope to gain that in the shape of a reduced price on the implements which they are compelled to buy. I fear that the small reduction of 2½ per cent in the duty is not going to bring about what the farmers expected. We have evidence here already that in the face of the 2½ per cent reduction harvesters have been advanced in price by $5. The Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) argues—and I do not think that he was in earnest when he threw out the suggestion—that if you reduced the duty ten per cent the price would be still further increased.

Mr. PATERSON. Logically it would.

Mr. HENDERSON. I do not think the minister was logical, I do not think he was in earnest ; I do not think it would operate that way. My contention is that a substantial reduction would enable the farmers to import machines at a lower rate, but that the 2½ per cent reduction will not do that.

Mr. PATERSON. If we had them on the free list how would it work ? Like the binder twine ?

Mr. HENDERSON. I am not going to propose putting them on the free list, but if I were proposing this amendment I would leave it entirely to the manufacturers to say whether the duty should be reduced or not ; I would insist that if they did not reduce the price the duty would have to come down.

However, I do not propose to bring that before the House at present. We will have an opportunity in the course of the next year to see how this reduction will work and whether it will bring the relief in price which the farmers ask and to which I think they are honestly entitled. There is no doubt the farmers are firmly of the belief that a lower duty means a lower price on these implements. I do not believe that applies on all things, I believe there are many things in this country where a high duty really brought a lower price. We never had cheaper and better cottons and woollens than under the national policy. That I think will be conceded by any member of this House and I am firmly convinced that this is the case, but I do not deny that the farmers have some foundation for the argument they advance. I have all my life supported the principle of protection. Long before hon. gentleman on the other side of the House became protectionists I advocated that principle and I stand by the views

I have always held. I do not think that any other policy can prevail in this country if Canada is going to continue to be a prosperous country. This is my firm conviction, and I would be the last man to say that we should open the door and allow manufactures of implements or anything else, to find their way into this market, invading it in such a way as to destroy it for our manufacturers of similar classes of goods. While I hold these views I am still of the impression that a reduction to 10 per cent would not destroy the industry as it is too well and firmly established in Canada now to be affected by a reduction from 17½ per cent to 10 per cent. As I said, if no reduction in price results from the reduction in duty I would approve of a reduction in price being a condition to maintaining the duty, but I do not propose to deal with that matter at this time.

The question has been raised by the Minister of Customs, why take this particular item? There are several reasons for attacking it, but let me give one reason, and I think it is a substantial reason and one which will commend itself to the minister. We attack this item because the minister himself attacked it; he gave us the example. He has reduced the duty from 20 per cent to 17½ per cent, showing that in his estimation the 20 per cent was too high. He has shown us the way, and whether it is a good precedent or not we are simply trying to do a little better than he has done.

PRIVATE BILLS.

NICHOLS COPPER COMPANY.

House in committee on Bill (No. 119,) to revive certain patent of the Nichols Copper Company.—Mr. Clarke.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would like to ask before the Bill passes, whether it contains all the usual provisions which, under the practice of the House, have been inserted in Bills for validating patents after they have expired?

Mr. STEWART. I may say that the Department of Agriculture was represented at both the Committee on Private Bills of the Senate and that of the House of Commons, and is perfectly satisfied with the Bill. I know nothing of its provisions, but I was asked to take charge of it in Mr. Clarke's absence.

Mr. SPROULE. We have usually provided that when a patent has expired any one who has innocently commenced manufacturing shall be allowed to continue to enjoy that right. We have no information whether that is the case in this instance, or whether the patent has lapsed.

Mr. FIELDING. Perhaps the third clause covers that point. I have no doubt the Minister of Agriculture, who usually gives attention to Bills of this kind, has considered this one; but if there is any objection to it, I will let it stand.

Bill reported, read the third time and passed.

WAYS AND MEANS—THE TARIFF.

House in committee on Bill (No. 134) respecting the duties of Customs.—Mr. Fielding.

Mr. HENDERSON. The Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) asked the mover of this amendment why this particular item of self-binders and mowers had been attacked. I was proceeding to give the reasons why I thought that that was a very proper course and that this item stood alone amongst all the other items of the tariff. It is unique in this respect that it is practically the only industry in this country whose export trade is larger than the import trade in the same article. I do not think we can find in the Trade and Navigation returns more than possibly one other large industry where that is the case. The imports of shingles are certainly very small compared with the exports, the imports being $21,311 and the exports $1,908,486, but there is no duty on shingles entering this country. That is along the line that we are indicating in the resolution moved this afternoon to reduce the duty on the article where the exports are in excess of the imports. From 1894 to 1906 the total imports of agricultural implements of all kinds amounted to $19,678,003, while the total exports of the same implements amounted to $20,694,204, snowing an excess of exports over imports of $1,016,201. What I desire to say is that in no other large industry in this country does this same thing occur; in no other large industry is the export trade at all equal to the import trade in the same article. The fact is that this industry has a world wide market, that was stated by the Hon. Mr. Jones before the Tariff Commission in Toronto, that they had a world wide market and there is no other industry in the country that can claim the same thing. My contention is that when an industry has reached the stage that it can claim a world wide market, when it not only has the market of Canada, but the market practically of the civilized world, it is in a position to carry on its manufacture with a lower rate of duty than another industry that is hampered by a very large importation. Let me point out how this industry differs from other industries. The Minister of Customs this afternoon cited some others and said: Why not take these; why not take the woollen industry—and I think he referred to one or two others. If the duty on woollen goods were reduced in the same manner in which we propose to reduce it on agricultural implements, it would practically wipe out the whole industry, because the imports are so enormously large compared with the exports. But this implement industry does not rely on the home market, although it practically has the greater part of the home market; twenty-eight out of every thirty self-binders used in the country are manufactured in Canada; in mowers, practically forty machines out of forty-one, so that our manufacturers practically have the whole market of Canada. The imports last year of self-binders amounted to only 927, whereas the home manufactures amounted to 27,500. The importation of mowers amounted to 766, whereas the total manufacture in our own country came to something over 34,000.

Now, I say that the industry which possesses a market like that at home and, at the same time, has a world-wide market acquired by skill and capital fostered by a protective tariff for many years, ought to be able to walk practically upon its own feet. How often have we on this side been asked, when supporting the national policy: How long are you going to feed these infant industries? That is a question that the Minister of Customs has thundered from the housetops many a time. Well, Sir, we think that this infant industry has attained such proportions that it is able to walk. I am not going to say, walk alone; I do not ask that it shall walk alone; I do not think it would be in the interest of the country, for I think we should have our market hedged about sufficiently to prevent free invasion from abroad. But the protection to be thrown about this industry should not be such as to enable the manufacturers of these implemets to unduly raise the price to consumers.

Now, I understand, from my reading of the history of tariffs, that in Great Britain for many years they had a high protective tariff, protection of a kind such as we in this country have never known. And it was only when Britain came to the conclusion that she was mistress of the world's markets that she threw open the doors and invited other countries to come and trade with her on free trade terms. Now, we in Canada never expect to be in that position with regard to general manufactures. Competition in the world is too keen. Germany, the United States, Great Britain and other countries are competing in almost all lines of our manufacture. But we have succeeded in one item—this one that is now under consideration—in attaining that position when we can say to the world: Come and trade with us for we are masters of the situation. That is the reason why I say we are in a position to warrant our asking the government to reduce the duties on these implements, so that the farmers of this country may secure these machines at the lowest possible price.

I said that Canada exports agricultural implements all over the world. Using the expression of Mr. Jones, these manufacturers practically have a world-wide market. Last year our exports of agricultural implements amounted to $2,499,104, and our imports to $1,615,123. I have no means of knowing how much of these exports consisted of mowers and self-binders, because the trade and navigation returns for some reason which I cannot explain, do not separate these items in the table of exports as they do in the table of imports. I am not reflecting on the Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) for that. There may be a good reason for it, for, I believe the same rule exists in other countries. I endeavoured to investigate the statistics of the Commonwealth of Australia, and I found that up to 1905 they followed a similar course, and that one cannot learn the exports of these articles any more than he can from the Trade and Navigation returns of this country. To substantiate what I have said, that this industry stands on a unique basis, inasmuch as it has an export trade which is not possessed by any other industry in the country, let me quote some figures showing exports and imports in other important lines:

	Imports.	Exports.
Glass and manufactures thereof..	$ 2,680,274	$ 22,403
Stoves and parts thereof..	473,422	11,885
Sewing machines and parts thereof..	256,235	35,225
Boots and shoes..	1,284,654	146,115

Carriages..	2,525,177	441,576
Buttons..	291,332	5,566

Manufactures of cotton ..	10,745,206	1,363,871
Manufactures of wool.. ..	17,601,271	453,859
Gloves and mitts..	1,167,094	Nil.
Flax, hemp and jute.. ..	5,212,231	258,251

	Imports.	Exports.
Fancy goods..	$3,367,174	Nil.
Brooms and brushes.. ..	286,037	Nil.

Agricultural implements ..	1,615,123	2,499,104
Shingles..	21,311	1,908,486

Now, I ask: How could any of these industries live in Canada were it not for the protective tariff? The figures I have given show that this manufacture of agricultural implements stands alone among the great industries of this country, except possibly, the manufacture of shingles. And, as in the case, there is no duty at all it cannot be considered, for the purposes of this argument, as in the same category with this agricultural implement industry. How would the woollen industry be carried on in this country without protection, with imports of $17,601,271 and exports of only $453,859? The market of this country in respect of cottons is invaded, because the imports amount to $10,745,206, whereas the cotton manufacturers of this country find a market abroad to the extent of only $1,363,871.

I think I have given in this statement sufficient to show that the industry to which reference is made this afternoon, that is the manufacture of binders and mowing machines, stands entirely alone and is different from all the other industries. It has a market outside of Canada, a world-wide market which these other industries have not, and there is no reasonable probability of their attaining it. At any rate, until they can attain to a position of that kind no government in this country can afford to sacrifice these industries, or to reduce the duties that are essential in order to give them a fair show for a living. With regard to the manufacture of binders and mowers I say the time has come when it is not necessary to feed the infant industry as it was in bygone years. This industry was fostered by a protective tariff from 1878, first by 35 per cent, until 1894, when the then Minister of Finance, believing he was justified, reduced it to 20 per cent, and it has remained there until the present year. Now this government, realizing possibly something of what the Minister of Finance did in 1894, that a high protection was not desired, propose to reduce it a small modicum further. We say on this side of the House that the time is past when even 20 per cent, when even 17½ per cent, is necessary to foster that industry in this country and that the duty ought to be further reduced.

Permit me to say here, however, as I said this afternoon, that I have always adhered to the protective principle, and I have not yet seen my way clear to changing my mind. I believe it is the true policy for this country, a policy that must be maintained. But there are exceptions to all rules; and repeating what I said, when an industry has obtained the wonderful position this industry has, I think the time has come when we can reduce the protection that we afford to it. Unless the manufacturers of these instruments choose to sell their goods at a lower price—I believe they can do that, I believe that it is possible—and if they would meet the farmers' view by reducing the price of these goods, it would be the surest way of getting rid of the cry for a lesser protection. If I had the drafting of this resolution, which I had not, I would not have drawn it up in the words in which it has been proposed. I would not have proposed a straight reduction to 10 per cent, but I would have made it a conditional matter. I would have said this to the manufacturers of these implements. If, within one year, you reduce the price of your output to the extent of 10 per cent below what it was last year, then the duty can remain where it is; but if you do not do that, the duty shall go down to 10 per cent. That is the condition I would make, that is what I would say to the manufacturers of these implements to-day. If I should chance to be in this parliament in future years, and the result of the legislation we are proposing to-day has not brought about a reduction in the price of these implements, I shall be prepared to move a resolution along that line, and insist that the manufacturers of these goods give them to the farmers at a lower price, otherwise their protection shall be taken away from them, at any rate reduced to the extent of 10 per cent.

This is not a new matter. A policy of that kind is in force to-day in the Commonwealth of Australia. Although a newer commonwealth than we are, in some things they have made an advance on us. The government of Australia passed a Tariff Bill last year, on October 12, which is cited, 'The Customs Tariff of 1906.' I do not pretend to read any large portion of the Bill, but sufficient to show that the idea I throw out here is not a new idea, and that it is believed by the people of Australia to be a practical idea. They have a duty on stripper harvesters of £16, and after September 7, 1906, that duty shall be £12. But they make a provision in the tariff as follows:

> If the Governor General is satisfied that the cash prices at which stripper harvesters and drills manufactured in Australia are sold exceeds the price hereunder set out, he may by proclamation reduce the rate of duty specified in the schedule in respect to stripper harvesters, but so that the reduction shall not reduce the rate of duty below one-half the rate of duty imposed by this Act.

Then it goes on to give the rate of duty and the prices at which stripper harvesters must be reduced in order to maintain the maximum of duty. If, after February 1, 1907, strippers harvesters are not sold at or under the price of £70 then the duty shall be reduced one half, that is, instead of £16 it will be reduced to £8. Then again if, on February 1, 1908, stripper harvesters in Australia, made in Australia, were not reduced to £65, then the duty should be reduced by one half, namely, from £16 to £8.

Now I think that a wholesome provision of that kind in our own tariff would give the farmers of this country a cheaper implement, would give them a machine at a fairer price. And if we find that under the present legislation, this small reduction, is not going to work out in the interests of the farmers so as to give them cheaper implements—because that is what the farmers are after, they are not so particular about what the duty is as long as they get the machine at a reasonable price, or what they consider a fair price—I say that if in the future we find that the manufacturers of these implements have not reduced their prices to the farmers, then I suggest to the government that the remedy which has been applied by the commonwealth of Australia would be a very healthy remedy to apply to that industry in this country.

Now the question arises: Can these implements be reduced? I do not wish to ask what I would regard as an absurd or impossible thing. I am firmly of the conviction that these implements can be made cheaper, that they can be sold cheaper than they are at the present time The Minister of Customs told us this afternoon that he had no means of knowing what the cost of the machine was, and I presume that outside the manufacturer himself there is no man in this country who can tell what it costs to build a self-binder or a mowing machine; it may be a great deal less than many of us suspect. We cannot tell definitely, all we can arrive at is a conclusion by inference. In answer to the question, Can machines be sold cheaper? I would say that the Canadian manufacturers have the capital, they have all the capital that is necessary to carry on a very, very large industry. They have labour in this country, to my mind, just as cheap and as good as the manufacturers of the United States have.

They have their raw material, their iron and steel and they ought to manufacture as cheaply as they do in the United States. If it is not as cheap in Canada it can be imported and the duty will be given back to the manufacturer under the present tariff. We are paying a bounty to produce cheap iron and steel in this country and we are giving a drawback to the manufacturers of these implements on practically all the iron that goes into a machine. In so far as the raw material, outside of coal is concerned, I believe our Canadian manufacturer has all the advantages that the American manufacturer has. Therefore, I say he should produce a machine as cheaply as it is produced in the United States. I am aware that the Hon. Senator Jones has said that in the opinion of some it costs 10 per cent more to manufacture in this country than in the United States. Beyond the bald statement I am not able to judge. As to the fairness of that statement I do not doubt that it is honestly made, but it does not appeal to the people of Canada to say that it would cost 10 per cent more in this country to build a machine than it does in the United States. The United States makers of these machines have been willing during a great many years, to pay something into the treasury of this country in order to find a way into this market with their machines. I do not say that they pay all the duty. I do not say that they pay half the duty or what proportion they do pay, but I am under the impression that they pay a fair proportion in order to find a way into the market of Canada to sell in competition with our own manufacturers. Now, if the United States manufacturers, with no better advantages than our manufacturers have for making machinery, can afford to pay into the treasury of this country a certain sum on every machine they send into Canada, why cannot the implement makers in Canada give something back to the farmer more than they have done? For the reasons which I have stated I believe that the machines that are sold in Canada ought to be sold at a lower price than they are. We know just what the prices are. They seem large. We have had quotations this afternoon. According to the price-list of the Deering Harvester Company for 1905 in the west, a self-binder costs $150 cash, $155 in two payments and $160 in three payments, and I believe that other manufacturers quote the same price. A six-foot McCormick binder costs $150 cash, $155 in two payments and $160 in three payments. In the province of Ontario we are aware that these prices are not so high and that these machines sell at a lower price, especially the Massey-Harris binder. From this I come to the conclusion that the manufacturers of machines in Canada with all the advantages they have ought to be able to sell as reasonably low as the manufacturers of the United States. The manufacturers of the United States, before they can get into our market, have to contribute to the coffers of our country a certain sum. I say let the manufacturers of implements in this country hand over a certain amount to the farmers and satisfy them, because then and then only do I believe that the community will realize that they have a fair deal from this large industry which they have supported with their money for many years, which practically they have built up by their hard-earnings and which they now say ought to grant them a dividend or a share of the earnings of the business which has been built up from the capital which they have contributed. I shall support the amendment of the hon. member for Souris (Mr. Schaffner).

Mr. W. E. KNOWLES (West Assiniboia). As I have the honour to represent an agricultural constituency which is very much interested in this item of the tariff I shall be excused for taking up a moment or two of the time of the House for the purpose of explaining my vote on this question. I purpose supporting the tariff brought down by my hon. friend the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) for the reasons which I shall explain to the House. I have listened with a great deal of interest to the arguments which we have had presented this afternoon from the other side of the House. It is only a short time since we have had the pleasure of assuming the responsibility of advocating a certain tariff on fruit as against hon. gentlemen opposite who expressed the view that fruit should be a great deal higher. On that occasion hon. gentlemen sitting on the other side of the House were for raising the duty on fruit that it might be higher in Canada and especially in the west. There was, I admit, one exception amongst hon. gentlemen opposite—the hon. member for Qu'Appelle (Mr. Lake), who, upon receiving something of a polite challenge from myself, stated that he was not in favour of raising that duty. With that exception our hon. friends were for raising the duty on fruit and for making the settler pay more for that necessary commodity. We find them now at this late date, in dealing with another feature of the tariff, coming down with this resolution. I have not the power of mind reading and I do not take it upon myself to say what is passing in the minds of hon. gentlemen opposite, but I believe if there were a secret ballot taken every one would vote against their own motion because I would be surprised if any hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House expected or wished this motion to carry. I just wish to say a word or two regarding the remarkable utterances of the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson). He has given us a clever speech, a speech with a great deal of information in it, but I must say that it was a singularly remarkable speech to be delivered by a man who stands up in this House and calls himself a protectionist. We find that when the Liberals were in power, under the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, the tariff on agricultural implements was exactly what the present hon. Minister of Finance thinks it should be—17½ per cent. We find that when our friends now in opposition were in power they exactly doubled that, or, in the course of fifteen years they doubled it. We find that in the course of another fifteen years it has been cut down from 35 per cent to 17½ per cent. I think that is making fair progress in bringing the tariff down to a very reasonable figure. When you reflect that in the course of the few years that the Liberals have been in power this tariff has been reduced to that extent they cannot be accused of any inconsistency when they say that it is a reasonable tariff.

Mr. SCHAFFNER. Who made the greater part of the reduction ?

Mr. KNOWLES. That is in the sentence that I had just commenced to utter. I am well aware that a reduction was made while our hon. friends were in power, but they knew that they were not going to be in power much longer and on the eve of the general elections they made one sweeping reduction, bringing the tariff down to 20 per cent. They put this on the statute-books, but they never did business at reduced tariff. Notwithstanding the fact that they may have passed legislation, the crelit for carrying on the country's business, for looking after the manufacturer and for seeing that the farmer did not pay an enhanced duty belongs to the present government. My hon. friend from Halton has given us his reasons for thinking that the manufacturer of agricultural implements should not continue to be protected as highly as he now is. I could not follow my hon. friend very clearly. Either one of two things must happen. The manufacturers of agricultural implements must certainly undersell the other manufacturers of the world or they must compete with them at least. They can do so either by cutting prices or by selling in the open market at the same price as they are selling in Canada. If they do so by selling at cut prices, it is no argument in the mouth of the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) that the agricultural implement makers can stand on their own footing. If they sell in foreign markets at the same price as in Canada, then they can compete with their competitors and the removal of this duty would make no difference at all. If they are able to sell in the world's markets, and do sell so as to compete with the manufacturers in any part of the world, and if they do that at the self same price at which they sell to the farmers of Canada then I say the Canadian and American prices must be the same. I do not say that the specific prices are the same for each binder, but a man must get the same value for his money or he would not buy the Canadian implement. If you reduce the duty to ten per cent then you leave that man nearly in the same position as the man in Australia, who has a chance to buy wherever he likes. If the Canadian manufacturers compete in the world's markets their price must be just as low, and there would be no object whatever in reducing the duties further. My hon. friend from Souris (Mr. Staples) said that the manufacturers had already raised the price of binders five dollars. I do not know what reason there can be for that, but I am content to accept the hon. gentleman's statement that since the tariff was announced they have raised the price.

Mr. STAPLES. They raised the price list on January 1.

Mr. KNOWLES. The tariff was brought down on November 29, and a month afterwards they raised the price. Since hon. gentlemen have quoted that as an argument in favour of their contention, I suppose they pretend that the effect of reducing the tariff was to increase the price of the article. I do not see how that can be reasoned out, but if it is so, then of course it would be a dangerous thing to reduce the duty any further. If you reduce the duty 2½ per cent and there is a $5 increase in the price, then if you reduce the duty 10 per cent more there would be a greater increase in the price according to the kind of logic advanced by our hon. friends opposite. Arguing on that kind of logic, it would be idle to reduce the tariff further. I am well aware that in the next election, it will be said of those of the western members who may vote against the amendment: So and so, and so and so, voted against a motion to reduce the duty on agricultural implements. Now, these items have gone through committee; no objection has been taken to them by our friends opposite since November 29 last, and no protest has been entered by them. I must, therefore, interpret their actions to mean, that when they bring such a motion forward at this last hour they are not sincere. I am free to say that I am not a hide bound party man, but when I look over the history of the two political parties in the past and right up to the present date, I have no fear whatever in trusting to the fair-mindedness, and the honest British fair-play of my constituents, when I stand here (not shirking the vote nor running out of the chamber) to support the Minister of Finance in this real, genuine, honest legislation he has brought down, and to vote against this motion which I believe from my heart to be a mere political dodge.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE (Marquette). The hon. member from West Assiniboia (Mr. Knowles) has summoned up sufficient courage to stay in the House since eight o'clock, but I noticed that nearly all the time prior to six o'clock he was conspicuous by his absence.

Mr. KNOWLES. Will my hon. friend excuse me; I was here before six o'clock.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE (Marquette). Yes, I saw you dodging in and out occasionally.

Mr. KNOWLES.

Mr. KNOWLES. You will have to admit that I came in just as often as I went out?

Mr. W. J. ROCHE (Marquette). And oftener, if you count the last time you came in. I was somewhat surprised to hear the hon. gentleman (Mr. Knowles) lecture us because some members on this side of the House from the east, where fruit is grown, are anxious for a higher tariff on fruit; and arrange all the members on this side with being equally desirous for such a tariff. He accused us of being inconsistent because we are now asking for a reduction in the duty on agricultural implements. The hon. gentleman need not come to this side of the House for an example, if he terms that inconsistency; he can cast his eye on the seat in front of him and there he will see a representative of this same inconsistency in the hon. member for Centre York (Mr. Campbell), who is an ardent advocate of increased protection on market garden products, and who does not call himself any the less a free trader because of that. Therefore, the hon. gentleman (Mr. Knowles) need not come to this side of the House for evidence of inconsistency of that particular kind. I do not see how it can be inconsistent to say that as to one particular item the duty is too high and as to another particular item that it is not high enough. I think each item can stand upon its own merits. As the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) has said we have an example set us by the ministers in asking for a reduction on this particular item, because they themselves proposed a reduction from 20 per cent to 17½ per cent. The hon. member for West Assiniboia (Mr. Knowles) stated that when the Mackenize government was in power the duty on agricultural implements was 17½ per cent, but when the Conservatives came to power they raised the duty to 35 per cent, and that now it has been reduced to 17½ per cent. If he were addressing an audience devoid of intelligence, he might have succeeded in conveying the impression that it was the present Liberal government that had reduced the duty on agricultural implements, but on being questioned he was compelled to admit that it was the Conservative government, which, when they found the Canadian manufacturers could successfully compete in the markets of the world reduced the duty from 35 to 20 per cent. And Sir, the Liberals went from hustings to hustings throughout the country declaring that this 20 per cent duty was too high, that if they were in power they would reduce the duty not by 10 per cent, but that they would put agricultural implements on the free list.

Mr. PATERSON. Hugh John said that.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE (Marquette). The Minister of Customs says it was Hugh John who said that, but he is quite aware that Hugh John's antagonist, the present member for Brandon (Mr. Sifton) showed him the good example, if you look at it that way, and had the dead walls of the constituency placarded: Vote for the Liberal candidate and free agricultural implements. In 1896, the constituency of Marquette was placarded: Vote for Ashdown and free agricultural implements. The constituency of Lisgar was placarded all over with: Vote for Richardson and free agricultural implements. Mr. Richardson to be sure, since that time has looped the loop politically speaking, and I do not know whether he will be found in the future as in the past, condemning this government for the non-fulfilment of their ante-election pledges in this respect.

Mr. PATERSON. Did the Minister of the Interior do that in the elections of 1904?

Mr. W. J. ROCHE (Marquette). No, that is where his inconsistency comes in.

Mr. PATERSON. The people supported him.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE (Marquette). Like the Minister of the Interior, the hon. member for Brandon (Mr. Sifton) succumbed to the blandishments of the Massey-Harris people and some of the others connected with this trade, and it had a remarkable effect on him.

Mr. PATERSON. His constituents returned him?

Mr. W. J. ROCHE (Marquette). I have before me some of the expressions used by the member for Brandon in 1896, when touching on this very question of agricultural implements. He spoke in Winnipeg, pointing out to the people of Manitoba how they were being fleeced in order to afford the competitors of our Canadian farmers cheap agricultural implements to compete with them in the raising of their grain and its disposal in the markets of the world. And not only did the member for Brandon (Mr. Sifton) refer to that, but he referred to the fact that the rebates of duty were allowed on those machines for export, while the Canadian farmer had to pay the duties in his own market. I read the following in order to show the Minister of Customs just where his late colleague stood in that respect. He said:

It had been stated by gentlemen conversant with the facts that the Massey-Harris binder sold in Winnipeg for $140, and it was sold in Glasgow for $75. Here the Canadian farmer was unduly burdened as against his competitor.

The great competitors of the Canadian farmers were, among others, those in the Argentine Republic, and in that country they were buying their machines for about half what the Canadian farmer had to pay for them. Another competitor was Australia, and an implement was shipped from Toronto to Sydney, Australia, over a line heavily subsidized by our money, and laid down there at a freight rate as low or even lower than that on an implement from Toronto to Winnipeg. Now was it not time to think about these things and see if something could not be done for the farmers who had to fight against these competitors who brought the price of wheat down to forty cents a bushel? Is it not time to forget party and do something for the good of the country?

This was what the hon. member for Brandon said when appearing in 1896 for the votes of the farmers in western Canada. Yet that same system of subsidizing lines of steamship to carry implements to Australia in order that they may be sold to the Australian farmer at little more than one half the price the Canadian farmer has to pay for them continues in effect to the present day. Further on he said:

The Canadian manufacturer when he imports his iron and steel has to pay a duty on it, which is of course repaid to him by the Canadian farmer, but when he ships that machine to a foreign country to a competitor of our farmer, he gets a rebate of that duty on the material, so that our farmer is paying taxes to allow the manufacturer to sell cheap machinery to his most keen competitors.

The people of Manitoba are not expected to look after the interests of some manufacturer in Toronto. He was quite capable of looking after his own interests.

Whether the fact that the Hon. Lyman Jones, the head of the Massey-Harris Company, has since that time been called to the other Chamber, and has now more influence with the present government, has been the cause of the change in the attitude of the ex-Minister of the Interior and the Minister of Customs in regard to this item, these hon. gentlemen can probably explain. In 1900, when the hon. member for Brandon went before his constituents, he had a different song to sing. He told them what a mistake it would be to make even an infinitesimal reduction in the duty on agricultural implements. He went on to say that there were in eastern Canada 9,000 people engaged in the manufacture of these machines, that these people had families depending on their ability to earn their bread and butter in this country, that they were thus enabled to buy the products of Canadian farmers, affording them a home market which they would not otherwise have, that the existing duty of twenty per cent was not even a revenue duty, and that if it were reduced to an appreciable extent, these 9,000 people with their families would cross the border and go to the United States, there to earn their money and consume the products of American farmers rather than those of Canadian farmers, and that the American manufacturers of these machines, if such a reduction in duty took place, would slaughter their surplus products in Canada until they strangled our industry, and having done that, would raise the price to the Canadian farmers, so that their last state would be worse than their first. Good Conservative doctrine, which the same hon. gentleman opposite had ridiculed in days gone by. Evidently the responsibilities or the emoluments of office had a wonderful effect in changing his views on this question. On this subject it is worth while to quote the expressions of another colleague of the Minister of Customs, Sir Richard Cartwright, who, in dealing with the tariff in 1895, gave voice to a truth which is very applicable to the policy of the party of which he is now a member. Said that hon. gentleman, in referring to tariff thinkering:

This is not a case for half measures. You have in the fate of the Democratic party of the United States a warning and an example of the doom which will overtake any party that palters with its convictions, and after having placed itself at the head of a great popular movement, will offer the people a stone instead of bread.

What can you call this reduction of 2½ per cent on implements but a stone which hon. gentlemen opposite are offering to the farmers of the west? For in my humble judgment it will not reduce the price of these machines one single dollar, while if the amendment of the hon. member for Souris is carried, it will give them an opportunity of testing whether a tariff reduction will have the effect of lowering the price to the farmers. But there is another hon. gentleman on the treasury benches who visited western Canada prior to 1896, and also singled out this duty. Speaking in the town of Moosomin on October 4, 1894, and referring to the offer of the United States to admit these machines free of duty whenever they were put on the free list in this country, the Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Sydner Fisher) referred to the negligence, as he called it, of the Conservative government in not taking advantage of the reciprocal clause in the American tariff in the following words:

Because the United States congress has made a standing offer of reciprocity in implements, and it was the duty of the Canadian government to take advantage of that offer. Last year the farmers of western Canada imported $120,000 worth of American implements on which they paid $40,000 duty. Referring to the Massey-Harris combination, he claimed that the fact that these people spoke of going to the States to fight the Yankees in their own markets showed that Canadian manufacturers were able to get along without protection. Canadians were able to hold their own with the Yankees in any walk of life. If Massey-Harris got protection, why should not the farmers?

Echo answers, why? The hon. gentleman gave the answer himself when he told the people of the motherland that we did not wish them to adopt a protective policy or to give us any preference in their market. To be sure, he has explained that he only spoke as a farmer, not as a statesman; but we know that his speech on that subject has been interpreted by the English press as coming from a member of the Canadian government. He stated in 1894 that the Massey-Harris Company were able to compete with the American implement manufacturers in the markets of the world; and yet to-day that company continue to enjoy just as much protection as they did then—in fact more, because the valuation of the machines has been increased since this government came into power, and the 20 per cent of duty on the increased valuation raises the duty considerably above what it was under the Conservative regime. These hon. gentlemen are taking care that their good friends, the Massey-Harris people, shall not suffer, because what they are taking away with one hand, they are giving back to them with the other in the shape of a rebate on the duty paid on the raw materials entering into the machines. Another reason why I think this duty should be reduced is that the Massey-Harris people were not the only people who claimed that they could get along without protection. Senator Frost prior to the election in 1896 issued a circular in which he stated that he did not require protection to enable him to compete with his American competitors. Yet to-day, when these gentlemen are amassing fortunes at the expense of the farmers of this country, they are surely in a much better position to compete not only with the Americans but with any other people engaged in the same line of business. Now, the cost of producing these machines has not yet been investigated by the Tariff Commission. I was somewhat surprised at the Minister of Customs admitting that this afternoon. I should have thought that was one of his first duties in making a thorough investigation, in order to assure himself whether or not the manufacturers were imposing on the farmers by having an undue profit on their machines. One of the first things should have been to ask the manufacturers the cost of building one of these machines. The minister may say that that is a very difficult matter to get at, that possibly no person other than the manufacturers would be able to afford that information. Well, it is the manufacturers who should have supplied it, they should have produced that evidence. I remember reading a few years ago of an accident on the Canadian Pacific Railway by which certain cars were derailed and some binders were injured. There was a lawsuit and the question of the valuation of the machines—I think they were McCormack binders—came up and evidence was adduced at the trial which went to show that the cost of construction was $48 or $49. That is a point with which the members of the government should have made themselves thoroughly converstant before touching the duty; they should have ascertained whether the manufacturers are really reaping undue profits as we think they are.

We have had tariff commissions more than once. The Liberal party denounced the Conservative government before 1894 for going to the west and to other parts of Canada seeking information. They said that the information was available, that it was not necessary to have such a commission, and yet one of the first acts of the Liberal government in 1896 was to appoint a commission to go through the country and take evidence just as in the days of their predecessors. Not only that but before revising the tariff last year they appointed another tariff commission and apparently, from the reply of the Minister of Customs, this commission did their work none too thoroughly; they omitted to accertain some things that might throw light on such questions as the duty on agricultural implements.

In voting for the amendment of the hon. member for Souris (Mr. Schaffner) I think I am still a protectionist, I think I am a consistent protectionist. It was never intended by the designers of the national policy that there should be a really high tariff such as 35 per cent on agricultural implements and other things, and that the tariff should last for all time to come, irrespective of changes in trade conditions and markets. I would feel like meeting the wishes of my constituents and I am sure I would be doing so in voting that the duty on implements be reduced 10 per cent, and if there is any benefit in price to be derived by reason of the reduced tariff, it will not be derived by the mere pittance of a 2½ per cent reduction, but would be much more likely to result from a reduction of 10 per cent

Mr. PATERSON. When it was stated that implements had gone up $5 I did not impugn the speaker's source of information. My impression is, however, that when hon. gentlemen go back to the west they will find that implements have been reduced in price to an amount equal to the reduction of the tariff. They will ascertain whether that is correct or not.

Mr. FOSTER. Will they send us word then?

Mr. PATERSON. I do not know whether gentlemen on your side will but I hope it will reach us from this side.

Mr. SPROULE. Is it only in the west?

Mr. PATERSON. I do not know about the east but gentlemen opposite made the statement that in the west the price had been raised.

I wish to allude to a remark of the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson). He is a very fair debater, and he has given a reason why this article of reaper and mowers has been a special object of attack. He draws a line because the manufacturers of these articles have a large export trade and other manufacturing industries have not as large a line of exports, and he says that when the export nearly equals or exceeds the imports on any article then the duty ought to be reduced. I think that is his argument, am I correct?

Mr. HENDERSON. That was my argument, that where an industry has a worldwide market I thought that all that was expected by the promoters of the national policy has practically been accomplished, the industry has been put fairly on its feet and ought to be able to walk with less help.

Mr. PATERSON. The hon. gentleman has, not so much as other gentlemen, regaled us with old speeches; I think we have had Sir John Macdonald in 1876, thirty years ago, and Sir Richard Cartwright ten or 11 years ago. I want to come down to more recent utterances. I remember my hon. friend from Halton was advocating only a few nights ago a higher duty on butter and cheese. Well we will apply his rule to these commodities. The import of cheese was 368,631 pounds; the export was 215,916,157 pounds—and he calls for an increased duty.

Mr. HENDERSON. Does the hon. gentleman regard that as one of the manufacturing industries of the country?

Mr. PATERSON. I regard that as one of the most important manufacturing industries in the country, and if my hon. friend will tell his farming constituents that it is not a manufacturing industry he will get his answer.

Then take butter: we imported 143,451 pounds of butter and exported 34,081,142 pounds. And the hon. gentleman, in common with other hon. gentlemen on the other side, clamoured to have a higher rate of duty. But lo and behold, when you come to agricultural implements, of which I do not know if the exports equal the imports, then that is a reason to cut the duty in two. Think of that, we need not go back ten years for that.

Mr. WM. WRIGHT. Have you reason to suppose that the manufacturers of butter and cheese have unduly enhanced the price to the consumers?

Mr. PATERSON. No, but if I might use the same argument, the hon. member for Halton would be obliged to admit that the twenty per cent duty on agricultural implements does not enhance the price either. You see that? I point out to the hon. gentleman from Halton and hon. gentlemen opposite that if they look up the returns they will find that the exports of the hog are over fifteen million dollars, and the imports will not be found to be one-third of that amount. Shall we therefore reduce the duty on pork ? Undoubtedly, by the hon. gentleman's argument that must be done. That is one of the most important manufacturing industries in this country, one in which the farmers are most vitally interested, and it is inevitable, according to my hon. friend's argument, that the duty must come off butter, pork, cheese, on which he has been clamouring for a higher duty. Is it not better to discuss speeches like these instead of speeches that are twenty years old ? Hon. gentlemen who have spoken to-day who were in the last parliament voted for the resolution of the leader of the party, which is the party platform ; that was a vote of want of confidence in this government because we had not given what they termed adequate protection to the various industries of this country. This is not a question of ten or five years ago; these are speeches the echoes of which are still around this House, which have never been repudiated, and as to the term 'adequate protection,' while the mover did not give the figures it was declared by his followers, and from his argument it was to be inferred, that it meant the prohibition of the importation of the millions of dollars worth of goods that were coming into this country. That is what they voted for. And you voted for that in agricultural implements too. There is no shirking it—that is where you stand, with reference to this matter. The declaration plainly made by the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) and the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) and other gentlemen on that side, when they were asked what they meant, one of them declared that he did not care if the duties were 100 per cent.——

Mr. HENDERSON. Which one ?

Mr. PATERSON. I think the hon member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) said that if he had his own way he would build a Chinese wall around this country and not allow anything to come in. Now, I am not here to consider what Sir Richard Cartwright said twelve or fifteen years ago, or what Sir John Macdonald said thirty years ago; I am dealing with living issues with questions that are now before us and must be faced. Why, they taunt hon. members on this side with changing their views—there can be no such change of views on this side as that shown by hon. gentlemen on the other side in calling for what they called adequate protection at one time, and now favouring ten per cent duties. There is no such volte face to be pointed to in the history of the tariff controversy. You tell me that both parties are alike on the trade question ? I tell you no: You are protectionists and have declared over and over again that you believe in the principle of protection in the tariff: We as a party, have denounced a tariff founded on protection as a principle.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. PATERSON.

Mr. PATERSON. Hon. members opposite laugh. The protection principle is what they voted for, and 'adequate protection' that would exclude every article that would compete with any line of production in this country. We took our stand against them and declared for a tariff framed for revenue purposes. This tariff was founded on that principle, and that it carries out its object is shown by the fact that under it we have collected a revenue of $50,000,000 at a lower rate of taxation than that employed under their protectionist tariff which raised only $17,000,000 or $18,000,000. No, the parties are not alike on the trade question. We do not believe in prohibiting the importation of goods into this country, we believe in a tariff that allows competition. But these hon. members opposite, who were in favour of hundred per cent duties and a Chinese wall, tell us that in case of this industry in which there is an importation of $130,000 worth, in this country, they want a reduction of the duty to less than the revenue basis. Let them be consistent for once and ask for a tariff of forty per cent in order to exclude these imports instead of talking about the utterances years ago of Sir Richard Cartwright and Sir John Macdonald. Talk about yourselves, and what you voted for and what you stand for.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The pumped-up excitement of the Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) is a little amusing. I do not wonder that he does not care to discuss his speeches of ten years ago, or those of Sir Richard Cartwright of fifteen years ago, or those of Sir John Macdonald of thirty years ago. He naturally would not care to discuss his own celebrated speech in 1894 or 1895, when he asked his hearers if that policy which had made Paterson rich had made them rich also. I happened to glance over that speech the other day, and I think I must soon give the hon. gentleman (Mr. Paterson) an opportunity of committing it to memory, for he has evidently forgotten a good deal of it.

Mr. PATERSON. No, it was all right; it was a very good speech.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. But the hon. gentleman (Mr. Paterson) takes good care not to make such a speech to-day.

Mr. PATERSON. Yes, just the same.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. We shall see.

Mr. GERMAN. If the hon. member (Mr. R. L. Borden) will excuse me—what the hon. Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) said was that people said that the tariff had made him rich, and he asked the public if it had made them rich also.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN : And then he went on to describe the policy of protection as one which had taken the money out of the pockets of the consumers and put it into the pockets of the aforesaid Paterson and other maunfacturers.

Mr. PATERSON. No, no.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. We shall get that speech one of these days and read a little of it to see whether it bears out my contention or that of the hon. gentleman opposite. He says the two parties have not the same policy. That is true in one respect. Hon. gentlemen opposite go through the country and, where it suits their political interest, they pose as free traders ; yet, they take good care, as in the case of agricultural implements, to arrange the tariff so that it shall protect their political friends, and if they reduce the duty on agricultural implements by 2½ per cent they take good care that this does not come out of the manufacturers of agricultural implements—because these gentlemen are mainly their political friends—but comes out of other manufacturers through drawbacks. That is the the position of the Minister of Customs before the House to-day. He is not saying to the consumer now, as he said in 1895 : This money is being taken out of your pocket and being put into those of manufactureres like myself and others. Oh, no. To-day he tells the consumer : We will keep up the tariff ; but, if we are compelled to reduce any duty which benefits friends of ours, we will take good care to make it up to them in another way. Why, since the House opened at three o'clock this afternoon, the hon. gentleman has contradicted himself over and over again, as to the policy on which this tariff is framed. He tells us in one breath that it is based upon the policy of revenue, and he makes the astonishing argument that it is based on revenue because it brings in a large revenue.

Mr. PATERSON. At a lower rate of taxation.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Paterson) knows that that was not his argument in days gone by. His argument then was that the taxation must be judged on a per capita basis.

Mr. PATERSON. That is the way to measure the national debt.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. And that was the way to measure national taxation according to the hon. gentleman not so many years ago. But that is not his song now ; to-day he makes these extraordinary statements about the policy upon which his tariff is based. Why, this tariff is not based upon any policy at all except to get as much money out of the people as possible and to protect the interests of his own political friends. In one breath he tells us it is a revenue tariff, and in the next he tells us that it is framed with a view to protecting some particular interest. He talks of incidental protection. And he and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) have been defending item after item upon a protectionist theory and that theory alone. And then he stands up here and in a voice, the echoes of which, I imagine, to use his own expression, will be ringing for some days to come, he tells us that this tariff has no basis at all.

Mr. PATERSON. You want to listen to those echoes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Yes, because they are amusing and we need a little amusement to relieve the strain of the hard work in this House.

Well, what would one have supposed to be the proper object of that Tariff Commission of which the hon. gentleman was a member ? Was it not his story in by-gone days that money was being taken by excessive prices out of the consumers of this country, and that that money was going into the pockets of millionaire manufacturers—'Robbers great and robbers small,' as they were graphically described by the Minister of Trade and Commerce ? The money was being taken out of the pockets of these people by excessive prices. Have not the farmers of this country been complaining from one end of it to another that they were being charged higher prices for their agricultural implements than were the farmers of the United States ? Have they not been urging that these implements could be manufactured in Canada just as cheaply as in the United States ? Well, if the Minister of Commerce had had one spark of the principles which actuated him in by-gone days, what would he have done? He would have called these manufacturers before him and would have ascertained the cost at which these goods could be manufactured in Canada. That is the first thing he should have done. Did he do it ? No, he kept just as far from doing that as possible, it never entered into his mind to do it. What would he have done next? Would he not have ascertained for the benefit of the farmers whether these articles were being sold throughout the markets of the world at a lower price than they were being sold to the farmers of Canada ? Did he touch that question ?

Mr. PATERSON. I think so.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What was the result ?

Mr. PATERSON. That Canada buys her implements cheaper than any other country under the sun except the United States, I think was the answer.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Well, I do not see any statement like that in the document which has been brought down, although I inquired definitely as to that two or three weeks ago. I made a number of inquiries with regard to matters that seemed relevant to the discussion of this subject, but the information which has been brought down is of the most meagre character Surely I was entitled to the courtesy of that information if it was in the possession of the government. I asked for it two or three weeks ago, and I did not get it. The hon. gentleman now informs me that he thinks it is in the possession of the government. The only question I have to ask is this, if it was in the possession of the government, why was it not afforded to myself and other members of this House after we had made a courteous request for it ?

Mr. PATERSON. I cannot remember whether that is in the long hand notes or not. But it has been stated to me, I think publicly, it may have been in the press, it may have been in a circular letter, but I think it was stated before the Tariff Commission, that agricultural implements, having special reference I think to reapers and mowers, were sold at a lower price—I think that was the expression—in Canada than they were in any other country under the sun except the United States. That is my remembrance of it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The hon. gentleman perhaps is referring to the summary of Mr. Jones' evidence contained at the end of this memorandum, and it is only right I should give it. He said :

There is no country in the world where such implements are sold to the user as low as in Canada.

Mr. PATERSON. It may be that.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It may be that. It seems to me that is a very casual inquiry to make into a subject of so much importance to the people of this country. It was not an inquiry at all, it was not even evidence taken on oath ; it was simply a statement of one of the principal manufacturers of agricultural implements who goes before that Tariff Commission with the idea that the duties should be increased, or at least maintained, and he makes the remark that nowhere are these implements sold to the users so low as in Canada.

Mr. PATERSON. Be fair now. Could we have ascertained all the hon. gentleman is asking now from anybody else than the manufacturers of those implements themselves ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. But did not the Tariff Commission have power to take evidence on oath ?

Mr. FIELDING. It was never proposed to be an inquiry on oath.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. They should have had that power.

Mr. FIELDING. Not at all.

Mr R. L. BORDEN. Well, in other countries they do not look at it in that way. A commission in Australia investigated that subject by evidence taken on oath, and they were able to report to the parliament and people of Australia the exact cost of these implements in Australia. For my part I do not see why information of that kind should not be afforded to the people of this country. It is right that it should be afforded ; if the statement of Mr. Jones is correct, then it is in the interest of the manufacturers themselves that it should be afforded to the people. My hon. friend the Minister of Customs talks about adequate protection. Adequate protection I stand for as much as I ever did ; but I do not stand for adequate protection under conditions which will make our people pay more than they ought to pay for agricultural implements, or any thing else. The principle of this very Bill is that where there is a combination among the manufacturers unduly to promote their own interests at the expense of the consumers, then the government, on satisfactory evidence of that kind, is authorized by order in council to remove the duty altogether, or to lower it. That is a principle for which the Minister of Customs stands. If excessive prices are charged to the consumer in Canada at the present time for agricultural implements, that must be owing to a combination among the manufacturers of those implements, there cannot be any doubt of that. I should think that that subject should have engaged the attention of this commission. We should have had information at least on these three points : One, the cost of manufacturing these articles in Canada ; next, the price at which these goods are sold in the markets of the world ; and thirdly, if excessive prices are charged, are these excessive prices due in any way to a combination among the manufacturers ? Now so far as I am concerned, I can readily conceive that these industries might be established upon so firm a basis that 10 per cent would be a fair protection to persons engaged in the manufacture. I do not think there is evidence before the House to justify me at present in coming to that conclusion, and for that reason I would not be inclined to support the reduction which has been proposed. But I do say to the government that I believe it is their bounden duty to ascertain whether excessive prices are being exacted in Canada, prices which are not being exacted elsewhere in the world; the government should ascertain whether these charges are based upon substantial facts, and if they are based upon substantial facts, then it seems to me that the government should take steps to modify the tariff, unless the manufacturers of these implements are prepared to lower their prices to the farmers who are so vitally interested in obtaining these goods at a fair rate.

The Minister of Customs, and the Minister of Finance as well, based their modification of the tariff upon sugar on the theory that the manufacturers of sugar were making too great profit; that was the argument put forward by the Minister of Customs himself. Well, if that is a good argument to modify the duty upon sugar, why is it not a good argument to modify the duty upon agricultural implements? Does the Minister of Customs stand for a tariff which will enable these gentlemen to combine among themselves and charge the farmers of Canada $30 or $40 more than they should charge upon each one of these implements?

Mr. PATERSON. Do you assert there is a combination?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Does the hon. Minister of Customs assert that there is not?

Mr. PATERSON. I do not need to.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. You never found it out by your Tariff Commission; that is what it was for. If it were not to investigate matters of that kind for what purpose did these gentlemen roam around the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific? I do not know. What did they accomplish? What information of value did they get if they did not touch a subject of this kind. I do not think they accomplished very much and I would be inclined to think that if they had gone into some matters of this kind they could have accomplished something. My hon. friend from Halton has referred to what has taken place in Australia. The difficulty I have about his proposition and about the proposition of my hon. friend from Souris is that the government has not afforded the House the information which it ought to have been afforded and upon which this matter could have been discussed intelligently and thoroughly. We know just about as much in regard to the particular subject we are discussing to-night as if these three ministers had not gone about the country at all. We are in no better position to discuss this subject intelligently to-night than we would be if the Tariff Commission had never roamed around the country during six or seven months of last year. Under these circumstances it does not seem to me that the suggestions of the hon. Minister of Customs are of very much relevancy to this debate and I sincerely regret we have not that information which would have enabled us to deal with this mattter in a more thorough and businesslike way than we seem to be doing at the present time.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Speaker, perhaps I may be entitled to say a word in answer to the hon. Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson). He gave me credit for being a fair debater. I am inclined to treat him with the same courtesy but I desire to draw attention to one statement he made in which, I think, he did me somewhat of an injustice. I think I can enlighten the minister of Customs as to how he fell into the error. He charges me with having advocated some years ago a Chinese wall around this country as an evidence of the kind of protection that would advocate. I may say to the Minister of Customs that that is an expression that I have no recollection of ever having used in a tariff debate either in this House or in the country and I am quite sure at this moment that I did not make use of such an expression.

Mr. PATERSON. I certainly withdraw it then.

Mr. HENDERSON. I want to inform the minister how he fell into the error. I remember being in a western town in Ontario several years ago when the same thing was quoted against me by a former member of this House, Mr. Mahlon Cowan. I asked him to produce the authority upon which he made that statement and he handed me a copy of 'Hansard' which contained the assertion that the member for Halton had made that statement in the House of Commons. On looking into it I discovered that the speech was delivered by the Minister of Customs, not by myself at all. The Minister of Customs intended in that speech to make a quotation of something I had said in this House. I may tell the minister, and I hope it will save him the trouble of repeating that statement, that I investigated that matter afterwards and discovered the truth of what had been my impression that the Minister of Customs, instead of quoting it as the statement of the hon. member who had made the statement, quoted it as having been made by the hon. member for Halton. He thus incorporated it in his own speech and I presume it is for that reason he has repeated the statement to-night.

Mr. PATERSON. I certainly was honest in my expression. Who was the member who made the statement?

Mr. HENDERSON. Perhaps the hon. minister, if he investigates the speech delivered about that time, will find out.

Mr. BOLE. I have the speech right here, and in order that the hon. member (Mr. Henderson)——

Mr. HENDERSON. I am stating that that is my impression about it.

Mr. BOLE. Shall I read it?

Mr. HENDERSON. Read it.

Mr. BOLE (reading):

> But we say we will put a Chinese wall round this country, and we will not allow these Americans to come in here and monopolize the markets.

Mr. HENDERSON. What is the hon. member quoting from?

Mr. BOLE. If the hon. member says that this quotation is from the speech of the hon. Minister of Customs 'Hansard' does him an injustice because it appears plainly as his own speech. It will be found at page 2087, vol. 1, 1903.

Mr. HENDERSON. I have no recollection of ever having made that statement, but my recollection was that the Minister of Customs quoted from another gentleman in the House and not from myself. In order to put myself right if I am wrong and if I am accusing the Minister of Customs wrongly, which I have no desire to do, I may say that was the impression that I had for some years after it was quoted against me because I have no recollection of ever having made use of any such expression nor did I ever intend to advocate any such policy.

Mr. BOLE. Will the hon. gentleman tell me if he has any recollection of making another statement to be found in the same speech, page 2096, which I will just read:

> I think I can safely make this statement without fear of successful contradiction, that we never had cheaper agricultural implements in Canada that we had under the thirty-five per cent tariff, when the national policy was in full swing. We took fifteen per cent off, but there was not a drop of fifteen per cent in the price.

If we take 7½ per cent more off will there be a difference of 7½ per cent in the price?

Mr. HENDERSON. I think so. I think it is possible that I did make that statement and I referred to the fact this afternoon but I did not contend that high duties conduced to high prices. I said that we had under the regime of the national policy cheaper woollen goods and cheaper cotton goods than at any other time, and I am not aware that there was any reduction in the price of agricultural implements after the reduction from 35 to 20 per cent. Now, the Minister of Customs endeavoured to make a point against me by classifying buttter and cheese factories with manufacturing industries. I would like to know how the hon. gentleman puts these in the Trade and Navigation returns. I have always understood that butter and cheese came under the head of agricultural products and I think I am right in that respect. If you go to the country to-day and ask a farmer who is growing grain, wheat, barley or oats, or who is raising hogs and selling them to the pork packer, or who sends milk to the creamery and has it made into butter and cheese if he regards himself as a manufacturer he will say no. There is not one farmer in the country who will so classify himself. The farmers throughout the country, east and west do not regard themselves as manufacturers. They are farmers, they are agriculturists and I was perfectly right in the distinction I made in quoting from the Trade and Navigation returns with respect to the tariff as affecting the manufacturing industries of this country, cheese and butter making is not treated as a manufacturing industry. The raising of cattle or beef is not treated as a manufacturing industry. They are not so regarded by the people of the country and in the Trade and Navigation returns they have always been classified as being apart from manufacturers. They go under the head of agricultural products. I think my statement was quite clear and I shall not be obliged to make any change in the basis of the proposition I have made.

Mr. A. A. WRIGHT. Has the hon. gentleman (Mr. Henderson) ever heard of a cheese factory and a butter factory; factories must manufacture something?

Mr. HENDERSON. Yes, and I heard one time of a man living on dried apples.

Mr. A. A. WRIGHT. Is that what sent you to the hospital?

Mr. HENDERSON. The Minister of Customs asked if we considered 10 per cent a sufficient protection for agricultural implements. I will answer that by asking him another question. There is a glove manufactory in my town, and all the protection that is given to it by this protectionist government is 9⅛ per cent. The Minister of Finance considers that 9⅛ per cent is sufficient protection for the glove industry to live under, but he objects very much to the agricultural implement manufacturer having less than 17½ per cent. The glove manufacturer pays 10 per cent on the chief part of his raw product, and when he imports from Germany, which he does to a considerable extent, the surtax makes the duty on his raw material 13⅓ per cent. As the protection under the preferential tariff, under which most of the imported gloves enter is 22½ per cent, therefore the glove manufacturer has a protection of only 9⅛ per cent. The Minister of Finance calls that protection for the glove industry, but he objects to 10 per cent as being sufficient protection to the farm implement maker. The Minister of Finance discountenances the idea of being called a protectionist. I do not see why these hon. gentlemen opposite should fight so shy of the name. Since they adopt the principle why do they not accept the name as well? Let me give an example of how much higher protectionists these hon. gentlemen opposite are than were their predecessors. When the Conservative party left power in 1896, gray cottons, an article of every day use in every household, had a duty of 22½ per cent. Hon. gentlemen opposite put it on the 25 per cent list. True, they gave a preference on goods imported from Britain, but practically the importation of that class of goods is from the United States under the 25 per cent tariff, and very little comes from Great Britain. The minister will therefore admit that gray cottons are 20 per cent higher to-day than they were ten years ago, and consequently on the 20 per cent advance the duty on a dollar's worth of cotton would be 30 cents, whereas under the Conservative regime it was only 22½ cents. And yet these hon. gentlemen opposite tell us they are not protectionists.

Mr. FIELDING. I am sorry that my hon. friend from Halton (Mr. Henderson) must quarrel with 'Hansard,' but I suppose all of us occasionally get into that box.

Mr. HENDERSON. I am quarreling with my memory.

Mr. FIELDING. We do not trust our memory in this House; there are occasions when we forget. We have a 'Hansard' which is awkward sometimes for some of us, and I have no doubt that occasionally I find it awkward myself. But even if the hon. gentleman (Mr. Henderson) should persuade us that he never gave utterance to that sentiment, yet it is strongly in accord with the position of his party on that question, because I well remember that the whip of the Conservative party (Mr. Taylor) when, in one of the discussions, he was called upon to define what adequate protection was, he said it was sufficient protection to keep the foreign goods out. That is a very simple answer and a very fair one, and so my hon. friend (Mr. Henderson), just as coming events cast their shadows before, was merely anticipating the principle which was laid down in the definition of the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor). I think the leader of the opposition was rather ungenerous in his reference to the Minister of Customs. I think he ought to be very grateful to the Minister of Customs for calling his attention to the phrase 'adequate protection.' for had it not been for that reference of the Minister of Customs, we never would have heard of it throughout the present session. True, we did hear of it occasionally in past sessions, when there were no tariff proposals before the House, but now that we have submitted an elaborate proposal involving a revision of the whole tariff, during the several months since the tariff has been brought down we never heard of adequate protection until to-night, and then only when the Minister of Customs drew the attention of the leader of the opposition to it. My hon. friend says he cannot understand what the object of this Tariff Commission was, if it did not take evidence upon oath. Well, the manner in which this commission conducted its affairs is well known; its proceedings were held in the open, and I believe that to-night for the first time has any body stated that it was a case which called for an investigation on oath. My hon. friend asks why we did not inquire into the cost of making agricultural implements. There was no more reason why we should take evidence upon oath as to the cost of making agricultural implements, than as to the cost of making any other article produced by the manufacturers of Canada. If we had undertaken to inquire by sworn evidence into the cost of making every article produced by the manufacturers of Canada, if we had undertaken to inquire by sworn evidence into the cost of making every article produced in Canada, then instead of roaming over the country (to use the expression of my hon. friend) for several months, that commission would have found it necessary to anchor itself somewhere for several years. I fear it would have been too heavy a task for the ministers who had that matter in charge. What then was the purpose of the commission? It was not to hold investigations in the sense in which my hon. friend referred to them. The object of the commission was to afford the people in different parts of the country an opportunity to present their views. That opportunity had not always been given to the people. Sometimes, for reason consistent no doubt with the public business of the time, Ministers of Finance were not able to give this opportunity to the people generally throughout the country. They were able to hear such persons as came to their office and presented their views. Naturally the effect of that was that the well organized manufacturers of the country were constantly in attendance at the office of the Minister of Finance, but there was little opportunity for the rank and file, the mass of the people, to be heard. And so, inasmuch as the masses of the people could not be expected to come from the east and the west, and the north and the south, to present their views at the office of the Minister of Finance, it seemed only reasonable that a committee of ministers should visit the different parts of the country and afford the people an opportunity of presenting their views. The Tariff Commission was very largely a listening commission, and, having given the people an opportunity of presenting their views, the whole purpose of the commission was carried out. Nothing was further from the thoughts of the commission, nothing was further from the thoughts of parliament, nothing was further, I am sure, from the thoughts of the leader of the opposition—until the idea occurred to him to-night—than that this commission should enter upon an investigation under oath as to the cost of producing any particular article. My hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) has repeatedly referred to a combination in regard to these agricultural implements. I do not think that is a fair way to treat the question. Speaking from memory—one does not like to be too positive in a matter which occupied a number of months and as to which volumes of testimony was re-received—but speaking from memory, I do not think it was represented to the government that there was a combination among the manufacturers of agricultural implements. I do not know that anybody alleged any such thing. Wherever a man pays a higher price than he thinks he ought to pay, he is apt to say there is a combination, but I have no recollection of any such representation having been made. Certainly, no such representation was ever made in a form which called for any serious inquiry, and I have no reason to believe there has been any combination at all.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I did not assert there was. I was asking for information, and particularly in view of the statements which have been made that the manufacturers got out price-lists of exactly the same character, and quoting the same prices for these implements. I do not know that that is the case.

Mr. FIELDING. My hon. friend thought it was the duty of the commission that there was not—in other words, to a prove a negative.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. No, to find out the facts.

Mr. FIELDING. I think there should be a fair presumption that there is a combination before we undertake to find out that there is not. However, to the best of my knowledge and belief, no representations of that character were made to us, and I have no reason to think that there is a combination. My hon. friend has referred again and again to the alleged high price at which these goods are sold. There is no evidence that the price is excessive. I think the evidence has shown that the price paid in Canada is the American price plus the duty. I always assume that when a manufacturer has a duty on an article corresponding to what he makes, he will take advantage of the duty: I do not expect him to do anything else, and I have no doubt that the Canadian manufacturer takes advantage of the duty, and that the price at which these articles are sold in Canada is the American price plus the Canadian duty. But does that produce an excessive price? If so, there has been no evidence presented to us to that effect. Indeed, the only reference made specifically to the price to-night rather leads to another conclusion. The hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) referred to the inquiry which took place in regard to the Australian tariff, and, if I quote him correctly, he said that it provided that where a binder is sold at £70, the duty is at a certain figure, and that when it is sold at a less price, there is a reduction of the duty. At all events, the price of a binder in Australia, which was made the subject of legislation, was the price which my hon. friend quoted, being from £65 to £75. I do not know whether a binder in Australia is different from a binder in Canada.

Mr. HENDERSON. Will the hon. gentleman excuse me? What I had reference to was what is called a stripper harvester. It is a machine driven through the wheat, and it strips the head off the wheat, threshes the wheat, cleans and bags it, and prepares it for the market. It is a very costly machine. I was not comparing prices at all. I was simply showing the nature of their tariff, which provided that if the manufacturers did not on a certain day bring down the price of the machine to a certain figure the duty would be reduced.

Mr. FIELDING. The representations made to us by a member of the firm of the Massey-Harris Co., representations which I have placed in the hands of my hon. friend the leader of the opposition, were in general terms that there is no country in the world where agricultural implements are sold cheaper than they are in Canada, except in the United States.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. He does not say that, he does not make any exception.

Mr. FIELDING. Perhaps I am reasoning from an impression I got generally.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Can the Finance Minister name any other country in the world where such implements are made or sold?

Mr. FIELDING. They are sold in all the countries in the world. It is the proud boast of the Massey-Harris Company that they supply agricultural implements made in Canada to every country in the world.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. When the hon. minister was inquiring of the Massey-Harris concern, why did he not ascertain the cost of these implements made in Canada?

Mr. FIELDING. I have already explained; and I do not mind saying to my hon. friend that no matter what the implements cost, the duty we impose under this tariff is a fair and reasonable duty, and there is no more reason why we should hold an inquest as to what it costs to make agricultural implements than we should as to the cost of any other article.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Why do you give rebates on the iron and steel that enters into the machines?

Mr. FIELDING. If my hon. friend looks at the drawback schedule he will find that we give rebates to a number of industries in Canada. Then, it is assumed that this duty of 17½ per cent is a high duty, and it is said that we give the manufacturer his materials free. That also is to some extent a mistake. It is true, we allow the manufacturer a drawback on several things, and by a careful calculation we are advised that the drawbacks we allow are somewhat less than the disadvantage under which the manufacturer is placed by the reduction of the tariff. But it is a mistake to suppose that he has everything free. He still has to pay duty on all the machinery he uses, on his coal, on his paint, on his oils, on his varnish, on some kinds of wood, on bolts and nuts, on malleable iron.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Cannot these goods be made in Canada ?

Mr. FIELDING. In some cases they are, but he has to pay duties on quite a wide range of things. So that the idea that he has a duty of 17½ per cent on the implement and has all his materials free is a mistake. Even suppose for a moment that he got everything free and had a duty of 17½ per cent on the implement, would that be an extravagant duty as things go in this country ? Take, for instance, the woollen industry. The woollen manufacturer gets practically all his imported wools free, and yet he has a minimum duty of 30 per cent. While we are advocates of a moderate tariff, I for one do not hesitate to say that I have no desire to see any established industry in this country injured. We have tried, in the arrangement of all these tariff schedules, by patient examination and inquiry, by keeping the matter open sometimes perhaps for a little longer than we should have done, in order to enable all parties to be heard, to avoid doing injustice to any established industry. I believe this proposal of the hon. member for Souris, if adopted, would do an injustice to an established industry. Perhaps, as the leader of the opposition is going to support the government in this matter, I ought not to dwell too strongly on the objections I have to the amendment, but I wish to point out that the agricultural implement industry is one that is widely distributed in Canada. There are several large factories, and a considerable number of small ones. The manufacture of mowers and binders is a large part of the business, and if you made the duty on these so low that the business would be seriously affected, you would be injuring an established industry in a way that this government certainly has no desire to do. I do not see my hon. friend from Hamilton in his place to-night. If I followed the example of my hon. friend from Marquette (Mr. W. J. Roche), I suppose I would say that he had dodged in and out, but I presume that my hon. friend is out for good reasons.

I would like to know what my hon. friend from Hamilton (Mr. Barker) thinks of a motion which runs the risk of closing up one of the great industries of his town ? The International Harvester Company in Hamilton to-day pays out, I am advised, $1,000,000 a year in wages to its employees, to the mechanics of Hamilton, and mowers and binders are large items in their production. My hon. friend by his motion says that that great industry, which has only 17½ per cent duty, while some other industries have 30 per cent, is to be put in peril. My belief is that if this motion were passed —and I am glad to know that it is not going to be supported even by all the hon. gentlemen on the other side—we would strike a severe blow at one of the great industries of the country. I believe the International Harvester Company would find it to its interest to close up its business in Hamilton, at least so much of it as is devoted to mowers and binders, and have them made at the American branch and bring them from the United States. The factory in Hamilton is an American concern. With a moderate duty we have induced American capital to come into Canada and to establish that great industry, and after we have brought it in and established it in Canada I believe that if we were to pass this resolution the company operating that industry would find it profitable to close the Hamilton factory and bring in goods which they make in the United States. I rejoice to know that the motion of my hon. friend is not going to receive the assent of even all the hon. gentlemen opposite. On behalf of the government I wish to say, following the statement of my hon. friend the Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson), that while we are not advocating a high tariff, while we are not advocating Chinese wall tariff, while we are not seeking to shut everything out, we are willing that a moderate degree of protection, if you care to use the word, arising out of a tariff designed for revenue, but incidentally giving some protection, in some instances a considerable measure of protection—we are willing that where there is a great industry in Canada it shall receive a fair measure of consideration, which we have given by this tariff on agricultural implements, and so I must ask the House to reject the amendment of the hon. gentleman from Souris (Mr. Schaffner).

Mr. SPROULE. Does the minister say that the duty put on has no relation, and is not intended to have relation to the price at which the article shall be sold ?

Mr. FIELDING. My view is that all duties have a relation to the price of the article, and therefore when the duty is reduced by 2½ per cent I believe it must lead to a reduction, if not at one moment at another, to that extent in the price of the article.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood the minister to argue that it had no relation to the price, but was intended to be moderate protection. If that be so why did he find it necessary to put a provision in the tariff law that where it was proven to the satisfaction of the government that by any combination or other means the price of an article was unreasonably enhanced the government should have the right to take off the duty ?

Mr. FIELDING. That provision was put in the tariff ten years ago and fully explained then ; it has been discussed occasionally since, and I do not think that I can now give any new reasons.

Mr. SPROULE. I assume that is the correct reason for which it was put there and it was intended for that purpose by the minister of finance, but the line of argument that he has adopted, to-night would entirely negative that intention with regard to that provision.

Mr. FIELDING. I do not think so.

Mr. TURRIFF. I regret that owing to absence from the city I did not hear the motion of my hon. friend from Souris (Mr. Schaffner)) and I mention this for fear that my hon. friend from Marquette (Mr. W. J. Roche) may also say of me, as he has said of my hon. friend from West Assiniboia (Mr. Knowles), that I was dodging this question. This is not a question that representatives of the farmers from the west at all events, need to dodge, and I wish for a moment to state why I purpose to vote for the tariff as it has been brought down by the minister. If I could believe that the members on the other side were in earnest, that if they came into power they would make this reduction in the duties, I would perhaps be inclined to give it some consideration ; but the whole history of the Conservative party on this question, is against that supposition altogether. We find that even to-night they are not at all agreed. The hon. gentleman from Souris (Mr. Schaffner) proposes to make a reduction of 7½ per cent. I think that same hon. member supported the Conservative party all through when they had a duty of 35 per cent on these goods. I think he supported Hon. Hugh John Macdonald in 1900 when he advocated free agricultural implements at a time when every other Conservative leader throughout the country was advocating higher duties than the government had at that time. Then we have the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) to-night saying he is not altogether in favour of reducing the duties as suggested, so that we see that if the Conservatives did come into power it is altogether unlikely they would make this reduction. We all remember very well that in 1900, when the Hon. Hugh John Macdonald in the County of Brandon advocated free implements, the farmers did not believe that he was in earnest.

Mr. SPROULE.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. How much did it take to convince them to the contrary ?

Mr. TURRIFF. The hon. gentleman knows probably better than I do how much it cost to get the vote given to his candidate in that constitutency.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. $1,200 a head.

Mr. TURRIFF. But that has nothing to do with the question.

Mr. SAM HUGHES.—Hear, hear.

Mr. TURRIFF. The farmers of that constituency at all events were not very much impressed with the idea of free implements. Now coming to the present day the tariff commission got information all over the country and I do not think the farmers of the west at all events, asked for a great reduction such as is proposed by this resolution on agricultural implements. What the farmers of the west were afraid of was that the manufacturers, organized as they were, would be able to get at the ear of the government at all times and to bring a great deal of influence to bear on any government—and we all recognize that fact—and they felt that the tendency would be that the duties would be increased and they were afraid this would occur on agricultural implements and everything else which the farmer requires to use. They therefore asked that the duties be left alone, to use a slang phrase, they asked the government to stand pat on the tariff they had and that is practically what the government has done, and I am pleased to see that in some respects, on a good many things that we have to use in the west, there has been a reduction of duties. I would very much rather trust to the government that has carried out a low tariff on agricultural implements all through and that has come down at this session and made a reduction from 20 per cent to 17½ per cent. Some hon. memmber stated that this was only a fractional reduction, but 2½ per cent is a reduction of over 10 per cent of the amount of duties that we have been paying in the past, so I say that this is not a matter that any member from a western constituency, any member representing a farmers constituency need shirk—I have the honour of representing a constituency that is absolutely and altogether agricultural, with no other interest whatever, except the mercantile supplying the farmers, and during any visits I have made in my constituency, during and since the last election, there has been no demand made to me for free implements. As a representative of those farmers I say that I am justified and would much prefer to stand by and support a government that brings in a general low tariff and which this present session has made a considerable reduction in the duty on agricultural implements and other reductions, than put any dependence in the resolution moved by the hon. member for Souris (Mr. Schaffner) for a general reduction, as it appears to me that this is done largely for the purpose of catching votes at the next general election. I doubt if it will be any more successful than Mr. Hugh John Macdonald's advocacy of free agricultural implements.

Let us see where another prominent member of the Conservative party stands on this question. We do not need to go back ten years, or five years, or even one year. Hon. gentlemen will remember that in October or November last the Manufacturers' Association made a trip to the western country. They were handsomely treated in Winnipeg, I understand, and, at a banquet held there, Hon. R. P. Roblin, the Prime Minister of Manitoba, made a speech. I cannot pretend to give his exact words, but he pointed out how much money had been paid out by Canadians during the foregoing year for agricultural implements coming from the United States, and said, not exactly that he was ashamed, but that he did not like living in a country that sent out so much money to bring in implements that ought to be made at home. And he advocated a higher duty on agricultural implements in order that they might be manufactured in Canada. Now, it is reported in the papers that Mr. Roblin is to be brought down here to Ottawa to lead the Conservative party. If that should come to pass, hon. gentlemen opposite will be in a strange position advocating a reduction of the duty from 17½ per cent to 10 per cent, while their leader would be in favour of increasing the duty very largely.

Now, the farmer is not worrying very much to-day about whether the duty on agricultural implements is 10 per cent, 17½ per cent or 20 per cent. The leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) said something about $50 on the price of an implement. The highest-priced implement we are now dealing with is the self-binder, complete with bundle-carrier and trucks. The value of that implement for duty is $97, and the total duty under the present tariff is something under $17. So it cannot make such a difference as has been suggested. What the farmer is worrying about to-day is the transportation question and the possibility of getting his wheat sold and getting his money for it after he has grown and threshed it.

I say nothing further except that I shall give the government hearty support on this question, for I believe that the policy of the government is in the interest of the country. It is not only on agricultural implements that the farmer pays duty. I entered this Chamber a few minutes before the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) sat down. He read a long list of exports and imports. Among other things he showed that Canadians imported $17,000,000 worth of woollens, also millions of dollars worth of cotton goods and about $1,500,000 worth of agricultural implements. So, if you are going to make goods cheaper for the farmer, it would be better instead of trying to wipe out one industry altogether to make a general reduction. That course would be more in the interest of the farmers and more in the interest of the manufacturers generally.

Mr. SCHAFFNER. Before the hon. gentleman (Mr. Turriff) resumes his seat I wish he would answer a question. If the hon. gentleman endeavoured to establish anything whatever in his remarks it was that the farmers of his constituency were absolutely satisfied with the present tariff. I have the honour of representing the district adjoining his. I would ask the hon. gentlemen: If the farmers are absolutely satisfied with what they have got, will he explain how my motion for a reduction of this duty to 10 per cent would be a vote-catcher ?

Mr. TURRIFF. I do not think it will be, but I say that it was introduced with that intention.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. member for East Assiniboia (Mr. Turriff) has addressed a very amusing argument to the committee. He contended first that the farmers of the west were not specially desirous of a reduction of this duty, but that they desired that on this duty the government should 'stand pat.' What was that duty ? It was 20 per cent. According to the hon. gentleman the farmers were content that that duty should continue. But was it this government that gave that duty ? No, it was their predecessors, and all they did was to continue the duty on agricultural implements established by their predecessors. So if any credit was to be given for that duty it should be given to the Conservative government. The hon. gentleman followed that up by saying that the farmers of the west were perfectly satisfied that the government were desirous of helping them because they reduced the duty by 2½ per cent, which, he said, was a change in the right direction. But he says they would not be satisfied if the government reduced the duty to 10 per cent. What kind of logic is that? If a reduction of 2½ per cent would do good, surely a reduction of 7½ per cent would do more good. The hon. gentleman seems to have no idea except to support his party, and I am satisfied that he would be equally desirous of supporting them if they had proposed to take the duty off altogether. Or if they had increased the duty to 35 per cent he would have found arguments to prove that the farmers of his constituency would be perfectly satisfied. The hon. gentleman's idea seems to be summed up in this: Keep the present government in office.

Mr. HENDERSON. I wish to return once more to 'Hansard.' I will quote just a few words to show that the expressions I used had no reference to manufactured goods and had no reference to the question before us. We were discussing the question of agricultural protection and I said what I have said on many occasions, that I do not care how high the duties on agricultural products are made. Speaking of the duty on fresh meats other than lamb and mutton:

Well, I think that three cents a pound is fairly adequate protection on an article that costs about six cents a pound. It is very good protection, and that is the protection that we believe in giving the farmers of this country. Not that we say for one moment that we are going to help the farmer to get two prices for his article, that is not the meaning of it, but we say we will put a Chinese wall right around this country, and we will not allow these Americans to come in here and monopolize the markets of this country when they do not contribute anything towards the expenditure of this country. The Canadian farmer is entitled to this market, and we put that duty on to enable him to get this market and to retain it.

So the whole thing had reference to the protection on agricultural products, and I stand to-day, where I stood then on that subject.

Amendment (Mr. Schaffner) negatived, yeas, 22; nays, 56.

Bill as amended reported.

Amendments read a second time and agreed to.

Mr. FIELDING moved the third reading of the Bill.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Before the motion passes I wish briefly to move an amendment with relation to that portion of the Bill which provides for an intermediate tariff. There are a good many clauses in the Bill which confer upon the Governor in Council power to legislate. I might refer to clause 4a, which enables the government to extend the benefits of the British preferential tariff to certain other British possessions; section 4b, which enables them to withdraw the benefits of the British preferential tariff from the countries already named; section 5, which provides that the Governor in Council may fix a date after which the British preferential tariff shall extend only to goods shipped direct to Canadian ports; section 6 subsection 3, which provides for action of the Governor in Council in connection with evasion of the dumping duty; sections 8, 10 and 12, which also confer power of regulation or action upon the Governor in Council in connection with certain items in the tariff. Now some of these provisions have been continued from previous legislation; some of them, in my opinion, are justified upon the ground of necessity or very great convenience. Some of them I would not be inclined to think are justified by any such urgency.

But so far as the intermediate tariff is concerned, the government has taken a step in advance of any thing that has ever been proposed to parliament in this line. They have taken power by section 4 of this Bill to eliminate the general tariff altogether and substitute another in its place; they have taken power to do that in whole or in part. They have taken power to apply any one item, or any dozen items, or any fifty items, or any hundred items of the intermediate tariff. They have taken power to apply that intermediate tariff to goods imported from any particular country; they have taken the widest possible power with relation to this intermediate tariff, and they have not given us the slightest information as to the policy or principles on which they propose to act. Now it seems to me that this is an extreme power for the government of this country to ask from parlament. They are in fact asking this parliament to delegate to them power to abolish the general tariff altogether and to substitute for it an intermediate tariff. They are asking for power to do that without any discussion in parliament or throughout the country; they are asking for power to do that after a secret debate around the council board; they are asking for power to do that which could not fail to have a very disturbing effect upon the business interests of this country if that power were exercised to the full, or in any important measure. Yet they have not given us any information as to the principles upon which they propose to act. They have not said to us; we will apply this intermediate tariff to any country whose tariff towards Canada is at least as low as this intermediate tariff. They have not given us any idea as to the concessions which they will demand from any such country, or from any country with a higher tariff, before they shall, by order in council, bring this intermediate tariff in effect. It is in effect a power which may be exercised inopportunely and without discussion, and in such a way as to disturb business interests to a great extent.

But there is more than that; it is a power from which, it seeems to me, any government should shrink because it gives them the authority to deal with business interests in which their political opponents or political friends are concerned, and to use that power oppressively if they desire to do so. Suppose some important interest in this country, on the eve of a general election, should be told by the government of Canada, if you oppose us in this election we shall see to it that the items in the intermediate tariff are applied so far as your industry is concerned; therefore look to it that you either support us, or that you are neutral in this contest. Is that a power which any government in this country should desire to take under existing conditions? My hon. friends on the other side may say that it would be impossible for them to exercise the power in that way, that public opinion would not support them in doing so. But I reply to them that there will always be the suspicion in the minds of the people, and especially of businessmen, that that power will be exercised in that way if they see fit to express their political opinions as their judgment dictates. Further than that, what urgency is there by reason of which the voice of parliament and the discussion of parliament should be eliminated from the consideration of this intermediate tariff? It has not been discussed in this parliament as a tariff which is likely to be of immediate application. We could get no information from the government on that point, we could get no information as to any particular country to which it is to be applied, as to any particular trade to which it is to be applied. What, I ask, is the urgency with regard to this intermediate tariff? If the government propose to enter into negotiations, let them submit their conclusions to parliament when once they have made up their minds as to what the proper course is to take? Between the conclusion of any session of parliament and the opening of the following session, a period of not more than six months, or seven and a half months at the outside, will elapse; is there any urgency in present circumstances which makes it proper for the government to ask parliament to delegate to them power to deal with this intermediate tariff? It seems to me that there is no such urgency, at least no such urgency has been disclosed by my hon. friend the Minister of Finance or the Minister of Customs who have for the most part dealt with the tariff questions. I venture to think that the taking over by the government of an extreme power of this kind is not justified by anything that has been advanced, or by any condition in the country at the present time. I think that the delegation of powers which are essentially legislative should not proceed further than it has proceeded in the past. Parliament is the proper tribunal under our constitution for dealing with matters affecting the tariff; and parliament is the tribunal which has dealt with all such matters except in so far as necessary convenience or extreme urgency would make it proper, under certain restrictions, to confer some such powers upon the Governor in Council as those which have existed upon the statute-book of this country during some years past.

No such considerations seem to apply to the present proposals. Then there is this further consideration which it is not out of place to mention that the government take from their own supporters any practical voice in this matter. We speak of responsible government in this country. We have as a matter of practical politics a government which is more particularly responsible to its own caucus where, as we know, the most important debate very often takes place as to whether or not a particular measure or a particular proposal shall come before parliament and be carried through by a government majority. What is the result of such a proposal as that which is made by the government in this instance? The result of it is that the government apply their intermediate tariff, in whole or in part, bring it into force, by order in council and proclamation, then come down to their supporters who are thus muzzled in advance as to any opinions which they might otherwise be inclined to express and who will be told after the government have once taken action that the fate of the administration depends upon the ratification and approval of the action which has already been taken by the government. Is that a desirable condition in this country? Is it wise to extend that principle in view of conditions such as those to which I have just now alluded? I will not elaborate this point at the advanced hour we have now reached but I affirm most deeply and sincerely that this is a proposal from which parliament should shrink and one which should not be embodied in the tariff as now proposed. I therefore move:

That the said Bill be not now read a third time, but that it be resolved as follows:

That the power of legislating with respect to the tariff belongs of right to parliament and ought not to be delegated to the Governor in Council except in cases of obvious necessity.

That the said Bill be referred back to Committee of the Whole House with instructions to amend the same by striking out of said Bill all provisions which empower the Governor in Council to bring into operation the intermediate tariff in whole or in part without the further authority of parliament.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Minister of Finance). Mr. Speaker, we have had a somewhat full discussion of this matter at an earlier stage when the Bill was in committee and I do not think from either side anything material can be added to what has been said in regard to it. I think my hon. friend the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) magnifies entirely the danger, if there be any danger at all, in this intermediate tariff. The principle that he lays down that all tariff matters should be dealt with directly by this parliament and by this parliament only is a theory which has never been adopted, at all events for many years, by the parliament of Canada and I do not hesitate to say that the best interests of the country would not be advanced by the adoption of that theory, plausible as it may seem, as stated. Particularly I object to the suggestion of my hon. friend that this intermediate tariff gives to the government some political power which it might exercise to the disadvantage of some industry with which its opponents were connected. In the light of the manner in which the tariff question has been treated by this government I think my hon. friend might well have spared us that criticism. We have had large powers under the Tariff Act in the hands of the Governor in Council for many years, and I think I am justified in stating that after ten years experience in dealing with tariff matters which called from time to time for action by the Governor in Council I have yet to hear the first criticism in this House as to any improper or unwise act done by this government under the powers so conferred. We have had powers vested in the Governor in Council in connection with tariff matters and it is to the advantage of the public that we should have. My hon. friend says that we have the power to reduce some duties. Any reduction that we can make under this tariff is an exceedingly small one. But, we have had the power to absolutely abolish duties by order in council to a considerable extent. We have had that for ages I might say, or ever since we have had a tariff. No harm has come from that. We have had the power to abolish duties on certain articles which are used in the manufacture of goods. I admit at once that if we were open to the suspicion of being actuated by unfair political motives that power could be so exercised. We could say: We will allow some article to come in free for the good of some manufacturer but we will not allow some other article to come in for some other manufacturer. But, I can point with some satisfaction to the result of ten years administration of the Act by this government and down to this moment nobody has raised a question in this House as to the propriety of any action taken under that authority. I ask the House to accept that record as a guarantee that whatever else may be said as to the wisdom of any action of the Governor in Council there is not a shadow of ground for suspicion that there has ever been anything but an administration of the tariff without fear or favour, without the slightest regard for politics. We have the power to put certain articles on the free list, we have the power to reduce the duty on certain articles, and no harm has come of it. We have the power to impose export duties by order in council and that power has never been exercised rashly. We have the power to grant a remission of duties and under the general provisions of the Consolidated and Audit Act the Treasury Board has the power to make a remission of duties. Large powers are given to the Governor in Council necessarily and proper and pointing to the ten years' record of the administration of these powers by this government I assert that there is not a shadow or ground for any suspicion that the Act has been administered in an improper way.

Then, the hon. gentleman says that we are taking enormous powers under this intermediate tariff. I take the sheet of the tariff which happens to be open. It is the sheet containing item 445, mowing machines, harvesters, &c., which we were dealing with to-day. I commence at the top and I find the item of stereotypes. The duty under the general tariff is one-eighth of a cent for a given quantity and the duty under the intermediate tariff is one-eighth of a cent for a given quantity. No great danger of this government exercising that power to the disadvantage of anybody or by adopting the intermediate tariff. The next item is half a cent under the general tariff. It happens to be the same under the intermediate tariff. Nothing alarming in that if we adopt the intermediate tariff. The next item is 30 per cent, general tariff, and 27½ per cent, intermediate tariff, a reduction of 2½ per cent. Would it be an alarming thing, if, for adequate consideration given by any other countries, we should reduce that duty to 27½ per cent? Is there anything very dangerous in giving the government that power? You are not giving the government unlimited power to reduce duties. You are giving the government no power to impose duties and in regard to the reduction of duties you are giving the government a very small power indeed—the power to reduce within the limits of this schedule. The next item happens to be a larger one. Under the general tariff the duty is 35 per cent, and under the intermediate 30 per cent. Does anybody suppose that if we were to reduce the duty from 35 to 30 per cent for good reasons, for concessions to be granted to the trade of Canada, there will be anything alarming in that? The next is general 30 per cent, intermediate 27½ per cent, and next general 35 per cent, intermediate 30 per cent.

And so we go through the list, and we find that except where the duty is on the highest scale of 35 per cent (in which case the proposed reduction under the intermediate tariff would be five), but leaving that high rate out, we find that on all the other lines where there is a difference at all, the outside reduction we could make would be 2½ per cent. Therefore, the idea that some dreadful power is given to us, some power which may be used to crush some manufacturer in the country, is not sustained. And why do we want to take this power? We think it is desirable in dealing with other countries that we should be able to hold out to them an indication of the limits beyond which we cannot go. If we come to negotiate with the representatives of other countries as to getting better terms for the products of Canada, and as to getting some concession for Canada we want to be in a position to say to the foreign country: This is the limit beyond which we are unable to go without coming back to parliament. If in any given case something arises for which we have not made provision, then undoubtedly we must come back to parliament. And in most cases, I do not hesitate to say frankly, we shall be obliged to come back to parliament, because, as I stated in the budget speech, while we can make arrangements for reciprocal legislation from year to year, we cannot make a treaty; we cannot arrange with any foreign country that we would give them the benefit of this tariff and get from them the benefit which they might wish to give us for a given period of years. We would be obliged, if we wish to make an arrangement for more than a temporary period, to come to parliament. In any case, it is probable that any foreign country with which we might enter into negotiations would probably not be disposed, if they were told that we could only make a temporary arrangement under this tariff, to enter into such an arrangement. Then we would be obliged to negotiate a treaty and bring it to this parliament for approval. Therefore the powers which we take with respect to this intermediate tariff are very moderate indeed. Its chief purpose is to indicate to foreign countries—rather should I say to such a foreign country as we may feel hopeful to deal with—the lines within which we feel free to deal with them. Reference was made in the earlier discussions to the United States as a country which might be brought under the operation of this tariff, and I stated to my hon. friend then, and I say it now that we have no expectation that any arrangements will be made with the United States by virtue of that intermediate tariff. I do not say that such an arrangement would be undesirable. On the contrary, if the United States would give us concessions which would be a benefit to Canada, it might be well to give the United States the benefit of the lower rates of duties for concessions given us in return. Therefore when I say I do not anticipate anything will be done with the United States under the tariff, I mean that I do not regard it as likely, because I see no indication on the part of the United States to-day which would justify us in the expectation that we would ever do anything with them under the terms of this tariff. If at any time any offer was made by our brethren to the south which would lead us to believe that such an arrangement is possible, it would have to be some special arrangement outside of that tariff altogether, and we would be obliged to come to this House and to submit it for the approval of parliament. I am satisfied that the alarm which my hon. friend has manifested as to the tremendous power which the government are taking under this intermediate tariff, is entirely unwarranted. I think the manner in which the powers given to the Governor in Council have been used in the past, should be accepted as a guarantee that the powers conferred by this legislation will be used wisely and well, and I have not the slightest anticipation that under the operation of the intermediate tariff anything will ever be done which will call for the disapproval of this House.

Hon. GEORGE E. FOSTER (North Toronto). The Minister of Finance has told us to-night, just what he told us some months ago when this particular matter was first discussed. I had hoped that in the meantime the Minister of Finance would have seen fit to have foregone this intermediate tariff. I had hoped that when he got some light on the question he would have thrown it over. But, his purpose evidently is to push it through. I have not the slightest hesitation in saying that legislation like this is not good in principle or in practice. Within the last five minutes the Minister of Finance has tried to make every statement he possibly could to show that this was simply a thing upon paper, and that he never supposed he could make any use of it in the wide world. The very best reason he gave why he cannot make any use of it, was, that he would find it very difficult to discover a country so foolish as to enter into an arrangement which he could only assure them would be good until parliament next met, and had a chance to go into the matter, and declare its position with reference to it. That argument shows the uselessness of the legislation from a practical point of view. The Minister of Finance has cut out the ground from under his feet as to any useful object this legislation could be put to. But we must not only look at legislation with regard to its practical side, but we must also have some regard to the principle upon which parliament legislates. On the other hand, the argument of the Minister of Finance, followed to its extreme, would simply say to this parliament: Gentlemen, you come here once a year, and just pass a law with one clause in it giving the government power by order in council to do the whole of the executive and legislative work of this parliament for the Dominion of Canada for the coming year. That is the logical conclusion of the argument of the Minister of Finance. Now, he proposes to justify this legislation by saying that Canada has always recognized the principle, and that there always has been legislation of this kind on the statute-book. That is true and it is not true. It is true that there has always been some power given to the Governor in Council, but that power has in the main always been special in its nature, and restricted so that it would be impossible to abuse it to any great extent. In these special instances, in nearly every case, that legislation referred to subjects which had been discussed, and the theory upon which all this special legislation was passed was quite well understood. In the event of certain things taking place, we gave the Governor in Council some liberty of action, but there is a wide difference between that and providing, as is done here, that the government may go to work and revise the whole tariff from day to day, and every item in that tariff. That is the legislation which is now asked for and which if the House grants will be placing in the Governor in Council the power to absolutely revise this tariff from beginning to end. To-day we discuss each item as we pass it through, and having looked at all the conditions, we place on each item a certain tariff rate which we think it is wise and just to place upon it. Parliament takes the circumstances of each case into consideration, and it legislates on it and declares what the rate shall be in each particular case. That is very different from leaving it to the Governor in Council, to make 100 or 500 or 1,000 changes in the tariff, with reference to circumstances and conditions that parliament does not know anything at all about. If it were proposed to allow any country to come in under an intermediate tariff, we could discuss what the effect of that would be upon our trade, and we could decide whether it would be wise to do so or not. Suppose we came to the conclusion with reference to the United States for instance, that it would be wise to let certain goods in for certain concessions under a certain tariff, we could discuss the subject, measure the conditions, and we could then decide as a parliament that such could then be done. But that is absolutely different from the course which is proposed by the government now. I might be very willing that an intermediate tariff less than the general tariff should be applied to Holland and Belgium, but I might be very much opposed to its being applied to the United States or some other country. But this intermediate tariff in so far as it is given over to the Governor in Council, is not to be applied simply to Holland or to Belgium or to a country whose trade we have analyzed in its relation to its competition with our trade.

You might be perfectly willing to do that with reference to one country, and you might be absolutely opposed to doing it with reference to another country. But, in addition to that, when you fix the general tariff, you know exactly what each country is getting, and what it has to pay when it brings its goods in; but in the case of the intermediate tariff, you leave that for a certain hour and a certain number of people, the hour being sometimes set by the cabinet, and the country to which it shall apply and the conditions under which it shall apply, you leave to a committee of this parliament. Moreover, when parliament passes an item of the tariff, we know exactly what we are getting for that tariff. For instance, we place in the tariff an item of 30 per cent on goods coming from the United States. We know exactly what we are getting from the United States when our goods go into that country. We legislate having both of these things in our minds. Here we go it blind. We give to the Governor in Council the authority to say arbitrarily what we shall give for the limit of concession that we get from any country in the wide world. We abrogate and throw aside entirely that function of parliament which is one of its earliest and greatest functions, to be the judge of what shall be the trade conditions and the trade tariff between this country and another. It does seem to me that a proposition of this kind, so baldly and plainly put, if made by a Conservative government in a time when old Liberal doctrines had real force in this country, would have caused something very like a revolution. The newspapers, the public men and the public sentiment of the country would have cried out against that assumption of authority, and I think they ought to cry out against it in just the same way now. If parliament has any function at all, it is to look after its finances, and to fix the conditions of its trade, and this is a function which ought not to be taken from it. In this case it is taken from it, and both the amount of the taxes which you wish to put on in the shape of customs duties, and the limits and givings backwards and forwards between the countries affected, are absolutely taken from parliament and its discussion and decision, and are handed over to the Governor in Council to do as it pleases with reference to one country or fifty countries or all the countries in the world. I say that that is an abrogation of the duties of parliament which every member of parliament ought to question very seriously before he gives his adhesion to it. Where are you going to end if you go on that principle? You end just where I stated at first, you make parliament a mere echo of the opinions and the actions of a committee of itself. You take away from parliament its duty of looking into and legislating upon this matter, and hand it over to the Governor in Council. Now, what is the necessity for this legislation? The Minister of Finance stated to-night, as he stated before, that they do not to-day see any available opening or any possibility of applying this intermediate tariff. They do not think the United States can be brought in under it at all. They have no country in view which they think can be brought in under it. What, then, is the necessity for having it ? As my hon. friend pointed out, parliament has only an interregnum of five or six months. No negotiations in the way of general trade conditions can surely be so pressing which would not be the better and the more mature by waiting until parliament did meet and take up the whole subject and make its own decision on the general principle and on the general conveniences and benefits to trade. Is it wise for us to deprive parliament of that function ? There is no reason given why it should be deprived of it. But there is another point of view. This is mischievous legislation. It is mischievous because it unsettles the basis of trade. How often have we heard these gentlemen say : We do not want to have this dickering over the tariff ; we want to have permanency in it ; and yet you have introduced one feature which is an element of doubt and anxiety in every branch of business in this country and with every country with which we are doing business, more particularly Great Britain. What have you done ? You have established the principle of a preferential tariff with Great Britain. What is the use of the Minister of Finance getting up and straining his eyes over a column of this tariff, to read that it is one-eighth in one case and one-eighth in the intermediate, that it is one-half in another case and one-half in the intermediate, and then finding where there is a difference of 2½ per cent, and then admitting that there is a difference in one case of 5 per cent. We have seen to-night these gentlemen laying a great deal of stress on 2½ per cent. They have met the farmers of this country with the proposition : You have asked us for a boon, and we have given it to you—we have given you a reduction of 2½ per cent.

It looms up great when it helps them, as they think in that respect, but it is nothing, and 5 per cent is nothing when it comes to a matter of international trade. When the Finance Minister was reading it over he knew two things, that there is enough in that intermediate tariff, if it is put into effect with reference for instance to the United States to destroy the efficiency of the preferential tariff with Great Britain almost entirely. He knows also if he understands the course of business and has any faith in all he has been preaching, that what we want is a stable, permanent tariff, that men in this country who manufacture and men in Great Britain who look to opening up a preferential traffic with this country desire a permanent tariff, but if it is thrown into their faces that whereas to-day they have against the United States a preference of 2½ per cent or 3 per cent or 5 per cent, at any moment, by the sweet will of the Governor in Council, they may be subjected to a tariff that will entirely abolish the benefit they now enjoy. This will make it impossible for them to work up a permanent preferential trade. That is a menace which it is mischievous to hang over any attempt to increase the trade between Great Britain and this country on a preferential basis. You say that you want a considerable tariff to protect our own industries which are competing for their existence, we will say with an industry in the United States or any other great manufacturing country, but if these manufacturers may at any moment by order in council, on any article or on dozens or hundreds of articles, by the intermediate tariff, lose all the benefit and be exposed to a much greater competition, these industries may suffer very severely. Is it wise to hold that menace over both those branches of our business? over the extension of the industrial business of this country and over what we have all professed to be willing and anxious to have carried out to a greater extent, British preferential traffic. Is it wise to thus promote uncertainty, which, as everybody knows, in tariff matters is a ban to progress and well-measured development in the manufacturing industries of the country. I would think that public sentiment, business sentiment and newspaper sentiment which keeps close to the business sentiment would have something to say condemnatory of this legislation. But the minister says : You want to show your hand. I always thought that in a bargain a wise man did not show his hand in advance, that he would go up to another and talk to him about a trade but that he did not commence by showing everything that could be given. I do not think that is wise as between nations and I think there are strong reasons which could be shown against it. You advertise to every country in the world just what you are prepared to do, but you might by approaching each country separately on a basis of give and take be able to get more for what you are prepared to give. Anyway I do not think that is a strong argument, that you should pass this because you want to show your hand to every country in the world. I find here a quotation from a report on the German Tariff Bill which it seems to me is in point in regard to this. This extract says :

> A considerable advantage in negotiating tariff treaties would be lost if a foreign country were to know from the very beginning up to what limits the government was willing and able to make tariff concessions.

This I think hits the matter on the head and I should think was rather against the putting up of an intermediate tariff in this way. I would think that the government had a better chance to negotiate with each country if it went into the negotiations without having shown its hand than if it went into the negotiations after having shown its hand. Nothing alarming has been done said the Finance Minister, heretofore, and therefore nothing alarming will be done hereafter, you have trusted us in the past, trust us in the future. But you are giving a power absolutely different from the powers given before. These powers in the past have been special, restrained, and under certain conditions well known in the House and have not been given otherwise, they have not been the general power to legislate on the whole range of the tariff at any moment behind the back of parliament. I should hope that parliament would guard very jealously and very closely its own powers with reference to the levying of duties of customs and with reference to these trade negotiations. Our trade is an important thing, our manufacturing business is an important thing, our industrial development is an important thing and it seems to me that if parliament has any duty at all, surely parliament has the duty to carefully canvass and carefully legislate upon these items and to take the responsibility therefor rather than to hand that responsibility over to the Governor in Council, however, wise or careful that Governor in Council may be.

These are points that it seems to me ought to be considered and I do hope that the Finance Minister, after having reflected upon this matter, and after the discussion we have had in so many cases in reference to this giving of power to the Governor in Council, would have come to the conclusion that it would have been wise not to have invaded the province of parliament in this respect, and to have left to it, at all events, one of its oldest and most precious functions.

Hon. WILLIAM PATERSON. I want to go to bed and out of sympathy for myself, if not for others, I will say but a few words. The picture presented is one that is not alarming. I do not think that is a departure from parliamentary government. Every one of the items in that intermediate tariff has been submitted to the scrutiny not only of the Governor in Council, but of every member of this House. The fullest latitude of discussion has been allowed.

Mr. FOSTER. I am sure the hon. gentleman (Mr. Paterson) wants to argue fairly. Let me put the case to him this way: If this government had come here and said that a certain country, let us say the United States of America, was willing to give us certain concessions if we would apply this intermediate tariff to them, does he not see that as soon as that practical proposition was brought down this House would look into the conditions of trade and see how trade between the United States and ourselves would be affected? And if the proposal were made with regard to any other country, would not this House immediately examine and discuss how the application of the intermediate tariff to our imports from that country would affect our trade development, so as to ascertain whether it would be wise to grant this concession or not? In that sense parliament has not given any examination or discussion to the effect of the intermediate tariff as applied to any country. Is not that a clear statement of it?

Mr. PATERSON. I have no objection to it. But as a matter of fact we have no such proposal to make and have not been in communication with other governments. That is a matter that will have to be considered when any application of the intermediate tariff is made. But so far as fixing rates are concerned, in making trade arrangements with any other country, parliament has given us permission to go as far as it thinks it desirable to go—we may apply the whole list or only part of it. In many cases there will be only a partial list. But in any case any arrangement made must come before parliament within a few months at the outside.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How?

Mr. PATERSON. The government's action in making the reciprocal arrangement can be criticised in parliament.

Mr. FOSTER. After the arrangement is made and in effect?

Mr. PATERSON. But the parliament will have the power to condemn the government and rescind the arrangement. Now the leader of the opposition sees, or thinks he sees, this difficulty: While the House will be advised of the arrangement made, the government will not leave members free to express their opinions. I cannot see the difference between our procedure in this matter and the British parliamentary procedure which we have always followed in relation to tariffs. Of course, no minister is at liberty to give even the slightest hint to even the government's most cherished followers—if there can be a distinction as between followers—of tariff changes that are to be made. It would be a terrible scandal if any one outside knew of a meditated change and availed himself of that knowledge. Therefore, it is of the essence of British parliamentary government that tariff matters must be kept quiet before they are announced in the House. The argument of the leader of the opposition would tell against that as much as against the preferential tariff——

Mr. FOSTER. Not at all.

Mr. PATERSON—because these resolutions come down without their nature being made know in advance to the House. In this case also the government will be in a position to say to its followers: You must stand by us in this case; we have introduced this proposal and must put it through. And I do not think there is any danger existing in one case that does not equally exist in the other. Now, as to the disturbance in trade. As a matter of fact you do not find it. We have adopted the principle of a maximum and a minimum tariff, besides maintaining the preferential tariff as a domestic arrangement of our own. Almost every nation has the maximum and minimum tariff, and even the great republic to the south of us is doing what we are doing. Yet they do not consider that it is going to disturb the conditions of commerce. And here in Canada this tariff has been law since the 29th of November. Now, my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) I suppose reads the 'Mail and Empire' as I do. At any rate he reads the Saturday page of 'Industrial Canada.' And as he reads his paper does he not see that since this tariff was introduced more companies have been formed——

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Mining companies?

Mr. PATERSON. No, not mining companies only, but industrial companies. They are taking out letters patent under the Ontario law. And in each paper to which I have referred you will read a list of companies formed with capital amounting to millions.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes, in Cobalt, $364,000,000—I read that to-day.

Mr. PATERSON. I am not talking about that, but about industrial concerns, just such concerns as the hon. member (Mr. Foster) thinks will be made uneasy by this legislation. There has never been a period in Canada, so far as I know, when so many industrial concerns have been formed as since this tariff came into effect. Hon. members opposite may set their fears at rest. As to the danger of it being used politically, that is not to be thought of. To do that would be to do what is not right—and the hon. gentleman knows that this government could not do that.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the third time and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR GENERAL—SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES.

Mr. SPEAKER read the following message from His Excellency the Governor General :

GREY :

The Governor General transmits to the House of Commons further supplementary estimates of sums required for the service of the Dominion for the period of nine months ended on the 31st March, 1907, and in accordance with the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867, the Governor General recommends these estimates to the House of Commons.

Government House,
Ottawa, April 2, 1907.

Mr. FIELDING moved that the said message, together with the estimates, be referred to the Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

MILITIA PENSION ACT—AMENDMENT.

House went into committee to consider the following proposed resolution :

Resolved that it is expedient to amend the Militia Pension Act and to provide that its provisions shall extend to officers who are seconded.

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence). The meaning of the word 'seconded' is to retire temporarily without pay and without loss of rank, as in the case of members of the Royal Artillery or Engineers when they accept civil offices. We have a pension law which provides that members of the permanent force and staff shall pay 5 per cent of their salaries into a fund which shall constitute a pension fund, and after a certain number of years service they shall be able to retire at a certain rate of pension not to exceed 35-50ths of the whole of their pay. It happens that an officer may be seconded, that is, an officer may be temporarily appointed to some other service. For instance an officer of the permanent force might be sent to serve in the Northwest Mounted Police, when he would be no longer paid by the Militia Department but would get his pay in the police. He might be, and there are two cases of the kind, sent to serve in Australia or in India in exchange for an Australian officer or an officer from India, and in that case he would not be receiving pay from the Militia Department of Canada but would receive his pay from the government under which he was serving. The object of this law is to enable such an officer to keep up his connection with the pension fund by enabling him to continue to pay his 5 per cent upon the amount of his pay at the time he was seconded from the Canadian service, to any other service. Then there is another condition. Suppose an officer of the permanent force should be appointed to a position in the civil service ; there is a case of that kind now in my own department. An officer of the permanent force, Colonel Fiset, who had contributed to the pension fund for several years, was appointed to the Civil Service as Deputy Minister ; this Act will enable him to continue to pay his 5 per cent into the pension fund so that he will not lose his connection with that fund, and will have the right, when he retires, to be pensioned under the pension law.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That is, his service as Deputy Minister will count.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Precisely, and it will be perfectly fair in the particular case I have referred to, because as a matter of fact, under the Civil Service Act, as amended, he is required to pay 5 per cent into a special fund. He pays 5 per cent now, he will not pay twice ; that is, the Act will enable him to pay that 5 per cent into the pension fund just as he has been doing, and enable him to benefit by the money which he has previously paid into that fund.

Mr. BERGERON. In the case of Colonel Fiset, will he pay twice ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN : No. I will read the clause which refers to that particular case :

If, by reason of the position in the public service of Canada to which any officer is seconded, he becomes subject to the provisions of part 2 of the Civil Service Superannuation Retirement Act, the reservations out of the salary of such officer by the said part 2 requiring to be made, shall, instead of being transferred to the credit of the retirement fund, form part of the Consolidated Revenue

Fund of Canada, and be treated in all respects as deductions under section 8 of this Act, and as constituting a contribution which such officer is, by the two last preceding subsections, required to make.

Resolution reported, read the second time and agreed to.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 144) to amend the Militia Pension Act.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first and second times, and House went into committee thereon.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The expression 'seconded' has a different technical meaning from the expression 'retired ?'

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Yes, it is so well known that there is no need of specially defining it. This Bill was drafted by the Deputy Minister of Justice, Mr. Newcombe, who gave a great deal of care to it, and I believe it meets the requirements as stated by me and that it is in the public interest.

Mr. BERGERON. Col. Fiset will not contribute to the Civil Service Superannuation Fund ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No, instead of contributing his five per cent to that fund, it will go to the fund to which he has been hitherto contributing and he will get the benefits of that fund while getting nothing whatever from the Civil Service Superannuation Fund, Class II.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. And he continues under the pension fund on his salary as a member of the militia force ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Yes.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. And not under the larger salary of deputy minister of militia ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No, although he would benefit by the larger fund.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. When he retires from the service he will be entitled to a pension on the same scale as if his salary as a member of the force were the same as the salary which he would enjoy as deputy minister of militia ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. That is it.

Mr. BERGERON. Which is the more advantageous ? The militia pension is more advantageous than the civil service superannuation, is it not ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. It is entirely different. I suppose it is more advantageous. But he is only paying the same amount of money. There is no charge upon the public service. The Militia Pension Act was very carefully calculated by an actuary and it has been more than self-sustaining, I believe, up to the present time. It was calculated that the Militia Pension Fund would be self-sustaining by making an allowance of one-tenth for each year of the salary which each officer was receiving upon retirement.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. He will get this pension proportionate to the larger salary ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Yes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Will he contribute in proportion to the larger salary ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. He contributes five per cent upon whatever he receives—$3,500 this year, $3,600 next year and up to $4,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. He will contribute just as if the salary which he enjoys as deputy minister of militia were the salary which he receives as a member of the force; consequently, he will receive a pension based upon his salary as deputy minister of militia.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Exactly. It is the same as if he had remained on the militia force and had been promoted to a higher rate of salary.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. This Bill says five per cent, and is not the militia pension one-tenth ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No, the militia pension is at the rate of as many fiftieths of the salary enjoyed as he served years up to 35.

Mr. BERGERON. What were the conditions applying to deputy ministers who some years ago were active members of the militia force ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. That is a different case; there was no fund then. The pension fund was only established seven years ago.

Bill reported, read the third time and passed.

SUPPLY.

Mr. FIELDING moved that the House go into Committee of Supply.

Mr. BERGERON. I understand that we are to meet to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

Mr. FIELDING. No, this morning.

Mr. BERGERON. There are committees called for ten and eleven o'clock. I think we might as well adjourn.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I was rather anxious to go on with my estimates and I want to make a statement in regard to them as brief as possible but perhaps it is too late to go on to-night.

Motion agreed to, and House went into Committee of Supply.

Militia—pay and allowance, $1,400,000.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I think it better to say what I have to say in connection with this one item, and at this late hour I shall endeavour to condense my remarks. The first statement I wish to make is with reference to the very large increase which has taken place in the militia estimates during the last few years. I think the estimate is smaller for the year 1907-8 than for the year 1906-7, but there has been an increase comparing the year 1905-6 with the year 1895-6, and that increase amounts to something like $2,500,000. As unfavourable comment has been made upon that fact, it is desirable that a short explanation should be made of the reasons for this increase. The expenditure upon militia on revenue account in 1895-6 was about $1,150,000. In that year, there was no annual drill, or rather there was less than $100,000 spent on annual drill, and as this was abnormal, it is only fair to add $300,000 to the estimate for 1895-6, on account of annual drill, which took place in 1906 and which did not take place in that year. That addition would bring the militia expenditure for 1895-6 up to $1,500,000, whereas the expenditure in 1905-6 was about $4,000,000 (I am speaking in round numbers). There are some items in the expenditure for 1905-6 due to the taking over of Halifax and Esquimalt which were special in their character, and which would bring the expenditure up to $4,300,000, but the normal expenditure was about $4,000,000.

We have therefore to compare an expenditure of $4,000,000 in 1905-6 with an expenditure of $1,500,000 in 1895-6, making a difference of $2,500,000, which seems a very large increase, it representing about 166 per cent. I shall state briefly the causes of this increase. The first and chief cause is the taking over by Canada of all responsibility for expenditure in connection with the maintenance of the fortresses at Halifax and Esquimalt, thereby relieving the British exchequer entirely from all expenditure of any kind for military purposes in Canada.

Mr. SPROULE. How much does that represent ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. $1,250,000 in round figures. The headquarters staff and the district staff on which was expended, in 1895-6, $40,000, cost in 1905-6 $140,000 and in that item you find an explanation of an increase of $100,000. The extra pay and better rations account for an increase of about $250,000. The committee will remember that about three years ago when the new militia law was passed the pay was increased from 50 cents, by a sliding scale, up to $1, for active militia, and from 40 cents to 75 cents for the permanent force. That item, as compared with 1895-6, would amount to close upon $250,000. The increased number of men in the active militia annually drilled, from 10,000 to 15,000, will account for an increase of $300,000. The Dominion arsenal which in 1895-6 produced between 1,000,000 and 2,000,000 rounds of ammunition, has grown to the very creditable output of between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000, and it now costs over $200,000 more than it did in 1896. The maintenance of military properties will account for an increase of about $100,000. The military properties in which the permanent force is housed are the chief item of that increase. Having increased our permanent force from 1,000 to 3,000 the cost of maintaining the buildings in which they live has proportionately increased. The clothing and stores for the largely increased number both of the permanent force and the active militia figures up to an increase of about $250,000. The Royal Military College, the number of whose students has increased in the interval from between fifty and sixty, to between ninety and one hundred, accounts, for another $50,000 increase. We get in these figures I have given $2,500,000 of increase.

I had intended to go somewhat elaborately into a justification of these increased expenditures, but at this hour of the night or the morning I will forbear. I think, however, speaking generally, that no one will take exception to any one of them. I believe that the whole people of Canada approve of the taking over of Halifax and Esquimalt, thereby relieving the British exchequer of this large expenditure of between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000. I would like to say a word as to the headquarters and district staffs, as I think some question has been raised in certain quarters as to whether the expenditure of that large amount of money is justified. Well, the very fact of taking over Halifax and Esquimalt, of bidding goodbye so to speak to the last of the British soldiers as such in Canada, has made it necessary to organize more thoroughly and completely these staffs. While the British soldiers were here, an imperial officer was always stationed at Halifax, and it was one of the most important garrisons of Great Britain. There were always at Halifax the heads of the different departments which would be necessary in the event of war, and which would be able to take the field and organize throughout the Dominion all the departments of a complete army. When the British soldiers withdrew, it became necessary in the militia of Canada to organize all the departments of an army. This has been done. The criticism has been made that we have quite as large a staff as there is, for instance, in Switzerland. This is not true ; yet, as a matter of fact, it is necessary to have practically as large a staff for an army of 50,000 as it would be for an army of 250,000. You must have the heads of the different departments. No matter how small the army is, it must be as an army complete in all its parts in order to take the field successfully. I do not believe there is a single department or a single officer in the different headquarters or depots or in the large commands who could be dispensed with. The different departments which have been established are as follows: chief of the general staff and under him an intelligence branch, the ordnance corps branch, the medical service, the engineers, the signalling service, the army service corps, the pay corps, the school of musketry, and the inspector general's department. I mentioned a moment ago the case of Switzerland. I noticed recently in the newspapers and journals some very interesting and able articles on this subject—one written by Col. Merritt, of Toronto. I have looked somewhat carefully into that matter, and I find that in Switzerland the annual cost of the staff is very much greater than it is in Canada. According to the Swiss Army Budget of 1907, the cost of maintaining the headquarters staff in Switzerland is $168,-289.65, which does not include the pay of the chief instructors nor that of the head of the topographical bureau. As the highest rate of pay in Switzerland is about $1,800 per annum, it is fair to assume that if the above staff were paid at Canadian rates, the cost would be about double the above.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What is the total force of Switzerland ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. 250,000 on the first line. In Great Britain the figures are very much higher than ours. There the number of staff officers of the Imperial yeomanry and volunteers is 550, or one to every 1,129 men, whereas in Canada there is one officer to every 1,138 men, taking the permanent force and the active militia of the country. In the United States there is one to every 626 as against 1 to every 1,139 in Canada, so I think it is clear that so far as the staff is concerned we are very much below that of Switzerland, Great Britain or the United States.

I wish to refer to the improvements that have been made during the period of the last 10 or 12 years. I have referred to the fact we have relieved the mother country of all expenditures for the purposes of defence in Canada. We have made a thorough reorganization of the department and large commands. We have passed a pension law and a militia law. We have established a Militia Council. We have greatly improved the facilities for the education of officers, particularly by arrangements made with the War Office by which we have the right to send and are sending two officers each year to the Staff College in England. We have established a school of musketry. We have established rifle associations, which are rapidly increasing. We have constructed rifle ranges on which we have spent over $1,000,000 in the last ten years. We have established a central camp with an area of over 100 square miles. We are establishing a reserve of equipment and of stores. We have developed the Dominion arsenal enormously; the output a few years ago was less than 2,000,000 rounds per year whereas to-day it is between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000 rounds. We have greatly added to materiel, including artillery, and we hope that in the not very distant future, we may have etsablished in this country a factory which will manufacture our own artillery.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Has there been any improvement in the output of shells from the cartridge factory ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Yes, a very large improvement. Last we have established in Canada a rifle factory about which there might be some difference of opinion. However, I believe that will prove to be one of the most important things that has been done for the militia of the country and for the country itself. The Royal Military College has grown so that to-day the number of students is 90 as against less than 60 ten years ago. While 10 or 12 years ago there were not more than three or four graduates of that college in the permanent force of Canada or on the staff, there are to-day 60 graduates of that college occupying important positions on the staff and in our permanent force. That, of itself, seems to me to be such a radical improvement in the condition of the militia as should give gratification to everybody. Criticisms were made against the Royal Military College and possibly to some extent they were justified, to the effect that we were spending a good deal of money on that college and getting none of the direct benefit ourselves. It is true that a large number of the young men were going to serve in the British army and indirectly of course that was an advantage to Canada. To-day we have the satisfaction of knowing that at least for every two officers who have been sent from the college into the imperial army there is one in the army of Canada.

I had intended making some reference in detail to the suggestion that the Swiss method might be applied to Canada. I would like to point out the difficulties in the way. First, Switzerland is a country of 16,000 square miles. The distance across it at any point is not more than 150 miles; it is not one quarter in area of the province of Manitoba. Conditions are entirely different, physical conditions and the condition of the population, and still more important, in Switzerland they have compulsory service. Every man in Switzerland is compelled to serve and to serve without pay. I have made a calculation to show that if the rates of pay in Canada were applied to the Swiss militia it would cost $12,000,000 a year instead of the small amount it does cost. That is nearly three times what our militia costs us. I am informed, however, by the chief of the general staff, General Lake, who has given careful study to the matter, that he thinks there are some ideas and methods followed in Switzerland, which might be profitably adopted in Canada; that we might considerably reduce the permanent force and extend the time of annual drill in the camps and pay the men who go into the camps very much larger rates so as to get the best class of men in the country. That is being worked out and possibly something may come of it.

When I made my last statement two years ago, I said this:

I propose at the earliest possible moment to have a conference with the representatives of the different provinces to see whether anything can be done in this direction.

That referred to securing the training of children in the schools, physical training of the young children and of the older children from twelve years up, military training and the teaching of musketry, rifle drill, etc.

I intend to do this before another session of parliament comes around.

I was not able at the last session to bring down any fully-considered measure with reference to this. I have seen, either the Premier or the Minister of Education of every province in Canada, and I am happy to say that without exception, all agree that it would be possible to make some arrangement by which we should have a universal and uniform system of physical training of the young children in the schools, both male and female, and of military drill for the older boys from twelve years up. In this way, I think a magnificent asset might be established for the future militia of the country, and I believe that the health and strength of the children and of the next generation would be enormously improved and increased. I think it would be a magnificent thing to have a uniform system in all the schools of the country; I belive it would be difficult to over-estimate the advantage it would yield to the whole people. In this connection, I would like to read—and with this I shall conclude—a few quotations from recent speeches and letters of distinguished men in the United States and Canada. When I made my statement, two years ago, I had the honour to read an article in the XIX Century written by the Right Honourable Earl of Meath and also letters of Lord Roberts on this subject. If the committee will bear with me for a few minutes, I will read very briefly from a letter written recently by Dr. White, of Cornell University who had been charged in one of the journals of the United States of being opposed to the system of education in Cornell, which, to some extent, follows military lines. He says he regrets having been misunderstood:

On account of the fact, which I have often stated in public addresses here and elsewhere, that a great republic like this is not to escape civil commotions from time to time, and that the more of its educated men who have some knowledge of military tactics and some military spirit, the less likely a mere wild unthinking mob is to terrorize our various communities.

Third—I have steadily supported the military department on account of its value to the young men themselves. The students of Cornell are largely from the people of comparatively small means. Very many of them come from the farms and the counters, and though as a rule the very best of fellows, they are often, when they reach the university, careless and rather 'slouchy.' Military drill 'sets them up,' makes them stand straight, makes them look a person to whom they are speaking straight in the face, enables them to give and take the word of command, and if I were called upon to name the one thing which I think we should not dispense with in Cornell University, it is this same military drill which your article charges me with opposing and criticising. So far from opposing it, I have always supported it, and I never uttered a word of criticism regarding it in my life—for the simple reason that, as a civilian, I do not feel competent to criticise it.

I go so far in this matter that if I had my way military drill would be required during the first years at every university in this country. I believe that American liberty would be far better secured thereby.

I have, at all suitable times, taken occasion to proclaim this faith, and every old graduate of Cornell under my presidency will remember that again and again I have publicly preached the doctrines above laid down against short-sighted grumblers who cannot see the value of military training or who begrudge the time it requires.

Your article states that I allege that the military course is interfering with the academic course. Any such charge is utterly baseless. There is no study in the academic course which I would not suppress sooner than give up the military drill, which I believe in so fully and always have believed in.

My experience of over forty years, since I took part in founding Cornell University, shows me that young men who go forth from the institution with good military training are at an advantage in comparison with those who have shirked or slighted it. There is a certain something about the man who has done military duty which gives him, in the struggle for existence, a better chance than the man who has simply 'slouched' it. He is more of a man among men.

And I have an authority here, which, I think, will carry a great deal of weight with this committee. Mr. Goldwin Smith, so late as February 2, 1907, wrote as follows:

I cannot help expressing my pleasure on finding that military drill is not to be abolished at Cornell. Military training is and always is likely to be indispensable to those who are charged with the defence of public order and the defence of the commonwealth. I always advocated it at Oxford. In our case it was the sinister attitude of the French emperor that produced a national call to arms. In your case, there is no special call, but there is a general and permanent necessity. You are receiving a vast inflow of alien immigration, some of them from questionable sources. Apparently you feel unable to close your gates. Your great cities will soon be hardly American. A large and increasing number of immigrants now bring with them from the scenes of political and social conflict in Europe tendencies adverse to the principles of American civilization. At more than one point there has been disturbances arising from that source. It is surely to be desired that at the critical moment calling for military action in defence of public order the republic should feel safe under the protection not only of paid soldiery, but of her loyal citizens at large.

And now one more quotation, this one from President Hadley, of Yale, whose name is widely known. He says:

We take it as an auspicious and significant coincidence that within the space of a single month two of America's most distinguished educators, Hon. Andrew D. White, of Cornell University, and President Arthur Twining Hadley, of Yale University, have publicly declared in favour of more general military training for the young men upon whom the nation must hereafter depend for the maintenance of its peace and honour. Doctor White's utterance, it will be remembered, appeared in a letter published in the 'Army and Navy Journal,' of January 5, in which he strongly contended that a course in military training should be made compulsory in all American colleges. Doctor Hadley's views were expressed in the course of an address on 'Intelligent Preparation for Public Service,' delivered before the Yale City Government Club, the following extract from which appeared in the 'Independent' of January 3:

The man who would fully prepare himself for public service must not only do his duty in time of peace, but must be ready for the possible exigencies of war. The fact that for forty years we have not had a war which has seriously strained the powers of the nation should not blind us to the need of preparing to meet the dangers of international conflict from without and the still greater dangers of anarchy and lawlessness from within. If in the places where you settle there is any militia organization really worthy of the name, identify yourselves with it. If there is not, try to etsablish one. It may be that you will not be called upon for anything heroic in the way of military service. I certainly hope that you will not. But if you are ready to meet the danger in advance you will lessen the liability of its coming; and if it does come you will have prepared yourselves for the performance of the most vital of all public duties—the duty of protecting your country against imminent destruction.

Now, I wish to say—and I am glad to be able to say it—that the president of McGill University is taking a great deal of interest in this subject and that the presidents of other universities and the principals of high schools in Canada have been corresponding with me upon the question. The president of McGill, while not authorizing me to say that the university will take the matter up, has authorized me to say that, so far as he is personally concerned, he is favourably disposed and anxious to introduce some branch of military training in connection with the university.

I apologize for having detained the committee so long, and express my gratitude to my patient friends who have remained to hear me.

Mr. BOLE. Will the minister state the number of the permanent force and active militia and also the expenditure upon each?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. The permanent force is something less than 3,000 and the active militia something less than 49,000. The total militia estimates this year are something like $4,000,000.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Shall the item pass?

Mr. SPROULE. I think there will need to be some little discussion on this.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I would suggest that we might pass these items, as we have done in other cases, with the understanding that one item shall be left upon which every branch of the service can be discussed.

Mr. SPROULE. It is now one o'clock, and if we are to get back here for a sitting at eleven o'clock in the morning, and with committees meeting an hour earlier, it is time to adjourn. It is not reasonable to ask us to consider these items now.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. We might pass this first item, No. 71.

Mr. SPROULE. If we have the same right to discuss anything we like on 72 it doesn't make any difference.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Yes, certainly.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The Public Accounts Committee is taking up military matters to-morrow morning, and if the minister is going on with his militia estimates in the House there might be a clashing of interests.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. The Ross rifle?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Yes.

Some resolutions reported.

On motion of Mr. Fielding, House adjourned at 12.50 a.m., Wednesday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, April 3, 1907.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

QUESTIONS.

IMMIGRATION AGENTS.

Mr. TAYLOR asked :

1. Is Geo. P. Ward, Geo. A. Johnston, H. W. Ross, L. J. Kehoe, and Jas. P. White, in the service of the Department of the Interior as immigration agents ? If so, what salary are they being paid ?

2. Have the services of any or all of them been dispensed with ? If so, when ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. Geo. P. Ward, Geo. A. Johnston, H. W. Ross, L. J. Kehoe, and Jas. P. White are not now in the service of the Department of the Interior as immigration agents, and are not being paid any salary.

2. Yes, all of them, in November, 1906.

GATHERING OF SEA-WEEDS IN PARISH OF ISLE VERTE.

Mr. MONK—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. Is the government aware that the inhabitants of the parish of Isle Verte, in the county of Temiscouta, have for the past twenty years extensively gathered the sea-weeds that collect on the reefs around that parish, and that the sale of those weeds thus gathered affords them a means of livelihood for their families ?

2. Is the government aware that one Anthime Roy, pretending to be possessed of the right to collect a tax of fifteen per cent on the profits which the said inhabitants of Isle Verte derive from the industry, has instituted one or more law suits against the said inhabitants who gather the said sea-weeds, to make them pay that tax ?

3. What conclusions has the government reached regarding that pretended right of Anthime Roy ?

4. Has the government intervened in the case or cases taken out by the said Anthime Roy against those who gather the said sea-weeds ?

5. Where are those suits or that suit at present ?

6. What will the government effectively do to protect the people of Isle Verte in their rights to gather freely the said sea-weeds, as they have done in the past ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries). The department is aware that a considerable industry is carried on at Isle Verte in this connection ; but so far as the rest of the questions are concerned, this department is not affected and has no knowledge thereof.

MILITARY FORTS AT LEVIS.

Mr. CARRIER asked :

1. Is the government aware that the Military Council of the Department of Militia has recommended the clearing of the land in the neighbourhood of the military forts Nos. 1 and 2, at Lévis ?

2. Is it the intention of the government to have that clearing done during the course of the coming summer of 1907 ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence) :

1 and 2. It is the intention to have the clearing done gradually. Part will be done during the present year.

ST. JOSEPH DE LEVIS CAMP—HUTS.

Mr. CARRIER asked :

1. Is the government aware that, in the month of September last, 1906, three military cabins had been burned in the Royal Engineers' camp at St. Joseph de Lévis ?

2. Did the government receive a report from the military commandant of the district of Quebec, recommending the rebuilding of those cabins ?

3. Is it the government's intention to rebuild those cabins during the course of the year 1907 ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence). 1, 2 and 3. The Department of Militia and Defence is aware of the burning of the huts referred to, and also that the district officer commanding has recommended that they be reconstructed, but as it is not the policy of the department to provide such buildings in connection with the training of the militia in camps of instruction at other places, it has been decided not to reconstruct the huts this year.

PETAWAWA CAMP—COMPENSATION FOR TIMBER.

Mr. BOYCE—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. Has the government by order in council, assumed certain lands in the townships of Petawawa and McKay, in the province of Ontario, for military camp purposes ?

2. If so, is it the intention of the government to compensate the owners of the timber licenses covering the area of said lands, and the Ontario government, for the timber thereon ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence) :

1. Yes.

2. The government has not taken the interest of the lumber licensees, and they have, therefore, no claim to compensation. The Ontario government is not by the British North America Act, entitled to compensation, and it is not intended to pay that government any compensation.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILWAY—ROLLING STOCK.

Mr. LENNOX—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. Is the Grand Trunk Railway Company in possession of and using cars and other railway equipment purchased or constructed for the National Transcontinental Railway ?

2. If so, upon what terms ?

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Acting Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. The Grand Trunk Pacific have made purchase of rolling stock which is in use on the Grand Trunk and such other lines as it interchanges business with.

2. Per diem rates according to car service rules.

PRIVILEGE—CHARGES AGAINST CERTAIN MEMBERS.

Mr. HENRI BOURASSA (Labelle). Mr. Speaker before the Orders of the Day are called, in order clearly to define the ground upon which I desire to bring up the matter of privilege which was discussed on the 8th of February, and which, by common consent was adjourned for future consideration, and in order to show that the phase of the question I wish to develop to-day before the House is different from the motion I made before going into Supply two days ago, I will read the motion I intend to present in closing my brief remarks to-day :

That on February 19 last, the member for King's, N. S. (Mr. Fowler), stated: 'I shall discuss the character of hon. members opposite, whether they be ministers or private members, and their connection with women, wine and graft;'

That the hon. member stated further that he had 'data' and 'material' at his disposal with respect to his charges ;

That such a statement, undefined as it is with regard to the parties concerned, reflects on the honour of the House and of the government ;

That the hon. member for King's be therefore invited, either to name the ministers and members of the House to whom he was referring on February 19, and to specify his charges against them, or to withdraw his accusation ;

That unless the hon. member complies with that request and adopts one of those two courses, he stands censured by this House.

I may just state that from my point of view—

Mr. SPEAKER. Having heard the terms of the motion, it seems to me that it cannot but revive the discussion previously had on the same question in the House ; and, under the rules of the House it would be out of order. I am prepared to hear discussion on the point of order.

Mr. BOURASSA. On the point of order, while, of course, I am prepared to bow to your ruling, Mr. Speaker, and while I agree with the principle which you have just laid down, at the same time, I think I might state that the question of privilege which I raised on the 8th of February was that the accusation of the hon. member for King's (Mr. Fowler) being indefinite as to persons and charges, it ought to be taken up so that the accusation might be made definite. On the suggestion of the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier), the taking up of the question of privilege was postponed until the report of the Insurance Commission was down. When I raised the question on the 8th of March, the position taken by the Prime Minister was that he saw nothing in the accusation made by the hon. member for King's, because it was too general. I could quote the words of the hon. gentleman, but I do not think it is necessary to do so at the present juncture. So, when I brought the subject up, later on, it was not upon that matter of privilege but upon an amendment to go into Supply, quoting the words of the hon. member for King's, and adding—

That these statements have become a matter of general comment and have aroused public opinion throughout the country, so that an immediate inquiry is imperative.

The point I took was that there had been enough accusation on both sides and sufficient comments in the newspapers of this country for several months to warrant an immediate inquiry. The House judged—and of course I am not going to discuss that judgment—that the accusations were not specific enough to warrant an inquiry. Therefore, the question of privilege raised on the 8th of February has never been dealt with and adjudged by the House—that is, the question whether the hon. member for King's should or should not be called upon to specify his charges or withdraw them. The House has taken the position that these accusations were too general to be acted upon immediately by way of inquiry, but the House has not decided finally the first point of discussion, which is whether the hon. member for King's should be forced to define his accusations or not. I admit, of course, that my position to-day deals with the same question as before, but it is a different phase of the question. It seems to me it is similar to a case in which an amendment to a motion has been disposed of and and the discussion of the question may be resumed until the main motion is disposed of. The question of privilege which I wish to bring forward is : That the general accusation of the hon. member for King's should be sufficiently defined, both as regards persons and facts, so that it may be adjudicated by the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton, Ont.). I should think it unfortunate if any technical consideration were to prevent the discussion of this question to-day The amendment proposed by the hon. member for Labelle is in a rather curious form—he proposes to pronounce censure in advance upon an hon. member of this House. I do not remember any English precedent for that. Apart from that consideration—and, of course, it is a matter to be dealt with later on—it would not seem to me wise under the present conditions to put aside any fair opportunity of discussing these matters that have been the subject of debate in this House and of very general comment throughout the country.

Mr. SPEAKER. As I understand my duty as presiding officer of the House, that duty is to enforce reasonably the rules, practie and procedure of the House. The present motion has for the very gist of it the quotation of the same words quoted in a former resolution, and the debate upon it must necessarily cover the same ground as the other. As to the question of privilege, that seems to have been fairly involved in, discussed upon, and disposed of by the previous motion. I think my course is plain in the matter—that I should, subject to what action the House itself may see fit to take upon the question, rule the motion out of order as covering ground as to which a debate has already occurred. Therefore, the motion must be ruled out of order.

Mr. BOURASSA. I should have thought that the government would have something to say in this matter. In view of the position taken by the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) and of my own opinion, with all respect to your decision, Mr. Speaker—which not only I am bound to accept, but with which, as a matter of strict principle, I agree—I must say that I think that at the present juncture I should ask the House to pronounce itself upon it, not by way of revision of your decision, but that as a matter of deep public interest is involved. Therefore, I appeal to the House not on the ground that your ruling is not correct, but on the ground that the public interest demands that the first question should be immediately dealt with.

Mr. SPEAKER. Government orders.

Hon. GEORGE E. FOSTER (North Toronto). Do I understand, Mr. Speaker, that the matter is now finally disposed of? I know that you have given your decision, but I suppose that in the statement you have just made you were giving your views to the House to open up the question of order and that opportunities would be given for discussion. I certainly thought that we should hear from the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) on the case. With that view I did not rise at the time, but it certainly was my intention to say something on the motion. Am I debarred from doing so at the present time?

Mr. SPEAKER. Well, I had supposed I had given an opportunity to discuss the point of order. I do not desire to prevent any member who wishes to discuss that question.

Mr. FOSTER. I would add my view to to that which was taken by my colleague the leader of the opposition. It may be that, from a strictly technical point of view, this matter having been referred to and discussed on a resolution which included it, may be considered as having been disposed of by the House, and therefore cannot be brought up again as it relates to the same subject. But I do think that under the present juncture of circumstances, in the present feeling that there is undoubtedly in the country with reference to the whole matter, it might be wiser to abandon the strictly technical view and take the broader ground, that under the circumstances the House should hear what the member for Labelle has to say, and that so far as possible it should give an opportunity to set at rest finally if possible the series of insinuations, of reports, of half vouched for statements, and of vouched for statements, if it comes to that, which are current in this House and in the country. Don't let us imagine for a moment that we are getting out of this set of circumstances in which we are placed, by technically declaring against a discussion in this House on a ruling of the Chair. Is it not better for us to take the broader ground?

Mr. SPEAKER. That is really not discussing the point of order, but something else. The question of course I have to deal with is whether the point of order which was raised against the motion is a proper one or not. The discussion I think must be confined to that.

Mr. FOSTER. Then coming back to the question of order, the strict point of order, it does seem to me that there is something in the pretension of the member for Labelle. Inasmuch as this matter was brought up in a definite way, though inclusive of a great many others, on a preceding occasion when it was discussed in the House, there may be ground for saying that, being included in the general motion, that is, the subject matter of this having been included in the general motion, it was discussed and disposed of. But I think you will see there is a difference. A part of the general motion is now taken out and set by itself, and the member for Labelle proposes to treat it in a different way. Having had the decision of the House that a committee should not be appointed to take up the charges amongst which was the subject matter of this present discussion, and the House having decided that that should not be done, he takes it up now by itself, and does not move for a committee to be appointed to investigate the question, but he takes up the question as one of privilege. In this light it so remains, it is on the records, it is within the knowledge of the House and of the country, and no decision of the Chair and no decision of this House can take it out of that category. Seeing that is the case, and that the House has decided that it shall not be dealt with in a certain way, and the member for Labelle questions as to whether that can be dealt with in a different way, he proposes as a member of the House, and guarding the honour of the House, and careful for the reputation of the House, to ask the House to state that these charges shall be further carried out or that they shall be disavowed, and that the House shall take certain action if either the one or the other of these things are done. It seems to me that that is putting it on a better basis, and ranges it in a different category. As I said before, if the Speaker can see that even approximately that is the case, may be it would be much better for the Speaker and the House, though I do not wish to dictate, not to push our repressive power to the point of absolutely shutting out in this House from this time on and for ever, the attempt to clear up what in my belief had better be cleared up, and as quickly as possible; for the longer it stands in the condition in which it is to-day the worse the matter grows, and the worse I think it is for the reputation of this parliament. We cannot afford to do anything in this House, even coming down to strict technicalities, which will show to the country a desire to put our strong hand upon any proper investigation into the charges and insinuations which are now current coin throughout the country.

Mr. G. W. FOWLER (King's, N.B.). As I am somewhat intimately concerned in this matter, perhaps it is well that I should say a word or two with respect to it. I think the hon. member for Labelle has had every opportunity to be heard in connection with this matter, but when the matter was brought up before by the member for Labelle it was absolutely out of order. The hon. gentleman had an opportunity then of discussing this thing, everybody who wanted to speak upon the subject had an opportunity to discuss it. Now it is brought up again for the second time, I do not know for what purpose. The hon. gentleman has used me, I think, with scant courtesy in this matter. When the hon. gentleman was going to move a resolution in which my name occurred, I would have supposed that he would send me a copy of that resolution. I have not received a copy of it. I heard the terms of that resolution for the first time when this House opened this morning, although yesterday I sent the hon. gentleman a note asking him to be here in his place at three o'clock when the House opened in the afternoon in order that I might know the terms of this resolution to see whether and how it affected myself. This resolution contains two sections. It asks for a vote of censure upon me by this House in the event of my not doing such and such things. It purports to contain a quotation from a speech which I made on the 19th of February; but, Sir, it takes only a portion of that speech, separating it from the context, and giving it a different meaning altogether from the meaning which I meant to convey in my remarks on that occasion. It does not give the condition which I set out in those remarks. I want to say just here that I have no objection, in one way, to the discussion of this motion. But I say the hon. gentleman is entirely out of order because, in the first place, he has no right to embody in a resolution words which he takes from the 'Hansard' which are supposed to have been uttered by me, words which were not taken down, and which must be taken down in this House before they can be used against a member on a motion requiring him either to retract or withdraw them, or to substantiate them. Upon that point certainly the hon. gentleman is out of order. I object to the latter part of his resolution as containing, if it passed this House, a censure upon myself. I say this House has no power to do that.

Mr. SPEAKER. That of course is starting another discussion on another question. The question before the House is whether this motion is in order, and whether my ruling intimating that it was not in order, is correct.

Mr. ARMAND LAVERGNE (Montmagny). May I rise to another point of order?

Mr. SPEAKER. This point of order will have to be disposed of before another is taken.

Mr. ARMAND LAVERGNE. I want to read the rules.

Mr. SPEAKER. If the hon. member proposes to discuss the point of order under consideration he is in order.

Mr. ARMAND LAVERGNE. Rule number 12 provides:

> A member called to order shall sit down, but may afterwards explain. The House, if appealed to, shall decide on the case, but without debate. If there be no appeal, the decision of the Chair shall be final.

My hon. friend from Labelle appealed from the decision of the Chair that there should be no debate, and that the House should decide immediately.

Mr. SPEAKER. There has been no definite ruling yet and until the ruling is given of course, there can be no appeal from it.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words on your ruling. The usual and what I regard as the proper custom is that when the Speaker gives a ruling the rule under which he gives it should be read to the House which was not done on this occasion. Bourinot, speaking of the right of the House, to consider a question after it has once been dealt with, uses the following language:

> It is, however, an ancient rule of parliament that 'no question or motion can regularly be offered if it is substantially the same with one on which the judgment of the House has already been expressed during the current session.'

The question is whether this is substantially the same motion that was decided the other day or not. If I understand it correctly, the first motion was to the effect that the government should appoint a Committee of Inquiry so that the allegations or insinuations which were made might be investigated. This House decided that such a committee should not be appointed and therefore that might fairly be taken as the judgment of the House. Then, the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) says: In view of that decision I move that the hon. member who made or insinuated these charges be called upon to name the parties to whom he referred or to withdraw his statement. It seems to me that this is substantially different from the other motion, and therefore I think the hon. member is quite within his rights and within the rules of the House in proposing the motion which he has presented.

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). Mr. Speaker, as I have been appealed to, to express my opinion upon this question I have only to say that I consider it my duty as the leader of the House always to support the chair, and that is a rule that I would not vary under any circumstances unless, in my judgment, the ruling of the Speaker were grossly wrong. There is a good deal to be said, not as to the technical meaning of the rule, which is quite clear, but as to the ultimate effect of it. The Speaker has taken it upon himself to maintain what he considers to be the traditions and rules of the House. These rules are not the result of a momentary impulse; they are the result of long experience applied to an assembly which has proved to be the wisest of all deliberative assemblies. I think we can never err in applying these rules. If the object of the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) is to clear the atmosphere of the House, there are cases and cases showing how this is to be done. The House has affirmed, and it is also the rule of the House which has come to us from the mother of parliaments, that the conduct or standing of any member of this House cannot be impugned except upon cause being shown and until a member rises in his place in the House and says: I have reason to believe and I can prove such and such a thing against a member. Otherwise there is no occasion to go into this general inquisition which is proposed by the hon. member for Labelle. Under such circumstances it seems to me that the course taken by the Speaker is the correct one and we have nothing to do but stand by the ruling of the Chair. If, at a later period, the hon. member for Labelle or anybody else, thinks there is in this House any member who ought not to be a member of it, who has disgraced himself, or whose conduct ought to be investigated, it is open to him to demand such an investigation, but the House, I hope will not depart from the sound traditions which have come to us from England and according to which there could be no inquisition into any man's conduct or standing except on charges made specifically. If, unfortunately, there are members of this House who are not fit to be associated with gentlemen, who are not fit to be members of this House, whose conduct ought to be investigated, it must be the painful duty of the House to make such an investigation, but only under the safeguard which has been provided by the House. I think the common sense of the House will not allow a departure from what is a well known law of parliament, or from the rules which would be applied in England, if cases of this kind were to arise, and therefore it seems to me that we have only to maintain the traditions and rules of the House and of parliamentary government. If there are cases which arise and which call for the application of disciplinary measures, I am sure, from experience that we have had not very far back, the House will be equal to the occasion every time.

Mr. BOURASSA. Will the right hon. gentleman allow me to put a question to him? I would like to ask where, in this motion that I have given notice of, there is one word indicating that I want an inquisition. The remarks of the right hon. gentleman might apply to the motion I made the other day but there is not a word in this motion asking for an inquisition into the character of anybody. It is simply asking that the general statement of the hon. member for King's, N.B. (Mr. Fowler) should be made definite. There is not a word as to an inquisition or a Committee of Inquiry.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No, there is not a word as to an inquisition, but if the motion means anything it leads to an inquisition.

Mr. BOURASSA. It leads to the hon. member for King's being called upon to define the charges or withdraw them.

Mr. SPEAKER. Having heard the discussion upon the question I am more than ever confirmed in the view that the ruling is a proper one and I therefore rule the motion out of order.

Mr. BOURASSA. Therefore, as I stated a moment ago, and with all respect for your decision, I appeal to the House from your decision.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No, the hon. gentleman stated a moment ago that he did not appeal on the question of order, but on the question of principle.

Mr. BOURASSA. I stated that I did not appeal against the ruling of the Speaker, in regard to the general principle, but on the ground that the general principle does not apply under the circumstances because the question that I raise, is a question of privilege, which was not dealt with by the House at all in the discussion that took place on the motion I presented to the House some days ago. I appeal against the decision of the Speaker, not on the question of principle, but against the application of the principle.

Mr. SPEAKER. Do I understand the hon. gentleman to appeal on the ground that the ruling of the Chair is wrong?

Mr. BOURASSA. Yes, under the circumstances.

Mr. SPEAKER. The motion of Mr. Bourassa is as follows:

That on February 19 last, the hon. member for King's, N.S. (Mr. Fowler), stated: 'I shall discuss the character of hon. members opposite whether they be ministers or private members, and their connection with women, wine and graft';

That the hon. member stated further that he had 'data' and 'material' at his disposal with respect to his charges;

That such a statement, undefined as it is with regard to the parties concerned, reflects on the honour of the House and of the government;

That the hon. member of King's be therefore invited, either to name the ministers and members of the House to whom he was referring on February 19, and to specify his charges against them, or to withdraw his accusation;

That unless the hon. member complies with that request and adopts one of those two courses, he stands censured by this House.

The Chair rules that this motion is out of order because the subject matter to which it refers has already been dealt with, discussed and decided upon by the House. In the course of the debate reference has also been made to the fact that, according to the rule, the words complained of, having not been taken down at the time they were uttered, they could not now be taken as a basis for a motion of censure.

The question now is: Shall the decision of the Speaker be sustained by the House?

House divided on the question.

Motion that the ruling of the chair be sustained agreed to.

Mr BERGERON. I desire to say that I am paired with the Postmaster General. Had I voted I would have voted nay.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton, Ont.) Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called, I wish, as a matter of privilege, to allude to an incident which occurred yesterday. When the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals, (Mr. Emmerson) was speaking on the question of his resignation, I did not think that was the proper time to call attention to certain language uttered by him, and which, however, I noted at the time. I regret that the hon. member for Westmoreland is not in his place now, but I shall take the opportunity of alluding to the matter again when he is present? The words of the hon. gentleman to which I refer are set forth in the unrevised 'Hansard' page 5690 and are as follows:

I will be here to declare that, if political warfare is to be carried on with weapons from the gutter of slander and personal gossip—if the political warfare of Canada is to be degraded to that level—those on this side of your chair, Mr. Speaker, will not alone suffer in that warfare. And, if the country would know the facts; if the public press—which has had detectives on my track and on the track of other ministers of the Crown seeking out matters that are of private moment—would know the facts, the employment of detectives is necessary as aginst those on this side, but, without stooping to secure evidence in that way, there is evidence in existence against others, evdience that has not been purchased, evidence that will be strong, powerful, cogent. And if the great public press of Canada and the people of Canada want that evidence, it is within their grasp; it is within the grasp of this House; it is within the grasp of the country.

Now, the language of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Emmerson) is not very definite but it is definite enough to cast aspersion upon some 70 or 75 members on this side of the House. I desire to say that the hon. member for Westmoreland has said either too much or too little, and I desire to say further to him, that I think it is his duty either to say more or to withdraw what he has said. I desire to say now, and I shall take opportunity to say it in his presence that if he has any charge or any evidence to sustain any charge against the honour or status as a public man of any gentleman on this side of the House, I will give him every assistance within my power to press that charge. I think it necessary to say this much at the present moment. I have not the slightest conception of what the hon. member for Westmoreland has alluded to. If there be any such charges, or even rumours connected with the name of any gentleman on this side of the House, they have not come to my ears. If the hon. member for Westmoreland has anything which will enable him to substantiate that which he has said by way of insinuation in this House, I trust he will take an opportunity to make good his insinuation.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The observations which we have just heard from the leader of the opposition show conclusively the wisdom of the ruling of Mr. Speaker and which the House has just sustained; that is to say, that language which is out of order should be taken notice of at once, the words recorded, and then the member using the language can be called to account for it. But, if the House allows these words to be passed over, they should not be referred to afterwards, as has been ruled by Mr. Speaker, and sustained by the House, and properly so.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. So far as I am concerned I do not agree with that view, when we have a revised 'Hansard' and when the words imply a charge against a member on either one side of the House or the other. I think that rule is altogether too technical to be applied when dealing with matters which concern the honour of this House. It is not only members of this House who are concerned, but we are having suggestions of this kind throughout the public press of this country. In a journal of this country which has a large circulation, it was stated only the other day:

That there is an organized understanding between certain members of both sides to hush up the business; and, worse than this, there is a determined effort on the part of some members on one side of the House to threaten members on the other side with contrary exposures if any are made against their friends.

I desire to say from my place in the House that I have not heard of nor do I know of any such understanding, and if it were brought to my attention I would not sanction it. I believe that these words are absolutely untrue so far as the members of this House are concerned. I have not heard of any such understanding. If there be any evidence to sustain such a charge within the knowledge of the public journal to which I have referred, it seems to me proper to have that charge brought to the attention of the House in the proper way, and that the hon. member of this House who is said to be closely connected with that journal should stand up in his place and make his statement to the House himself, and not repeat it outside of the House in that public journal. That would be the fair way, and the manly way, and the proper way to deal with this matter. I for one protest against these insinuations inside the House or outside of the House against the honour of parliament, and I am prepared to go to the utmost limit of parliamentary usage, or even to go beyond parliamentary usage, in order that men, either within the House or out of the House, who are making insinuations of this kind may be brought up before a tribunal, and asked to make good their charges or forever after to hold their peace.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I think that the editor, proprietor, or manager of the journal referred to should be brought to the bar of the House and asked to explain.

Some hon. MEMBERS. What journal is it ?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I do not know, I am sure.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There is a well known rule of the House, which, if any person transgresses, he may be brought to the bar of the House and made amenable for his conduct. We had a case of that before us last year, and the rule can be called into operation at any time. But, with regard to what transpires in this House, the rule which has come to us is a sound one, and it is, that offensive words should be taken notice of at once, and that if not taken notice of immediately they should not be recalled afterwards. That is the rule which has come to us from the British practice and I think it is a perfectly sound one. What takes place in this House every session shows how sound the rule is.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I could understand the wholesome nature of that rule at a time when the debates of the House were not reported. It is of course a rule technically still in force. I would not be inclined—and I say this with all deference and respect to the opinion of the Prime Minister, who has had greater parliamentary experience than I have had—I would not be inclined to attach very much importance to the circumstance that the words were not technically taken down, when we have a 'Hansard' reporting the utterance of each member, and a 'Hansard' which each member has the opportunity of revising. I think that old rule to a certain extent, to a very great extent, lost its usefulness since 'Hansard' was introduced.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. That we have a 'Hansard' does not alter the fact that the rule is in existence, and it is a sound one. We know that words are spoken in the heat of debate which should not be uttered, and these are the words which are to not be taken down at the moment. Sometimes they are not taken notice of because the House does not think it worth while to order that they should be or for some other reason ; but the rule is there and it is a proper rule. As to revising 'Hansard,' no member has a right to alter what he has said on the floor of this House.

Mr. BERGERON. But they do.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Then it is against the rule if they do so, and the rule ought to be enforced, and if the hon. member (Mr. Bergeron) brings it to the attention of the House it will be enforced. No member has a right to change what he says on the floor of the House; he can revise a clerical error but he cannot alter the substance of his speech.

WINNIPEG TERMINALS—CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY AND GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILWAY.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Acting Minister of Railways and Canals) moved third reading of Bill (No. 128) respecting the Winnipeg Terminals of the Canadian Northern Railway Company and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. There was a promise given the other day that the plans of the terminals should be brought down.

Mr. FIELDING. I understand they have not been brought down.

Mr. FOSTER. My colleague the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Haggart) wished to see these plans, and as he is not here just now I would ask that this order be allowed to stand.

Mr. FIELDING. Very well ; I will see the hon. gentleman (Mr. Haggart) before I move again.

REPRESENTATION OF SASKATCHEWAN AND ALBERTA.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved that the House go into committee on Bill (No. 51) to readjust the representation of the province of Saskatchewan and Alberta in the House of Commons, and to amend the Representation Act. He said: This Bill was introduced according to the provisions of the Act creating the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan and it was referred to a special committee of five members to delimit the constituencies for representation in this House, to which each province is entitled. I am glad to say that the members of the committee have made a unanimous report and have given an example which is worth following, when, at a later period, after the census, we have to recast the boundaries of the constituencies in the other provinces. The members in this House from the new provinces, to whom this Bill was referred, have I repeat given a most notable example, and one which is worthy of imitation. I do not know what their deliberations have been, but they have no doubt adopted the policy of mutual forbearance and mutual concession, and they have made a unanimous report to the House. It is therefore my duty simply to move that the report of that special committee be adopted, and made part of the Bill.

Mr. R. S. LAKE (Qu'Appelle). Mr. Speaker, in view of the stress which has been laid by the Prime Minister upon the unanimity of the report, and in view of the great stress which has been laid by the public press of the country on that fact, I think it is just as well that I should say a few words on this subject lest there should be some misunderstanding. Especially do I wish to do so as there are certain features in this redistribution which are certain to call for considerable comment in the western provinces. For instance, there is a very uneven distribution of population, especially in the province of Saskatchewan. I may say that the committee was composed of three gentlemen supporting the government and two to occupy seats on this side of the House. The two Conservative members would certainly have wished for very considerable changes in the distribution which has been suggested in the report of the committee, and they urged such changes ; but after a fairly full discussion, and in view of all the circumstances and of the attitude which was taken by their Liberal colleagues, they considered that they would be scarcely justified in bringing their differences of opinion before this House and throwing the whole matter into the full committee of the House. especially after they came to the conclusion that their Liberal colleagues on the committee were not likely to give way on the points which the Conservative members raised. In my view, the principal gain which can be looked for from arranging a redistribution by parliamentary committee is that discussion can take place amongst a few members each of whom probably represents the views prevailing on his side of the House, and the matter can be fully threshed out without taking up the time of parliament. I do not wish to suggest that there is any more likelihood of the views of either party being absolutely met in a parliamentary committee than there is in the House ; but there is more opportunity for give and take, and I am willing to admit that there was a certain amount of give and take in this particular case. At the same time, to my mind the only really satisfactory method of distribution of constituencies would be by a judicial commission. That is a view which I hold now even more strongly than I did when the question was up in connection with the distribution of the constituencies in the two new provinces under the Autonomy Bills. To deal with the Bill at issue, when the committee met for the first time, proposals were brought down by the government members, as would no doubt have been done in Committee of the Whole House, and they made it pretty clear that while they would be willing to accept some slight modifications in the plan they proposed, the general scheme would have to stand as it was. Now, I frankly acknowledge that the proposals were based on the same principle on which I should have made my own proposals. I believe they were based on a correct principle, that is, that the convenience of the people in the Northwest should first of all be consulted—that the constituencies should be mapped out in such a way that if possible there should be railway communication between the various parts of those constituencies. I thoroughly agree with that part of their proposals. But it was in the working out of the details that considerable differences of opinion arose. With regard to the province of Saskatchewan, my view was that there was too much discrepancy between the populations of the southern constituencies and those of the northern constituencies ; that is to say, that the representation given to the northern parts of the province, where the scandals recently occurred in connection with the provincial elections, was unduly great, and I proposed certain modifications in the general scheme, which I think would have evened up these matters considerably and would have left the smallest constituency with a population of about 22,000 and the largest with a population of a little over 30,000. But these suggestions, in the whole, were not acceptable by the committee, though I must admit that some of them were accepted. The concessions both in Saskatchewan and Alberta were sufficient, in the minds of my Conservative colleague and myself, to justify us in the course we adopted, that is in bringing in no minority report, but agreeing to allow the report which has been brought down to be laid before this House as a report of the committee. I may say further that I consider the distribution which has been brought down an immense improvement upon the distribution which was made of the local constituencies of the two new provinces in the year 1905; and I will pay this tribute to our colleagues, that I think they have worked on the right lines, that their proposals were fairly and honourably put before the committee, and that they were willing to make some concessions to our views. I do not wish it to go forth to the world, however, that the Conservative members on that committee are satisfied with the distribution which has been brought down, though we know in a matter of this kind there must be some give and take.

Mr. J. G. TURRIFF (East Assiniboia). Mr. Speaker, there is practically nothing in the remarks of the hon. gentleman to which I can take any exception. The Liberal members of the committee discussed the matter with the hon. gentleman and his colleague and we thought that was the best way for us to make the proposition. We agreed that when that proposition was brought down we would allow whatever length of time they desired to elapse before calling the next meeting of the committee. We brought down the proposed redistribution and the whole object we had in view was to endeavour to outline the constituencies in such a way as to make them run more with the lines of railway so that there would be a community of interest all through the same constituency and not as it is at present where we have constituencies with several lines of railway running across them and one part of a constituency has no connection with another. We brought down what we thought was a fair and reasonable proposition, and after it had been looked into for a week or so our friends on the other side of the House brought forward some suggestions as to improvements. I am bound to admit that they brought them forward in a fair and reasonable spirit and as far as I could see on neither side of the committee was there the slightest effort made to obtain any political advantage. One very good reason for that is that in that country it would be a very difficult matter to say what the political advantage would be because when the constituencies were formed five or six years ago some of them had a small population and that population has doubled and trebled so that no one knows practically what the political aspect of these constituencies will be. The suggestions that the hon. member and his colleague made were fair and reasonable suggestions along the line of making the constituencies better and more workable and as we told them we were prepared to consider them. We adopted several of them and several we were not able to adopt. The result is that we have a redistribution that I think is by all odds the best redistribution we have ever had in the west. While it does not exactly meet the views of our hon. friends opposite it does not meet the views of all the members of the committee on this side of the House either, but taking it all around I think it is a fair and reasonable redistribution and I am very pleased to give credit for the absolute fairness with which the matter was dealt with by members on the other side of the committee.

Motion agreed to, and House went into committee on the Bill.

On section 2,

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Is it necessary to read the schedule ?

Mr. SPROULE. Does the schedule represent the conclusion which the committee reached because in so far as it does not agree with the decision of the committee it would have to be amended. I take it that this is the original Bill that was submitted to the committee and that in some respects they proposed to amend that Bill. In such respects as it is proposed to amend the Bill it will have to be amended there.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The Bill is reprinted as reported by the special committee to which it was referred.

Mr. LAKE. There are one or two verbal mistakes. I do not know that I have noted them all. I do not know whether the chairman of the special committee knows what they are, but unless the constituencies are delimited very carefully there may be trouble. We should have a map showing the different constituencies.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. On the 28th line, page 3, the words 'fourth meridian' should be replaced by the words 'third meridian.'

Mr. TURRIFF. A map was handed to an officer of the Interior Department who is familiar with the surveys, he prepared the schedules and they were checked by the law clerk of the House, but although that was done there were one or two errors that were subsequently discovered and which have been rectified in the copy of the Bill in the hands of the chairman.

Mr. SPROULE. I would respectfully submit that it is very difficult to compare them and be sure that this is correct. It would be well to let the Bill stand for a short time and have a few copies of the map provided, so that members could compare the map with the Bill to ascertain if the Bill is correct because if it is passed it cannot be amended afterwards.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I apprehend that there are few members of this House who would undertake to deal with that matter except the members of the committee themselves. I think we might pass the Bill through committee and reserve the third reading until to-morrow so that the Bill can be looked over by the members of the committee.

Mr. FOSTER. The members of the committee, with the map in their hands, could make a revision of it.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes, so that if there are any errors we can correct them to-morrow before the third reading of the Bill.

Mr. SPROULE. If there was a map available they could compare it with the map.

Mr. TURRIFF. There is a map on the table with the report.

Mr. LAKE. I feel quite sure that there are several amendments to be made to this schedule. I did not expect this Bill to come up and I have not all my papers in my desk.

Progress reported.

YUKON ACT—AMENDMENT.

House in committee on Bill (No. 109) to amend the Yukon Act.—Mr. Oliver.

On section 1,

1. Section 6 of the Yukon Act, chapter 63 of the Revised Statutes, 1906, is amended by adding thereto the following subsection :

2. The Governor in Council may, from time to time, appoint an acting commissioner to execute the office and functions of the commissioner during his absence, illness or other inability.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. When this Bill was up before it was stated that the acting governor had been auditor of the Territory, and I do not think the minister gave a very satisfactory explanation as to who had audited the accounts before, and who was likely to audit the accounts he was making while acting governor. The same man ought not to hold the offices of governor and auditor.

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). I hardly stated the case correctly when I spoke of the acting commissioner as auditor. He is comptroller, not auditor.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. What does that mean?

Mr. OLIVER. It means that he has control especially of the finances of the territory. If it were a responsible government, his position would be that of Minister of Finance. I presume the auditing of the accounts is under his control, just as is the accounting for the expenditure of money.

Mr. SPROULE. Who audits the accounts?

Mr. OLIVER. I may say that I made inquiries, and the information I got was that Mr. Lithgow, Comptroller of the Yukon Territory, is authorized to sign letter-of credit cheques for the Commissioner of the Yukon, and that Mr. G. I. Maclean countersigns with Mr. Lithgow. The accounts received from Dawson have been examined or audited by Mr. Maclean as auditor, and approved by Mr. Lithgow as acting commissioner. In regard to the Yukon Council accounts, they are not received by the Department of the Interior, but are sent direct to the Auditor General. On inquiry it was found they were audited by Mr. Maclean before being sent. Apparently Mr. Maclean is auditor and Mr. Lithgow Minister of Finance, but during the absence of the commissioner Mr. Lithgow acts as commissioner.

Mr. LAKE. Is there any audit of the lump sums placed at the disposal of the Yukon Council? There ought to be an audit of these sums at Ottawa. This government nominates half the members of the Yukon Council and also the chairman of the council, in the person of the commissioner. Therefore, it is the government who are responsible for the expenditure of these sums. But in the Auditor General's account they appear as lump sums granted to the Yukon authorities.

Mr. OLIVER. My information is that these accounts of the Yukon Council are sent direct to the Auditor General, but they are audited in the Yukon by Mr. Maclean and approved by Mr. Lithgow before they come down here to be audited again by the Auditor General.

Mr. LAKE. But the Auditor General does not seem to give any account of the expenditure of these items. There are two large sums granted to the local council, one of $125,000, and another granted to the local council for the maintenance of roads, $100,000. Does any audit of these take place by the Auditor General?

Mr. OLIVER. Of course, I cannot answer for any supposed dereliction on the part of the Auditor General. My information is that the accounts are audited locally and are sent to the Auditor General. If the Auditor General does not audit them, that does not come within my control.

Mr. FOSTER. It is his duty to audit them, is it not?

Mr. OLIVER. Very likely. They are there for his audit. Being independent of the control of the government, he may audit them or not, and he may account for them in one way or in another way—I know nothing about that.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Who audits the accounts in connection with the royalties charged on the gold output?

Mr. OLIVER. That, I take it, is a collection by the Dominion government and is audited by Mr. G. I. Maclean, who is auditor of both the local and Dominion governments.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Has the minister any record of how the output compares with the amount of royalties levied? In other words, do the accounts tally, or is there a shortage in the royalty?

Mr. OLIVER. Of course the reports must tally—that is, the gold we have knowledge of is that upon which the royalty is collected. And certainly those who act for us are not reporting that gold is passing on which we are entitled to collect royalty which is not collected.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I have reports sent to me of certain resolutions passed at a large public meeting in Dawson, and it is stated that copies of the same were furnished to the First Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver), as well as the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) and some other hon. members on this side. I will take the liberty of placing this before the House and the Minister of the Interior for his consideration:

The accompanying resolutions were passed at a public mass meeting held at Dawson on February 4, 1907.

These resolutions were all passed without a single dissenting voice and the meeting was large and representative, and over one hundred people were unable to obtain admission.

The first resolution speaks for itself, and it is asked that strict orders be issued at once to the other departments than the Interor Department to order public officials to desist from interfering in politics.

The second resolution is for the purpose, if possible, of convincing the public men and press of Canada that the press of Dawson as at present constituted does not represent or reflect or speak for public opinion in the Yukon. This resolution was carefully drawn by the Rev. John Pringle.

The third resolution simply relates to a Yukon organization for the local Yukon elections.

The fourth resolution asks the government to appoint some other commissioner than Lithgow or Mr. McInnes.

Whereas the interference in politics by any person on the pay-roll of the government or any department or official thereof, is not conducive to the best interest of good government and has been condemned by members of the present government publicly ;

And whereas the acting commissioner of the Yukon territory has lately issued written orders to all the employees of the Interior Department to refrain from interfering in Yukon politics ;

And whereas as the action of officials of other departments of the Yukon administration have been and are just as offensive as the actions of Interior departmental officials upon which this order was based ;

Therefore be it resolved that the governmen of Canada be memorialized by the resolutions of this mass meeting of the citizns of the Yukon Territory and requested to have orders issued at once to all the departments of government having officials in the Yukon Territory forbidding any interference in the politics or political parties of the Yukon Territory on the part of any persons on the pay-roll of any department ;

And that copies of this resolution be forwarded to the acting commissioner of the Yukon with a request that he forward the same at once to the government ;

And also to Dr. Alfred Thompson, M.P., with a request that he draw the attention of the House of Commons to the same ;

And that copies be also sent to the Prime Minister of Canada, and to the leader of the opposition in the House of Commons of Canada.

Certified true copy of original passed unanimously.

THOMAS BABCOCK,
Chairman.

Second resolution :

That whereas the press of to-day owes its great power and influence to an implied agreement with the people to deal wtih the news in a truthful and impartial manner ;

And whereas in the Yukon Territory truthfulness and impartiality in conveying the news are more important than they are elsewhere on account of our isolated situation, and because the two newspapers in Dawson are owned and controlled by the same men, who have made a fortune out of the support and patronage of the people of the Yukon ;

And whereas since the amalgamation of the 'News' and 'World' under the same owners the course of these papers has in many instances not been in accordance with truth and fairness ;

And whereas in ignoring and refusing to mention in any way the crowded mass meeting held in the Pioneer Hall on the evening of the McInnes banquet these papers misrepresent the feeling actually existing in the Yukon Territory ;

And whereas in making false statements as to the speeches made and the vote taken at the mass meeting held recently in the A. B. Hall by the promoters of Mr. J. T. Lithgow's campaign for the commissionership, these papers conveyed an altogether erroneous impression to the people of the Yukon not present at the meeting as to the feeling of the meeting regarding the appointment of Mr. J. T. Lithgow to the office of commissioner ;

And whereas in many other matters and on other occasions they have acted rather as the organs of the administration and apologists for its acts than as the advocates of the interests of the people from whom they received their support ;

Therefore be it resolved that this mass meeting of citizens of the Yukon Territory hereby condemns and repudiates the misrepresentations of the newspapers of Dawson ;

And that copies of this resolution with the vote duly certified thereon by the chairman and secretary, be sent to the Prime Minister of Canada, to the leader of the opposition, and to at least five of the newspapers of eastern Canada in order that the people of Canada may know that the people of the Yukon have no independent journal to express their voice and opinions and that the 'World' and 'News' are to all intents and purposes one paper conducted rather for the purpose of earning by subservience a large government subsidy than of presenting the news and advocating the interests of the people.

I hereby certify that the above resolution was duly put before the mass meeting held in the Pioneer Hall on the fourth day of February, 1907, and that the said resolution was disposed of as follows :

For the resolution—the entire meeting.
Against the resolution—not one vote.
And the same was therefore carried.

THOMAS BABCOCK,
Chairman of the said mass meeting

Certified correct,
A. Libby, secretary.

Third resolution :

Resolved that whereas the two-year term of the present elected members of the Yukon council has nearly expired, and another election of members will be held within a short time ;

And whereas under the amendments to the Yukon Council Act much work will have to be performed in the preparaton of the voters' lists ;

And whereas the only organized regular political party at present in the Yukon territory, are the various subdivisons of the Liberal party called locally 'The Steams', 'Tabs' and 'Stabs';

And whereas it is desirable and necessary that candidates be nominated who are not bound to, satisfactory to, or dominated by any section of the Liberal party, or by government officials.

Therefore be it resolved that the chairman of this meeting appoint a committee of seven members including therein the chairman and secretary of this meeting and the duties of and instructions of this committee shall be :

1. To consider the feasibility and desirability of completing some organization of the Yukon people who are not in sympathy with or represented by any of the active and organized political parties or factions in the Yukon to-day, into a party, or political association or club.

2. If such a step is considered advisable to the said committee then this committee to draft a constitution and suggest a name and procedure for the completion of the same.

3. To report all their findings and suggestions in writing to a meeting to be called by them for the consideration of their report which shall be in writing.

Certified true copy of original as passed unanimously.

THOMAS BABCOCK,
Chairman.

Fourth resolution :

That this meeting reiterates the expression given at the mass meeting held by the promoters of Mr. J. T. Lithgow's campaign for the commissionership in the A. B. Hall, and which was so misreported in the press of Dawson, and we again say that the appointment of Mr. J. T. Lithgow we protest against as being but a continuation of the unfortunate and unhappy McInnes regime ;

And this meeting memorializes the government to assume the responsibility for appointing a man for the position of commissionership who will not follow the precedents and course of action set up by W. W. B. McInnes, whose chief source of praise is the purchased eulogies of the traitorous newspaper the Dawson 'Daily News.'

Certified true copy of resolution as originally passed.

THOMAS BABCOCK,
Chairman.

These are the resolutions that were passed. Now I have a few words that were submitted to me in connection with the royalty, which I believe will prove of interest to the minister :

ROYALTY UPON OUTPUT.

According to the rates chargeable, and the output of gold in official documents, the royalty up to 1905 should, at a fair reasonable computation, amount to $7,116,930. The government accounts only for $3,298,297.26. A deficit of $3,818,633. What has became of this vast sum ? Was it collected from the miner and failed to reach the treasury, or has the government been so criminally negligent as to fail in securing this revenue to the country ?

The output of gold according to official figures, and the returns of royalty, are entirely out of proportion. $114,000,000 of gold and only $3,000,000 of royalty, although the royalty was ten per cent for a large portion of the time, and as high as 20 per cent, and never lower than 2½ per cent.

During a few years there were small amounts exempted. First the man who only produced $2,500 was exempt from royalty, and afterwards this figure was increased to $5,000. As ten per cent it would require $38,000,000 of output in small exemptions, and at 5 per cent it would require $76,000,000 of output in small exemptions to account for the difference in royalty collected and royalty that should be accounted for, viz.: $3,818,000. It is quite obvious the missing millions cannot be accounted for in this manner.

Yukon was discovered in August 1896—on September 11, 1897—ten per cent was charged upon output up to $500 per week, when the output exceeded that, twenty per cent was charged.

This rate prevailed until March 5, 1898, when the rate became ten per cent upon all amounts over $2,500, and it remained at that until April 17, 1901.

On April 17, 1901, the rate was made five per cent, and it remained so until May 1, 1902, since which time it has been two and one-half per cent, and it so remains to-day.

On April 25, 1906, a reference to 'Hansard' will show that the Minister of the Interior brought down a return in answer to a question as to what had been the gold output of Yukon to date. He said as follows :

Year.	Gold output.
1897	$ 2,500,000
1898	10,000,000
1899	16,000,000
1900	22,275,000
1901	18,000,000
1902	14,500,000
1903	12,250,000
1904	10,500,000
1905	8,327,200
Total	$114,352,200

Upon June 11, 1906, a reference to 'Hansard' will show, that the Minister of the Interior brought down a return in answer to a question as to what royalty had been collected in Yukon from 1897 until 1905 and the rates charged and, when they became operative.

He said as follows :

1897-1898	$ 273,292 82
1898-1899	588,262 37
1899-1900	730,771 99
1900-1901	592,660 98
1901-1902	331,436 79
1902-1903	302,893 48
1903-1904	272,217 06
1904-1905	206,760 87
Total	$3,298,297 26

The minister also said that the following rates were charged :

September 11, 1897, ten per cent on output up to $500 per week, after that 20 per cent.

March 5, 1898, ten per cent on output, less exemption $2,500.

April 17, 1901, five per cent, less exemption $5,000.

May 1, 1902, two and one-half per cent, no exemption.

From the above it will be clear that the rate charged from 1898—until April 17, 1901—was ten per cent, excepting a proportion charged at 20 per cent, and small sums exempted.

From April 17, 1901, until May 1, 1902, the rate was five per cent, small sums exempted.

From May 1, 1902, to date the rate was 2½ per cent and no exemption.

How does this work out when the figures are applied to the output? Up to April 17, 1901, the rate was 10 per cent, and for a portion of the output 20 per cent, what would the royalty be at 10 per cent up to April 17, 1901?

The government returns show the output up to the year 1900 as $50,775,000 made up as follows:

Year.	Output.
1897	$ 2,500,000
1898	10,000,000
1899	16,000,000
1900	22,275,000
Total to 1900	$50,775,000

Ten per cent on this would mean $5,077,500.

The government returns show the output from April 17, 1901, until May 1, 1902, as $18,000,000, upon which the rate was 5 per cent, or $900,000.

The government returns show the output from May 1, 1902, to 1905, as follows:

Year.	Output.
1902	$14,500,000
1903	12,250,000
1904	10,500,000
1905	8,327,200
Total, 1902 to 1905	$45,577,200

Two and one-half per cent upon this would mean $1,139,430.

Recapitulation.

Output to 1905 .. .. $114,352,200

Royalty upon same, according to the rates given by the government as being in force.

Output.	Rate.	Royalty.
$	Per cent.	$
50,775,000	10	5,077,500 up to April 17, 1901.
18,000,000	5	900,000 up to May 1, 1902.
45,577,200	2½	1,139,430 up to date.
Total 114,352,200	....	7,116,930.

Amount of royalty collected by the government as per return, $3,298,297.26. Amount of royalty unaccounted for, $3,818,633.

During the period of largest output the rate was 10 per cent, and the lower rates of 5 per cent and 2½ per cent apply only to the later years when the output fell off considerably. Up to the year 1901, when the rate was changed from 10 per cent to 5 per cent the output was $33,000,000 greater than during the period of time the rate was 5 per cent, and greater by $5,000,000 than when the rate was 2½ per cent.

During the time the rate was 5 per cent the output was greater by $3,500,000 than any year when the rate was 2½ per cent.

The question that gentlemen in the Yukon and other parts of Canada are asking is who got these millions?

Mr. RALPH SMITH. Who is the author of that document?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Does the hon. gentleman question the figures? It is a matter of no importance who wrote it; I am responsible for it. The hon. gentleman may be aspiring towards the Yukon——

Mr. RALPH SMITH. What has that to do with my question?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What has that to do with the case?

Mr. RALPH SMITH. It is a very reasonable question.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The hon. gentleman has the privilege of rising and pointing out where any statement in this article is erroneous———

Mr. RALPH SMITH. I am not questioning the article.

Mr. SAM HUGHES—and then the House will be obliged, but the mere quibble of asking who the author is, so that some gentleman may be hounded by the minions of this government is something for which I will not be responsible. I assume responsibility for this by reading it here.

The population of the Yukon, I am credibly informed by residents there to-day, including the police and officials and their families, is about 8,000 souls, nearly as large as the population of the town of Lindsay where I have the honour to live, and yet I find that millions of money are blown in upon the management of the government of the Yukon. Thousands and tens of thousands of dollars have been spent on government residences and government buildings. The annual cost of government house alone, counting the salary and expenses and outfit has been between $20,000 and $25,000, not counting the cost of the public building—and all this for a little organization of people not as numerous as the population of any first-class town in Canada.

At one o'clock, committee took recess.

Committee resumed at three o'clock.

Mr. SPROULE. Is the minister going to give no explanation of the indictment contained in the resolutions read by the hon. member for Victoria (Mr. Sam. Hughes), I do not think the minister can afford to allow these allegations to pass in silence.

Mr. OLIVER. I do not understand there were any allegations that require any special answer. I did not gather that there was any reflection on the administration of the Yukon.

Mr. SPROULE. The figures quoted by my hon. friend (Mr. Hughes) show that taking the output of gold, the royalty collected on it should have amounted to a much larger sum than it did.

Mr. OLIVER. I heard no contention raised that any royalty had remained uncollected.

Mr. SPROULE. Based on the figures given by the hon. gentleman, the royalty collected should have been about $7,000,000 whereas it was in fact only about $3,000,000. That requires some explanation.

Mr. OLIVER. I do not hold myself responsible for the figures that appear in the multiplication table; nor can I hold myself responsible for figures which an hon. gentleman may read from any statement. If the hon. gentleman charges that any of the royalty has not been accounted for, it will then be in order to see what foundation there is for the charge.

Mr. SPROULE. It is the duty of this government who are responsible for the administration of the Yukon to explain to the country how there comes to be this apparent deficit of over $3,000,000 in the collection of royalty. As it is now we cannot understand it.

Mr. OLIVER. I hope I am not to be held responsible for the lack of understanding of hon. gentlemen on that side of the House. As I heard the statement read, the law did not provide that the royalty should be collected on all the gold taken out, as there were certain exemptions from the royalty. Until it is known what these exemptions amounted to there cannot be any correct conclusion arrived at.

Mr. FOSTER. The minister does not meet the question as fairly as it ought to be met. We are not at present concerned with the statement read by the member for Victoria (Mr. Sam. Hughes) but we are concerned with the statement made by the minister himself to this House. On April 25, 1906, the minister gave the output of gold for several years down to 1905 at $114,000,000 gross, and on June 11, 1906, he stated that the royalty collected during that same period was $3,298,000. There were some exemptions, but they were not very great, and taking the average percentage of the royalty during the period, the collections showed have totalled nearly $7,000,000. The minister says that $3,200,000 have been collected so that there is a deficit of $3,800,000 to be accounted for. It is the duty of the minister to satisfy the House what became of that $3,800,000, which appears prima facie to be a deficit. We are prepared to admit that there were exemptions, which may explain a certain portion of that amount; but up to this date we have never had a statement from that department, so far as I know, tending to clear up that rather anomalous position of things, which has been commented on in this House, and which was brought to a head last year and the year before, by some investigations made by my hon. friend the leader of the opposition. What I say is that the Department of the Interior should not have waited a single minute after that statement was made, showing that great disparity, before giving to this House through the minister a statement of all that was collected and all that was exempted, in an endeavour to show to the House, what may be absolutely true, that it can all be accounted for. The House has a perfect right to know how that apparent deficiency of $3,800,000 can be explained. It does not seem reasonable that the whole of it went in the small exemptions, because from year to year the operations in the Yukon have been growing larger, while from 1901 there have been, so far as I understand, no exemptions at all. That is the situation today, and it is not a satisfactory situation; and the minister ought not to accuse people on this side of the House with a lack of brains because they ask for an explanation. He ought rather to complain of the lack of business methods in his own department, which has allowed two years to elapse without thinking it worth while to put an exact statement before this House to enable it to look into the facts, a statement which this House has a right to have.

Mr. OLIVER. If my hon. friend wished to be understood as seriously questioning the return, which I did not imagine that he or any other member of the House would do, and he wished to have a proper statement made, it would have been quite in order for him at any time to have moved for a return, instead of taking this opportunity of airing the question in the House. If the hon. gentleman wants the information, he knows how to get it. But I never supposed that my hon. friend was suggesting, either this year or last year, that there was a shortage to the amount of $3,000,000 in the collections of revenue in the Yukon. If there is such a stupendous steal, the greater part of which took place many years ago, my hon. friend and his friends have certainly been remiss in their duty in sitting in this House so long as they have done, and not looking into it. They are waiting long to arrive at a proper understanding of the case. My hon. friend knows, just as well as anybody else, that there might be a hundred million dollars of gold mined in the Yukon, with a royalty of ten per cent against it, and that with an exemption of $5,000 it might not be possible to collect a cent of royalty.

Mr. FOSTER. No, I do not think that is possible practically.

Mr. OLIVER. It is possible, and my hon. friend cannot dispute it.

Mr. FOSTER. I meet my hon. friend there. I will venture this assertion, that under the practice of mining as it has been going on from year to year, it is absolutely impossible for such a thing to have existed. I can quite imagine that if a man figures out the matter mechanically, he can so distribute the production of a hundred million dollars of gold that no man shall produce more than $5,000. But the thing is not done by that kind of mechanical figuring. Men go into the Yukon and produce gold, and it is practically impossible for a hundred millions of gold to be mined as it is mined in the Yukon without a considerable proportion of that being over the $5,000 minimum. It is conceivable, but not practically possible. Am I not right in that ?

Mr. OLIVER. Surely ; my hon. friend is right and I am right. I admit that his contention is right just as he admits that my contention is right. I am not suggesting the condition which I have sketched, and he should not suggest the condition which he has sketched, as a matter of fact. In the conditions of mining, as they prevail in any mining country, where mining is carried on by individual placer mining processes, the chances are that the gold that is mined is distributed in small sums, and not in large sums, so that the greater part of it is not subject to royalty. That is a matter of fact ; there is no question about it. If my hon. friend wants a statement on the subject, going back through all these years, let him move for a return, and it will be brought down.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. A return of what ?

Mr. OLIVER. A return of whatever information there is in the department in regard to it. I may inform the House, however, that it is not the Department of the Interior that has the collection of this royalty, but the Mounted Police.

Mr. FOSTER. The Mounted Police are your officers quoad that.

Mr. OLIVER. No. The royalty is collected by the Mounted Police, and they will be ready no doubt to give the hon. gentleman the information. I cannot answer him off-hand. I never thought of him seriously suggesting, and I do not think he does yet, that there has been any such discrepancy as he mentions. The hon. gentlemen are simply wishing to take up time, and create an impression for which they know there is absolutely no foundation.

Mr. FOSTER. That is entirely gratuitous.

Mr. OLIVER. The thing is so absurd to any person who knows the circumstances that I am sure the hon. gentleman will forgive me in not imagining them to be in earnest in putting forward the statement they did.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The minister deals with this subject very differently from the way he did last year. He then seemed to think it was of sufficient importance to demand an explanation, and I understood, when I brought the matter up myself, that we would have an explanation. He has allowed a year to go by, and now he says the proper persons to obtain the information are the opposition, although he is at the head of the department which can command it.

Mr. OLIVER. I beg pardon ; I am not.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I am not going to quibble about that. He is a member of the government who can command the information and who are responsible for the collection of the royalty. Either the Department of the Interior or the department in control of the Mounted Police kept an account of these exemptions, or they did not. If they kept an account of them, it would be a simple thing for the government to demonstrate by the returns in their possession that the missing sum of $3,800,000 is really due to these exemptions.

If they did not keep any account of these exemptions all I have to say is that there was opportunity for unlimited plunder in the Yukon. There is no doubt about that and we would like very much to know which alternative we are to accept. Was the administration of the Yukon so lax that we have no account at this moment as to what amount of gold was exempted ? If that is the condition of affairs certainly it does no credit to this administration. It is not worth while for the hon. gentleman to say that he does not suppose that any question is raised ; his own figures raised the question. He has raised the question himself by the information he has given to this House and when he asks us to believe that there is no reason for inquiry, he put too great a tax upon the credulity of men on this side of the House. It is impossible to believe that the loss of $3,800,000 of royalty, being the amount of the discrepancy, was due altogether to these exemptions which extended over only a portion of the period in question. I do not believe it and until I am convinced by the returns I am not prepared to believe it. The hon. gentleman either has the information or he has it not ; if he has it let him assure us that the information is in the possession of the government and that it will be produced, and if he has not the information let us know and understand the methods of administration which have prevailed there.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to ask the minister if the government has made any progress in reference to the very important question as to the appointment of a successor to Mr. McInnes, also to what date was Mr. McInnes' salary paid ? Is the acting commissioner getting his own salary plus the salary or a proportion thereof of the commissioner? What is Mr. Congdon doing at the present time? Where is he and what amount of money is he getting?

Mr. OLIVER. I cannot give the date, but Mr. McInnes was paid up to the date of his resignation, which took place some time in January. In regard to the appointment of a successor to Mr. McInnes I may say that that question has not yet been decided but it will be decided very shortly—we hope, in time to enable the new commissioner to take office with the opening of navigation and the opening of the season of business in the Yukon. In regard to the salary of the acting commissioner he does not receive any additional salary because of his additional duties. In regard to Mr. Congdon, his position is that of legal adviser in the Yukon. He is absent from the Yukon and I have recently understood that it is his intention to sever his connection with the government.

Mr. FOSTER. Was he not at one time commissioner?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. What led to his going out?

Mr. OLIVER. He resigned.

Mr. FOSTER. Why did he resign?

Mr. OLIVER. As he immediately afterwards became a candidate for parliament I assume that it was in order that he might become a candidate.

Mr. FOSTER. And after having resigned and becoming a candidate he goes on and becomes legal adviser to the commissioner. He is at the present time in the enjoyment of a salary of $7,000 of the people's money and he has no one to advise, and is out of the country, in Ottawa, as I understand. Does the minister recollect as to whether he has yet made full inquiry into the charge made against Mr. Congdon by a widow lady whose husband died in that section of the country as to the maladministration of the deceased's assets? How has that been settled or has it been settled up to the present time.

Mr. OLIVER. There was a commission appointed to investigate the matter and the commission sat and reported within the last few days. That is as far as the matter has been gone on with.

Mr. FOSTER. Would the minister kindly bring down that report to the House before the estimates are through?

Mr. OLIVER. If it is the desire of the hon. gentleman, certainly.

Mr. FOSTER. The only remark I have to make is that the sooner you get a responsible man and send him out there as a commissioner the better it will be for Canada. The whole matter has been tied up like a little knot and the tying of it up in a knot has not been for the good administration of the government or for the good name of the country. The sooner you untie that knot and get individual responsible men in their proper places each attending to his own business the better it will be. Why is it that when we have a commissionership there we cannot have a man occupying it who has the confidence of the country and who will devote himself to the duties of the office? Of course, the population is small, but the interests are large and the salary that we are paying ought to be sufficient to enable us to demand the services and attendance in that country of the person who holds the office. I propose to take this matter up when we come to the estimates and I would like the minister to have a full statement as to the royalty. I would be very glad if he could show the exemptions and clear up that whole hiatus between $3,200,000 and $7,000,000 which would have been possible had there been no exemptions.

Mr. SPROULE. I understand that it is the government's intention to establish a Department of Mines. Is it a fact that the position of Deputy Minister of Mines has been offered to Mr. McInnes and has he accepted or refused it?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Knowing something about that subject probably I may answer the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule). There is no truth whatever in the newspaper report that the position of deputy Minister of Mines has been offered to Mr. W. W. B. McInnes, nor is there any truth even in the suggestion that Mr. McInnes applied for or sought such a position. There are in the department men occupying official positions who would fill such a position if needed, and there is not the slightest foundation for the newspaper reports referred to.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood the hon. Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) to say that this royalty was collected by the mounted police. Is there an inspector of royalties in that country, and if so who has filled that office for some years past and who has been collecting the royalty?

Mr. OLIVER. The mounted police department collect the royalty. I cannot answer as to who has been actually collecting it but I presume the officers change from time to time according to circumstances. The officer in charge of the mounted police in the Yukon is Superintendent or Commissioner Wood.

Mr. FOSTER. When they collect it, where do they put it?

Mr. OLIVER. I cannot answer that at the moment but I will have the information. While the royalty collected is a very definite amount and of course must bear a certain percentage to the amount of gold of which the mounted police have taken cognizance, the figures which I gave the House are not figures of established accuracy as to the total production of gold. I think the figures which I presented to the House on the occasion referred to by my hon. friend—or, certainly, on some occasion, for I remember giving the figures—were received from the Geological Survey Department. And I remember that there was a discrepancy between the estimate of the Geological Survey Department, and—I think—the Interior Department. The figures given as to the total output of gold, are estimates, while the collection of the royalty is an actual amount. There is all the difference between an estimate and an established or known amount. When my hon friend receives the figures asked for and showing both the amount of gold and of royalty paid and the amount of exemption, he may find a very great discrepancy between these figures and the estimated product of the mines.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not want that.

Mr. OLIVER. But these are the figures which my hon. friends have been using before the House to-day, they have been comparing the estimated output of the mines with the royalty collected.

Mr. FOSTER. Estimated by whom?

Mr. OLIVER. In this case, estimated by the Geological Survey Department. But the same would apply to any other estimate. Of course, in case of a discrepancy, it is a possible thing that the royalty may be wrong, but it is more likely that the estimate is wrong. But that is a point which, in the nature of things, cannot be absolutely established with any means in our control.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That would depend upon the way it was done, and whether there was a record kept of the exemptions and the practical working of the system. If the department kept a record of the exemptions, and of the royalties, they would have a complete return of the total output. Has no record of the exemptions been kept?

Mr. OLIVER. If you have a record of the exemptions and of the royalty, you have an accurate knowledge of the amount of gold that has come within the range of vision of the authorities. But that is not an absolute guide as to the estimate of the total production of gold which may be made, let us say, by the officers of the Geological Survey Department or by the collection of information from mercantile establishments, banks or other sources of information. Now, my hon. friend is making comparison of the amount collected and the estimated output without taking into account the amount of exemptions. Of course, if they consider the matter, they will see that there is no reasonable ground for the assumption that there has been a shortage in the payments of royalty on the returns they have before them. In regard to the return of which my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) spoke—as to an investigation,—does he wish to have the evidence, or merely the report? The evidence is pretty lengthy, and of course, the preparation of it would mean some delay, whereas the report can be furnished in a short time.

Mr. FOSTER. Bring down the report first, and then we will see. And there is one other point to be mentioned before the estimates come up, with a view to facilitating the discussion of them. I find in the Auditor General's Report—beginning page L—39—an itemized statement until you come down to two items as follows:

Grants, $225,000.

Grant to local council..	$125,000
Grant to local council for maintenance and repairs to roads.	100,000

But no items of these grants are given. That would indicate either that our Auditor General considers that he has no right to audit these expenditures—which I scarcely think probable—or that for some other reason he has not audited them. Would the minister please find out, for the information of the House whether these vouchers audited passed by the Yukon Council through their auditor, Mr. Maclean, are audited by the Auditor General here?

Mr. OLIVER. The point was raised by my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule), and the information I have is that the accounts of the Yukon Council are not referred to the Department of the Interior, but are sent direct to the Auditor General. These are first audited by Mr. G. Maclean and approved by Mr. Lithgow, as acting commissioner. I assume that the Auditor General has not seen fit to specify the items in his report——

Mr. FOSTER. But may have audited them?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes, I suppose that is it. The accounts are available for his audit.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to be particular about that.

Mr. SPROULE. As to this royalty on the output of gold, the information we now have is that the statement of the output was an estimate. But, it was given by the minister himself, and I understood that it was a matter of record, and certainly the House wanted to know the facts. There must be—certainly there ought to be—some kind of bookkeeping in connection with the collection of royalty. A man presents himself for the payment of royalty. He must satisfy the officer before whom he appears that his production of gold is limited to so much. Of course, he knows the regulation providing for the exemption of a certain amount and he pays royalty on the balance. Is it a fact that no record is kept showing the name of the man paying royalty, the total amount he returns, the amount of exemption and the amount of royalty he pays? If so, what check have the government upon their officials, to know whether they are doing their work faithfully and honestly or otherwise. If the government has that information, it is information to which the House is entitled in view of the heavy expenditures taking place up there which seem to be absolutely unaccountable. We ought to have something to enlighten the House as to whether there is an improper expenditure of money up there, whether there is any proper account kept of it, whether there is any proper bookkeeping, whether any proper returns are made, whether any proper audits are made. Take the case of the auditing in that particular instance. The man who is charged with the expenditure of the money is the auditor of his own accounts. Am I correct in that understanding, that it is the acting commissioner, Mr. Lithgow, who is responsible for ordering the expenditure, and he is also the auditor of his own accounts? Does the minister think that is right? Does he think that is a sufficient check upon the expenditure of public money?

Mr. THOMPSON. I think in the early days there was no account taken of the exemptions. To-day there are no exemptions, but there is a royalty of two and a half cents on every dollar's worth of gold raised. This royalty is collected by the controller at Dawson, through the channel of the Northwest Mounted Police. The Northwest Mounted Police have men stationed at the ports of exit who examine the passengers to see that no gold is taken out of the territory except that for which a certificate has been given by the controller of the territory, showing that the royalty has been collected upon it. The passenger must have a certificate or else the gold found on his person is confiscated and not returned. So there is now an exact accounting of the amount of gold raised per annum in the Yukon.

Mr. FOSTER. Is not each producer bound to make a return to the government?

Mr. THOMPSON. No. Comparatively few of the producers to-day make a return. To-day the amount is ascertained by the Bank of Commerce or the Bank of British North America, who buy the gold from the miners, or the trading companies buy this gold, and when they ship it out it is weighed by the controller and a certificate is given for the royalty paid. The box is sealed and it passes the inspection of the Northwest Mounted Police.

Mr. FOSTER. Then the only real check is at the frontier?

Mr. SPROULE.

Mr. THOMPSON. The first check is at the frontier. If the royalty is not paid the gold is confiscated. Then to make that check complete the Northwest Mounted Police search every one, practically. They even have a female searcher to search the women going out of the Yukon at Forty Mile and going up the Yukon at Whitehorse, going towards Skagway at the British Columbia boundary. In early years it was hardly possible to get an accurate account, to-day an accurate account can be obtained.

Mr. SPROULE. Then what check have the government had on their officials out there? According to that statement, none whatever. We do not know whether any books are kept or not. If there is no check, it verifies what we have often been told, that the collector of the royalty out there had it in his own hands to allow parties to go free with a payment on a fraction of the output of gold. If he was paid a consideration, the miner could always get off favourably with regard to his royalty. That has been stated over and over again. I think the government ought to be able to tell us who collected this royalty year after year. They must have some return of it. I have heard it said before a number of people that one J. D. McGregor, whom we have heard of before in this House, was collector of this royalty for a length of time. Could the minister say whether that is the case?

Mr. OLIVER. I could not inform the House on that point. I could find out though.

Mr. SPROULE. He was reputed to be the inspector, if not the collector, and I have heard he was both. Whether it be a fact or otherwise, it was stated repeatedly that in every one of his transactions there was a rake-off taken for himself or his friends, and the miner was allowed to go by paying much less royalty than he was entitled to pay. That is the allegation; I do not know whether it is correct or not. But I am endeavouring to ascertain whether it is possible for such a thing to take place without the government having any knowledge of it. There appears to have been some reason for the strong suspicion that exists up there that there was dishonesty at the bottom, and that there were good grounds for many of the allegations that the Yukon Territory was one great source of profit and wealth to friends of the government, if not members of the government, for many years.

Mr. OLIVER. I do not know what the object is in prolonging the discussion of this matter.

Mr. SPROULE. The object is to get information.

Mr. OLIVER. Well, my hon. friend has been a member of this House ever since the Yukon has been discovered. Mr. J. D. McGregor has not been a resident of the Yukon, so far as I am aware, for a number of years. If he stole anything in the Yukon it was a good many years ago when my hon. friend was a member of this House, and if he heard these allegations against McGregor at that time he should have spoken on the subject and demanded an investigation.

Mr. SPROULE. I have heard of them since.

Mr. OLIVER. Then I would submit to the hon. gentleman that an allegation so serious as that of what took place years ago is scarcely one that he is justified in bringing up now. The conditions we have to-day are not the same as they were years ago. To-day the royalty is collected, as my hon. friend from the Yukon (Mr. Thompson) has pointed out, at the outlets of the country by the Northwest Mounted Police. If my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) has any allegations to make against any members of officers of the force in the Yukon we will promise him an opportunity to make them good, and to demonstrate that matters are not going on as they should. It is an outrageous proposition that the attention of the House and of the country should be called to a condition of affairs that existed five or ten years ago without the information that it did exist five or ten years ago instead of to-day. Let us consider the condition as it is to-day. If my hon. friend failed of his duty five or ten years ago that is no reason why he should throw foundationless allegations against honest men who are honestly administering the affairs of the territory to-day.

Mr. SPROULE. How do you know they are foundationless ?

Mr. OLIVER. I say they are foundationless as far as to-day is concerned. My hon. friend is in a position to take his stand on it if he likes, but for him to bring up a condition which he alleges existed five or ten years ago, of which it is impossible now to prove the truth or falsity is, I say, an outrage and a breach of parliamentary privilege.

Mr. SPROULE. How long is it since the royalty system was changed ?

Mr. OLIVER. I could not say.

Mr. SPROULE. And he is at the head of the department and charges me with making charges relating to conditions five or ten years ago when there was a royalty on a portion of the output. If I understood the hon. member it was only last year that the system was changed.

Mr. THOMPSON. It was changed, I think, in 1904.

Mr. OLIVER. There has been no change since I became minister.

Mr. SPROULE. We have tried year after year to get information but the government refused to give it to the House. We have moved for returns that were not brought down in months or years ; it was like drawing teeth to get any information. Are these charges foundationless or not ? I do not say they are correct, but I say that the circumstances justify us in reaching the conclusion that there might be a great deal of truth in them. We know from information that Mr. McGregor left Brandon a very poor man, a horse dealer, which is a respectable business, but a man very much in debt and that in a few years he returned, paid his debts and is wealthy to-day. Where did he make the money? Was it out of his salary ? Am I justified in reaching the conclusion that he did not make it out of his salary and that grave suspicions that there may be some truth in the charges are justified ? We wish to find out whether there is such laxity of management that it is possible for an official to make away with what belongs to the country. When we do that we are upbraided and told : Make your charges. We, as an opposition, are honestly trying to get information from the very men who should desire to give that information if they are doing what is right, but instead of that they withhold that information and throw across challenges of : Make your charges. We are perfectly within our rights ; I know my rights and I shall avail myself of them and exercise them to any extent I desire, regardless of the feelings of the Minister of the Interior or of his sneering insinuation : Make your charges.

Mr. OLIVER. The position taken by my hon. friend is fairly representative of his general attitude since we have had the honour of his acquaintance in the House. He chooses to abuse his position in parliament for the purpose of making what I claim to be unfounded charges against private individuals, in regard to matters that occurred years and years ago.

Mr. SPROULE. To what private individuals does he refer ?

Mr. OLIVER. The hon. member charges that J. D. McGregor who was a horse dealer in Brandon, had gone to the Yukon, had acted there as an official of this government——

Mr. SPROULE. Was he a private individual then ?

Mr. OLIVER. He is now.

Mr. SPROULE. He was then an official.

Mr. OLIVER. He is a private individual to-day and the hon. member of East Grey (Mr. Sproule) practically accuses Mr. McGregor of stealing from this country. I say that is an abuse of the privilege of parliament, I say it is an outrage. If my hon. friend has anything to say against any of the officials in the Yukon to-day that is his privilege, but he does not dare to do it.

Mr. SPROULE. If he steals millions of money out of the Interior Department to-day and chooses to get out of the country and become again a private individual, is he exempt then and have I no right to refer to the theft ?

Mr. OLIVER. Certainly my hon. friend has a perfect right to do it. If Mr. McGregor is guilty of stealing from this government that is a crime for which he can be punished in the courts of law, and if my hon. friend supposes that Mr. McGregor was so guilty it is for him or his friends to take their remedy against him, and not abuse the privilege of parliament by smirching the name of a gentleman who is an honourable man so far as this country knows at the present time.

Mr. SPROULE. It is the Minister of the Interior and the government we hold responsible, not J. D. McGregor. We are not private prosecutors, we hold the government and the man at the head of that department responsible for it. We shall continue to hold him responsible for it ; it is his duty to clear the skirts of his officials of these charges if they are not correct and to give the House such information as will enable the House to understand whether they are or are not correct. If he refuses to give that information and falls back upon, I was going to say the flimsy pretext that it is the right of every man to become a private prosecutor if he desires and institute a prosecution, he surely will not claim that that is sufficient to exonerate the department from the charges of want of intelligent business management, and from giving the House information as to its affairs.

Mr. OLIVER. I want to deny here and now in the hearing of this House, that there has ever been any attempt to deprive the House of information. The department of which I have control has given this House all the information that has ever been asked for——

Mr. FOSTER. How about the directors of the North Atlantic Trading Company ?

Mr. OLIVER—as quickly as it could be given. Whatever action was taken by the department in the case of the North Atlantic Trading Company was supported by the House and the department was relieved of responsibility in that matter by the House. So far as this department is concerned, I absolutely deny and challenge the statement on the part of any responsible member of the House that there has been any withholding of information asked by the House. I have said that the information asked for in regard to the gold royalty could have been obtained by hon. gentlemen at any time long ago if they had moved for a return, but the matter is not under the control of my department and I was not able to give them the information as a departmental matter ; but if they wanted the information they could have had it. They did not see fit to ask for it in the proper way and they charge the department to-day of withholding information. I want them to understand that the Department of the Interior has nothing to withhold, that whatever is done there is for the light of day and the information of the public as soon as it is asked for.

Mr. SPROULE. The minister is mistaken when he says we could get the information we asked for. Right across the floor of this House I put question after question in regard to the Yukon and desired information when we were voting supplies, and the answer I got back almost invariably was : Don't know, don't know, don't know. Is that giving information? No ; we had to be satisfied with what information we could get, and it did not amount to much. I regret to say that the present Minister of the Interior is no better than his predecessor in that respect.

Mr. THOMPSON. As to the question of the royalty, I wish to say that I have not the slightest doubt that in the early days a great deal of this gold escaped the penalty of royalty, because in those days nothing was required except an affidavit of the producers ; the tax was 10 per cent on every dollar's worth produced over $5,000 from any given claim ; it was an exorbitant and iniquitous tax, and a great many of the people smuggled their gold out of the country. In those days there were no policemen guarding the frontier. If a man who produced a given quantity of gold should choose to swear that the amount he produced was not as large as the actual amount, the officer in charge had nothing to do but accept his statement. To-day it is different. They have machinery in the head office in Dawson for weighing every pennyweight of gold, and there are policemen at the boundary up and down the Yukon to look after smuggling if it should exist. I wish to say, in justice to Mr. Lithgow, who at present presides over the collection of royalty at Dawson, that I am satisfied that every dollar's worth of royalty has been collected by him. Mr. Lithgow is well known to many gentlemen in this House, and I know that in their hearts they will bear me out when I say that he is an honourable man, and that he is doing his whole duty in the matter of the collection of the royalty. I am not speaking by the book, but I am satisfied that Mr. Lithgow has a set of books that will show every dollar's worth of royalty collected. He is an excellent and most reliable official.

From now on it is possible to get an exact account of the gold produced in that country and the royalty collected thereon, but in McGregor's time that was absolutely impossible, for then nothing more than an estimate could be made. I know that in these days gold was smuggled out, because men have told me that rather than pay 10 per cent royalty, they got men to carry the gold down the creeks at night, load it in a boat and take it down the Yukon river to Alaska, where they were out of the reach of the Canadian officials. So far as I am concerned, I know they had sympathy, because the tax was excessive and unjust.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I knew Mr. Lithgow years ago in Halifax, and I am satisfied that any duties he discharges in Dawson will be discharged honestly and efficiently.

Mr. FIELDING. As I have had official relations with Mr. Lithgow for many years, it is due to him that I should say at once that if any inference can be drawn from what my hon. friend from Grey (Mr. Sproule) said to the disadvantage of Mr. Lithgow——

Mr. SPROULE. I did not say anything against him.

Mr. FIELDING. I do not say the hon. gentleman did, but if any inference can possibly be drawn against Mr. Lithgow from his remarks, I would like to join the hon. gentlemen who have spoken in bearing testimony to Mr. Lithgow's competency and efficiency. Mr. Lithgow was an officer of the Finance Department in Halifax, and he was appointed, not by me, but by my predecessor. He has been personally known to me all my life, and I can testify that he is in all respects a capable and efficient officer. Mr. Lithgow was transferred to the Yukon upon my nomination as a gentleman particularly well qualified to deal with the financial affairs of that new country, and I am glad to know that through all the difficulties, and the complaints, and the grievances, that have been heard of in the Yukon, I have had universal testimony as to Mr. Lithgow's high character. I am perfectly satisfied that so far as he has power to deal with these matters, every interest of the Dominion of Canada has been carefully guarded and faithfully served.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I did not understand my hon. friend (Mr. Sproule) as casting any reflection upon Mr. Lithgow in any way; I only desired to corroborate what was said by my hon. friend from the Yukon (Mr. Thompson), who entertains exactly the same opinion of Mr. Lithgow's qualities as I do myself.

Mr. SPROULE. I made no insinuation against Mr. Lithgow as to the collection of the royalty. I did not even know that it was his duty to collect the royalty. The only reference I made to him was to ask the Minister of the Interior if it was a proper system that the man charged with authority to spend the money should be one of the auditors of the expenditure. I made no insinuation against Mr. Lithgow; I only condemned the system.

Mr. FIELDING. That only arises because of his temporary occupancy of the position of commissioner.

Mr. SPROULE. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. On the 25th of April, 1906, the Minister of the Interior, in reply to Mr. Blain, of Peel, stated that the statistics compiled in the Geological Survey gave the value of the gold output. Reading that, one would think that this compilation was the result of an exact accounting, whereas it could have been nothing more than an estimate.

Mr. OLIVER. The Geological Survey had no means of arriving at the figures except on an estimate, more or less correct.

Mr. FOSTER. Do the officers go there and inspect?

Mr. OLIVER. The officers of the Survey engaged in different work through the Yukon acquired the information by such means as they might, and therefore it was only an estimate.

Mr. FOSTER. That is not very satisfactory.

Mr. SPROULE. When I have been discussing the expenditure on the Yukon outside of this House, hon. gentlemen supporting the government have cited these figures and have told me that we got so much cash out of the Yukon, and that we were justified in making a heavy expenditure in return, that it was more than self-supporting. We are now told that this cash which we were supposed to get out of the Yukon was only an estimate, and so it could be made $10,000,000 or $15,000,000 more if it were thought necessary to do so. My complaint is that these figures should have been used as an argument in defence of the government's management of the Yukon, when they are nothing more than an estimate.

Mr. OLIVER. No one is required to accept them as anything else than an estimate.

Mr. SPROULE. But when the friends of the government get on the platform they always state that it represents the actual amount of gold that has come out of the Yukon.

On section 2,

The validity of any appointment of an acting commissioner heretofore assumed to be made by the Governor in Council or the Minister of Interior, or of any instructions herefore assumed to be given by the Governor in Council or the Minister of the Interior to any person to act as or for the commissioner during his absence, illness or other disability, shall not be called in question on the ground that there is no authority in law to make such appointment or give such instructions.

Mr. SPROULE. Does the minister think he is justified in passing such a section? Suppose there should be some heavy lawsuit pending and hundreds of thousands of dollars at stake, are we going to put a man, who has a just claim, out of court by passing such a law as this? Does he think it is a very good principle to legislate in that way?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes. It is for the very reason my hon. friend has stated that the provision has become necessary. The administration has been carried on in the belief that there was full authority for the appointment of an acting commissioner. That seems to be now a matter of question, and this Bill is to put beyond question the legality of the appointment and of the actions which have been taken under it.

Mr. HAGGART. Is there any suit pending in which this is a question ?

Mr. OLIVER. I could not say as to that.

Mr. HAGGART. There should be an exception provided as to lis pendens.

Mr. OLIVER. If there were a suit pending which rested on the opinion that the acting commissioner had not authority, that would be necessary, but there is certainly no suit pending of that kind. The question has not been raised, and we desire to have this legislation before it can be raised.

Mr. SPROULE. I thought the minister said that the question had been raised.

Mr. OLIVER. Not by a suit. The question has been raised by the Department of Justice as to the authority of the acting commissioner, and it is thought well that it should be cured by this provision.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Where legislation of that kind is proposed, it is usual to insert a provision that it shall not apply to pending cases. Under certain conditions an action is brought on a well-founded theory that a certain power does not exist, and in such cases parliament always provides, so far as my experience goes, that ex post facto legislation shall not affect pending suits. This legislation is retroactive. It purports to make that good which was not good, or which may not have been good, and it should exempt matters that are already pending for the decision of the court.

Mr. GALLIHER. Would not that be a case that arose under an established law, in which there might afterwards be some change made? Suits that have arisen under existing law should be exempt; but the suits mentioned would be in a different position, because there is a question whether the parties ever had the authority to enter them.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not so regard it. I have had some experience in connection with legislation of this kind. In a very important action in which I once went into court, when I was proposing to argue the case before the judge of first instance, after a very long trial, I was confronted with a statute passed behind the back of my client about two or three months before, which took away the right of action. I think it is the safest course, when you are proposing to make that good which is not good, to reserve matters that are already in litigation. If you do not go that far, you leave a party in this position, that he has incurred expense, engaged counsel, gone into court, and, after he has done all that, you pass a statute which not only takes away from him the right of action, and subjects him to the costs which he has incurred up to that time, but enables the costs of the other party to be taxed against him. Unless there are very grave reasons for it, I would protest against that kind of legislation. I do not think it is fair or right. I think it better to safeguard the public interests in that way.

Mr. OLIVER. If my hon. friend is content to safeguard an action which rests upon the assumption that the acting commissioner is not legally empowered——

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That is all it could amount to.

Mr. OLIVER. That would be perfectly satisfactory. There are possibly a number of suits already in progress which were entered on the supposition that the acting commissioner had full authority. If by our amendment we declare that he had not full authority, we disarrange the position which those parties understood they held when they entered the suits. If there is a case based on the supposition that the acting commissioner has not authority, it would be quite proper—in fact the only thing to do—to exempt that case.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I think that would be quite satisfactory, so far as I am concerned.

Mr. OLIVER. If my hon. friend considers that essential—though it is not considered essential by the Department of Justice, because we have full knowledge that there is no such case—to safeguard that point, I would hold the Bill and have the Minister of Justice make the provision necessary.

Mr. ALCORN. I understand from the minister's observations that he wishes to guard against the possibility of its being held that certain powers did not exist in time past when certain appointments were made and certain instructions were given. It seems to me that the wording of this section is quite ineffective to carry out that object. The beginning of the section deals with appointments made and instructions given at a time now past. The operative part of the section, line 15 deals entirely with the present. Would it not be necessary to provide that this section is intended to remedy acts which are past and is not to deal with a state of matters which may exist at the present time? That object would appear to me to be effected by striking out the words 'is no' before the word 'authority' on the 5th line, and inserting the words 'when any such appointment was made or such instructions given.'

Mr. OLIVER. The amendment suggested by my hon. friend from Prince Edward County (Mr. Alcorn) would be quite acceptable and would meet the case that has been raised. If it would be agreeable to the committee my hon. friend could move it and we would have it inserted. I think it would be well also to strike out the words 'assumed to be' in the second line and the same words in the fourth line. It seems to me that these words express a doubt that is not at all necessary to the proper operation of the section. If there was any failure it would be cured by the amendment we are now making.

Section as amended agreed to.

Bill reported, read the third time and passed.

EXCHANGE OF CERTAIN LANDS.

Bill (No. 114) to authorize the Exchange of Certain Lands.—Mr. Oliver — read the second time, and House went into committee thereon.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. Minister of the Interior might explain this Bill.

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). This Bill is to provide for an exchange of certain lands. Sections 29 and 11 in every township are set apart to be used for the benefit of the schools of the various provinces. The government has no authority to make any variation in that reservation. If from time to time it is found that such lands are occupied before survey by settlers or by public enterprises and the public interest requires that they shall remain in that possession or occupation it is necessary for parliament to give its sanction to an exchange. In this particular case the Winnipeg Electric Railway Company have certain works established on one of these sections and the desire is to give the government authority to deed the section to the railway company and to select another section for the benefit of the schools elsewhere.

Mr. SPROULE. How did the railway company become possessed of it? Did they not know that it was school land?

Mr. OLIVER. No, they were in occupation before the survey. I will just read a memorandum that I have on the subject:

By order in council of the 22nd January, 1906, the Minister of the Interior was authorized to sell certain lands to the Winnipeg Electric Railway Company and to grant them certain rights and privileges in connection with the development of their water-power on the Pinawa channel of the Winnipeg river for the purpose of furnishing electric power to the city of Winnipeg.

Official surveys had not then been made of all of the townships in which the lands applied for were situated, but the company submitted plans made by their own engineers which indicated the areas required and which it was believed would nearly coincide with the Dominion lands system of surveys. Pending the completion of the official surveys, the conveyance to the company of the lands applied for was postponed. These surveys have now been made, and it is desired to proceed with the sale to the company of the lands referred to. It appears that among the lands applied for, two sections—11 and 29, township 14-12-E.P.M., according to the official surveys—are school lands, and without special authority they cannot therefore be conveyed to the company. These lands are essential to the completion of the development, as the company's canal runs through deep rock cuts on section 11, and there are further rock cuts on the section for carrying flood water from the control dam and returning the flood water to the main river; and the entrance to the control works is also on this section. As these cuttings and works need constant supervision and repair it will also be necessary to maintain a camp on this section for the men engaged in this supervision. Section 29 is subject to overflow from the company's forebay, and it is therefore essential that the company should own that section also.

Mr. FOSTER. How much land was sold to the company?

Mr. OLIVER. I have not a memorandum here and I am unable to answer that question at the moment.

Mr. FOSTER. Does the minister know whether the lands were sold just simply for the building of the canal there or to provide for submergence?

Mr. OLIVER. Partly for both. One section is for the cutting of the canal there and for the control works, and the other is to provide for flooding by the raising of the water. And the land was sold for these two purposes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How does the minister arrive at the price of selling to this company?

Mr. OLIVER. I think the price at which we have sold is $10 per acre.

Mr. FOSTER. How far from Winnipeg ?

Mr. OLIVER. I think about seventy-five miles north-east of Winnipeg. They are on the Winnipeg river between Rat Portage and Lake Winnipeg.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Is it in the Lac du Bonnet region ?

Mr. OLIVER. This Pinawa channel is the back stream which makes the Isle du Bonnet.

Mr. HAGGART. All that the company ought to have is what is reasonably necessary for their undertaking. They ought to have the user of the land required for the cuts and the easement of the quantity necessary for the overflow.

Mr. OLIVER. The information that I have is that all section 29 will be overflowed. It would be rendered useless so far as providing a revenue for the school fund is concerned, and it would be more desirable that other lands should be taken in place of this if the school fund is to benefit. As to the land for the cuts, whatever the company requires may be taken there. But, as the land is rocky and of no value agriculturally, and as the company is desirous, for the reasons set forth in the memorandum, to have not only their cuts there, but to have their control works and supervision, it seemed to me it would be fair to all parties if exchange were permitted to be made.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. And substitute other lands for the school lands ?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Has the minister any idea where he can get such lands ?

Mr. OLIVER. We have an inspector whose business it is to value the lands for sale and make selections in exchange. It will be for him to select such lands as will yield good value to the school fund.

Mr. FOSTER. Lands of at least equal value.

Mr. OLIVER. Of equal value agriculturally. Of course, these lands are of special value to this enterprise. In this respect they could not be duplicated. But I think we should be safe in saying that, in such a case we would require the lands in exchange to be of not only equal value agriculturally but of superior value.

Mr. SPROULE. Would not you require them to be of equal value commercially ? If you sold them, every dollar you received would go into the educational fund ; and so it seems that you should give to that fund dollar for dollar of the value of the land you are taking.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN.

Mr. OLIVER. I think we shall require more. The value of the lands that we give to the electric railway company will, in all probability, not be as great as the value of those we shall get in place of them.

Mr. SPROULE. I thought the minister said that these lands were very valuable to the railway company ?

Mr. OLIVER. For the particular purposes of the company, but not otherwise. The railway company must have access to the water at this place, and, in that view, the lands are of stupendous value. But we do not propose to treat them in that way, because these people were in occupation before the survey was made.

Mr. CONMEE. And, as I understand, if it were not for the works of the country these lands would have no special value ?

Mr. OLIVER. No.

Bill reported, read the third time, and passed.

YUKON PLACER MINING ACT—AMENDMENT.

Bill (No. 135) to amend the Yukon Placer Act—Mr. Oliver—read the second time, and House went into committee thereon.

On section 1,

1. Section 2 of the Yukon Placer Mining Act, chapter 64 of the Revised Statutes, 1906, is amended by adding thereto the following subsection :

4. Nothing in this Act shall prevent the enactment by the Governor in Council of regulations under which dredging leases may be issued of the bed, including the shore not beyond the banks, of any river in the territory.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What is the meaning of this ?

Mr. OLIVER. The committee will remember that, last session, an Act was passed called the Yukon Placer Mining Act to deal with the placer mines in the Yukon. But it did not deal with questions of dredging on rivers in the Yukon. These were left to be the subject of regulation.

Mr. BERGERON. Why ?

Mr. OLIVER. Because the conditions in regard to dredging there are not well established, the work being in an experimental stage. But since last session it was believed that it would be well to make changes in the regulations as they then existed with regard to these dredging leases. When we undertook to draft new regulations we found there was a provision in the Placer Mining Act as it stood in which dredging leases were mentioned, but which confined the operation of the regulations to such as then existed, and did not permit the framing of new regulations. Therefore we have come to parliament and asked for an amendment of the Placer Mining Act in order that we may amend the dredging regulations as they now exist. That is the purpose of the first section of the Act, and it is also dealt with in the third section.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I thought you had power to make regulations about almost everything, under the Act of last year.

Mr. OLIVER. No, the Act provided that it should not apply to dredging regulations as they then existed, and that as we take it, prevents us from amending these regulations unless we amend the Act. We consider that the regulations at present are not satisfactory, we desire to amend them, and we come to parliament for that authority under section 3. Now section 1 is asked for in order to change existing conditions. At the present time the dredge miner is entitled to everything in the bed of the river below high water mark on a certain date in August. As the water is low in August, that leaves a considerable part of the bar between low water in August and the real bank of the river, which is not available to the dredge miner. It seems if you are going to allow dredge mining there is no reason why the dredge miner should not be allowed to take the whole bed of the river, that is, from annual high water to high water. This section 4 is intended to meet that case. Then section 2 is a new provision connected with the Placer Mining Act, brought in at the suggestion of my hon. friend from the Yukon (Mr. Thompson), and is to meet a certain case which is found to have arisen there. A miner only holds his claim from year to year, and he pays what might be called a rental to the government for each year of holding. His time expires, we will say, on August 1, but instead of paying his rental he has an arrangement with a friend, and before his term expires he goes into the gold office and abandons his claim. So he does not have to pay a rental on it for the next year. His friend, knowing the hour at which he is going to abandon his claim in the office, restakes the claim on the ground, and it appears the revenue is in that way to a certain extent defrauded. This provision in section 2, that a claim that is abandoned may not be relocated until ten days after it has been abandoned, is a provision that all the world may know that that claim is going to be open for restaking at a certain time. It meets this private arrangement between two individuals that one shall give up the claim and the other shall stake it.

Section 4 is to cure a difficulty which arises in connection with the passing of the Act last year. It was intended that it should come into force on July 1, but as a matter of fact it did not come into force until August 1. A great many miners' rights expired on July 1, and they having heard that the Act was going to come into force on July 1, did not renew their rights. So from July 1, when the rights expired until August 1, when the Act came into force, under the law as it stood they were without rights. This provision is intended to cure that difficulty where they have not already lost their rights. Unfortunately some people have lost their rights, and we do not propose to interfere in their case. But we do not think that this condition should continue, and we propose to cure the evil, or prevent it from going any further by this provision in section 4.

On section 1,

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would like to know by what authority the Governor in Council is authorized to enact regulations under which dredging leases may be issued. This amendment does not give authority, it merely provides that the Yukon Placer Mining Act shall not prevent regulations. I would like to know under what statute you get that authority, and I would like to know the exact phraseology.

Mr. OLIVER. That authority exists, as I understand it, in the Dominion Lands Act.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. We would like to know what the exact phraseology is.

Mr. OLIVER. I cannot readily turn to it. I am under the impression that it it is contained in some general provision in the Dominion Lands Act.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Would it be section 159 of the Dominion Lands Act ?

Mr. OLIVER. It might be that. I am unable to find any other section. I thought there was something more specific than that but it may be that owing to the revision it was considered that this covers the point. At any rate I am satisfied that it is in the Dominion Lands Act that the authority is contained.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What you wish to do is to get authority to issue dredging leases, which may include the shore but not beyond the banks of any river in that territory.

Mr. OLIVER. At the present time the right of dredging extends only to low water mark, that is to say to the point at which the water of the river stood on the first of August, the period of low water. Between low water and high water in any large stream is the part of a river bed that is most valuable for dredging and it seems unreasonable, if you are to allow dredging on a river, that you should not allow it to be carried on in that part which is most suitable and requisite for dredging operations. We propose to provide that hereafter instead of low water mark the boundary shall be high water mark, and that everything between the actual shores of the river shall be open to the operations of the dredges.

Mr. HAGGART. The object of the regulations before was to reserve these stretches for the benefit of the placer miner, that is the portion of the river between low water mark and high water mark. Why do you allow the dredges to go there?

Mr. OLIVER. Because we believe that the dredge can work that part of the river to better advantage than the individual miner. As a matter of fact in the Yukon the individual miner does not work there, he works outside the river bed or the creek, in the bottom of the valley or in the hillside. The bar diggings are not attractive to the Yukon miner; although of course they are workable by individual miners it is found that the deposit of gold is not rich enough in comparison with the richness of other grounds and it is thought that as that ground can be worked to better advantage by the dredge than by the individual miner, dredging might reasonably be permitted there.

Mr. FOSTER. The objection to this is that it is driving out the individual miner and putting the work into the hands of large capitalists and companies which would not tend to increase population as it is desirable to do in the Yukon. It takes anywhere from $100,000 to $250,000 to put a dredge and workable apparatus on one of these rivers. That is away beyond the individual miner or a co-operation of individual miners. Has the minister taken up that phase of the question? Take the Guggenheims, for instance, they are getting a tremendous stake in that country and in the course of time, under this extension, they would really get everything, they would get some of the richest placer diggings which the minister might have reserved for individual miners. Is that best for the country? I should like to see a mining industry there which would continue for years. With large capital invested and large dredges at work, you approach every year more closely to the period when you exhaust the diggings and consequently exhaust the population. It would be better to keep as much of that property as you can for the poor man.

Mr. OLIVER. Theoretically, my hon. friend is correct, but we find in practice that the part between low and high water is not being operated by the individual miner, and although we have had dredging leases for many years the dredging operations are very few. Within the past year or two dredges have been put in, but these might be described as dry land dredges, they have just enough water to float them and they are dredging in the dry ground. There is only one dredge in actual operation in the stream. It was thought that if the individual miner was not operating the bars, and as we had not been successful in inducing capital to dredge the river beds, it might be as well to give the dredges an opportunity. I agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) that it is not well to encourage too great an aggregation of capital, and it is certainly not well to discourage the individual miner. I hope I would be the last to suggest anything of that kind. The existing facts are that the individual miner is not operating the strip between high and low water to any great extent, and the dredge man has not found the proposition, as it exists now sufficiently attractive to warrant him in investing his capital. We thought it well to amend the conditions so as to let the dredge man have an advantage which would be useful to him, and which the individual miner is not using.

Mr. SPROULE. How many dredges have been operating there last year, and how many, is it anticipated, will operate this year?

Mr. OLIVER. I think my hon. friend from the Yukon (Mr. Thompson) could give definite information on that.

Mr. THOMPSON. There were four dredges in operation during the past year, and we expect to have fourteen in operation within a year from the present time. Nearly all these dredges are operating on dry land away from the river beds; a man will buy a series of claims and just get enough water to float his dredge.

Mr. SPROULE. Can the minister tell us the area held under dredging leases by some of the larger companies?

Mr. OLIVER. There are very large river stretches held by dredging companies. The Ogilvie Company has one hundred miles on the Stewart river; a number of small leases have been amalgamated, and we understand it is held by the one company. There are plenty of leases but very little operation.

Mr. SPROULE. I am told that the Guggenheims have a very extensive tract under lease, and that other companies have some of the most valuable parts of the streams and are acquiring more. If they get control of the streams and the low land extending out on the river as well, they will soon have control of all the mining in the locality.

Mr. THOMPSON. The Guggenheims have chiefly acquired their property by purchase, and it consists of mining claims. Their representative informed me the other day, that they have never put a dollar in dredging leases proper, because they do not think they would be a success under the old regulations. So far as I know their property consists altogether of placer claims.

Mr. SPROULE. Are they working with dredges?

Mr. THOMPSON. Oh, yes, but that kind of work does not come under the dredging regulations at all. It is simply an aggregation of placer claims which have been, or will be, acquired by them.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. And they can work them in any way they please?

Mr. THOMPSON. Yes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The minister spoke of a great number of leases and very little operation; is not operation a requisite to the retention of a claim?

Mr. OLIVER. We propose to make it so. In the past it has not been found desirable to enforce all the provisions of the regulations requiring operation, but we think the time has come when we may very well insist either on operation or cancellation.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The minister told us last year that some of the concessions had been cancelled.

Mr. OLIVER. These were hydraulic concessions and are entirely different from the dredging concessions.

Mr. SPROULE. If one of these companies acquires a number of small claims and amalgamates them, will your provision for operation require that the amount of work called for on each claim shall be done?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes, so far as the ordinary placer claim is concerned, but it is not absolutely required in the case of the river dredging. We intend to make changes looking in that direction.

Mr. SPROULE. If one of these steamers works out both ways on the banks over what would be otherwise placer claims, do you not give these parties the power to hold a great many such claims without requiring them to do the work that would be required if they were held by placer miners?

Mr. OLIVER. This provision does not permit the dredging leaseholder to go beyond the bed of the river. At the present time he is confined to the bed below low water mark. This provision is intended to allow him to extend his operations to what may be called high water mark—to cover the actual bed of the river, but not to go beyond it, to where the placer claims may be.

Mr. SPROULE. Then you do not require him to do the amount of work on each claim that the individual miner would have been obliged to do to hold it. It seems to me that you are giving him a concession that you are not giving to the holder of the placer claim.

Mr. OLIVER. If the dredging leaseholder acquires a placer claim, he can only hold it by doing the amount of work which the individual miner would require to do in order to hold it.

Mr. HAGGART. Can the minister tell us the difference between high water and low water on this particular work? To what extent does this provision increase the area of the dredge miner? It may increase it threefold or fourfold.

Mr. OLIVER. It gives the dredge miner the opportunity of reaching the river bar, which may occupy one fourth or one-half of the bed of the river, depending on the character of the river.

Mr. HAGGART. On the Yukon river, for instance, what is the difference between low water and high water?

Mr. OLIVER. The difference in area, I suppose, would not be one-fifth.

Mr. HAGGART. You do not know the actual number of feet?

Mr. OLIVER. I could not say.

Mr. HAGGART. The land which is now under the regulations that apply to placer mining you propose to put under the dredging regulations, under which they need not do any work at all.

Mr. OLIVER. That is hardly correct. We do not propose to remove it from the placer mining regulations, but we do propose to permit the application of the dredging regulations to it. But, of course, if a placer miner has already staked a claim upon it, the dredging regulations would not apply to that claim.

Mr. SPROULE. Suppose he sells it to the dredger?

Mr. OLIVER. The dredger will have to carry out the duties just the same as the placer miner in order to hold the license.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Do you mean that you are going to have double regulations, which may be applied at the pleasure of the minister or the department—placer regulations or dredging regulations applicable to the same area?

Mr. OLIVER. What we propose is that if the placer miner has not exercised his right under the placer mining law to stake the river bar, then the dredge miner may apply for a lease of that bar and work it by dredging methods.

Mr. HAGGART. In other words, you remove it from the regulations under which the placer miner works to regulations which are applicable only to dredges?

Mr. OLIVER. Provided the placer miner is not using it under the Act. We are not removing it from the right of the placer miner to stake and work under the Placer Mining Act; he can do that after we pass this provision just as well as before; but if we pass this provision, we may make regulations which will permit the dredge miner to work it as we are not entitled to permit him to work it now.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Your placer regulations prescribe a certain area which may be worked, and in which a certain amount of work must be done?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Do you limit the area in the same way to the man who uses a dredge and insist on the same amount of work?

Mr. OLIVER. It is our intention to require the dredge miner to put a dredge on and to do a certain amount of work each year, in consideration of the lease he holds; but there is no comparison between the claim held by the placer miner and the claim held by the dredge miner.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It seems to me there should be some comparison between them, when both are made applicable to the same area. Here you have an area along a river bank above what is at present called low water mark. That can be entered for by the placer miner or by the dredge miner. It seems to me that you might very properly make some comparison between the amount of work that ought to be done in the one case and in the other, or you might be giving a great advantage to the dredge miner over the placer miner.

Mr. OLIVER. As we require to meet different conditions in the case of the dredge miner, we have to make different provisions regarding him. My hon. friend from East Grey has suggested that at the present time there are large dredging leases held upon which there have been no operations. That is a fact. People have held these leases, they have paid their rental for them, and there are no operations upon them. That means that conditions are not sufficiently favourable to warrant the expenditure of the capital necessary to operate them.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What do you mean by conditions?

Mr. OLIVER. I mean that the product of gold in the river has not been sufficient up to the present time to warrant capital to work it economically. The placer miner cannot work it economically, and the work has not been done. We propose, on the one hand, to make the conditions more favourable to the dredge miner, and then to be more insistent in requiring him to operate his lease.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. All I am suggesting is that you have a certain area worked by a placer miner, a man of very small capital. He is obliged to comply with certain regulations or else he loses his claim. He must do so much work. The man alongside of him is a man with large capital. The conditions, in so far as he is concerned, would apparently be much more favourable. I do not quite see the reason for that.

Mr. OLIVER. The reason is that in the case of the man who holds the small claim the ground is valuable and in the case of the man who owns the large claim the land is not valuable.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If you were always sure that would be a good reason.

Mr. OLIVER. We are always sure because an individual miner would not stake ground unless he was satisfied that there was good pay in it, and as soon as he finds that there is not good pay he abandons it. The dredge miner can only arrive at a knowledge of what the value of the ground is after he goes to great expense to install a dredging plant.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The placer miner would not stake a poor claim and the dredge miner would be very sure to stake a good claim, and he would get that claim under more favourable conditions than the placer miner. It strikes me that it would not be fair to the poor miner.

Mr. OLIVER. Theoretically my hon. friend is absolutely right. Were this matter under discussion six or eight years ago I would be inclined to take the same view that he does, but in the light of the experience we have had we find that although the bars have been open to the placer miner all these years that privilege has been availed of to a very limited degree. The privilege has not been of value to the placer miner but the lack of the privilege, we are assuming at the present time, has been a disadvantage to the dredge miner to such an extent that we have not had as many dredges in operation as we might expect to have. We may be wrong in holding that view, but in the light of the experience we have had we believe that it would be well to make another effort to induce capital to come in and develop that country.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the value of the work to be done on a placer mine each year and what is the area of the ordinary placer mine?

Mr. THOMPSON. A placer mine consists of 500 feet up and down the creek by 1,000 feet on each side—500 x 2,000 feet. The placer mining Act requires that the owner of the mine shall do $200 worth of work per year on the claim, the work to be valued according to a schedule which is fixed by the gold commissioner of the Yukon. That is the ordinary placer claim. Then there is the river claim which is only 500 x 1,000 feet where the river is a large stream but this provision has been somewhat indefinite and it has been suggested that in the regulations that are to be there shall be a limit placed upon the streams on which dredging leases shall be given. At the present time a dredging lease might be given on any stream. A given stream of narrow width should properly fall within the domain of the placer miner and should not be given to the dredger at all unless the dredger bought the claim or acquired it the same as the placer miner did. These regulations are applied to the larger streams. Under the regulations that are to be it is suggested that a given number of feet shall decide as to whether a given stream should be allowed to the dredge licensee or should be retained altogether for the placer miner.

Mr. FOSTER. That is contemplated under the regulations to be made ?

Mr. THOMPSON. Yes, under the regulations for which this Act provides.

Mr. SPROULE. Then there is no specific amount of work to be done by the dredge lessee ?

Mr. THOMPSON. Oh, I think so.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the amount of work necessary to be done ?

Mr. OLIVER. At the present time I do not think that the regulations contemplate that there should be a specific amount of work done by the owner of the dredging lease, the theory being as it only applies to the bed of the river and to low water mark and interferes with no person else there is no reason why he should be allowed to pay rent upon it as long as he likes.

Mr. SPROULE. It seems to me that the unfairness of it is in the fact that the placer miner is limited. There must be $200 worth of work put in every year or else he cannot hold the claim, whereas the dredge lessee can take that very same land and hold it without doing a dollar's worth of work in the year. The individual miner, if he handled ten yards of earth in a day—I doubt if he handles more than three cubic yards, he would think he was doing very big work. But an ordinary dredge will handle 1,000 yards a day. If the gravel turned one cent to the pan the dredging leaseholder would make it pay admirably, whereas the ordinary placer miner would not pretend to make it pay with such a low return as that. I think it is held that unless it would pay ten cents or twenty cents a pan it would hardly pay the placer miner to work it, but you give the dredge leaseholder a substantial advantage over the placer miner. The man who has to do the work by hand can only do it in a very limited way and must have a small return, whereas you give the claim to the other who is possessed of lots of capital and you put no obligation upon him to do any specified amount of work. The result is that he may hold it as long as he likes without doing any work and he can buy up placer mines all along the river on either side and stop placer mining altogether.

Mr. THOMPSON. My hon. friend is not quite correct. If the dredger applies for a placer claim he must operate that claim under the same law as the placer miner does and he must put the same amount of work on that claim in order to keep the claim.

Mr. SPROULE. But the minister tells us that he need not confine his operations to the bed of the stream but that he may go on dry land so long as there is water enough to float the dredge. Does not he then work a placer claim ?

Mr. THOMPSON. Not unless he stakes it as the placer miner stakes it.

Mr. SPROULE. Suppose he can go to the summit of the bank on each side, and that covers the placer claims, would he not be taking these placer claims without it being necessary for him to do any work upon them ?

Mr. THOMPSON. Not at all. He must still do $200 worth of work on his claim.

Mr. HAGGART. The minister proposes to extend the dredging rights from low water to high water mark. Between low and high water mark are the claims which come under the regulations governing the placer miner. Now it is proposed to give the dredger the right to do this without being obliged to comply with the conditions attached to the placer mining.

Mr. RALPH SMITH. I would like to ask the minister if the placer miner would have the opportunity of taking up that ground which he has now. Will this exclude the possibility of the placer miner taking up this ground in the future ?

Mr. OLIVER. No, unless the dredging miner has leased it.

Mr. FOSTER. As soon as the dredging miner gets hold of it he holds it for as many years as he likes.

Mr. OLIVER. I do not feel like detaining the House on this subject as long as we understand where we are. We have found in practice that the privileges which have been accorded to the miner in the Yukon have not been such as to induce effective operations under the dredging leases which have been issued.

Mr. FOSTER. Under the river beds ?

Mr. OLIVER. Under the river beds. We believe that it would be better policy and more in the interest of the development of the country, if the placer miner has not taken advantage of his rights and operated the river bars, to give the dredge miner the privilege of operating these bars in the expectation or in the hope that by doing that we will be able to induce the investment of capital in the development of the country. Having given him these extra privileges, we should then be warranted in requiring him to work or cancel. We should have given him something that is or may be of value to somebody else as well as himself, and so would be in a position to say to him : You must make your expenditure and work your claim forthwith or you cannot hold it. We believe that in this way we should be better able to secure actual development of the Yukon than by leaving matters as they now are. However, having placed the matter before the House so fully, I would not wish to detain the House. There are other provisions of the Bill not connected with this, which I would like to have passed, and I would be willing to leave this clause, if it does not find favour with hon. members, and proceed with the others.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The section is open to the suggestions made. Nevertheless there is something in what the minister has said —that condition are not such as to justify cancellation now, but, with added privileges, you could hold these men to an exact performance of the duties required in their dredging leases. The working out of the proposition depends on the way the regulations are framed and administered, and the Minister of the Interior is responsible for that. I would have preferred, as I have already told the hon. gentleman (Mr. Oliver), to have a general mining Act covering many matters that are not now dealt with by statute. In the meantime, as far as I am concerned, I would not object to this passing.

Mr. PORTER. Has this idea that the minister has expressed, of encouraging the use of these dredges by extending the area of operation been advanced by those engaged in the dredging business, or likely to engage in it ? Or how has it originated? What assurance has the minister that, by making the extension he has proposed he will obtain the desired object ? Has there been any representation of that view ? On the other hand, has there been any representations? Has the position in which the placer mining will be placed by enlarging the rights of the dredging lessee been represented to the department, and, if so, in what way ?

Mr. OLIVER. I have discussed the matter with the hon. member for Yukon (Mr. Thompson) and the proposition as it now appears before the House is in accordance with his view. Of course, I have some knowledge of the facts myself, which I give to the House, setting forth the conditions and the disadvantages of the present situation. My hon. friend (Mr. Thompson) can answer better than I can as to the views of the Yukon.

Mr. THOMPSON. In the richest rivers, the placer miners have staked certain bars which they will hold. But dredging in the river bottoms has not been a success for the reason, I believe, that the dredging leases have not covered a sufficient number of cubic yards of gravel. These dredging lessees have held many stretches of these rivers for years on one pretext or another. This Bill provides that their areas shall be only within the natural banks of the stream, and that if they do not put dredges upon these stretches within a limited time, the stretches will be thrown open. All we want in the Yukon is to have dredges brought in and these gravels worked.

Mr. PORTER. Do the lessees say this will encourage dredging ?

Mr. THOMPSON. Yes.

Mr. OLIVER. I think the section might be amended, if the principle is agreed to. I am afraid that, as it reads, a construction might be placed upon it which is not desirable. I would move that after the word 'the' in the third line of the subsection the words 'whole of the' be inserted and strike out all the words after 'any river in the territory.' The section will then read :

Nothing in this Act shall prevent an enactment under which dredging leases may be issued for the whole of the bed of any river in the territory.

Mr. THOMPSON. Does that include the gravel bearings in the river at low water ?

Mr. OLIVER. That is part of the bed of the river, and it includes up to high water mark in the bed of the river. But sometimes there is such a flood that 'high water' would be outside the proper banks of the stream. What we want is to confine the operations of the dredging to the proper bed of the river at high water, but not at the limit of high water. I think we have here about as good a definition as we can get.

Mr. THOMPSON. Would it need a definition in the Act of the word 'bed' ?

Mr. OLIVER. I think not.

Amendment agreed to.

Section as amended agreed to.

On section 3,

Paragraph (b) of section 90 of the said Act is amended by inserting in the fifth line thereof, after the words 'ninety-eight', the words 'or of any regulations now or hereafter passed in amendment of such regulations.'

Mr. SPROULE. What does that refer to ?

Mr. OLIVER. That is the section to which I referred to in the first place, to give us authority to amend the existing regulations. The Placer Mining Act, as it stands, does not permit of the amendment of the existing dredging regulations. We desire the power to amend these regulations to bring them in line with what we think will better develop the industry.

Bill reported.

On motion for the third reading,

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Before the Bill is read a third time I would like to say, having regard to the very wide terms of the clause in the Dominion Lands Act authorizing regulations, it strikes me there should be an amendment at the earliest possible moment providing that such regulations should be placed before parliament within fifteen days after the opening of each session, and that they should continue in force only until the end of the session, unless approved by parliament in the meantime. There is a provision of that kind under the general Yukon Act. Where wide powers of this kind are given, the exercise of those powers should be restricted in some way, and parliament should at least have the right to consider what the Governor in Council has done and express its approval or disapproval. I do not think that is an unreasonable request, and I trust the Minister will bear it in mind at the earliest possible moment, and have legislation relating to the Yukon amended in that way.

Mr. OLIVER. The hon. gentleman mentioned this subject when we were discussing the Dominion Lands Bill, and I had a general amendment prepared which would apply to all regulations and meet this case.

Mr. FOSTER. In the meantime these regulations will be brought down by the minister next year, even if there is no legislation ?

Bill read the third time and passed.

IMMIGRATION ACT—AMENDMENT.

Bill (No. 143) to amend the Immigration Act—Mr. Oliver—read the second time and House went into committee thereon.

On section 1,—

Mr. OLIVER. This section makes a complete definition of the word 'stowaway.'

Mr. FOSTER. Was there any definition previously ?

Mr. OLIVER. There was no definition for 'stowaway' before. It was thought that the case of a stowaway was covered by other words, but the steamship companies have represented that they have found in their operations that the word was not defined, and they ask that a special definition be made.

On section 2,

Mr. FOSTER. It strikes me this is pretty drastic legislation in some respects :

Whenever in Canada an immigrant has, within two years of his landing, become a public charge or an inmate of a penitentiary, jail or hospital, or other charitable institution——

Now a man comes in who is perfectly healthy, all his antecedents are good ; he remains in Canada for the first year, and some time during the second year a misfortune happens to him, he gets his leg jammed, or a limb taken off, or the like of that, and goes to a hospital. On what proper ground can you deport that man ? That is what might take place with any resident of this country who has lived here for forty years. It is not a disability he has inherited and brought across the water with him ; it is a misfortune that may come to the healthiest and best after he has been here nearly two years. That seems to me to go a little too far with reference to hospitals and charitable institutions. Then a good immigrant may come into this country and may, after being here for nearly two years, for doing some trifling thing, be sent to jail ; perhaps in consequence of a St. Andrew's night or a St. Patrick's day, he is overtaken and becomes boisterous and is put into jail because of having imbibed too much, or something of that kind. That is scarcely an offence that ought to make a man deportable, putting upon him that disability. He has cut all his connections with the other side, he has come here and made his home as far as he possibly could and yet, just because of a fault of that kind—I take an extreme case, of course—you will nullify his two years of residence here, his efforts to make a home and place for himself and put the companies to the expense of deporting him. I think that is altogether too drastic. In order to make this logical, you have to connect the disability with his previous domicile, it must be something he has brought over with him ; if he were criminal at the start and landed here and we found a proof of that criminality by any criminal act done here, that would be a fair reason for deporting him. If he came here a pauper, unable to work, or if he were a swindler, a loafer, and went on imposing on charitable institutions and the rates of this country, that would also be a good cause, but the others I do not think would be good grounds at all ; I think in some cases it would be an outrage. It is well known that a municipality tries to get rid of a charge on its rates. It would not take into account the equities of the case but would take advantage of the law and initiate the proceeding which ends in his deportation.

Mr. OLIVER. This is a matter that is quite wide open to argument, there is no doubt about that. The House, however, last year agreed to this principle of the Bill and this is simply the embodiment and amplification of the principle in order that it may be intelligently carried out.

Mr. FOSTER. I believe in the principle.

Mr. OLIVER. We have to embody the principle in words and provide for it in acts or else it is of no use. We have stated the principle in the Bill of last year. However, it was found in practice that full provision was not made for its operation. The only intent of the clause just read is to provide for the operation of the principle that was agreed to last year and which we have put in operation since last year.

Mr. GALLIHER. Would not the following section cover it ? It is left to your discretion after investigating the facts.

Mr. OLIVER. Certainly. The question has to be considered in all its phases to arrive at a fair conclusion. I hope the House will understand that I have no desire to assume either arbitrary or unwarranted powers in this or in any other connection. There is no doubt that there is a very strong demand on the part of public opinion for the prevention of undesirable immigration, and if it is desirable to prevent it, and we have taken every means we can to prevent it, but still the undesirable is found in our midst, public opinion seems to demand that deportation should follow. If we are to agree to the principle of exclusion, and then to the principle of deportation we must face the question of how that deportation is to be carried out and on what terms the officials are to act. Although it may look ugly, still it is a question that we must face. My hon. friend has stated a case which is quite possible under the wording of the law, but of course he understands as every one will understand, that such a case does not come within the spirit of that enactment and it is to be assumed that the administration of the law would be according to its spirit.

Mr. SPROULE. If you are going to carry out only the spirit why make the letter of the law more drastic than the spirit ?

Mr. OLIVER. The reason is that if you so frame the law that the right or power of deportation becomes a subject of legal dispute, you might nearly as well not have the power. It has to be in a drastic form, in order that it may be acted upon effectively and satisfactorily. Then if you have it worded in that way you have to trust to the judgment and fairness of the authorities in administering the law. I see no escape from the position. I would be very, very glad if I could. If we could, by putting a law on the statute-book which would only embody the spirit which my hon. friend has quite properly laid down, then if we have only the right to take cognizance of disabilities that arose before the immigrant came to the country, and then attempted to enforce that law according to its spirit, we would have arrived at the point where we would attain nothing. Having carefully safeguarded the right of the immigrant to be deported only because of matters which arose before he arrived on our shores then every step that we make in order to secure the deportation of any person becomes at once the subject of a legal argument and we are blocked at every turn and we find the greatest possible difficulty in carrying out the principle, which is what we are all desirous of attaining.

Mr. FOSTER. Does the minister take it that subsection 2 is solely permissive and does not impose the duty on him of deporting after the initial step is taken by the municipal authorities ?

Mr. OLIVER. I understand that to be the purpose.

Mr. FOSTER. That could be made more plain.

Mr. OLIVER. In subsection 2 it provides that on receipt of such information the minister may, on investigating the facts, order the deportation of such immigrant.

Mr. FOSTER. Sometimes we say that 'may' means 'shall.' You might put in such words as 'is empowered if he sees proper to do so.'

Mr. OLIVER. I think 'on investigating the facts' seems to cover it, but I would, if desired, move to insert the words 'in his discretion' after the word 'may.'

Mr. SPROULE. The first part of the section says that the minister shall be notified, but it does not say what minister. Is the wording plain enough as it is?

Mr. OLIVER. The Interpretation Act defines the 'minister' to be the Minister of the Interior, but it may be just as well to amend this clause so as to have it read that the Minister of the Interior shall be notified.

Mr. SPROULE. I think that is an improvement. It does seem to me that the wording of the section requires further change. Speaking from a knowledge of the practice in rural districts, I know that if a stranger takes ill, the first thing that is done is to send him to an hospital, no matter what disease he may suffer from. It would be advisable to have it made clear in the section that under such circumstances it would not be the duty of the municipality to notify the Minister of the Interior so as to deport such a person.

Mr. OLIVER. The section is not very well worded, but I do not think it matters much because this parliament cannot compel the clerk of a municipality to notify the Minister of the Interior. The intention of this provision is that if the Minister of the Interior is notified by the clerk of the municipality, he may take action.

Bill reported, read the third time, and passed.

At six o'clock, House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

SUPPLY—THE COMMISSIONER OF CUSTOMS.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Minister of Finance) moved that the House go into Committee of Supply.

Mr. ALEX. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton South). My Speaker, before you leave the Chair will you grant me a few moments to bring to the attention of the Minister of Customs more particularly and the government generally, a matter to which my attention has been directed during the last two or three days? I cannot plead that the subject is one which attracts any very general attention or that it should occupy to any great extent the attention of the House this evening, because there is other business of more importance to attend to.

I submit, however, that there is a principle involved in the matter, which should receive attention at the hands of the government, and more particularly at the hands of the Minister of Customs. This matter relates to a suit which has been brought by private parties against an insurance company. The property of the person bringing the action was destroyed by fire. It was insured in various insurance companies; every one of which, with the exception of one, promptly paid the claims against them. One company disputed the payment of the claim, and refused to pay it, whereupon the party took action to recover the amount. I am not going into any lengthy details in regard to this matter. I only rise to point out that the Customs Department of this country has placed itself behind that particular insurance company, and has assisted it as far as it could possibly do so to resist the payment of this claim. I have to complain that the departmental files of the Customs Department were sent to a foreign country without any proper authority, in order to be used by the counsel of the said insurance company in the city of New York. I have endeavoured to find out whether or not any proper proceeding has been taken in order to secure the forwarding of these papers, and, so far as I have been able to ascertain, no steps whatever have been taken to secure the proper presentation of those papers. The Commissioner of Customs has taken upon himself the entire responsibility of forwarding the papers in order that they might be used in the suit brought by the party to whom I refer against the insurance company. It is too late now to urge for any redress in the present case. The matter is now over; but I submit that the Minister of Customs should ascertain whether his Commissioner of Customs should be permitted at his own sweet will to forward at the expense of the government of this country the papers to which I refer to the city of New York to help an insurance company to avoid the payment of a claim which I think should have been paid. The Commissioner of Customs, of course, thinks he has done what is right and proper. It may be that he has; but I think the matter well deserves inquiring into. If it is going to be the policy of this government to permit the Commissioner of Customs to forward from the department any public documents which may be there, or to send the files of the department out of the country, without being asked in any proper way to do so, I submit that the Minister of Customs should at the earliest possible moment inquire whether the action taken by this official is a proper one. I do not blame the Minister of Customs. This matter has not been brought to his attention before, I brought it to his attention to-day. It appears to me that the action of the Commissioner of Customs cannot be excused, either by the Minister of Customs, the government, this House or the country at large. There are other matters in this connection which I intend to bring to the attention of this House later on. For the present I merely desire to call the attention of the Minister of Customs to what I regard, and what all those who are familiar with the details which I have brought before the House, regard as most outrageous conduct on the part of the Commissioner of Customs.

Hon. WILLIAM PATERSON (Minister of Customs). Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman gave me notice, shortly before six o'clock, that he intended to allude to this matter. I had not then had an opportunity of seeing the commissioner, and going into the matter with him. I shall, therefore, have to content myself with assuring my hon. friend that I will take the opportunity to-morrow, when his remarks will be in 'Hansard,' of discussing it more fully with the commissioner and going more fully into the matter. I had a short discussion with him on the subject, but, as the House knows, we have been very much pressed with business lately. I received a telegram asking me to order back some of the papers which came when the commissioner was in Toronto on Monday; and, not knowing anything of the matter, I said it would have to wait till he came back. The next morning, in the press of business, I did ask him in reference to the matter, which struck me, from the way in which the telegram was worded, as somewhat unusual. I will not go into it any further now; but I think I ought to say this on behalf of the commissioner, as I understood him then. It may be true, my hon. friend says it is true, that these papers are being used in a suit; but what I gather from the commissioner is that any papers which any of our officers had in connection with the matter were not in any way presented to prevent a company from being compelled to pay a claim, but that there was a question of the smuggling of goods or the suspected smuggling of goods. My hon. friend says that the papers have been sent out of the country. I have inquired about that, and I understood from the commissioner that the papers have been taken by one of our own special officers who was watching this case. Of course, the department is not interested in any way. If the department were interested without any object of their own in a suit between a person and an insurance company, I should think the action taken would not be justified. It may be that, as I understood from the short conversation I had with the commissioner, that it is involved with the suspicion of smuggling and the hope of unearthing something in that way. If there has been anything irregular, I am sure the commissioner will not have done it with a design of injuring any one, as he is very careful in the discharge of his duty. I will say no more because I am not competent to speak upon it. I have never had an opportunity of going fully into it but, as in duty bound, I will take up the matter with him in the light of what my hon. friend has said here.

Motion agreed to, and House went into Committee of Supply.

Militia and Defence—chargeable to income—military survey—for pay and subsistence of surveyors and contingent expenses in connecton with the work, $20,000.

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence). I caused a memorandum to be distributed to the members of the House yesterday which may expedite the work of passing these estimates. This is the usual vote for carrying on in a small way, but in a very creditable manner, the survey of certain portions of the country. I have had the pleasure of distributing to hon. members maps of the district of Niagara and of a district in my province which I think show very creditable work indeed. I find that these maps have been very much sought after. Unfortunately we have not money enough to carry on the work at a very rapid rate but we are doing a certain amount of it each year, partly because of its value to the country and also for the purpose of giving experience to the young men who are learning how to do this work.

Mr. PATERSON.

Mr. SPROULE. Mr. Chairman, at the risk of incurring the displeasure of some, and a reminder that a man sometimes talks about what he does not know much of, I wish to say a few words in regard to the rapid increase in the expenditure on militia and defence during the last few years. While I am not opposed to any reasonable expenditure for the purpose of making of the militia a defence in reality for the country, yet, I regard with a little apprehension of danger the very rapid increase in the expenditure for that purpose year after year. We have often heard it said, and I think the minister himself made the remark in some of his observations, that it could not be fairly imputed to us that we were following the course of the European countries in our militarism. Yet, for our age it seems to me that we are becoming a very good second to any European country in our expenditures in that line. The minister stated last night that in 1895-6 we were expending between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 for that purpose.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. About $1,500,000.

Mr. SPROULE. About $1,500,000 and for the coming year we purpose to expend between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000. It seems to me that this is a great expansion in that line and whether the interests of the country demand that or not I am not prepared to say, but from my limited knowledge, I am inclined to think we are going too fast. I believe, with a great many others, that we in Canada should seek to avoid the militarism and the glitter of the older countries and which are unfortunately becoming very apparent in Canada. I have never looked with any great favour upon anything that takes from the active operations of industrial life a large number of young men and converts them into the non-paying class of the country but still a class that we are establishing practically as the pensioners of the country and who must be kept up for all time in the future. It seems to me that we ought to exercise great caution and good judgment in our desire to expand in that direction.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. You mean the permanent force, do you not ?

Mr. SPROULE. I mean the permanent force and the other as well. I have heard a good deal of eulogy expended upon the various provinces because they have agreed to the principle of introducing military drill into the universities, colleges, high schools and common schools of our country. I do not regard that from my standpoint as an unqualified requisite. While I admit the necessity of keeping up some standing force that will be the nucleus of an army in the hour of need and will always be available for drilling the forces and preparing them for active service I have always thought that we ought to keep it down to the lowest possible numbers essentially necessary to our conditions and requirements here. Then again I have noticed that wherever you introduce military training in the common schools of the country—and I frankly confess I am against the principle, because I think it radically wrong to introduce military training into the common schools—you only offer another attraction to draw the boys away from the farm and place before them the glitter of town, city or military life. When a boy gets out to camp once he has always a desire to go back there. It is a lazy, exciting and attractive life to him and the more of these attractions you put before the youth of the country the larger will be the percentage of young men taken from the industrial pursuits, the result being that these young men will be of little use to the country in the future. Therefore, I say I do not regard our system as an unqualified success when it has necessitated the rapidly increasing expenditure which we have been making for the last few years. Whilst saying that I am not opposed to what I regard as a reasonable expenditure for that purpose. But, I think we are going too fast.

Then, there is another thing that I have asked myself about the expenditure of this large amount of money, nearly $4,000,000: Can it be demonstrated to the country that we are getting value for it? Is there not extravagance in many lines of this expenditure? We have not inquired thoroughly into it, and we have not satisfied ourselves in regard to it. It seems to be a very difficult thing to do. We have only the Public Accounts Committee and we have only a few hours in the week to devote to these public accounts and with the obstruction which is constantly offered in the Public Accounts Committee when we desire to get information it is very difficult for the opposition to get information in that way. Therefore, the function of parliament is paralyzed to a considerable extent and I am not satisfied that in many lines we are receiving full value for the expenditure of this large amount of money. If I were satisfied of that I would have less objection to the expenditure. It may be said that we have taken upon ourselves the responsibility of manning two forts—one at Halifax and the other at Esquimalt. I do not object to that because I believe that the Dominion of Canada should expend a reasonable amount of money to provide for the defence of the country.

That is one way in which we have been able to relieve the mother country of a portion of expense which, in the past, she has devoted to our needs. I do not object to this, so long as the money is wisely and economically expended. But I have thought, from time to time, as we have been called upon to vote $100,000 for a drill hall in London, Toronto, Hamilton or some other city, that this seemed a large sum to devote to the purpose, and the question has suggested itself to my mind whether we could not secure in some cheaper form sufficiently commodious buildings for armoury use and as headquarters for the staff. These works seem to be very expensive. We are told that contracts are let to the lowest tenderers. We do not know how tenders are put in, or who opens them, or how they are worked after they are opened; but we generally find the contract in the hands of a friend and a favourite of the government gets the contract. There may be nothing wrong in this, but it creates suspicion; the whole thing leaves in the public mind a fear that the expenditure is not economically made. If we continue for a few years more to increase our military expenditure as we have increased it since 1895-6, the people may come to regard this as a burden. Let hard times come, let values fall, let our public revenues decrease, and there will be a decided difference in the way in which the people will regard these expenditures from the way in which they regard them now, when the public revenue is buoyant and money plentiful. The people will be apt to inquire whether their representatives have been doing their duty in controlling these expenditures, and will ask why more was not done in checking the action of the government. Therefore it is that I speak this word of warning. I may not be voicing the sentiments of the majority of the people, but I know that I voice the sentiments of a very large number, especially of the agricultural and the industrial classes, who have to work hard for their own living and are apt to regard with no great favour this drawing off from industry of so many men who live at the public expense and continuous pensioners of the public throughout their lives. I believe we should consider these expenditures with greater care, and should have more information than we have had as to the need that exists for them.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I have no fault to find with the spirit in which my hon. friend (Mr. Sproule) has approached the criticism of these estimates. I am sure he is correct in saying that he represents the feelings of a great many people in Canada. But I venture to say also that, if he will study the expenditures more carefully, his mind will be disabused at least of some of the unfavourable opinions which he has more or less clearly formed. He has spoken of the withdrawal of men in the prime of life from the ranks of industrial and agricultural pursuits. If that were true to any considerable extent, I should be entirely with him, for such a thing would be extremely undesirable, as well as absolutely unnecessary, in a young country like this. But let me point out that the only militiamen who are permanently employed are the members of the permanent force. Of these we have less than three thousand, and do not propose to have any more—very likely the number will be allowed to decrease. One of the greatest difficulties that presents itself in carrying on the militia service of Canada is in securing recruits for the permanent force and of preventing desertions from it. As a matter of fact, we have had an enormous number of desertions, insomuch that we have been obliged recently to bring over from England soldiers who have been discharged owing to the changes that have recently taken place in the organization of the army.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Is there any record showing the class of men who desert, their nationality and previous occupation?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I do not know of such a compilation. Last year we had 348 desertions. The reason for these desertions is largely that these men can secure better pay elsewhere. After they join the permanent force they are tempted to go into the factory, or public works, or railway, and so they leave us in the lurch. But even if we were successful in securing the full strength of 3,000 men, my hon. friend (Mr. Sproule) would not say that that constituted a very important withdrawal of men from the ranks of profitable employment. The active militia includes some 49,000 or 50,000 of the 52,000 or 53,000 of our militia force, and these men are withdrawn from industry only during twelve days of the year—and only a portion even of this force are thus withdrawn, because the city militia drill in the evening, and so lose none of their working time. During the summer months some 25,000 or 30,000 of the yeomanry of the country go into camp for twelve or thirteen days, and, at most, lose only fourteen days of their time. Thus their withdrawal from industry is not a serious matter.

The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) has spoken of the proposal which I mentioned last evening of introducing into the schools of Canada a uniform system of physical training for the young children, both boys and girls, up to the age of twelve, and for boys above that age, coupling with it some elementary military training and some teaching in the use of the rifle. I am happy to say that in many of the schools of most of the provinces physical training is now a part of the educational course. But I cannot, for the life of me, see what harm can be done by the introduction of this uniform system of which I speak. I do see that great good is likely to result from it to the health, the morale and the character of the young children—helping them to develop into better men and women in every sense; teaching them to obey, teaching them to stand erect, teaching them to walk properly, training them to discipline, improving them in many ways to take better positions in society when they grow up, and to take a more useful part in the life of the country. I would like to call my hon. friend's attention to a fact of which perhaps he is not aware, and of which I was not aware until quite recently, as to the alleged tendency of training of this kind in the schools to draw men away from the farm. Now, my hon. friend may be surprised to learn that in every state of the United States, in every agricultural college, instruction in certain lines of military education is compulsory. Evidently the people of the United States have not seen that danger.

Mr. SPROULE. I would ask the minister if he has ever thought there might be a connection between such training and the fact that all through the States of Vermont and Maine you will find thousands and thousands of acres of land lying uncultivated, land as fine as can be found under the canopy of Heaven, with nobody to cultivate it.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I am afraid the same thing will be found in the lower provinces of this Dominion, in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and even in Quebec and Ontario. I do not think that military training in schools has any connection with deserted farms. At any rate, for a hundred years or more the United States have had such training, and they would have discovered the fact if there was any such tendency in military training in schools.

There is one other point to which my hon. friend called attention, and that is with regard to the alleged extravagance in the expenditures upon militia. I do not believe there is extravagance. I believe that the Militia Department is getting as good value to-day in the goods and in everything it purchases, as any business institution in the country. The greatest possible precautions are taken, both as to quality and as to prices. I am not afraid, in fact, I would court investigation as to the prices we pay and the quality of the goods we get. As to giving contracts to political friends, well, I am bound to say I do not object to that, if they deserve it. But I would point out that the firm in Canada which has received the largest orders for clothing, and which I am bound to say has done the work very creditably, I will not say better than any other firm, but as well as it could be done, is an institution in Hamilton, founded by the late Senator Sanford, who was one of the most prominent Conservatives in Canada. So far as I know and believe, the majority of that firm to-day are still in the Conservative camp.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) referred to was contracts for drill sheds.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Contracts for drill sheds are given by the Public Works Department, and I believe in every case after public advertisement. I am inclined to agree with the remarks of the hon. gentleman when he said that perhaps too large amounts have been expended upon armouries. I do not mean that in the aggregate too much money has been spent, or that there are too many armouries, because there are altogether too few. But I do think that in many cases much larger amounts have been expended than should have been. That has been done, and I am sorry is being done. But it has been done, I am bound to say, in justice to myself, against my advice, in many cases. A large building is to be constructed in a certain ambitious town, and influences of all kinds are brought to bear to induce the government and the minister to make a handsome and pretentious building; and very often I think twenty-five per cent, thirty, and sometimes fifty per cent more money is expended on those buildings than needs to be expended having regard to the requirements of the militia. I would like to see cheaper buildings and more of them, it would answer the needs of the militia very much better.

Mr. FOWLER. Are those buildings erected by the Public Works Department?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Yes. The hon. gentleman spoke of the increase in the total vote for militia in ten years. I anticipated to some extent his remarks last night, and I am not going to repeat what I said then. The expenditure on revenue account in 1905-6 was about $1,200,000, and if there had been annual drills in camp that year, it would have been about $1,500,000. The estimates this year are about $4,000,000, which includes a sum of $850,000 for annual drill. The difference is $2,500,000. I pointed out last night how that difference was made up. giving the principal items. Taking over Halifax and Esquimalt involved an increase of 2,000 men in the permanent force, amounting to over $1,250,000. The increase in pay of the active militia is practically doubled, and the pay of the permanent force has risen from 40 cents a day to 75 cents, both items amounting to about $250,000. Then there is an increase for clothing, due to greater numbers. With an increase in the active militia of some 10,000, that amounted to something like $250,000. Then there is an increase in the Dominion arsenal of some $200,000, to pay for the enormously increased output from less than 2,000,000 cartridges a year to over 12,000,000. There are some other minor details, such as the Royal Military College, which has increased $50,000 in ten years; we have there now 90 students instead of 50 or 60. There is an increase in the annual upkeep of the barracks and buildings in the permanent force. All these items make up, roughly speaking, about $2,500,000, and I really cannot see how it would be possible for us to cut out one dollar. I hope, however, the expenditure may be kept near where it is now, and I think it can be.

Mr. WARD. I am not inclined to agree with the hon. member from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) in his objection to the introduction of physical training and military training in the schools.

Mr. SPROULE. I did not object to physical training, I drew a distinction between the two.

Mr. WARD. Then my remark applies only to military training. It seems to me that the cadet corps now being formed in the public schools and allowed the use of the rifle ranges in the districts in which they are formed are a very valuable adjunct to the militia forces of the country and that the more young boys attending the schools who receive instruction in the use of the rifle in that way the better for the country at large. I know that in my own district there is a very large cadet corps which uses the rifle ranges there and a large number of boys over 14 years of age are being thus instructed in the use of the rifle. Another cadet corps is now being formed in the town which will also have the use of these rifle ranges and it seems to me that it is one of the first principles of defence that these young boys growing up should gradually be taught the use of the rifle, so that when they are called upon which I hope may never happen, they will come into service with a knowledge of the use of the rifle.

I desire to call the attention of the minister to a matter in connection wth the pay of the troops. It does not appeal to me on any personal ground at all but in the interests of the force at large. I refer particularly to the pay of commanding officers both of regiments and of companies or units. The pay has been altered in this sense that officers commanding companies are allowed pay only for the number of men they take into camp for the annual drill. That works a considerable hardship in a great many cases. If the minister will scan the Militia List and see how difficult it is to procure officers for the different regiments he will, I think, see that the officers deserve some consideration in order to induce them to enter the regiments. In my own case the 46th regiment is recruited from a very small county. In that county there are two batteries of artillery which are largely recruited from the six small townships. There are also two troops of cavalry recruited there and it is very difficult indeed for the officers commanding companies in that regiment to get the necessary quota of men to go into camp. Officers who have done their duty for a great many years now find that if they cannot get the full complement of men to go into camp they are only allowed $1 for each man and if their companies are only half strength, which is the case in a great many instances, they have to do all the work and considerably harder work than they used to have and they only receive one half the amount of pay that they formerly received under the regulations. Not only that, but under a recent rule, passed I think in May last, those commanding officers of companies who have their arms and accoutrements in a drill shed with a caretaker are not allowed the care of arms at all. That has further cut down the pay of officers commanding companies, and I might call the minister's attention to this fact that those commanding officers of companies at headquarters are the officers of the regiment who do the most work. It is quite true that they have their arms and accoutrements taken care of by the caretaker of the drill shed, but in every other sense, looking after the mess of the regiment and the band fund the officers at headquarters are the ones who do the work, and as a consequence of that late rule they are only drawing one half the pay of the country officers who simply look after their companies. I think this works a great injustice and that if the minister looks into the matter he will be prepared to do justice to those who are at headquarters.

Another thing to which I might refer, which is perhaps in a way personal, is that the commanding officer of a regiment, no matter what difficulties he may have to contend with in getting a full turnout of his regiment, if the regiment cannot be recruited up to its full strength suffers in the same way. These are matters which I think should be considered by the minister and although the men have been given every consideration—and I think that is only right and just—in having their pay increased, the officers are suffering a corresponding decrease. I would simply ask the minister to take this matter into consideration and see if something canont be done, because it is with the greatest possible difficulty that we can get officers for the different regiments. I am sure I speak for other commanding officers of regiments when I say it is not easy to get officers who will give their time and attention to recruiting companies as well as bearing the cost of uniforms, &c. I therefore ask the minister to reconsider that portion of the regulations regarding officers. A change would result in making it much less difficult for commanding officers of regiments to recruit not only their men but their officers.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I am very glad that my hon. friend as a militia officer of long experience has expressed his views. We will find them in 'Hansard' and the headquarters staff will give due consideration to anything he says. The rules and regulations of the Militia Department are not like the laws of the Medes and Persians, fixed and unalterable; we change them from time to time and try to improve them. The rule to which my hon. friend referred was made with the expectation that some officers—because there is a very great difference in officers—some officers who were apparently giving little or no attention to their companies might be stimulated to do so from the fact of being paid only when they got results, and as to the other point which my hon. friend referred to, the pay of a caretaker, I doubt whether my hon. friend from Grey (Mr. Sproule) would approve of the suggestion that the Militia Department should find men to take care of the arms, relieve the company officers practically of the work, find a room to place them in and still pay the old fee for care of arms for which many of the country regiments to-day are finding their own buildings, and also taking care of the arms themselves. We cannot very well do both. If we furnish an armoury and men to take care of the arms, accoutrements and clothing, surely we should be allowed to withdraw a portion of the money we are paying these officers.

Mr. WARD. All the arms of the 46th regiment are kept in the drill shed. That has been done since the new rifle was issued, and there is no distinction as far as I know between one commanding officer of a company and another. The arms have all been kept in the drill shed and attended to by the caretaker, but the caretaker does not receive a very large and handsome allowance from the government. Of course I am not objecting to the allowance because the man has accepted it, but every one of the officers pay to the caretaker a certain amount from his pay. The rifles are kept in remarkably good condition as I am sure you will find by the reports to headquarters, but there is no distinction whatever as to the different officers of my regiment, because every one of the rifles is kept at headquarters and taken care of by the caretakers.

Mr. FOWLER. It seems to me that the hon. member for Durham (Mr. Ward) has eliminated the patriotic idea altogether. I was rather surprised to hear the hon. gentleman speak as though our militia officers entered the service merely for the money there is in it. I always understood they joined from patriotic motives.

Mr. WARD. Did you ever command a regiment?

Mr. FOWLER. I never had that honour, but I have served as an officer in a regiment and I know that the pay was the last consideration of the officers. In most regiments the pay received by the officers is put into a fund for the benefit of the regiment or the support of the band; and the officers devote their time, without remuneration, to endeavouring to make the regiment efficient. I was surprised to hear my hon. friend, who commands a very excellent regiment, plead for greater pay for his officers. The departmental rule of paying the officers according to results is an excellent one, and I think it would be a great mistake to change it, notwithstanding the eloquent plea we have heard on behalf of the 46th regiment, from its commanding officer.

Mr. DANIEL. I wish to ask the minister if the rates of pay for training and allowances set out in page 13 of the memorandum respecting the estimates, are the whole pay given for the service during each day in camps. The memorandum does not state whether the per diem allowance is the whole pay, or whether it is additional to the pay of the rank of the officer.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. It covers the full pay and any special camp allowance.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I wish to express my endorsation of any scheme which may be adopted by the department with the view of encouraging military drill in the schools. It tends to the moral and physical upbuilding of the youth of our country. In the public schools of Toronto the pupils have been drilled for upwards of 30 years, and the system has had a most beneficial effect on the moral and physical well being of the boys. My brother happens to be the chief inspector of schools in Toronto, and I can say that there never was a boy who went through that course of military instruction who had to be sent to the industrial school at Mimico, or who in any sense had to be publicly corrected for bad conduct. The training which these boys get in the schools enables them to step right into the ranks of the regiment without undergoing recruit class drill which is a necessary preliminary in the case of those who have not been so trained. I would like to see also that in the camps of the country our young men should not only be trained in drill, but that they should be trained to drill. I wish the minister would call this to the attention of the military officers of his department. Nothing puts so much confidence in a man or fills him with so much pride as to have him stand in front of a squad, and give the word of command. I agree with the member for East Grey, that so far as the permanent corps is concerned the men have too much time on their hands, but his remarks about the lazy life of a soldier would certainly not apply to the volunteers in camp. One reason why so few young Canadians desire to become regular soldiers is that there is a lot of spare time on the hands of men in the permanent corps. Did time permit, there are a great many details in connection with our militia system which I would like to dwell upon, and as to which I think I could suggest improvement. As to the cost of the militia of this country, I would point out that our neighbours to the south who are a democratic people spend a great deal more per capita on their military system then we do. I would like the Minister of Finance to listen to this, because I know he is an ardent volunteer at heart and is desirous of spending the last dollar he can get for the purpose of keeping the old flag flying. The people of the American Republic, who are a democratic people, spend upwards of $400,000,000 a year for military and naval purposes.

Mr. SPROULE. That includes pensions.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. How much of that goes for pensions?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. About $100,000,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Speaking from memory, I think it is $300,000,000.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The regular expenditure on their military system is $300,000,000 a year and including pensions it is $400,000,000 a year. This represents $5 per head of the population of the United States, while in Canada our militia expenditure is only 80 cents per head of the population. If we spent $1 per capita it would be a very small sum, and if we spent $2 per capita it would not be what you might call an extremely large sum. No complaint can therefore be made as to the amount of money we spend for this purpose, and the only question is: Is it well expended? I agree with the member for East Grey that we should have less expensive drill sheds and more of them throughout the country. It would be much better to have suitable drill sheds in different places from one end of the country to the other, than to have a few fancy buildings at favoured points. I am pleased to hear that the Minister of Militia is directing his attention to that. As to a military life drawing boys from the farms to the cities, I may remark that in the United States, 92 per cent of the prominent residents of cities and towns come from the farms, and in Canada the percentage is 94 per cent. There is a lot of room in the cities and towns, and there is not always room on the farms for the boys, so that this result is naturally brought about. If there is any thing that will make farm life attractive for the young man, it is the fact that he has had military training in the public school or collegiate institute, and that when he settles down on the farm with his certificate of efficiency, he feels himself a man of some importance and he joins the volunteer battalion as a private, rising to be a non-commissioned officer, and in time a commissioned officer. The hon. member for East Grey knows that a young man in the country can occupy no prouder position than to be a lieutenant or captain or major in one of these corps. Besides having the advantage of the training, he is more likely to remain on the farm and become a creditable citizen.

Mr. SPROULE. I would like to ask my hon. friend who has just spoken whether we may take his own family as an example of what he has said?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The history of my own family is that we were too poor to live on the farm, and we had to go out and make a living somewhere else.

Mr. FOWLER. Did the minister explain what was done with that money—what part of the territory of Canada was surveyed?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I did; in the Niagara district and at one point in the lower provinces. We are carrying on this survey in a connected way along the boundary line between Ontario and the United States and occasionally in other places. Wherever there is a camp located there is a survey.

Mr. FOWLER. Have you any survey between New Brunswick and Maine?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. We have not gone that far yet. It is principally in Ontario and I think at some point between Quebec and the United States.

Militia and Defence—annual drill, $850,000.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. This is about the same as last year.

Mr. FOWLER. How many men are you drilling this year?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. About 40,000, exclusive of the permanent force.

Mr. FOWLER. What is the total militia force now?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. 52,000 or 53,000, including the permanent force. About 49,000 active militia.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I may say that the increased pay which the minister has introduced is a very beneficial thing. One point I want to make for the militia who turn out for the annual drill is this, that there is no money which the government expends that is so readily distributed throughout the country as the money paid to the militia in camp. It returns to the pockets of the people at once.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES.

Militia and Defence—salaries and wages, $85,000.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. These are for civil employees in different parts of the country.

Military properties—maintenance, $50,000.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In this connection I take the liberty of drawing attention to the movement which is on foot to commemorate the tercentenary of Champlain. I shall be very much pleased if this can be carried out, but the celebration should not be confined to the city of Quebec. I would be willing to give the city of Quebec a fair share of whatever form the memorial may take, but I would suggest that every part of Canada—for instance, certain parts of the maritime provincees, Quebec and Ontario—be included; notably the counties of Simcoe, Ontario, Victoria and Peterborough, where Champlain made one of the most notable expeditions in his career, and where there should be some suitable memorial erected to commemorate his trip.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. The Prime Minister is particularly interested in this proposed celebration, and I shall be very glad to draw his attention to what has been said.

Mr. DANIEL. For what number of days are the men to be called out?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Twelve days, except the artillery, who are to be called out for sixteen days.

Military properties, construction and repairs, $200,000.

Mr. FOWLER. Has anything been done with respect to the old forts, such as old Fort Cumberland in Nova Scotia, and the fort of St. John in New Brunswick? The last I remember seeing of the fort of Cumberland was that it was used as a sheep pasture. The fort of St. John I think is more suitable for goats than for sheep. In neither case are they kept as they should be. They are very important points in the history of this country, a history of which we need not be ashamed, and it seems to me that something should be done to keep up these old landmarks.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I agree with my hon. friend entirely. At Annapolis we have spent a good deal of money to restore the old fort, the oldest on this continent with one exception, and it is visited by tens of thousands of people every year. I should be very glad indeed to have my hon. friend join me in memoralizing the Minister of Finance to see if we cannot in another year get a fund for this purpose. Two or three thousand dollars spent every year would in a few years do the whole work.

Mr. FOWLER. I think the way these forts have been neglected in the past is an outrage. I believe a predecessor of the hon. minister sold the old cannon at Fort Cumberland as old iron. Something should be done before the different mounds representing the battlements are completely destroyed.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I shall have one or two of the engineers at Halifax make an examination of all the forts during the coming season, so that we may have a report as to their condition.

Mr. DANIEL. Mention was made of the fort at St. John. I may say that there are two principal forts or batteries there. One of them has been allowed to fall entirely into disrepair, although I take it that it occupies a good strategical position. I refer to the old Redhead battery. It is all grass-grown. There is no attempt to keep it in any kind of repair. I do not think there is a dollar being spent on it. I think the government is not giving as much attention to Fort Dufferin, which is used annually for the carrying out of firing practice, as it ought to. I think that the government ought to pay more attention to the Redhead battery which is really the only fortification on that side of the harbour if they are going to keep it up at all. It has simply fallen into decay. Nothing is being done. I might also remind the minister that we have the very slight remains of the celebrated old Fort Latour in the harbour, and I certainly think that the least the government could do with that would be to inclose what is left of it and put a monument or something there to show what the place has been and commemorate the occurrences at this point in the early history of Canada. Those who have read history at all know that it was the scene of a very gallant exploit by Lady Latour who took the part of commanding officer in the absence of her husband and conducted a well known and historical defence. So that, in regard to the city of St. John there are two forts which should be kept up as modern forts, or at all events, kept in repair and then there is this old historical place, Fort Latour, which the government could preserve at slight expense and which ought to be maintained in order that the deeds of the past may be kept in the memory of present and future generations. There is no doubt that the history of Canada is full of thrilling incidents and I think we should at least commemorate them so that present and future generations may not be entirely unmindful of the history of their country.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I shall be very glad to include these forts in the list of those which will be looked after. There is a distinction to be made between historical forts and those which were constructed at a certain period and found afterwards to be in the wrong place or unnecessary. This whole question is one of sufficient importance and interest to be gone into carefully and I will see that it is done. It will be good practice for our engineering officers at any rate and very interesting indeed to get such information, and in another year I hope we will renew this interesting discussion.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. In that connection I would ask the minister to consider in addition to those forts which are mentioned what is known as the Old Fort at Toronto. That fort is famous in the history of this country more especially in connection with the war of 1812. On two occasions it was besieged and unfortunately on both of these occasions it was captured. But it was the scene of two very stout defences and it is to-day a standing landmark in Ontario and in Toronto. It is in what might be said to be an excellent state of preservation with the exception of one or two of the battlements. The entire configuration of the fort is intact. A year or two ago a certain society in Toronto volunteered to take it over in connection with certain other historical places in the city because it was threatened with partial destruction by the opening up of a highway for the purpose of running a street railway in that neighbourhood. The opening of this highway and the building of the street railway would have necessitated the destruction of at least one angle of the fort and it would have marred very greatly its picturesqueness and completeness. That, for the moment, has been averted. The hon. Minister of Militia and Defence (Sir Frederick Borden) will recollect having received deputations from Toronto on more than one occasion in conection with this matter.

The fort is there just as it was one hundred years ago except that the works are dilapidated and the pickets on the fortification are falling away in decay but the earthworks and the conformation of the fort are there. The people of Toronto are deeply interested in this matter. It is all government ground and requires no expense on the part of the government to protect this relic. There is no purchase necessary, the Crown owns the land and it is merely the watchfulness of the Crown that is required to protect this relic from invasion. If the government will have an eye on it and prevent what I might term vandalism—they will do a great deal to preserve this historical ground. I would consider the destruction of even a part of the fort as an act of vandalism. Its destruction is not necessary to open up new streets through there. There is ample room for any highway for public purposes without in any way destroying any portion of the fort. What is wanted is simply the watchfulness of the government to see that nothing is done that should not be done with what is now government property. It is really a little park space and some means should be taken by the government to preserve it in its present shape and to preserve the ground immediately surrounding it so that it still may be a little park for that portion of the city. I think it is only necessary to mention it to the minister who is aware of the situation and of the romantic history of that old work. I am sure the minister will do what is necessary to protect this relic from destruction or even from injury.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. My hon. friend (Mr. Macdonell) knows the circumstances in connection with the transfer of the fort to the city of Toronto. The government has sold to that city some 200 acres of land including this fort.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. Including the old fort ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Including everything, and I wish to add that I took the greatest pains to guard the safety of the fort in making that sale. According to the terms of the sale which will be incorporated in the deeds of transfer it will be absolutely impossible for the city, if it were disposed to do so, which I think it is not, to permit any act of vandalism in connection with the fort.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. That is precisely what was asked of the minister. Assurance was given us to that effect and I am glad to hear that this condition will be inserted in the deed.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. I think it would be well to consider the question of what should be done with the old cannon, rifles and swords which the government have stored in out of the way places and which are going to rack and ruin for want of a proper place to store them. We have very fine armouries all though Canada and there is nothing that would make a finer decoration than these old arms, swords and cannon. I think that the Hamilton regiment have applied at different times for a supply of these old arms and that the government are inclined to grant this request, but it requires a little energy on the part of those who are interested in the matter to secure a proper distribution of them. I think that every regiment in Canada would feel very proud indeed to be the possessor of these old arms.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. We are giving away the cannon, and we are giving away also arms which were sent from South Africa. But, so far as some of the obsolete small arms are concerned, we have been giving those to the schools and cadet corps, in order that they may learn —it may be in an imperfect way, but it is better than nothing—how to use the rifle, at least, in manual drill. The rule we have made, so far as cannon are concerned, is that any one can have them for public purposes who will pay the cost of transportation.

Mr. FOWLER. I think the minister should give these only to permanent institutions, and not to some that may last only for a day and then will sell the cannon for junk.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. They only lend them.

Mr. FOWLER. Does the minister give them away or lend them?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. They are given away.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I understood that they were only loaned.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Oh, well, we never expect to get them back.

Militia and Defence—chargeable to income—clothing and necessaries, $300,000.

Mr. CROCKET. Is there any intention to make a change in the establishment at Fredericton? I have a letter stating that some of the officers and men are talking of removing from Fredericton in June. There have been rumours of some change and of the infantry being replaced by a cavalry or artillery corps.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. It was the intention to place a squadron of cavalry there, as my hon. friend (Mr. Crocket) knows. That was found to be inexpedient, and then it was proposed to send a company of artillery. But for the present, I believe, no change is contemplated.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. I would draw the attention of the minister to a matter I spoke about earlier in the session. Before the change was made under which a duty is imposed upon uniforms and equipment, some officers ordered uniforms in the old country. It would seem only fair and right that, if these officers are called upon to pay the duty, some compensation should be made them.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In the same connection, I would mention a matter which I have already called attention to. I believe that the Highland regiments in Toronto and Montreal cannot get their regimentals in Canada. And the duty on these uniforms is very heavy. The matter has been discussed to see what is best to be done. The best solution presenting itself, to my mind, is that the Customs Department should send the invoices to the Militia Department and let that department pay the duty and save the money to the regiment.

There are also many individual cases. For instance, a man buys a rifle—nearly all our expert marksmen buy weapons of their own and, up to the present time, they have been using the Lee-Metford rifle. These arms, like officers' uniforms and equipment, are dutiable under the new law. The minister promised he would take the matter into consideration.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. With regard to the Highlanders, whose uniforms cannot be procured in Canada, I am glad to inform the committee that the Militia Council have considered the matter, and have reached a satisfactory conclusion. We are giving these regiments a larger amount of money than before. What has happened in the past is that the value of the clothing they would have worn has been given to the regiments, and they have bought the clothing in England and paid the difference themselves. I am happy to say that the solution we propose of the existing question is satisfactory to the regiments concerned. As to the question raised by my hon. friend from South Toronto (Mr. Macdonell), that is rather more difficult. I think that consideration should be given in cases where uniforms have actually been ordered under a condition of things which has existed ever since confederation, when, without notice, a change was made in that policy. I think that position should be considered and that the duty should be paid. That matter is being considered now, though we have not reached an actual conclusion. I want to get all the cases together and adopt a line of policy which will be applicable to all.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What about the unfortunate who patronized his own Canadian tailor, and ordered a new uniform before the new order was made? He will be charged the additional duty on cloth, for the merchant will be obliged, as a matter of business, to take advantage of the change.

Mr. LALOR. The new law is very objectionable to the rural battalions. I have a communication from the 37th battalion of Haldimand county saying that the officers have passed a resolution in opposition to the present arrangement. They think it is a hardship that officers of battalions, whose expenditures for military purposes are already greater than their incomes from military sources, should be taxed on uniforms and outfit that they purchase. I think it unfortunate that the government should have made this change in duties. But even though the customs authorities impose these duties, I think the Militia Department should reimburse the officers who purchase military uniforms.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. So far as uniforms are concerned, there is no reason in the world why the officers should not get their uniforms in Canada, as the men do. If a Canadian uniform is good enough for the man in the ranks, it ought to be good enough for the officer. I was an officer of the militia in Nova Scotia from 1863—not an officer from the beginning, for I began in the ranks. I bought my own uniforms, and they were made in Halifax. I never bought any other than a Canadian uniform up to the time when I became Minister of Militia.

Mr. DANIEL. Were these uniforms made by a Canadian tailor?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. They were made by Campbell, a man who knew how to make military clothing.

Mr. DANIEL. Was it made by one of the military tailors belonging to the military forces?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No, but by Campbell, a first rate tailor. He did some work for the imperial officers, no doubt. We talk about a self-contained militia. Thirty years ago we adopted the policy of having the clothing of the men made in Canada, but it seems to be a poor sort of self-contained militia if the officers of the forces are not to wear clothing made in Canada. If the officers will order their clothing in Canada, the enterprising tailors in Canada will soon find the men capable of giving the proper cut and finish to a uniform. Let us have Canada for the Canadians in this respect as well as in every other respect. I have no sympathy whatever with the idea that we must pamper the militia officer who happens to prefer to wear a coat made in England to a coat made in Canada. I except any cases of hardship that may occur; beyond that, I think our friends the officers should make up their minds to accept the situation. If I were going to give any assistance at all to officers, I would prefer to give it to an officer who buys a uniform made in Canada.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Like the minister, I have never had the honour of wearing a uniform that was not made in Canada. The minister knows very well that under the new regulations militia officers patronize Canadian tailors. The old custom was to give a rebate in duty on cloth. Whethere the officer profits by that, I do not know.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I would rather add to the pay of the officer, if necessary, than to pay his bills in that way.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. I am in a position to say that as good militia clothing can be made in Canada as in any other part of the world. I say that with great confidence and from actual knowledge. I know there are members in this House who buy their clothing in England to-day because they think they cannot get it good enough here. We have officers in the regiments who do the same thing, who feel in the same way. Well, if they continue to feel that way, let them pay for it. I am satisfied that if a man wants a uniform he can get one of any kind as cheap if not cheaper in Canada, and a better fitting garment.

Mr. LALOR. I think the remarks of the minister that he proposes to increase the pay of the officers of battalions will be quite acceptable. They would have more to pay for their clothing at home, and I hope he will act upon that suggestion and increase their pay. Although I am not a military man myself. I sympathize with their desire for increased pay.

Mr. BOLE. I would ask the minister if he knows what it costs to make a uniform? Representations have been made to me from Winnipeg that the uniforms are in such a shabby condition that some of the men have refused to appear on parade. What is supposed to be the life of a uniform, according to the regulations?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Three years, an overcoat is seven or eight years, a tunic three years.

Mr. FOWLER. This matter of officers' uniforms is a rather broad question. My own opinion always has been that there is too much gold lace and trimmings about the uniform of the officers of the different volunteer regiments in Canada. I think all this question about buying uniforms in England, and all this cry of the officers as represented by certain gentlemen in the House to-night on account of expense, would be done away with if the uniform was of a cheaper character, if a great deal of this gold lace and fittings were eliminated entirely. I have always been strongly in favour of that. Take a cavalry regiment for instance, these uniforms are tremendously expensive. When the hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Zimmerman), who I admit has much better knowledge of the subject than myself in the way of clothing, says uniforms can be made better and cheaper in Canada, that hon. gentlemen will find it difficult to get the class of uniform that a crack cavalry corps require in this country. I do not think you can get them made in this country, tailors have not the experience in making them. But I do not think we should have such a uniform as that in our regiments. If you allow one officer to wear them, to wear you might call a swell uniform, why it is going to be general. One man wants to be as well dressed as another; officers of the same corps, all lieutenants want to wear the same sort of uniform, captains the same way. The only way to do is to prescribe a simple and inexpensive uniform for the officers, then let them buy their uniforms in Canada, and nobody will be complaining about the duty, or wanting to increase the pay of the officers in order to enable them to buy uniforms. One reason why the volunteer regiments in Canada have difficulty getting officers is the very fact of the tremendous expense in connection with this silly and expensive uniform. Of course you want to draw a distinction between the uniform of an officer and that of a private, but it need not be a very broad distinction, particularly in a democratic country like this, where the social rank of the private is often and usually quite as good, and sometimes even better than the social rank of his superior officer. We do not want to perpetuate in Canada those old world distinctions that prevail in the old country. Let us have a democratic and simple, inexpensive uniform, and we will find this difficulty disappearing in time.

Mr. WARD. Do I understand the minister to say that in all cases new uniforms are issued every three years?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. The regulations lay down what is to be done, they are found on page 18 of the memorandum.

Mr. WARD. The reason I ask is that I have been told by an inspecting officer that all uniforms have to be condemned, not considering their age at all, after they have been used for three years, and if they are not condemned by the inspecting officer a new issue of clothing cannot be had. I understand that recently an issue was refused to one regiment in my district where the old uniforms have been in use since 1903. The last issue was in that year, and an application was made for New York uniforms and it was refused by the department because the others had not been condemned. I have even heard that it is not the intention of that regiment to appear in camp, but I hope that is not the case.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Our custom always was, when I had the command of a regiment, to keep the old uniforms and manage to get a new issue at the proper time for state occasions. I am very sorry to learn that any such rule as the hon. member for Durham (Mr. Ward) mentions should be carried out in this district. The men are now entitled to a new uniform every three years.

Mr. WARD. It was the regiment formerly commanded by himself that I was referring to.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In my time we always had two sets of uniforms. For the information of the hon. gentleman from Kings and Albert (Mr. Fowler) I may say that formerly an officer could not enter the military school without having his full dress uniform, his mess uniform, and his drill uniform. By repeated struggling with former ministers, years ago, that was changed so that the mess uniform was done away with, and after further struggling the full dress uniform was done away with so that finally all that was necessary for an officer to have in order to attend the military school or to go to camp, was his drill uniform, and I think that is all that is necessary now.

In connection with the coming camps I would suggest to the minister the advisability of having rough but neat tables with awnings over them for the men to eat their meals from instead of having to sit in their tents on the ground. The saving on uniforms alone, I am satisfied, would make up the expense.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. We are getting them now, tarpaulins and tables.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Then in the past large sums were paid to local carters for the transport of baggage, &c., and these men skinned the officers and men as they only know how.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. We are using the large army service corps wagons now for the transport of baggage.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Will these be attached to each regiment ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. To the camp.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The minister now has wagons set apart for every district, and in case of actual service each company will have a certain number of wagons with it. I do not suggest to take all these wagons to camp, but I would suggest that there should be one or two teams and wagons at the disposal of each regiment for the handling of cartage.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I think that is done now in connection with the cavalry.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I know that but not in connection with the infantry at all.

Mr. FOWLER. It is done in New Brunswick with infantry and cavalry both.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. No, it is not. Officers report to me and I believe to the department, that in some cases the rationing by the army service corps has not been all that it should be. This is a matter that I suppose could be set right by the inspecting officers immediately.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. On the whole, I think it has been very satisfactory.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. In regard to the equipment of the various regiments, I think it would be a wise thing if the department could see their way clear to place the equipment at the disposal of each regiment in their own quarters instead of their having to send to the district headquarters wherever they may be. We have to send to Toronto and it would be impossible to mobilize the troops in our district quickly. We know how difficult it is and the time it takes to get anything through the Militia Department.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. That is one on us.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. If there was a call for troops say at Niagara Falls, we would first have to send to Toronto for tents, cooking utensils, &c. That is perfectly absurd. In the Buffalo armouries they have their wagons, tents, cooking utensils and arms all ready and they could mobilize and be in camp in any part of the city of Buffalo in less than six hours. It would be impossible to get this equipment from the central district to the place where they wished to mobilize in anything like that time.

Mr. FOWLER. Have you an armoury at Hamilton ?

Mr. ZIMERMAN. We have a very good armoury and about 1,300 men in the militia. It is a central point.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. They are city corps and never go into camp.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. The idea of not having an equipment is absurd. The militia if called out suddenly would be practically helpless and would have to wait until supplies came from the central district. I certainly think the city regiments which are expected to mobilize hurriedly should have everything necessary to place them in camp in a comfortable position. I spoke of this last year and the minister said the matter would be considered. I hope he will consider it further this year and act in the matter which I really think is one of the most important in connection with the city militia.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The hon. member from Hamilton (Mr. Zimmerman) as made a proper suggestion and if there were an unlimited supply of tents I could see how this would be a proper thing to have. Suppose they were kept at Hamilton it would take 100 or 120 tents and these would never be used except on active service. That is the only point I see in the matter.

Mr. FOWLER. Do I understand it to be the intention of the minister to procure tables and that sort of things for the different regiments when they go into camp ? Are they going to have all the modern equipment of a home when they are at camp ? That seems to be the idea of the hon. gentleman from Victoria (Mr. Sam. Hughes). I have heard my hon. friend (Mr. Sam. Hughes) tell many tales of hardships he endured in South Africa.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Neither my hon. friend (Mr. Fowler) nor any other man ever heard me tell a tale of hardship in South Africa or anywhere else.

Mr. FOWLER. The hon. gentleman is so rugged that what would be a hardship to another man is a pleasure to him. But, it is certain he did not have table napkins and mahogany dining tables on active service.

Mr. CARNEY. Nor finger bowls.

Mr. FOWLER. Nor finger bowls either. I am afraid the hon. gentleman (Mr. Hughes) desires to nuture our militia men in the lap of luxury. Why, on active service they could not carry this impedimenta of mahogany dining tables and pianos, and if for instance our friends to the south were to become our foes, our militia, hampered with such luxuries, would not be able to defend their country. A better use could be made of the money than to apply it in the direction the hon. gentleman (Mr. Hughes) suggests. Do I understand from the minister that it is intended to get awnings under which the gentlemen of the militia may sit so that the sun may not tan their countenances? In the old days when I was in the militia we used to wear a little round cap perched on three or four hairs on one side of the head, and when the twelve days training were up we were as brown as a berry. We had no awnings or other luxuries, but we did very good drill and we were an efficient corps.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In your own opinion.

Mr. FOWLER. In the opinion of the inspectors as their records will show. Our militiamen do not require these luxuries for the twelve days training in camp, and I think the money can be applied to much better purpose.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I do not know how the boys are brought up in the part of Canada whence my hon. friend (Mr. Fowler) comes, but I can tell him that in my part of the country they are used to the decent conveniences of civilization. The hon .gentleman says that I have made reference to feather-bed soldiers.

Mr. FOWLER. It was you who said that.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. I have no hesitation in saying that it is a disgrace to bring boys from their homes to camps of instruction, and ask them to sleep and eat in muddy tents when for a few dollars the decent convenience of life could be provided. What I want to know is whether it is the intention of the department to provide these conveniences, because if not a great many of the regiments will supply them for themselves. They do not want it to turn out as in the case of the helmets, that many of the men supplied their own helmets, and found afterwards that the government made an issue the same year. These are camps of instruction, to which these young men are brought; they will not be on active service in which case they would be moving along each day, but they will be twelve days in the same tent, and it is only reasonable to ask that some comforts should be provided. I am suprised that any gentleman who ever wore the uniform of a Canadian militia officer, should have the hardihood to stand up in this House and speak as my hon. friend (Mr. Fowler) has spoken.

Mr. J. D. REID. I have listened for some time to these militiamen eulogizing each other, and I notice that the minister is no doubt smiling at the fact that no reference is made to his department being one of the most extravagant of all the departments of government. In the list of those from whom supplies have been purchased, I see the same lot who do business with the other departments and who get prices which are considered sufficiently high to allow of a good rake off. There is not the slightest doubt that there are many firms or individuals in Canada who have been made wealthy since the Minister of Militia took charge of this department, simply by the amount of supplies that he has bought from them. In this estimate there are $500,000 for clothing, and year after year, two firms alone supplied half a million dollars worth. The minister tells us that tenders are called for, but the fact is that letters are sent around to some of his political friends inviting them to provide the supplies. In that way the friends of the government are paid higher prices than would be paid if there was open competition. The minister also knows that we have paid $1,128,000 for rifles and that only 5,000 of these rifles are now fit to be used. Another strange thing is, that the parts of this rifle are made in the United States, and that in case of trouble with our neighbours to the south, our supply would be cut off and our volunteers be without arms. Now, I have read in the newspapers that the Minister of Militia is to leave for England to-morrow; that he is going to be our High Commissioner; and that he would not return to this House, so that, not he, but some other minister will have the expenditure of the money we are now voting. If that is the case, the minister will not have the spending of this money. I would like to ask him if that report is true, and if he is likely to remain in England and we are to lose his services in this country. I have heard a great deal about South Africa, and I would like to know whether the people there have ever heard of any rifle like this. Perhaps the minister can give us a little statement as to how our militia did in South Africa, and let us know what he intends doing with regard to trooper Mulloy. He does not hesitate to come down with $4,000,000 expenditure, and yet he has not seen his way to give a pension of a few hundred dollars to this man who met with an accident which left him in a condition in which he is unable to earn his living.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. My hon. friend has given me quite a large order. First, I want at once to set his mind at rest as to whether I shall be here or not. I can assure him that as far as I know I am likely to be here. I have not been offered the High Commissionership, and except for the rumours that I have seen in the newspapers, I know nothing about it. The High Commissionership is not vacant, and as far as I know the noble gentleman who holds it is enjoying as good health to-day as ever, and I am sure that we all hope that he will live for many years to fill the position which he adorns and which he has so ably filled for the last ten or twelve years. As to contracts, I have no objection to giving them to Liberals provided they are good contractors; indeed, I am bound to confess that I prefer doing so. But I will not give a contract to a Liberal simply because he is a Liberal; he must be capable of doing the work. The hon. gentleman says that some of the contractors have got rich. Well, all I have to say is that I hope that every good contractor who does work for the Militia Department is getting a fair return for his investment and his labour; he has a right to it. We do not want any work done for the department that is not well done and we think the labourer is worthy of his hire. I challenge my hon. friend to investigate any of the contracts which have been made by my department in connection with clothing or any other supplies, and I shall be glad to afford him every facility. I am certain that the very best that could be done has been done, and that value has been received for all the money that has been paid out. My hon. friend says that the same contractors receive contracts year after year. Well, we are in the habit of letting contracts for three years at a time. That was a custom of the late government. When we came into power I changed that, and I made a mistake when I did so, and I reverted to the custom of the former administration. We had it threshed out here, and I admitted that my predecessors had pursued a wise course in giving a contract for three years and sometimes for four years, as the best value was got in that way. As to the Ross rifle, it would take rather too long to discuss that fully to-night. I have already taken advantage of two occasions to explain as well as I could what has been done in regard to that rifle. It is not true that we have paid over a million of money and have got only 5,000 rifles. So far as I know, we have got from 25,000 to 30,000 rifles, which are quite fit for service. No country has ever adopted a new rifle without having more or less difficulty during its first issue. There have been mistakes and some defects in manufacture discovered; but we have the written guarantee of the company that every single defect resulting from error in manufacture shall be made good. They are being made good now, and I firmly believe that the service rifle adopted by Canada is and will prove to be one of the best rifles if not the best in the world. My hon. friend has said that we are indebted to the United States for all the parts of that rifle. Well, my hon. friend is drawing too long a bow.

Mr. J. D. REID. Perhaps not all, but the main parts.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. That is not the fact, as my hon. friend will see if he takes the trouble to look at the papers that have been brought down. Unfortunately we cannot get in Canada the steel out of which rifles can be made. That is not the fault of the Ross rifle. We are developing the manufacture of steel in Canada, and in a short time we shall produce the proper kind of steel for rifles. It is no part of the business of the manufacturer of rifles to make the steel. He makes the rifle. Most of the steel which had previously been imported from the United States is now being imported from Great Britain. With the exception of a few springs, which were imported from the United States, and which are now imported from Great Britain, all the work on the Ross rifle is made in the Ross rifle factory, and the different processes there number many hundreds. I wish my hon. friend, who is a good business man, and who is interested in developing manufactories in Canada, would take the trouble to go down and visit the Ross rifle factory. If he does, we shall never hear again observations from him in the line of those to which he has given utterance to-night. The Ross rifle factory, instead of having all the opposition that could possibly be brought against it in certain quarters, deserves the support of this House and of the people of this country, and I am perfectly certain that it will receive it in due time. The rifle will go through the ordeal successfully, such an ordeal as I venture to say no other rifle in any other British country or in any country in the world has ever been subjected to before. I will ask my hon. friend to be considerate enough, to be patriotic enough to at least reserve his final judgment until we have gone through another set of camps and until we have had another opportunity of testing this rifle as it will be tested by actual use.

Mr. J. D. REID. There have been 27,012 rifles issued up to March 2, 1907. They have delivered 9,000 to the Department of Militia and Defence, 500 to the Northwest Mounted Police, 500 to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, 16,500 to the Department of Militia and Defence and 12 to the Department of Justice. The government have bought these rifles at a cost of $25 each making in all $675,550, and in addition to that they have advanced $552,000 more for rifles to be delivered in future.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. There are 52,000 under construction.

Mr. J. D. REID. From the report which has been brought down to the House I gather that all the rifles have been condemned by the officers in nearly every department.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Oh, no.

Mr. J. D. REID. They have been condemned from the mounted police in the west right down to the lower provinces, and that being the case I think it is not fair to the citizens of this country that a rifle of that kind should be imposed upon them. I certainly am just as patriotic as any other man and I would be glad to see them manufactured in Canada taking it for granted that they can be manufactured at or near what they would cost in any other country. The minister knows he can purchase Lee-Enfields at from $7 or $8 less than these rifles are being manufactured for.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Not with the duty, the cost of freight and various charges. The Lee-Enfield rifle to-day with 20 per cent added, which is not a very large margin for the manufacture, and the cost of transportation, will cost twice as much as the Ross rifle.

Mr. J. D. REID. If the duty is added, but the government bring in every thing that is required for their own use free.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. They do not now.

Mr. J. D. REID. This year they have added the duty, but at the time this contract was made there was no duty collected on anything coming in for this Ross rifle.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. My hon. friend knows that the manufacture of woolen goods, cotton goods and every thing that is made in Canada has received a certain amount of aid by way of duty. Surely he would not deny to the rifle factory the same advantage and that is all that has been given in this case; in fact, much less has been given than has been given to other manufactures.

Mr. J. D. REID. Even with the duty on there is quite an advance in price. What I am particularly finding fault with is the fact of so many of these rifles being in use. In addition the minister states that the Ross Rifle Company are repairing these at their own expense. From the reports that have been brought down the Ross Rifle Company refused to do this unless the government paid them to put the rifles in proper shape. The mark I rifle is being changed to a mark III.

Mr. J. D. REID.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No, the sight is a mark III sight.

Mr. J. D. REID. But there is a mark III rifle.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No.

Mr. J. D. REID. I saw one the other day with a card on it bearing the words 'mark III' and there is a report stating that there is one now coming out. I saw in the report the other day where the board recommended twenty-three changes in this mark III rifle.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. No, you never saw any such thing.

Mr. J. D. REID. I saw the report in which there were twenty-three changes recommended.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Never in the world.

Mr. J. D. REID. I will have it here in five minutes.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I am sorry the hon. gentleman is not better posted on this subject. I know he is doing his best. There has been a determined set made on this rifle such as never was made in any other country. I do not like to accuse the hon. gentleman of being an agent for any company which desires to kill the Ross rifle.

An hon. MEMBER. Order.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I say that I do not accuse him of being an agent, but the agents of other companies are travelling through the Dominion of Canada endeavouring to prevail upon members of the force to discard the Ross rifle. There have been 27,000 of the Ross rifle in commission and how many have failed? In the firing of these 27,000 rifles there has been only one injury and that of a slight character to the eye of a sergeant major by the blowing back of the firing pin, the end of which struck him in the face. There were two or three cases where a defect was found in the rifle. There was one rifle in which the firing pin nut came back while the rifle was being fired in the city of St. John and these are the only accidents that have occurred to the Ross rifle.

Mr. J. D. REID. That is not so.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. We have had it from two witnesses before the Public Accounts Committee and Capt. Drake admitted that he knew nothing at all about rifles. He was an artillery man. The firing pin nut flew back and we know the explanation of that accident. The sergeant major admitted in his evidence before the committee that it was the spring that had blown it back.

Mr. J. D. REID. I did not think that you could refer to the report of the Public Accounts Committee.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The report was presented here this afternoon. The spring threw it back and no other cause could he show. He imagined that there had been something else but he could not tell what it was that had sent this thing back. I do not know of any rifle which can show so few accidents as this. Take the Lee-Enfield that the hon. gentleman mentioned. The Lee-Enfield had nine marks and the short Lee-Enfield had four changes altogether. As I pointed out not long ago there were over one hundred and twenty changes made between one mark and the other in the English rifle and yet we heard nothing about it. In no country in the world has such an agitation been carried on against a rifle as that which has been carried on against the Ross rifle. The United States discarded over six hundred thousand rifles and my hon. friend will search in vain the records of the United States House or Senate to find any condemnation of the war department for discarding these rifles. When Great Britain imported a lot of pot metal bayonets the matter was referred to a committee and no discussion took place upon it. These matters are always treated without the arena of party politics, but I am sorry to say that a different line has been proceeded upon in regard to the Ross rifle in this country. When once it was proceeded with I insisted that we should have the matter probed to the bottom, and that no possible objection urged against the rifle could be upheld. Even the mark I, if it is properly made, is as far ahead of the Lee-Enfield as day light is ahead of darkness. The mark II has been placed in the hands of our soldiers. Only one accident has occurred in mark I, and none with mark II. In one of these a little piece flew back in the city of St. John and in the other the spring blew back the firing pin and the man who was firing the rifle was hit in the face. It was due to a difficulty with the firing pin collar. There has never been any return ordered of the accidents to the Lee-Enfield rifle, as there have been again and again in the case of the Ross rifle. Soldiers are instructed to report every defect observed in the Ross rifle for the very reason that it is a new arm, and, if there is any defect in it, the department want to know of it, in order that that defect may be remedied. But, although, such report has never been had of the Lee-Enfield, does anybody suppose that accidents with the Lee-Enfield are unknown? Why, many serious accidents have been known with the use of that rifle. A man lies down at the ranges to fire his Lee-Enfield; something goes wrong with the mechanism of the rifle; an accident occurs and the man is blown into eternity. Hundreds of accidents have occurred, in which while men have not been killed, they have been taken to the hospitals to have their wounds dressed. Yet there are no reports against the Lee-Enfield. And Commissioner Perry swore in the presense of hon. members who are sitting here to-night, that he had condemned the entire issue of the Ross rifle in connection with the Northwest Mounted Police, largely because of the accident to the sergeant-major, an accident which the commissioner had not seen, but only heard of. He and the board decided that, owing to this accident they had better discontinue the use of the rifle. Is that a reason for condemning a whole issue of an arm such as this? Why, it shows that these men did not consider the results of handling these modern rifles. You will hardly go down to the rifle range to fire a short match with the Lee-Enfield rifle without having more accidents than this. It simply shows that these gentlemen are not accustomed to consider the matter in the light of general results. It is not surprising to hear that their report was based on this one accident. And this was with the mark I rifle. Mark II, as everybody knows, is infinitely superior. The changes that my hon. friend (Mr. J. D. Reid) refers to, are mere trifles—strengthening a pin, fixing the sight centre line, and little petty things of that kind that no one who knows anything about a rifle would urge as indicating defects. I do not want to take up the time of the committee, but I could give quotations to show that Captain Drake shows that he knows nothing about the action of the rifle. He speaks of the pull-off being heavy as one objection. But, it appeared when he was questioned, that he did not know there was a difference in pull-off between a shot gun, a sporting rifle, and a military rifle. I could give quotations to show that the sergeant major said that he thought the accident occurred from the gas coming out of the cartridge turning two or three right angles in the barrel, finding its way finally out through a little bit of a hole and blowing back the pin. Why, the evidence shows simply that the man was excited and knew nothing about the real nature of the accident. No more satisfactory result has ever followed the explorations of any committee of this House than that in the case of the committee examining into this Ross rifle. So far as I am concerned, even if it prolongs this session in to the summer, I want that committee to go on, for every day proves more clearly the correctness of the judgment of those who stood by the Ross rifle from the first. The hon. gentleman asked if this idea had been picked up in South Africa? I can tell the hon. gentleman that I got the idea of a straight pull rifle in South Africa, when I found the Boers that were doing the greatest execution against our own men were using the Mannlicher rifle, which is of the straight-pull pattern. But the recoil was taken at the base of the bolt, instead of at the head of the bolt as in this rifle. But I have gone into that question before, and need not enlarge upon it now.

Mr. J. D. REID. I must say that the hon. gentleman from Victoria and Haliburton (Mr. Sam. Hughes) is very easily satisfied if he is satisfied with the results of the examination of the Public Accounts Committee as a vindication of the Ross rifle. Why, the hon. gentleman has not heard one witness approve of this rifle. Every one of them condemned the rifle, and declared that it was not a fit rifle for active service.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Will the hon. gentleman name one witness who condemned it?

Mr. J. D. REID. Every one of them condemned it.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Not a man.

Mr. J. D. REID. Why, let the hon. gentleman read the evidence. Of course, he was there trying to prove that the rifle was the best rifle that could possibly be used. In addition to the statements of witnesses, we have the fact that all the reports appearing in the Blue-book condemn this rifle. It may be Mark I as the hon. gentleman says. I do not know whether they had Mark II or not. Of course, I am not going to condemn Mark II or Mark III, whatever the latest pattern may be, until the reports come in. But certainly the evidence regarding Mark I shows clearly that this is not a fit rifle to be in the hands of the militia of any country for active service. After they were issued, 9,000 were recalled, or are not fit for service.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Have these been recalled?

Mr. J. D. REID. Every one of them. I am satisfied that the hon. member for Victoria and Haliburton (Mr. Sam. Hughes) should defend this rifle. The minister will not do it himself but leaves it to the hon. member for Victoria. It is all the greater condemnation of the rifle in my eyes that the minister is ashamed to defend it himself.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Have 9,000 of these rifles been recalled?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No.

Mr. J. D. REID. How many of them have been recalled? I would ask if these 9,000 Mark I are fit for service in this country?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I believe they are. A portion of them have been issued, and none of them have been recalled so far as I know.

Mr. J. D. REID. Have they been used?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Yes, they are being used now.

Mr. J. D. REID. If my memory serves me well, 1,000 were sent to the mounted police, and the mounted police refused absolutely to use them and reported accordingly—reported that they were not fit for use. I think that came out in evidence; at all events, it is in the report of the mounted police. There at least, is 1,000 out of the 9,000. The hon. minister states that they are all being used, yet here are 1,000 condemned.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Commissioner Perry to-day, swore distinctly that the report was issued practically entirely on the single accident to one weapon at Fort Macleod. And, at the time when this accident occurred, the witness himself was in Ottawa. He never saw the accident.

Mr. J. D. REID. I was not present when Commissioner Perry gave his evidence today. But I take his report, and I assume that his report is true. If he made a report such as the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sam. Hughes) states, he is not fit for his position. Yet, I believe, he is considered one of the best men in the mounted police. And did not the sergeant major state that they had tried more than one rifle?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What about it?

Mr. J. D. REID. And that they could not use them?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Never.

Mr. J. D. REID. He said they did not give satisfaction, and so they condemned the whole lot. That is the evidence. But not a man who has given evidence before the Public Accounts Committee has approved of the Ross rifle. Every one of them stated that the Lee-Enfield was a better rifle.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Not one man who has appeared before the committee has stated that the Lee-Enfield was a better rifle. I stake my reputation as a member of parliament and an officer of the militia upon that statement. And if one of them did say such a thing, I have no hesitation in saying that he does not know his business. But the words have never been uttered that the Lee-Enfield was superior to the Ross rifle.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I desire to correct an erroneous impression which my hon. friend (Mr. Sam. Hughes) would leave upon the minds of hon. members. He states that Commissioner Perry condemned 1,000 rifles because of one accident. That is an error; Commissioner Perry never said anything of that kind. But he distinguished between accidents to the man and accidents to the gun. One man got hurt. But Commissioner Perry states that there were about forty or fifty accidents to rifles. So high was the percentage of accidents that, though it was a very serious thing to condemn the rifle, he considered that he could not assume the responsibility of refraining from condemning it. For that reason he condemned it as unserviceable and unsafe and he recommended that it be returned to the stores.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. The hon. gentleman says that Commissioner Perry said that he did not condemn the rifles principally on the evidence of this one accident. Commissioner Perry swore positively, when he was asked if he condemned the Ross rifle for this one accident to the sergeant major that he would. This man said on account of one accident he felt nervous in using the rifle. Commissioner Perry used these very words, that the rifle was condemned, and that the primary cause was the accident to the sergeant-major. When I asked him if there were other defects in the rifle he said that the bolt jams, the three springs in the rifle he thought were weak.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I think my hon. friend is altogether wrong, though no doubt he thinks he is right. He asked Mr. Perry if he condemned the rifle on that one accident and he said, yes; but he distinguished between accidents to rifles and accidents to human beings. He says there were forty or fifty casualties, and that the boards that were held at Regina, Lethbridge and McLeod examined at least two dozen witnesses at each one of them, who gave their account of what happened to their respective rifles. If you go on a little further you will find that on the 27th of January last the colonel of the Royal Canadian Dragoons makes his report to the department, and after naming a number of defects, say the rifle is not a fit rifle for service. That is Mark II. So practically you have Mark I and Mark II condemned by some of the best military men, as we think, in the country.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No doubt the hon. gentleman believes the statements which he makes here, but I think they lack the essential element to a large extent.

Mr. J. D. REID. I do not think that is a fair remark to make towards an hon. gentleman.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Very well, I wish to call the attention of the committee to these facts. Major Perry passed upon this Ross rifle, he was one of the first thoroughly to investigate the pattern of the Ross rifle. The result of his investigation was forwarded to me by Controller White, and in addition to the report which had been made by the first committee appointed by me, Controller White's report was one of the determining reasons that led me to accept that rifle. That report has been laid upon the table of the House. I am not aware that Mr. Perry has ever withdrawn one word from the statement which he made in that report. He made not only one report but two reports. The Ross rifle as such was unanimously approved by all the inspectors and the permanent officers of the Northwest Mounted Police, and there were many of them who had an opportunity of testing it, in cold weather and in warm weather. The Ross rifle was adopted, the Northwest Mounted Police ordered 1,000. Those rifles were delivered. I have a letter from Colonel White, Controller of the Northwest Mounted Police, which is among the papers laid on the table, stating that the inspector who, with Colonel Cartwright, was engaged in inspecting these rifles, and who unfortunately died before his report was made, when passing through Ottawa stopped to see him and told him he was delighted with the rifle. The rifles were sent on. It turns out that there were some defects of manufacture, and there need not be any dispute upon this point. The rifle did not prove to be what was expected, that is, the individual rifle. What happened? When reports were made to the Ross Rifle Company the company said at once: We will replace those rifles. It is not the Ross rifle per se that is at fault, and Major Perry, unless he goes back upon everything he says in these two reports, will not dare to say that the Ross rifle in itself was wrong. But he does say that certain rifles were delivered in which there were defects in manufacture and which rendered them undesirable weapons. I am speaking now of certain rifles, not of the rifle as a whole, not referring to the principle upon which it is made. I have not heard yet any one say that the rifle in principle was wrong or at fault. I have heard evidence that there were defects in certain rifles, defects in manufacture. I was going on to say that we need not waste time discussing this point. Those rifles have been taken over by the Ross Rifle Company, the company now have a half dozen rifles or so, and they are only waiting for a notice from the Northwest Mounted Police authorities to take them to the Northwest to be thoroughly examined and inspected to see whether the rifles which they have on hand are satisfactory. If they are found unsatisfactory they are going to issue a substitute for the thousand rifles that the Northwest Mounted Police now have, at their own expense, another thousand. That is the whole story, and there is not involved in it any condemnation of the rifle in principle. There is involved in it the fact that certain defects of manufacture existed, and that the Ross Rifle Company have offered to take them back and substitute good rifles.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I do not think that anybody is arguing that the Ross rifle per se is not a good rifle, that its mechanism is not good, that the sealed pattern was not a good pattern. But if the structural weaknesses are there and there are certain defects which make the rifle unfit for service, what difference is there whether the pattern is wrong or the making of the rifle ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Every difference in the world, because if the rifle is all right in design it may be made right, and the defects are defects of manufacture.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I say it is not a good rifle, and if you agree to that, there is no difference between us. The rifle submitted to the mounted police in the first place was a hand made rifle manufactured at Hartford, and the rifles afterwards distributed were made at the Ross rifle factory, and according to these reports many structural weaknesses and faults in the workmanship existed. I do not see that it makes any difference whether the pattern is wrong or the workmanship, as long as the rifle is defective. If a man gets his eye almost blown out, surely there is some defect. The proof of the pudding is in the eating.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. It makes a lot of difference.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In regard to the structural weaknesses of the rifle, the hon. member for Sherbrooke has pointed out that one accident to a rifle condemns the whole rifle. The hon. gentleman summoned Major McRobie here to prove——

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I did not summon him.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Mr. Northrup summoned him, but when he saw he was in a hole he said that he had nothing to do with it at all, that Dr. Worthington told him to summon Major McRobie. I have here the evidence of Major McRobie. I asked him if he had any experience with rifles exploding, and he had had one rifle explode and his son had another. I asked what rifles they were, and he said that the first was the Lee-Enfield and the other, a carbine, was the Lee-Metford, the same make of rifle, the British rifle. They had both exploded, the whole breech had split open.

Mr. J. D. REID. The evidence given up there certainly has convinced me that the Mark I rifle was not right.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Might I ask the hon. gentleman if he was not convinced before he went there?

Mr. J. D. REID. No, I was not convinced before I went there, but I was convinced from the reports in circulation in this country that there was something wrong about the Ross rifle deal, and I think the hon. gentleman should try to help in finding it out. The minister gets wrathy when we try to ferret out anything that we think is wrong, and I can understand that ; but I think the member (Mr. Sam. Hughes), instead of helping the minister, should try to help us. He knows that rifle is not right, and he would not shoot one off himself. He went in and tried to shoot, and he could not hit a target 90 feet square.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Not a member of the House has heard me directly or indirectly defend the government in regard to the contract or the financial aspect of the transaction at all. If he can show any graft, anything crooked in connection with the Ross rifle, I am at his back to unearth it. Who has taken the lead in having all defects exposed in the committee? I have been most anxious to have every one of them exposed, but I point out that Perry in his evidence to-day, endorsed the Mark II rifle to the utmost. The only objection he had in condemning the rifle he said was the accident to the sergeant-major. I asked him to name the defects of the rifle, and he said that the rifle sometimes jammed, but he admitted he never saw one that had jammed. He declared also that the Winchester frequently jammed. There were three springs in the rifles that were somewhat weak, although he never found them himself. I want to point out here, and it can be satisfactorily demonstrated, that, whether it is for love, or patriotism, or some other cause, certain interested persons have gone from the Atlantic to the Pacific, or as far as these rifles go, pointing out to the people the defects of this rifle, showing the weaknesses——

Mr. J. D. REID. That is only your assertion.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Surely my hon. friend does not think I am busy in this?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I do not know if a rifle factory is behind you or not.

Mr. J. D. REID. There is no evidence to that effect.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. There is no evidence to any other effect. It can be shown that where the stock of the rifle was broken it was broken deliberately. If you read General Otter's report, you will see that some of these accidents were suspected of being caused deliberately by the men trying to smash the rifles. It is reported that one man was seen to take the back sight and twist it around with his finger and thumb and then twist it back again.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Is that a good sight ?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. It is not the sight I have endorsed, but it is the sight which is on the rifle. Several minor defects were pointed out by this witness, but does any man say that they were sufficient to condemn a rifle ? I say that no honest man dare to stand up before the people of the country and say that trifling, petty, objections like this should condemn a rifle. I say that the man who would do so is either prejudiced, or influenced, or he does not understand what he is talking about.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I am quite willing to stand up and condemn that rifle and I am not dishonest. I think it requires a man with a twenty-four carat assurance to get up in this House and advocate that the Ross rifle is a proper rifle to serve out to the militia men of this country. My hon. friend (Mr. Sam. Hughes) says that at the committee to-day, Major Perry approved the Ross rifle in emphatic terms. Major Perry's emphatic approbation of the Ross rifle is to be found in his statement that he recognized the seriousness of condemning that rifle, but under the circumstances he could not do otherwise, because structural weakness and other defects existed, and so he asked to have it withdrawn as it was not only unserviceable but unsafe. If my hon. friend (Mr. Hughes) thinks that, an approbation of Mark I, I do not know what he is going to do when Mark II and Mark III are issued. It is an extraordinary idea of the hon. gentleman to think that some one is travelling from Halifax to Vancouver, breaking these Ross rifles.

Mr. J. D. REID. He is drawing on his imagination.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I rely on the evidence.

Mr. SPROULE. I have listened to the evidence taken before the committee, and I have come to the conclusion that the Ross rifle is not a fit rifle to issue to the Canadian militia. It is said that a horse is no better than his weakest leg, that a ship is no better than her rottenest plank, and so a rifle is no better in active service than its smallest defect. It does not matter how trivial the defect may, be if it renders the rifle useless. I listened to the evidence in that committee, and I reached the conclusion that out of 1,000 rifles issued, accidents happened to 300 of them. In face of that record I say it is not a safe rifle to issue.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. That is not the evidence at all.

Mr. SPROULE. That was the evidence. The hon. member (Mr. Sam. Hughes) says that the Northwest Mounted Police did not condemn this rifle.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I said nothing of the kind.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman said the Northwest Mounted Police condemned it because of one accident.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Exactly.

Mr. SPROULE. Well it does not happen to be a fact because the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sam. Hughes) says it. I have the report here and inspector Sanders says :

Owing to some defects being discovered in the Ross rifles it was not thought advisable to finish the annual course in musketry and target practice.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Major Perry telegraphed to this gentleman to stop the practice.

Mr. SPROULE. Are they made by day's reports :

Rifle practice with the new Ross rifle was started in July, but these rifles having been found defective it had to be discontinued.

I have quoted two reports against the rifle, and I find there are several others. I believe that these men were honest and truthful and that they gave a correct report. If 300 out of 1,000 rifles are disabled in the short space of a few weeks, what kind of a rifle is that to equip our active militia with ? Why, the minister himself has admitted that the manufacturers have acknowledged these defects and have offered to remedy them. We have no further guarantee than the word of these manufacturers for it, and after their promises with regard to the first issue, we cannot rely much on their undertaking in reference to the second issue. The military men who reported against this rifle were, I assure, honest and unprejudiced, and were trying to discharge their duty faithfully. In view of all the circumstances, how can any man say that the Ross rifle is an efficient arm?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The member for Grey (Mr. Sproule) has read from the report of some of the subordinate officers, but why did he not read Commissioner Perry's report which said :

Some serious defects were found in the Ross rifle with which the force was armed last year, when it was put to the severe test of the annual target practice. As soon as these were discovered the practice was suspended as it was thought some serious accident might happen.

Mark the words 'might happen.' When he received notice that this accident occurred to the sergeant major——

Mr. J. D. REID. What sergeant major?

Mr. SAM HUGHES. Sergeant major Bowridge, the only man ever hurt who was struck with the firing pin owing to a defect, said that when he got back, and before his board of officers were assembled and reported on the rifles, he telegraphed to the various squadrons to discontinue their rifle practice for the year, and it was accordingly stopped. Then what did the other commissioners do ? They reported that they had discontinued the rifle practice.

Mr. SPROULE. The reports of several of these individuals were that they discontinued the rifle practice of their own motion, because the Ross rifle was found to be defective, and not because Major Perry ordered them.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Does the hon. gentleman not know that not one of these men dare discontinue the rifle practice without Major Perry's order ?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I do not think anything is gained by discussing this matter at this time. There will be other opportunities, and as the minister wishes to get away, I think we would be wise to let this item pass.

Militia and Defence—provisions and supplies, $350,000.

Mr. SPROULE. I wish to ask one question with regard to the aggregate expenditure for militia and defence. I see that the amount to be expended on income is $3,928,000 and the amount on capital account $1,300,000. That makes $5,228,000. I understood the hon. minister to tell us last night that the total expenditure was between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I did not deal with the expenditure on capital account. in 1895-6 there was $1,000,000 voted on capital account to which I did not refer ; that was for the purpose of purchasing warlike stores of various kinds, including rifles. In the present estimates the $1,300,000 on capital account is for a similar purpose. I may say that $1,300,000 was voted for the first time about four years ago, and I explained at the time that it would take an annual vote of that amount for about five years to accumulate a surplus of clothing, stores, artillery and other things required, after which that vote will disappear. We are now approaching the end of that period. I do not say that it will disappear next year, but it will considerably diminish.

Mr. SPROULE. I presume there will be an additional amount in the supplementary estimates as well ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. There is, but not very much.

Militia and Defence—contingencies, $45,000.

Mr. J. D. REID. Is there any chance of the minister giving that man Mulloy a small pension ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I would like very much to do it. It would have to be done by a gratuity.

Mr. J. D. REID. If the hon. minister would put him on the staff of his department and give him something to do, I think everybody in Canada would be gratified.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I shall be glad to see if I can do that.

Royal Military College, $92,000.

Mr. SPROULE. How many students are attending that college at the present time ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. 90.

Dominion Arsenal, $233,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Where is the Dominion arsenal now ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. At Quebec.

Mr. SPROULE. There was a discussion some years ago with regard to having more than one. Has the minister considered that ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. We ought to have three more, and I hope we shall, but it will require a good deal of money. My hon. friend asked me that question on more than one occasion, and I said that I thought that a company was likely to be formed which would manufacture explosives and cartridges ; but it has not materialized. The Quebec factory has grown very much, and for the present meets our requirements. As this country grows and population increases in the west, it will be absolutely necessary to have one or two arsenals west of Ottawa.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. One of the defects pointed out in the Ross rifle is that the cartridges jam in the chambers, and are hard to extract. I have pointed out the reason of that : the manufacturer undertook to make the cartridge fit the rifle as closely as the cartridge fitted the United States rifle. I would like to ask the minister if any thing is being done to strengthen the cartridges in the factory ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. There is something being done.

Militia and Defence—chargeable to capital—for purchase of ordnance, arms, lands for military purposes, reserve stores of clothing, equipment, &c., and for fitting up rifle ranges, $1,225,000.

Mr. DANIEL. I would like to ask the minister if it is a fact that he intends to purchase a site for the new drill shed in the city of St. John ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. That matter is engaging the attention of the department. My own feeling has been that the armoury should be constructed on the old Battery Point property near where the present armoury is. There has been a proposal that it should be constructed at or near the rifle range and the matter is now being looked into.

Mr. DANIEL. How long is the minister going to keep it under consideration ? He has already had it under consideration for three years and that would appear to be ample time.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No, the proposal to erect the armouries at or near the rifle range is a very new one. It was only brought to my notice six or eight weeks ago and it is that that I am investigating now. I have caused an officer to go there and look the matter over but I have not yet read his report. Colonel Drury, the officer at the head of the maritime province command, is decidedly opposed to that.

Annual drill—further amount required, $75,000.

Mr. SPROULE. How much does that make the aggregate cost ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. $810,000.

Military properties—further amount required as a grant towards cost of armoury for Fifth Royal Scots, Montreal (revote $3,000), $13,000.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. The Royal Scots have built an armoury and handed it over to the government. The government have assisted to the extent of less than half, they contributing $35,000. The whole thing has cost about $85,000.

Customs dues—for payment of duties, $75,000.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. This is putting it from one hand to the other.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Is that in connection with officers getting clothing from England ? Has there been anything done in the way of granting a rebate of duty ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. My hon. friend (Mr. Worthington) was not in when we discussed that question. While no decision has been reached I stated that it seemed to me that in a case where clothing had been actually ordered before it was known that the tariff changed the whole policy which had existed for forty years in regard to these matters a fair claim could be made for compensation. I am getting all these claims together and there will be further consideration of them from that point of view.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. It seems to me that where these articles were ordered before the new tariff came into force there should be a rebate. In the case of the cadets of Lennoxville their uniforms were ordered from England some months before the tariff came into force and it seems only right that they should get the rebate to which they are looking forward.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I think so.

Department of Marine and Fisheries—salaries, $99,875 ; contingencies, $19,150.

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries). We intend to appoint another chief clerk in the person of Captain McElhinney and to increase the number of second-class clerks from nine to eleven. I found when I came into the department that there were several temporary officers who were paid out of a vote which we took every year notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act. I thought it was more regular to have these temporary clerks put on the permanent list. I am going to increase the number of third-class clerks from four to eleven.

Mr. SPROULE. Is that in addition to the temporary officers you are making permanent ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Mr. SPROULE. How many additional clerks have you ? I see by the report that there were 56 last year.

Mr. BRODEUR. There were 56 last year and there are going to be 70. There is no increase in the number of employees except that they are going to be transferred from the temporary list to the regular list. They have passed their examination and I thought it was more regular to put these men on the permanent list.

Mr. SPROULE. You are adding 14 to the number as far as the permanent clerks are concerned ?

Mr. BRODEUR. As far as the permanent clerks are concerned.

Mr. SPROULE. Do you increase the salaries of the temporary clerks who are made permanent ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, most of them are receiving a salary of $500. There may perhaps be some who are in receipt of a larger salary than $500 because I see there are two at $700, six at $650, two at $600, and one at $550 and they will be in receipt of the salaries that they are receiving to-day upon being transferred from the temporary list to the permanent list.

Mr. SPROULE. Are they being transferred from the temporary list to the permanent list without passing any examination or giving any evidence of qualification ?

Mr. BRODEUR. They have all passed the qualifying examination.

Ocean and river service—maintenance and repairs of government steamers and ice-breakers, $500,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is the same amount as last year, and is for the following vessels : The 'Quadra,' 'Lady Laurier,' 'Aberdeen,' 'Lansdowne,' 'Druid,' 'Montcalm,' 'Champlain,' 'Minto' and 'Stanley.'

Mr. SPROULE. How much did the repairs amount to in each case?

Mr. BRODEUR. In 1905-6 the repairs, in round numbers, were as follows :

'Montcalm'	$46,000
'Champlain'	25,000
'Minto'	9,000
'Lady Laurier'	29,000
'Stanley'	9,000

'Aberdeen'	$28,000
'Lansdowne'	2,000
'Quadra'	11,000
'Druid'	4,000

Mr. SPROULE. What happens these vessels that so much should be paid for repairs? The amount every year seems very large.

Mr. BRODEUR. In all steamers the bill for repairs is heavy. Painting, inspection and overhauling of machinery and other repairs are needed. They are made under the immediate control of the inspector of government steamers.

Mr. SPROUL. Are they made by days work?

Mr. BRODEUR. In case of extensive repairs they are done by contract, but in other cases by day labour. In many cases it is impossible to get the repairs done by contract, as the extent of the work cannot be known until it is actually entered upon. In many cases the repairs are made in our own shops at Sorel.

Mr. SPROULE. Some hon. members on this side desired to be present when these items were under consideration, but happened to be absent this evening. Are there items of the same character in the supplementary estimates?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. I would like to have it understood that when these are under discussion any matters under the present items may be referred to.

Rewards for saving life, including life-saving stations, $21,600.

Mr. BRODEUR. I have asked for a larger vote this year, because strong representations have been made from different parts of the country in favour of an increase in this service. Hon. members will recollect that the subject has been discussed at different times, and that there was a general sentiment in favour of an increase.

Mr. SPROULE. On one occasion I called attention to a disaster that had taken place at Lion's Head, and to the strongly expressed wish of the people in that section that there should be a life saving station on that coast. It is a dangerous place, and one where many accidents have occurred; yet, in the absence of life-saving appliances, rescue is almost impossible, and there is sometimes heavy loss of life.

Mr. BRODEUR. I think that the increase now asked should enable me to place life-saving stations at a number of these places. Lion's Head has been brought to the attention of the department. Of course, we cannot meet the requests from every point of the country for life-saving stations, but this larger vote will enable us to do something. Many accidents happened last year, and strong requests have been made to the department to increase the life-saving service. Lion's Head is on Lake Huron?

Mr. SPROULE. It is on the narrow point of land between Lake Huron and Georgian bay, but on the Georgian bay side. Do I understand that it is the intention to establish a life-saving station somewhere near Lion's Head?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. DANIEL. A number of these life-saving stations are mentioned in the Auditor General's Report, but the amount in each case seems small. Is there a man in charge of each of them?

Mr. BRODEUR. There are boats at each station, with a coxswain in charge. There is also a crew of men, and these men are called out to drill at certain intervals in order that they may be fitted for the work if an emergency happens. Each, including the coxswain, are paid $2 a drill, and the coxswain receives $75 a year besides.

Mr. DANIEL. And when they go out on duty they are paid extra?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. I would desire to call attention to the need of life saving appliances in Toronto harbour. I trust it is only necessary to mention the matter for the minister to realize that better equipment is needed at that station. I might refer to the wreck which took place last fall, in which six lives were lost, partly owing to the lack of proper life saving appliances. The condition at present, owing to the lack of proper harbour channels of entrance, is extremely dangerous. A thoroughly equipped modern life saving station is an absolute necessity. The attention of the minister has been drawn to the subject since the loss of the 'Resolute,' and I think he fully understands the necessity. I trust he will give the House an assurance that a properly equipped life saving station will be installed at the harbour of Toronto. There is now a life saving appliance there, but it is wholly insufficient. It only costs something over $300 a year, and is unable to cope with anything serious in the way of a wreck. Had there been a proper life saving station at Toronto Island when the 'Resolute' was wrecked, I am safe in saying that a great deal of the loss of life on that occasion could have been avoided. Unless the government makes an adequate appropriation for deeping the entrance to that harbour a similar catastrophe is likely to occur at any time. Therefore I urge upon the hon. gentleman the necessity of an oppropriation for equipping an up to date life saving station there.

Mr. BRODEUR. We have to deal with the island opposite Toronto where we have one station which is equipped in the same way as other stations. There is a boat and crew there who are available on occasion. With regard to the accident to the 'Resolute,' we had an investigation made, and I think it was proved that the loss of life which occurred could not be due in any way to the man in charge of the station. There were at the same time other boats exposed to be wrecked, and this man, Capt. Ward, went to their assistance and saved, I think, 14 or 15 persons the same night. The 'Resolute' had left the western entrance to go to the eastern entrance, and before any warning could be given she was wrecked. It was not supposed that the boat was in danger, there was no warning of danger, and I am sure that the loss of life was not due at all to want of a proper live saving appliance at this place. I must say on behalf of Capt. Ward that at the time this accident occurred he was engaged in saving the lives of all these persons.

Mr. MACDONELL. It is quite true that Capt. Ward and his life saving crew did excellent work on that occasion, other boats were in danger and were wrecked, but the crews were saved. At the same time had there been a proper boat properly manned, it is safe to say, at least that is the opinion of the people of Toronto, that the life loss on the Resolute could have been saved. The fact is that the 'Resolute' was for some 24 hours immediately outside Toronto harbour and made several trips from the eastern gap to the western gap and back again in order to effect an entrance.

Mr. BRODEUR. She never showed any signs of distress.

Mr. MACDONELL. Well, the boat was in distress, she was seeking her harbour, and she could not reach any shelter. The boat was simply pounded to pieces by the heavy sea. Her anchor worked all right, and she was safely anchored in a sufficient depth of water, but found it impossible to effect an entrance to the harbour. Therefore she had to lie outside the harbour at the mercy of the sea, and about four o'clock in the morning she was literally pounded to pieces and went to the bottom. When the storm was at its height the rising and falling of the water made it impossible for her to enter the harbour. There is no doubt that if a proper life saving crew had been there these lives could have been saved. However, I think the minister must realize that a volunteer crew costing only some $300 a year, with no proper boat, without the means of transporting the boat except pulling her across the sand, is not an adequate life saving appliance for what is the only harbour of refuge along the whole north shore of Lake Ontario.

Mr. DANIEL. I would like to call the minister's attention to the fact that the city of St. John keeps up a life boat at her own expense. I do not know how much it pays annually to the crew to keep themselves ready to take to the boats when required. But it appears to me that a work of that kind should be taken over by the Dominion government as are other life boat stations. It has been kept up at the city's expense for a great many years. They have a boat always ready and a certain number of men ready when called upon. I think the Dominion should take that work over the same as they do other life saving stations. I would like the minister to take the matter into consideration, because I think the city has a fair claim on the government in that respect.

Mr. BRODEUR. That is the first time the case has been brought to my attention. We have a station not very far from there at Grand Manan.

Mr. DANIEL. That is a good many miles away.

Mr. BRODEUR. It is a good many miles away, but we have not many stations in this country. The system is quite new, in fact it is only within the last twenty years that we have established these stations. Before that the Canadian life-saving service was on the same basis as the British system which depends on voluntary subscription. We have since then followed the American system.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. During the discussion last year of the wrecks that occurred on the coast of Prince Edward Island the minister stated that it was the intention to establish life-saving stations on the island. It has been shown conclusively that had there been life-saving apparatus available at the places where these wrecks occurred, much of the deplorable loss of life might have been avoided.

Mr. BRODEUR. We already have life-saving boats on the government steamers plying between the island and the mainland. It has been decided to establish one or more stations on the island. There might be three stations, one at each of the extreme ends of the island and one in the centre, or as an alternative it has been suggested that one set of apparatus might be installed at Charlottetown, provided that it could be carried by rail to the scene of a wreck, in other parts of the island.

Mr. BLAIN. I think the minister should devote some of this vote to the assistance of the voluntary crews, which exist in different parts of Canada. For instance at Port Credit, between Toronto and Hamilton, where there is a great deal of shipping, there is an efficient voluntary life-saving crew and I think when men are willing to voluntarily devote themselves to the saving of life, they should be treated generously by the government as this is recognized as a work which the government should perform.

Mr. BRODEUR. I fully realize that the amount voted is not probably large enough to meet all the requirements of the Dominion. We have a very large coast and we are spending only $21,000. Last year we asked only $9,000, but it was increased this year to $21,000. The United States with a coast no larger than ours spends several million dollars per year. I fully realize the importance of the question and I appreciate that all the members are in favour of increasing the expenditure in that respect. I think this is money well invested.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. During the storm in which these vessels were lost in Prince Edward Island two men at the imminent risk of their lives saved several men on board a Russian ship. Is any recognition to be made of their gallant services by the Dominion government?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes, we have sent rewards to those men.

Subsidy for wrecking plant, Davis & Sons, Lévis, $24,000.

Mr. J. D. REID. In connection with this, I would like to mention the claims of Mr. Leslie. The work he has done in taking off the 'Bavarian,' proves his ability as a wrecker. He has raised many vessels on the upper lakes and in Newfoundland. I was interested with him in Ontario, but I am of course not interested in asking for this subsidy. Mr. Leslie also had a small plant in Newfoundland. I would like to see Captain Leslie subsidized to establish a wrecking plant in the neighbourhood of Seven Islands.

Mr. BRODEUR. I know that Mr. Leslie is a very capable man, and that he succeeded in floating the Bavarian when all others failed.

Mr. J. D. REID. Mr. Leslie has on two or three occasions made application for a subsidy to establish a plant in the vicinity of Seven Islands. The plant located at Quebec is too far removed from the scene of a disaster which might happen down there. Mr. Leslie's wrecking plant is an excellent one and where life and property is in danger, as it is liable to be at any time in those waters, a small subsidy would be well expended in establishing a wrecking plant. There is a wrecking plant at Sarnia and another has been established at Port Arthur, and I think similar plants should be located at reasonable distances apart, on our navigable waters. I think Mr. Leslie should be granted a subsidy to take his plant from Newfoundland, and establish it at Seven Islands. If it only saved the life of one individual it would more than justify the expenditure.

Mr. BLAIN.

Mr. DANIEL. Is there any wrecking plant established in the maritime provinces?

Mr. J. D. REID. We have three wrecking plants; one at Sydney, one at Quebec, and the other in British Columbia, to which we pay $10,000 a year each.

Maintenance of vessels for patrolling the waters of the northern portion of Canada, $40,000.

Mr. J. D. REID. Where is the 'Arctic'?

Mr. BRODEUR. She is wintering on the North East coast of Baffin land.

Mr. J. D. REID. Here we have another Bill for supplies for the 'Arctic.' Last year we ascertained that when she sailed on her voyage she was loaded up to the top of her masts, but now it appears that there was $40,000 worth more stowed away somewhere. We want to get an explanation of that, but I suppose as the minister is leaving to-morrow, we must let it go.

Mr. BRODEUR. These purchases were made between September, 1904, and October, 1905. The item is comprised of pay for the officers, and an item of $5,000 to the German consul for balance of purchase price. The only supplies purchased amounted to $1,400.

Mr. J. D. REID. We bought from Hudon and Orsali supplies to the amount of $1,481; from the Hamilton Company to the amount of $1,247.60, and from a Halifax firm to the amount of $309.97 and there are numerous other items of that kind. I do not want to appear as obstructing the hon. gentleman's estimates, but this is something on which we should certainly have some explanation.

Mr. BRODEUR. My hon. friend spoke of $132,000 as being spent. Out of that there was $55,000 for the construction of a boat and $36,000 for the chartering of the Neptune. The only items for supplies are to the extent of $1,481.

Mr. J. D. REID. I would like to know from the hon. minister that we shall have the privilege next year in the Public Accounts Committee of going into any items in the Auditor General's Report that we are not able to go into this year.

Mr. BRODEUR. If the committee cannot go into these accounts this year, owing to the fact of my being absent, there will certainly be no objection to hon. gentlemen going into them next year.

Mr. J. D. REID. Will the Prime Minister promise that we shall have an opportunity of going into any of these accounts next year that we cannot go into this year?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. If the hon. gentleman will close the discussion now and cannot go on with the investigation, certainly he will be allowed to take it up next year.

To provide for the organization of a naval militia and expenses in using the cruiser 'Canada' as a training ship, $10,000.

Mr. DANIEL. I see by the Auditor General's Report that $6,500 was used in connection with the cruiser 'Canada,' but it is impossible to find out how much of the expenses of the cruiser were used in this service. I notice also that $2,500 of that appropriation was used to pay the expenses of the minister's trip to the old country. So that, unless there is something of that kind in contemplation this year. the whole of this $10,000 will not be needed, that is, if the business of the naval militia is to be carried on exactly in the same way as before.

Mr. BRODEUR. The cruiser 'Canada' was employed only during a certain part of the year. This year it is the intention to put as many sailors as possible on the cruiser. Besides we are going to establish a new cruiser on the British Columbia coast, and an item will be asked for that purpose.

River St. Lawrence ship channel, $760,000.

Mr. SPROULE. As we have got down to the foot of page 58, as it is now a quarter past twelve, and as we have to meet to-morrow at ten o'clock and we have only a little over nine hours for sleep I think we should now adjourn.

Mr. BRODEUR. Of course I am not asking anything that is impossible, but if we may pass some of these items in order that I may dispose of my estimates by noon to-morrow I shall be very much obliged to my hon. friend.

Mr. J. D. REID. There are a number of these items that some hon. gentlemen would like to discuss and it is hardly fair to ask that they be allowed to go through.

Mr. BRODEUR. If we pass the items concerning the marine branch we will proceed with the fisheries to-morrow morning. There is no contention about these items.

Mr. J. D. REID. These are the items they want to discuss.

Mr. SPROULE. We want some information as to what has been done with this ship channel. We have heard every year that it is about completed. We would like to know what progress has been made.

Mr. BRODEUR. We started to work in the spring of 1906, and we intended to complete the channel to a depth of 30 feet from Montreal to Batiscan. All this work has been done from Montreal to Batiscan. There is a complete ship channel 30 feet deep between those places. The money which is asked for this year is mostly for the purpose of dredging in the St. Lawrence between Batiscan and Quebec especially at Cap à la Roche and Cap Charles. The depth of water there is 27½ feet at high tide there is more than 30 feet. The intention is to provide 30 feet at low tide.

Mr. SPROULE. Where is Batiscan?

Mr. BRODEUR. Twenty-five miles below Three Rivers.

Mr. SPROULE. I understand from what the minister says that we have a 30-foot channel for half the distance between Montreal and Quebec.

Mr. BRODEUR. More than half.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood it was down to Batiscan. That is about how far from Three Rivers?

Mr. BRODEUR. About twenty-five or thirty miles.

Mr. SPROULE. Or about eighty miles from Montreal?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, one hundred and ten miles from Montreal.

Mr. SPROULE. Then, the balance of the route from there to Quebec has how many feet of water?

Mr. BRODEUR. There are 27½ feet of water to-day at low tide. At high tide there is more than that. The channel at Cap à la Roche and Cap Charles is to be deepened to 30 feet and widened to 500 feet.

Mr. SPROULE. How much dredging is required to be done there?

Mr. BRODEUR. Six or seven miles.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the width of the channel?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is 300 feet at that place.

Mr. SPROULE. That does not give an approximate estimate of the work to be done.

Mr. BRODEUR. It is 27½ feet deep and 300 feet wide and the idea is to make it 30 feet deep and 500 feet wide.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the same dredges be employed there as were employed last year?

Mr. BRODEUR. The same dredges we had for the other part of the work will be used there. The shale rock requires a special dredge which we are building at Sorel for that purpose.

Mr. SPROULE. You have been building dredges for the last five years for special purposes?

Mr. BRODEUR. The dredge which has been built to which my hon. friend has referred was the 'Tarte' which was built for work on Lake St. Peter. We have been saving money as a result of constructing that dredge because it has been giving more satisfaction and the work is being done cheaper than before.

Mr. J. D. REID. What about the 'Galveston'?

Mr. BRODEUR. The 'Galveston' has been working at Beaujeu Bank below Quebec.

Mr. SPROULE. I saw a statement in the newspapers a short time ago that the dredge 'Tarte' was practically disabled.

Mr. BRODEUR. No, the dredge 'Tarte' was working during the whole of last season except during a few days when she was stopped for small repairs. She has been doing magnificent work during the whole season.

Mr. SPROULE. It was stated in one of the newspapers lately that a heavy expenditure upon her would be necessary and that she was a comparative failure.

Mr. BRODEUR. That is absolutely erroneous.

Mr. SPROULE. Part of this is shale rock work. Is this to be done with the government dredges?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. J. D. REID. How many hours is a day's work for the men on these dredges?

Mr. BRODEUR. Nine hours. The work of dredging goes on night and day.

Mr. SPROULE. How long will it be before this channel is deepened to thirty feet down to Quebec?

Mr. BRODEUR. It will take two seasons to complete 30 feet deep and 500 feet wide.

Mr. SPROULE. Are you widening it from 300 feet to 500 feet?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes, at Cap à la Roche.

Mr. SPROULE. How is it with regard to lights in the St. Lawrence channel? Will it soon be lighted so as to make it safe?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is well lighted now. The Shipping Federation, which is most interested in the work, have asked nothing in the way of lights lately, except small lights in some places. Between Montreal and Sorel, which is considered the first section, we have put up gas lights which are working splendidly. In fact, several large ocean-going vessels have come up during the night which was not possible previously.

Mr. SPROULE. Is it intended to light the channel in that manner all the way down?

Mr. BRODEUR.

Mr. BRODEUR. Wherever the channel is dredged and there is a width of only 500 feet. Below Cap à la Roche the channel is so wide that gas buoys are not necessary. We put them where it is necessary for the boat to change her course.

Mr. SPROULE. Do I understand that the department has a dredge suitable to go on with the work when navigation opens?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Are you building dredges?

Mr. BRODEUR. We have those dredges for work that have been built within the last fifteen years. We are building also a dredge with special equipment for the shale rock.

Mr. SPROULE. And that dredging cannot be done until the new dredge is built?

Mr. BRODEUR. The dredging will go on in other material, but one kind of shale rock can only be removed with this special dredge.

Mr. SPROULE. Therefore, you cannot go on with that dredging until the new dredge is built?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is not all the same kind of material. The other dredges can go on. But at Cap à la Roche, in this shale rock, the new dredge will be required.

Mr. SPROULE. Therefore, it cannot be done until the new dredge is built?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes, but outside of that there will be dredging upon which we can begin and on which we were at work last season.

Mr. A. A. WRIGHT. Is not the new dredge to be ready for the spring?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, she will be ready during the season. We only started to build her a few months ago.

Mr. SPROULE. What is likely to be the cost of the new dredge?

Mr. BRODEUR. It will cost about $215,000.

To provide additional plant for Cap à la Roche (mostly revote), $75,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What kind of plant is this?

Mr. BRODEUR. That is the dredge in question—$115,000 voted last year, and $75,000 now.

Signal service between Montreal and Quebec, $18,000.

Mr. DANIEL. Is that for Marconi stations?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, for telephone stations and signals. We are establishing this at the request of the shipping federation on both sides of the St. Lawrence. I may explain the occurrence which gave rise to the request. Two years ago, one of the boats of the Allan line was going down the river. When at Cap Charles, near Cap à la Roche, a sudden fog came in. Up above, there was no fog. But the boat went ashore, and it was at one time thought it might be a very serious accident, though fortunately, it proved less serious than was expected. The idea is to have signals where the channel is narrow, in order that, when fog exists, the vessel may be notified and stop in the proper place.

Some resolutions reported.

Mr. FIELDING. I desire to call up two orders for the purpose of dropping them. I propose to drop item 11 respecting the Manufacture of Binder Twine in Canada, and to bring it forward in an amended form. I move that item 11 be dropped.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. FIELDING. I make the same motion with respect to item 13 in relation to the bounties on iron and steel. The reason of the change is that we contemplate making special provision for the encouragement of the manufacture of iron and steel in Canada by the electrical process. We will drop the motion in its present form and will bring it forward in an amended form to-morrow.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. FIELDING moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. SPROULE. What business will be taken up to-morrow ?

Mr. FIELDING. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries will resume supply in his department at the point where we left it this evening. After that the Prime Minister desires to deal with the estimates for the Mounted Police ; then the Minister of Public Works.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 12.40 a.m., Thursday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, April 4, 1907.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

CRIMINAL CODE—AMENDMENT.

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Minister of Justice) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 145) to amend the Criminal Code.

Mr. J. G. H. BERGERON (Beauharnois). What is the nature of this Bill ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. A great many amendments to the Criminal Code had been prepared, but, considering the advanced stage of the session and the desirability of bringing before the House only those amendments that seem essential at the present time, every thing that is not of that character has been omitted from this measure. The most important provision of the Bill is to enable any offence committed in unorganized territory, to be tried in any place, where the defendant may be found, as is most convenient. The practical need of this clause has been shown by events, very possibly involving murder committed a year ago in the Arctic ocean on board a ship which was lying up for the winter among the British islands there. On the ship reaching civilization and the facts becoming known, the situation was manifest as to the possible difficulty, under our present statute, of trying such an offence in any other place than where it was committed. This Bill will provide that offences committed in any part of Canada not in any province or in the Yukon may be inquired of, tried and proceeded with to execution, either in the place where the offence was committed or in any other portion of Canada, as may be most convenient, where the defendant may be found. That, as I have said is the principal provision of the Bill. There are four or five other minor amendments.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first and second times, and House went into committee thereon.

On section 1,

Mr. BERGERON. As we have not either the Bill or the statute before us, would the minister be kind enough to explain ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I think that it would be more satisfactory that the matter should stand until the Bill is distributed.

Progress reported.

FIRST READING.

Bill (No. 146) to make certain amendments to the statute law in its application to the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta.—Mr. Aylesworth.

WINDING UP ACT—AMENDMENT.

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Minister of Justice) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 147) to amend the Winding Up Act. He said : This Bill consists of one clause, providing means whereby, in the course of winding up a company, if there should be classes of shareholders, contributories or creditors too numerous to be served individually with a notification of proceedings without undue expense, the court may appoint some person who shall represent the whole class and by whose conduct all shall be bound. That is the substance of the measure. The practical need of it has been illustrated recently in the winding up of some companies where, in one instance I am told, there were over 100,000 different contributories or persons interested, and the cost of service on each one of this tremendous number would have eaten up the whole estate. In order to enable a company that may find itself in such a position, to be wound up without enormous and undue expense, this provision is proposed to be inserted. It is analogous to the ordinary practice which obtains in Ontario, at all events in suits and litigation in which classes are represented by some person designated by the court.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

Motion agreed to.

HARBOUR COMMISSIONERS OF MONTREAL.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Minister of Finance) moved that the House go into Committee of the Whole to-morrow to consider the following proposed resolution :

Resolved, that it is expedient to provide as follows :

1. The Governor in Council may from time to time advance and pay to the corporation of the harbour commissioners of Montreal, hereinafter called 'the corporation,' in addition to the moneys authorized to be advanced to the corporation by the Governor in Council by chapter 36 of the Statutes of 1903, such sums of money, not exceeding in the whole the sum of three million dollars, as are required to enable the corporation to complete the terminal facilities of the port of Montreal now under construction, and to construct such further terminal facilities as are necessary to properly equip said port.

3. The corporation shall, upon any advance being made, deposit with the Minister of Finance and Receiver General, debentures of the corporation equal in par value to the advance so made (which debentures the corporation are hereby authorized to issue), and such debentures so issued shall be of such amounts as the Minister of Finance and Receiver General determines, and shall bear date on the day when such advance is made, and shall be repayable within twenty-five years from the date of their issue, and in the meantime shall bear interest at the rate of three per cent per annum, such interest to be payable half-yearly, on the first day of July and the first day of January in each year.

4. The principal and interest of the sums advanced under the authority of this Act to the corporation shall be paid by the corporation out of its revenue mentioned in section 8 of chapter 10 of the statutes of 1896 (first session), and shall be a charge upon the said revenue in the same manner and to the same extent as if the sums so advanced had been borrowed by the corporation under the said chapter 10.

Motion agreed to.

NORTH ATLANTIC TRADING COMPANY AND MR. BEDDOE.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier). Before the House enters upon the consideration of the Orders of the Day, I rise to a question of privilege in connection with the motion of which I gave notice last Wednesday, a week ago, with regard to the report of the Committee on Agriculture. Perhaps the shortest way of placing this motion before the House would be for me to read the motion of which I gave notice, and having read it, there will be very little to add. I gave notice on the 27th of March that in connection with the consideration of the fifth report of the Committee on Agriculture I would move as follows :

That this government has entered into certain agreements with a syndicate or association of persons known as the North Atlantic Trading Company, for carrying on an immigration propaganda in continental Europe, said agreements beginning in 1899 ;

That large sums of money have been from time to time paid by the government of Canada to the said North Atlantic Trading Company under the said agreements and considerable amounts are still pending between the government and the said company ;

That C. H. Beddoe, accountant of the Department of the Interior, a witness examined before the Standing Committee on Agriculture and Colonization, during the present session, as appears by the report of the said committee, was officially sent to Europe by the Department of the Interior, upon the refusal of the Audit Department to sanction the payment of some claims of the said Trading Company, in order that the said Beddoe should examine and audit the accounts of the said company and ascertain if the said company had expended in immigration propaganda the amounts it was bound to expend, under its contracts with the government ;

That the said accountant, having proceeded to Europe and made his report upon the said audit and being examined before the said committee, has refused to answer the questions put to him, concerning : 1. The names of the agents and subagents of the North Atlantic Trading Company in Europe, mentioned in his audit report as having received money, in execution of the contract ; and 2. The names of the printers to whom moneys are alleged to have been paid by the said company in execution of said contract, the whole as mentioned in report of audit ;

That the said accountant offers as a reason for his said refusal a promise made by him to the officials of the said North Atlantic Trading Company to the effect that he would keep said names secret ;

That it is and has always been the undoubted right and privilege of this House of Commons to have all the information which it may desire regarding public matters of any kind and description, coming within the jurisdiction of parliament, and the refusal of the witness to answer under the present circumstances constitutes a breach of such privilege ;

That the said C. H. Beddoe be summoned to appear at the bar of this honourable House according to the law and usage of parliament, on.. .. .. at four o'clock in the afternoon, to answer such questions as may be put to him by Mr. Speaker or other members of this House and receive such injunctions, orders and monitions as to this honourable House may seem fit.

Mr. Speaker, the procedure adopted this year in connection with the refusal of this witness to answer questions put to him, is exactly the same as the procedure adopted last year in connection with the refusal of Mr. Preston to give to the Committee on Agriculture and Immigration the names of the parties forming the syndicate with which the government contracted in 1899, and since then on two occasions, to carry on a propaganda on continental Europe in certain countries, and who received therefor several hundred thousand dollars under the terms of said contract. The procedure is the same, consequently it is not open to question. The difference this year is that the witness examined is the accountant of the Immigration Department. Apparently, claims coming from this company, although approved in the Immigration Department, were refused in the Department of the Auditor General because there was no satisfactory proof before the Auditor General that this North Atlantic Trading Company had in reality expended in Europe the $15,000 a year which it was obliged to expend under the terms of its contract for an immigration propaganda. Upon the refusal of the Audit Department to accept these claims and to permit payment, Mr. Beddoe, the accountant of the department, was sent over to Europe, in order to audit the accounts of the North Atlantic Trading Company and to make sure that in reality it had fulfilled its obligation.

Mr. Beddoe admits in his examination, which is very lengthy and which I will only quote from in so far as it is necessary to connect that examination with this motion, that he was sent to Europe without any specific directions. In a matter which had already given rise to a controversy before the committee and the House he seems to have gone to Europe without any directions which would oblige him to perform that audit in such a way as to meet all possible questions that might arise before the committee and the House. He went to Europe and returned with an audit absolutely satisfactory to this company and upon which, no doubt, payments were made to the North Atlantic Trading Company, but when he appeared before the Agriculture Committee he found himself unable to give us any satisfactory explanation of the audit and he was obliged to refuse the most elementary information that the audit called for upon the plea that he had, exactly as Mr. Preston had done, bound himself under a quasi oath of secrecy that he would not reveal to the committee or the House or anybody any of the names connected with the payments made to this company. The thing appears to be most ridiculous. Mr. Beddoe, against whom I have no word to say, and who is a most excellent civil servant, thought he could do no better than follow the example of Mr. Preston who last year absolutely set the committee at defiance when they attempted to get from him the names of the parties with whom he had expended hundreds of thousands of the people's money in connection with the immigration propaganda. Mr. Beddoe, in this instance being asked who are the agents and subagents of this company through the ministry of whom this propaganda was carried on, states to the committee that he refuses to give these names although he knows them and gives as his reason that they were revealed to him by the secretary or the officials, whoever they are, of this company under a binding promise that he would not reveal them to the House of Commons or to the committee. So it is absolutely impossible for us to know if the North Atlantic Trading Company has expended sums which it bound itself to expend in connection with the propaganda. When asked by the members of the committee in regard to an item of some $14,000 mentioned in his report as having been expended upon printing, and when asked who are the printers who have done the printing which he certified to in his report he gives a similar answer. He says that he cannot give the names of these printers because he promised the officials of the North Atlantic Trading Company in Amsterdam that he would not reveal the names. So the position now is that we have expended nearly half a million dollars in connection with this immigration propaganda and in the exercise of the undoubted privilege we have of knowing how the people's money is expended we ask an official of the government who made the contract with the company with whom he contracted and he refuses to give the names and as the members of this House will remember at the last session of the House he was confirmed and endorsed in that refusal by the majority vote of this House. This year, when the question of settling with this company comes up, when we have before us the prospect that the company will lodge a large claim for indemnity against the government on the ground that we have put an end to this contract—because we ended it last year and the accountant certifies in his audit and report that there was no ground for ending the contract inasmuch as it has been fully, punctually and exactly carried out by the company—when we ask this accountant sent over at the expense of the government to find out how they have carried out the contract he refuses to tell us who the agents and sub-agents of the company are, and refuses to give us the names of the printers with whom $15,000 or $16,000 has been expended in carrying out the terms of the contract.

Now, I think it will be unfair at this time of the session to take up the time of the House in endeavouring to establish that we are entitled to that information. It seems to me to be an elementary point that the House of Commons is exercising an undoubted right which it has possessed since time immemorial, in investigating all accounts connected with public expenditure and in finding out, more particularly in this case and under circumstances of this kind, to whom these payments have been made and to inquire into the disposition of the large sums which this company has been receiving and prospectively will receive under the terms of the contract. I will, therefore, limit myself to pointing out to the House very briefly the answers of Mr. Beddoe which give rise to the present motion. I have taken out of a very lengthy examination the parts of it which concern his refusal, and I will limit myself to quoting those answers in which Mr. Beddoe, peremptorially and to my mind very erroneously, but audaciously, takes the position that he will not give us that information. I quote from pages 25, 26 and 27 of his first deposition:

Q. You say in your report at page 2: The company has a well established system which enables them to follow out their propaganda in a business-like manner. They have agencies at Hamburg, Rotterdam, London, Libau, Odessa, Obo, Christiania, Stockholm, Copenhagen, Gothenburg and Amsterdam. These are the principal agencies and there are many sub-agencies attached to each. What knowledge of that did you acquire in your visit to Amsterdam ?—A. In conversation with the manager and secretary of the company.

Q. Who are these gentlemen in these different cities that I have just enumerated ?—A. I do not know whether I am at liberty to disclose their names.

Q. Do you know their names ?—A. I do, sir.

Q. What makes you say that you do not know whether you are at liberty to disclose their names ?—A. Because I suppose that the committee is aware that the laws in those countries are so stringent that in conducting their emigration propaganda they are obliged to keep their names secret; it would not do to state that they were openly conducting an emigration propaganda to Canada. Some of these gentlemen are the largest steamship agents in Europe and are acting as agents for the North Atlantic Trading Company.

Q. The position then, as I understand you, is this: you got from Mr. Cohen, or from officials of the company, the names of these gentlemen just referred to at page 2 in your report, you know them and you question whether you can give us those names on account of the stringency of the laws. Is that the position you take ?—A. That is really the position of the matter.

Q. Are you aware that there is a clause in the contract which specially provides that in this propaganda they are not to violate the laws of any of the countries where they are operating ?—A. Yes.

Q. Then, why do you object to giving the committee those names since it was specially provided that they are not to violate the laws however stringent they may be ? Do you say that they violate those laws ?—A. To be conducting an emigration propaganda in some of these countries leaves them open to severe punishment. I think there is no option of a fine—there is a very heavy fine and imprisonment and therefore I have to protect them. I should not divulge their names.

Q. Are they themselves interested in this North Atlantic Trading Company as shareholders ?—A. That I could not say.

Further on, still quoting from the first deposition, at page 29:

Q. I find these words in your report: 'Special agents are doing work in Scandinavia, Germany and other countries—quite a number of clergymen are assisting in the propaganda.' Who are these special agents referred to in this report ?—A. Those names are to be kept secret as well. I know the names of some of the clergymen who are working in Germany.

Q. Does that simply apply to the clergymen? —A. There are a great many letters that have been published—I forget now whether the signature of the clergymen was attached to the letter—bearing testimony to Canada as a field for emigration.

Q. Do I understand that you promised Mr. Cohen that you would not divulge the names of these special agents and of these clergymen ?—A. Yes, I did.

Q. You made him that promise ?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Did you feel that you had authority to make such a promise as that ?—A. Yes, I had to consider the nature of the contract and that they had to conduct their propaganda in secrecy.

Q. Had you instructions to that effect from the department ?—A. No, but from my own ideas in connection with the matter I thought that was the proper way to treat it.

So much, Mr. Speaker, in regard to the testimony given by the witness Beddoe in connection with the names of the agents. There is more in the deposition, but I do not wish to take up the time of the House. The members of the committee will know that Mr. Beddoe said he promised not to reveal these names, and therefore he would not reveal them. The chairman was called upon to rule that the witness should declare these names to the committee, and the chairman refused to give the witness this order. The ruling of the chair on that point was called in question, but by a majority vote of the committee it was sustained. The examination of the witness was adjourned, and it being resumed on the 20th March he is asked, pages 2 and 3 of his second deposition :

Q. Are you in the position therefore, sir, to give the names to-day of these agents and sub-agents, or do you say that they were given to you under such conditions that you cannot reveal them to the committee ?—A. I cannot reveal them to the committee.

Q. I suppose therefore, you did make that promise not to reveal those names ?—A. I did, sir.

Q. And as to the Austrian business that was managed at points in Germany ?—A. I cannot give the names of those who were working for the company.

Now, in regard to the printing, there was a sum of $15,000 which the North Atlantic Trading Company, in execution of its contract alleged it had expended, and in his report to the Auditor General, Mr. Beddoe certified that that amount had been expended. When he appeared before the committee he was asked if he would give the names of those printers, which was a most natural question to put to him. I quote from page 21 of the second deposition :

Q. Did the secretary of the North Atlantic Trading Company bind you to secrecy as to those printers, as he did with respect to the agents of the company ?—A. He showed me the accounts receipted on the understanding that I would not divulge the names ; that was it.

Q. You entered into that understanding ?—A. I did, sir.

If the members of the House will read the whole deposition they will find that the extracts I have given are abundantly confirmed in other parts of Mr. Beddoe's examination. It is evident that this public official of the Department of the Interior takes the position which was taken last year by Mr. Preston, that he will not give to the representatives of the people in parliament, the names of those interested in the North Atlantic Trading Company who are demanding large sums of money from the government. It is a matter of the utmost importance that we should know at this stage of the investigation whether the North Atlantic Trading Company has carried out this contract. On general principles it seems to me that when we are investigating payments made by the country, we have a right to the fullest information concerning these payments. Only the other day, those in this House who dissented from the motion in respect to the Grand Trunk vouchers, were loud in their expressions that if any payment was made or was to be made in connection with these vouchers, the House had undoubtedly the fullest right of investigation. In the present case it is not a question of investigating accounts that have not been paid, but it is a question of finding out whether a company that has received considerable sums, and expects to receive considerable sums further from the government, is entitled to the payment of these moneys. The House will be laying down a most dangerous principle if it does not assent to this motion. As the right hon. the Prime Minister is about to confront the perils of the sea, I do not see how he can leave the country with a clear conscience unless he accepts this motion. I feel he will have greater security for his safe passage across the Atlantic if he does justice to the rights of the representatives of the people on this occasion. I beg therefore to move the motion which I have already read.

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). While the motion is nominally to bring before the Bar of the House an official of the government it is in reality a motion in criticism of the policy of the government. My hon. friend, (Mr. Monk) does not suggest that Mr. Beddoe showed any discourtesy to the committee or acted in any other way than it was his duty to act as an official of the government in carrying out the policy of the government, and assisting in its administration. Whatever responsibility there is, must be assumed by the government and not by Mr. Beddoe. It is of course a matter of debate as to whether the action taken by the government was wise or unwise, but it was taken on the responsibility of the government, and it has been endorsed by parliament. A certain condition existed in Europe with regard to emigration under which it was contrary to the laws of certain countries to carry on an active emigration propaganda in these countries. It was the desire of Canada to secure immigrants from these countries, and the choice was between not making active efforts to secure them, or making active efforts by such means as might be possible. The government employed an agency which might carry on an active propaganda to secure the results that were desired, and in order that this propaganda might be carried on it was necessary that a certain consideration should be given to the people who were carrying it on. That consideration was given, and one part of the consideration was that their names should not be made public.

Now, that might have been right or it might have been wrong ; it might have been wise or unwise ; but it was done, and it was done as a deliberate act of the government, as part of the government's policy, and it has produced, as the returns show, the results which were expected of it up to a certain time and during a certain number of years. That being the case, while it would be perfectly in order for Mr. Beddoe to be brought before the bar of the House, we understand that this motion is only a means of again bringing forward this question, which has been before the country for several years, on which the House has repeatedly expressed its opinion, and on which I fancy the House has no reason to change its opinion.

In regard to the purpose desired to be attained by Mr. Beddoe's visit to Europe, it was that the Auditor General should be satisfied that certain expenditures required by the contract were made so that he would be warranted in paying to the North Atlantic Trading Company the sum claimed by them and allowed by the Immigration Department. Mr. Beddoe, as the accountant of the Department of the Interior, as an officer who has been in the public service for many years, as a tried and trusted servant in such matters, was sent to Europe to make such an audit as would satisfy the Auditor General that $15,000 per year had been expended by the North Atlantic Trading Company in an active propoganda as provided in their contract. Mr. Beddoe made the investigation. and reported to the Auditor General in such terms that the Auditor General is satisfied that the expenditure was made and that he is therefore warranted in paying the North Atlantic Trading Company such portion of their claim as has been approved by the Department of the Interior. That was Mr. Beddoe's duty, that was what he went to Europe to do, and that is what he has done. I submit that he is not fairly subject to criticism or censure by the House for having done his duty. It is a fact that the government is responsible for every act of its officials, as it is responsible for the policy to which they give effect. Mr. Beddoe cannot be fairly held responsible, and I submit that he should not under the circumstances be called to the bar of the House to answer personally for a condition for which the government is responsible and has been responsible during all these years. In order that the House may have perhaps a clearer statement of the case than it would gather from what has been said already, I will take the liberty of reading a statement prepared by Mr. Beddoe for the information of the House in regard to this matter.

Mr. MONK. May I ask if this statement has been prepared since his deposition was given ?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. MONK. I do not want to prevent my hon. friend from reading that statement, but I do not know that it is quite in order, on the discussion of a motion founded on evidence taken under oath before the committee, to read a subsequent statement at a time when the House has not decided that he should be summoned before the House. I question, Mr. Speaker, whether that is in order. It would be proper for him to give these explanations when he is before the bar of the House.

Mr. OLIVER. I do not insist on reading the statement if it is not in order, but I take it that the question is a question at large and that it is really in the interest of the public and in the interest of the House that a short, concise and clear statement should be made of the case from the standpoint of the accountant, who certainly has been more closely in touch with this matter than any other person, and against whose character, standing and statements I fancy no member of the House or no one who has had any business relations with him will at all question. He says :

Under the contract the company agreed to carry on an active educative work in the agricultural districts of certain countries in Europe, to promote emigration to Canada and to make known the advantages offered by Canada as a field for settlement. The company undertook to advertise in the public press, publish pamphlets in various languages and their representatives were to make a personal canvass. To carry out this work they agreed to expend not less than $15,000 each year, and they were to furnish the department with receipted vouchers, sworn statements or other evidence in proof of the expenditure having been made.

Last session when the annual expenditure of the $15,000 was questioned and criticised in the Public Accounts Committee, the Agriculture and Colonization Committee, and in the House, and it was hinted that the company had not spent the money which they claimed had been expended, the Auditor General refused to pass any further accounts until a certificate had been given by a responsible officer of the Department of the Interior that the $15,000 had been expended during the years 1903-1904, 1904-1905 and 1905-1906.

The statements and receipted vouchers furnished to the department for the years 1903-1904 and 1904-1905 were satisfactory, but for the year 1905-1906 the company gave sworn statements as to the correctness of the whole expenditure for that year. In some instances, however, they did not furnish the original accounts—they only gave details, and, in these cases withheld the names of the people to whom the payments had been made. It was on account of the incompleteness of the accounts mentioned that the Auditor General preferred to have a certificate from an officer in the department at Ottawa.

The reason assigned by the company for giving sworn statements instead of providing the original vouchers in certain cases for the year 1905-1906 was the danger of publicity and the serious consequences to the members of the company. It was pointed out that the inquiry held during the session of 1906 had brought out the names of persons with whom they had had business relations, and these names they had been led to believe, as a part of the agreement, were not to be made public, and they asked that the department would meet their wishes and not give out publicly or officially even the names of persons appearing in the accounts presented. The company has always been particular about this matter. When presenting the accounts for 1903-1904 they said : 'The business we are controlling ourselves and through our friends is of such a dangerous nature that even a suspicion of our friends that they might run any risk by giving vouchers if the same would not be treated in a most careful way would induce them to prefer no more to work for us rather than endangering themselves.' Again, in the same letter they state: 'If anything of these particular matters would fall into wrong hands, not only the whole propaganda work would be ruined but a number of prominent people personally endangered. Imagine how European governments look upon this business, knowing that the free Switzerland's government has now threatened the newspaper offices through which we have advertised in Switzerland, and there is no newspaper any more in that country accepting such an advertisement. In other countries they do not threaten first, but fine people who act against the law without warning them.'

In regard to the audit of the accounts for the year mentioned, made in accordance with the wishes of the Auditor General, I would respectfully state that I examined the books and assured myself in every way that it was possible to do so that the expenditure had been made. The company has furnished copies of hundreds of newspapers published in various countries on the continent in which advertisements relating to Canada have been inserted. They have given the department samples of the literature printed in seventeen or eighteen different languages. The payments made to various persons and firms were verified by entries in the books of the company, and they produced the correspondence when required which showed the arrangements made and the acknowledgment of the payments received. A large quantity of the printing was done in London, England. I visited the printing firm who did this work and verified the payments made to them. The book in which a record is kept showing the distribution of the literature on the continent was always at my disposal when conducting the audit.

During the audit of the 1905-1906 accounts, in connection with which certain original receipted vouchers had been withheld, the secretary reiterated what he had stated in his letter transmitting the accounts to the department. I told him that it was impossible for me to make a proper audit unless the original receipted vouchers were produced. He consented to produce them, but it was upon the distinct understanding that I should on no account make the names public. One of these vouchers was for the printing of literature by one of the largest firms in Germany. Samples of the literature had been furnished. A lot of it was in stock and a large quantity had been distributed. The account included the following items: Printing 275,000 pamphlets 'Canada', in 17 different languages; 300,000 covers for pamphlets. Printing agents advertisement on back of 173,500 pamphlets; 5,000 large Dutch pamphlets, 20 pages, with map in two colours lithographed; 130,500 'Canada-Karten' printed in 13 languages; 15,000 large Swedish pamphlets, 28 pages, with map cover lithographed in 2 colours; 10,150 large Norwegian pamphlets, 32 pages; 100,000 maps lithographed in 3 kinds (75,000 in 5 colours and 25,000 in 6 colours).

Perhaps my proper course would have been to cable you respecting the refusal of the company to furnish all the original receipted accounts, in order that I might know whether you would consider the mere exhibition of these vouchers sufficient for the purpose of my audit. Having satisfied myself in regard to the matter I thought that sufficient, and, knowing the dangers connected with the revelation of the names of those who were working for the company, I did not hesitate to promise secrecy with respect to the names mentioned in these accounts. With the exception of some of the accounts included in the 1905-1906 expenditure, the names of all those to whom the company had paid money are shown in the accounts and these accounts have been before the committee and have been open for the inspection of the members. I feel, Sir, that, as far as the audit of these accounts is concerned, no end could possibly be gained by giving out publicly the names of the agents who have been working for the company in the various countries on the continent; to do so would, in my opinion, result in some of these people being fined or imprisoned. Therefore, I would respecfully ask to be relieved from the responsibility of making public the names which have been given to me in confidence. I would again call your attention to section 3 of the contract, which states that the $15,000 is to be accounted for at the end of each year by receipted vouchers, sworn statements or other evidence in proof of the expenditure having been made. To comply with the terms of the agreement sworn statements might have been considered sufficient, but, instead of accepting these statements which were made by officers of the company, a thorough audit of the accounts has been made.

Respectfully submitted,
CHAS. H. BEDDOE,
Accountant.

I do not know that there is anything to add to that statement; I read it so that the House and the country might have a clear statement of the position taken by the auditor in this matter. I do not understand that the hon. gentleman reflects upon Mr. Beddoe; I take it that his object is to discuss this as a question of the policy of the government. Under the circumstances, the government having given, by its proper officers, its word that a certain privacy should be maintained, the honour of the government and the honour of the country requires that that promise should be kept, and parliament has already pronounced in favour of that being done.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). It seems to me that the Minister of the Interior has taken a most extraordinary stand in connection with this matter. He tells us that an official of his department was sent to Europe to ascertain whether certain public moneys had been properly paid to certain parties, in order that parliament might be satisfied that the expenditure was legitimate, and then the minister comes to the House and reads a statement from the official, justifying his conduct in not divulging to parliament the information necessary to enable parliament to know whether that public money has been properly expended or not. The minister declares that parliament has no right to call that official to the bar of the House so that it may be known from him why he has refused to give this evidence. The minister says that parliament has already condoned the offence, if offence it is, and that the government having called upon its supporters in this House to vote with them, have succeeded in obtaining an endorsation of their policy in this regard, which precludes us from going further into the matter. Now, what is the duty of the representatives of the people in this parliament? One of our most important duties is to ascertain whether every dollar of the people's money has been properly expended, and whether or not the country has received full value for it. The Public Accounts Committee and in some respects the Agricultural Committee have the duty cast upon them of ascertaining whether the public expenditure has been made in accordance with the intention of parliament, whether proper vouchers have been received for the payment of the money, and whether value has been received. In pursuance of that duty the Auditor General's report and certain accounts are referred to these committees by parliament, and the committee is empowered to call witnesses and to put them under oath to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Now, Mr. Beddoe, an officer of the government, was called before the committee, and one of the first questions naturally put to him was as to the names of the members of the North Atlantic Trading Company, to whom these public moneys were paid. The witness refused to answer that question, giving as his reason, that there was a clandestine arrangement which had been entered into between some official of the government and some unknown people in Europe or elsewhere calling for privacy. The Minister of the Interior now tells us that an arrangement had been entered into beforehand that this information should not be divulged. If this system of shutting off inquiry and denying information where applicable only to the North Atlantic Trading Company, the minister would have a stronger argument, but we find that principle carried out by the government in regard to every line of inquiry which we enter upon. To-day it is in connection with the North Atlantic Trading Company, to-morrow it is in connection with the expenditure of public money for the purchase of land in the maritime provinces for the Intercolonial Railway; the next day it is in connection with the supplies of some department of the government; the next day it is in connection with the Ross rifle, or the sub-target gun. In every one of these lines, when we ask questions intended to bring out the information whether the country has received value for the money expended or not, some member of the government, or some supporter of the government, objects to the questions and the chairman declares that the witness has no right to answer. The witness is sworn to tell the whole truth; but when he has told just so much as suits his purpose, we are denied the right to get further information. If this were confined to the case of the North Atlantic Trading Company, it might conceivably be said that some reasonable excuse could be imagined for refusal to give the information. But the same thing occurs in all sorts of cases. Go to the Public Accounts Committee to-day—and I have sat there day after day during this session—and you have a chairman presiding there who, I am sorry to say, is simply a disgrace to the committee and his rulings an insult to the intelligence of the members of this House.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order, order.

Mr. SPEAKER. I hope the hon. member (Mr. Sproule) will see that the word 'disgrace' as applied to a member of the House is not parliamentary.

Mr. SPROULE. In deference to your ruling, Mr. Speaker, I refrain from using that word. But I draw attention to the fact that time and time again, when questions have been asked in that committee with regard to public expenditure, the chairman, without waiting for objection to be raised, tells the witness that he has no right to answer the question. It is for the committee to decide whether the question should be answered or not. But the chairman does not wait for any objection from members of the committee. He even goes so far as to say, before a witness is called that if that witness is brought in he will not allow him to answer. Is that partisanship or is it not? I say that the arm of parliament is paralyzed in that committee, and the representatives of the people cannot do their duty; they cannot get the information they ought to have to lay before this House that the country may be able to judge whether there has been a proper expenditure of public money or not.

The Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) in the written statement that he has read, has told us that 75,000 pamphlets were published by this company in seventeen different languages. How do we know that? Whose statement have we for it? The statement of one of the officials. We have the right to have samples of these pamphlets laid before the committee so that we may know whether proper literature is being distributed or not. Yet, not a single copy has been submitted for our consideration. We have simply the statement of an official who went to England to audit those accounts. But when the official who was sent by the government to collect information is brought before us, he refuses to give us the facts. Even admitting that these pamphlets were printed, we do not know whether they were distributed or not. A few years ago when Mr. Preston went to England as Immigration Commissioner, we were told that tons of literature published in Canada had been stored away in cellars instead of being distributed. How do we know that that is not the literature that is being distributed to-day? We have the right to know what these pamphlets contain in the way of advice to intending settlers in this country, and also what means were taken to distribute them. But when we try to learn this information we have only the statement of an interested official, an official, who, on behalf of the government, I say, becomes interested to keep us in the dark if there is any impropriety in connection with the matter, because it is not to the advantage of the government that the facts should be brought out. Is this to continue? Is parliament, through one of its committees, to be treated with contempt? The committee is allowed the empty privilege of bringing witnesses before it and putting them on oath. But when it seeks to get the information which those witnesses have, that right is denied them. The work that has gone on in that committee, in my judgment, has been practically a farce for the last two years. And if members of that committee would follow my advice, we would leave the committee room and refuse to take part in the proceedings, that the people might know how their representatives are treated when they seek to make known how public money is expended. The people of this country ought to be informed that their representatives in this committee are treated with scant courtesy. That is a mild way to put it, for I say that the representatives of the people are treated with contempt and parliament itself is treated with contempt by the witnesses who come before that committee. It was so treated by Mr. Preston, by Mr. Smart, by Mr. Beddoe and other witnesses. Will parliament and the people support the government in its high-handed course of denying the public the right to know what has become of the money of which they have charge? The government is responsible, for the witnesses are sustained and defended in their refusal to answer questions put to them in these committees. If this course is to be continued, we might as well not go through the force of appointing these committees and calling witnesses before them. What is the use, when the chairman invariably—well, perhaps, 'invariably' is too strong, because he sometimes does direct a witness to answer some important question, but it certainly is not too strong to say almost invariably—sustains the witness in his refusal to answer, and denies a member of the committee the right to get information? What can be the affect of this but to paralyze the arm of parliament? What does it mean but that parliament is treated with contempt? And if we cannot bring these witnesses before the bar of this House, to learn why they have done as they have done, then parliament refuses to maintain its rights and privileges. It is no longer parliament that is expending the peoples' money but a star-chamber executive whose acts cannot be supervised by the representatives of the people.

Mr. H. H. MILLER (South Grey). Before making a few remarks on the question now before the House, I would like to ask the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) whether he was present at the meetings of the Agricultural Committee when Mr. Beddoe gave his evidence?

Mr. SPROULE. I was there a portion of one meeting, but I was not there all the time.

Mr. MILLER. The hon. member for East Grey has not said very much about the matter we are supposed to be discussing, but in a general way has discussed the functions and practices of committees of the House. I scarcely think it was fair for the hon. gentleman to refer to the witness, Mr. Beddoe, as an interested witness, because he is an employee of the government. I had not intended to say anything as to Mr. Beddoe's career or record, but perhaps after that remark of the member for East Grey, it may not be out of place to point out that Mr. Beddoe was appointed by the old Conservative party, and has been an employee of the government for some twenty-five years.

Mr. SPROULE. That makes no difference.

Mr. MILLER. Quite so; I do not wish to argue that Mr. Beddoe is more or less reliable or to be depended upon because he was appointed either by one party or the other. I merely wish to say that he has been a trusted employee of succeeding governments for twenty-five years, occupying a very high place in one of the departments, a man whom I think we ought to consider as worthy of confidence. While Mr. Beddoe was before the committee I was present during the whole of both sessions in which his examination took place, and I was pleased when the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) spoke in complimentary terms of Mr. Beddoe and the manner in which he gave his evidence.

Now, the hon. member for East Grey spoke of Mr. Beddoe as having gone to Europe in order to obtain information that he might lay before parliament and before its committees. I do not think his mission was anything of the kind. Mr. Beddoe tells us that his mission to Europe was to satisfy himself, in order that he in turn might satisfy the Auditor General, that the North Atlantic Trading Company had expended $15,000 in general European immigration work, and an additional $5,000 a year in Scandinavian work, during the three years from 1903 to 1906. So Mr. Beddoe's mission was not to obtain information as to the personnel of the company, but it was to satisfy himself that the money had been actually expended. I want to point out that what Mr. Beddoe has refused to reveal is not the personnel of the members of the company, because on page 20 of his type-written evidence, which is in the hands of some of the members—at any rate, of the member for Jacques Cartier—Mr. Beddoe says that he does not know who are the members of the company; and what he refuses to reveal—what he says he knows, but will not disclose—is the names of the agents of the company in various places of Europe, and the names of the printers by whom the printing in Europe was done. I submit, in the first place, that it is not the business of parliament, nor of this country, to know what particular agents the North Atlantic Trading Company employ or what printers did their printing, so long as they actually expended the money that they bound themselves to expend. But it is also said that Mr. Beddoe had directions from his minister, or from this government, not to reveal the information that came to his hand. Mr. Beddoe says distinctly that he had no such directions; that he was not directed to make any promise to keep any secret that he might hear or learn while in Europe. But, he says, I have read the debates of last session, I have read the papers of record in the department, and I knew the general nature of the contract with the North Atlantic Trading Company, I knew the nature of the bargain that had been made with them, and I considered that I was simply carrying out that bargain, and authorized by the bargain that was made, and all I have been able to learn, to make the promise that I did make. Further he says: I could not obtain the information I desired as auditor to obtain, I could not see the vouchers that, as auditor, I desired to see, unless I did make a promise that I would not reveal the names. So Mr. Beddoe has refused to tell us who are the agents of the North Atlantic Trading Company in the different places in Europe in which he says they had agents; but while he has refused to reveal the names of the printers in Europe who did the printing, he does give us a considerable amount of valuable general information. The hon. member for East Grey says that he has given us information concerning matters that we care nothing about, but as to the important matters, he refuses to reveal information. Now, Mr. Beddoe has said that some of the largest steamship agents in Europe are agents of the North Atlantic Trading Company. Surely that is information that is worth something. Then Mr. Monk asked Mr. Beddoe this question:

Are the agents in Europe of the North Atlantic Trading Company business men of good standing?—A. Yes, first class, the very best.

Then Mr. Beddoe has told us that some of the employees and agents of the North Atlantic Trading Company in Europe are ministers. Being asked by Mr. Blain of what denomination, Mr. Beddoe says that he does not know, but they are ministers of various churches in Europe, and it would be detrimental to the work of these ministers to make their names known. Mr. Beddoe cites an instance that came under his own observation, where people got into trouble who were carrying on immigration work in Europe. He says that large steamship lines were carrying on an active emigration propaganda in Budapest, and when the names of the agents of the Cunard line became known they were obliged to close their offices in Budapest in consequence of the work that they were carrying on. I believe that in Germany the German people are largely members or adherents of either the Lutheran Church or the Roman Catholic Church, and I believe in Germany both those churches are state aided, receiving aid from the government. That being the case, we may easily understand why ministers of either of those churches might get themselves into serious trouble by having their names revealed. Mr. Beddoe says that what he wanted further to find out was whether the North Atlantic Trading Company had expended, during the three years I have mentioned, this $15,000 a year in general European work and an additional $5,000 a year in Scandinavian work, which would make a total expenditure in three years of $60,000. He says: I did ascertain that the North Atlantic Trading Company had expended in three years, not only the $60,000 stipulated, but $84,428, $24,428 more than under their contract they were bound to expend. He says: For every detail, every item of that expenditure, an account has been furnished by the North Atlantic Trading Company; I have examined the accounts, I have examined the books, I have examined the vouchers, and you have the vouchers or copies here of every dollar and every cent expended.

Now, as to the vouchers, the hon. member for Jacques Cartier, who carried on the examination of Mr. Beddoe, in his address to the House to-day, laid some stress upon the fact that we have not the original vouchers but only copies. I submit that Mr. Beddoe had no right to obtain the original vouchers for this expenditure, and that the North Atlantic Trading Company, under whose control these vouchers were, had no business whatever to give up the vouchers. Mr. Beddoe was not inquiring as to whether this Canadian government had expended certain moneys, and that we needed the original vouchers to know whether the money had been properly expended; his mission was to find out whether the North Atlantic Trading Company had expended certain moneys, and he satisfied himself that they had been expended by examining the original vouchers in the possession of that company. Those vouchers were the property of the North Atlantic Trading Company, they were receipts for money payments of that company. Suppose that within one year from now, or within four or five years, any of these persons to whom the North Atlantic Trading Company had paid money came back the second time and demanded the same money, the company would necessarily have to have these vouchers in order to protect themselves. Therefore, the company ought not to be called upon to give up these original vouchers to Mr. Beddoe, or to any other person.

Now, Mr. Beddoe also found out, as his report just now read by the hon. Minister of the Interior to us shows that in three years the North Atlantic Trading Company had spread and distributed throughout different countries in Europe 1,762,150 separate pieces of literature advertising Canada as a fit country for European emigrants to come to. The hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) asked: What evidence have we that the literature was distributed. He said that not a single article of that literature was submitted to the committee and that is why I ask the hon. member whether he was present at the meetings of the committee because I remember very distinctly that at one of these meetings at least at which Mr. Beddoe gave his evidence last month samples of the literature in various languages were submitted to the committee. My hon. friend from Carleton, N.B. (Mr. Carvell says: Here are five or six of these pamphlets now. The hon. member for Lennox and Addington (Mr. Wilson) and the hon. member for Peel (Mr. Blain) will, I am sure substantiate and corroborate my statement that samples of the literature were submitted to the committee and were examined by several members of the committee.

Mr. SPROULE. I was not aware of it. I think it is the proper thing that there should be not only a few of these copies but we were told that these pamphlets were printed in seventeen different languages and I think we should have had a sample of all of them before the committee. We should be put in a position to ascertain whether the amount of money that is claimed to have been paid for this literature was really paid for it and to whom it was paid.

Mr. MILLER. The hon. member says that is the proper thing to do and I am glad that he agrees that what was done was the proper thing to be done. He said that some pieces of literature—I apprehend that is what he meant—in each of the seventeen different languages ought to have been submitted to the committee. I am told that there were samples of literature in five different languages and I want to point out that no member of the committee asked Mr. Beddoe or any other person to produce samples of literature, but that Mr. Beddoe had copies there and he said that in the department there are whole boxes of literature and I have no doubt that if the hon. member for East Grey or any other member of this House who is sufficiently interested in the matter will go to the department he will find boxes stored with samples of literature in the seventeen different languages. More than that if the hon. member for East Grey will examine the files of the department he will see that there has been a great deal of correspondence between translators here and translators in Europe and England as to the proper translation of the literature, and as to whether the translation was a translation in such dialects of the respective languages as will be most readily understood by the common people among whom it was designed to be distributed, and he will find if he makes a more thorough investigation than he has made that every precaution has been taken, that the literature has been submitted to translators here and that it has been examined by the officials of the department.

Now, the printing is also criticised. It is pointed out that Mr. Beddoe has not revealed the names of the printers who did the printing. But, Mr. Beddoe has revealed the names of the printers in London. He says that a great deal of the literature they distributed in Germany and in other European countries was printed in London and without any hesitancy whatever, he told the committee that Hickson, Ward & Co., were the printers who did the printing in London, but as to the printers in Europe who did the printing, he said that to reveal their names would get them into trouble and he would not reveal their names to the committee. But, he points out in his evidence that some of the printing was done in London. Some of the printing was done in Vienna, some in Antwerp, some in Gothenberg and some in Hamburg. I would like to know what other object than Mr. Beddoe states as being his object there could be, what other object Mr. Beddoe or any other person could have in suppressing the names of the printers. Surely no one will say that with an expenditure of less than $15,000 for printing, being distributed among five or six different printers in Europe there could be any rake-off, or that there could be any iniquity or crookedness in connection with these printing contracts.

Mr. MONK. What possible objection could the witness have to giving us the names of these printers? Is it a criminal offence in Europe to do printing?

Mr. MILLER. I have nothing for it except the word of Mr. Beddoe who says that it would get these printers into trouble to reveal their names, and as printers usually place their imprint upon their work, it is significant that they did not place their imprint upon this work because it would get them into trouble if their names were revealed.

Mr. SPROULE. I understand the hon. gentleman to say that we have no right to inquire who got the money or whether the money was properly expended or not. Does he remember that in connection with an expenditure of $60,000 for printing, when we inquired who the company were that did the printing we were told that it was the Arundel Printing Company? Who were the members of the Arundel Printing Company? Mr. Somerville, whose father used to be in this House, and his wife and one or two others, and when we followed that up, and endeavoured to ascertain how the cheques were made out, there was the greatest suspicion that there had been a rake-off going to some person and that the government was not getting value for the money.

Mr. MILLER. I think the hon. member is out of court when he discusses the Arundel Printing Company. One of the members of the committee asked Mr. Beddoe whether any of this printing was done by the Arundel Printing Company and he said: No. There is no evidence whatever of any fraud in connection with the Arundel Printing Company, but, at any rate, that does not enter into this transaction at all. This is a transaction in which a few thousand dollars are divided among half a dozen printing offices scattered all over Europe. I want to point out that any information that Mr. Beddoe or any other person was able to give to us when examined before the Agricultural Committee this session or last year, they have not hesitated to give it to us as to the officers or business of the company in any country outside of those countries where it is said to be against the law to carry on an immigration propaganda. The hon. member for Jacques Cartier, asked the witness who did the printing in London and without hesitation, he replied Hickson, Ward & Co. He asked: Who are the London agents of the North Atlantic Trading Company where there are no laws interfering with the work and without hesitation Mr. Beddoe replies that Mr. Louis Leopold is the agent of the company in London, England. Wherever it has been possible to reveal the names without doing injury or harm to the persons whose names are sought to be known the names have been instantly revealed and made public. In Holland, where the law does not oppose emigration work and where we are told the head office of this company is located, was there any disposition to hide the names. No, Sir, we are given the names of the parties. Mr. Gluck is the manager of the company and Mr. Cohen is the secretary. In places where the laws do not interfere with the operations of the company there has been no attempt to hide anything.

Mr. SPROULE. A Bill was put in for $10,000 to pay for clerks and other incidental expenses in connection with the office and when a man went there to ascertain whether this office was kept open and whether clerks were employed he found nothing but a room locked up and a hole to drop the letters through and a party came every two or three days and took away the letters.

Mr. MILLER. I am glad that my hon. friend interrupts as he does because it reminds me of things that I might otherwise have passed over. Mr. Beddoe in his evidence says that when he went to Amsterdam he had no trouble whatever in finding the office, it being located upon the principal business street of the city within five minutes walk of the Bourse, in the principal part of the city and in a public place. He said: I found the office equipped with a manager, a secretary, and an assistant each of whom spoke four or five different languages. I found a typewriter and all the equipment of an office in which a business was being energetically carried on. He says that there was not only this one office but that there was another and a larger office in the city of Amsterdam near the station for storing literature and carrying on other portions of their work. And further he says that they not only have these two offices in Amsterdam, but they have offices in a large number of places throughout Europe, which he has named to the committee.

Mr. SPROULE. He has not named any other officers, and he would not give the names of the agents.

Mr. MILLER. It is true he did not give the names of the agents, but he said: I know the names of the agents, I will not reveal them, but they have offices in these various places. The member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) asked him how he knew this and he replied: I know it from conversation with the officers of the company. The hon. member for Jacques Cartier will find that Mr. Preston's evidence corroborates the evidence of Mr. Beddoe, and Mr. Preston declares that he knows, not from conversation with officers of the company, but from personal visits to the offices in these cities from which the work is carried on.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the hon. member explain how it is that when the work was being actually carried on under the contract before it was cancelled, no offices were to be found except one in a back street, and that after the government cancelled the contract these offices have been opened up? Why were they opened up after the contract was cancelled?

Mr. MILLER. I thank the hon. member for East Grey for giving us additional testimony. We have the evidence of Mr.

Beddoe as to an office on the main business street in Amsterdam; we have evidence as to another office near the station, and now we have the evidence of the hon. member (Mr. Sproule) that there is another office somewhere in a back street.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Will the hon. member (Mr. Miller) state whether or not Mr. Beddoe gave notice to the company that he was coming to audit the books, and will he state also whether Mr. Beddoe had visited these other cities and seen these offices? Will he tell us how long these offices were kept open?

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Beddoe said he did not visit these other cities, but Mr. Preston swore that he had visited the offices in these other cities. The hon. gentleman has asked: How long were these offices in Amsterdam kept open? I do not know but I point out that the hon. member (Mr. Sam. Hughes) was present at the committee and he did not ask Mr. Beddoe how long these offices were kept open.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I did ask and Mr. Beddoe knew nothing whatever about it. I also asked him whether he had sent notice to the company that he was coming, and he said that he had.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Beddoe distinctly stated that he did not send any notice to these gentlemen that he was coming.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Certainly, they knew he was coming.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Beddoe stated in his evidence that this general system of secrecy as to European emigration work has been carried on for many years. We have the evidence of Mr. Preston and Mr. Beddoe, that Sir Charles Tupper entered on the European emigration business under just the same secret system as was in vogue under the North Atlantic Trading Company with this difference, that while for fifteen years we paid 20 shillings a head for immigrants, we got few immigrants in return, and, that while under the old regime the government paid in addition to the 20 shillings, expenses of advertising, the literature was allowed to remain moulding in a cellar because the European agents were afraid to distribute it. Under the old regime we paid the same bonus and we paid for advertising in addition, and we got no immigrants; under the new regime we did not pay for the advertising and we got the immigrants.

Mr. SPROULE. On what evidence does the hon. gentleman (Mr. Miller) state that the agents were formerly paid to distribute the literature?

Mr. MILLER. I think it was Mr. Preston who said that when he went to negotiate a contract with this company he found stacks of literature not distributed and moulding in the cellar.

Mr. SPROULE. And Mr. Preston said that was because of the absolute carelessness of the officers in the discharge of their duty, and he justified reorganization on that account.

Mr. MILLER. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) cannot get away from the fact that the former regime paid for literature which was not distributed, and that Canada got no results from the expenditure. I asked Mr. Beddoe in the committee, as to whether the same system of secrecy did not prevail under the Conservative government, and the member for Jacques Cartier—and I will do him the honour to say that he generally endeavours to be fair and upright and honest—the hon. gentleman said: Yes, the same bad system of secrecy has prevailed for many years.

Mr. MONK. In spite of the great compliment the hon. gentleman (Mr. Miller) has paid me, I would ask him, if, under the Conservative regime he can find a single instance of a civil servant being brought before a committee, and refusing to give such information as is asked for in this case?

Mr. MILLER. When the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk) rose I feared he was going to ask me to take back the compliment I had paid him. I do not know what took place before the committees of the House in years gone by, because fortunately or unfortunately I was not then a member of the House. Now, Mr. Beddoe went to Europe to get information for the satisfaction of the Auditor General. He obtained that information and he presented it to the Auditor General, and the Auditor General is perfectly satisfied with it, and on the strength of that information the Auditor General, with his experience, and astuteness, has paid the money. If Mr. Beddoe's information was sufficient and satisfactory to the Auditor General, it is sufficient and satisfactory to me. If hon. gentlemen opposite would pursue the same system in regard to every item of expenditure in this Dominion as they have in regard to the expenditure of the North Atlantic Trading Company, which is not our expenditure at all, we would be sitting here for twelve months in each year, and then we would not be able to over take the work of parliament. The original vouchers for this expenditure have been presented to an officer of this government in whom we have every confidence. He has examined each voucher, he is perfectly satisfied that the expenditure has been made, and he points out that it was not our money. Mr. Beddoe says that in order to obtain information he gave his promise that the names of these people would not be revealed. He tells us that he did that, not on the instructions of the minister, but that having read the debates of last session; having read the papers on file; and having read, I have no doubt, the letter of Lord Strathcona to Mr. Sifton, he thought he was perfectly justified in making the promise as to secrecy. I think myself he was perfectly justified, and, just on that point let me read an extract from the letter of Lord Strathcona. We all remember that the hon. member for Lunenburg (Mr. A. K. Maclean) quoted that letter in his speech of last session; but lest we should have forgotten it, I think I might read it again to the House. It was addressed by Lord Strathcona to Mr. Sifton on the 15th of November, 1899, when this North Atlantic Trading Company was being formed. In that letter Lord Strathcona says:

> I need hardly point out that the new arrangement must be regarded as very confidential, and must not be made public in any way.

Now, when a witness discloses to us the character of the men who were the agents of this company, the character of the work they have done, the amount of money they have expended, which was far in advance of what they agreed to expend, when he is furnished with details and vouchers for every dollar of that expense and when we take into account the bargain that was made, which was merely following out the policy of the Conservative government, I am sure that a majority of the members of this House will consider that the motion of the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) should not be adopted and that Mr. Beddoe should not be compelled to reveal the names of the agents of the company.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the hon. gentleman read that portion of Lord Strathcona's letter in which he said that he had reason to believe that we would get as many immigrants if we had never employed that company at all?

Mr. MILLER. No, but I will do this: I will defy the hon. member for East Grey to produce such a letter in this House now or at any other time, because no such letter was ever written.

Mr. ARMAND LAVERGNE (Montmagny) Mr. Speaker, last year, when this question was before the House, I voted that Mr. Preston should be obliged to answer certain questions which had been put to him in the Committee on Agriculture. This year it seems to me that the question before the House is pretty much the same, with this difference, that Mr. Beddoe is asked to give the names of the agents and subagents of the North Atlantic Trading Company. I must say that I see no reason why this motion should not be granted. My reason for that conviction is that last year in the Committee on Agriculture, Mr. Preston gave the names of certain agents of the company. I remember especially the name of the agent at Christiania. It seems to me that if the name of that agent can be given in public, there is no reason why the name of another agent should not be given before the bar of the House. It seems to me also that if the names of the agents of the company can be given by Mr. Preston, there is no reason why Mr. Preston last year and Mr. Beddoe this year should not also give the names of the shareholders. If there is anything criminal in the immigration propaganda of the Canadian government by the shareholders of the North Atlantic Trading Company, the doings of the agents of that company are all the more criminal because they fall immediately under the law, while the shareholders would only come later, after the trial of the agents or subagents had taken place. In the contract of the North Atlantic Trading Company there is one feature that has been neglected by this House. That is the provision which excludes any propaganda of emigration in France. It is a well known fact, which has been given as a reason for the secrecy of the contract, that the criminal laws of certain European countries prohibit the propaganda of emigration to any country, In France there is a law of that kind, and the North Atlantic Trading Company in its contract was excluded from carrying on any propaganda in that country. This seems to me to be a very curious feature of that contract. If the North Atlantic Trading Company should carry on an emigration propaganda in every other country of continental Europe, I do not see why it should not do so in France.

Mr. MILLER. I would like to point out that in France there is nothing in the law against emigration work being carried on by the government, as the government is carrying on emigration work there.

Mr. ARMAND LAVERGNE. My hon. friend is entirely mistaken. Mr. Wiallard, one of the agents of the Canadian government in France, told me when I was there in 1905 that he had to take many precautions, because the French government was opposed to emigration. Therefore if the contract with the North Atlantic Trading Company was a good contract in the rest of continental Europe, why should it not be good in France? And if the contract was so good, why was it denounced by the government of this country? The reason given by the Minister of the Interior was that the government was satisfied that the company was not carrying out its obligations. But there was another reason for denouncing that contract which was not given by the government, but which is the true reason, that is, the mediæval secrecy of the contract, a secrecy which has no reason whatever except the reason given by one of the agents of the company, that if the names of the shareholders were given some of them would be obliged to commit suicide. Yet though Mr. Preston gave the name of the agent of the company in Christiania, that gentleman was not put in jail and did not commit suicide. I have no hesitation in saying that it was the most ridiculous contract that any government of any country ever had with any company. So far as the policy of the contract is concerned, we have the opinion of the very Minister of the Interior who sits in this House to-day, when he was only a private member of this House, that the policy of paying bonuses for immigrants should cease, and that if that policy continued we would have coming to this country a class of immigrants who would make of this country a mongrel nation. These words may appear exaggerated to some members of this House, but everybody knows that if they are not the very words, they are the sense of the words uttered by the Minister of the Interior when he was only the member for Alberta.

Mr. OLIVER. When my hon. friend first used these words, I supposed that he was quoting. From what he said afterwards, it appears that he was not quoting. I think it only fair that if he is going to attribute certain assertions to me, he should quote the actual words, and not attribute sentiments to me which may or may not be borne out by the actual words.

Mr. ARMAND LAVERGNE. If my hon. friend will look up 'Hansard' of 1902, 1903 and 1904, he will find that he said that the time for bonuses to immigrants should cease, as they had only one effect, to bring to this country the most undesirable class of immigrants. I am quoting from memory, but I think the Minister of the Interior will not deny that my statement is correct.

Mr. OLIVER. I would much prefer if my hon. friend would quote 'Hansard' and not trust to his memory. My memory is that he is not absolutely correct.

Mr. ARMAND LAVERGNE. On Tuesday next, I will present a motion in connection with the bonus paid on immigrants, and I will then quote from 'Hansard' the words used by the Minister of the Interior. He will then see that he went much further and was much more violent in his language than I have represented.

Mr. BERGERON. What did he say about the Galicians ?

Mr. ARMAND LAVERGNE. That will come on Tuesday.

Mr. DERBYSHIRE. Are you done ; it is one o'clock.

Mr. ARMAND LAVERGNE. I am almost done. My hon. friend has been referred to by a member of this House as president of the Milkmaid's Association, and no doubt he will vote as he is told, but I represent a constituency of freemen in this House, and I will vote as I think proper.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.

Mr. ARMAND LAVERGNE. If my hon. friends do not believe that statement, let them come to the county of Montmagny at any time and I will prove it to their satisfaction. That is practically all I have to say, I did not want to give a silent vote on the motion of the member for Jacques Cartier, which I shall support.

Mr. SPEAKER. It has been intimated to me that it will meet the convenience of the House if I should resume the Chair at four o'clock instead of three o'clock. Unless there is an intimation to the contrary now, the House will meet at four o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That is satisfactory.

At one o'clock, House took recess.

House resumed at four o'clock.

Mr. J. G. H. BERGERON (Beauharnois). Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to detain the House at any length at this time of the session, but I desire to say a few words, because I believe that the matter now before the Chair is altogether too important to be lightly passed over. After hearing the discussion this morning, I came to the conclusion that it was nearly useless to have a committee of investigation in this House. We on this side are often taunted by our opponents during the recess with not having made any straight accusations on this floor, pledging our seats for the accuracy of those statements as has been done in the past. I believe it would be very imprudent for any hon. member to take such proceedings in view of what we have seen here last session and this session. The Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) I believe is taking a very grave responsibility in refusing—for he speaks in the name of the government and therefore with effect—to grant the motion of my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk). It is indeed a sad spectacle to be witnessed in the highest deliberative assembly of a people pretending to have constitutional and responsible government, when witnesses who are employees of the government are allowed to refuse to answer questions properly put to them as witnesses. Why, seventy years ago, when our fathers were struggling to obtain responsible government, if a man had dared to express the opinion that, under responsible government, and in this year 1907, such a thing as this would happen, he would have been called an imposter—such a thing would not have been believed. If, when the grandfather of my hon. friend from Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) was preaching constitutional government to the people in our province, anybody had said that, even granted constitutional government, in this year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and seven, witnesses before parliament would refuse to answer questions put to them and would be sustained by the government and by the House, the idea would have been scouted as obviously absurd. But this spectacle we have to-day, and under a liberal government too. For eighteen years, the Conservative party was in power in this country, during that time a great many investigations took place before the committees of this House. I was in the House the greater part of that time—all that time in fact—and belonged to most of these committees; and I can say as one knowing the facts that never was seen, such a spectacle as we witnessed last session, and as we witnessed this session, in this refusal of witnesses to answer questions put to them. Not referring to a past debate, but as a matter of comparison, it has been stated that during the McGreevy investigation a witness refused to answer and was not compelled to answer. The very reverse is the fact. Mr. Connolly refused to leave in the hands of the committee a book containing a record of his private business, only one leaf of that book bearing any record relating to the questions before the committee. He offered to show everything in the book that related to the subject under investigation, but refused to leave the book in the hands of the committee. He was brought to the bar of this House and Sir John Thompson who was Minister of Justice and leader of this House ordered Mr. Connolly to place his book, the whole of his book, in the hands of the committee. And it was done. To-day, Mr. Beddoe,—who may be a good employee and an honest man, and I believe he is an honest man—comes before the committee of investigation and, when questions are put to him by my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) and other members of the committee, pertinent and proper questions, he declares that he will not answer them; he says he has pledged his word that he will not answer. He does not say that he was ordered to refuse, but simply explains that he made up his mind that, to obtain certain information he would pledge himself not to divulge the names of the parties implicated. We called upon the committee to force Mr. Beddoe to answer. His personal position was safe, and the majority of the committee could force him to speak. But the majority refused. We ask that Mr. Beddoe be brought before this House; and the Minister of the Interior, speaking as I repeat, for the government, declares—as we can see is the intention—that Mr. Beddoe shall not be called upon to appear at the bar of this House and divulge the names of the parties implicated in the transactions we are investigating.

Now, the simple fact is that this North Atlantic Trading Company transaction is a swindle from beginning to end—there is no other word for it. The refusal of Mr. Preston last year to give the names of the people who formed the company proved that there was something wrong at the bottom of it. There is not a man in this House or in this country who is not convinced that Mr. Preston and some of his friends were themselves the North Atlantic Trading Company and that they were the people who obtained over $300,000 for sending—as they said—immigrants to this country. But let it be remembered that Lord Strathcona said that these immigrants would have come anyway.

Mr. H. H. MILLER (South Grey). I would ask the hon. member (Mr. Bergeron) whether he has read the sworn evidence of Mr. Smart, Mr. Preston and Mr. Beddoe that none of the gentlemen that my hon. friend has mentioned, nor any other Canadian, nor any other person in Britian, nor any other person anywhere connected with the government, had any connection with, or received any of the profits of the North Atlantic Trading Company?

Mr. BERGERON. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Miller) wants my candid answer, I will tell him I do not believe a word of the whole story. And I do not believe that there is a man in this House simple enough to believe it. Certainly there is not a man outside of the House who believes it. Why, if there has been nothing wrong in the transaction there is no reason why we should not have the names of that company.

Mr. O. E. TALBOT (Bellechasse). Would the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bergeron) permit another question? Does he mean to say that these gentlemen, when under oath, have sworn a falsehood?

Mr. BERGERON. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Talbot) can settle that with those who were under oath. I tell him simply that I do not believe a word of the whole story. And the best answer to my hon. friend from Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) and my hon. friend from South Grey (Mr. Miller) is the fact that the Minister of the Interior cancelled that contract. And, if additional proof were needed, there is the fact that the Minister of the Interior got rid of Mr. Preston. It is a colleague of the minister's—for whom, no doubt, he will say he is not responsible—who has engaged Mr. Preston and sent him to a distant part of the world. And to-day we find a vote in the estimates to pay Mr. Jury, who was suspended by Mr. Preston—which shows that the government themselves do not believe a word of Mr. Preston's story. But there is even more than that. Did we actually make a contract, legal or otherwise, with the North Atlantic Trading Company? Did we make an actual contract with this pseudo company which never existed except on paper? Where are the men who made that contract and who, in making it, acted both for the government of Canada and for the other side? The minister who made the contract for Canada has disappeared. The deputy minister of that time has left the department and has joined the men who pretended to be members of this company. All the circumstances show that the whole thing was a myth from beginning to end—except the amount of money that the Dominion of Canada paid to these gentlemen.

Now, the refusal of Mr. Beddoe to answer questions this year is only a consequence of what we heard last year. Who benefited by these refusals to answer? Was it the government of Canada? No. Who could benefit except the men who dare not give their names—who were ashamed to admit that they had been doing something which was illegal? The idea, Mr. Speaker, of giving as a reason for this secrecy the statement that we could not solicit immigration from these European countries without infringing their laws. We all know that, I suppose there is not a country in the world that likes to see its people going away. We have spent large sums to promote immigration from Ireland, for we look upon that as good immigration. We do not regard as good immigration the Doukhobors and many others who have been brought here. We know that those who lead public opinion are opposed to immigration from that country. I repeat that the government in taking this position will declare to the world that they have made an illegal contract, a contract of which they should be ashamed. Now, the Minister of the Interior, after taking the position he has taken in the name of the government after saying that we are not entitled to make Mr. Beddoe answer the questions we put to him, says that the House of Commons assents to that position. Well, that had better been left out of his speech. A good many men who have sat in the House of Commons have already received their reward. Over sixty men who sat in this House in 1896 have left it for a reward.

Mr. BENNETT. How many to follow now?

Mr. BERGERON. The question might well be put. And to say that the House of Commons has sanctioned this course—why, Sir, I am sorry to say that under present circumstances the House of Commons would sanction anything. Who are they responsible to? Those who do not expect to go back before their electors are not responsible to anybody. What is the best guarantee of the independence of a member of parliament, of his assiduity to his duty, of his interest in what is going on in the House? It is the prospect of meeting his electors, when he will have to render to them an account of his conduct. Those who have not to do that have no responsibility; consequently they have only to do what the government asks them to do, to sanction everything the government wishes them to sanction. Why, Mr. Speaker, have we really responsible government in this country? What are we here for? We are the representatives of the people, the only men who can enter these halls, and the whole of us, on both sides of the House, appoint a committee called the government to administer the affairs of this country. But we are the judges of that committee. Do we wish it to go out to the country that we have no authority over our committee? If outsiders were to come in here, men who have any knowledge of constitutional government they would see members standing up here talking as if they had a brief to defend every act of the government. They would see gentlemen actually preventing witnesses from answering questions put to them. We have seen in this House, when a motion is made against the administration, against the government, the ministers not defending themselves, but members sitting behind them one after another rising in their places and defending the government, as if the government did not care to do it themselves. Is this responsible government? My hon. friend from Grey (Mr. Miller) said that it was a small amount anyway. Why, he says, it is only a paltry sum of $15,000 which is the subject of this discussion. It is not the amount in question over which the opposition are fighting, it is the principle involved. If it is true—and I call upon the few men in this House who still have independence—if it is true that a witness may refuse to answer any question put to him by a committee of this House, and if it is true that the House will sanction that refusal, if it is true that the government will ask the House to sanction that refusal, why, any minister of the Crown might refuse to answer any question put to him about the supplies which are granted to His Majesty. Suppose we put a question to the Minister of the Interior in supply, a question relating to his department, and he rises and says, I refuse to answer—why should he not do that? If to-day the motion of my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier is voted down, any minister of the Crown can refuse to answer any question put to him, and he would be supported by the House, if the House wished to be logical.

The only reason I can see, the only circumstance in which a government in a parliament like ours, under a constitution like ours, can refuse to answer a question, is when an answer might involve the country in some international difficulty, or when an answer given by the government might involve the country in difficulty with some foreign nation. That is the only case I can think of where a government would be justified in refusing to answer. And after many years in this House I have never yet seen, and I challenge any man on either side to discover a case analogous to this one, where a witness has refused to answer a proper question put to him by a member of parliament. Where are we going, Sir? Does my hon. friend the Minister of the Interior think that the people will sanction a pretension of this kind? He says that the government are sustained in the by-elections. Well, we know how by-elections are obtained, we know what they signify. But the hon. gentleman dare not go before the country in a general election and ask the people of Canada to sanction such conduct as this, and if the people do sanction it, they are not deserving of a constitutional government.

Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to delay the House any longer. It seems to me that this is one of the most important questions that ever came before the House. It is a matter of principle. I am sorry to see that men calling themselves Liberals will stand up here and say that a man shall not answer a question properly put to him by a member of this House. We are here as representatives of the people. It is no pleasure to us to spend two or three hours in the committee room questioning witnesses. We have seen more than I have already mentioned. Even when a witness is willing and ready to answer questions, we have seen him ordered not to answer by the chairman of the committee, or by some members of that committee. How long are these things going to last? I say that we have no right to boast of a constitutional government as long as these things are permitted. This afternoon the Prime Minister has left Ottawa on his way across the ocean with some of his colleagues; in London he will meet with the Prime Ministers of the different colonies, and he will be proud to tell them that Canada is a self-governing colony. But if the motion now before the House is voted down this afternoon, he will have to drop some of his pride and acknowledge that we do not enjoy constitutional government. I say again, as I said in the course of a debate last year on this North Atlantic Trading Company business, that if the government take the course they propose to take now, the people of this country will not tolerate it; and if the government go before the people with a policy such as this, there will be such a stampede at the next general election as will make the men ashamed of themselves who have pursued these tactics.

Mr. H. BOURASSA (Labelle). Before the question is put I desire to make a few remarks. This question is similar to the one which came up last session with regard to the interrogation of Mr. Preston before the Committee on Agriculture, and the position I took then is the position I take now.

It is a very dangerous principle to lay down in a free parliament that a witness should be allowed to refuse answers put to him by a committee charged by this House to make an inquiry into a grave question of administration. With regard to the gentleman concerned in this motion, the slight acquaintance I have with him leads me to believe that he is an upright man and a gentleman; and although this may not be strictly according to the ethics of some ministers of the government, I will state frankly that my deep conviction is that if this witness did not answer before that committee it was because he had been ordered not to do so. The whole of this transaction from beginning to end, has an odour of conspiracy, of secrecy, which is most obnoxious to me as a Liberal member and as a representative of a free people.

Now, Sir, there may be two reasons, and two reasons only—or rather one reason and one pretext—which the government could invoke to justify them in placing an impediment in the way of a free inquiry into this matter. It is either—and that will be the pretext—that the contract is an immoral one from an administrative and political point of view, or that there are men connected with this contract whom the government does not want to be known, or the reason is that the contract is an immoral one from an international point of view. There is no escape from that position: it is either that the government have made a contract in which some men are interested of whom they do not want the public to know, or that they have made, wilfully, a contract against the law of nations, and in order not to show their imprudence and their breach of that law they do not want the right of parliament and of the people to be exercised. The argument that was advanced a moment ago by the hon. member for Grey interrupting the hon. member for Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron) is one which to my mind is preposterous in a free parliament, that would be preposterous anywhere in any free country. It is that because this or that or a third gentleman has sworn that no one connected with the government is interested our inquiry should stop and we should be satisfied that there is nothing immoral in the contract If there is any immorality in the contract from a political and administrative point of view, if there are men connected with the government or officers of the government in that contract it is not sufficient that other officers of the government should come and swear that there are not. It is only by knowing the names of the agents and the shareholders of that company that we can get the truth. I do not for a moment doubt the accuracy or the good faith of either Mr. Smart, Mr. Beddoe or Mr. Preston. It may be that Mr. Smart, Mr.

Beddoe and Mr. Preston have seen only the names that appears on the papers connected with that contract; but who tells us that if the individuals whose names appear in the contract had been brought before that committee they would not have divulged to the committee and to the House the people interested in the contract? This would not have been the first nor will it be the last contract in which names will appear only to hide the true parties behind the agreement. If the shareholders of the North Atlantic Trading Company who signed that contract were in good faith, if they were the very men who really put the money into that contract, what objection had the government to let it be known, to have their innocence, the innocence of their officers, of the ex-Minister of the Interior, of every man connected with the government who had anything to do with this contract, proved satisfactorily, and not have the majority of the House decide that the truth should not be known. I claim that if the government are convinced of the innocence of their officials or any of their members with regard to this contract and still refuse investigation, then they have only one ground to fall upon and it is that they have made a contract against the law of the nations in whose territory that contract was going to be carried out. Last year I made the argument: How is it, if it is really true that this was an illegal contract and the men connected with the contract would be exposed to the application of penal laws in all the countries in which they were going to operate that there should have been an office kept open in Amsterdam for years and years, an office that was not very pretentious but one that was really existent? The member for Grey has invoked the testimony of Mr. Smart. Mr. Smart has given testimony that he went to that office. If that office was open for the carrying on of business and if it would fall under the penal laws of Holland, will it be believed that the government of Holland would not take the proper means to go and see what was going on in that office? We have evidence from that that nothing was carried on, in that office at least, which came under the penal laws of Holland. If it was against the Criminal Code of Sweden or of Norway, how is it that Mr. Smart or Mr. Preston, I am not sure which, but I think Mr. Preston, could give the name of the agent of the North Atlantic Trading Company in the capital of Norway? If all the countries in which this contract was applied had penal laws under which the shareholders and agents of that company fell, how is it that that name has been divulged to the committee by Mr. Preston and as my hon. friend from Montmagny (Mr. Armand Lavergne) has said, neither has the agent committed suicide, nor has he fallen under the penal laws of Norway? Here are two countries in which that contract has application and in which the theory used by the Minister of the Interior and by the majority of that Committee of Inquiry, is proved by facts, evidenced by their own witness, to be false and has fallen to the ground.

Therefore I say either from the international point of view or from the political point of view, the defence of the government is not possible and would not be possible and shall not be possible in a country where there is anything like free opinion or respect for constitutional government. This is not the only principle involved in this question; it is not confined to the paltry sum of $15,000; the principle involved is whether or not this parliament should exercise its function which was described by William Pitt, Earl of Chatham, as that of a standing court of inquest, to give an opportunity to the people of Canada to know the truth upon every question in which the interests and powers of Canada are concerned; or should we accept the policy forced upon it by a so-called Liberal majority, session after session and sitting after sitting, that because there may be dangers to some people whom we do not know, whose interests we ignore, because the government may forsooth have made an immoral contract either with some of their own friends or against the law of nations, we are going to sacrifice the principle that the people of this country are entitled to know the truth, and the whole truth about the way in which the government is spending the money of the country. From the point of view of administration, the point of view of constitutional government and also the point of view of international law, I claim it is the duty of the parliament of Canada and it is the right of the people of Canada to have the whole truth and the complete truth in this matter, and every time this question comes before the House I will record my vote for any motion the object of which will be to secure more light upon these extraordinary accounts, this mysterious transaction. The more it is discussed the more obnoxious it is to the people of Canada.

Hon. GEORGE E. FOSTER (North Toronto). I was waiting, thinking that probably some member of the government would care to affirm the position of the government in the matter under discussion. I think it is an important one, I think the principle involved is important and should not be disposed of by the vote of to-day. It is a question which will be carried to the people and will be thought of by the people, and I believe the people will respond to an appeal on this very principle. Although my advice is not sought I would caution the acting leader of the House (Mr. Fielding) that it ought to be only after a great deal of consideration and thought that he would throw his influence against the opportunity of having complete publicity with reference to the expenditures of public money. In the name of all that is free and good in government, if the people are the fount and source of all taxation and of all expenditures made, ought not the people to be allowed to know just how that money is expended and to whom it goes? It is not sufficient to say that provided only the money is spent it is not necessary to know to whom it goes. No country in the world would get anywhere and no great body exercising any kind of supervision over its own expenditures would get anywhere if it settled down upon a principle of that kind. You have not only to know that the money has gone out from the coffers, but you are to know to whom it has gone, and then although the man to whom the check has been made is the man named in the contract you have a right to go past that man to whom this money was ostensibly paid and see whether he was acting with any other man in the matter.

We have had instances innumerable in inquiries into the public accounts, where we came at the truth of the matter by getting behind the cheque which went to an ostensible individual, and finding that there was a partnership at the back of it. Would any parliament be foolish enough to pass a law which prevents members of parliament from participating in the public expenditure, if you never could go beyond the fact that the money had been paid out of the treasury. Why, if such were the case, a member of parliament might shelter himself behind a false name or a false syndicate, and he might thus contravene the principle, that one in such a position shall have no dickerings with the government in the way of buying and selling. A vote against this motion will affirm the principle, that it is sufficient for the representatives of the people to know that the money has been paid out of the coffers of the country, and that they have no right to ascertain to whom it has been paid. The member for Labelle fairly put in two sentences, a description of this transaction with the North Atlantic Trading Company. It is an immoral transaction which the government ought to be ashamed of to the day of its death—skulking around in post offices and forbidden places ; getting into one country by the shelter of some other country, in order to break the law of that country ; it ought to be an everlasting shame to the government that it ever had anything to do with a transaction of that kind. The Minister of the Interior, pleaded this morning : We do not want to give these names because if they were known the men would be open to punishment for transgressing the laws of certain European countries. That means, in common English, that this government were parties to a contract to break the laws of friendly nations.

Mr. SPROULE. Partners in the crime.

Mr. FOSTER. Partners in the crime. But, that is not the whole measure of the degradation. The Canadian ministry that signed that contract made the face of demanding from the contractors that they should not break the laws of any of these countries in which they carried on their operations. It is a pretty kettle of fish. The government in the first place declare that they were paying this company for breaking the laws of the different countries, and then they bind the contractors not to break the laws of these countries. Why, these men could not get a cent of the money unless they broke the laws ; and yet a clause of the contract says to them : You are not to contravene the laws of any country. The Canadian government did that simply to save their face, and, if they were questioned, to be able to say : We put an article in the contract by which these men were bound not to infringe your law.

There is another principle involved in this motion, and it is one which we cannot press too frequently or too strongly. Every progressive country in the world is making it imperative, that there shall be publicity as to the administration and expenditure by government, and we must take care in this Dominion parliament, that that principle as to publicity shall not receive a set back by the action of the government which repeatedly refuses to allow questions, the answers to which would show the ultimate destination of the public moneys. I have no hesitation in saying, that in the Public Accounts Committee, the action of the government, through their supporters, last year and this year, has been a complete negation of the right of the representatives of the people to fully and thoroughly inquire into the public expenditure. The government through their chairman, and through their majority in these several committees, have repeatedly shut down upon attempts to find where the money went. A hard word was said about the acting chairman of one of these committees in the excitement of debate this morning, and it was of course taken back when the Speaker called attention to it. But let me relate a circumstance. The chairman of the Public Accounts Committee was in the chair ; the committee was investigating the Halifax Land transaction ; the investigator knew from information he had, that the man who purchased ostensibly, was but a blind to cover up another man who was in partnership with him. Mr. Pearson was the man behind the scenes ; Mr. Pearson was the man who did not want his name to be known, and those who were prosecuting that inquiry had information that such was the case. The man who was ostensibly the purchaser was on the witness stand, and here is exactly what happened.

By Mr. Ames :

Q. How was Mr. Pearson paid this amount ? —A. Well, I paid him.

Q. In a cheque ?—A. Well, I paid him by cheque, yes.

Q. Have you the cheque here ?—A. I have the cheque here.

Q. Will you show us the cheque here ?

There was a willing witness ; he had the cheque, he was willing to show it to the representatives of the people, and when he was asked to show the cheque, the chairman rushes to the rescue and says to the witness :

Remember, you are not obliged to do it unless you wish to.

Here was a willing witness, a willing committee so far as I knew, and yet the very moment that the committee came near to getting at the distribution of that money, in rushed the chairman to save his party and his suggestion—well, I will not characterize it, but it was a suggestion which was utterly at variance with all proper inquiry by the people's representatives as to the destination of the public money. Then the following occurred :

By Mr. Ames :

Q. Will you show the cheque that you paid to your partner in this ?

By Mr. Barker :

Q. We are going to find out all about who is in this deal ?—A. Well, there are only two of us in this deal.

By Mr. Ames :

Q. Will you produce the cheque ?—A. The cheque is to pay to F. B. McCurdy and Company or order, $15,146.21, and the other is pay 'cash,' $10,000.

Q. Who are F. D. McCurdy & Company ?—A. They are brokers.

And so, by that process, we even outran the committee ; for at that time the committee did not appear to have the face to stand by the chairman in his suggestion. If the chairman's wish had been translated by an objection from any one in the committee, that question would not have been allowed to be asked, or if asked, to be answered. Now, does this government put chairmen over Public Accounts Committees to help to investigate the public accounts of this country in that way ? It is the policy of the government to be behind the chairman, to uphold him, and the chairman, who is zealous in a party sense, runs with both feet with all possible swiftness to approve himself to the government and the party whose will he thinks he is anticipating. He does not wait to be forced, he is not coy or unwilling, waiting to be wooed, but he goes out as if he were a young lady in leap year and makes the proposition himself before any member of the committee raises an objection. That is a sample of what often takes place in our Public Accounts Committee. Now, we are near the end of this session, but if we live to come back another session, and that Public Accounts Committee is in operation, this House will have to decide whether or not we shall be given some freedom to get at the real facts of any case in that committee. We will spend the time in this House rather than in the committee, in debating that question ; and if the people's will does not in the end prevail, then I am very much mistaken as to the people of this country. I want to note a fact, and I ask the attention of the Minister of the Interior and the Minister of Finance to it. What is the very principle of the audit of our accounts by the Auditor General ? When the Department of Railways and Canals makes a contract, enters into a bargain, has work done, looks into the accounts and certifies to them by its accountant or its auditor, does that end the matter ? Does the Auditor General then say : That is all I want ? Send over the accounts vouched for by your own departmental accountant, and that will satisfy me ? Is that why we appoint an Auditor General ? We would have had no Auditor General and no auditing of the country's accounts if that had been the principle on which an Auditor General worked. The Auditor General's duties tell him that when accounts come from any department, though they may be certified to ten thousand times by the accountant or auditor of that department, he should go behind that fact and see the originals and make his own audit. That is the absolute rule. Was it the rule in this case ? No, Sir. Why was it not the rule ? What is in the very first sentences of the report of Mr. Beddoe when he comes back from Europe ? Almost the first sentence is this : I had a conference with the Auditor General, and he said to me, before I pass these accounts, I want a certificate from an officer of the Interior Department that they have been paid, and that the expenditure has been incurred. That is what the Auditor General laid down as a condition, and it was on that condition that Mr. Beddoe went to Europe. An officer of the Interior Department, I do not care how good he is—and I am saying nothing against Mr. Beddoe—if I said anything it would be in his favour, but it is not necessary—that officer is translated to Europe, and he satisfies the Auditor General when he produces a certificate that these payments have been made. Every day just as good a man as Mr. Beddoe certifies from some department here in Ottawa that accounts have been properly put in and that the amounts properly paid. The Auditor General never takes that as final. Why should he have taken the certificate of an officer of the Interior Department ? Why in the one case and not in the other ? Now, I think this is a peculiar transaction. Is it a fact that this was arranged so that the government could get out of this thing ? Properly speaking, every voucher, every bill, should have come to the Auditor General here and should have been placed within his power, and he himself should have made inquisition into it. That is what he does here. Should it be different because you send a man over to the other side of the water ? The certificate is simply a certificate, whether it be on this side of the Atlantic or on the other side.

Mr. MILLER. Will the hon. gentleman allow me to ask him one question ?

Mr. FOSTER. Well, go on.

Mr. MILLER. I thank the hon. gentleman for the graciousness of his manner.

Mr. FOSTER. Well, I will not contrast my gracefulness with that of the hon. gentleman. He is known to be exquisite.

Mr. MILLER. It might be a disadvantage to the hon. gentleman to do that. I ask him whether he realizes any difference between moneys paid out by the North Atlantic Trading Company on their own account and moneys paid out by the government ?

Mr. FOSTER. I might answer that, if necessary, by citing something that occurred not long ago in the Public Accounts Committee, where it was shown that accounts were paid by the Grand Trunk Railway Company and certified to by the Grand Trunk Railway Company on account of a contract between the government and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, and every one of these original accounts and vouchers was put within the hands of the representative and auditor of the Dominion government. What difference does it make in principle whether an account goes through two hands or three ? Was half a million dollars of the money of this country paid out annually to the North Atlantic Trading Company ? If so, we want to know, not only that that money has been paid—we know that well enough—but to whom it has been paid. If $15,000 has been paid to printers, what government is going to light on a poor printer because he undertook to print for a company and received his money from the company ? But there is no finality until you get back to the original accounts and examine those and the vouchers behind them. That is our right, and a significant thing about it is this. The government were in a quandary, and proposed to get out of it by sending Mr. Beddoe over to make an audit and give a certificate. But that is not the general course of the Auditor General's Department. Over and above the certificate of the official is the right and duty of the Auditor General and his department to look at the originals themselves. Another thing in which I think Mr. Beddoe went beyond any instructions that we see—perhaps not beyond any instructions that he received—was with regard to a claim of that company which is before this government to-day.

The proposition was condemned ; the contract was annulled. It was annulled on the ground that the parties had not lived up to the contract, and now this company is putting in a plea for compensation. They say that they have fulfilled their contract, that the contract should not have been denounced and they claim damages. As far as Mr. Beddoe's instructions, on the face of them, appear, all that he was authorized to do was to go over and audit those accounts. But he absolutely transcends that duty and lays the foundation for a claim to compensation by the company for the loss incurred through the denunciation of their contract. He thus goes beyond the mere auditing and certifying of the account, and reports to his head that the company not only paid those accounts but that they did more. He certifies that they did more than fulfil their contract, that they actually laid the foundation for a largely increased immigration, so that the company have now a trusted officer of the department to advocate their claim for compensation and may bring him before the committee or cite his report before any government and demand compensation. There is your own officer who absolutely reports, not only that the company fulfilled their contract but that they went beyond it with the idea that they had ten years ahead of them in which to continue their operations. It seems incredible that Mr. Beddoe could have acted as he did without having received instructions to that effect. Does the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) pretend to say that he sent Mr. Beddoe over without instructions at all, verbal or written, or that Mr. Beddoe went beyond the instructions he received ? In the latter case, Mr. Beddoe transgressed his orders in a very delicate matter. Here is a claim which the government disputed, yet the officer of the government goes over, hunts up evidence, and puts it in a written report to show that the company not only did everything the contract required, but did more, and on this the company can maintain their claim for compensation is good and must be paid.

Mr. OLIVER. Might I ask the hon. member to correct the last statement he made ? I understood him to say that Mr. Beddoe declares that their claim for compensation is good.

Mr. FOSTER. No, I did not mean to say that Mr. Beddoe had said so, but I drew that as an inference. He reported what I said he did, and therefore the company has very strong evidence in favour of their claim. What strikes one about this North Atlantic Trading Company contract is the mystery in which it is shrouded. I need not summarize all the facts but the salient ones are these. In the first place, the contract was a secret one, entered into without the authority of this parliament and without a specific parliamentary appropriation for that purpose. It was entered into by an officer of the department under the seal of secrecy. He bound himself to secrecy, which no officer of the government should have had the right to do and which no government should have sanctioned. Do you mean to say that you can prevent an investigation by parliament by simply authorizing one of your officers to bind himself to secrecy, to pledge himself that he will not divulge the names of the men he is contracting with ? And you mean to say that any such pledge as that can prevent this parliament from inquiring into the transaction ? Yet that is what occurred. Afterwards when the contract was brought to the minister, he confirmed it ; and it was years after, certainly months, before that contract went to council and before it was definitely authorized by the council. The next peculiar feature is this, that there is nothing you can lay your hands on to show who were the contracting parties. And it transpired afterwards that though the contract purports to have been made by a company, no such company was in existence at the time and for years afterwards none existed, so that the money of the people was paid for years to certain unknown individuals and not to a company at all, although the government told this House, and it is so stated in the contract, that there was a responsible company and that it was with a responsible company the contract was made. But when at last public suspicion was excited and some people began to feel insecure, then a number of persons were put up to get a charter in the Isle of Jersey, and this was only done after nearly all the payments had been made. Although there was no company, no responsible party, $300,000 or $400,000 of the people's money was paid out. To whom was it paid ? There was no company and consequently no capital. Do you mean to say that this parliament has not the right to find out to whom that money was paid ? Do you mean to say that it is not legitimate for this parliament to ask who were the sharers in that money ? Where there is mystery, there is a strong presumption of peculation ; and the government which shrouds its transactions in mystery must not find fault with the people for suspecting it of wrong doing.

What have we got up to this moment ? The matter was brought into parliament. It was long before we could force the government to say anything, but finally, when they could no longer dodge the issue, they made this proposition. They said : We do not want to make the facts public but we will show to one or two members of the opposition to whom this money was paid, but they must promise to keep the information to themselves. My hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) refused any such offer and refused rightly. What happened next ? We had the government officials declaring that they knew who the men were but they refused to give the names. The committee demanded the names but were met by a straight refusal. Then we came to the House and the House refused to order the witnesses to divulge the names, and up to this day we have not the names of one responsible man who was the recipient of this $300,000 or $400,000 of the peoples' money. What wonder then that we asked and persist in asking to whom this money was paid ? Then the sympathy game was worked upon us and we were told that there would be numerous suicides if the names were given out. I would certainly regret such a conclusion very much, but I should like to know who are the persons who are going to commit suicide before I measure my regret. The government however will not give us that small modicum of concession, but I shall go so far as to say that it would be better the whole box and dice committed suicide than that we should affirm the principle that the government can pay out hundreds of thousands of dollars of the people's money and then refuse to give the names of the recipients.

Mr. F. B. CARVELL (Carleton, N.B.). When the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) moved this resolution, I supposed we were going to discuss the refusal of the Committee on Agriculture to compel Mr. Beddoe to divulge the names of the gentlemen representing the North Atlantic Trading Company in the different cities of Europe and also the names of the printers in Hamburg who did certain printing for this company. But the discussion has taken a wider range, and we have listened to the hon. gentleman from North Toronto (Mr. Foster) and other hon. members discussing the old North Atlantic Trading Company question which we all thought was settled a year ago. I can assure these hon. gentlemen that, so far as the people of the country are concerned, that question was dead and buried eight months ago, and they will have a tremendous job if they hope to resurrect it and make it of benefit to themselves in the country. I shall not take up the time of the House discussing the North Atlantic Trading Company. The contract with that company was made seven or eight years ago ; and while I was not a member of this House until 1905, I have attempted to learn something of the transaction. I do not find that there was any criticism of this contract until 1905. During that session, some questions were asked in the Public Accounts Committee, not as to the personnel, but finding fault with the amount of money certain persons were receiving for the business. But nothing much was said about it until the session of 1906. As hon. members will recollect, days and weeks of the time of parliament, both in the committee and in this House, were taken up with the discussion of the personnel of the company. The attack was largely centred upon the gentlemen who happened to be agents of the Canadian government in Great Britain as well as the agents of the North Atlantic Trading Company. We all remember that days and days were taken up with the attack upon Mr. Preston. The matter has been heard of again here this afternoon. Mr. Preston has been transferred from the scene of action ; but, as the attack upon him has been renewed, I wish to read an extract from the Montreal 'Herald' of October 15th last, which to my mind, is a complete answer to the statements made by hon. gentlemen opposite as to Mr. Preston and entirely exculpates that gentleman from any blame in his management of the Immigration Office in London. This is an interview credited to the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson), a gentleman, who, I think, is acknowledged by every hon. gentleman of this House to be absolutely fair in his discussion of public matters, and who would not make a statement about any official unless he believed it to be true. I think I am justified in taking the statement of the hon. member for Halton as a true statement of what he believed to be the facts when he made it:

During the course of an interview in London, Mr. David Henderson, M.P. for Halton, Ontario, is reported in the 'Canada' as saying he had visited the Canadian emigration offices and was agreeably surprised with the amount of work to be done. 'Yet everything seemed to be carried out in a systematic manner. The staff, I noticed, were specially courteous, and what is more, well-informed. The numbers I saw seeking information quite justified the upkeep of the staff.'

'It is difficult,' answered Mr. Henderson, 'to work on anything except first-hand knowledge, though, of course, I have made nothing in the way of investigation. But as a visitor, everything struck me as being very satisfactory. It is still my opinion that in years gone by everything in connection with immigration has not been what it might have. I think, however, that since Mr. Preston's appointment here, a great deal of the cause of complaint has, by his energetic methods, really been removed. Mr. Preston evidently had a very difficult problem before him when he first took over the post, and he seems to have organized the business very well.'

I think a tribute such as that, coming from the hon. member for Halton, entirely disposes of the arguments of hon. gentlemen opposite.

The next person against whom attack was directed was Mr. Lazarus, who was working with Mr. Preston, and working, I presume, for the money he would make out of it. I do not know that there is any objection to Mr. Lazarus, because he happened to be a Jew, trying to make an honest dollar. If I am correctly informed, Mr. Lazarus is now employed by the Canadian Manufacturer's Association, an organization with which hon. gentlemen opposite will hardly have any fault to find. When Mr. Lazarus was working last year in connection with Mr. Preston he was painted as about the blackest man in London. This year he is found a fit representative of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. Next year he may be a Conservative member of parliament, if he can find a constituency to elect him; this I give as merely showing the process of evolution in the minds of hon. gentlemen opposite as to the question of immigration. It has been strongly argued that there was no reason for secrecy in carrying on this propaganda for immigrants to Canada. Because there were offices in London and the work was done openly there, it is argued that there was no danger to any person in carrying on similar work in continental Europe. I do not have to go as far back as the arrest in Germany of the private secretary of the High Commissioner, or to show that Lord Strathcona was practically threatened with arrest. I have here the evidence of Mr. Preston—page 344 of the report of last year—referring to the effect of the law in Scandinavia. I give this in answer to the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa). He stated that, although there was a law against this immigration propaganda in Scandinavia, yet agents were openly conducting the business and no fault found with them. Until facts are produced to show that Mr. Preston's evidence is not true, after the certificate given by the hon. member for Halton, which I have just read, I think we must accept this statement of Mr. Preston as correct:

The fact of engaging to carry on a propaganda was recently illustrated by the experience of the British consul at one of the Scandinavian ports gone into with the authorities. A leading lumbering firm in Nova Scotia wanted labour and sent to some booking agent in Sweden with a view to getting a supply. The booking agent asked the assistance of the British consul who made some inquiries and reported the firm as being responsible. He, therefore, incidentally vouched for the labour being available for the prospective emigrants on their arrival. The booking agent, of course, was interested in it. He got his commission on the sale of the tickets, but the consul, simply for the moral assistance which he rendered in the matter came under police surveillance, and was heavily fined for the interest he had thus taken in the matter, the reason alleged being the unsatisfactory nature of the employment.

Now, I ask reasonable gentlemen on the other side—and there are gentlemen on the other side who are reasonable—how they can say that there was no danger in carrying on this propaganda and no need for secrecy? It is true that they say that, in that case, the government had no right to enter into the contract. The government, so far as they were concerned, provided in the contract that nothing should be done to infringe the laws of any country. But, if these people were to do business, if they were to give us the immigrants, they had to carry on this propaganda and, in so doing, at least technically violate, not so much, the laws of the country as the police regulations by which people might be exposed, fined, and even imprisoned for very trifling actions.

After the attack on the gentlemen I have named had subsided to some extent, the next object was to get the names of the incorporators of the North Atlantic Trading Company. In the argument of my hon. friend from North Toronto (Mr. Foster) there was one point against him which he himself thought it necessary to refer to, because he knew that it would be seen as a weak point in his armour by hon. members on this side. The outcry in this North Atlantic Trading Company case, was not that we were not getting the results. It was not contended that we were carrying on a different plan of immigration from the Conservative government or that we adopted different processes in carrying it on. It was admitted that we paid £1 per head, as they had paid £1 per head. But hon. gentlemen opposite are compelled to admit that where they got hundreds of immigrants we got thousands and even tens of thousands. If these immigrants were any good, then all we have done is to pay £1 per head as was done in the olden days; and instead of having a few hundreds or a few thousands of people, we have hundreds of thousands within the last six or seven years since this contract was entered into.

Mr. SPROULE. Lord Strathcona said that he thought we would get as many if we didn't pay anything.

Mr. CARVELL. I am aware that the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) does not know anything more about what Lord Strathcona said than a man who lives in the Yukon, because when the hon. member for South Grey (Mr. Miller) challenged him this morning to state what was in Lord Strathcona's letter, the member for East Grey could not say.

Mr. SPROULE. I have it here; I got it for the purpose of reading it; it is written to Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. member for Carleton, N.B. (Mr. Carvell) has the floor, and it is only by his permission that the member for East Grey can ask a question.

Mr. CARVELL. If the hon. gentleman wishes to ask me a question, I am willing to grant him the privilege, and would have been willing, but he has not asked the privilege.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman said that when I was invited to read what Lord Strathcona said I was not able to do so. I have the letter here before me, and will read it if allowed to do so.

Mr. CARVELL. Certainly.

Mr. SPROULE. In a letter addressed to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in the month of May, 1906, Lord Strathcona says:

> Briefly, therefore, I will conclude by saying that I am and always have been in favour of a vigorous emigration policy on the continent, in the United States and in the United Kingdom.

Passing over a few sentences——

Mr. CARVELL. Read it all.

Mr. SPROULE (reading):

> I am inclined to the opinion that the immigration which has taken place would have been at least as large in ordinary circumstances under the arrangement heretofore in force.

Mr. CARVELL. I am glad the hon. gentleman has had a chance to read his letter, if it is any gratification to him, because it is no harm to me.

Mr. SPROULE. Does the hon. gentleman take back his statement?

Mr. CARVELL. No, I will not.

Mr. SPROULE. He is not manly enough to do it.

Mr. CARVELL. I am not called upon to do it; I don't have to do it. Now, Mr. Speaker, I was going to call attention to the fact that the gravamen of the charge against the government last year was that they had refused to divulge the names of the gentlemen composing this company, because some of them must be either members of the government, officials of the government, or some person connected with the government of Canada. I do not know that this statement was made openly in the House, but I do know it was made in the committees, it was made in the newspapers, and was heralded from one end of Canada to the other, that gentlemen who had been officers of the government were asked in the committee if they had any interest in, or if they knew any other officer of the government who had any interest in this contract; and the inference was drawn, if the positive statement was not made, that the reason this government did not dare to divulge these names was because somebody interested in the government, somebody whose name the government did not wish to be disclosed, was interested in these contracts, and therefore they were compelled to keep the name secret. My answer to that, an answer that satisfied the people, an answer which has never been referred to by hon. gentlemen of the opposition until this afternoon, an answer that effectually silenced criticism, was the statement of the First Minister in this House, when he held in his hand a piece of paper which he assured the leader of the opposition contained the names of the incorporators of this company, stating that in confidence he would give it to the leader of the opposition in order to prove that not a Canadian, not a member of parliament, not an official of this government, not a person connected with this government, was interested in any way, shape or form with this North Atlantic Trading Company. I would like to know what more hon. gentlemen wanted after that. If there was nobody in this country interested, if the government was not at all concerned with the management, what more could hon. gentlemen want—unless nothing could satisfy them, and that seems to be the case. Because, after the matter has died out in the country, they now try to bring it up by a side issue, they try to bring it up by asking Mr. Beddoe to give, not the members of the company themselves, but the names of the agents with whom the company did business. The Committee on Agriculture, by an almost unanimous vote, with the exception of only four members, I think, voted against the question asking Mr. Beddoe to give these names, because Mr. Beddoe claimed the privilege for himself, and the committee, I think very properly, refrained from compelling him.

An hon. MEMBER. A party vote.

Mr. CARVELL. Well, the number that voted in favour of the proposition was very small, and I am glad it was small; I am glad to know there were only four men in that committee who would ask an official of the government to reveal something with which that committee had nothing to do, and which was of no interest to the people of Canada. I admit that had the government themselves been paying this North Atlantic Trading Company, we will say in Sweden, Norway or Austria-Hungary, then it would have been pertinent to the issue, and the hon. gentlemen would have had the right to ask Mr. Beddoe the names of these agents. But we were not paying any money to these people, we never agreed to pay them a dollar, we never have agreed to pay them a dollar, we never will pay a dollar to these people. They were simply the servants of the North Atlantic Trading Company. And if, by getting these names, we were not going to get anything for the trouble, it seems to me that it is only common sense and common humanity that committees of this House should refrain from compelling a witness to divulge those names when it was none of our business, could serve no public interest, and when it did not relate in any way to the expenditure of public money.

Now, the next question that came up was a request by the member for Jacques Cartier for a list of the printers who did the printing for the company; that brings me to the question at issue. It is a fact—and the member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) at first I thought favoured the proposition, and then condemned it—that when payment was claimed from the Auditor General, he refused to pay it, because in one or two instances he had not the original documents proving that the $15,000 had been expended in printing, as called for by clause 3 of the contract. I will read the exact words of the Auditor General, as stated by Mr. Beddoe:

> The Auditor General refused to pay any further account of the North Atlantic Trading Company until a responsible officer of the Department of the Interior would give him a certificate to the effect that the books, vouchers and accounts of the company had been examined, and that the sums specified in section 3 of the contract had been expended during the years 1903-4, 1904-5 and 1905-6.

And in pursuance of that decision of the Auditor General, Mr. Beddoe was sent to Europe to make an investigation. Now, Sir, I submit, and it must be admitted by everybody, that Mr. Beddoe went to Europe for the purpose, not to satisfy the government by any means, but to satisfy the Auditor General that these moneys had actually been expended. He went there as the agent of the Auditor General, he went there for the purpose of satisfying the Auditor General that the moneys had been expended. And when he went there, he said that he had no difficulty whatever in finding the offices, they were there on the principal street of Amsterdam, just as you would expect to find any other business office. Their books were thrown open to him, everything was plain and above board. But finally he came to one account or more—and I gathered this morning from the statements of the Minister of the Interior that there was more than one account—of which the originals were not furnished to the department. But if you will read the evidence of Mr. Beddoe—and I was there during the whole of it—there was only one account, an account for some $2,200 of a firm in Hamburg, which was not produced, and which is not now on file in the Department of the Interior. I will then only discuss that one account. When it came to this one account, the secretary of the company objected to showing him the original unless he would first promise that he would not divulge the names. Mr. Beddoe finally consented, and here I want to read every word said by Mr. Beddoe in that connection. At page 81 of Mr. Beddoe's evidence we find:

> I wish to be as respectful as I can to the members of the committee and place myself right with them. I have now been accustomed to figures for forty years and I think I went into the matter pretty thoroughly when I was in Europe. I anticipated that questions would be asked, probably in the Public Accounts Committee or in this committee, and therefore I studied all sides of this question, although it is only a small matter, the expenditure of $15,000 a year. But when the secretary of the North Atlantic Trading Company asked me as a favour not to press for the production of this voucher I said: 'I cannot audit the books thoroughly until I have seen that there is a receipted account from this paper that the money has been paid.' He produced it but would not give it to me; he only furnished a duplicate with a declaration that it was correct. After going over the figures for that year I found that instead of the $15,000 which they were asked to expend, there was a sum of $18,283.79 expended in 1905-6, or a surplus of $3,283.79 over and above what was called for by the contract. The amount of the account in question, which they would not allow me to bring back with me, amounted to about $2,200, so that eliminating that altogether there was still between one or two thousand dollars expended over and above the $15,000 called for by section 3 of the contract. We spoke of this and I said : 'Very well then, I won't press the matter and I will promise you that I won't reveal the name of this printer.'

I find that by reading the evidence of Mr. Beddoe and eliminating entirely the account of the printer which they objected to making public, still more than $15,000 had been expended. Mr. Beddoe tells us he went through the books, the invoices were all produced and he explained the whole transaction. The question was raised this morning: How do we know that this literature was sent out in these countries? Why, we have Mr. Beddoe's evidence. Mr. Beddoe says at page 83: That he satisfied himself that this printing actually was distributed over the country. I read from the evidence :

Q. Did you satisfy yourself that the printing was done ?—A. Yes, sir, I have copies of the printed material here with me now. I examined the distribution in the books in which they entered the date, the name of the consignee, and the quantity and description of the literature that was distributed, so that I was pretty well satisfied.

I would like to know now in the face of this evidence how hon. gentlemen can come here and claim that this money was not expended according to the terms of the contract. The only answer that they can give is that they believe that Mr. Beddoe went there as an agent of the Auditor General, came back here, and made a report and then went before a committee of this House and deliberately perjured himself in order to pull the government out of some trouble they may be in.

Mr. HAGGART. Was Beddoe an agent of the Auditor General?

Mr. CARVELL. He was sent there by the Auditor General.

Mr. FOSTER. Oh, no.

Mr. ARMAND LAVERGNE. Why was the contract annulled by the government?

Mr. CARVELL. I am not a member of the government and not in their secrets and so I am not able to answer the question. I may say, however, that as far as results are concerned the contract was producing everything the people of Canada could possibly ask. I presume there must have been some reasons or the government would not have cancelled the contract.

I have discussed this at greater length than I expected to, but it seems to me that when Mr. Beddoe was sent there for a specific purpose, to satisfy the Auditor General that this money was expended; when he went there and looked at those books and invoices; when he had the benefit of the assistance of two or three gentlemen who spoke all the different languages of Europe, when he had all those books and papers in hand, and he says he brought all the accounts but one, and that one account he saw, saw the original with his own eyes, examined it, obtained a copy of it which is now in the Interior Department, and was before the Agriculture Committee; when he swore that the copy which was before the committee was an exact copy of the original, when he has all this evidence then Sir, the only way you can challenge this evidence is to say that Mr. Beddoe has perjured himself and therefore we ought not to believe any of his evidence. I contend that none of my hon. friends opposite will go that far in order to gain what may seem to them to be a little party advantage. It seems to me that Mr. Beddoe conducted himself in a very careful and prudent manner, he did everything a reasonable man could be expected to do. He went there and by the most critical examination possible satisfied himself that this company had expended the money and they have to-day on the files of the Interior Department which were produced before the committee and examined by the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) the original invoices and bills of more than $15,000 worth of printing done in 1905-6—and all this trouble is simply because printing over and above the $15,000 was done by a firm who did not want their name divulged for very good reasons given and therefore Mr. Beddoe refused to divulge the names. I think this House would be not only doing an injustice to Mr. Beddoe, but would be stultifying itself if it asked Mr. Beddoe to come here now and divulge the names which he says they asked him not to divulge. I therefore think this resolution should be voted down.

Mr. DAVID HENDERSON (Halton). I had not intended taking any part in this discussion, in fact not being a member of the Public Accounts Committee and not having attended the meetings of the Agriculture Committee during the last part of the session, I am not as familiar with the proceedings of those committees as hon. members who took an active part in them, and I preferred that this discussion should be continued by hon. members who could speak from actual knowledge gained in the committees. I may say, however, that it has always appeared to me to be a most high handed measure on the part of the chairman of these committees to interfere with a witness sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth and direct the witness that he should not answer a question that practically he was sworn to answer. Whether that is actually perjury on the part of a witness who refuses to answer a question that he has sworn to answer is something I am not going to say, but to my mind the gentleman who directs a witness to refuse to answer a question that he has sworn he will answer is equally guilty with the man who refuses to answer the question. So far as I can judge that seems a most high handed action. When the country comes to judge of the action of these men it will condemn the chairmen of these committees more than the witnesses themselves. The country cannot understand why evidence should be suppressed, why evidence that could be forthcoming is not given simply because some man, the chairman of a committee, or a minister tells the witness that he should not answer a question. I would like to know by what authority the minister has given instructions to these men not to answer the questions which they are sworn to answer.

I rose particularly to refer to the reference made to me by the member for Carleton, N.B. (Mr. Carvell). He has chosen to read from an interview that took place in London, and I am not going to dispute that the interview was exactly correct. I remember that a gentleman called upon me in my hotel in Bedford Place, in London, last September, and I remember having a discussion with him and I understood later on that he represented 'Canada.' I do not know that there is anything in that interview that I desire to-day to change. I do not know that the hon. gentleman has proved anything by reading the statements I then made. I do not know that he has proved from that statement that Beddoe was justified in not answering these questions; I do not know he has proved that Mr. Preston did not hug the machine. I met Mr. Preston in London and I was treated by him with the greatest courtesy. I have been personally asquainted with Mr. Preston for many years; I was politically opposed to him always, but otherwise we were on friendly terms, and I remember Mr. Preston saying to me in London that his political friends were greater enemies of his than his political opponents. I repeat here, that if Mr. Preston was responsible for the transfer of the emigration office from dark and dingy Victoria street to the centre of the city in Charing Cross he is deserving of credit, and in that connection I approve of Mr. Preston's conduct. As regards the staff of the London office, let me say that Mr. Preston's office is up a narrow stairway, and unless I had a guide I would not be able to find it out. Mr. Preston does not meet those who call to make inquiries; they are met by the staff and that is the staff to which I had reference when I said they were a courteous set of officials who seemed to discharge their duties well. I do not think I was saying anything wrong when I spoke of these gentlemen as I found them.

Mr. CARVELL. Neither do I.

Mr. HENDERSON. I do not know what the meaning of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Carvell) was in referring to this matter, unless it was to prove that Beddoe should not be allowed to tell the truth. I was treated by the immigration staff in London with courtesy and with more than courtesy.

Mr. BERGERON. Don't tell what it was.

Mr. HENDERSON. I am not ashamed to tell it. I felt very grateful to the staff of the emigration office, the more so that when I called at the Colonial office on Victoria street I received one of the coldest receptions that a man could possibly receive. I was told by the secretary there that if I would only call to-morrow he might do something for me, but I told him I was going to leave London and that hence he would not be troubled with me. I had the misfortune not to meet Lord Strathcona who was absent in Aberdeen, but I must say that if the reception I received at the Colonial office is the same that is accorded to members of parliament and other visitors from Canada, it is not very creditable to the officer in charge. When I went to the immigration office in Charing Cross I was rendered every assistance. An officer accompanied me as far as Windsor so that I might see Windsor castle and all about it. I presume that officer was paid by the Dominion, but he certainly did his duty, and I am grateful for any expense that may have been incurred. I received that courteous treatment from him which I think a member of parliament should receive. He took me even to the King's stable and all around.

Mr. BENNETT. Did you see the stud ?

Mr. HENDERSON. I am sorry to say that the chief part of the stable had been moved to Aberdeen, but nevertheless I saw all it was possible to see. So far as I am concerned, I am thankful for the courtesy extended to me by the staff of the emigration office. These gentlemen were familiar with Canadian affairs, they were competent to talk about the country, and when I speak of the staff I am not referring specially to Mr. Preston because his duties do not bring him in contact with those who call at that office for information. At the same time, Mr. Preston accorded me every courtesy and I do not suppose, if I had been one of the strongest Liberals, he could have done any more than he did. I met the celebrated Lazarus and had a conversation with him. I was invited to go to his office, but I respectfully declined, and consequently I did not see the interior of his sanctum or learn what kind of business he was carrying on. I understand that what purported to be interviews with me were cabled to Canada, but I frankly admit I am not aware I was interviewed otherwise than by 'Canada.' Of course, if you drop a remark in London, a newspaper man may be around and you are reported and you do not know it. But no doubt what was reported in 'Canada' was practically what I said, and I do not think there is anything in it that I need be ashamed of. Now, if the member for Carleton (Mr. Carvell) is satisfied, I may proceed to say that I shall support the resolution of my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) which is an eminently proper resolution. I believe that the government has no right to suppress the evidence which is demanded by the Public Accounts Committee. The action of the government creates a suspicion that there is something radially wrong behind the scenes. In conclusion, I wish to say that I do not believe that if everything was fair, and square, and above board, and honest, in this contract, the Minister of the Interior would hesitate for a moment to expose it to broad daylight.

Mr. W. B. NORTHRUP (East Hastings). Mr. Speaker, in the few moments during which I shall ask the indulgence of the House I shall try to confine myself to the principle which I understand underlies the motion of the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk). In one sense it may be a comparatively small matter whether Mr. Beddoe answers certain questions or not; but I quite agree with the hon. member for Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron) that no more important question has come before the House this session, or is to come before it, than the principle which underlies this motion. That I understand to be the power of parliament to require answers from witnesses. When I listened to the hon. member for Carleton, N.B. (Mr. Carvell), I saw why there was perhaps a difference of opinion between hon. members on the two sides of the House, and I sincerely hope that hon. members who hold as he does, hold for reasons similar to his. He is quite clear that Mr. Beddoe is an agent of the Auditor General. I am myself inclined to agree with the hon. member for Carleton in his premises, and certainly his logic is irrefutable. If Mr. Beddoe was an agent of the Auditor General, I am not sure that we have a right to pry into the private affairs of these two gentlemen. But applying the reasoning of the hon. gentleman, if Mr. Beddoe happens to be an employee of the people of Canada, then the people of Canada surely have as high rights as the Auditor General. If I understand the case, the people of Canada sent Mr. Beddoe to the old country to do their business; they footed the Bills; and the question is whether or not the people of Canada, having sent their agent to do certain work for them, and having footed the Bills, are entitled to a report, or whether certain private individuals are to receive the report instead of the people of Canada. Now, time brings many extraordinary changes; but I venture to think that if the shades of some of the leaders of the Reform party who graced the politics of Canada in days gone by and have now gone to their rest, could return to this mundane sphere, nothing would surprise them more than the position held to-day by those who mask in their clothes and falsely pretend to be their followers. If there was one line of demarcation which in former days was more distinct than another between the two parties, it was the fidelity with which the Reform party claimed to represent the people and sought to wrest from the Crown the control of the people's money because the people contributed it. Where is the Reform party to-day? The people still contribute the money, but the Reform party to-day is the party which declines to allow the representatives of the people to investigate and ascertain how that money has been spent and who has received it. Hon. gentlemen opposite must not forget that none of us sit in this House merely to represent the constituency which elects us. The principle of our constitution is very different from that. The theory, as one speaker said, is that all the people of Canada meet in parliament to legislate on matters which touch all the people of Canada; but as it is practically impossible for all of them to meet here, the country is divided into districts each one of which is asked to send a representative, not of that district, but of the people of Canada; and therefore every member sitting in this House represents all the people of Canada. If that be the case, then each member of the House, whether on the government side or on the opposition side, has a right to ask on behalf of his constituents, the whole people of Canada, what is being done with their money. If this were the only case in which difficulties have arisen, it would perhaps be less serious; but it is well known that for years the principle has been applied, and is daily being applied more frequently, that the government majority can control what investigations shall be held, what evidence shall be taken, what questions shall be asked and what answers given, even by witnesses brought here by the opposition. I submit that when we go into a committee, be it the Committee on Agriculture or the Committee on Public Accounts, the duty of every member of that committee, no matter on which side of the House he sits, is to do his best to audit the accounts brought before him. May lays down in a few words what the effect of auditing a public account should be when he says:

> The researches made by the committee and the publication of their reports ensure on behalf of the House of Commons an effectual examination of the public accounts.

That is the object of the committee—to ensure on behalf of the House of Commons an effectual examination of the public accounts; and the committee has certain powers given it by this House. Hon. gentlemen opposite seem to think that the powers of the committee are limited. It is most extraordinary that these hon. gentlemen consider that members of this House sitting in committee have such limited powers to examine witnesses—that they are so afraid that some chance word will hurt somebody when we are trying to find out what is done with the money of the people of Canada whose representatives we are; and yet the ministers themselves may appoint a body called an insurance commission, with such powers that it can investigate the most secret recesses of a man's private business, even insisting on the production of his bank account, and not one word of protest is heard from hon. gentlemen opposite. But let a member of parliament endeavour to ascertain what has been done with the people's money, and the very gentlemen who should assist us in doing so, take no interest or part in it, except to block any investigation that may be attempted by gentlemen on this side of the House. I would like hon. gentlemen to consider what the inevitable result of this must be. In one sense it may be a small matter whether or not certain questions are allowed to be asked in a committee, with regard to what has been done with public money; but, on the other hand, it is of the utmost importance that every one who handles public money should realize that he is liable to be called to account for the manner in which he handles it. Only last session—I might refer to cases this session if the rules of the House did not preclude me from doing so—we had a case before the Public Accounts Committee which exactly illustrates the objection raised by the hon. member for Carleton here to-day. A man named Merwin was brought before the Public Accounts Committee. It was shown that he sold goods to the value of a quarter of a million dollars a year to the people of Canada, some in his own name and some in the name of Brooks & Company; and when we examined his books we found that Brooks & Company was simply himself under another name. We had evidence as to the value of the goods, and we found that they had been sold to the government at a profit of from fifty to one hundred per cent; and when we brought Merwin before the committee, after more trouble to get him than we experienced in the case of any other man, and endeavoured to ascertain what he had paid for those goods to see whether the people of Canada had been fleeced or not, he declined to answer; the chairman held that he was justified in declining to answer, and a majority of the committee supported the chairman. Surely it was a proper question, because Merwin had no goods to sell, but was a manufacturers' agent occupying a little room in Montreal, and was consulted whenever anything was wanted by the department, from a needle to an anchor. When we brought those who had sold the goods to him, they declined to answer what they had sold them for, saying that that would be prying into their private business.

And it was not until we took the course of asking these manufacturers at what prices they were selling these goods at that time in the ordinary market, that Mr. Merwin found it was idle to any longer refuse to reply and that the committee came to the conclusion that he should be instructed to reply. Then Mr. Merwin got permission to leave the committee in order that he might call up his partner by telephone and get information from him. He was absent an hour, but we have reason to believe that he did not spend that hour in the telephone box but spent it in the minister's office and did not go to the telephone at all. And then when he came back, he gave evidence as to the prices paid. Now that this experience with Mr. Merwin has become a matter of history, I would ask whether those who voted in the committee that he should not be obliged to tell how much he had paid for the goods in order that the people might ascertain how much they had lost by this dishonest or bungling way of doing business or those members of the committee who insisted that he should give this information were doing their duty to the public? Who were acting in the public interests—those who sought to obtain the evidence or those who were doing their best to block it? We had another experience of the kind last year in the matter of the furnishing of supplies to the steamer 'Arctic.' That matter was referred to a special committee for investigation. At every step and on every hand those members of the committee who sought to ascertain the facts were hampered by the government supporters. Motion after motion was made to ascertain the facts and voted down continuously and consistently by the majority of the committee. We asked that an accountant be instructed to go through the invoices and the requisitions for supplies and the goods on hand. But our request was voted down. We asked to have samples of the various goods purchased produced before the committee, but that proposition met with a similar fate. When I went to Toronto and Montreal in order to get information from men in the trade so as to ascertain whether or not the prices charged were proper prices, I was told that unless they were shown the samples it would be impossible for them to give evidence. There was hardly an article purchased, in which there were not various qualities. They said: Let us see the samples, and we will tell you the prices but otherwise we cannot. Take for example a fur coat. You can buy a fur coat for $15 or $20 or for $400 or $500, how could any man put a valuation on a fur coat purchased for the Arctic expedition without seeing it? And if he did not see it, how could he possibly imagine that what was charged as a fur coat was merely canvass on the outside and sheep skin within? That illustrates the disadvantage under which the members of the committee, who were endeavouring to do their duty, were under by reason of their attempts to elicit evidence being balked by hon. gentlemen opposite. And not only were these efforts balked in the committee, but this House seems to have suffered under a like misconception of its duties, because when the report of the committee, based on insufficient evidence, was brought before this House, this House solemnly voted that it was absolutely correct. A report which stated that all the evidence offered had been taken, when every man in the House knew that the committee had steadily refused to admit the evidence, was accepted by this House as a complete and impartial report. It is because this policy of refusing to admit evidence has been followed in so many cases that I appeal to members of this House who, as representatives of the people, are bound to see that the people's money has been honestly expended, to put an end to it. Is it any wonder, when such a policy is followed, that our expenditures should have increased from $40,000,000 a year to over $100,000,000? Is it any wonder that we should find ministers recreant to their duty and allowing contractors, middlemen and others to mulct this country in most extravagant sums and deputy heads vouching for these expenditures, when we find committee after committee of investigation persistently refusing to have any light thrown upon the transactions, and this House endorsing them in their efforts to block legitimate inquiry?

At six o'clock, House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. W. H. BENNETT (East Simcoe). Mr. Speaker, in the course of his remarks the hon. member for Carleton, N.B., (Mr. Carvell) referred to this as a dead issue. I think that on the part of that hon. gentleman, and even more on the part of the members of the cabinet, there is a strong desire that this should be considered a dead issue. The silence of hon. members opposite, especially those from Ontario, is a pretty fair indication that these hon. gentlemen feel most uncomfortable to be called upon to vote on this question, and that they will vote in silence rather than attempt the impossible task of justifying their vote. If there is a department of the government whose increase of expenditure has been more noticeably abnormal than another, it is this department of Immigration and Quarantine. The expenditure in 1904-5 shows an increase over that of 1896-7 of $676,675. As one goes about the country he hears the repeated inquiry, made by men irrespective of politics, why is there such an enormous increase in the public expense of Canada? Considering that the population is little more than it was ten years ago, and that the area of country administered is practically the same, it is hard to pretend that there can be a reason able ground for that increase. Here is one of the items that go to make up the tremendous aggregate increase. Now, those who have studied the immigration policy of Canada know that it has been worked as a political factor for ten years past. The former Minister of the Interior, the hon. member for Brandon (Mr. Sifton) matured a plan of settling these foreigners in large blocks, so that they might outweigh the English speaking vote in the several constituencies of the Northwest and Manitoba. These people were brought in not so much because they were desirable settlers, but as part of a scientific election system. In view of the fact, it is not to be wondered at that the hon. member for Brandon called to his assistance Mr. Smart and Mr. W. T. R. Preston, for both of these gentlemen were thoroughly versed in machine politics in Ontario and Manitoba. So, we have been filling up the Northwest at enormous expense to the country, sacrificing quality for quantity, a sacrificing of the interests of the country as a whole, to the advantage of a political party. Well, may hon. gentlemen opposite cherish the hope—a hope which is surely a vain one—that this whole question may be relegated to oblivion. My hon. friend from Carleton, N.B., (Mr. Carvell) tries to make light of this question on the ground that, though this matter has been in course of procedure for a long time, the facts have only lately been called attention to. But when you consider, Mr. Speaker, that in the Auditor General's Report you find the details of $90,000,000 of expenditure you see how impossible it is that gentlemen on this side of the House should scrutinize every item. Now, the payments to this company were returned in 1905, and are to be found in the Auditor General's Report of that year at page L—36. The amount charged in that year $38,966.66 was so large as to attract the attention of hon. gentlemen on this side. It can easily be understood how this matter slipped along year after year when the expenditures recorded must have been so small as to be not noticeable. But this was due to the fact that the items were kept back—whether studiously and purposely I say not, though, in all probability that was the reason why attention was not sooner directed to this matter. The hon. member for Carleton, N.B., also relied upon the arguments that the opposition in this House was a laughing stock in asking for the names of the members of this company, because the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) had offered to communicate those names to the leader of the opposition. I ask you, Mr. Speaker, in what position would the leader of the opposition have been had he accepted the offer to learn those names under the pledge of secrecy which was the condition that the Prime Minister laid down. Why, had it turned out even that Mr. W. T. R. Preston was one of these parties, the leader of the opposition would have been estopped from mentioning his name in public. And the Prime Minister knew very well that his proposition could not and would not be accepted.

Now, the people of this country have the right to know where their money is going and why. That is the reason they ask today for every detail of this swollen expenditure which has increased by the enormous sum of nearly $700,000 as compared with ten years ago. The attempt is made to justify this increased expenditure by citing the influx of population into the Northwest. What sane man will attribute to the government that influx of population? Why the government could not have prevented the people from going to the Northwest, even if they desired to do so. What has the government had to do with bringing in hundreds of thousands of settlers from the United States? Railway communication has been mainly responsible for that.

I shall not go into the details of this North Atlantic Trading question at great length. But one point is quite clear, and that is, that from the outset this concern has been regarded with the gravest suspicion. From the first investigation of the matter, the idea has prevailed, and still prevails that everything was not square and above board in these transactions. First, consider the case of Mr. Smart. That gentleman occupied the position of deputy minister of the Crown, with a very considerable salary. He had before him the fact that after a certain number of years of service he would be entitled to superannuation. It has not been the rule with deputy ministers to resign lucrative positions and their prospects of superannuation with liberal allowances? But Mr. Smart left his position. And immediately after his resignation, where do we find him? Why, we find him in the employ of this very North Atlantic Trading Company. And more: Certain things were done by Mr. Smart before he left the government's employ. I will be bound that, in the annals of parliamentary history in this or any other country no such act has been performed as that performed by Mr. Smart in this connection. Here is a high-priced official leaving his office to be employed by a company which has had dealings, under suspicious circumstances, with the very department of which he was the deputy head. And this gentleman, Mr. Smart has been forced to admit that, before he left his office, every scrap of paper, every detail in connection with this matter, both the confidential and public records, has been by him or by those under him destroyed. I challenge any hon. gentleman on the other side to contradict that. Consider: The man who is supposed to be safeguarding the interests of this Dominion upon leaving the official duties for which he had been paid and handsomely paid, burns the books, not merely his own personal property, but those belonging to the people of this Dominion. Little wonder is it that public suspicion has attached to every detail of this affair between the Department of the Interior and Mr. Smart.

Mr. MILLER. If the hon. member (Mr. Bennett) will allow a question: I think Mr. Smart, in his evidence, did not say that he had burned any books, and I think that he said that the correspondence that he had destroyed was not correspondence belonging to the department but to himself.

Mr. BENNETT. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Miller) will take the trouble to read the evidence he will find that Mr. Smart particularly referred to letter-books.

Mr. MILLER. Not letter-books belonging to the department.

Mr. BENNETT. Well, my hon. friend (Mr. Miller) is one of those who will apologize for this government, no matter what it does.

Mr. MILLER. I am only asking the hon. member (Mr. Bennett) to state the facts.

Mr. BENNETT. I notice that that hon. gentleman, no matter what the case may be, always comes to the rescue of the government. That is his right, I do not complain of that, but it is a matter that he will have to settle with his electors. Now, the hon. gentleman who preceded me in this debate called in evidence the fact that Mr. Preston was connected with this concern, and for that reason the enterprise must be regarded without distrust and without suspicion. Why, I say here, as a challenge to that hon. gentleman, and to any other hon. gentleman from Ontario, that there is no man in this House who sits on the Liberal side from Ontario who will dare to go into his riding and say one word in support of the character or reputation of W. T. R. Preston. His name stinks in the nostrils of the people of Ontario, a man who has been reported in the courts, a man who has been driven out of the province of Ontario by the Ross government. And here I want to pay one tribute to the Ross government; the Ross government was as white as snow compared with the record of this government, and the Lord knows that it was bad enough. This government is following in the same wake with the Ross government, so far as Ontario is concerned. They are simply defying public opinion, and when an hon. gentleman stands up in this House and invokes the name of W. T. R. Preston as a warrant or authority for anything done by this government, then I say that his argument will carry very little weight in the province of Ontario.

But we are given one reason, and that is the main reason, why no mention should be made of these names. We are told, with the greatest possible gravity, that there are men connected with this concern who, if their names were disclosed, would commit suicide. Sir, could anything more absurd be adduced in an argument on a public platform, at least in a deliberative body like the Canadian House of Commons? It is utterly impossible.

Now, so far as this Mr. Beddoe is concerned, it must be remembered, as was pointed out by the hon. member for East Hastings (Mr. Northrup), that he does not occupy the position of immunity that other civil servants occupy who may be in the employ of the Auditor General's Department. The public have got to understand that the Auditor General is practically above governments, that the Auditor General can do what he pleases in this country; and I think it follows, therefore, that the men in his employ can do what they please also. But to say that because this man went into the employ of the government under a Conservative administration, for that reason he is perfectly correct in his dealings, is absurd. I do not know Mr. Beddoe personally, I have no doubt he is a very estimable gentleman. But I do know this, that Mr. Beddoe, like some other gentlemen, I have no doubt, feels hanging over his head that threat which was made here the other day by the hon. member for Westmoreland with reference to other officials. Why, every one knows to-day that officials in the different departments simply carry their lives in their hands, or feel that they do; and was it to be expected that Mr. Beddoe was going to disobey his instructions one iota? Mr. Beddoe, no doubt, received certain instructions, and he has followed them out to the letter. But Mr. Beddoe is not so much an official of this government as he is of the people of Canada, and he has been dealing on this occasion with the affairs of the people of Canada. When the people of Canada observe these enormous amounts that have been disbursed for immigration purposes, they have a perfect right to know to whom they are paying their money, and for that reason I shall have great pleasure in supporting this resolution of my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier.

Now, I am going to refer to another phase of the question that has been mentioned this afternoon, and that is in regard to the now notorious—for I think it may be called notorious—Public Accounts Committee of this House. I have been a member of this House for a number of years, and I can remember that fifteen or sixteen years ago such a thing as a meeting of the Public Accounts Committee was a very rare occurrence. But now almost every day that committee is crowded and congested with work. And look at the spirit with which that work is approached. When one goes into that committee he is surprised at the way it is conducted. That was manifest the other day by a witness who was under oath to give his evidence as an honest man, and when he was trying to do so truthfully and honestly, the laughter that greeted the remarks he made, which were damaging to the government, was so loud and so continuous that the witness himself protested against the levity of the committee. I refer to the evidence of Mr. Hugh Calderwood, in the Collingwood Dry Dock case. It is looked upon as a perfect bear garden, where hon. gentlemen on the ministerial side are supposed to do—what? To give the people an opportunity of seeing where their money goes? Not at all; it has all the appearance of a regular court, where certain gentlemen are appointed for the defence of certain cases; and it is a strange thing to remark that the legal gentlemen from Ontario steer very clear of that committee. They do not seem to care to have a hand in the doings there at all. Day after day it seems to be the case that one hon. gentleman will try to silence and choke off an investigation into affairs in his own riding, and on a subsequent day he will render assistance to some other hon. gentleman to choke off an investigation in his riding, giving one good turn for another. That committee has been ringing this session with charges of graft that stand unparalled in the history of this country.

Now, I think it should be said in fairness to that committee that a great deal of the trouble is due to the fact that different decisions are given by different chairmen. In the first place, the hon. the senior member for Ottawa (Mr. Belcourt) is, I believe, the chairman of that committee. Unfortunately, through illness, he has been usually and unavoidably absent from the committee, and what is the result? The result is that the hon. member for Verchères (Mr. Geoffrion) has on most occasions presided, and so it happens that when the senior member for Ottawa has given a ruling one day in favour of allowing certain evidence, a few days later, in another case on all fours with it, the hon. member for Verchères rules similar evidence out. There has been no uniformity in the rulings of the chair. More than that, the hon. member for Verchères, for reasons best known to himself, has often been absent, and other hon. gentlemen are selected as chairmen, and in consequence there has been no permanency in the decisions of the chair. So great has been the political stress, the political exigencies in that committee, that the decisions of the chair are tinged with the opinions of the gentleman who, from time to time, occupies the chair.

I have every respect for my hon. friend from Verchères for his courteous bearing in the chair; but I must join with other hon. gentlemen in saying that I think he is rather tinged with partisanship. It is often unnecessary for any appeal to be made by a member for the protection of interests, because the hon. member for Verchères intervenes himself. Let me give a case in point. A certain official of this government had to give a valuation in the Public Accounts Committee on a government work. That gentleman had, I know as a matter of fact, made a demand on this company, the Collingwood Dry Docks, that they should pay him a very large sum for giving his report, because on his report depended whether the company should gain a subsidy of $300,000—no inconsiderable amount. This gentleman, the engineer of the Public Works Department, Mr. Coste, acting as arbitrator, made a demand on this company for a very considerable amount, and what was the result? We succeeded in placing in the box the manager of that company, a gentleman who had the letter, and what did that gentleman say when he was asked this question?

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to direct your attention to the fact that the matter the hon. gentleman is discussing now is still under consideration of the Public Accounts Committee and I doubt very much whether the hon. gentleman has any right to say that the inquiry is closed, that the matter has been reported to the House, and to discuss it. When the time comes he will find the members on this side of the House perfectly willing to discuss it.

Mr. BENNETT. The motion passed by the committee was that the evidence should be reported from day to day, and be printed and I have consequently got a copy of the evidence under that rule. It is in the hands of hon. gentlemen. Knowing as I do as a fact that this Mr. Calderwood, who is the manager of this company, had addressed to him by Mr. Coste a letter demanding a large amount before his valuation which be made for services he alleged he had performed for this company, Mr. Calderwood was questioned while on the stand and I shall not use my own words but shall put in the very evidence that was given. In answer to the hon. member for South Simcoe he gave this testimony:

Q. I want to ask two or three questions. Have you received, have you got in your possession, a letter from Mr. Coste making a demand of three per cent on $500,000?—A. I have not.

Q. Have you a letter making a demand at all?—A. I have not.

Q. Have you ever had a letter of that kind?—A. I don't think it is necessary to answer that question.

Q. Well, I think it is?—A. Well, I appeal to the chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. You are not obliged to say.

Mr. LENNOX. Why not?

The CHAIRMAN. Because it is a personal affair between them.

Now, sir, who could conceive a more extraordinary or outrageous case? Here is a Mr. Coste, employed by the people of this country, paid a very handsome salary—and I want to be fair to Mr. Coste, Mr. Coste says: I was allowed by the then minister, Mr. Tarte, to do certain work.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN. Why do you want to discuss that now?

Mr. BENNETT. Because it displeases my hon. friend.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN. I rise to a point of order and repeat the point taken by the hon. member for Cape Breton (Mr. Johnston). I heard the hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) say a motion had been passed that the evidence should be reported from day to day. My understanding is that no such motion was passed, and if that is correct he has no right to discuss the matter at this stage.

Mr. BENNETT. The fact is that the evidence is here and the minutes of the Public Accounts Committee are up there, and the hon. gentleman can get them and then if I am out of order I of course will bow to the facts.

Mr. JOHNSTON. The hon. member is certainly out of order.

Mr. FIELDING. We had better have an understanding. If the evidence has been reported and has come into possession of the House the hon. gentleman is right. There is a possibility that it is not germane to the original question but we will not press that but we should have an understanding as to whether this evidence is in possession of the House.

Mr, J. D. REID. I think the last report of the committee includes that evidence.

Mr. BENNETT. It is in the boxes to-day.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN. It is simply distributed.

Mr. BENNETT. What could be more extraordinary——

Mr. JOHNSTON. There is one way by which this——

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. It is a well known rule of the House that unless the matter has been reported it cannot be referred to. If it has been reported the hon. gentleman is in order in referring to it.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Speaking to the point of order there was a distinct understanding in the committee that this matter was not to be reported for the use of members of the House, that is not for consideration in the House. I do not know whether I read the report correctly but it was certainly my understanding of the report which reads as follows :——

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What is the date ?

Mr. JOHNSTON. The 27th of February.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. When was it brought to the House ?

Mr. JOHNSTON. I do not know exactly when. The report bore date the 27th of February and I presume that is the date. It is as follows :

Your committee recommend that the evidence being taken in connection with the payment of $30,000 to the Collingwood Shipbuilding Company be printed from day to day for the use of members of the committee and that rule 72 be suspended in relation thereto.

That is the report of the committee. The understanding in the committee beyond question was that this matter was not to be considered by the House until the inquiry was closed, there could be no question about that.

Mr. FIELDING. The motion that the evidence be printed from day to day is simply to provide a substitute for the typewriting, for the conveniences of the members. That does not, I think, constitute a reporting to the House.

Mr. J. D. REID. The fact of the Public Accounts Committee reporting the proceedings up to a certain day including this evidence——

Mr. FIELDING. No, that is not the report.

Mr. BENNETT. It has all gone out in the public press and I am quite sure that the people who have read the evidence will take the same view of it that I take, that this is a most extraordinary proceeding under any government and had we been able to get at the full facts in connection with that letter there would have been disclosed a most inexplicable state of affairs. While I may not be able to refer to it, on this occasion I shall at a later date, and more than that I shall refer to it outside, and challenge any hon. gentleman to discuss on the platform the relations of a government official with a company earning $300,000 of a subsidy. That is the position of the committee under the guidance of the member for Verchères (Mr. Geoffrion). I think the hon. member for Verchères (Mr. Geoffrion) wants to be fair and to do what is right, but it is simply in the air that there must be a certain amount of partisanship in that committee and in their attempt to vie with each other to check off all inquiry and investigation the member for Verchères (Mr. Geoffrion) seems to have lapsed in with the rest and is perhaps on some occasions over zealous. That I infer has been the case in connection with this North Atlantic Trading Company. The public are interested in knowing where their money goes and to whom it goes and that is the strongest possible reason why I have great pleasure in supporting the resolution of the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk), a resolution that should commend itself to every fair-minded member of this House who wants to see the expenditure of public money laid before the people of this country, who are really, after all, the owners of the moneys we are spending, in the broadest and fullest possible way.

Mr. V. GEOFFRION (Verchères). I do not rise to speak on the merits of the motion presented by the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk). It has been discussed fully and anything I would say in favour of or against it, might not change the ideas and the opinions of the members of this House. However, I have been told that this morning whilst I was performing my duties as chairman of the Public Accounts Committee the member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) accused me of gross partisanship in the fulfilment of my duty as chairman of that committee. Sir, I believe that he said more, and if I do not quote him correctly, as I was not here, he can correct me. I believe that he said that the chairman of the Public Accounts Committee was a disgrace to this parliament or something to that effect.

Some hon. MEMBERS. hear, hear.

Mr. GEOFFRION. Sir, if those words had been uttered by any other member of this House I would ask that they be expunged from the 'Hansard' of this House. Under the rules of the House, I think, I would have this right, but as the words come from the member for East Grey, I shall let them stand, and just simply say that I despise such an accusation. If anybody perchance should read the speeches of the hon. member (Mr. Sproule) and should come across these words, I have no doubt they will feel just as I do about it. Since I have been a member of the committee, I have endeavoured to discharge my duties to the best of my ability, and to be fair to everybody. I submit that the rules of procedure which should be followed in that committee, should be as nearly as possible similar to those which prevail in a court of law.

Mr. SPROULE. That is an evidence that the hon. gentleman has very little knowledge of the procedure in parliamentary committees.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Mr. SPROULE. I say it and I mean it.

Mr. GEOFFRION. We have every day in that committee a number of witnesses, some of whom are almost strangers to the subject under consideration. There are some members of that committee, no doubt in the discharge of their duty, who display as much zeal as they can in what they believe to be their cause, and very often they ask questions which are altogether irrelevant. What would be the duty of a judge under such circumstances. A judge would follow the proceedings before him, and it is his duty to interfere to prevent questions being put which are not relevant to the issue. Now, the hon. gentleman from East Grey does not come very often to that committee, but when he does come I have heard him make the most remarkable arguments, perhaps I should say the most stupid arguments, in support of his contention, that any questions at all may be asked a witness and that the chairman of the committee was there simply to listen and not to interfere. I submit there must be some rule applied to the proceedings of the committee. Let me say to the members of this House, and especially to my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) and my hon. friend from North Toronto (Mr. Foster) that since I have been chairman of that committee I have endeavoured to be fair, and no threats or accusations will frighten me or bulldoze me not to do my duty in the future as I have done it in the past. I know just as well as these hon. gentlemen know, what the value of evidence is from a legal point of view, and I appeal to any hon. gentleman who is a member of that committee if I have not endeavoured to discharge my duty impartially. If I have not been fair it is certainly not because I did not try to be. I shall not discuss the merits of the motion, and I am not going to deal with that question any further——

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Before the hon. gentleman takes his seat, I want to ask him, if I understood him to say, that in the committee, he administers the rules of evidence as they are understood in courts of law ?

Mr. GEOFFRION. I did not say that. I said that the procedure in the committee must be as much as possible similar to the rules in a court of law. I do not think they should be altogether similar, for I admit that we must give as much latitude as possible. I do say, however, that there must be some rules followed, and that the contention of the member for East Grey cannot prevail, which is that he can force a witness to answer any questions he pleases such as if the witness has any debts, and if his property is in the name of his wife, and so forth. There is not a member of the legal profession in the House who will not endorse my opinion that such procedure would be absolutely irregular.

Mr. SAMUEL BARKER (East Hamilton). This afternoon the hon. member for East Grey used an expression which was objected to but which he immediately withdrew in deference to the chair, and continued to argue that the proceedings of the Public Accounts Committee were not conducted in a proper manner. I did not intend to say one word about the conduct of the proceedings before that committee by the chairman, but now that he has been reflecting upon the member for East Grey, I think it my duty to say a word or two upon the subject. I do not think that any hon. member of that committee will undertake to say dispassionately, that the proceedings have been conducted with a view to get at the facts. That is the question. The conduct of that committee during this session, from beginning to end, has not been with a view of getting at the facts. Let me say to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Geoffrion) that the reports of the proceedings of the committee show, that he has gone away beyond what he now professes to have been doing. The extract read by the hon. member (Mr. Foster) this afternoon shows that the acting chairman had interjected an interruption in the examination of a witness, that was most unwarranted. A perfectly proper question had been put, and one that would never have been objected to in a court of law much less in a parliamentary committee. But the acting chairman did not wait for any objection to be made. It was of the utmost importance to the inquiry that we should ascertain what had become of the money paid for the lands for the Halifax cotton siding. It was of vital consequence that we should know who got the money. Mr. Henderson was the witness in the box. I am bound to say that I believe Mr. Henderson gave his evidence with absolute fairness and truthfulness; from first to last I never saw any idication that he desired to hide anything from friend or opponent; there is not a question about that in my mind. Mr. Henderson was asked to whom did the proceeds of the sale go, and he said the money was paid by cheque, and he was asked if he had that cheque and he said yes. There was no pretense of objection. The question was then asked. 'Will you produce the cheque'? Not a gentleman in the committee, anxious as they always were to stop anything that was inconvenient, said a word. The chairman turning to the witness, said: 'Remember, you are not obliged to give it unless you want to.' I ask, was that consistent with the position the hon. acting chairman has just represented to be his position in the committee? I say no. I will give another instance. I was myself examining a witness before the Public Accounts Committee, one who was trying to avoid answering any question whatever, and it was of the utmost consequence that he should be thoroughly tested in the examination. I had asked him question after question, and his answer always was: 'I do not know,' or something to that effect. I asked him repeatedly whether he had not told a different story to other people, as I knew beyond a doubt that he had. I have no more doubt than I have of my own existence that that witness had told to other people the very opposite of what he was swearing. I asked him:

Q. Are you aware whether any of those vouchers that you brought back on this occasion were allowed then or subsequently ?—A. I am not.

Q. You never heard any of them were allowed ?—A. I never heard.

Q. Or any part of them ?—A. I never heard.

Q. Are you aware that at any time a disallowed item, or any part of it, was paid ?—A. I am not.

Q. When you say that you are not aware, do you mean that you have no personal knowledge of the matter or that you have never heard of it ?—A. I have neither personal knowledge, nor have I heard.

Q. Have you ever told any person that you did know that items that had been disallowed had been got through and had been got through by you ?—A. No.

Q. You never said that ?—A. No, I never did.

Q. You say that ? You thoroughly know what you are saying ?—A. I am under oath.

Q. You thoroughly understand what you are answering ?—A. Never.

Q. That you were able to get items passed that had been disallowed ?—A. I never did.

The hon. member for Lunenburg (Mr. A. K. Maclean) objected to this mode of examining an unwilling witness on a very important subject. I wonder if he would make such an objection before a judge in a court of law.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Barker has not laid a foundation for contradicting this witness, and if it comes before me when I am in the chair, I will rule that he cannot call a witness for that purpose.

Mr. Speaker, the time for the objection of the hon. member for Lunenburg to my contradicting the witness was when I should call somebody to contradict him. The hon. member might then very properly have questioned my right to call a witness to contradict unless I had given that witness's name to the person whom I wanted to contradict. But at that moment I had not called the witness; but the hon. gentleman made that objection, and the chairman intimated in the presence of the witness that he would not allow me to contradict him. There was an unwilling witness from whom I was endeavouring to get the truth, a witness who I knew had told to other people the contrary of what he was then saying. I was trying to get the facts from him, and he was informed by the acting chairman that I would not be allowed to call a witness to contradict him. A pretty way to get the facts out of such a witness. I would not have said this but that I object under these circumstances to the acting chairman criticising members on this side of the House for their conduct in the committee.

While on my feet, I wish to say a word as to the general conduct of the proceedings of that committee. We frequently see it stated in the press that there are too many lawyers in this House.

Mr. OLIVER. Hear, hear.

Mr. BARKER. An hon. minister says, hear, hear. If he would visit the Public Accounts Committee, he would be much stronger in that opinion. I am a lawyer, Mr. Speaker, and I am not here to unduly find fault with lawyers; but I can only say that if members of the press and the farmers of this country could visit that committee, they would be inclined to move that every lawyer in it should be hanged. They would see that the proceedings of the lawyers in that committee made it absolutely impossible for it to investigate the accounts laid before it. I need not particularize. I do not think the opposition members want any obstruction in the committee; they are at work, from the very start of any inquiry to the end but from the other side there is a fire of objections from the legal gentlemen. These gentlemen seem to forget that the lawyers are not everybody in that committee. There are non-professional gentlemen there—farmers, merchants, manufacturers, and there are medical men who are professional in one sense. These gentlemen are not supposed to be au fait with all the technicalities of the law. If the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) asks a question and does not put it in proper legal form and with the precision laid down in the law books, some young gentleman of the legal profession jumps up and tells him that he is out of order, that he has not done what he ought to have done before asking the question, and the chairman agrees with him, because as he tells us he has to carry on the proceedings as nearly as possible like those of a court of law. I would like to know, Mr. Speaker, if that is what the people of this country expect from a committee of business men inquiring, not into the law, but into the expenditures of the government. I heard the hon. member for St. James, Montreal (Mr. Gervais) stopping a member who was a non-professional man and telling him that he could not ask his question in this way, and he cited, I think, 'Greenleaf,' who laid down the rule on which he should proceed. All this was gravely discussed. The hon. gentleman cited his law books to confound the non-professional man, who was trying his prentice hand at questioning a witness. Now, I think it is not common sense to have that sort of proceeding in a committee of that kind. It might be possible, even in a well regulated House, not to have one lawyer on a committee and if these technical legal rules must be observed, how are we to get on ? Are gentlemen who do not belong to the legal profession to take a back seat, and let the lawyers do all the work ? I think not; and yet one would think that was the whole object of that Public Accounts Committee.

I would not say that the acting chairman deliberately tries to choke off discussion. But I would rather he did, for there is more mischief done by one acting as he does with all the good intentions in the world than would be done by a chairman who deliberately went to work to prevent investigation—for we could all the more quickly bring him to book. But I say that if we are ever to do work in that committee, if we are to accomplish what the Public Accounts Committee is intended to accomplish, the present method must cease. I venture to say that a committee consisting wholly of business men — merchants, manufacturers, farmers, men of ordinary business sense—and honestly endeavouring, both government and opposition, to investigate the accounts to ascertain whether it might be possible that some of the departments were not doing their duty to the country, would do more in one week than is done in a whole session in that committee under its present methods. The whole work of the committee seems to be this: One side, the opposition, wants to investigate, and the other side wants to obstruct. I defy any hon. member on the other side who is a member of that committee to rise here and state on his honour as a gentleman that, from the time he entered that committee until this hour, he ever made a serious effort to get at the facts of any case. There is not one. Their work is nothing but obstruction. And that, Mr. Speaker, is a shame and a disgrace. I take leave to use the word in that sense if the hon. gentleman, the member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) was not able to use it in another sense.

Mr. W. M. GERMAN (Welland). I desire to say one word in answer to the statement of the hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker) that there was not one man on this side of the House who was a member of the Public Accounts Committee who desired to arrive at the facts. I am one who desires to arrive at the facts.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh !

Mr. GERMAN. And what is more, I am prepared to arrive at the facts in a legal way. There is no man sitting in this House who knows better what proper evidence is, and the proper way of getting at evidence, than the hon. gentleman (Mr. Barker) who has just taken his seat. He is an able lawyer, a careful business man and a very acute politician—particularly the last. Mr. Speaker, the whole proposition here is, to whom did this money go? The money went to the North Atlantic Trading Company.

Mr. FOSTER. And what is that?

Mr. GERMAN. That I would like to know.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. GERMAN. I knew I would please hon. gentlemen opposite before I got through The North Atlantic Trading Company is an incorporated company. The money of Canada has been paid to that company in the same manner as to any other company. The government of Canada paid millions of dollars to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and nobody knows who its stockholders are.

Mr. NORTHRUP. There is no difficulty in finding out.

Mr. GERMAN. The government of Canada has paid to the North Atlantic Trading Company exactly the same amount of money per capita for bringing immigrants as they would have paid to any other individual or corporation. No man can say that one dollar of the country's money in excess of what the statute and regulations provided for has been paid for immigrants coming into Canada. And there is the whole proposition. What difference does it make to the people of Canada, the taxpayers of Canada, who gets the money so long as they get value ? We have paid the money, we have got the value—and what difference does it make to us where the money has gone? Insinuations have been made that Mr. Smart, the late Deputy Minister of the Interior, had something to do with this company. It has been insinuated that the late Minister of the Interior (Mr. Sifton) had something to do with this company. I venture to say that the bulk of the people of Canada do not care who got the money so long as we got our money's worth ; and we got it. We paid our money for immigrants, we have obtained the immigrants; and the people of Canada, so far as I can understand, are satisfied with the proposition. I may tell hon. gentlemen opposite that there is very little—if I may use the word—hurrah, throughout Ontario at any rate, in regard to this North Atlantic Trading Company affair. It is true, I would like to know who are in the company. I know one who is not in it—and that is myself. But the main point I wish to make is this, that the Public Accounts Committee, certainly so far as I am concerned, and, I believe, so far as every member is concerned, is prepared to investigate fully every matter which comes before the committee. But they propose to investigate these matters in the same way as hon. gentlemen opposite investigated similar questions when they were in power, and when the hon. ex-Finance Minister of Canada (Mr. Foster) was in control of affairs—they propose to investigate in a legal way. I happen to have sat in the Public Accounts Committee in those days and have some very distinct recollection of the rulings and contentions that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) made. And I can tell my hon. friend, with all sincerity that we are following his lines in these matters, even though we may not follow him in tariff questions.

The only other word I wish to say—and it is one I wish to emphasize in regard to this matter—is that the government of Canada agreed to pay the £1 for every immigrant brought into this country. That pound they have paid, many of these pounds they paid to the North Atlantic Trading Company. We got the immigrants for the money we paid, and so far as the people of Canada are concerned, that is all the interest they had in the matter, and they are but little as to who got that money.

Mr. L. ROBITAILLE (Quebec County). Before beginning my speech I wish to thank the present Speaker for his courtesy, a courtesy which was not extended by the gentleman who has just vacated the chair.

Mr. SPEAKER. Order; the hon. gentleman should not reflect on the Deputy Speaker.

Mr. ROBITAILLE. All right; I can take my medicine as well as any other man in this House. Mr. Speaker, I look upon this subject as one of vital importance, and I should fail in my duty if I did not express my opinion upon it, particularly since the principle involved in this discussion was embodied in my platform during the memorable campaign I went through in the county of Quebec. I recognize that in this House there are some people whose logic is very weak, and instead of discussing issues in a straightforward manner, they endeavour to avoid them by beating around the bush. Instead of meeting the issue openly and manfully, relying on their great majority, they refuse to grant the minority the right to produce proof in support of their position. If I understand the question, it is one which should be treated on the lines laid down in the motion of the hon. member for Jacques Cartier. Now, Sir, have the transactions of the North Atlantic Trading Company been honest transactions? If they have, why should this government be afraid to give all possible information in regard to them? If, on the contrary, they have not been honest, do you not think that, by refusing the information that was asked for, the government will create a suspicion of wrong-doing? It seems to me that conclusion cannot be avoided; the public will inevitably suspect wrong-doing unless the demands of the opposition are satisfied. Let me ask this question: Has the government any right to refuse information regarding the existence or non-existence of hypothetical directors? I should say, No. Why, Sir, the demand of the opposition is based upon the solid foundations of responsible government. Are we not here, Mr. Speaker, as directors of a vast company, whose shareholders are the people of Canada? Now, the amounts expended by this company have not been stated before this House in a straightforward manner. I have myself sought information from the Department of Immigration, and, though my request was as direct as possible, I could not find one man who would give me the exact figures of the number of immigrants brought into Canada, with the amounts expended by the North Atlantic Trading Company in bringing them in. And let me say here that I propose to discuss on a future occasion the general immigration policy of this government. The people of Canada are paying $60 per head for every immigrant that comes into this country. Now, is it not right that the taxpayer, who is obliged to pay that money, should know how it is expended, and to whom it is paid? Has he not a right to demand the names of the individuals who compose this North Atlantic Trading Company? Why, Sir, we have a law that obliges every incorporated company to file in court the names of its active and responsible directors, so that anybody who desires to prosecute an incorporated company may know who are its responsible directors. Sir, I think I am right in stating that if this company, during the three or four years it has been in operation, has not filed the names of its originators, there must be some reason for it which is not creditable to the company. It would seem that whenever anybody wants to do business with the government, instead of dealing with the government directly, they form some dummy company, under the guise of which they deal with the government. It has been stated in the Public Accounts Committee that one party had forgotten this elementary principle, that being a member of the government he had no right to accept shares in a company, and he very candidly stated, in a childish way, that if he had known the facts he certainly would have had these shares put in the name of some other person.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. ROBITAILLE. No doubt, Mr. Speaker, it is very laughable to hon. members of this House that a young man of my age, who has no beard yet, a fact with which I was reproached during my election campaign, should dare to express opinions contrary to some hon. gentlemen who claim that they possess the highest mentality, and yet who have so little respect for the good sense of this House as to advance the argument of suicide if the names of this company were disclosed. Certainly, that is a very pitiable argument. But let us get down to hard facts. Here is a sum of $350,000 which has been expended during the period of five years. Now, that means $70,000 or $75,000 per year. If it is true, as has been stated, that this money passed through the channel of the North Atlantic Trading Company, and they have received no commission, but have handed the full amount directly to the navigation companies, that would mean that they had paid it over to at least ten navigation companies which would give to each one the sum of $7,500; that is the least amount you could expect any one company to be paid. And for what purpose? To carry on a work in contravention of the laws of the country where these companies were operating. Do you think the people of Canada are satisfied to pay their money to certain people to break the laws of the country where they are operating?

The second argument, which I think should be a valuable one, is this: Do you not think that the sum of $7,500 is quite sufficient to pay these navigation companies for whatever responsibility they incur? The risk they ran amounts to this that if it should be found out that they were acting in direct contravention of the laws of the country they would be liable to be prosecuted or even prohibited from carrying on their business as navigation agents in that country. Really if you look at the matter from a businesslike standpoint this argument would not stand. Some members around me this afternoon have stated that you ought to be satisfied by the sworn evidence adduced by the committee. Sworn evidence to-day does not stand very high in the public estimation when it is given by persons who are working directly with the government or in an underhand way. I say that because I have known of certain instances where belief in God or in the devil never existed, and I know for positive fact and it has been published broadcast in the land that a certain gentleman who came before the Public Accounts Committee, when he was asked to swear, said he did not know how to swear for the simple fact that he never believed in God.

The question which now faces the government is: Has their transaction with the North Atlantic Trading Company been carried on in an honest manner and to the advantage of the country? If so, there should be no fear of the fullest investigation. As I said before the suspicion of crookedness, of the too free use of public funds, if it is not allayed, will lead to the logical conclusion that the government fears to back its action in the present case.

Is this transaction honest or not? If it is honest the government should be fearless of scrutiny. That is the question.

House divided on motion of Mr. Monk.

Motion negatived.

INSPECTOR GENERAL LORD AYLMER.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I desire to ask the hon. leader of the House (Mr. Fielding) whether it is true that Lord Aylmer has been retired from the position of inspector general of the forces, and if so, for what reason?

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Minister of Finance). My personal understanding is that his service has expired, but I would not be prepared to give more definite information as I am not aware of the circumstances.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

Hon. GEORGE E. FOSTER (North Toronto). I would like to take the opportunity of stating that, through the kindness of my hon. friend the Finance Minister (Mr. Fielding), on Tuesday next at three o'clock or as soon after as possible, I shall take occasion to say something with respect to the Royal Insurance Commission and matters connected therewith.

Mr. FIELDING. As another hon. gentleman has already expressed a desire to move an amendment on the motion to go into Supply, that amendment will necessarily come first. But as I understand my hon. friend from North Toronto (Mr. Foster) purposes bringing up the matter he has just mentioned in committee after Mr. Speaker leaves the Chair, no doubt the two will not conflict.

PORTFOLIO OF MARINE AND FISHERIES.

Mr. HENRI BOURASSA (Labelle). It is stated that the position of Minister of Marine and Fisheries is to be filled, in the absence of the hon. minister (Mr. Brodeur), by the Minister of Inland Revenue (Mr. Templeman), and also that the interim position of Minister of Militia is to be filled by the hon. Secretary of State (Hon. Mr. Scott), who will then be in charge of the War Department.

Mr. FOSTER. We will have a lively time.

Mr. BOURASSA. If the rumour with regard to the portfolio of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries be true, it is rather surprising.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. member is asking a question and cannot discuss the matter.

Mr. BOURASSA. I understand the motion is to go into Supply, and I am putting a question which I want to qualify. Without reflecting on the eminent qualifications of the Minister of Inland Revenue (Mr. Templeman), it must be admitted that the Department of Marine and Fisheries is one in which the province of Quebec is particularly interested, and it seems surprising that my hon. friend the Postmaster General (Mr. Lemieux), who is the only minister for the province of Quebec living in Montreal, should have been passed over in this matter, and the vast expenditure involved in the improvement of the St. Lawrence channel be placed in the hands of a minister who, though highly qualified no doubt for the position, represents a distant province and cannot possibly have that familiarity with the facts possessed by the Postmaster General (Mr. Lemieux). When the late Mr. Préfontaine was appointed Minister of Marine and Fisheries, objection was made by some people that the Department of Public Works, which had been held by a representative of the province of Quebec so many years, was given to an Ontario Minister. For my part I must say that I had no great objection because, in my opinion, the moment an honest and qualified man is at the head of a department, it is immaterial whether he comes from one province or another. It must, however, be admitted that as between two members of the Cabinet, a representative of the province which is most interested should be chosen to administer the department in question and not place it under the control of a minister not at all familiar with the work involved. I admit that the province of British Columbia is largely interested in the administration of our fisheries, but that administration is more or less one of routine; whereas the expenditure connected with the St. Lawrence ship channel is one of the most vital interest to the ports of Montreal and Quebec above all others. It seems to me that it would have been far more courteous, not only to the Postmaster General (Mr. Lemieux)—whom I am not specially charged with defending, because he is able to do that himself—but also to the province of Quebec, and particularly the city of Montreal, had that interim portfolio been given to the Postmaster General during the absence of its minister in England.

Hon. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX (Postmaster General). I may say that I have enough work in the Post Office Department and the Department of Labour without wishing to take the responsibility of administering another one, especially so important a department as that of Marine and Fisheries. But I can assure my hon. friend and the members who represent the province of Quebec that my hon. colleague the Minister of Inland Revenue (Mr. Templeman) kindly informed me this morning that whenever any question arose which affected the province of Quebec, he would consult the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) and myself.

Mr. ARMAND LAVERGNE (Montmagny) I am very glad to have heard the hon. the Postmaster General (Mr. Lemieux), because the reports last night and this morning were to the effect that there had been a regular Kilkenny cat fight over this matter. But there is another question to which I wish to call the attention of the leader of the House (Mr. Fielding) and that is the appointment of a Minister of Militia pro tem. I understand that Senator Scott has been appointed, and I would like to know whether he will attend the camp this summer and review the militia.

Mr. FOSTER. I believe the camp is to be now fed on a vegetarian diet.

Mr. FIELDING. I am not prepared to give the hon. gentleman any guarantee that any minister will attend the camp this summer.

EXPRESS RATES.

Mr. WILLIAM JACKSON (West Elgin). I beg to draw the attention of the government to the fact that since the 1st of March the express companies doing business in Canada have materially raised their rates to some points in Ontario, so that in some cases the express rates are practically double what they were before. This is a condition of things that requires the immediate attention of the government.

Mr. FIELDING. I am advised that the express companies have applied to the Railway Commission for a revision of their rates, and I have no doubt the matter will be dealt with at an early day.

THE DUTY ON TOBACCO.

Mr. H. S. CLEMENTS (West Kent). At the beginning of this session I asked the Minister of Finance if there would be any change made in the customs or excise duties on tobacco, and the Minister of Finance then referred me to the Minister of Inland Revenue. I would now ask the Minister of Inland Revenue, whether we may expect any change in the duties on tobacco? If so, they should be announced soon so that the producers of tobacco in my constituency and in the surrounding counties, may know what to figure on with regard to next season's crop.

Hon. WILLIAM TEMPLEMAN (Minister of Inland Revenue). The question of the rearrangement of the excise duties has received the consideration of the government, but it has been deemed impossible to introduce any legislation with regard to it this session. It is not proposed at this present session to make any change in the excise duty on tobacco.

INDUSTRIAL STRIKES.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton, Ont.). I wish to ask the Minister of Labour whether he has any information to give the House with respect to the threatened strike in the west of which we have read in the press? I also wish to ask him the same question with reference to the strike in Nova Scotia. It is well we should know what the conditions are.

Hon. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX (Minister of Labour). As to the threatened strike in the west, the miners and the mine proprietors were under the impression that the Industrial Disputes Act had not yet been sanctioned by His Excellency, and consequently was not in force. The department has been in communication with the parties, and I have reason to believe that within twenty-four hours they will come under the law.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Are the men on strike yet?

Mr. LEMIEUX. The last telegram we received was that a strke had not been declared yet, but the news is not very satisfactory. A strike has been declared at Springhill, N.S., and there the same impression prevailed that the law was not yet in force. Immediately after His Excellency assented to the Bill we applied to the Printing Bureau for several thousand copies of the Act, in order to distribute it, but we could not get the supply which we required. This afternoon, after telegraphic communication with the parties at Springhill, we finally received an application from one of the parties asking that a board of arbitration be appointed. The law will be in operation within twenty-four hours, and I may be able to give the House further information to-morrow.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. In the meantime are the men actually on strike?

Mr. LEMIEUX. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. Am I rightly informed that the Springhill strike is not between the miners and mine owners, but between one class of labour and another ; is it not also a fact that the difficulty in the west is a lockout by the employers, and not a strike ?

Mr. LEMIEUX. Yes. Our information is that the trouble in the west results from a lockout, although it is denied by one of the parties that such is the case. I understand that the men are contending for an eight hour day, and that the proprietors are asking them to work 10 and 12 hours. In Nova Scotia the difficulty is between union men and non-union men, as I understand it.

THE PATENT MEDICINE BILL.

Mr. J. G. H. BERGERON (Beauharnois). I wish to ask the Minister of Inland Revenue, if his new office as acting Minister of Marine and Fisheries, will interfere with his pressing the Proprietary and Patent Medicine Bill this session. During the last four months the Minister of Inland Revenue has not been able to get further with the Bill than its second reading, and now, if he is to be burdened with the responsibilities of an additional department, it would be interesting to figure out how long it will take him to get the Bill through its different stages. Is he going to press the measure this year ?

Hon. WILLIAM TEMPLEMAN (Minister of Inland Revenue). A large number of copies of this Bill were circulated throughout the country with a view of eliciting the opinions of the trade and of others on its provisions. We have received from all over Canada the opinions of many wholesale and retail druggists. In the main, the verdict is in favour of such legislation, but, in regard to those clauses of the Bill which impose a revenue tax and registry fee, the verdict is almost unanimously against them. Naturally, the drug trade, like all others, does not want to submit to taxation. There is considerable doubt whether the Bill will be pressed this session of parliament. We believe there should be legislation of this kind, and, if it is not pressed this session, a Bill along similar lines, with some amendments to meet the objections raised, should be submitted to parliament next session. A decision has been arrived at to hold the Bill over until next session rather than go on with legislation which is necessarily contentious.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. The Minister of Customs some ten days ago was good enough to promise to give me copies of some letters in the Department of Trade and Commerce from J. B. Jackson, of Leeds, England, in reference to German trade. I hope he will be good enough to send them to me.

Mr. LEMIEUX.

Mr. PATERSON. That matter has been neglected owing to press of business. I have had the documents for some days, but forgot to bring them. I will bring them down to-morrow.

Mr. BARR. Can the Minister of the Interior tell us whether he intends to go on with the Northwest Land Bill this session ?

Mr. OLIVER. The land Bill is on the order paper, and when reached will be discussed and if possible put through this session.

Mr. AMES. On the 17th of December last an address was passed by this House at my request, for a return of correspondence with regard to the Athabaska Fish Company. Although three and a half months have elapsed, the return has not yet been brought down.

Mr. FIELDING. I have asked the Clerk of the House to be good enough to furnish me with a memorandum of all the returns not yet brought down, and I will do my best to expedite the production of them.

Motion agreed to, and House went into Committee of Supply.

Lighthouse and coast service—salaries and allowances to lightkeepers, $285,000.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. There is an increase of $22,000 over the vote for the year 1905-6. This increase is asked to enable the department to adjust the salaries of lightkeepers in the different provinces.

Mr. FOSTER. Is the increase to be on a percentage basis ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The lightkeepers are to be divided into classes and the agents are to prepare a schedule of them. The agents have not yet reported to the department. When the report is made, the increases will be given on a percentage basis.

Mr. FOSTER. That I think would be satisfactory. Another basis might be that of favour or political influence. If the department will just sit tight on that principle, and, after having divided the lightkeepers into classes, will make the percentage of increase according to the whole amount voted for the service, I think that will be fair. I am glad to hear the minister say that is the intention.

Mr. WILLIAM JACKSON. Does that apply to any lighthouse keepers on the inland waters ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. It applies to them generally.

Mr. WILLIAM JACKSON. With reference to the lighthouse keeper at Rondeau, has there not been a special grant to him in the last two or three years on account of his having to keep the light burning the whole year ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I do not know of any increase in the special case mentioned. The department intends making a classification and grades and making its increases based on the importance of the stations.

Mr. WILLIAM JACKSON. The light at Port Stanley is practically kept going the whole year round. I have been informed by the department that there has been a special grant to the lighthouse keeper at Rondeau, and I would ask whether a similar grant will be made to the keeper of the Port Stanley light.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised that that lighthouse keeper has had something done for him but am not sure.

Mr. WILLIAM JACKSON. Will the hon. minister give me that information as soon as possible ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Certainly.

Mr. BERGERON. Is the minister in a position to say whether those intermittent lights have been a success ? They have been in operation since two or three years. The first season it was found that they did not burn all the time as promised. What is the cost of the light and how much oil does it burn during the whole summer ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. If my hon. friend would raise that question when we are on the vote for automatic buoys, the officer of the department particularly conversant with that matter will be here.

Mr. HENDERSON. Some time during the past year, a lighthouse was erected at the village of Bronte Lake, Ont. What do you allow the lighthouse keeper ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I cannot tell.

Mr. HENDERSON. Perhaps the hon. minister will take a note of this and have his officer look the matter up.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. With pleasure.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Are the lighthouses adjoining the waters on our lakes and sea coast all lighted by their keepers or is there the new system of automatic lighting in operation which saves the cost of a lighthouse keeper ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Wherever practicable the lighthouse keeper is utilized. There are only about half a dozen such lights so far.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Are they not much cheaper ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I believe they are.

Mr. J. D. REID. How is it that there is an increase of $22,000 in this item, when lighthouse keepers have been done away with ? I am not objecting to an increase being given the lighthouse keepers because in many cases they are not paid what they deserve, but I understand that a great many have been done away with since the adoption of acetylene gas system, which does not require a lighthouse keeper at all. A boat belonging to the government goes around at certain periods and fixes the lights so that there will be no danger of their going out. While I do not admit that the cost of a lighthouse fitted up with the acetylene gas system is less than with coal oil and a lightkeeper, still the light is much brighter, and I have no objection to a light of that kind being used. But the point I raised is why should the cost of lighthouse keepers increase from year to year when we are doing away with them entirely ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The most of the automatic lights are on the St. Lawrence river, between Montreal and Kingston. They are much cheaper than lighthouses—one caretaker takes charge of six or seven lights. Of course, the hon. gentleman (Mr. J. D. Reid) will understand that, notwithstanding the increase in automatic lights, the number of lighthouses is increasing very rapidly. I am aware that very large and expensive and powerful lights have been erected on the Pacific coast, and that others will be constructed.

Mr. J. D. REID. I did not understand when the minister spoke at first, that this included the new lighthouses to be erected.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Yes, it is a total vote, and includes everything.

Mr. AMES. I trust that, before any attempt is made at distribution on a percentage basis, the classification will be considerably improved. I had occasion to pass through the great lakes last summer on a cruising trip, and on that trip came in contact with a number of the lighthouse keepers. I found that there were considerable differences in the salaries, even where practically the same work was being done. There are instances of lighthouses almost within sight of one another where the salaries are not proportionate at all. This is specially noticeable in cases where new apparatus has been installed ; for instance, where a fog-horn is installed and the cost of the engineer is covered by an appropriation to the lighthouse keeper. As we know, the wages of engineers has been advancing rapidly within the last three or four years, and, where the appropriation is practically stationary, the lighthouse keeper's salary is a diminishing rather than an increasing one. There is thus a necessity, especially on the great lakes, of careful revision and levelling up before anything like a percentage basis is adopted.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I believe that the remarks of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Ames) are timely. I understand that the idea of a classification is being acted upon, and the classification is now being prepared. Care will be taken in preparing that classification.

Mr. AMES. The point is that the classification should be made by some officer of the department who could take a general view of the entire series of lighthouses in the great lakes. If classification is to be made by a number of local officers, what may seem to one man an adequate salary may not seem so to another. The classification should be made upon a general basis from Kingston to the Sault.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The classification is being made by the resident outside agent.

Mr. H. S. CLEMENTS. If all the lighthouse keepers throughout the Dominion are paid salaries such as those paid to these officers in my district, I think we can all justify this increase. It is a shame and a disgrace to the department to give the lighthouse keepers in my district the paltry sums they are paid. One man in my riding the department asked me to pay myself; he gets no salary.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. When does the minister expect to make the classification he refers to?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. It is being made now.

Mr. WM. WRIGHT. I would like to ask the minister with regard to the lighthouse at the mouth of the Muskoka river, on the Muskoka lakes. A large deputation waited on the minister and laid this matter before him. The need of this lighthouse is becoming very urgent. The number of vessels on these lakes is increasing very rapidly, the traffic being especially heavy during the tourist season in the summer. The vessels find it exceedingly difficult to make that channel, especially on nights that are at all dark. Is it the intention of the minister to ask for an appropriation for this work this session?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I understand that the lighthouse board has had the matter of a lighthouse on Muskoka river under consideration, but did not, at its last meeting, recommend that the lighthouse should be constructed. The reason for their recommendation I am not at present advised of.

Lighthouse and coast service—agencies, rents and contingencies, $30,000.

Mr. FOSTER. Is this about the same, proportionately, as for the nine months' fiscal period just closed?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The expenditure for the six months ending December 31st last was $15,000. So the vote is about the same as last year.

Maintenance and repairs to lighthouse and lightships, $650,000.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN.

Mr. DANIEL. Can the minister tell me how long the 'Lurcher' lightship has been off her post during last year? Also can he tell me whether it is the intention of the department to put a larger lightship in its place? I understand that the coal capacity of that ship is hardly sufficient, and that she must be supplied more often than a lightship in that exposed position should require. It seems that she frequently goes into port for repairs, and so is off her post quite often.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised that the lightship in question has been withdrawn only to be repaired. The officers cannot say how long she has been off, but probably not more than two or three weeks. It is the intention of the department to restore her to her post.

Mr. DANIEL. Is it the intention to put on a larger vessel there? I have been given to understand that her coal capacity is not sufficient for a vessel in that exposed position.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The information of the department is that the lightship was a very good one, and provision is being made now for a spare.

Mr. LAW. The lightship has not been off her station, I think, over three weeks during the past year. Of course she has to be taken off every year to be repaired and repainted, and undergo a general overhauling. She has done excellent service there, and is one of the very best lightships and one of the best aids to navigation on the western shore of Nova Scotia. While perhaps a larger boat might be more convenient and be run at a less expense, I am sure that she has a capacity for coal, about 150 tons, which will last from 45 to 60 days. Of course in winter time it is a little inconvenient to get that coal on board, it has to be discharged on a very calm day when there is no sea. I am well acquainted with the boat and with the way she has been run, because she is right off my county of Yarmouth, and as I say she has only been off the last season not over three weeks.

Mr. DANIEL. I am glad to hear the statement of the hon. member. It shows that those in command of the vessel are attending a little more strictly to their business than they have done formerly. Certainly, I think the lightship was off her station much more frequently and for longer periods than the hon. member has stated to-night. But I take it there has been an improvement in that respect.

Mr. LAW. The statement made by the hon. member for St. John (Mr. Daniel) is entirely incorrect. That boat has never been off her station for one hour longer than she was entitled to be off, barring accident. The captain and crew are men who have attended to their duty from the very first day they went on that boat until the present time. I do not think they could be replaced in Nova Scotia, or in New Brunswick either. The boat met with one or two accidents in the first place on account of her mooring chains. She is located in one of the very roughest places, so considered, anywhere. She is off the Lurher shoals where the tide constantly runs heavy, she is anchored where she is never still for twenty-four hours during the whole year. When she was first moored there, on account of a defect in her chains, she went adrift and had to come in and wait for another chain to replace the defective chain. But I am confident the boat has never been off one single hour when she could have been on duty.

Mr. DANIEL. I quite agree with the hon. gentleman that the 'Lurcher' lightship is in a very exposed position. I accept his statement with regard to the frequency and length of time the 'Lurcher' lightship has been off her station. But the statement the hon. gentleman has made to-night with regard to the frequency and length of time that ship has been absent from her station differs from the information I have received, and my information has come from pilots and others who are in a position to know when she is on her station and when she is not.

Construction of lighthouses and aids to navigation, including apparatus, submarine signals and purchase of suitable boats for carrying on construction work in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and on the Great Lakes, $1,360,000.

Mr. FOSTER. I think the minister should exlain what is to be undertaken under these words 'purchase of suitable boats.' This item, as he will see, covers a great many different branches. I think there should be a definite appropriation for each one of these. Here we are asked to place over a million dollars at the beck of the department which might all be put into boats if the department wished, so far as the appropriation is concerned. I think there ought to be a definite appropriation for the large branches of the service. The building or purchase of boats ought to have been placed in one item by itself and the department restricted to that.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Half of the amount of this vote is for construction and the other half for apparatus. One half this vote, or $680,000, is for the construction of lights and aids to navigation in the various provinces. There is $110,000 for a boat in the Gulf and $75,000 for a boat on the lake at Parry Sound, with $25,000 for maintenance of the boat for the Gulf and $15,000 for maintenance of the boat on the lake. The other half of the total amount is for construction and apparatus, including installation of lightships and apparatus, $250,000; gas buoys, $245,000; derrick, $40,000; lighthouse depot, Prescott, $20,000; submarine signals, $90,000; Parry Sound, $5,000; miscellaneous material for various agencies, $60,000.

Mr. FOSTER. Where does the purchase of boats come in?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. For the first boat on the lake, at Parry Sound, including maintenance, there is $220,000. The first draft of construction included the boat.

Mr. FOSTER. How many boats are you going to purchase?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Two immediately, one for the gulf and one for Parry Sound, for the lakes.

Mr. FOSTER. Will they be purchased or built?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. No decision has been arrived at as to whether they will be purchased or built.

Mr. FOSTER. If purchased will they be advertised for and tenders secured?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Certainly.

Mr. SINCLAIR. I wish to refer to a circumstance connected with the wreck of the schooner 'Lena M,' near Whitehead last summer. The Marine Department maintains a buoy on a dangerous sunken ledge, near Whitehead harbour. As at high tide the ledge is not visible it is of the utmost importance that this buoy should be accurately placed. I am instructed that when the buoy was being placed last spring by the captain of the 'Aberdeen,' it was improperly placed so as to be a menace to the vessels navigating these waters. Some time after that this schooner which was on a voyage from Canso to Whitehead, was wrecked; the captain was steering by that buoy as he had a right to do, but owing to the fact that the buoy was wrongly placed his ship struck the ledge and the ship and cargo were lost. Complaints were made to the department and they sent Captain Tingley, a Royal Navy officer then in the employ of the department to make an examination into the circumstances. I understand that he reported that the wreck was caused by the buoy being misplaced owing to the carelessness of the captain of the 'Aberdeen' in putting out the buoy. A claim was made to the department for damages, equal to the cost of the schooner and the cargo, but the claim has not been paid. The owners of the vessel are pressing the claim. In my opinion the claim ought to be paid. I understand that the department contend that they do not pay claims of this kind at all, that notwithstanding the fact that their officer misplaced the buoy and the misplacing of the buoy was the direct cause of the accident that resulted in the loss of the ship the department is not liable for any damages and will not pay them. That is a legal question on which I shall not express an opinion now. They ought to investigate the conduct of the captain who still has charge of his ship and is in the pay of the department, and if it is through his negligence that this accident occurred I submit that two things should be done, the owners should be paid for their loss and the captain, if he is not able to give the department a satisfactory explanation, should be discharged and a man should be put in his place who could place the buoys safely along the shore.

Mr. FOSTER. I think my hon. friend (Mr. Sinclair) goes a good way when he makes both claims. I would agree as far as the disciplining the captain was concerned, that I think is the bounden duty of the department, but I do not think the government undertakes when they place these aids to navigation to do more than attempt to make the navigation as safe as it can be. For the department to undertake to pay claims arising from the accidental absence of a light through the illness of the keeper, &c., would be to insure the whole shipping service of the country on coming within range of those shores. That is a mighty big contract that even this government might fight shy of.

Mr. SINCLAIR. I quite agree that in a case where the light goes out or there is reasonable excuse for the accident such as the drifting of a buoy through a storm, there should be no claim, but here, the information is that the wreck was due to the misplacing of the buoy. It was so placed that a vessel coming from Canso to Whitehead and steering by the buoy would be certain to go on the rocks. That is such gross negligence that it must be separated from other claims.

Mr. FOSTER. It is a strong indictment against the man who placed it certainly.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. My hon. friend (Mr. Foster) has stated the departmental view very clearly. I understand they look on it as a matter of grace rather than of duty to put out buoys and I quite agree with the observation of my hon. friend that if an officer of the department misplaced the buoy he ought to be disciplined.

Mr. AMES. There is one phase of this public expenditure illustrated by what we see at pages 58 and 59, which has always been to me a considerable mystery. That is the rule of the department as to what shall be charged to capital and what to revenue account. It seems difficult to understand how the construction of a lighthouse may be charged to revenue account but the construction of a permanent pier, like those at Lake St. Peter on which the permanent lights are placed, is to be charged to capital account. If the construction of a lighthouse is a permanent work it would seem to be chargeable to capital account. If it is not permanent wherein does it differ in any way from the construction of a pier which may be placed under it? We, of course, are very glad to see the government taking from revenue that which can be put into a public work which will inure as a public asset of the country as a whole, and which will not pass away or be used up in a single year. But it seems to me that an explanation is due as to the method whereby the government does decide in connection with expenditures of this character what shall be chargeable to capital and what to revenue.

Mr. ALCORN. I again call the attention of the government to their failure to provide sufficient lights on the Bay of Quinte between the Murray canal and Glenora. Both last session and the session before I drew attention to this matter. Since the opening of the Murray canal the traffic has been very heavy on these narrow waters. Last year, I placed before the department letters from the various navigation companies interested, asking for additional aids to navigation in the form of automatic gas buoys. The minister himself then assured me that a certain number of these buoys would be placed, and that assurance, I assume, was based on an investigation which had taken place as to the necessity for providing such lights. Since then nothing has been done. What is the intention of the department in the matter?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The Ontario division of the lighthouse board has not yet presented its report and the officers cannot say whether the matters to which my hon. friend refers will be recommended. I shall take note in 'Hansard' of this and various other inquiries, and ask the officers to supply the information.

Mr. ALCORN. I am asking for the placing of a number of automatic gas buoys, not lighthouses.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. They go through the lighthouse board.

Mr. ALCORN. The minister assured me last year that a number of these buoys would be placed in position.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. They may be included in the report.

Mr. GANONG. This vote includes $90,000 for submarine signal service; how much money has already been expended on that?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Approximately, between $90,000 and $100,000 has been spent up to the present time.

Mr. FOSTER. What are these submarine signals?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. They are bells which ring under the water.

Mr. FOSTER. Do they have to have a ringer?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. They are attached to buoys, I understand.

Mr. FOSTER. Do they ring chimes, or what?

Mr. GANONG. Have they proved satisfactory in actual service?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am so advised.

Mr. GANONG. Where are they now located?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Chebucto Head, Louisburg, Yarmouth and Negro Head.

Mr. GANONG. If these aids to navigation are useful, it does seem to me that they should be established in the Bay of Fundy. Will any of this vote be used for this purpose?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Yes. The officers consider that the Bay of Fundy should be supplied with them.

Mr. AMES. To what extent have ships plying in the gulf and river St. Lawrence and on the Bay of Fundy, been fitted up with a receiving apparatus, without which, as I understand, these submarine bells are of no use?

Mr. FIELDING. While there is no doubt that a vessel furnished with a receiving apparatus can get the best results, it was represented to the government that vessels not so fitted can hear the ring sound of the bells. It is a scientific fact that water is one of the best conductors of sound, and so it was said that even in an ordinary trading ship, a man could go down in the hold and place his ear to the side of the vessel and hear the sound of these bells for quite a distance. The design of the system is that the bells would indicate the locality and direction whence the sound comes.

Mr. AMES. The experiments made before the contract was entered into, were all made on vessels carrying the receiving apparatus, as I understand. It is generally considered that these submarine bells are of little value to wooden ships unless they are specially equipped. If this receiving apparatus is not being installed on the vessels of our merchant marine, then I think it would be inadvisable for us to spend so much money on this service.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised that thirty ships plying to Canadian ports on the Atlantic have been equipped with receiving apparatus, and its use is rapidly increasing.

Mr. AMES. Have these thirty ships been supplied with the receiving apparatus experimentally and temporarily, or has the installation been of a permanent character?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Permanently, so far as the department knows.

Mr. GANONG. How many stations is it estimated, this $90,000 will equip?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The cost, I understand, is $5,000 a station. There will probably be eighteen.

Mr. GANONG. Is there not some royalty or revenue paid on these?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I cannot say whether this includes royalty or not. There is a payment of $2,000 per station up to fifty stations, after which the patents become the property of the government.

Mr. FOSTER. Is the old method that was brought out in the Public Accounts Committee last year, of employing such interveners as Mr. Merwin, still carried out by the department, and are these purchases being made by Mr. Merwin in the same manner as they were before, with the same rake-offs, or what has the department done?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I do not know that Mr. Merwin has any particular connection with the department at the present time; but I assume that the department, whether under the Minister of Marine and Fisheries or under the acting minister, will purchase wherever, in the interest of the department and the government, it seems proper to do so, inviting tenders wherever that can be done, and buying in the cheapest market. That would certainly be the policy of the acting minister.

Mr. FOSTER. Then we will hold you to that.

To provide for the building and maintenance of Marconi stations, $116,550.

Mr. FOSTER. I think we ought to be informed about this. What has happened and what is going to happen? Is this still an experiment?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The following is an estimate of how this amount is to be expended: Maintaining and operating ten high power stations, at Farm Point, Heath Point, Point Rich, Whittle Rocks, Cape Ray, Cape Race, Cape Sable, Partridge Island, Father Point and Clarke City, at $3,500 each; maintaining and operating three low power stations, at Cape Bear, Belle Isle and Point Armour, at $2,500 each; the salaries of six operators for vessels equipped with wireless, at $900 each; seven proposed stations between Vancouver and Prince Rupert, at $7,000 each; maintaining and operating these seven stations, at $3,000 each; maintaining and operating proposed station at Pictou, $2,000; salary of the superintendent of wireless stations, $2,000; salary of stenographer, $700. The number of stations under the Department of Marine and Fisheries at the present time is fifteen. The Pacific coast has no wireless station whatever, but it is very important that there should be a number of these stations along that great stretch of coast. It is very difficult to maintain telegraph lines along our precipitous coast, and we believe the wireless telegraph system would be of immense benefit.

Mr. AMES. Can the minister tell us when the Marconi station was established at Clarke City, and what the annual expense of it is?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The cost of maintaining and operating it is $3,500.

Mr. AMES. Has the minister any statistics to show to what extent that station is used?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. It is not in operation yet; it is in process of erection. It is believed that it will be of considerable use. I understand that there are large pulp works or something of that kind being erected near there.

Mr. AMES. I understand that the Marconi system was intended to take messages over long distances to and from vessels going out to sea or coming from sea Clarke City is near Seven Islands, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and is quite out of the course of any ocean steamer. It has one large enterprise, which has connection by land telegraph with Quebec, so that there is no difficulty in communicating with civilization at all times, summer and winter. Therefore, I cannot see the utility of erecting a Marconi station at that point, or who would be benefited other than the pulp company, with which some interesting gentlemen are connected. I would like to know what return we shall get from the capital invested and the $3,500 annually spent for operation and maintenance?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I understand that the object is to give a continuous line of wireless telegraph stations from Quebec city to the Strait of Belle Isle, about 75 miles apart, and this will be one of the coast stations.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. In the contracts with the Marconi Company, has any provision been made for the use of these lines by the public for the transmission of commercial messages?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The department operates the wireless telegraph stations purely and has nothing to do with commercial business. The company erects the stations and the government pays for them and for the operating of them. Whatever commercial business there may be, the Marconi company handles.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. Does the government control the rates for commercial messages?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. That question has not arisen yet.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. What does the government pay the company for the use of their system?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. There is no payment in excess of the royalty. We pay the company so much for putting up the stations and we pay for the maintenance of the stations.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. Do the government pay for their own messages?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. No.

Mr. GANONG. Do we pay the salaries and allow them to do commercial business?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Yes. If my hon. friend will reflect, he will find that at Clarke City and along the north shore of the St. Lawrence, there is very little commercial business.

Mr. GANONG. That is a very exceptional case. We pay the company for putting up the stations and maintaining them and they do any commercial business there is.

Mr. AMES. I do not see the utility of such an arrangement. We have recently extended our north shore telegraph system down to the straights of Belle Isle and I do not see why we should have the Marconi system besides.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The great advantage of the Marconi stations is that they may be operated at all times whereas the telegraph line on the north shore of the St. Lawrence is not always capable of being used.

Mr. SINCLAIR. Wireless stations are required along the shore to communicate with cities. In foggy weather, they can be kept continually in touch with the wireless stations between the straits of Belle Isle and Quebec.

Mr. AMES. Vessels do not go along the north shore. A vessel entering and passing through the straits of Belle Isle will not again sight land until she reaches the eastern end of Anticosti Island. Then, the next land sighted after you leave Anticosti is the shore of Gaspé county, and that must be 100 or 125 miles away from the north shore in the neighbourhood of Clarke City.

Mr. GANONG. It does strike me that the minister must have been in error in regard to the question of tolls. Why should the government build the stations and pay all the help necessary to run them, and then give this company the right to charge tolls on commercial messages? This seems a rather odd proposition not merely from the standpoint of present business, but from the standpoint of future business. It is evident that the government are extending this system over different parts of the country; and, while there may not be great commercial business from them at present, there is a possibility that the revenue may grow to considerable sums. There are two instances in which that might be the case. One is that of Prince Edward Island. If the government should decide to establish communication with Prince Edward Island and pay all the cost of installation and the salaries of the officers and the expenses of running the station and then turn over the revenue to the Marconi Company, I think that company would have what is commonly known as a snap. The other instance was suggested by a recent discussion in regard to telegraph communication with the Yukon. I would like to have it distinctly stated by the minister whether that is the position—whether this company has the right to collect the revenues for commercial business while the government pay all the expenses?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The explanation is as I gave it. The Marconi Company collect whatever revenue there is from commercial business in the stations on the north shore of the St. Lawrence and the Atlantic. These stations were not put up because the Marconi Company wanted them put up, but were provided by the government as aids to navigation and as a means of communicating with shipping. The Marconi Company would never have put up stations there to do business. The government owns these stations and is operating them. The government has control and I understand, may at any time discontinue the arrangement with the Marconi Company. But there cannot be any commercial business of consequence over this system. There may be a small income derived from communicating with ships arriving, reaching or leaving our shore. How much that revenue is I do not know. Wireless telegraphy is a new invention, and I suppose improvements are being made all the time. The government has control and, I believe, ought to maintain control, of the wireless telegraph system. That system will be extended on the Pacific coast, no doubt, very rapidly, especially as ships equip themselves with the apparatus. I suppose we may consider the system now beyond the experimental stage. Certainly it has been found very useful. I think that what has been done is in the public interest, and that it is right to continue and extend the system as far as possible.

Mr. CROCKET. Does the Marconi Company supply the operators?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Yes, the company trains and supplies them.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. The minister referred to high and low pressure stations. What is the difference between power on in these two classes?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The high pressure carries a message approximately one hundred and twenty miles and the low pressure approximately seventy-five miles. The apparatus generating the electric current is, in high pressure stations, five horse-power and in the low pressure stations three horse-power.

Mr. CROCKET. How much has the department spent on these stations up to the present time?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Approximately, $90,000.

Scientific institutions and hydrographic survey—Department of Marine and Fisheries—hydrographic surveys, $170,000.

Mr. FOSTER. Where are these to be conducted this year?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The expenditure for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1906, for this service, was $120,000. The expenditure for the six months of the current year was $62,594. This service includes Lake Superior, the Atlantic coast, Lake St. Louis, Lake St. Frances, Lake Temagami, River St. Lawrence, the Pacific coast, and miscellaneous expenses of these surveys.

Mr. AMES. What is the object of a hydrographic service for Lake Temagami?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Mr. Stewart will be here to-morrow and he will give the explanation.

Mr. FOSTER. Why this departure to the small and unimportant lakes of the country? What we have been suffering from in the past and trying to make up, is to have hydrographic surveys of the travelled and much used waterways. For what reason are you now going to cover every little lake in the country which has no navigation worth speaking of?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised that there are steamers being placed on Lake Temagami, and we have been asked to survey the lake and to mark on a chart the shoals and rocks, with the idea of placing boats there to improve navigation. I understand that those engaged in transportation have applied to the department for the improvement of Lake Temagami.

Mr. AMES. Lake Temagami is a lake situated about 75 miles north of North Bay, away up in the wilds, in a section of country where all the timber is owned by the Ontario government and none of it can be cut, where there is absolutely no farm land, and where there is but one tiny village. It is simply a sportsman's paradise, and has only been used for camping grounds and visited by canoe parties. If steamers were placed on the lake they would be used for no other purpose than to supply camps with provisions. As there is no agricultural country there and none of the timber can be cut, there can be little traffic or trade. The only interest that can be served is that of the railway companies who advertise this as a summer paradise. If we commence hydrographic surveys simply for camping parties, it seems to me that we should first exhaust those sections of the country where regular surveys are needed for commercial purposes.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The information I am given is that there are several small steamers there and they have applied to the department for this survey to be made.

Mr. FOSTER. There will be applications from every little lake in the whole country now, if this policy is to be adopted. The minister must consider that we have only a certain amount of money to expend for marking the ways of navigation, and that it must be expended first where there are great waterways. It would be awaste of money to allow these waterways to be unsurveyed and go up into the smaller lakes in the interior where there cannot be much commerce carried on.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I appreciate the force of the hon. gentleman's remarks. We have on the Pacific coast any amount of work done on this line. They are building a hydrographic steamer there.

Mr. AMES. Has Lake Temiskaming been surveyed hydrographically ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. No.

Mr. AMES. Lake Temiskaming is a waterway of considerable importance that lies just to the east of Lake Tamagami, forty or fifty miles away. On it there is considerable traffic, because it lies in the Ottawa river and because it opens up the whole Cobalt region from Haileybury westward. If it was proposed to spend the money on Lake Temiskaming I would not object.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I think if I had to expend this money I would look into it very carefully, and if it was not in the public interest that Lake Temagami should not be surveyed hydrographically in the interests of transportation, I think I would refrain from making the expenditure. I am speaking now in absolute ignorance of the reason the application was made, and I can only express myself in general terms.

For the construction and completion of steamer for hydrographic survey in British Columbia, and furnishing, $100,000.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. As hon. gentlemen may know, the imperial government, up to the present time, has carried on the hydrographic survey work on the Pacific ocean, it has cost Canada really nothing. Last year this work was carried on by the department in a small way at Prince Rupert. Much work is carried on there now in small steam launches. The imperial government has a hydrographic steamer, and when we proposed to take over the work the imperial government could not part with that steamer, and it has been found necessary to build a hydrographic steamer on the Pacific coast to carry on this work. I suppose when this steamer gets to work the imperial government will discontinue this survey, at all events in respect to the interior waters, or what is near the ports.

Mr. BLAIN. Where is the steamer being constructed and what will it cost ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. A contract has been entered into with a firm in British Columbia to construct an iron steamboat complete at $145,000, a total cost, including a system of forced draft, cold storage and furnishings of $161,000.

Marine hospitals, $40,000.

Mr. FOSTER. Has there been any change in the administration of these hospitals ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I understand not.

Mr. DANIEL. When the late Mr. Préfontaine was Minister of Marine it was stated and the minister agreed that the amount of dues taken from vessels for this service is greater than the expense of the service and in fact there is now a very considerable surplus now in the fund. The late minister stated that he had it under consideration to abolish that charge on vessels.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The revenue collected is in excess of the expense and has been for some years. I do not know that there has been any change of policy, but I would take it that the government has no wish to make a profit out of marine hospitals. Whether it would be possible to reduce the fees is a question of policy on which I would not like to make a statement.

Mr. DANIEL. The minister does not intend to lower the dues or abolish them ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I could not say that I had that intention.

Mr. SINCLAIR. I should not like a motion of that kind to pass without opposition. These fees could only be abolished if we adopted the English system of having each ship take care of its own sick. They can do that in England where the shores are dotted with towns and hospitals, but here it would be impossible until we have made more progress. If we have too much money we should extend the system or reduce the dues. An application has been before the department from my constituency for some time for a hospital at Canso for the benefit of the fishermen. There has been a surplus but if we took care of the fishermen as we should there would be no surplus. I would like to see the dues reduced if possible but at the same time I would like to see no proposal to abandon the present system and introduce the English system.

Mr. McLENNAN. Last year I remember the member for Guysboro (Mr. Sinclair) did call attention to the necessity of constructing a marine hospital at Canso. I thought then and I do now that from the various marine institutions built at Canso in the past during the last ten years since I came to parliament, it would be difficult to get room there for the construction of a marine hospital. There are a great many fishing vessels in Guysboro but infinitely more in Lunenburg, Shelburne, etc., and their rendez-vous is principally in the northern part of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, around the Magdalen Islands and off the north part of Cape Breton I can during the fishing season see procession after procession of these Atlantic fishing schooners passing through the Straits of Canso. Fishermen and sailors do nor require a hospital near their homes but on their way to or near the fishing grounds, so I believe that the judgment of parliament was not faulty in choosing the Strait of Canso as a site for a hospital. Vessels constantly pass up and down there between the Atlantic and the Gulf of St. Lawrence. From the grand banks on the Atlantic side ; from the banks in the Bay on the other side, and coming from one fishing ground to another, the vessels invariably have to pass through the Straits of Canso. A marine hospital has been placed at Point Tupper in the Strait of Canso right convenient to the harbour of Mulgrave in the county of Guysboro on the one hand, and the harbour of Hawkesbury on the Cape Breton side, in the county of Inverness, on the other. I quite agree with the hon. member for Guysboro that this old hospital is not a good one, but all the same it has served a very useful purpose. Time and again seamen suffering from accidents or sickness have been provided for there. If there is any money to be expended I submit that it would be more desirable to enlarge this hospital and improve its accommodation generally, than to follow the example of the hon. gentleman who formerly represented Guysboro when he spirited away the quarantine station from Hawkesbury. I am unwilling that Canso should run away with all these marine facilities from the coast of Cape Breton, and have them squatted down at a small point on the coast of Guysboro. I maintain that the Strait of Canso is the most suitable site for an hospital. I will leave it to the medical men in this House, who ought to know something about the subject, whether the Strait of Canso is not the most suitable place in the province of Nova Scotia for a marine hospital, from the point of view of caring for sick or disabled fishermen and sailors.

Mr. WM. ROCHE. I have heard a number of complaints from owners of ships which merely call at Sydney or Halifax for orders or for coal, that their vessels are taxed for the sick mariners fund. When ships come in to take or discharge cargoes and remain in port for any length of time so that the facilities of an hospital may be required, they are quite content to contribute to this fund, but they consider it an exaction that they are charged a large sum for the maintenance of an hospital when they merely call at the port temporarily. A steamer of 4,000 tons net would pay a tax of $80 to this fund.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. There is no charge when a ship merely calls for orders. She does not contribute unless passengers or freight are landed.

Mr. WM. ROCHE. I think the minister is right in saying that there is no charge when a vessel merely calls for orders off the harbour ; but when a vessel calls for some small supplies there is a charge, and if there is any relaxation with respect to the fund it ought to be in the direction of not taxing such vessels, because many of them are now prevented from calling at Nova Scotian ports on that account.

Mr. AMES. If the minister is looking for any purpose on which to expend the surplus of this fund, I would commend to his consideration Doctor Grenfell's station at Harrington. That is practically in No Man's Land ; it has no parliamentary representative, but there is a marine hospital established there, and if some assistance were given to it the money would be well applied. I commend the work done on the Canadian Labrador by Dr. Grenfell, to the favourable consideration of the government.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I have seen it stated in the newspapers that the government intends to contribute $5,000 to the good work that Dr. Grenfell is doing on the Labrador coast.

Mr. AMES. I hope it is true.

Mr. DANIEL. The sick sailors at the port of St. John are now treated in the general public hospital, the department paying a certain per diem rate for each marine patient. In the case of sailors who suffer from infectious disease, they are taken to the isolation hospital ; and some years ago a sailor suffering from small-pox was landed at one of the outports of St. John and was taken care of by the board of health of that city, at considerable expense. A detailed account of that expenditure by the board of health has been before the department for a couple of years. When I was in St. John recently, the secretary of the board of health asked me if I would bring to the attention of the minister, the fact that the bill has remained unpaid for all this length of time. There is now a surplus in the hands of the department which can be applied to paying just such liabilities as this, and if there is any reason why this account of the St. John Board of Health should not be paid, I would like to know it from the minister.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised that it is still under consideration, and that correspondence is taking place at the present moment with the collector of customs. All I can say is that I will inquire into the matter, and if it is an account that should be paid, I will facilitate the payment of it. I do not know anything about it, whether it is a fair account or one that will be recognized or not.

Mr. DANIEL. How long is the department going to keep a bill for such a small amount under consideration? It has now been under consideration for two years. The collector of customs has been corresponded with about it, and I think as much information has been obtained from him as can be obtained.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I will inquire into it, and bring it to a head inside of two weeks.

Mr. McLENNAN. Speaking of the surplus of this fund in the department, I would call the attention of the minister to the poor salary paid to their medical attendant at the Hawkesbury hospital. It is only $100, which is not sufficient to compensate a medical man for attending a hospital which is very much frequented.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I think it is a very small compensation, though the amount depends upon the extent of the attendance. If the medical man makes very few visits, it may be a good fee, but if he has to go to the hospital two or three times a week or every day it would be a very small fee. I know this is a grievance all over the country.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, April 5, 1907.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

REVISED STATUTES—AMENDMENT.

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Minister of Justice) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 148) to amend Schedule A to the Revised Statutes, 1906. He said: Schedule A to the Revised Statutes which it is proposed to amend, is a schedule whereby certain statutes that were supposed to be effete were altogether repealed and other statutes substituted for them in the present volume of the Revised Statutes. Among the statutes which have been so dealt with and repealed as no longer of use, were many relating to the Northwest Territories which are replaced by new statutes dealing with like matters in the present volume of the Revised Statutes. But with regard to the new provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, to which the old statutes which have been repealed had application, the circumstance that these provinces, or that the territory within the confines of these provinces, had ceased to be territory of the Northwest Territories and had now become provincial, was lost sight of at the time the Revised Statutes schedule was being prepared. The result is that several statutes such for instance as the Jurors' Act, which were applicable to the territory within the confines of Alberta and Saskatchewan, having been altogether repealed by this section, the substituted statutes having application only to the territories proper as they are now constituted, Alberta and Saskatchewan, since the Revised Statutes were in force on the 31st of January last, have been without legislation applicable to such matters. To correct that, this measure is introduced.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How have we been able to get on in the meantime without any legislation?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. We have been getting on, and this Bill proposes to declare that these statutes shall be deemed to have been in force from the 31st of January last.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first and second times, and House went into committee thereon.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There is no objection to discussing it, but later possibly we might desire to have the Bill printed before it is finally passed. That might be understood.

On section 2,

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. I do not know whether I caught the meaning of the hon. Minister of Justice (Mr. Aylesworth) correctly, but as I understand it this Act is intended to declare to be repealed certain Acts which are declared to be effete. Are these Acts of general application or are they Acts simply relating to the two new provinces of the west?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. This proposed legislation will not affect any part of Canada except Alberta and Saskatchewan and the effect of it is simply this, that there were certain statutes in force prior to the 31st January, 1907, which had application to the lands and people of the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan. When the Revised Statutes came into force on that day those statutes regarding the Northwest Territories were altogether repealed and new statutes regarding the Northwest Territories substituted for them, but the new statutes would not have any application to the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan because these provinces and the lands of these provinces had ceased to be territorial and had become provincial. This is to restore the applicability of the old statutes to Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. This Act is not of general application and simply affects Acts relating to the two new provinces ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Yes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I must confess that I had a different idea of what the difficulty was. I thought the Acts had been repealed and it was necessary to re-establish them with respect to the territory outside of the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan. That is not the case ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. It is to re-establish them as to Alberta and Saskatchewan. They were re-established as to the territory outside eo instanti because the statute which repealed them substituted something else in their place.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The substituted statutes provided only for the territory outside ? I would like to ask whether or not the proposed enactment deals with the statutes relating to petitions in controverted elections ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. No.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Well, does not the Minister of Justice think that they should be included? A most unfortunate condition has prevailed in these two new provinces. There were a considerable number of election petitions filed, I believe, on both sides, but the point was raised that there was no jurisdiction in the court to entertain them. It is not necessary now to go into the considerations which led the majority of the court, or perhaps the unanimous court, to that conclusion. The result was that nothing could be done. I believe that in one case a committee of the House has intervened and has taken some action. If provision is being made in respect to the matters mentioned by the Minister of Justice would it not be proper to pass a declaratory statute with respect to the matter to which I have just alluded ? Perhaps the Minister of Justice has taken that matter into consideration.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The action taken by the provincial legislature relates to its own provincial elections in regard to which this House is not concerned. The difficulty to which my hon. friend alludes was in regard to any court which would have jurisdiction in a Dominion contested election.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. No, it was not.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Then I have misunderstood it. I assumed that the hon. gentleman was referring to the circumstance that unless jurisdiction was expressly conferred by the parliament of Canada to try controverted elections upon any tribunal that jurisdiction would not exist. I am proposing in a Bill which received its first reading yesterday—a Bill to make certain amendments to the statute law in its application to the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta—a measure which is necessitated by the constitution of the new courts for these provinces which has just taken place in each province, to provide for jurisdiction being conferred upon these new courts to deal with controverted Dominion elections. In regard to controverted provincial elections the legislatures of the provinces themselves will no doubt deal with it if they see fit to delegate that jurisdiction to the courts in their provinces.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not think that it was the intention of parliament in 1905 to leave matters in such a condition in the new provinces that there would be no appeal to the courts. I was thoroughly under the impression that the then Minister of Justice believed that by the language which he used in reference to the continuance in force of certain provincial statutes he was making provision for the trial of controverted provincial elections. I have no doubt that every one in the House was under that impression. The point was not, I think, very specifically raised although the language of the sections having application to these particular matters was pretty fully discussed and was reconsidered by the then Minister of Justice on two or three different occasions. It seemed to me that it would have been within the jurisdiction of this parliament to make that provision by those Bills. It seems to me that if that provision was not made it was an oversight, and as that provision, according to the judgment of the courts, does not appear to have been made, we might very well inquire now whether we are not in a position to make it. There might be some constitutional difficulty on account of the language of the British North America Acts, 1867 to 1886, because my recollection is that in some respects this parliament is not in a position to make any amendments to what is regarded as the constitution of a new province. I do not know whether that restriction upon our powers extends so far as to prevent what I am now suggesting, but if it does not I am inclined to think we ought to do what parliament intended to do in 1905.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. If I apprehend correctly what is in the mind of my hon. friend it would not strike me that anything is now necessary. The effect of the passing of the Autonomy Bills without there being in them any express delegation to the courts of the power to deal with controverted provincial elections would simply leave all questions of that character for disposition by the respective provincial legislatures themselves.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not think that is what we intended.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Probably not. I am not presuming to speak of what the intention was but that was the effect, and that having been the result, one of these legislatures has recently dealt with a matter affecting the return of a member of the legislature and dealt with it as this House or any other legislature of an autonomous people would deal with such a subject if the jurisdiction to deal with it had not been referred to any court. That, I take it, will continue to be the situation in each of those provinces until its legislature passes some statute conferring jurisdiction upon the courts in the province to deal with such matters. This is a matter entirely for the legislatures of those provinces which have now been completely constituted, and this House can no more deal with it than it can with controverted elections in any other province. There would be the initial difficulty to which reference has been made that a province having been once constituted, its constitution under the British North America Act, as amended in 1871, is no longer liable to change or amendment at the hands of this parliament.

Progress reported.

BINDER TWINE.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Minister of Finance) moved that the House do on Monday next go into committee to consider the following proposed resolution :

Resolved,—That it is expedient to amend chapter 5 of the statutes of 1903, intituled 'An Act respecting the manufacture of Binder Twine in Canada,' and to provide that the following be added thereto after section 1 thereof, viz.:

1a. That the Governor in Council may authorize the payment of a bounty to any corporation, firm or person, manufacturing cordage in Canada from Manilla fibre, such bounty to be equal to the amount paid as export duty in the Philippine Islands on Manilla fibre produced on those islands, and used in the manufacture of cordage in Canada; the said bounty to be payable only in respect of Manilla cordage manufactured in Canada, on and after the first day of January, 1907.

Provided, however, that the bounty shall not exceed three-eighths of one cent per pound on the Manilla fibre so used in the manufacture of cordage.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN.

He said : I beg to say that His Excellency the Governor General, having been made acquainted with the subject matter of this resolution, recommends it to the consideration of the House.

Motion agreed to.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

POSITION AT THE SENATE—MR. GAUVREAU.

Mr. C. A. GAUVREAU (Témiscouata). (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of privilege. 'L'Evénement,' of the 3rd instant, has published about me a short article, which reads as follows:

Were we to be given the lie once more—which will amount to just as much as it did previously—we again affirm that Mr. Gauvreau, the member for Témiscouata, will do like so many Liberal members have done; he will have his little position. Mr. Gauvreau is going to deny that again, as you will see, but he will tell a falsehood. Mr. Gauvreau is to be appointed assistant clerk of the Senate. He is now voting for a government from which he expects that favour. Such is the independence of our good Liberals.

I wish to contradict 'L'Evénement' in the most positive manner. In no way have I been promised that position by the government, and that for two excellent reasons: First, because the position of assistant clerk of the Senate is not vacant; and, second, because that appointment must be made by the Committee of the Contingencies of the Senate, with which the government has nothing to do.

INQUIRY FOR RETURNS.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Has my hon. friend the Minister of Finance been made acquainted with the various orders for returns which are outstanding? I have a list of them here.

Mr. FIELDING. No, I have requested the Clerk of the House to prepare a list. The clerk informs me that he has a copy of that list. I shall be very happy to look after the matter, and see that every thing is done to expedite the bringing down of the returns.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If I leave this list in the hands of the clerk, it will not be necessary for me to refer to it at more length at the present moment?

Mr. FIELDING. No. If there is any difficulty as to any return, I will call the attention of the House to it.

THE SEATING OF MEMBERS.

Mr. O. E. TALBOT (Bellechasse). Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to know from you if it is not an acknowledged custom of this House that those who sit on this side of the House are supposed to be supporters of the government. If that is supposed to have been the custom ever since this parliament has been in existence, it should be the law. What is the law in the matter, and who is to decide whether a member is a supporter of the government or not?

Mr. FIELDING. I am afraid that we can hardly be expected to answer a question of that nature. Whatever may be the custom, there is no statute law that would enable any one to answer my hon. friend's question. Matters of this kind are generally arranged by a friendly understanding among the members.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If there are a large number of gentlemen on the other side of the House who desire to change their seats, we will try to accommodate them as far as possible on this side.

Mr. PATERSON. How many have you to offer?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. We have none.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

Fisheries—salaries and disbursements of fishery inspectors, overseers and guardians, $127,600.

Mr. BERGERON. Is there any increase?

Hon. WM. TEMPLEMAN (Acting Minister of Marine and Fisheries). There is no increase. On a comparison with the last complete fiscal year, 1905-6, there is a decrease.

Mr. BERGERON. Has there been an increase in this expenditure ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. There is no increase.

Mr. BERGERON. Does this apply to the lakes and rivers in the provinces as well as the sea ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Yes. There are three inspectors for each province.

Mr. BERGERON. In my part of the country the inspection is very bad because the illegal fishing goes on just as before.

Mr. BLAIN. What is a guardian and an inspector ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. A guardian is an official employed when required, and an inspector is a permanent official in charge of a district, reporting direct to the department. I shall read the clause of the report dealing with this.

The outside staff of the fisheries branch of the department is larger than may be generally supposed, numbering to over nine hundred and fifty employees, subdivided as follows: Twenty-four inspectors of fisheries and special officers ; 112 overseers of fisheries with magisterial powers ex-officio, and 440 guardians, temporarily employed to assist the other officers in the protection of fish.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Has there been any change in the special form of license for winter fishing in the lakes in Manitoba ? I have a copy of the license of 1907, and I am informed that some change has been made in the instructions sent out to the local officers by which great hardship may be worked. The clause to which I refer is :

The present license requires strict conformity with the various provisions of the fishery law now or hereafter in force, and all regulations emanating from the Governor in Council.

And here are the words to which I desire to call attention :

And directions by fishery officers.

It is claimed that these words were not in the licenses issued some years ago or were not acted upon. The size of the mesh for taking yellow pike and jackfish throughout Canada is a 4-inch mesh, but the inspector at Lake Winnipegosis issued instructions that these fish can not be taken in those lakes with a mesh less than 4½ inches, which is very little use for catching these fish. It is said that the size of mesh should be regulated by order in council and should not be left to the local officials.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised that this matter has already been straightened out. The overseer in the province of Manitoba did exceed his duty in issuing such instructions and his interpretation was rescinded.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Has the local fishery officer power to say what sized net shall be used in fishing ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Certainly not, he has to follow the instructions given by the department.

Mr. HAGGART. What rules or regulations have you for the distribution of young fish from the hatcheries ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The distribution is made on application made to the department and every application will be treated on its merits. I think as a usual thing the department complies with all applications.

Mr. BERGERON. Has the hon. minister at hand the names of the overseers or guardians on the river St. Lawrence between Montreal and Cornwall?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. These officers to whom my hon. friend (Mr. Bergeron) refers are not under the authoritiy of the Dominion, but, within the territorial limits of Quebec, and under the authority of that province.

Mr. BERGERON. Of course, we cannot criticise the work in that case, as a part of this administration. But I may say that the inspection is very badly done—in fact, there is no inspection at all; illegal fishing goes on uncontrolled.

Salaries, building and maintenance of fish breeding establishments, $202,300.

Mr. BERGERON. Has the number of fish hatcheries been increased ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. We are building some new hatcheries. Two of these are in the province of Ontario—at Sarnia and Wiarton. One is in the province of Manitoba—a white fish hatchery on Lake Winnipegosis. Also—speaking not from the notes supplied me by the department, but from what I have learned—I believe that it is contemplated to erect two hatcheries for the propagation of that very valuable fish the sockeye salmon, one on the head waters of the Skeena river at Babine and one on the head waters of the Fraser river at Stewart lake.

Mr. BERGERON. In a general way what is the cost of one of these establishments?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Of course it varies with the size and the local conditions. The buildings for the hatcheries proposed in British Columbia will cost very little. They are hundred of miles in the interior, remote from sources of supply and I fancy the lumber will have to be cut on the ground. I am told they will cost not more than $7,000 or $8,000.

Mr. BARR. What will the one at Wiarton cost?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. It is estimated to cost less than $5,000.

Mr. BARR. Will the contract be let by tender?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. No, the work will be done by day labour. In the case of the British Columbia hatcheries it is absolutely impossible—I say this from a knowledge of the circumstances—to have the work done by contract.

Mr. BARR. But there is no such difficulty in the way of the work to be done at Wiarton? It will certainly cost more than $5,000 to build that hatchery.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised that it will cost not more than $5,000, and therefore the work is to be done by day labour.

Mr. BARR. It may not cost $5,000 to begin, but it will cost more than $5,000 before it is finished. I venture to say that if advertisements were issued calling for tenders the best offer would exceed $5,000.

Mr. SPROULE. When was the decision reached to establish a fish hatchery at Wiarton?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. It was decided some time ago, and the buildings were started last fall.

Mr. BARR. Can the minister tell me what the work at Wiarton will cost when finished? He must have an estimate—he surely is not going on with the work by day labour without having an estimate?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The whole cost is estimated at $4,700.

Mr. BARR. But surely the hon. gentleman has not included all the items, or his estimate would exceed $5,000. As a matter of fact, is not this low estimate made to avoid putting this work under contract?—for the work is progressing very expensively and very slowly.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I give my hon. friend (Mr. Barr) the information given me by the officers of the department.

Mr. BARR. Then, will the hon. gentleman (Mr. Templeman) say that this work will not cost over $5,000?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I have the assurance again of the officers of the department that I may give my hon. friend that answer—the estimate of $5,000 will not be exceeded.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Templeman) said that this work was decided upon some time ago and commenced recently.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. It was commenced last fall.

Mr. SPROULE. When was it decided to build a hatchery there?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised that the building of hatcheries on Georgian bay has been under consideration for some years. There were rival places and conflicting interests, but it was decided some time last year——

Mr. HENDERSON. About the time of the election there?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I did not know there was an election there.

Mr. BARR. Was not that one of the election pledges ? I think I have heard that it was.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am told that the matter was decided before it was known that there was to be an election there.

Mr. SPROULE. I saw the government official there when the election was going on, and it was then, and not till then, that the fish hatchery was commenced. It was known then—no doubt about that. Now, just a word about what the minister said with regard to the fish hatcheries on the Georgian bay and the conflict of places where they should be built. Many years ago I drew attention to the fact that a fish hatchery should be built on the Beaver river near Thornbury. It was in front of that portion of the Georgian bay from which a large supply of fish ova comes. The acting minister, or the minister, said he would make inquiries and let me know whether the place was suitable or not. Later I renewed the inquiry and was told that the matter had been looked into and the place suggested found suitable, and I was given to understand—but in a very diplomatic way—that I might reasonably expect that a fish hatchery would be built there. We were jollied along with that sort of information—not specific or definite, not frank, open and manly as the information should be given to this House. Next year the statement was repeated in much the same way. The government's own official reported favourably, as the minister told me. The matter was kept hanging in that way another year, and it worked along until last year. I endeavoured to get information last session, but no definite information could be obtained. Straight questions were asked, but no frank answers were given. It was still held out that the conditions there were favourable, and that there would be some fish hatcheries built on the Georgian bay. But no other place was mentioned as suitable. I heard nothing more about it until the election took place in Bruce. I happened to be up at that election, and one of the men I met there was the government official who had gone to select a place for the fish hatchery. It was going to be commenced at once, some kind of understanding was reached. We could not ascertain whether it was to be done by day's labour or by contract; but, at any rate, at that particular time it was convenient that a government official should be found there telling the people what an important thing it was to have a fish hatchery built there. I presume they have been going on with that hatchery since that time. Now, I don't think this is a proceeding fair to the people. I believe the whole thing is tainted with corruption. I say it publicly in this House, and I wish to give the word the strongest meaning it will bear. It was designed to influence the honest electors of that riding in the election that was coming on. It was improper, it was not right. When we condemn people for buying votes at $2 a head, I think we have just as good a right to condemn the government for employing the power that is in their hands improperly to influence the electorate in favour of the government candidate.

Mr. BARR. There is no doubt that Wiarton was promised the fish hatchery owing to the fact that an election was coming on. My hon. friend's opponents pledged themselves that there would be a fish hatchery in Meaford if their candidate was elected; he was elected, and I think he got some votes in consequence. But as he was not elected, of course the government were not disposed to carry that out. Wiarton is a place not as convenient as Meaford, and in no way as suitable for a hatchery. But an election was coming on in the near future, and they had to show good work in order that my hon. friend might be elected again. It is well known that this hatchery will never be finished with $5,000; but the government, in order to keep the thing going on a long time and influence as many electors as possible, prefer to vote the cost in small instalments like this $4,786. I am afraid this state of affairs is going on in every part of the Dominion, so far as the Fishery Department is concerned.

Mr. TELFORD. I had considerable to do with that fish hatchery, and tried to get it for my own riding. I used every influence that I could command to secure it for my riding, but the authorities told me long before the election took place that Wiarton was the proper place for it. They could get spawn four miles from the shore, the water is deep and cold close to the shore. Although I did my level best to get it for Owen Sound, they shut me off and told me Wiarton was the most suitable place. That is the reason Wiarton got the fish hatchery.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. member for North Grey (Mr. Telford) says the authorities told him that Wiarton was the proper place long before the election. Well, this House prorogued last July, and up to that time the government gave no information as to where they would make the selection So it could not have been a long time before the election that a decision was reached. I had it from the official who was there to look after the business that they had decided lately to go on with the hatchery, and that happened to be at the very time the election was coming on.

Mr. TELFORD. If the hon. member for East Grey will take the trouble to look up the fyles of a Wiraton newspaper, he will find the people there were informed before Mr. Bland's death the hatchery would be built there. It was months before the election that the government decided that the fish hatchery should go to Wiraton. From my personal knowledge, Wiraton is the best point for the hatchery. If you ask any man who knows anything about the circumstances, that is the answer you will get. I made particular inquiries about the matter, as I was anxoius to get it for Owen Sound.

Mr. SPROULE. There are other places than Owen Sound. The information I obtained from the government official was that the Beaver river, which empties into the Georgian bay at Thornbury, was as suitable a place for a fish hatchery as could be desired. So far as I know the locality of Wiarton and along the Beaver river, Thornbury is just as far ahead of Wiarton as anything could be. I was given to understand by the minister himself two years in succession that there could not be any better place, and I was given to understand that probably the selection would be made there. But still it was held back and held back. It did duty in one of my elections and did duty afterwards, and yet the government come out and say: We will build it there, or we will not build it there. I think that is improper. They hold back, in my judgment, only for the duty that it will do when there is an election on. The fact that we found government officials there at the time that an election was going on, and the additional fact that they decided to build this work, not by contract, but by day labour, or in some other way that would give employment to the largest number of labourers there, makes the suspicion very strong that there was some other motive in view than that of saving the country's money by doing the work at the cheapest possible rate.

Mr. TELFORD. Let me say that I made particular inquiries with respect to the use of spring water. Capital spring water comes in at Owen Sound and for that reason I thought that Owen Sound was the proper place to build the hatchery. We have at Owen Sound as good spring water as that of the Beaver river. The gentleman at the head of this branch of the department who ought to understand the question better than any individual in this House told me that that kind of water was not suitable, that neither the Beaver, nor the Sydenham nor any other river water is suitable for hatching salmon trout. It must be lake water.

Mr. SPROULE. Why did the Minister of Marine and Fisheries tell me across the floor of the House that the stream was admirably suited for it ?

Mr. TELFORD. I do not suppose that he knew as well as the head of the hatchery branch who is an expert and who told me himself that it was not suitable.

Mr. SPROULE. But the minister's information to me was that he had sent his official to inquire and that he had reported himself that it was not suitable.

Mr. BARR. It seems to me that this is a question which is too important to be lightly passed over. It has been a burning question about election time around the Georgian bay as to where this hatchery should be placed. When the late minister decided that he would not occupy a seat in this House again owing to family afflictions, steps were taken to establish a hatchery and commence work. But, there was not much accomplished. The work was going on during the election. While the question has been under discussion for the last ten or fifteen years it is significant that work on the hatchery was not commenced until it was known that there was an election going on. I venture to say that if my hon. friend (Mr. Tolmie) had not been elected work would not have been continued and that the question of building the hatchery would have come up again at future elections. The dangerous part of it is that they are doing it by day's work. We know that they are just simply keeping on the work in order that their friends may be satisfied and that my hon. friend's hand may be strengthened in the coming election.

Mr. McKENZIE. I would like to corroborate what has been said by my hon. friend from North Grey (Mr. Telford). During the late Mr. Préfontaine's time this matter was fought out. The hon. member for North Grey, on behalf of his town, favoured the erection of a hatchery at Owen Sound, and I, as the member for the south riding of Bruce, took an interest in the question on behalf of the people of Wiarton. It was just as good as decided by Mr. Préfontaine that the fish hatchery should go to Wiarton.

Mr. BENNETT. Why did the work not go on then ?

Mr. McKENZIE. I am not prepared to say why the work did not go on then. We know that there was a hitch in the business of the department at the time Mr. Préfontaine died, and I think that is possibly the reason, but the matter was as good as decided by Mr. Préfontaine, and he promised myself and a deputation that waited upon him that the fish hatchery would be placed at Wiarton. I think there is no need for any discussion about it. The fact that an election was going at the time was merely a coincidence.

Mr. BARR. Is it the opinion of the hon. gentleman that it should be done by day's work ?

Mr. McKENZIE. I am not prepared to give any opinion about that. I suppose that those who have the matter in hand will likely do the best for the country and the department.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I want to ask the minister if favourable consideration has been given to the large number of petitions which have been sent from the district of Rondeau on Lake Erie asking for the establishment of a fish hatchery at that place? I am not prepared to say whether there should be one there or not because I do not know enough about fish hatcheries to be able to express an opinion upon the subject. But I do know that in that section of the country we get more fish than are taken from the great lakes in any other part of the province of Ontario. A great many petitions have been sent in asking for the establishment of a fish hatchery at Rondeau which, as far as I am able to judge, is a very suitable place. Our fishermen there claim that it is an absolute necessity that a fish hatchery should be established there to keep up the supply of fish. I asked a question in this House some few weeks ago as to the amount of money that was spent in the different provinces of the Dominion for the propagation of fish. I find that in British Columbia $48,000 is spent yearly while in the province of Ontario some $13,000 or $14,000 is spent. I do not know whether this is due to the fact that we have more members from the province of British Columbia supporting the government, but I want to say in all fairness that the fisheries of the great lakes deserve more encouragement than they get from the paltry sum that is spent in the province of Ontario. The fish that are caught in the great lakes will bring from $40 to $45 a ton more in the New York market than is obtained for British Columbia fish, so that Ontario produces the best fish for the market in so far as the price is concerned. For that reason an equal share of the money expended upon our fisheries should be spent in the province of Ontario and particularly in the section of the country from which I come in order to encourage the propagation of the class of fish to which I refer. I am not finding any fault with the department at all, but I would like the minister to tell me if any encouragement has been given or is under consideration in so far as the fish hatchery which I speak of is concerned.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The question of fish hatcheries for all of the great lakes is under consideration of the department and no doubt the demand for more hatcheries will be supplied as rapidly as possible. In regard to the proposal to erect a hatchery at Rondeau, I am informed that Lake Erie is pretty well supplied with white fish from the Sandwich hatchery and by the American hatcheries. The Sandwich hatchery's output is from 75,000,000 to 100,000,000 per annum, and I am also informed that the supply of white fish is maintained in Lake Erie and it is largely attributable to the operation of the hatcheries I have named. It is rather an extraordinary thing in this House to hear any hon. member say that the province of British Columbia is getting any more than it is entitled to or would require in comparison with any other province of the Dominion.

Mr. FOSTER. You mean with reference to the last election outcome?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. With reference to anything. If there is a province in the Dominion in which it will pay to spend money to protect, increase and continue the fish wealth, it is British Columbia, and I can say that without making invidious comparisons with the great province of Ontario. The fish wealth of Ontario is very great indeed but I want my hon. friend to understand that in 1905, British Columbia led all the provinces in the value of its catch of fish. It will not be many years before British Columbia exceeds any or every other province of the Dominion. The increase of fish wealth, particularly the propagation of the sockeye salmon, is a matter which the government cannot ignore without running the risk of killing for ever an industry which is of very great importance to British Columbia. I do not think my hon. friend is quite fair when he says that British Columbia has had $40,000 for fish hatcheries, and Ontario considerably less. However, it is unnecessary to make comparisons; it should be the duty of the government to build up the fishing interest of the whole Dominion wherever they may be, and I am convinced that if the government can do anything to maintain and improve the fish wealth of the great lakes it is certainly their bounden duty to do so, and to do the same thing in regard to all the provinces of Canada. The expenditure under this head is increasing fairly rapidly. I would be willing to see it increase even more rapidly if it is found to be always warranted as I believe it is in regard to the establishment of fish hatcheries, and the improvement of the fishing industry. The department has not as yet determined to erect a fish hatchery at Rondeau, believing that up to the present time, at any rate, the institution at Sandwich maintains the whitefish in Lake Erie to its full average, at least there is not known to be any depletion of fish in that lake.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I presume that the fish commission is for the purpose of taking up such matters as the Rondeau Fish Hatchery. I think the minister has possibly done more unfair criticism than I did myself. I have no fault to find with what British Columbia got for her hatcheries for propagating fish, but I say that Ontario has not got what she ought to get and that the fishing interests of this province are being neglected. British Columbia has got more than her proportion but she has not got more than she deserves. The fish interest of this province is an asset that should be taken care of. I have had great experience with the fishermen in the district from which I come who should know the subject thoroughly, and that is why I claim that a fish hatchery at Rondeau would be a great help in encouraging the industry and could be kept up with very little expense.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised that the establishment of fish hatcheries is one of the subjects into which the fish commission will inquire and report.

Mr. BERGERON. I would imagine that the acting minister would be particularly interested in protecting the fishing interests of British Columbia, and I would ask him as acting minister to see that that fish is protected. I understood when I was in British Columbia that there were a great many complaints owing to the fact that the Americans were taking the great part of the fishing wealth of British Columbia. Whether that can be settled in Washington or here I do not know, but the minister is more interested perhaps than any one else in seeing that the industry is protected.

Mr. GANONG. What proportion of this vote is to be expended on fish hatcheries in the Bay of Fundy?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. In Nova Scotia we have the Bedford hatchery, the Margaree, the Windsor, the Bay View lobster hatchery and the Canso lobster hatchery.

Mr. GANONG. I was referring to the Bay of Fundy.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. My hon. friend will know whether these places are on the Bay of Fundy better than I do. In the province of New Brunswick we have the Restigouche hatchery, the Grand Falls hatchery, the Shippegan hatchery the Shemogue lobster hatchery. These are the names of the places in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia on which there will be expenditures.

Mr. GANONG. As I understand those are past expenditures, I was referring to the present vote.

Mr. BERGERON. How many are there in Quebec?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. There is the Gaspé hatchery, the Magog hatchery, the Mont Tremblant hatchery, the St. Alexis hatchery and the Tadousac hatchery.

Mr. GANONG. I asked how many were being built this year in the Bay of Fundy?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I gave the complete list in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. These are already in operation. I did not know how many were on the Bay of Fundy. The question of building further hatcheries on the Bay of Fundy is under consideration and is being investigated at the present time. Considerable information has to be obtained and I am informed that the question is being carefully considered and when additional information is obtained action may be taken.

Mr. GANONG. I understand from this that no portion of this vote is to be devoted to hatcheries on the Bay of Fundy. It is a rather remarkable position, because we had an election in Charlotte as some of you may know, and at that time we had a great many promises made to the candidate and to the citizens for the purpose of influencing the vote. Happily for the candidate who represented the Reform party he has gone to his reward in the Senate, he is a gentleman who resides in Montreal and represents a New Brunswick constituency. The people down there are not so much interested in the reward given to the gentleman who was the Reform candidate as in the promises that came directly to them, political promises of wharfs, breakwaters and so on. So many of these promises were made that people actually believed we would rival Queens and Shelburne. It is estimated that at least one-third has been added to the area of that county, since this government came into power, through the erection of wharfs and breakwaters. The fish hatchery was one of the promises given. We have the best spawning grown in the maritime provinces, according to the report of the Fishery Commission appointed to investigate. We have been promised a lobster hatchery there for years by the gentlemen who were tramping the county over in the endeavour to influence votes. It is admitted that there is no such good food ground for fisheries as at Charlotte, but apparently we have to be penalized down there by this government simply because we have a vote that is not purchaseable either by wharfs or promises of fish hatcheries.

Mr. BERGERON. My hon. friend says that those establishments cost on an average from $5,000 to $10,000 according to where they are situated.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Some cost more.

Mr. BERGERON. But that is the average cost. What are the expenses of maintenance ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The salaries of the men and the cost of collecting fry and distributing it afterwards. The number of men employed is about five to each station and the term of employment is about five and a half months in the year. The work continues night and day. During the off season there is an officer in charge.

Mr. BERGERON. What is the expense per year ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I have the figures here for the province of Quebec. The expense in connection with the Magog hatchery is $1,000 ; St. Alexis, $1,500 ; Lake Lester, $1,500 ; Tadousac, $4,500. That is the cost of maintenance.

Mr. LEFURGEY. What fish hatcheries are there in Prince Edward Island ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. There are two, the Gillies Point hatchery, cost of maintenance, $2,000 ; the Charlottetown lobster hatchery, $3,000.

Mr. LEFURGEY. The western part of the island is as much interested in the fish industry as the east, yet there is no fish hatchery there at all. The matter has been before the department for the last three or four years, and they have been promising us a suitable location and it is about time something was done. The catch has been falling off from year to year so that unless the department takes some active steps we will eventually have no lobster catch on the southern side of Prince Edward Island at all. The attention of the department has been called a number of times to Egmont bay, where as large a number of lobsters is caught as at any other place. I would like to know if any definite decision has been arrived at ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. No, but the department is cognizant of the demands and the necessity for further aid to hatcheries in the island, and is at present investigating the matter. We hope to do something by next year.

Mr. LEFURGEY. That is the same story as two years ago.

Mr. McLENNAN. Last year I called attention to the urgency of having a retaining pond in connection with the hatchery at Margaree, and the minister said he expected to make a visit to that part of the country when he would look into the matter. Unfortunately some other business prevented his coming. I know that the contention on the part of the officials was that the hatchery in St. John river was ample to supply ova to the various other hatcheries throughout the maritime provinces ; but I called the attention of the minister to the fact that in all instances where the source of supply was at hand retaining ponds were established, and while it is all right to have a central depot in St. John harbour a retaining pond is very desirable at the Margaree river, which is, next to the Restigouche, the finest salmon river in the maritime provinces. The fishery inspector, who has had thirty years' experience and consequently ought to be an expert, has reported in favour of a retaining pond in connection with the Margaree hatchery. I might add that on looking over the report of the department last year, I find that it states that the water in St. John harbour, where this central retaining pond is situated, has been contaminated by sewage. This makes it the more important that a retaining pond should be established in connection with the Margaree hatchery. The source of supply is within one hundred yards of this hatchery. It seems like carrying coals to Newcastle to send 300 or 400 miles away for salmon fry when the finest salmon perhaps in the world are to be had within a hundred yards. Besides, bringing the fry that long distance always subjects it to the risks and vicissitudes incidental to the carriage by railway train and transfer to steamer and all the handling in that connection. It is quite true that a very large supply of salmon fry has been sent out from the Margaree hatchery but it is equally true that a considerable proportion is destroyed in transit.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I shall be very pleased to look into the matter as early as possible.

Mr. AMES. Will the hon. minister give us an idea about what the capital cost is for the construction of a fish hatchery with a capacity of from 500,000 to 1,000,000 per season, such as the Lake Lester hatchery or the Magog hatchery ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. It depends on locality. 500,000 to 1,000,000 would be a very small hatchery. As a rule the fish hatcheries out west are in very remote places, where the cost of bringing in supplies is very heavy. At a convenient place such a hatchery should not cost more than $4,000 or $5,000.

Mr. AMES. I wish to ascertain further if it has ever been suggested to the department that possibly some of the large fishing clubs would be willing to enter into a joint arrangement for the propagation of fish in the streams over which their leases extend. If a small salmon hatchery could be established at the mouth of a river like the Grand Cascapedia for the exclusive use of the river, the wealthy lessees would be very likely willing to contribute one half or the entire expense, and in that way the government could get an expenditure of two dollars at the cost of one. I would suggest to the department that they should make an effort to negotiate with some of the large fishing clubs to this end.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The suggestion of my hon. friend may be very worthy of further consideration, although I must confess that the matter has been already considered at various times by the department. We have in the west hatcheries owned by cannery men, which are supervised by the department and report to it. The owners bear all the expenses but the hatcheries are under the supervision of our officers. Whether it would be convenient or advisable to make such an arrangement with a sporting club, holding fishing rights over a specific territory, is a question I would not be prepared to answer offhand. As a matter of fact, I understand that many of the lakes fished over by these clubs are supplied at present from the Dominion government hatcheries. The suggestion, however, is one worthy of being carefully considered.

Mr. AMES. I would like to ask the minister if he will give the suggestion some consideration in the course of this coming summer. If plans could be brought out and the estimated cost was not more than $3,000 or $4,000, it is probable that a number of the wealthy fishing clubs would undertake to entirely maintain or contribute largely to the maintenance of hatcheries on their own waters. In that way we would largely increase the fish production because the fish could be hatched and put into the river close by the hatcheries and avoid the dangers incident to their being sent long distances.

I would ask also whether the question of regulation of netting privileges, especially in the province of Quebec, has been satisfactorily settled with the local governments. At present the Dominion government are stocking the rivers in the province of Quebec with salmon and trout, and the local government is issuing netting privileges which deplete the entire population in the rivers. Down the Gaspé and along the north shore, while the Dominion government is making efforts to propagate the salmon, the salmon are being destroyed by the netting. If that question be not settled in the near future and stricter regulations enforced so as to permit a fair number of the salmon to reach the spawning grounds, many of the rivers, especially in the lower St. Lawrence, will be depleted of salmon.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The point raised is another evidence of the unfortunate condition in which we stand at present owing to conflict of jurisdiction.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the present arrangement ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The question is still sub judice and I cannot even express the hope that it is near settlement.

Mr. SPROULE. Who exercises jurisdiction over the fisheries at present?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The provinces of Ontario and Quebec give licenses and define the size of the nets. We make the laws with regard to stocking the rivers. Nothing has been done to come to an agreement although I am continually pressing to have a satisfactory arrangement made. My hon.

friend further asked the department to consider the suggestion with regard to obtaining the assistance of private fishing clubs in establishing and maintaining hatcheries. I think the suggestion a very good one. Whether it is possible for the government to join in the maintenance of a hatchery owned by a private fishing club is a matter on which I would reserve judgment, but I am sure that the department would be only too willing to give every assistance possible in such a work, as it would lessen the responsibility of the government to that extent.

Mr. AMES. If the department facilitates the commercial operations of fishing companies in British Columbia, I should think it might apply the same principle to the operation of fishing clubs in the east. The fishing club is of very great assistance in the maintenance of the fish supply. The number of fish which are actually captured in the rivers by members of fishing clubs is a very small percentage compared with those caught by nets on the coast. When a fishing club at great expense protects the spawning salmon or trout in the rivers, it contributes very greatly to the protection of the fish supply, and I think the department would be wise to work with it as far as possible in doing so.

Fishery protection service, $225,000.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. What arrangements are the government making to settle the differences between the Dominion and provincial authorities with reference to the control of the inland and inshore fisheries? Some time ago it was decided by the Privy Council that the federal authorities had control of certain parts of the fisheries, while the local authorities owned the shores, and had the right to lease or set aside different portions of them for fishing purposes. The provincial legislatures have passed Acts for the leasing of portions of the shores, but there seems to be a conflict of authority which for some years past the Dominion and provincial governments have been endeavouring to settle. I would like to know how far they have succeeded in making an arrangement. In the maritime provinces there are vast oyster fisheries which could be greatly increased if these disputes were settled. This is a matter which should engage the immediate attention of the government.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. It is a very large question, and my hon. friend knows the position in which it has been for a number of years.

Mr. LEFURGEY. It is growing larger every year.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I suppose it is. It was hoped that this question would have been taken up at the conference of the provincial premiers and adjusted satisfactorily, but it appears that it was not. I may say that no progress in the settlement of the question has been made in recent years.

To provide for the construction of a fisheries protection cruiser for the Pacific coast, $225,000.

Mr. FOSTER. What is being done in that regard?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The Dominion government has only one small vessel on the Pacific coast as a fisheries protection cruiser, and it has been found absolutely necessary to provide another.

Mr. MACPHERSON. There should be two more.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Yes, two or three are really required.

Mr. FOSTER. It is not as to the necessity of one that I asked the question, but what steps are being taken towards the building of it? Where is it to be built, and what is the probable cost?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Tenders have not yet been obtained. They will be called for in Canada.

Mr. FOSTER. What is to be the size of the vessel?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Two hundred and twenty-five feet long. It will have about 800 tons displacement, with a speed of 17½ knots. It is necessary that this vessel should be built as soon as possible. The fisheries protection vessel on the Pacific coast, the 'Kestrel,' is altogether too slow and affords little or no protection to our fisheries there. On three separate occasions United States fishing schooners were seen poaching in Canadaian waters, and were able to get away owing to the slowness of the 'Kestrel.' Tenders for the vessel will be called for by public announcement.

Mr. MACPHERSON. This is an instance in which I would be somewhat in opposition to the Department of Marine and Fisheries. We have shipbuilding facilities on the Pacific coast, and I think this is an excellent opportunity for the government to encourage the shipbuilding industry there by having this ship built on the Pacific coast. We have shipbuilding facilities at Vancouver, Victoria and New Westminster.

Mr. FOSTER. Nothing but punts there.

Mr. MACPHERSON. The hon. gentleman has not been there, or he would not say that. The 'Beatrice,' owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway, an excellent boat, was built in British Columbia. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company is doing a great deal towards building up the industry of shipbuilding on the Pacific coast, and I think this is an instance in which our government might rise above the criticisms of the opposition, and decide not to call for tenders for this boat outside of the province of British Columbia.

Mr. BENNETT. How many companies are there ?

Mr. MACPHERSON. I do not know exactly how many there are—there may be four or five, but I know of three. I am speaking from the standpoint of a Canadian operating on the Pacific coast. I think this would be an excellent opportunity for the department to let that contract in the province of British Columbia, because the building of this boat there will do a great deal to encourage shipbuilding on the coast. And I believe the House will back up the department if it does as I propose.

Mr. BERGERON. Where else could the boat be built ?

Mr. MACPHERSON. Well, the Polsons build boats.

Mr. BERGERON. But how could she be transported to the Pacific coast ?

Mr. MACPHERSON. Her hull could be built out there. Or the boat might be built on the Atlantic coast and sent around.

An hon. MEMBER. Oh, oh.

Mr. MACPHERSON. That is done. We have quite a number of boats on that coast that came from Halifax and were sent around the Horn to British Columbia. The government did a good thing when they had the 'Kestrel' built, but that was only spasmodic. They could follow that up by building the present boat there.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Was the 'Kestrel' built on the Pacific coast ?

Mr. MACPHERSON. Yes, by Wallace Brothers. She is a good boat.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How large ?

Mr. MACPHERSON. Oh, she is only a little Jim Crow of a boat, about as long as this room. The American government did a good thing in encouraging the establishment of the shipbuilding yards of Moran Brothers in Seattle. They have done a great deal to build up that city. Now, I wish to impress upon the minister—and I am very much in earnest in this matter—that the government could do a great deal toward building up the Pacific coast by encouraging the establishment of a shipbuilding industry there.

Mr. FOSTER. I would go with my hon. friend (Mr. Macpherson) part of the way. I do not think it would be wise for the government to call for tenders with the declaration that this boat shall not be built anywhere but on the Pacific coast. I think it would be perfectly right for the government to take into consideration certain things. If we build a boat on this side of the continent to be run in Pacific waters, you have to get her on the other side of the continent. In the first place this involves expense. Possibly—considering the government's general record—this boat will be built before the Panama Canal is ready. In that case, she will have to be taken round the Horn. This would consume a great deal of time. So the time and the expense might well be taken into account. And, even if there was a little balance against the British Columbia tenderers, I do not think this House would criticise the government very strongly—if the balance were not too large—if they should give the best British Columbia tenderer the preference. But I would protest against putting in a clause in the call for tenders excluding any citizen of this country from tendering in the case of so large an expenditure. Giving this preference, and with the facilities at their hand, I think that the government would have a very fair chance of getting the work done on the pacific coast. Besides that, it would be a fine thing for my hon. friend (Mr. Macpherson) and his colleagues in British Columbia to look in at the building of that vessel now and then and think how their own part of the Dominion was going ahead, that it was becoming a manufacturing country as well as a great fruit-growing and mining country. I do not see any reason why British Columbia should not be a great manufacturing part of our Dominion, considering its resources in coal and its facilities, particularly its geographical position. It comes into trade competition with our Japanese allies and neighbours on the other side of the Pacific and must take cognizance of that fact. It is a significant thing that Mr. Hill does not feel justified in replacing the very fine steamer which was burned, and which cost him three and a half millions. The reason why he does not replace her is because of the close and energetic competition of our allies and friends on the other side of the Pacific.

Mr. MACPHERSON. Because the Japanese will only patronize their own boats.

Mr. FOSTER. If anything can be done fairly to set on its feet the boatbuilding industry on the Pacific coast, I think the government should do it.

At one o'clock, committee took recess.

Committee resumed at three o'clock.

Canadian fisheries exhibit, $6,500.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Out of a vote of $7,000 there was expended, in 1905-6, $5,-351. This exhibit is in charge of Mr. Andrew Halkett, whose salary is $1,600 per annum. The department intends to procure additional specimens.

Mr. SPROULE. Is this money intended to be all used for the fishery exhibit on O'Connor street?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Yes.

Oyster culture, $7,000.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The work for the coming year is to be carried on at Richmond bay, Shediac bay, Murray Harbour bay and Bras d'Or lake, N.B.

Mr. SPROULE. What success is attending the efforts being made in that direction?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised that considerable success has been met with, and more applications are coming in to the department than can be granted.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. Does the Dominion government recognize the fact that the provincial governments have authority and power to locate and limit oyster beds?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. That is a large constitutional question; I am not prepared to express an opinion.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. If the minister cannot admit that, there is very little use in this government spending money in the culture of oysters. Suppose that I were to go on and sow a bed of oysters, look after them three or four years and get them to pay, and any other person came along and took those oysters away from me, what encouragement would I have to go into the culture again? All the provincial legislatures of the maritime provinces have passed laws empowering them to lease oyster beds. There seems to be a doubt as to whether the jurisdiction or power to pass those laws belongs to the provincial governments. The Dominion government have known that for the last six or seven years, but they have taken no steps to have the question settled. There is a great deal of money invested in oyster culture, and a great number of men are engaged in it. In the United States each state of the union on the Atlantic sea-board passes laws to regulate the culture of oysters. But now we are spending money year after year in this business, and it goes for nothing, the oyster beds are diminishing. I can tell the minister from my personal knowledge that the beds are being depleted. Instead of getting an oyster of the proper size, you get a small oyster that is apt to be useless. Unless the Dominion government does something to make an arrangement with the provincial government in reference to the clashing of authority, there is very little use in our passing votes here.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Does my hon. friend oppose this vote?

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. No, I think the money is well spent; but I think they should settle this constitutional question first.

Mr. SPROULE. If the money is being wasted because of a conflict of jurisdiction, would it not be better to hold the expenditure until some conclusion is reached?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Until that time arrives and the question is settled, I think it would be inadvisable to suspend this vote. The government is doing what it can in the propagation and culture of oysters on the Atlantic coast, in which Prince Edward Island is largely interested. Simply because you have dual jurisdiction, and some regulations of the provincial governments interfere with the object the Dominion government have in view, is no reason why we should not pass this appropriation. It involves the large question of the jurisdiction over the fisheries.

Mr. SPROULE. The government should make an extra effort to reach a settlement.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Quite true.

To assist in the establishment, maintenance and inspection of cold storage of bait for deep sea fishermen, $85,000.

Mr. SPROULE. There has been a large vote for some years back for this purpose. What has been accomplished?

Out of this vote the assistance given to fishermen (50 per cent of the cost) in establishing fishermen's small bait freezers throughout the maritime provinces, has been paid; also one half the cost up to $30,000 of the establishment of a large bait freezer for the bankers at Halifax.

In addition to these, the cost of Scottish herring curing experiment, which was this year conducted at Caraquet, N.B., was paid.

The usual amount of this vote is $85,000, but as it is contemplated to extend the scheme of development of the fisheries, in the way of assisting in the establishment of large cold storage plants for bait, which are being asked for on the Pacific as well as on the Atlantic, it will be necessary to provide for equal assistance to what was given to the large bait freezers at Halifax and Canso to another bait freezer on the Pacific coast, and, as in 1905-6 the sum of $36,865 was paid for assistance to the large bait freezers at Halifax and Canso out of this vote, it is expected that the present vote of $85,000 will be ample to provide equal assistance to a freezer on the Pacific coast.

Mr. SPROULE. Has it been a success?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Yes; my officer says that the experiment has been most successful all over.

Mr. J. D. REID. I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) what is the position of the question as to who has control of the oyster fishery? I understood from one of the hon. gentlemen who have spoken that there is some conflict between the local and Dominion government, that there has been some decision given, and that the position is now that there must be an arrangement made between the provinces and the Dominion in order that either one of them shall have absolute control over this question. I understand that there is a very serious loss to the Dominion, and not only that, but that the oysters that we are getting are not as good as they were on account of neither authority having control. I understand that there has been some decision given by the Privy Council that the Dominion government have the regulating of the seasons in which the oysters may be fished, while the local government have another jurisdiction. As the Finance Minister is interested in the lower provinces and, of course, would be more interested than any other member of the House in this question, probably he will be able to give us some information.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN

Mr. FIELDING. I would not like to undertake to give very definitely an opinion as to the legal decision which has been given in connection with the fishery question. My recollection is that there was no special judgment in reference to the oyster fishery. It was a general judgment as to the rights of the provinces in the shore fisheries; and, roughly speaking, if a layman may venture to state the substance of the decision, it was that what is called the property interest in the fisheries belongs to the provinces who are the owners of the soil, and the regulation of the fisheries is a matter to be managed and controlled by the Dominion authorities. There is some confusion no doubt, and we, looking at it from the Dominion point of view, think it most desirable that there should be united action. We would be very much pleased if the provinces would waive their claims and allow the whole matter to be dealt with by the Dominion government. But the provinces are disposed to think that these fisheries are of some financial value to them, and that the Dominion should pay for the privilege of acquiring them. We have not reached any conclusion in the matter, but we are rather disposed to advance the argument that when we take over the full and unlimited control of these fisheries we are taking over that which will be of no financial benefit to us, but which will be the cause of considerable outlay. But, nevertheless, in the public interest generally, we think it most desirable that we should get control. The only difficulty in getting control is that several of the provinces would be very happy to sell their interest in the fisheries to us. Some of the provinces attach very great importance to their interest in the fisheries. The province of Prince Edward Island is disposed to attach a monetary value to its interest, while some of the other provinces take the view that while the fisheries are of importance, it is in the interest of all concerned that the Dominion should control them. The province of Ontario is disposed to attach importance to its own management of the fisheries, and it would not be willing to yield that control to us without some consideration. These difficulties create complications which are unfortunate, and I do not know what can be done at the moment to bring about a settlement, except it be that by correspondence and negotiation we will be able to persuade the local governments that while they may have the legal right to hold control of the fisheries, it is not wise, in the public interest, that they should exercise that right. We are hopeful that before long a settlement of this question will be reached.

Mr. J. D. REID. As it is, the provincial governments issue the licenses?

Mr. FIELDING. In some cases.

Mr. J. D. REID. They do in Ontario, and I suppose it is the same in Prince Edward Island.

Mr. FIELDING. Yes. I think Prince Edward Island only issue them for oysters.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. Clams.

Mr. J. D. REID. If they issue them for oysters, I suppose the Dominion recognize that they have the right to do so?

Mr. FIELDING. They would have the right to impose fees. I think they could require that any person who fishes for oysters on the shores of Prince Edward Island should pay tribute to the Prince Edward Island government, but the regulation of the seasons during which that fishery may be carried on would probably come within the control of the Dominion. However, these are complicated legal questions, and I do not ask the House to accept, with too much confidence, the rough statement I have made of the situation, although I think it is substantially correct.

Mr. BERGERON. What arrangement has been made between the provincial and Dominion authorities as far as the lakes are concerned? I asked a question this morning about the St. Lawrence, between Montreal and Cornwall. I remember the time when an overseer was appointed by this government, but I am informed that the jurisdiction has now passed to the provincial government, and that the provincial government issue the licenses. The law is very lax; these licenses do not mean anything, and the fish are being destroyed in large quantities.

Mr. FIELDING. Since the judgment was given by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, three or four years ago, the provinces have been claiming a degree of authority that had not been previously exercised by them. I think the province of Ontario is one of them.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. I think there is a little doubt about the meaning of that decision and I believe that if the Dominion government would get the provincial governments to state a case and get the rights of the several governments finally adjudicated upon in the public interest it would be a wise thing. That should be done with the least possible delay, because there is so much doubt about it now that the business is suffering.

Mr. FIELDING. The provinces are not disposed to admit the doubt, they think they have them.

Mr. J. D. REID. Could not a case be decided? All along the St. Lawrence now the local government have assumed control and they have their fishery inspectors. At one time we had a Dominion inspector on the St. Lawrence, but for the last few years the inspection has been under the Ontario government and the licenses are issued by them, in fact they have entire control. That being the case, and as there seems to be some doubt, the matter will have to be settled sooner or later, and as it is now two or three years since the judgment was given I would suggest prompt action.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. There is no doubt that something must be done to settle the question in the near future. The department has been endeavouring for some time to come to an agreement with the provinces in respect to a reference to the Privy Council with a view to a settlement of this for ever, but the terms of that reference have not yet been agreed upon.

Mr. LEFURGEY. In the meantime can the Prince Edward Island government go ahead and lease oyster beds to parties pending a settlement of this question? There is great dissatisfaction and I have had a good deal of correspondence from people interested in this. This applies especially to the estuaries of Malpeque bay and Malpeque bay itself.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. As I understand the government of Prince Edward Island leases the foreshore for the purpose of taking oysters.

Mr. LEFURGEY. No, they have not done so, but they have passed a law in relation to it. There are only one or two leases extant on the island, but last year they passed a law dealing with the lease of what are called the barren beds.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The Dominion government did not interfere or do anything to oppose that legislation, but they do not recognize thus far the direct right of the province to make such a lease, just as in British Columbia, to my personal knowledge, the provincial government has undertaken to lease the foreshore for the planting of traps to take salmon. We have neither affirmed nor denied their right to do so. The Dominion government has to make the regulations under which salmon shall be taken, the character of the trap, the season in which fish may be taken, &c. We have not disputed the right of a province to lease the foreshore, although, if I am correctly informed, we neither affirm nor deny the right. The whole question must ultimately be settled by a reference to the Privy Council.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I would suggest that the Dominion government take some active steps, especially in the case of the oyster beds, where so much difficulty will arise from disputed jurisdiction. A reference should be arranged.

Mr. FIELDING. It takes two to make a bargain.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I pointed out what I consider a very dangerous state of affairs. Conflicting interests might result in great damage to the oyster beds.

Mr. AMES. Are the regulations with respect to the size of the mesh of the nets for catching salmon and with respect to the lifting of the nets on Sunday federal regulations and is their enforcement under federal authority?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Yes, of course the regulations are absolutely and altogether federal.

Mr. AMES. Then I desire to point out that along the coast of Gaspé and Bonaventure these laws are absolutely disregarded and are a matter of ridicule, the mesh used in salmon nets is smaller than the law allows and the fishermen, relying on the support of their parliamentary representatives, are very rarely willing to take up their nets on Sunday. The department, if it is going to preserve the salmon, must insist that the nets that are too small be confiscated and that all nets be lifted on Sunday.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised that this subject has received considerable attention; that on a representation of the Restigouche Fishing Club an investigation took place and officers were put on to compel fishermen to raise their nets on Sunday with the result that, for the time being at all events, the regulations were complied with. A representative of the Restigouche Club was on the steamer making the rounds at that time. Of course I can say in a general way that there could be no doubt at all that the duty of the department under such circumstances would be to enforce the law and the regulations. I would assume that is what has been done; it is certainly what ought to be done.

Mr. AMES. I may tell the minister for his own information that the law is practically a dead letter and a matter of ridicule along the Gaspé and Bonaventure coast inasmuch as the people feel that the sympathy of the government is entirely with the man who owns the net rather than with the man who protects the fish. You have only to drive along the shore of the Baie des Chaleurs to see the nets on the fences and measure them to find they are several inches smaller than they have any right to be, yet no confiscation has taken place and it is very rarely that the nets are lifted in many of these rivers. The fish are small, and sometimes even a six or eight pound fish is all net marked, showing that they have great difficulty in working their way through the nets. If the legal size of the mesh is maintained, a salmon of ten or twelve pounds weight could go through without a scratch, but as it is, it is impossible to catch an eight or ten pound salmon in these rivers without marks on them.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. What should be the legal size?

Mr. AMES. I am not sure what the legal size is, but I think it is ten inches. At any rate, there is a size fixed by statute, and I know that it is not lived up to.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The officer in charge of that district, Dr. Wakeham, is at present in the city of Ottawa, and I will obtain from him a report in regard to the question which my hon. friend has brought to our attention.

Mr. AMES. Dr. Wakeham covers the eastern Gaspé coast and the north shore, but I do not think he has this matter in hand in the Baie des Chaleurs.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. He goes all over.

Mr. AMES. Then he ought to take more precaution than he does at present.

Mr. LOGGIE. I would like to say, for the information of the hon. gentleman, that the true legal size of the mesh for salmon is 5 inches, and that the mesh used is from 6½ to 7 inches, that is, for the Gulf of St. Lawrence salmon. For the large salmon that goes up the Restigouche river the size of the mesh used is 7 inches; that is for a salmon of from 20 to 25 lbs. A mesh of from 6¼ to 6⅜ inches is used for a 10-pound salmon. The law does not provide that nets along the sea-coast shall be raised over Sunday, it is an impossibility. In the afternoon the sea breeze that comes up makes it impossible to bring them on shore. On the Miramichi river the nets are put up on pickets from Saturday night till Monday morning or after midnight on Sunday.

Mr. GANONG. It will be interesting to know if the same law applies on the north shore to herring. On the south shore of New Brunswick we have to allow the herring to have Sunday as well as the working man. Perhaps the gentlemen from the northern part of New Brunswick will tell us whether they have a different law on the north shore in regard to herring nets from what we have in the county of Charlotte. We would like to hear from the hon. member for Northumberland (Mr. Loggie).

Mr. LOGGIE. I would like to say for the information of the hon. gentleman that herring are not caught to any great extent on the Miramichi river. What herring fishing is done is on the seacoast, and I understand that there is no law with regard to it. Ordinary gill-nets are used, and there is nothing in the way of pound-nets such as are used in the Bay of Fundy. There is no law fixing any particular time for catching herring. In the spring there is what is known as the spring run, when immense quantities are caught mostly used for lobster bait. Then there are no herring of any consequence until the fall, and they are taken entirely by gill-nets, and not by traps as in the Bay of Fundy.

Mr. GANONG. We have heard a good deal this session and last session about the destruction of herring along the shores of Charlotte county, and I wanted to know how they destroy them on the north shore. The minister knows that it is contrary to law to leave the nets out over Sunday. I think there are a few herrings caught off the shores of Gloucester county, and we would like to hear something from the hon. member for that county in regard to their habits.

Mr. TURGEON. The herring industry has become a very interesting industry in the county of Gloucester. I am not prepared to say from memory what the size of the net is, but I may say that our fishermen come home on Saturday very early, and there has never been a herring caught on Sunday in Gloucester county.

Mr. GANONG. Before we leave this item, I would like to ask the minister regarding the result of the Scotch method of curing herring. We had a Mr. Cowie out here making some experiments. I would like to know what the total cost of these experiments up to date has been, and also where the experiments were made.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I understand that the experiment carried on by the Scottish herring expert has been extremely successful, the herring put up under the Scottish method obtaining a much higher price in the market than the herring put up in the ordinary way. I understand also that the business of Mr. Cowie on the Pacific coast has been very highly appreciated, although he has been there only one or two years. A number of men with capital have investted in the herring industry, which is a rapidly growing industry on the Pacific coast, very largely due to the education introduced there by Mr. Cowie and his associates. I believe that the experiment has been very successful, and fully justified the expenditure incurred.

Mr. GANONG. It is remarkable how frequently the experiments of the government are remarkably successful. We have heard that in regard to butter, cheese and chickens, and in every instance we have had to foot the bill. I think we should have more definite information. I am not speaking against this experiment, because I think it is in the interest of this country that we should have the best possible method of curing our fish: but I would like to have more positive evidence that it has been so successful. I would like to know how many herring have been packed according to that method, and what prices they have brought. Then you will have something tangible. This mere statement that the experiment was successful is not altogether satisfactory.

Mr. SINCLAIR. Some of these experiments were conducted in my constituency and gave very good results indeed. The packing of herring by the Scotch method is not yet however fully understood by our people and it may take them some time to learn it. I know of people who attempted to pack the herring in that way, after having seen Mr. Cowie do it, and the herring were not so good and did not command so high a price. They were the same kind of herring, but the skill in packing was lacking, which those people who came from Scotland have, and that cannot be picked up in a moment. In the end however the experiment will prove of great benefit to our fishing industry. Take the 'Fishing Gazette' of New York and look through the prices any day you please, and you will find that the Nova Scotia herring, packed according to the Scotch method, is selling at $9 or $10 a barrel in New York, whereas we only get about $5 a barrel under the old method. But the hon. gentleman seems to be disappointed that the experiment has proved a success. My ideas would be to continue it and do more to teach our people this new method. There is a market for all the herring we can put up. The herring packed under this method is not relished at present by our people, but it is in the foreign markets. St. Petersburg furnishes a large market and great centres like Chicago and New York want the herring packed in that way. While it may take some time to work up this industry and while the number of barrels may not be large at present, still the fact that our herring in bringing $10 a barrel in the New York market, packed according to the Scotch method, is very satisfactory.

Mr. GANONG. The hon. gentleman's judgment of my opinion is not worth much either to me or to the House. I was simply asking for information, and I am as much interested as any one can be in the success of this experiment. I have some Scotch people coming out to my county who intend going into that industry? The government however did not see fit to go to the county which produces the fattest herring and make the experiment there where it would have a reasonable chance of success. It chose instead to go where the class of fish is not as good as it is in my county. The Quoddy river herring are known all over as the fattest and best in the country. Still the government did not see fit to send down there, where the experiment could have been conducted to much more advantage than in a place where the herring are known to be not nearly so good. It is because I am interested in the success of this new method that I am anxious to know the result, and all the information we are given is that a few barrels, which went to New York, sold at $8 or $10. I presume that is the full barrel because half barrels sell from $5 to $6. It would be interesting to the fishing industry to know just what is being done and how many fish have been successfully marketed, which were packed under this method.

Mr. McLENNAN. I do not see that it matters very much how many fish were put up in this way. If the method has proved a success, that is ample justification for the government. I have often heard the chicken fattening process sneered at in this House, but I do not remember the government ever instituting that as a means of deriving profit. Indirectly however it is of the greatest value to the people. In the county I have the honour to represent, this method of fattening chickens was lately shown to the people and they have followed it ever since and the industry is most profitable. The same no doubt will be the case in the matter of the herring industry. From watching the process I have come to the conclusion that the Scotch method of curing herring is a decided success. Whether the investment would be a profitable one in the first season or two is problematical, but it is really a great improvement on the old method. What I regret is that the method has not been more widely taught our people. A demonstration of this method should be carried on in more places. What called my attention to the matter particularly is that I was in receipt of a couple of letters from the department asking where the herring were most abundantly caught along the gulf, and I pointed out two localities where they could be caught very plentifully. That is the last I have heard about the matter, and I would be glad if the minister would in the near future give that matter his attention. But as regards the success of the new method of curing herring, that has amply demonstrated that the government have followed the right course.

Mr. GANONG. One of the difficulties is largely in the packages. The packages used formerly not to be of a suitable class to hold the pickle. I think the government imported some few Scotch packages. Perhaps the minister can tell what kind of wood these packages were made of.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The barrels were imported from Scotland and also the salt and parties to pack the herring were brought in at the same time. These barrels have been used as samples by some of the other makers along the coast.

Mr. GANONG. What kind of wood was used in these barrels ? Spruce was largely used formerly, I believe.

Mr. SINCLAIR. I am not able to answer that question. Spruce is all right if made tight.

Mr. GANONG. Is spruce being used in Nova Scotia now ?

Mr. SINCLAIR. Yes.

To provide for the construction and the maintenance of experimental work for the reduction of dogfish, &c., $80,000.

Mr. LEFURGEY. What facilities are provided for this work ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The expenditure in 1905-6 was $52,000. In addition to operating works at Canso and Shippegan, it is proposed to erect a third establishment at Clarke's harbour. It is expected that this latter will cost about $25,000. The machinery has been arranged for. The Canso works were the only works that were carried on all last season. The cost of operating these establishments, including raw material bought from the fishermen, amounted to about $18,000 for each establishment. The present estimate is based upon $54,000 for maintenance and operation of three establishments, and the cost of the new works at Clarke's harbour, $25,000—total, $79,000.

Mr. FOSTER. What were the receipts ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The Canso establishment produced 176 tons of fertilizer and the Shippegan establishment 84 tons, a total of 260 tons, the estimated value of which is $30 a ton. The material is not yet sold, but it can be sold to the farmers in the locality or elsewhere.

Mr. FOSTER. I am not sure that I understand that fully. What was the cost of the maintaining of the Canso dogfish factory ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I have not the figures before me showing the cost of that one separately, and cannot come nearer it than to say that these factories cost about $18,000 each for operation and maintenance.

Mr. FOSTER. But the minister must have had the matter worked out so far as the Canso operations are concerned, for, of course, that would be the first thing that parliament would be likely to ask.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I understand that the figures can be procured ; they are in the department.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to know the cost of construction of this Canso establishment, the cost of operation and maintenance, including raw material, the estimated value of the output. Do I understand that they make nothing but fertilizer ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. And oil.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Templeman) mentioned only the fertilizer.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Do I understand that none of it has been sold ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Neither the fertilizer nor the oil has been sold.

Mr. FOSTER. But you know the values ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The fertilizer is about $30 a ton. As to the oil, negotiations for the sale are now in progress. I have not been able to get an estimate of the value.

Mr. FOSTER. I suppose the government has only two objects in view in this whole affair : One is to destroy the dogfish, and the other is to carry on the work in such a way that the country will be recouped its expense, or even make a profit. The latter, I should think, would be the real justification for the industry. If you are going to make appropriations to destroy all the dogfish on the coasts of Canada, you are entering upon a life operation, I think. But, if you can carry on the destruction of them in such a way as to make the operation pay, you have every justification for going on. Here we are put to an expense of $150,000 or $160,000 already, and yet the minister cannot tell us anything that will enable us to judge of the real results of these operations. Have the dogfish in the vicinity of these factories been killed? Has the present generation of dogfish been diminished, and to what extent ? What proportion of this dogfish evil still remains to be dealt with ? How often do the dogfish breed ? It does not make any matter with this government if only they get a chance to spend a lot of money in the way of patronage, what the results may be. They do not think that parliament has any particular right to know just what has been doing. Unless inroads are being made on the dogfish so that this evil is being lessened in an appreciable degree, and unless we have a prospect of exterminating them at a reasonable expenditure of money, the government are entering upon an enterprise which they should not enter upon. We should like to see the dogfish killed, but we should like to see it done with a profit. And certainly we want from the department data which will enable us to understand what they are doing.

Mr. BERGERON. Is the government killing off the dogfish ?

Mr. FOSTER. I imagine that they increase very rapidly. I should think that if you could get an antidote or bane for the dogfish it would be better. If you had a germ that would kill off the dogfish, that would be the scientific way to meet the evil. Why does not the department offer a prize of $100,000 to the scientist who would discover the germ to destroy the dogfish ?

Mr. SPROULE. We should then be in the happy position of the old lady when some one came from a distant part of the country and told her that in that section they had a bug that was eating the potato bug, she said : 'May the Lord increase his appetite and give him great capacity.'

Mr. LEFURGEY. Was not the government approached last year by parties who offered to take over the whole dogfish plant under some arrangement that they proposed ? And is it not true that these parties carried on experiments by which they proved that certain portions of the dogfish were valuable for food, having had some of them canned and analyzed ? I know the government was approached by parties to take this expensive machinery off their hands. I should like to know what the proposition was.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised there was a proposition made to take over the plant, but it was entirely unsatisfactory. Some of the dogfish were canned, I do not know with what result. I believe on the Pacific coast large quantities of dogfish are canned, the Japanese are fond of dogfish for food.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I understood the government was in possession of information showing that some of these dogfish were canned and put on the market.

Mr. FIELDING. There is a private concern in Nova Scotia which has been putting up dogfish for the last season, somewhat experimentally. But I know from conversation I had with a gentleman connected with it, that he regarded the experiment as very successful. They have produced a very useful food, and that has led to the question whether the operations of the government might not be extended into turning these fish into food as well as into fertilizers. The whole thing is necessary for the present an experiment. These dogfish have never been converted to any useful purpose, and have been a great nuisance to the fishermen. The object is to ascertain by what method they may be converted into an article of commercial value.

Mr. LEFURGEY. What would you call the food?

Mr. FIELDING. If you convert them into food and call it dogfish, people would not be likely to take to them. I believe it is sold under another name, which correctly describes the article. I understand it is likely to be quite successful.

Mr. FOSTER. I would suggest that instead of spending money on new plants the government should finish up the experiment with the number of plants they have. What is the use of extending the establishment until you have actually completed your experiments through the establishments you have now? If the experiment is satisfactory, and the fish can be converted into oil and fertilizer, or a food product, then the industry would take care of itself. If it can be done with the co-operation of the government, there would be another plan. But first of all, let us have the experiment well tried out before we go to doubling the expenditure in the way of new establishments.

Mr. FIELDING. I know that the government does not contemplate increasing the number of establishments. It has decided to have three experimental plants at widely separated points along the extended coast. Two of these have been in operation, and the machinery for the other I understand is on the ground and about to be erected. But it is not contemplated to enlarge the sphere of experiment until we ascertain more completely what the results of the present expenditures are going to be.

Mr. SPROULE. How long have they been in operation?

Mr. FIELDING. Only one season.

Mr. SPROULE. How did the government reach the decision that they were worth $30 a ton as fertilizer?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The fertilizer was analyzed and was compared in value with other fertilizers whose cost was known. None of it has been sold as yet. Applications have been made to buy it, but none has been sold.

Mr. DANIEL. What remuneration is paid to the fishermen to supply dogfish? How do these reduction plants get their raw material?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I understand all the dogfish are bought from fishermen, who are paid $4 per ton.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Has anything similar been done by the department to extend carp? I think years ago there was something of that kind proposed. I understand that carp is not considered a good eatable fish. The district I have the honour to represent produces tons upon tons of carp, and while these were not supposed to be a saleable fish until a short time ago, our fishermen at present are getting eight cents a pound for them. There are some dogfish there to, and they find a market in New York, so does the carp.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Nothing has been done with respect to carp.

To provide for the management and expenses of a government educational fish curing establishment, the proceeds of sale to revert to the appropriation, $12,000.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. This vote is for a drying establishment, the object of which is to demonstrate to fishermen the advantages of drying their fish according to the most improved modern methods. It began operations in July, 1905, at Souris, Prince Edward Island, and has not only proved an eminent success as regards the drying of fish, but the proceeds of the sales of fish when they are received will show a favourable balance for the department.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. The appropriation says that this shall be an educational fish-curing establishment. So far as the establishment has been run, it has not been used as a fish-curing educational establishment, it has been used simply as a business establishment by the government. The professed object of this institution, when it was first mooted in parliament, was to enable the fishermen to take their fish to this establishment and have them cured at the actual cost of the operation. But no fish have been cured in that way at all, and the fishermen have received no benefit whatever from that establishment. The government have placed the money in the hands of a private individual at Souris to buy fish from the fishermen. Now what has become of the fish received from the fishermen to be handled and matured for the fishermen? The fish were simply purchased by the government, cured for the government and sold by the government. They were shipped by the government in the name of the Occidental Fish Company to New York, Havana, Porto Rico and other ports. The government paid for the transportation not in the interest of the fishermen but in the interest of the government. The government have ever since this work was instituted, competed there with the other traders in the purchasing of fish. The fishermen, I am credibly informed, were not paid the market value for the fish which they sold to this factory or drying establishment and they induced some men to go from Canso to Souris to compete with the government. They did go up and they increased the price of fish to the fishermen something like thirty, forty or fifty per cent in some cases. The consequence was that last season the private firm received nearly three-quarters of the fish that were produced at Souris. An individual representing a Halifax firm went to this establishment with a large amount of fish and asked the manager to allow him to cure the fish in that factory, but he was told that it would not be permitted to him to have the fish cured in that establishment, but if the member for the county consented it was possible that it could be done.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. I beg my hon. friend's pardon; I did not catch that statement.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. A gentleman from Halifax went to the establishment last summer and requested that he be permitted to have some fish cured. He was told by the manager of the factory that he would not be permitted to have the fish cured unless he went to the member for the county and received his permission. This establishment was not constructed for the benefit of a few politicians but was constructed for the benefit of the trade of the country and more particularly for the benefit of the fishermen in that particular vicinity. It is an educational institution. I think that when an institution of this kind is started men should be sent to that institution in order to have them instructed in the proper way of curing fish. The educational part has been altogether ignored and the establishment has been run by the government in such a way that no person outside of the man who was operating it knew anything about it. I do not know whether this matter has been brought to the attention of the minister, but as the minister introduced this matter first three or four years ago explained to the House it was to be in the interest of the fishermen and it was the intention that any person who had fish to cure could get them cured there. It is my opinion that that policy should be continued instead of the government using this establishment to compete with the ordinary merchants living in Souris and vicinity. The merchants have to supply the fishermen with salt, bait and nets on credit and yet the government purchase the fish over the heads of the merchants. It is not a fair way for the government to deal. I do not think that the government should do business in the same way as a merchant as they are doing in this instance.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. Evidently my hon. friend from Queen's (Mr. McLean) knows nothing about the particulars of this matter himself.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. I read the account up in the Public Accounts Committee and that may be turned up to verify what I say now.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. My hon. friend has made statements that are not to be found in the records of the Public Accounts Committee or in any records of the government or of parliament, and I repeat that I am quite satisfied that he knows nothing about the facts of the case. Further, I make the statement that the information which has been supplied to him is entirely incorrect. The statements made by my hon. friend are contradictory. They contradict themselves.

Mr. DANIEL. In what respect are they incorrect ?

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. Pardon me for a moment and I will come to that. One of the statements made by my hon. friend was that this fish curing establishment was of no benefit whatever to the fishermen of the locality and then a little later on he said that it was for the purpose of adding to the popularity of the local candidate. How could it add to the popularity of the local candidate if it could be of no possible advantage to the fishermen ?

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. I did not make that statement.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. I think my hon. friend did.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. That was the inference.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. Well then I come to the more specific charge that he made towards the latter part of his remarks that a gentleman from Halifax who had a large quantity of fish in that place made application to the manager of the dryer to have them cured there and that he was informed by the manager that it could not be done unless he would apply to the local member. That would be to myself. I am quite satisfied that the statement is absolutely incorrect. Personally I do not know what the manager stated, but I am sure he did not make that statement because, in so far as I am personally concerned, it would be absolutely incorrect. I know all the particulars about that case. A vessel laden with fish bound to Halifax from Gaspé was cast away on the shore and the fish were damaged. The sea water had come in. A man from Halifax purchased them and either himself or through another he made application to have them dried in this establishment. I was informed by the manager and also by the man from Halifax that the answer was that he could not dry them at that particular time because they had all they could do to dry the fish that were brought in by the local fishermen. The gentleman from Halifax said that unless the dryer could begin drying the fish and do nothing else, that is stop drying for the local fishermen altogether until his cargo was completed, he would rather not have them begun at all. He said that he wanted the whole cargo dried within a few days, or a few weeks, or as quickly as it could be done, or that the drying should not be begun at all. It was not for that purpose that the dryer was established. It was chiefly to take care of the fish coming from the local fishermen. That was the answer that the gentleman from Halifax received and I know that to be a fact. I would ask the hon. gentleman to get further and more reliable information on that point.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. I will get the information.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. Further than that, my hon. friend made the specific statement that not one kentle of fish was dried for the fishermen of that place. That is entirely incorrect. Several kentles have been received. I could give the names of several persons who had fish dried there. The fish are taken in and dried and the fishermen are charged for the drying of them. This experiment is carried on in the drying of fish very much on the lines adopted by Professor Robertson, when he was in the Department of Agriculture and established experimental cheese curing stations. He found that in order to inaugurate the experiment and make it a success he had to buy the milk from the farmers, convert it into cheese and sell the product. After some time the farmers were able to establish curing stations of their own. The fishermen could not do so and every man in this House would know that the fishermen themselves could not find a market for their fish if left to themselves entirely.

The only way to make the experiment a success was to buy fish from the fishermen, properly cure these and sell them and show what could be done by private enterprise, when private enterprise would be ready to take the matter up. It has proved a success in every way and my hon. friend will not go down to that part of the country and say that the fishermen have not received any benefit from the fish curing establishment, because every fisherman will tell him that this is one of the best things the government has ever done towards showing the fishermen the best method of putting up their fish for sale in the market. The fish cured in this establishment I am safe in saying is worth from 25 to 50 cents a quintal more than that cured in the ordinary way. Further than this at certain seasons of the year it is simply impossible to dry fish by the open air method particularly in the fall because there is not sufficient wind and sun. My friends from the maritime provinces will understand that very well, there is a time when you could not get two or three bright sunny days in succession with cold westerly winds, and for that reason this has proved to be the greatest boon to the fishermen. What is more, it has been no expense to the government, it has proved a success financially and in every other way and the hon. member for North Toronto, who wishes experiments conducted along that line will I am sure approve of this one. These are all the points I remember being brought out by the member for Queen's, who as I have already stated, knows nothing at all about the question or about the merits of the case.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. I have heard the hon. member make that statement before with reference to remarks by myself and by other members. He is very apt to say that a gentleman who speaks knows nothing about the subject under discussion. I know what I see in the public accounts of this country. I have seen the statements produced in the Public Accounts Committee and I tell the hon. gentleman that he will not find $20 placed to the credit of the government of Canada by any man who got fish cured in that establishment. All the fish were purchased by the government to be cured for the government as a trading transaction by the government. That is not the proper way to run this institution, and when the hon. gentleman says that I know nothing about it, he is not making a statement which is correct. I know exactly what the papers and documents say about the transaction, and the statements I made are absolutely and positively correct. The government have no right to be running this institution against ordinary merchants. He says the fishermen cannot sell the fish themselves. What have they been doing the last hundred years in that country? They cured their own fish and sold them.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. Oh, no, no.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN That is the only way they could do. They shipped the fish to the merchants, the fishermen sold to the merchants and the fishermen cured the fish themselves. I suppose the hon. gentleman would give credit to some other people for knowing a little about what is going on in his own country. I know I have been all around the shores and I have seen fish being cured by the fishermen. I know the merchants bought that fish and if this establishment was used for the curing of fish owned by the fishermen the fishermen could get the fish out of the establishment and sell it to the merchants; that is the proper way to run this establishment. The government has no right to compete with the merchants in a matter of this kind. The fishermen have a right to get fish cured there and that is what the establishment was erected for.

Mr. GANONG. I understand the fish are cured by what is called the Whitman Patent Process. Does the department pay a royalty?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Yes.

Mr. GANONG. Do the Whitman Company install it or the government?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The government install it and paid a royalty. I understand the amount paid last year for the use of the plant was about $242. It is very very hard indeed, to please our friends down on the Atlantic coast. We are running a dogfish establishment and losing money on it with a view to accomplishing certain results. The hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster)) objects to that. We are running a fish drying establishment on Prince Edward Island and strange to say it has made a small profit of $460 after paying all expenses and my hon. friend from Prince Edward Island objects to that and probably wants us to discontinue that establishment on Prince Edward Island, the first and best example of government ownership in showing how to cure fish.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. I do not object to the government erecting that establishmen, but I do object to them running this against the interests of merchants.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The government will not run any commercial business on the Atlantic coast against any private company. Just as soon as we have demonstrated to the fishermen of Prince Edward Island that this is the best method of drying fish and just as soon as private enterprise will take it up, I would deem it the duty of the government to retire from the business in the same way as when private enterprise will take up the dogfish enterprise and carry it on we should abandon it. The whole object of the government is to educate the people down there how to do business just as in the case of bringing the Scotchmen here to show them how to cure herring.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to ask a few questions. This I understand is an educational not a business institution and it would not be approved of by parliament if it were a business institution. How is it made educational? We have heard it stated that very little if any of the fish of the surrounding fishermen are brought in and cured, the fish is purchased, so how is the fisherman to be led to adopt it in his own manufacture or the curing of his fish?

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. My hon. friend is mistaken. All the processes are open to the fishermen and are taken advantage of. The fishermen are there every day and look through the establishment, it is not difficult to understand the process, they see how it is done and know it all thoroughly. There is no such thing as concealment, the object is to show the fishermen all about it. The fishermen understand it very well and a better grade of salt is being used, the whole quality of the fish is being raised and improved, and the fishermen are taking a greater interest in the catching and curing of fish and are making the whole thing a success. It is really and truly an educational establishment.

Mr. FOSTER. My only object is to get at the basis of this thing and to see how it is really being carried out, whether it is the educational arrangement that was proposed. Is it a fairly expensive process to install or can it be taken advantage of by the individual fishermen or will it have to be taken up by certain capitalists? That I suppose is the idea. The process is not of such a simple and inexpensive nature that it would be possible for every small fisherman to cure his fish by that process.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. It would be too expensive probably for the individual fisherman. In one instance the construction of the warehouse, office and machinery cost $3,609, and the labour and the salaries of the manager and staff cost $2,475. This is the expenditure for 1905-6.

Mr. FOSTER. Then, the cost is so small comparatively that it comes within the capacity of a number of fishermen co-operating together or an individual fisherman if he has a little capital at his command to have this establishment installed. The object of the government, I understand, is to show to the people that this is the better process, that it is adaptable for their fish, and that if it is brought into vogue their fish will be better cured and will bring them a better return. My whole question is, how do the government do that? From what my hon. friend says, I take it that the government buy fish and cure them, and invite anybody to come in and see the process, and demonstrate it in that way. Only the local fishermen could by any great possibility visit that establishment from time to time and see the process. If it became a matter of great interest, people from outlying localities might come and see it. But it would seem to me that what would bring a direct interest to it would be for the establishment to be ready to cure the fish of any fisherman within the vicinity. Let him catch the fish, take them to that establishment, watch the process, and after the process take them away and put them on the market. If he finds that he gets a better price, that is the practical way to convince him that it is a good thing. But if the government buy the fish, cure them and send them to the market, the minimum of instruction is already given, and the establishment competes with other fish curers in the district, and that is not what the government wants to do. If it be true that not more than $20 represents the payment for fish brought in by the local fishermen to be cured, it would go to show that very little is done in the way of education. During the process a lecture might be given by the foreman of the establishment explaining everything, and bulletins might afterwards be issued, making the whole fishing district thoroughly acquainted with the process and the results of the process. In that way, you would promote a spirit for its adoption; and, having performed your work in one district, you could move on to another and leave that perfected demonstration to bear its results.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. I may say that much of what the hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) suggests has already been done. The fishermen have been instructed in preparing the fish beforehand, the establishment is open at all times, and the fishermen take full advantage of it. There is no competition with the local trade, because there is no man in the locality who makes a special business of shipping or curing fish. The fish are shipped by men in other branches of trade.

Mr. FOSTER. That would not affect the principle.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES. But it is no disadvantage to anybody. On the contrary, it is a great advantage to every body, because whatever improves the general condition of the fishermen must improve the trade of everybody. The establishment works along both lines: it takes the fish outright, cures them, markets them and shows that that can be done successfully and profitably. It also takes fish from any person and cures them for him; but in order to be properly cured, they must be prepared in the proper way. The process of fishing is changing. A few years ago the fishermen who caught the fish, dried and cured them themselves, and the result was a comparative failure. From this time forward, in order that the best results may be obtained, there must be two classes of men engaged in the business, the fishermen and the curers; and that is what is being gradually brought about. The fishermen cannot properly cure the fish and also catch them. This establishment is bringing about a change in that respect, which of itself will be of great advantage.

Mr. SPROULE. From what the hon. member says it would seem that there are two processes, each of which is distinct in itself. The first, to instruct the fishermen how to prepare the fish, ought to be done by educational work, and surely instructors can be put in different places to give the fishermen information on that point. Then, if there is anything special in the curing, I do not see why this factory should not receive the fish from the fishermen and cure them, and let it be demonstrated that the fish so cured command a higher price and therefore bring a better return to the fishermen. That ought to be done and then you would distribute the benefits to all parties interested and not make this factory a competitor with the private individuals engaged in the same business. If there is something superior in this method of curing, then the educational work should be extended as much as possible so as to give the information to all the fishermen and not confine it to a few. When some years ago the late government undertook to put butter through a certain process and send it to the old country so as to demonstrate that Canadian butter, manufactured under proper supervision and sent to the market in cold storage, would realize higher prices, there was most vigorous opposition from hon. gentlemen opposite on the ground that the government was becoming a competitor to private enterprise. In that case, however, the education was given to every one, and if the same thing were done with regard to the curing of fish and the government not allowed to become a competitor with private individuals, I think the maximum of good results would be obtained. If the method is a good one, there is no reason why the fishermen should not have their fish cured at that factory.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES.

Mr. WILLIAM ROCHE (Halifax). The hon. minister has said that the government are losing money by this factory. I would suggest that a private company has offered to undertake the business of converting the dogfish into food and placing it on a large scale in foreign markets, if the government would give it some aid. In this way the government would be saved the necessity of spending a large amount of money to destroy an article which may be converted into food.

To provide for the construction and maintenance of marine biological stations and investigation, $15,000.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. In 1899 a government biological station was established for the purpose of obtaining knowledge with respect to the nature and sources of sustenance of marketable fish as well as the natural history of marine animals in Canadian waters. The first station was placed at St. Andrews, N.B. Then a station was established at Canso, N.S., and in the succeeding year one was erected at Malpeque. In 1906 one was built at Gaspé. Next year it is intended to establish a biological station on the Pacific coast, and the vote has consequently been increased from $3,000 to $15,000. The report of last year's work will be found in the annual report of the Department of Marine and Fisheries.

Towards the encouragement of better transportation and conservation of fish, $25,000.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. This is for the better transportation and conservation of fresh fish from the points of capture and shipment to the larger cities. At present the same freight charges are made per quarter or half car as for a full car, and as it is difficult to always succeed in purchasing a full car at any one point, the freight charges on small quantities are almost prohibitive. The exact manner of giving the assistance is not yet developed, but information is being gathered and the best arrangement possible will be carried out.

Mr. BENNETT. Has there ever been anything of the kind done before?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. No, this is entirely new.

Mr. BENNETT. To whom will it be given? Are you going to give it to the fish vendor or the man who buys the fish or to the railway companies?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I believe this is largely a transportation question—it is with a view to bringing fish from the maritime provinces to Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and other Ontario centres in cold storage. That is the primary object—to encourage the transportation and sale in Ontario and Quebec of fish caught in the Atlantic ocean.

Mr. BENNETT. When is it to be applied to chickens to be brought from the maritime provinces to Ontario, and what department would look after that ?

Mr. FIELDING. This applies to Digby chickens.

Mr. BENNETT. No, no, we want an explanation of this. This is going too far altogether. Who is to be the officer who is to distribute these advantages ? Why should it not apply to the shipper of fish on Georgian Bay, Lake Huron, Lake Erie or any other ? Surely we have the same rights to have our fishermen paid a bonus for shipping their fish as the people of the maritime provinces have.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The fishermen of Georgian bay will come in, just the same as others. This is for the better encouragement and transportation of fresh fish. The Georgian bay fishermen who want to send their fish to Toronto and Montreal will reap the benefit of this.

Mr. BENNETT. And upon whose recommendation ? The local member ? Who is to select the lucky parties to have a piece of this graft ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The officers of the department.

Mr. BENNETT. Well, let me call the attention of the hon. gentleman to the fact that in the whole province of Ontario he has only two fishery inspectors, Mr. O. B. Shepherd, of Toronto, and Mr. Jeremiah Hurley, of Belleville. Are they to stand in high judgment and say that Tom. Smith shall have so much, and Jim Brown so much, and the rest nothing ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I understand that an officer of the department will make a report in the first place.

Mr. BENNETT. Who is in prospect as the occupant of this new office ? Is he a member of parliament ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. He will be one of the present staff at headquarters.

Mr. HAGGART. What possible object can the minister have in introducing such a vote as this ? This is a new doctrine indeed—that we are to give the producers in a certain industry money for the purpose of carrying their goods to market. If it were for providing transportation facilities or anything of that kind, I could understand it. But it seems most monstruous to call for this vote without defining it or explaining it to the House.

Mr. LOGGIE. May I be permitted to say a word ? I think one reason why this encouragement is proposed, is that at the present time, the express rates from Boston, Portland and New York to Montreal and Toronto are very much less than from the maritime provinces ; and, as the product is perishable and must be carried by express, our fish cannot be placed on the Ontario market in competition with fish from Boston and New York.

Mr. HAGGART. Oh, dear ! that is worse still.

Mr. LOGGIE. As I understand it, the money will probably be used under some arrangement with the express companies, so that the fish from the east can be placed on the markets of Ontario and Quebec, which cannot be done at the present time.

Mr. BENNETT. But we have fish in Ontario too.

Mr. LOGGIE. But you want variety. You have not the salt sea salmon we have been talking about, or the fresh lobster. If you want these and other salt water fish at reasonable prices, and brought from the Nova Scotia coast instead of from the Maine coast, this will help to do it. As a matter of fact, the express rates from Halifax to Toronto are excessive—they represent figures 2 cents per pound. It is impossible to lay the goods down in any other way than by express. If this project can be carried into effect it will benefit the whole Dominion, especially the eastern portion. But both consumers and producers will be benefited.

Mr. HAGGART. Does the hon. gentleman (Mr. Loggie) express the same idea the minister has with regard to this matter? —that because fish can be sent cheaper from American ports than Canadian, the producers must be compensated by paying part of the transportation rates to get the goods into the market ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The object is, as I have stated, to assist in the better transportation and conservation of fish. The money will be used, I understand, to encourage the fishing industry on the Great Lakes, as well as on the Fraser and elsewhere, by establishing cold storage. The object is to place fish on the market at as low a rate and in as good condition as possible. I cannot say that I followed every thing that my hon. friend (Mr. Loggie) said, so I cannot say whether he expressed the views of the department or not. But this movement is exactly along the line of the votes taken by the Agricultural Department to encourage cold storage.

Mr. HAGGART. But why does not the minister confine his vote to that—to cold storage for fish ? But that is not at all what he is asking for.

Mr. FOSTER. You are surely not going to pay freight rates.

Mr. SPROULE. As I understand it, the previous votes for cold storage covered cold storage in the transportation and handling of fish.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Only bait I think.

Mr. SPROULE. No, fish and fish bait. The question was asked, whether provision was made for cold storage, and for transportation in cold storage.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. No, it was for bait only.

Mr. SPROULE. I can hardly believe that my memory is so much at fault. I certainly thought that the same provision had been made for fish as for any other perishable products.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Shall the item pass ?

Mr. HAGGART. No ; no such item can carry until it is more clearly explained.

Mr. BENNETT. The Georgian Bay fishermen must at least get a share of this. I live in a town into which large quantities of fish are brought. The fishermen have ice houses in which they store ice in the winter for use in the boxes in which they pack the fish for shipment. Is this allowance to be made on a basis of so much per pound, or how ? And how will this officer who is to manage this business be everywhere at once ? He will have to be a bird. The hon. minister must remember also that some of his political friends like Mr. Markey, and Mr. McNee, of Windsor, have complete control of certain fishing privileges. Are they to have part of this on account of the fish they ship? Why, look at the frauds that may be perpetrated on the department under this system. There may not be fish in these boxes at all ; they may fill them with stone or iron, for the official cannot be there to inspect them all. This is the most fearful and wonderful vote that I ever heard of.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I can only say that the plan has not yet been outlined. A report will be prepared, and on that the whole question will be matured, and the plan of campaign will be put into effect the coming year. The object is, as I have said, simply to encourage fishermen to send their fish into the Canadian market. I think it is a fact that the market to-day in Montreal is largely controlled from the United States. In the case of British Columbia halibut, for instance, it goes down to Boston free of duty, and comes back and is sold in Ottawa after paying the Canadian customs. We would prefer, if we can, to have Canadian fish brought direct from the place where they are caught to the place where they are consumed. I do not think that the scheme can be conducted along the lines suggested by the hon. gentleman. There is no graft in it, there is no possibility of dividing the money improperly. I think when the report is made the hon. gentleman will find next year that the money has been properly expended.

Mr. FOSTER. The minister asks us to vote money and he cannot explain any plan upon which it is to be expended. He only says: Give us the money and we will sometime, in the course of the year, mature some plan to spend it.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I said as to the details of the expenditure.

Mr. FOSTER. That is not information upon which we can vote money in this House. I am not blaming the acting minister, he is not the father of the estimate, and it is unfair to him, in a sense, that he has to stand sponsor for it. But as to how it is to be done, we are entirely at sea. We do not give appropriations of money in this House for things in the air. We want to know, not only the principle upon which the money is to be expended, but the plan. There is a diversity of opinion. One gentleman says he thinks it is to pay for freight rates, so that a man who is on the favoured base line can get the government to help him in paying his freight out of the public purse. I do not think that can be so, I do not believe any Canadian government would attempt to get an appropriation from us to apply it to a certain class to aid them to send their goods to market. If you do that for fishermen, why not for the raisers of wheat, for the manufacturers of any other article ? Now what you can do is to use the money towards improving transportation in the way of cold storage, for instance, that is, an experiment to help transportation companies in certain lines to install a cold storage plant, so that the companies will take these products at a certain rate of freight and put them on the market.

Mr. FIELDING. I think the only room for criticism of this vote is along the line of what has just been said by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster). The minister who asked for this vote is not able to be here to give explanations, but I do not think that is a reason why the vote should not be given. If the object is a good one, and if the vote is not too large, let the minister have it, and it is for him to work out the details in a satisfactory manner. Several things the hon. gentleman suggests as being unreasonable might be reasonable. For instance, I do not think it unreasonable to make arrangements with express companies whereby they would reduce rates. We have done that in the case of rates for transportation by ocean steamers. I think the government have paid for fitting up cold storage arrangements on board ships in order that the owners might be able to offer a lower rate. The hon. gentleman says :

Why not do this for the farmer's wheat? Well, it is only a few years ago since we made a special arrangement whereby, in consideration of certain moneys, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company agreed to reduce its rates on all the wheat of the Northwest, and on the principal articles of goods going in. That was a concession in rates purchased directly by the money of Canada. I think also in the development of our agricultural resources in other directions, in the butter and cheese industry, it will be found that arrangements have been made to put cold storage cars on the railways, and I think sometimes we have paid part of the freight on the railway.

Mr. FOSTER. No.

Mr. FIELDING. That is my impression. I think in one of these arrangements it was provided that wherever a car was not full we paid for a full car, even though we only had half a one. You have to meet the varying industries of Canada by varying methods. In the one case we had the rates affected in the way I have described; in the case of butter and cheese you did it in another way. In the case of this industry, with our long line of territory, transportation is difficult, and the object is to get the white fish of the lakes and bring them down to the lower provinces, if necessary, to help us in our great need; and also to bring the salt water fish of the ocean west for the help of hon. gentlemen in Ontario and further west. That is a legitimate object. We have a vast market for fish in middle Canada which is being supplied by the United States, and it is a perfectly legitimate thing that we should devise ways and means whereby that American fish shall be displaced by fish coming from the Atlantic provinces. Surely the hon. gentleman will sympathize with that object. I do not think the methods which have occurred to him as being objectionable will, on reflection, seem to be half so objectionable. I admit that the absence of a detailed scheme is open to some criticism, and in that view the hon. gentleman's observations are reasonable. But I would ask him, I know he must have sympathy with the object of this vote, to give the minister that vote and trust him to work out the details which will accomplish the good purpose.

Mr. FOSTER. I would have no objection to going a good way if we could get an assurance from the minister that this money is not intended to pay freight rates, but that it is to help the establishment of cold storage facilities on these transportation lines by way of experiment. That is quite a different thing and on a very different principle. We have gone that far with reference to agricultural products on the steamers, though it has been done at a heavy expense. But we have never gone so far, and I hope we never will, as to pay out of the appropriations of this country part of a fisherman's freight from the place where he catches his fish to the market. Surely we are not going that far. If the minister will say that this is an experimental plan for inducing better transportation with cold storage facilities on these lines in regard to that special trade in fish I sympathize with the idea. That would make it a little different, but for the department to come down here and ask for a lump sum wihout any definite plan to put before the members is a breach of the privileges of the minister. It grows out of the idea that we are 'it,' and that all we need is simply to put our wishes in gross block form before the House and they must fall in with them whether we have any plan or not. The minister or the department must know, in fact I do not see how the Minister of Finance can help but know, that we must have something definite before us. These matters go through council because the minister must bring his estimates before council and explain every one of them unless things are done in a different manner from what they used to be, and I do not think they are. I do not think my hon. friend would act as Minister of Finance and allow estimates to be put through without a proper explanation, so that the minister must have placed his plan before his colleagues before they granted him power to come to this House and ask for an appropriation. The department is the repository of this plan and of the information concerning it. Surely the department must have this information. What has been the motive power in the department? What have they worked up to? The only other explanation of it is that the minister who has the patronage to dispense wants to do something which will make a name for himself amongst the fisher folk.

Mr. FIELDING. The hon. gentleman says if this vote was for the establishment of a cold storage system he would have no objection. I have no doubt that it is for cold storage, but the minister would not like to be limited to the expenditure of it only for cold storage. If the minister desires to expend this in any other way to serve a good end I do not think we should tie his hands. The hon. gentleman thinks it would be unreasonable if we should apply this to the payment of freight, but suppose the minister could arrange with an express company for and in consideration of part of this vote that they would reduce their freight rates and make it possible to carry fish at a lower rate would the hon. gentleman object to that?

Mr. FOSTER. I would oppose that just as long as I had the power of opposition. What would it mean? You simply say to a carrier: We will pay you so much of the freight. You are making no experiment there. You are simply hiring an express or transportation company and when you have paid them their wage for a year they have done their duty and you are no farther ahead than before. But if you could demonstrate that if they had proper storage facilities along these transportation routes a trade could be developed which would make it to the benefit of the carrier to go on with it after it has been experimented upon just as we did with cold storage on the Atlantic in reference to agricultural products some good would be accomplished. You are demonstrating to the carrier that if he should do so and so a trade could be developed and that it would make it profitable to him to carry these goods thereafter. But in the other case you simply hire him to carry for a certain time. After he has done that he has done his work, the contract is finished and we have simply to go on and hire him again. So it will be a continuous appropriation.

Mr. SINCLAIR. I am in full sympathy with this vote and I think that very important results can be worked out from it. I do not know what the idea of the department is, but I have heard certain proposals that if carried out might be very useful. For example, I understand there has been a system adopted by the Department of Agricultural by which small shipments of goods are made possible by the government guaranteeing that a cold storage car will, on arrival at Montreal or Toronto or wherever it is bound, have a certain proportion of a load. Then there are a great many small shipments which might be made but at the present time a fish merchant can only send a carload. A carload, I understand, is about twenty tons. It is only a large dealer who can buy ten or twenty tons of fish, and that can be shipped only at very low rates, that is at rates with which we can compete with Gloucester. But suppose you want to send four or five tons of fish from the coast of Nova Scotia to Montreal or some point in the west, you cannot do it at the prevailing rates and if this appropriation is made that trade might be assisted. It would increase the trade enormously if we could send small shipments at a reasonable rate. Small shipments cost $1.50 for every 100 pounds, and you must remember also that there is a large quantity of weight in the boxes and ice. I do not know what the proportion is, but it is a very large proportion. There is no other way at present to send fish in small lots except by express, and as the rates now are nobody can carry on business at all and compete with Gloucester in New England. Is there any objection to a system somewhat like this: The Intercolonial Railway will put a train on between Mulgrave or Halifax and Montreal and take fish in small lots and if it turns out that the shipment is less than ten tons—ten tons may pay a car to run to Montreal, but seven or nine tons would not—would it not be a proper proposal that the government should say to the railway company: We will pay the difference between the quantity we get and the quantity we require in order to make the venture pay? That, I understand, is somewhat like the system they are carrying out in regard to agricultural products in certain parts of Canada. That is one of the proposals that has been made to the minister. I do not know what his proposal is. I have also heard that it has been proposed that small refrigerator cars would be provided and that these refrigerator cars would be put inside the other cars. They could be returned to the fishermen filled up with small lots of fish, one ton, two tons, or half a ton, and they would not require to have a large refrigerator car at all because the small refrigerator car on wheels could be left on the wharf and pushed inside the large one. That is a scheme which the railway people are attempting to work out, but whether it will succeed or not I do not know. I do not think it would be possible for any person to say just what system should be adopted by the department, but something should be done to enable the fish merchants to send forward small shipments at better rates than the express rates which are now maintained by the different companies.

Mr. SPROULE. My objection to this is that we are putting in a separate item for cold storage whereas we have already voted an amount for that purpose. The report of the Minister of Agriculture shows how that vote was used heretofore.

Shippers were charged 'the current less than carload' rates, without extra charge for icing.

The government paid for the icing. That is part of the cold storage system.

This service was in operation from May 18 to October 15. The department guaranteed two-thirds of the earnings of a minimum car (20,000 pounds) plus $4 a car for icing. When the earnings exceeded the guarantee, there was no charge against the department. If the traffic on any route exceeded one carload, the whole service on that route was held to be self-sustaining, and no claim could be made on the department, even if the earnings of the extra cars did not reach the amount of the guarantee. The arrangement did not apply to special cars ordered for taking a full carload from a single point.

If this policy had been carried out, there would seem to be no reason for this special item.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Fish do not come under agriculture.

Mr. SPROULE. But it was cold storage for perishable food products, and fish is a perishable food product.

Mr. HAGGART. As I understand, they did not pay any portion of the freight, but they paid for the icing just as if it was a full car.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Is it moved to strike it out?

Some hon. MEMBERS. Strike it out.

Mr. FIELDING. Oh, no.

Mr. HAGGART. Place it in the same category as butter, cheese or anything else.

Mr. FIELDING. That is all it is intended to do.

Mr. HAGGART. If we have an assurance of that from the minister, we have no objection to the vote.

Mr. FIELDING. I do not want to be tied to any limitation, but the general principle is to do for the fishing industry what we have done for agricultural products for years. The object is not only to demonstrate what the carriers can do, but to demonstrate to the consumers that there is a valuable fish supply with which they are not now acquainted.

Mr. FOSTER. To put it on the same ground?

Mr. FIELDING. As nearly as may be.

Mr. HAGGART. Then there is no objection to the vote.

Fishery commissions, $15,000.

Mr. HAGGART. Does that include the commission composed of Professor Prince, Mr. Birnie and Mr. Noble?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Yes; that was principally for fishery commissions to be held in Ontario, in the Georgian bay.

Mr. BENNETT. How much money has been expended already on behalf of the Prince Commission up to date, and when is it expected they will complete their labours?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The British Columbia commissioners will be occupied until January or February next. The Georgian bay commission has had its scope extended by order in council of August 4, 1906, and has over twenty sittings along Lake Erie and the connecting water between Lake Erie and Lake Huron still to be held. It is expected that $15,000 will still be expended on the two commissions.

Mr. BENNETT. Is it expected that the $15,000 will be expended on this commission composed of Professor Prince, Mr. Birnie and Mr. Noble? How much is it expected will be still spent on these three gentlemen, and what amount has already been expended for them?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Mr. Birnie's account has not yet been adjusted; there has been no final payment.

Mr. BENNETT. How much has been paid on account of this commission composed of Professor Prince, Mr. Birnie and Mr. Noble, and how much more is it expected will be paid to them?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. We have not the figures here. We estimate that $15,000 will complete both the Georgian bay and the British Columbia commission, of which the British Columbia commission must have a considerable amount.

Mr. BENNETT. I want to enter my protest against a dollar being paid to Mr. Noble or Mr. Birnie. This is a pure sample of Ontario graft that the department has had pushed upon it. Who are these men? I have not a word to say against Professor Prince, who has a reputation from one end of this country to the other as an expert, and it was very proper to have him act. I wish to know if this is the Mr. Noble who was engaged in a very celebrated dispute with the department a few years ago for illegal fishing?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The name of the gentleman is J. J. Noble.

Mr. BENNETT. The minister has his officers who were in the department when the investigation occurred, and I would request him to ask them if this is the same Noble who figured in the celebrated dispute with the Marine Department a few years ago.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. My officers cannot say.

Mr. BENNETT. I think it shows a great deal of ignorance on the part of the gentleman's officers, because the celebrated case of the Nobles for illegal fishing was discussed in this House again and again.

Mr. FOSTER. And they are perfectly well known to the department.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Assuming that it is, what about it?

Mr. BENNETT. Assuming that it is, I say that the presence on this commission of one of these men, who was paid large sums by this country is a most reprehensible thing, and in the locality where they are known it will be condemned strongly not only by Conservatives, but by Liberals as well. With reference to the other gentlemen on the commmission, Mr. Birnie, he also belongs to the town of Collingwood, and I want nothing better than the report of the hon. gentleman's own department in the Auditor General's Report, where the deputy minister, under date of December 23, 1906, reports as follows:

In reply to your letter of the 21st instant on the matter of the accounts of the British Columbia and Georgian Bay Fishery Commission, I find that the chairman, Professor Prince, had difficulty in obtaining detailed accounts of disbursements, owing to the fact that the commissioners claim that they were to be paid a per diem allowance for disbursements, in addition to the per diem honorarium for their services.

What Mr. Birnie may know about fishing will certainly puzzle people who know him. That he is a political hanger-on to hon. gentlemen opposite everybody knows. He is a defeated candidate for the local assembly, and very much defeated too. I have looked over these accounts which I had brought down to the Public Accounts Committee, and the House can judge of them from a sample. Here is a bill, some of the details of which Professor Prince could not get from Mr. Birnie, and among the charges are these: 'Marion Douglas, or order, a cheque for a typewriter, $40.' This is a cheque issued by Mr. Birnie to pay for a typewriting machine, and I hope that the department will see that is returned. I find that a large amount is being paid at the rate of $3 per day to a Miss Perdue for acting as stenographer. If my information is correct, this Miss Perdue is in the employ of Mr. Birnie, and I suppose he has been locking up his office while he has been away, because any man who can afford to perambulate around the country for $7 a day cannot have a very large practice. How much more does the minister expect will be paid to Messrs. Birnie and Noble on this account?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. It is impossible to say. The total vote is only $15,000, and this is divided between British Columbia and the Georgian bay.

Mr. BENNETT. How is it to be divided?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The estimate of $15,000 was made by Professor Prince, and I am advised that the larger half of that is for British Columbia. How much Mr. Birnie will obtain out of this if he gets only $7 or $10 a day I do not know. It seems to me that the remuneration for these commissioners is very small indeed. I do not happen to know Mr. Birnie. Evidently my hon. friend does, and it is rather against him than against the commission that my hon. friend directs his criticism.

Mr. BENNETT. It is against the minister, who, I regret to say, is absent, for appointing this Mr. Birnie on the commission. I find something in yesterday's paper with reference to Mr. Birnie, and I am sorry that the Minister of Justice is not present. This Mr. Birnie is on the list of applicants for a county judgeship in the province of Ontario, this $7-a-day lawyer is expected to be appointed a judge; and yet people are sometimes complained of when they discuss the character of the judiciary of that province. In yesterday's paper occurs an account of a most astounding case in Owen Sound. An imbecile child of 13 years of age was seduced, and the parents of the child had her and the man who seduced her before this Mr. Birnie. The seducer paid $800 in November to Mr. Birnie to settle the case, and according to the newspaper report Mr. Birnie hands over $200 to the doctor who had attended the child—and it is fair to the doctor to say that this was partly for other services. Mr. Birnie therefore retained $600 of this money. I will read what the paper says:

> Mr. Birnie, in explanation of his retention of the money, stated that he heard rumours that the Crown was about to take the matter up, and thought it best not to pay over the money to the parents.

He seems to have that faculty of retaining money which Professor Prince complains of. I am sorry that there are none of the Ontario ministers here, because this is a fair sample of the class of men whom this government is dealing with in the province of Ontario, particularly in the neighbourhood of the Georgian bay and Lake Huron, I care not what department it is. Men appointed to do dredging really farm it out to somebody else, and then cheerfully certify that the work has been done, though they have never been near it. This Mr. Birnie, I assume, will have another bill next year for a stenographer at $3 a day. I happen to know this so-called stenographer who attended on this famous commission, which is simply the laughing stock of people up there, so much so that Professor Prince does not attend its meetings. I ask the minister has Professor Prince attended the meetings of this commission held at the different points on the Georgian bay?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised that he attended some of the meetings, and he spent considerable time in British Columbia attending meetings of the Fishery Commission there.

Mr. BENNETT. I do not ask about British Columbia. I ask about the Georgian bay.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I expanded the answer by saying that he had attended meetings in British Columbia, which prevented him from attending some of the meetings on the Georgian bay.

Mr. BENNETT. I think the same will turn out to be very few. I regret that the minister of the department is not here, because the acting minister had nothing to do with this matter and knows nothing about it. Mr. Noble may know something about the fish business, but so far as Mr. Birnie is concerned, I can see no reason why he was appointed on that commission except as a matter of political graft. I ask the minister on whose recommendation Mr. Birnie was appointed on this commission?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I cannot tell, and my officers cannot tell.

Mr. BENNETT. Perhaps the minister will let this vote stand over until he can secure some information for the House.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. What information ?

Mr. BENNETT. I would like to know in the first place how many meetings of this commission on the Georgian bay Professor Prince has attended, how many Messrs. Birnie and Noble have attended, and whether it is a fact that a stenographer accompanies them at their meetings.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Professor Prince is not at present in the city, and I do not know that by letting the vote stand over I can obtain for my hon. friend more information than I have given. A vote was necessary to wind up both these commissions. I know nothing about Birnie, but the minister who appointed him will take the full responsibility. I am advised however by the officers of the department present that instructions were given by the minister before he left that the account of Mr. Birnie is not to be settled until he returns.

Mr. BENNETT. Then the minister suspects that there is something rotten in Denmark. Therefore the information vouchsafed me must be pretty nearly correct. There was an investigation into the Collingwood dry dock, and the name of Birnie figures there too, and very considerably, for dollars and cents. The acting minister had better tell the House that he will give this commission orders to halt. He will find upon inquiry that Professor Prince has simply left the commission alone. I do not think that Mr. Noble is attending any of the meetings. He is a practical fisherman. The whole thing is a farce and is so considered in Georgian bay. If the minister would direct that the commission should stand still until the minister returns, not only will he stop any further payment but all the proceedings of the committee. I have done my duty and it is up to the minister to do likewise. Does he intend that Mr. Birnie and Mr. Noble are to travel to British Columbia.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. No, they do not travel outside of Ontario ; British Columbia has its own local commission. The work is completed as far as British Columbia is concerned. Mr. Prince leaves for there in a few days, and in a few weeks the work of the British Columbia commission will be concluded altogether.

Mr. BENNETT. As far as Mr. Birnie is concerned, the payment of his bills will be brought to a conclusion as rapidly as possible. I think that the minister had better in the meantime order this commission to stand still and incur no other expenses. Will he promise the House that ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised that there will be nothing done until Professor Prince returns from the west after concluding the work of the British Columbia Commission.

Mr. BENNETT. And also that nothing will be done until the return of the Minister of Marine by the Georgian Bay Commission.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I would not undertake to make any such promise. If Mr. Prince says it is important that the work of the Georgian Bay Commission should be completed, I shall instruct him to go on and complete it and not wait the return of the minister.

Mr. BENNETT. I would ask the leader of the House if he will call the attention of the Minister of Justice to this item which is going the rounds of the papers in reference to the case I have referred to, so that when it comes before the minister or the department it may be weighed on its merits.

Mr. FIELDING. I promise that.

Further amount required for repairs to government steamers and ice-breakers, $72,250.

Mr. FOSTER. What amount has been already voted ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The details of this vote are as follows. The 'Stanley' for repairs, $30,000 ; the 'Borden,' $3,500; the 'Montcalm,' $13,000 ; the 'Lady Laurier,' $13,000; the 'Druid,' $33,000; the charter of the 'King Edward,' $7,250.

Mr. SPROULE. Does the government intend providing a boat to keep up navigation a little longer on Lake Superior ? Most of the winter Lake Superior is open except around the shores, and navigation could be continued a month longer if there was a suitable ice breaker to keep the harbours open.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Yes, a sum was put in the estimates of $25,000 or $30,000 to provide for a boat to keep the harbours open on Lake Superior.

Further amount requred for the construction of a patrol boat for the Northwest Mounted Police in Hudson bay, $32,000.

Mr. FOSTER. Is this a new boat ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The supplementary estimates for 1905-6 provided $40,000 for the construction of this steamer. Further supplementaries provided a fresh sum of $15,000, making a total of $55,000. She cost in all $87,000 for construction, and the balance $32,000 is required to pay the ship yard at Sorel the balance due on this vessel.

To provide for a settlement of the Quebec Coal Company's claim overlapping the wharf at Quebec, $1,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What do you mean by overlapping the wharf ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The company paid claimed damages on account of the encroachments by the Dominion steamers on their wharf. They claimed $2,700 about the 13th of November, 1904. There was a counter claim made by the Marine Department for the use of their wharf by the company's vessels. The minister thought that $1,000 was a reasonable sum to offer in full settlement and the company accepted.

Lighthouse and coast service—maintenance and repairs to lighthouses—further amount required to pay for the services of expert and staff reorganizing the system of bookkeeping to assimilate with all the branches of the department throughout the Dominion, $25,000.

Mr. FOSTER. What was the preceding vote ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The deputy minister tells me there is no other vote.

Mr. FOSTER. It says 'further amount.'

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am still advised that there is no other amount for this purpose.

Mr. FOSTER. Then, this is a new vote. What is proposed to do with the money ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. To pay experts to examine into the system of bookkeeping and reorganize the whole system and assimilate with all the branches of the department throughout the Dominion.

Mr. FOSTER. I think we had better know what that means. Here is a department, established since confederation, supposed to have been well established and kept up to date. Moreover, we have in the civil service here in Ottawa expert men in bookkeeping and finance. The Department of Finance and the Auditor General's Department are both expert departments in matters of bookkeeping, familiar with the work of auditing the accounts of all the departments and consequently able to give advice as to the best uniform system. And here is a vote to pay somebody $25,000 to write out a plan of bookkeeping for the Marine Department. It seems to me absurd. What is proposed to be done?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I cannot give my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) any more information than is contained in this brief memorandum, other than that I understand the whole system of bookkeeping, not only of the department, but throughout all the agencies connected with the department is to be completely reorganized and put on a different basis altogether, and this sum is to pay for the expert and staff required to make that change. It involves a large amount of work.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN.

Mr. FOSTER. This is not for books, but simply to pay the expert and staff for organizing the new system.

Mr. FIELDING. The officers of neither the Finance Department nor the Department of the Auditor General could give the necessary time to travel over the Dominion to make the inspection necessary for the arranging of this new system. The minister contemplates having experts go through the bookkeeping of the Marine and Fisheries Department throughout the Dominion. Whether the sum is a reasonable one or not is another question. I simply wanted to show that the work could not be done by officers of the Auditor General's Department.

Mr. FOSTER. It seems to me that a level headed man in either the Finance or Audit Department could, without a great deal of expenditure of time and trouble, give an idea of the best system to adopt. That does not involve expense. Why should this travelling all over the Dominion be necessary. This expert is not to audit the accounts. He simply wants to know the needs of the case, and these he could learn by inspecting one outside office, for the same laws and regulations govern one as govern the others; there is the same system of receipts, payments, vouchers and everything of that kind for all. With this knowledge, an officer of the Auditor General's Department or the Finance Department could devise some system of bookkeeping. And, as to travelling, why $25,000 would pay for three or four men circumnavigating the globe.

Mr. FIELDING. Not if they were chartered accountants—experts. If the Minister of Marine and Fisheries found it necessary to employ two or three such men in different parts of the Dominion, $25,000 would soon be eaten up.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the reason for it all ?

Mr. FIELDING. In view of the criticism levelled at the department, I must say I sympathize with the minister in his desire to have a thorough renovation of his bookkeeping arrangement.

Mr. FOSTER. So do I.

Mr. FIELDING. And I would give the minister a free hand in carrying that out. If it means calling in expert accountants from outside the department and sending them to the different offices of the department throughout the Dominion, the results will certainly be of service to the country. While I am not prepared to say that $25,000 is the proper sum for this work, yet, as the minister has put in that estimate, I would rather give the money than let him feel that he is restricted in carrying out a purpose, which, I am sure, will appeal to the sympathy of the House.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the plan. Who is to be employed ?

Mr. FIELDING. I take it for granted that they are not going to displace anybody but will get expert outside help. It is occasionally necessary to go outside for expert assistance in this way.

Mr. SPROULE. Surely there is sufficient intelligence and knowledge of bookkeeping amongst the fourteen or fifteen hundred civil servants in Ottawa to give advice for the establishment of a system of accounts suitable for keeping charge of the lighthouse supplies and that kind of thing. But when you have a system that will suit the central office, you have the system complete. Any ordinarily intelligent man who has charge of an outside office for the department could learn from instructions which might accompany the books just how the system is to work. Or. if it is absolutely necessary, you could send a man out to each of the offices to instruct the officer in charge in the use of the system. It seems to me that that is all the outlay you need. It is a mystery to me why you need $25,000 for any such purpose as this. Such an item as this must leave the impression in the public mind that there are enormous sums to be paid to some person or persons who will give very little return for the money.

Mr. FOSTER. You are not going to invent a new system of bookkeeping. The principles of bookkeeping are well established, and expert accountants know exactly what they are. The variations of bookkeeping are simply in the forms in which the accounts shall be kept. It is in Ottawa that the system would have to be prepared.

Mr. FIELDING. To some extent.

Mr. FOSTER. He would have to know the kind of business that comes and goes between this office and the offices outside. Here is the fountain head, and he is not going to invent a system of bookkeeping in order to provide uniformity. It is simply a matter of preparing forms and instructing agents as to the use of these forms. It is done in ninety cases out of a hundred without any travelling at all. Surely $25,000 is too much for that.

At six o'clock, committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. DANIEL. At six o'clock the hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) was asking for the minister for some more information than he had vouchsafed to the House in regard to the mode in which this $25,000 is to be expended. We have had no information as to the number of experts to be employed or the length of their service. In fact, we have little information except what is printed in the supplementary estimates. Has the minister obtained additional information during the recess?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I have not obtained any further information since six o'clock. I understand that it was in the mind of the hon. minister to employ a chartered accountant, Mr. Falconer, of the city of Montreal, who has, I think, been employed in a similar way in some other departments and has done very effective work. What staff he would require I do not know. Very clearly he would have considerable work to do as he would have to go over the books of the department for the last year with a view to ascertaining the defects in the present system, and in all probability changing the entire system of keeping the accounts of the department at headquarters. He would also have to revise the system of account keeping of the various branches of the department throughout the Dominion and for that purpose would necessarily have to visit most of the important offices, either he or some assistant. It is expected that the work will take considerable time. I am not advised as to the remuneration to be paid to the chief of the staff, but these experienced accountants of this class, men who are capable of reorganizing the bookkeeping of a department, are necessary high-salaried officials. Whether this entire amount will be required I do not know. It is considered ample for the work, but the minister may have had in his mind some further details of which I am not advised. I think the amount is reasonable; the work is a good work. It is conceived altogether with the intention and desire to reform, if I may use that word, the bookkeeping in the department with the view of making it more accurate and more in the interest of the service. Further information than that I cannot give the House. I have no doubt the money is needed for the purpose and will be expended as judiciously and economically as possible.

Mr. DANIEL. If the system of bookkeeping employed in the Department of Marine and Fisheries is a bad system, I am sure the House and the country would be very glad to have that matter remedied as soon as possible. With so little information before us it appears to me that $25,000 is a very large amount to pay for the reorganization and changing of the system of bookkeeping in a single department.

Mr. BLAIN. I think the fact of the department requiring to place in the estimates $25,000 to reorganize the bookkeeping system of the department is in itself a condemnation of the government. While I agree that it is important we should have an up to date system in every department of the government and while I am in favour of having good men and paying them well in connection with the bookkeeping staff, &c., I am of the opinion that there must be in the department men who are better qualified to undertake this work if it is necessary, than any chartered accountant. Here are men who have been engaged in this work all their lives; have watched its progress and development; who are in touch with the work and have been for a great many years, and surely, I repeat, it is a condemnation of the government and a special condemnation of the department that they now ask parliament for $25,000 to reorganize the bookkeeping of a department which we have been told during the last few sessions was up to date in every respect. I enter my protest against what I regard as an extravagant expenditure. The explanation of the acting leader of the House simply meant that he was prepared to give all the money they required up to $25,000 so that the bookkeeping of the department should be put in a proper and modern condition. The country will be very much displeased and surprised to find that at this late date in the development of Canada, in a department that has been in operation for a great many years, such a step as this is necessary, that the outside branches are not in touch with the main department at Ottawa, for I notice that in this item it says it is to bring them in touch and to make a uniform system between the headquarters at Ottawa and the branches to be found in every part of Canada. I am sure the acting minister will not oppose this policy, coming as he does from a western province. He must be surprised himself to learn the condition of this department, to which we have given such large amounts of money to expend. I cannot quite understand how this amount passed the hon. the Finance Minister who is so watchful. I think he must be getting generous.

Mr. FIELDING. For all good purposes, yes.

Mr. BLAIN. I have listened to the hon. minister's defence of this department before. He was always ready and very capable in the defence of this department, telling us that it was an up-to-date department and worthy of a developing Canada. Now they come forward and tell us that they were all wrong, that the various branches of the department were out of touch with each other, and they ask for $25,000 to bring in an outside accountant in order to put things right. I suppose most of these wrongs must have taken place since this government came into power, because I do not remember having heard any complaints made about it before.

Mr. CROCKET. I would ask the minister if the government has at any previous time ever taken a similar appropriation for reorganizing the bookkeeping system of any other department of the government?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am informed that the chartered accountant whom it is proposed to employ in this work did similar work for one of the other departments. I am inclined to think it was the Department of Railways and Canals, and I am informed that he did very good work, and a work that effected a considerable saving.

Mr. CROCKET. What was the amount of that appropriation?

Mr. FIELDING. I do not think there was any special appropriation. If there was such a service it was probably paid out of the general vote.

Mr. CROCKET. How many employees are there in the accountant's branch of the Marine and Fisheries Department?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am told there are fifteen employees in that branch of the Marine and Fisheries.

Mr. CROCKET. It seems to me that this is an extraordinary appropriation for the government to ask from the House, $25,000 for the simple reorganization of the bookkeeping system of one department. I should think that some of the established modes of bookkeeping with which the accountants of the department are surely familiar ought to be sufficient for the proper administration of this department. If they are not and some special system, peculiarly adapted to the special needs of the department be required, then it occurs to me that the accountants of the department, who must be more familiar with the requirements in this regard than any body of outside expert chartered accountants could possibly make themselves, would be in a better position than any to advise any new system that it may be advisable to introduce. To me it is an astonishing amount to ask for such a purpose, and I wish to join in the protest that has already been made against the resolution.

Mr. SPROULE. I think the taxpayers of the country will be astonished when they learn that this great spending department has been carried on for so many years under what is now admitted to be an inefficient system of bookkeeping so inefficient that the government are asking for $25,000 to employ an expert accountant to set it right. What do you think a farmer would say if he were told about this? Here you propose to hire an expert accountant and pay him a sum more than a farmer could accumulate in his whole lifetime, perhaps twice over. I imagine you could pick out a hundred men in this country any one of whom would be able to map out a suitable system of bookkeeping for any branch of this government that would be both economical, convenient and accurate, and having mapped out a system you could send some man around to the various offices and instruct them how to use it. The whole thing could be done for $4,000 or $5,000. In fact the only part of the scheme that would be necessarily expensive is the travelling expenses of this instructor. The minister says that expert accountants are very dear. It would seem that they are if he has to pay such a price as this. A travelling instructor could give instructions to the other accountants concerning the system, and most people would consider him well paid if you gave him $5,000. Around these departments at Ottawa I always notice how easy it is to spend money after the House has voted it, but the representatives of the people are not doing their duty in voting money without knowing that it is required or in voting more than is necessary to do the work contemplated. There is another phase of the matter. It is the duty of the government to give this House that information. They must have had some information or estimate when they submitted that item to council. We have none of that before us—no estimate of how much would be needed for this or for that. We have simply a round sum of $25,000 to commence a system of bookkeeping.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Will my hon. friend permit me? The deputy minister has given me some further information with regard to this vote, which is to this effect, that the expert accountant, with five or six and sometimes eight assistants, has been at work in the Department of Marine and Fisheries for the last five or six months making a complete review, practically an audit, of all the transactions which have taken place in that department for the last fiscal year. They have been opening complete sets of books, and the work is of a very large and important character. This is information which I did not have before. This work has been recommended to be done by the Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, who has employed these expert accountants to do similar work in his department. It has been represented that the work done there has been, in the opinion of the minister and the deputy minister, of great practical utility and a vast improvement in the system of bookkeeping—a safer and better system in every respect. I am further informed that the Auditor General has approved of the work being done.

Mr. BLAIN. If this staff of accountants have been at work for several months, I have no doubt the minister can tell us how much money has been expended for that purpose and whether the department undertook this work without first communicating it to parliament at the last session.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I have been advised that there has been about $12,000 already expended.

Mr. BLAIN. Was there any appropriation for this before ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I think not. The money thus far paid has been charged to the ship channel vote, most of the work being done at Sorel and applying to that district.

Mr. BLAIN. I understand that they are New York experts.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. No, he is a Montreal chartered accountant.

Mr. BLAIN. I am informed that Mr. Merion, Mr. Hopewell and a Mr. Ellis are all engaged in one of the departments at the present time, or were engaged ; one of them has gone back to New York. I think some member of the government should tell us where these gentlemen are at work. I understand that they are at work in the Eastern or Western Block, and have been for several months, and that they have a boarding house somewhere in the city.

Mr. FIELDING. I will inquire, and give my hon. friend the information at a later stage. I have no recollection of it, though it is quite possible.

Mr. BLAIN. Are we to understand, then, that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries took an appropriation that was voted last session for a ship channel and applied it to placing in the department a brand new set of officials to reorganize the bookkeeping system ? That is the policy we have been complaining of ; the government asked parliament for an appropriation for a specific purpose, and we find that they have taken that money and applied it to another purpose altogether.

Mr. FIELDING. The Auditor General would not allow that.

Mr. BLAIN. I am only stating what the minister has stated—that no appropriation was made at the last session for this specific work.

Mr. FIELDING. Not specifically, but that would not prove that there was no appropriation. If the vote were big enough to stand it, it could be devoted to clerical service.

Mr. BLAIN. Will the hon. Minister of Finance not admit that it was rather misleading parliament to get an appropriation for a ship channel and take $12,000 out of it to be paid for expert accountants?

Mr. FIELDING. Not if the services related to that particular branch of public business.

Mr. BLAIN. Is it broad enough for that ?

Mr. FIELDING. I have not the words before me, and cannot say. It would be quite improper to take a portion of that vote for the Finance Department or the Interior Department, but I think it would be quite legitimate to take a portion of it for the bookkeeping in connection with the ship channel.

Mr. BLAIN. Are we to understand that $25,000 have already been expended ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Yes, I understand so.

Mr. BLAIN. At the beginning of the discussion we were told that no person had been employed.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. When that item was introduced that was my impression. I did not know that the work was going on.

Mr. BLAIN. I am quite sure the acting minister has given the committee all the information in his possession, but I do not understand that any department has the right to take this large amount of money and appropriate it for a specific purpose without taking parliament into its confidence. I rather think this will be a note of warning to the acting minister to be a little careful of the money he is asking parliament to vote.

Mr. DANIEL. As this amount has been already expended by the 31st of March past, I think the minister ought to be able to tell us how it has been expended. It would allay any feelings of surprise or dissent if he would tell us how this $25,000 has been expended and to whom it has been paid.

Mr. LENNOX. Also particulars of the expenditure before the $25,000. The item reads 'further amount required to pay for the services of expert and staff reorganizing the system of bookkeeping to assimilate with all the branches of the department throughout the Dominion.' It is quite evident, therefore, that something has been expended before the $25,000. We ought to have the particulars of both. I understood the present leader of the House (Mr. Fielding) to say that money to the extent of $5,000 or $6,000 for clerical expenses might be paid out of this vote.

Mr. FIELDING. Out of any general vote.

Mr. LENNOX. I do not think the committee would understand that an item of a new character would be paid out of money voted for clerical assistance. But the main thing is that we should have the particulars of this $25,000 and the previous expenditure.

Mr. FIELDING. That is right.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. A statement of the amount already paid can be brought down Monday and also an outline of the proposed payment of $25,000.

Mr. FIELDING.

Mr. DANIEL. But I understand that has already been expended.

Mr. FIELDING. Incurred but not expended. It cannot have been paid or a vote would not be required.

Mr. DANIEL. It is due.

Mr. FIELDING. Probably.

Mr. DANIEL. Will the minister say to whom it is due ?

Mr. FIELDING. I think that statement should be given.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood the Minister of Finance to say that money voted for a ship channel could be used for civil government.

Mr. FIELDING. I did not say civil government. I said that any general vote might be charged a reasonable sum for clerical services in connection with it.

Mr. SPROULE. But this item is certainly misleading. It is headed for maintenance and repairs to lighthouses, and we are asked to vote $25,000 for that purpose. But the money is expended on something that has nothing to do with lighthouses. It is expended on reorganizing a system of bookkeeping. The proper heading for that expenditure would be for civil government and not lighthouse and coast service. Then we would know what we were voting the money for. The whole system is wrong. I fail to see how money voted by parliament for one purpose can be expended on another.

Mr. FIELDING. We all agree to that.

Mr. SPROULE. Is not that what you are doing here ? Would you not be doing that if you took money voted for the ship channel and used it for the purpose of employing expert accountants to go over and audit the accounts or devise a new system of bookkeeping ? I am surprised that the Auditor General allowed this to pass. There is another feature to this. Why should the government expend so much money without having had a dollar of it voted ? After the money is spent, they ask parliament to vote the expenditure. The minister says that five or six of these men have been employed five or six months in the department steadily. Why were they employed that length of time ? Was there anything rotten or dishonest, or was the bookkeeping such as made it possible for money to be expended and no proper return given ? Was there anything found wrong in the departmental bookkeeping which induced the government to review it for the last five or six years ? What was it that necessitated the employment of expert accountants to go over and practically audit the books for several years past ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Only last year.

Mr. SPROULE. I would not object to this if it was found that there was something wrong. But we ought to have a report on what was found before being asked to vote the money. We should be told what wages these men are getting, what work they are doing, how many are employed, and for how long. This is a large amount of money for a purpose that, as far as we can tell, should not require one-quarter of that expenditure. And even the $25,000 does not represent it all because $12,000 has been expended already. That makes an expenditure of $37,000 to adopt a new system of bookkeeping and go over the books for the last year in one department. There must be something very bad which has not been disclosed which would justify this extraordinary expenditure and this misapplication of public funds. But, then to begin the expenditure of this money without the consent of parliament and without consulting parliament is not a proper way to carry on the business of the country. I think we ought to have the fullest information before we are asked to vote this item.

Mr. CROCKET. I understood the minister to state that the chief expert had five or six assistants. Are there among them any employees of the department?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. No. I may say that the request for information is quite a proper one. I will promise to bring down full and complete information as to those employed, the number and the names, the amount paid, how long they have been employed and when the work will be finished. I think the item might pass and this information will be given to the House.

Mr. SPROULE. Give us the report.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Yes, I will have the deputy minister prepare a full report.

Mr. SPROULE. Yes; and the item can stand until then.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Might as well pass the item.

Mr. SPROULE. No, no.

Mr. FIELDING. If the hon. member (Mr. Sproule) wishes the item to stand that is reasonable enough, but if the item is passed he will get the information just the same.

Mr. HENDERSON. I was not in the House when this discussion commenced. Possibly had I heard the whole discussion I might have felt called upon to differ with some hon. members on this side. Investigation which I have made leads me to believe that a thorough scrutiny of some of the public accounts of this country is desirable. From whatever cause, whether because of an insufficient staff—I mean insufficient in numbers, for I have no reason to suppose that the qualifications of the staff are not all that could be desired—or for some other reason, there is a good deal of what I call gross carelessness in our public records. It is a matter of regret that records concerning our finances that will be quoted fifty and one hundred years from now should show so many misstatements and blunders. I drew attention to this over a year ago, on which occasion an explanation was given of one matter by the Minister of Finance. I have not been able to verify his explanation. But let us take an illustration of what I mean. If you turn to the Public Accounts of 1904, page 41, you find the statement of the assets of Canada from July 1867, to June 30, 1904. Amongst others is a statement of suspense account of Nova Scotia which is given at $15,090.41. If you turn to the back part of the same volume you will find that the actual suspense account for Nova Scotia was $40,502.81. It would not matter so much if that mistake occurred in only one volume of our public accounts, but that error is carried down year after year. If you examine the public accounts of the following year, you will find that that item is continued $15,090.41, instead of, as it should be, $40,502.81. I have not examined the Public Accounts for 1906 but, I assume that the error is still continued. Once an error creeps in in that way, under our system of bookkeeping it goes on and becomes very confusing. Or turn to page 9 of the Public Accounts of 1904, the balance sheet of the Dominion of Canada for the year ending June 30, 1904. The account is balanced, the amount on either side being $390,066,047.72. But if you add up the items of the credit side you can not make the amount by $10,000. This may be a pure error, or it may be that it is covered by $10,000 of a cross entry; and, though I may not be able to place my hand on the cross entry at this moment, I am aware that there is another entry in which there is an error of $10,000. All these things make our accounts a little suspicious. A man who had time to go into them might find some very interesting things. I confess I have not had that time; and besides I have had such confidence in our Finance Department that, perhaps I did not deem it necessary to make this examination. But these matters, taken in connection with what we have heard here to-night—that it is actually necessaray to spend $37,000 to put the system of bookkeeping in the Marine and Fisheries Department on a proper basis—rather arouses suspicion. The money may be well spent. Perhaps, if we would spend $25,000 more to introduce a system that would prevent a repetition of that sort of thing, it might be wise expenditure. Let me refer to one other item—a case of pure clerical error, as I am aware, but still one that goes to show that our public accounts are not kept with the care that ought to be devoted to them by the accountant. This is a case where the account is balanced, the amount on the credit to make the two sides equal being in the neighbourhood of $36,727,274.80. Then, instead of that sum being brought down to commence the account for the next year, the sum of $18,226,-482.37 is brought down. That certainly indicates carelessness. I admit that before the public accounts for the succeeding year were made out that error was discovered and correted. But that the error was allowed to occur indicates lack of the care that ought to be exercised, more especially by the Finance Department. I might point out a score of discrepancies of this kind. The puzzle to me is how these accountants can make their books balance with a system of double entry where these errors occur. Yet they make them balance, and present them to the House as properly balanced accounts. Therefore, I am not going to object so much to this appropriation if it is an absolute necessity. I hope that when the minister has brought about this new system it will avoid the errors that appear in some of our public accounts. I hope that good may come out of this ; at the same time, I think it is regrettable that after so many years we are bound to confess that we have had a system that is altogether inaccurate. I should think that the men who have been in these departments for so many years ought to be and are in every respect as well qualified to keep accounts as any strange accountant, even though he may be a chartered accountant, because he must be an utter stranger to the general system.

Mr. FIELDING. Before six o'clock the hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) rather argued that this special service was not necessary because he was able to certify that the officials of the Finance Department were such expert accountants that no better officers were needed. My hon. friend (Mr. Henderson) has rather destroyed that argument by alleging that the officials of the Finance Department are no better than they ought to be. Let me say that most of what the hon. gentleman has said regarding the public accounts is new to me. I think about a year ago he called attention to one item which did seem to me to require some explanation. I found it was a typographical error ; and I sent an official of the department to call on my hon. friend and explain the matter to him.

Mr. HENDERSON. No, he did not call upon me.

Mr. FIELDING. My recollection is that I asked the official to explain to my hon. friend the particular point to which he had called attention. Now the officials of the Finance Department may not deserve the very high praise which the member for North Toronto gave them to-night when he said they were good enough to do this work; but on the other hand, I do not think they deserve the criticism of my hon. friend who has just spoken. No doubt a reasonable explanation could be made of each of these things to which he has called attention. We do not regard the Finance Department as perfect ; there are spots on the sun.

Mr. HENDERSON. I do not wish the Minister of Finance to think for a moment that I stated that I believed there was anything radically wrong.

Mr. FIELDING. He said it was a little suspicious.

Mr. HENDERSON. Yes, I confess that it is, and certainly they cannot explain away the substitution of the sum of $15,000 in that suspense account instead of $40,000.

Mr. FIELDING. You had better suspend judgment.

Mr. HENDERSON. I am perfectly willing to suspend judgment. What I intended to say was that it was a result, to use a mild term, of carelessness ; I think I am justified in using that expression. These errors ought not to occur, and certainly when you find them multiplied we cannot but feel a little suspicious that there may be something else we have not discovered. In these times when everybody is suspicious of everybody else, it is just as well to have absolute correctness if we can.

Mr. FIELDING. So far from complaining, I am glad my hon. friend has had the patience to look into these things. I feel much like the Frenchman in the old story who was with his wife late at night when she said : John get up, there is a burglar in the house. He said : Oh, don't mind. In a little while she said again, John get up there's a burglar in the House. Well, he said, you just wait, and if he can find anything we will get up and take it from him.

Meteorological service—to provide for two months' gratuity to the widow of the late Thomas Harrison, in his lifetime observer at the meteorological station at Fredericton, New Brunswick, $50.

Mr. CROCKET. Is $300 the salary of the meteorological observer at Fredericton ? I was under the impression it was $600.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Dr. Thomas Harrison was the meteorological observer at Fredericton for the past 32 years, at a salary of $300 per annum.

Mr. CROCKET. Is it the practice to limit the gratuity to two months ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. That is the usual custom.

Mr. CROCKET. I would like to see in this case, as in other cases the limit extended if it can be done.

Fisheries protection service—further amount required, $39,520.

Mr. BENNETT. Turning to the public accounts we find that the department under which is the lighthouse and coast service, in the year 1896-7 cost this Dominion $445,-742. Last year the lighthouse and coast service ran to the enormous figure of $2,530,-337. I am free to admit that the Marine Department of Canada should cost more today than it did in former years, owing to the fact that certain work on the St. Lawrence river has been taken in charge by this department. But when I look at the expenditures in detail in this department I am surprised that they do not go up to $3,000,000. We have been discussing the need of extra bookkeepers at the head of that department in order to go over the books and scrutinize the accounts and see what was wrong. Why, last year this department was held up before the public as so perfect that no one could point a finger to any act of wrong-doing in the matter of bookkeeping; no such question was ever hinted at. But the whole complaint before the Public Accounts Committee was against the scandalous and outrageous deals that were committed in the department, not due to anything wrong in the bookkeeper who simply dealt with the figures that were placed before him. It was the maladministration of the department that we complained of, and of the officers under the minister; that is what came up for review. The outrageous acts that were permitted in the name of this man Merwin and others in that department had nothing at all to do with the system of bookkeeping. That was simply the acquiescence and not only the acquiescence but the positive action of the minister in bringing about these results while paying two and three times the price. So, we have a department here that has increased its expenditure over $2,000,-000. I see my genial friend the Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) sitting before me. He often comes to the riding of East Simcoe and I do hope and trust that he will come again to that riding during the next election and that he will hold a joint meeting with me. I will be pleased to hold a joint meeting and I will endeavour to show the people how millions of public money are being dissipated and thrown away. We have a certain number of boats employed in the public service. I am free to admit that men who are on the sea should be fed and well fed, but I want to say that neither the Minister of Customs nor any other man will attempt to justify the outrageous expenditures that go on in connection with these boats. Who would think of feeding sailors on these vessels on MacLaren's potted cheese? This is an item that you will find at page P—185 of the Auditor General's Report under the expenditure of the boat 'Kestrel.' MacLaren's cheese to the tune of $30.20. It is only the most extravagant livers, or the high class livers that use that kind of cheese. Let us go a little farther.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. BENNETT. I hear some hon. gentlemen laughing. I do not think they buy that kind of cheese.

An hon. MEMBER. We all eat it.

Mr. BENNETT. It may be that they do so at the House of Mirth in Ottawa kept by the railway companies or reputed to be. Let us see some more. Asparagus, one case at $9. I suppose that was Christmas time and they paid a good high price. Eggs, 30 cents a dozen. Oh those husky sailors; grapes, 25 cents a pound, turkey, 25 cents a pound, fowl, $1.75 a pair, oysters by the barrel, walnuts and candy and the candy is nothing less than forty cents a pound. And then there was a little extra, extra—perhaps some members of parliament were out on this vessel at this time —English Stilton cheese at 50 cents a pound. I think the Minister of Customs ought to give North Brant a chance. The farmers up there cannot sell their's for 50 cents a pound. Radnor splits, half case, $1.50.

Mr. DANIEL. What are those?

Mr. BENNETT. I do not know. The Minister of Customs can explain that.

Mr. PATERSON. What is the name?

Mr. BENNETT. Radnor splits. When I pointed out to the Minister of Customs the other night that this government was buying quilts at $65 a piece he would hardly believe it until I read it over to him twice. The Minister of Customs does not know what is going on in the country as far as expenditures are concerned.

Mr. PATERSON. I know about the money coming in.

Mr. BENNETT. Certainly, and I wish for the good of this country that my hon. friend were at the head of one of the spending departments instead of one of the taxing ones. If he were I think that this outrageous farce would not go on because I will give my hon. friend credit for this that he is an upright man personally. I say the same for the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) and I only regret that these two gentlemen are not at the head of spending departments because if they were I do not believe that the expenditure of this country would be increased by millions and millions as it is. Let us go a little farther. Ginger ale at $1.40 a dozen; spittoons, $2; maple sugar, 87 pounds at 10 cents and so on.

Mr. PATERSON. That maple sugar is all right.

Mr. BENNETT. What is that for? I know what the hon. Minister of Customs has in his mind; he has in his mind that it is for the benefit of the sailors when they are at anchor at night. They can make candy out of the maple sugar that is costing the government 40 cents a pound. I say that the items that I have read—turkey at 25 cents a pound, cheese at 50 cents a pound and candy at 40 cents a pound—are fair examples of the expenditures that are going on in connection with these boats. It is a disgrace that the ministers are spending the people's money and that it should be thrown away in this manner. Does any man believe that in the mercantile marine of this country sailors are fed in this way. It is an absurd thing. These are some of the items which can be taken as sample bricks to show why the expenditure of this department has swollen by over $2,000,000 in ten years. I think it is up to the acting Minister of Marine and Fisheries to give us a little explanation as to why these expenditures are permitted and encouraged.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I would be glad to give the hon. gentleman any information with respect to the item under discussion. The item is:

Further amount required for fisheries protection service, $39,520.

And this is made up as follows: 'Curlew,' repairs, $1,420; 'Vigilant,' repairs, $2,000; 'Constance,' new shaft, $2,100; 'Petrel,' new shaft and deck repairs, $3,000; Canada, repairs to boilers and general overhauling, $2,000; repairs to hull and engine, $15,095; guns and ammunition for crews of 'Vigilant,' last year, $14,000; making a total of $39,520.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. Last year the minister said he was going to send the 'Stanley' home to be repaired. What determination has the department arrived at in reference to sending that steamer over to receive new boilers and other repairs?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I understand that the 'Stanley' is going immediately after her work is completed.

Mr. FOWLER. I see at page P—178 of the Auditor General's Report an item, 1960 pounds of anti-Pitt compound XXX at 25 cents per pound. I would like the minister to explain what that means.

Mr. MACPHERSON. That is lubricating oil for machinery.

Mr. FOWLER. I was asking the minister.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The acting minister confesses ignornance as to what the article is.

Mr. FOWLER. The hon. gentleman means to tell me that he does not know?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. No.

Mr. BENNETT.

Mr. U. WILSON. I would like to know how many fishery inspectors there are in Ontario, where they are located, what their salaries are and what is allowed them for expenses?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. That is not in reference to this item.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Is there another item under which that goes?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. That was voted last night.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. We get no revenue from the fisheries and I cannot see why an arrangement should not be made with the provincial government whereby they would take care of the fisheries as well as get the revenue. I do not know much about this, but it must cost the government a good deal to look after the fisheries. Could we have a statement of the salaries and expenses of the inspectors, overseers, &c.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I have instructed the deputy minister to take a note of my hon. friend's request.

Mr. BENNETT. Where is the steamer 'Canada' on which they were eating cucumbers at $1 a dozen? I think that the Minister of Customs' mouth waters at that, I know mine does. Where was that boat and were there high and mighty personages going about on her or why was she thus fitted out as to the larder?

Mr. FIELDING. That is the flagship of the Canadian navy.

Mr. FOWLER. Is that the same boat on which they were eating partridges at $1 a pair and new potatoes at $4 a barrel? And who were the distinguished persons thus honoured?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The occasion on which they had cucumbers at $1 a dozen on the 'Canada' was, I am informed, when the 'Canada' met the 'Virginian' out in the Straits of Cabot, and took the mail and passengers to Sydney.

Mr. FOWLER. How about the partridges?

Mr. FIELDING. They were probably out of season and cost more.

Mr. FOWLER. I have no objection to the officers of our navy being fed well, but I think the plain people of this country will rather object to such luxuries as partridges at $1 a pair for some six pairs. The number is not the point. If these gentlemen in their gold-lace uniforms want to live on luxuries of this kind let them pay for them out of their own pockets as the ministers would have to do. Why should the country have to pay for that sort of thing? New potatoes at $4.50 a barrel!

The moment they come in, new strawberries at 25 cents to 50 cents a box! Oranges when out of season, 80 cents a dozen—all these things purchased at the expense of the government! Hon. gentlemen smile as though that was a very small matter for criticism. It does not seem to me that the man who is paying the taxes will think it a very small matter for criticism and it is no wonder that, as the hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) has pointed out, the expenditure in connection with this department has increased so tremendously without the efficiency of the service having increased proportionally. Personally I have no objection and I think the people would have no objection to feeding the men who go down to the sea in ships in our navy well, but when it comes to luxuries like this, buying Radnor splits and ginger ale and partridges and strawberries when they first come in, and peaches, hothouse peaches, and hothouse grapes and these things for these dilettanti gentlemen, I think it is carrying the thing a little too far and that the people of this country will think so too. I would like to have the minister's opinion as to whether he approves of that sort of thing.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. My knowledge of how the men on the government steamers are fed is very limited indeed. Some of the prices quoted by my hon. friend do not seem to me to be very extravagant. Probably our views in the far west as to prices are somewhat different from my hon. friends', but certainly some of the prices quoted and some of the articles alluded to by hon. friend do not appear to ordinary men in these days to be great luxuries, and if there have been some small quantities of these luxuries purchased on special occasions, I do not see there is any great harm in it, and I do not believe that my hon. friend or any other person can impress the people of Canada with the idea that any great extravagance has taken place because on some of the steamers on the Atlantic or the Pacific—because he has quoted the 'Kestrel'—a few strawberries have been purchased, a few peaches, new potatoes and a few oranges. I take it that the men who are on our ships were not unused to what he calls luxuries of this kind before they went on board these ships. I do not suppose any large amount has been expended in this way. It is easy to go over the Auditor General's Report and pick out a few items here and there. My hon. friend quotes strawberries at 25 cents a box. That is very cheap indeed when they are selling probably in Ottawa to-day at double that price and the same with other things. It seems to me that while it may be the case that the expenditure has perhaps in some things been more than it should be, still it does appear to me that this is picayune politics of the first order, talking about the purchasing of a few delicacies for the officers and men on board of the cruisers and ships belonging to the government of Canada.

Mr. BENNETT. It is really charming and refreshing to hear this hon. gentleman dilating to the people of this country about picayune politics. We are talking of a department whose expenditure has increased in ten years by $2,000,000. Is that a picayune matter. Does he mean to tell the people of this country when it was shown in the Public Accounts Committee that nothing less than highway robbery had been perpetrated in that department that this was picayune? The minister himself stood up here last year and voted for all the actions in connection with the sending of the 'Arctic' expedition and then he says that hon. gentlemen on this side are pursuing a picayune policy. I would invite him to come to East Simcoe, and I promise him an audience of 1,000 people——

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN. He always does that.

Mr. BENNETT. Yes, and I invite my hon. friend (Mr. A. K. Maclean) who was one of the chief sponsors for the 'Arctic' bill.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN. I accept the invitation.

Mr. BENNETT. I would be happy to have the hon. gentleman stand there and apologize for $2,000,000 increase in one department. This department is behind in the upper lakes. What has it done in the port of Midland, say, in the last few years? The department has not built a single lighthouse. The lighthouses that are there were all built prior to 1896 except a couple of little picayune lights that are stuck up on a couple of sticks and are a disgrace to the Dominion; and when representations are made to the department that there are rocks against which vessels are bumping season after season, what is the answer? That there is no money. Hundreds of thousands of dollars can be thrown away in this manner, but there is no money for public works which are manifestly necessary. I want to ask the hon. Minister and the officers of the department, what have they done for the service in Georgian bay in the neighbourhood of the port of Midland? You have a little spar buoy sticking up in the middle of the lake where there happens to be a shoal, but you cannot provide a gas buoy because the department is too hard up. You find the vessels still piling up on this shoal, and then you try to better the situation—how? By putting a couple of little electric lights flickering on the top of the hill, which mariners imagine to be boys with lanterns, hunting for fishworms.

I will bring these matters to the attention of the people of the riding which I represent, and I will point out to them that while the expenditure of the department has risen over $2,000,000 in ten years, these are sample bricks of how the public money is being dissipated.

Mr. FOWLER. It is beautiful to see how the hon. minister has expanded with the expense of the times. The hon. minister, I have no doubt, can cast his mind back to the pioneer days of the west when he started his little newspaper and probably made his lunch off biscuit and cheese while sitting on a packing box. To-day with a salary of $7,000 a year as a minister of the Crown and a sessional idemnity of $2,500, he forgets those early days, and considers that strawberries at twenty-five cents a box, cheese at fifty cents a pound, hothouse grapes, hothouse peaches and oranges, are all proper and necessary things for the sailors who man the ships of the Canadian navy. I say this is just an evidence of how the hon. gentleman has expanded with the expanding times. In the hon. gentleman's early days he would have thought that these were luxuries fit only for princes and kings; but to-day he thinks they are only ordinary food for the sailors of the Canadian navy. I congratulate the hon. gentleman upon the expansion of his mind; but to the ordinary people of this country who have not reached the giddy height to which he has climbed, these prices will seem excessive, and these articles will seem superfluous luxuries which should be paid for, not by the people of this country, but by these gentlemen themselves out of their own pockets. It is a rather expensive navy which we are keeping up, and in the interest of the country I shall be opposed to the expansion of this navy if it is going to continue to run along these lines. We had Commander Spain a short time ago taking the whole price of a timber limit on an island in the Georgian Bay—Hope Island, I believe it is called—and putting it into a fur-lined overcoat in order that he might go to Newfoundland. No doubt they are buying silver-lined spittoons at $2 or $4 a piece in order that these sailors of ours may have an opportunity to expectorate. Why, Sir, in a country hotel, if there is a common box filled with sawdust, it is considered good enough for the rugged farmers who are paying the taxes of this country; but we must have silver-lined spittoons for the gentlemen who are spending these taxes. My hon. friend from East Simcoe spoke in highly laudatory terms of the Minister of Customs and the Minister of Finance as being very honest men, who administered their departments properly and well. But these hon. gentlemen have not yet been exposed to the temptations of heads of spending departments, and I do not know what might happen if they were. If the acting Minister of Marine and Fisheries were at the head of a collecting department, he might not view these matters with the equanimity that he does now. A man is very apt to be corrupted when he gets at the head of a spending department and is surrounded by gentlemen like the head of the Canadian navy and the officers under him. This is not a small matter; the aggregate of these expenditures is very large. I have looked through these accounts in the Auditor General's Report, a report with which the acting Minister of Marine and Fisheries says he is not familiar. I think he had better familiarize himself with the items in that report before he makes the statement that he thinks all these prices are perfectly fair and reasonable and that these are not undue luxuries for the officers and men of that service. In almost every instance the prices are excessive. The prices of beef and pork are three or four cents above the ordinary market price, and the price of every thing else is in proportion. If the acting Minister of Marine and Fisheries will look carefully through the Auditor General's Report, I think he will be very apt to revise his opinion.

Mr. BENNETT. I want to say a further word that did not occur to me when I spoke before. In the Department of Marine and Fisheries there is lying a request from certain parties, recommended by Mr. Gunn, my late opponent, that there should be placed on some of the very dangerous rocks at the entrance to the harbour of Waubaushene, where night after night during the summer months gasoline yachts and steam yachts containing excursion parties are obliged to pass, a small, cheap, light frame, which would not cost more than $100, and which might have the effect of saving many lives which would be lost if any of these yachts went on these rocks. One yacht did go on the rocks last summer, and if it had not been for timely assistance upwards of a dozen people would have perished. Although the owners of the mill at Waubaushene have offerred to furnish the electric light free of charge, the department says there is no money to enable them to meet a request of that kind. Is it any wonder that the expenditures of this government are regarded as they were by a witness yesterday in the Public Accounts Committee, who could not see anything wrong in securing a job from this government at $3 a day and farming it out to another at $1.25 a day?

Why it has come to this stage in Ontario that the public do not expect anything honest from this government. More particularly is that the case in the district of Georgian bay and Lake Huron. The people read these reports of the Auditor General, and I take good care that some of the choicest tit bits are published in the newspapers in that part of the country. Such expenditures are repugnant to respectable Liberals, and we are not only doing our duty to the country but a great kindness to the government when we point out that certain ministers of the Crown, not only permit these expenditures, but aid and abet them. I do hope the acting minister will see that a lighthouse is erected at Waubashene this summer. The lumber company there will, from humane motives, give the light free of charge but they do not propose to erect the framework. They say that if the country can afford to expend $100,000,000 a year, surely they can afford to pay what the minister would call a picayune few hundred dollars to save vessels from being wrecked.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I am advised that all applications for aids to navigation in the shape of lighthouses are referred to the lighthouse board and considered on their merits and usually granted. If there is any merit in the application which my hon. friend says has been made for a light at Waubashene, and a light company will supply the light, and a picayune outlay is all that is necessary, there is no reason why the application should not be granted. I have personal knowledge that the appropriations taken this year for lights and lighthouses were determined by the board.

Mr. KENNEDY. I do not want to defend extravagance in any shape or form but like to see a little fair-play in discussing these things. The hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) has picked out a few items in the bills sent in for the steamer 'Kestrel.' Well, a great many of these items are exactly what he would find in any bill from any logging camp in British Columbia. The men there are fed like men and not like beasts. They are fed well and it pays to feed them well.

Mr. BENNETT. The hon. gentleman is all wrong. The most of my quotations were from the vessel 'Canada.'

Mr. KENNEDY. Did he not quote from the 'Kestrel'?

Mr. BENNETT. One or two items.

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, I am speaking about them. If you will examine the accounts of supplies going into any logging camp in British Columbia, you will find items of the same kind. Last year when Lord Grey and party were out in that province, they came up from Victoria to New Westminster on the 'Kestrel' and they probably went to other places on the same boat. You would not want to feed that party on pork and potatoes but would like to give them something similar to what they are accustomed to. And because there may be a few items of the kind the hon. gentleman criticises the whole account. I do not see why the whole list should be spoken of as of the same kind. The hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) said that those items he quoted were fair samples. I say they were anything but fair. What he has done is to pick out a few of the highest priced articles and give them as fair samples of the average.

Mr. BENNETT. I would call attention to this fact that of all the items I quoted, there was only one from the 'Kestrel.' The item of MacLaren's cheese $30 and asparagus were taken from the 'Canada.' Will the hon. member for Westminster say that he can go to the lumber camps of British Columbia and find standing on the tables for the men what is known as MacLaren's cheese in those little delicate white porcelain jars?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, nor will you find them on the boats.

Mr. BENNETT. The trouble is they are on the boats.

Mr. KENNEDY. Not every day but only in some special case.

Mr. BENNETT. It must have been a very special case when they consumed in one day $30 worth.

Mr. KENNEDY. You will find the same thing in the lumber camps at holiday time.

Mr. BENNETT. What, MacLaren's cheese?

Mr. KENNEDY. Anything and everything in the shape of luxuries.

To provide for legal services in connection with claims of provincial government to the fisheries, $1,190.

Mr. DANIEL. How were these legal expenses contracted and to whom paid?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The maritime provinces and the province of Quebec had set up a claim to a share of the Washington treaty damages award, on the ground that by the decision of the Judicial Committee of the Imperial Privy Council a few years ago they had exclusive legislation over the fisheries in the matter of property. Therefore any compensation which came from allowing foreigners to use those fisheries, they claimed, should go to the provinces. A stated case was suggested for reference to the Supreme Court, and it was in this connection that Mr. Gibbons was retained by the Minister of Justice and rendered the services charged for.

Mr. BENNETT. Is that Mr. George C. Gibbons, of London, Ont.?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I do not know. The firm of Gibbons & Harper.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood that the decision of the Privy Council was that the Atlantic and Pacific fisheries were under the control of the Dominion but that the inland fisheries belonged to the provinces. If that be correct, I cannot see how the provinces could be entitled to any portion of the fishery award, which is for damages done the Atlantic fisheries and not the inland fisheries.

Mr. FIELDING. The decision of the Privy Council was not limited to the inland waters and the provinces claim, under that decision, right to the Atlantic fisheries.

Mr. FIELDING. The provinces claim rights in the Atlantic fisheries—rights on the foreshore. Of course, the regulation is still with the Dominion.

Mr. SPROULE. I did not so understand it when the Minister of Justice made his explantation, and when he said——

Mr. FIELDING. I do not say that the claim of the provinces is just; but they certainly do make it, and they claim that we should give them compensation.

To provide for the expenses of fishery commissions, $15,000.

Mr. BENNETT. What is this for ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Owing to a misunderstanding and the absence of the chairmain of Fishery Commission, British Columbia and Georgian bay, provision was not made to meet the expenses of the two commissions during the present fiscal year 1906-7. The British Columbia commission held international conferences with the State of Washington commissioners in August and September, carried out in June, July and October visits of investigation on the salmon fishing ground, held a series of executive sittings and made three interim reports, that of October 20 embodying a series of important recommendations on Fraser river fishery questions and international regulations. The Georgian Bay Fishery Commission, after submitting a lengthy interim report in 1906, arranged for a series of sittings commencing at Midland on July 24 and continuing daily at Georgian bay stations including Penetang, Parry Sound, Pointe au Baril, Byng Inlet, Tobermory, The Ducks, and other places. Sittings were held in October: and executive sittings will be held in Toronto and Ottawa in June, 1907, Additional work was given to the commission by Lake Erie being added to the scope of its investigation. In the spring the north shore of Lake Erie will be visited, and a series of between twenty and thirty sittings will be held to meet with the wishes of the fishermen. A final report will be framed after a series of executive sittings next fall.

Mr. BENNETT. How much of that is to be expended on what I may call Mr. Birnie's Commission, the Georgian Bay Commission ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Just as in respect of the items of the coming year and which was passed some time ago, I am unable to say how much was expended on the Georgian Bay Commission and how much on British Columbia.

Mr. BENNETT—How much is Mr. Birnie being paid now for the work he is doing ? Or, how much will he be paid ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The deputy minister informs me that Mr. Birnie has not been paid anything. In the British Columbia commission—and I think the payment would be about the same—it was $10 a day for the commissioners.

Mr. BENNETT. There is no use telling me that Mr. Birnie has not been paid anything unless the minister will tell us that this report is misleading—I refer to the Auditor General's Report, page P—201. If the minister will say that this report is not correct, I will accept his statement and not refer to the matter again. This shows that he was paid for 44 days at $7 and a lump sum for travelling expenses. Is that what he is being paid for his services—$7 a day ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. The deputy minister says that the Auditor General's Report which my hon. friend has quoted is for 1905-6, while this item is for 1906-7. In regard to this Mr. Birnie has not been paid anything.

Mr. BENNETT. Well, will he be paid at the rate of $7 a day ?

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. Whatever the order in council states, and I believe it is $7 a day.

Mr. BENNETT. This gentleman has the high sounding title of K.C. I think it about shows the estimate of this commission when a K.C. will lock up his office and go for a trip around the lakes at $7 a day.

Mr. FIELDING. If we pay high prices hon. gentlemen opposite object, and if we pay low prices they are not satisfied.

Mr. BENNETT. I think so low priced a K.C. would hardly be good enough for a fishery commissioner.

Mr. DANIEL. Reverting to the cruiser 'Canada,' I notice that several kinds of flags have been bought for her,—there is a blue ensign, and the red ensign and also the Minister of Marine flag. That is a new flag to me. I did not know such a flag was known in the Dominion. Would the minister please describe it. I suppose this flag would be flown only when the minister is on board. I suppose the acting minister ought to know this flag, and I would be glad if he would give us a description of it.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I cannot describe it. Possibly if I could go to the Atlantic and get aboard the 'Canada' I could learn all about it. I do not know whether it would be flown for an acting minister or not.

Mr. FOWLER. It would be put at half mast then.

Mr. TEMPLEMAN. I will make inquiry.

Mr. BENNETT. If the design has not been finally settled, I would suggest a tree, with a hand placing grafts all over it.

Salaries and contingent expenses of the several ports in the Dominion, including pay for overtime of officers, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $1,156,000.

Mr. PATERSON. In a general way there is about $50,000 extra asked for in the coming year, which will be required for the opening of new ports and to give some increases to members of the staff. When the supplementary estimates are brought down I would be pleased, if parliament approves, to augment the amount for increases of salary. This estimate is based upon what we have found necessary to expend last year.

Mr. FOWLER. Does the minister remember whether the officer at the subport of Sussex, N.B., is to have an increase of salary.

Mr. PATERSON. That is a question we have not yet determined, nor can we until we ascertain the mind of parliament in reference to granting increases generally. I had better not say much about that until I get the sanction of my colleagues to an increase. My own view is that under the circumstances of the country, considering how the officials in the customs are paid in comparison with persons occupying like position, they are entitled to a general increase. There are over 1,700 officers, and if you gave them only a moderate increase it would swell the estimates considerably. In addition we are establishing new ports rapidly in the Northwest. The country is filling up and settlers are pouring in by the hundred thousand, many of them from the United States, and we have to give them customs facilities. After all I think in view of the way the revenue is coming in, the cost of collecting being something like 3·40 per cent, we are justified in granting a moderate increase in the remuneration of the officials.

Mr. FOWLER. The revenue at Sussex has largely increased whereas the salary has remained about stationary. The salary is $550, a very small one in view of the fact that the collector has to give his whole time to his duties and cannot attend to any other business. I will not be charged with trying to favour a political friend in asking that his salary be increased, because the gentleman who fills that position is a violent Grit partisan—was when he was appointed, and I am afraid he still clings to his first love. It is only a matter of common justice that I speak on his behalf, and I hope the minister will take his case into consideration. I think it is perhaps at such points as the town of Sussex where the greatest injustice is done to officials in the matter of salaries. I fancy in large cities the salaries are probably commensurate with the duties performed. The collector at Sussex has to perform responsible duties. He requires to be a man of fair education in order to fill a position of that kind; he must be a man of some substance in order to be able to give bonds and that sort of thing. In these expansive days a salary of $550 is not a very large sum. I dare say that what applies to that officer would apply to many others throughout the country. I would bespeak the hon. gentleman's attention to this case.

Mr. PATERSON. I have made a note of it.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. I am sure the country will not hesitate to grant an additional salary to the customs officials. Take the port of Hamilton for instance. In 1896 the expenses of that port were about $21,000 and the revenue amounted to nearly $600,000. They were collecting a revenue of something less than $600,000. They will collect at least $2,000,000 of revenue and expenses are a little less than $23,000. There is one man less in the department to-day than there was in 1896. I have tried to impress the minister that it is absolutely necessary to increase the help and also the salaries paid at the port of Hamilton. I am sure the House will agree with the minister that $50,000 scattered all over Canada is not too much of an increase in the salaries of the servants in that department.

Mr. W. WRIGHT. I wish to lay before the Minister of Customs the claims of the district I represent. I laid before the minister last year and I think the year previously the claims of the district of Muskoka with regard to the establishment of a port of entry. We have a large business transacted through there and we suffer great inconvenience because of the fact that we have not a customs port. I might mention the case of one firm that is using the customs to the extent of about a million dollars per annum. That represents the value of the goods that they have to pass through the customs. They are at a very great disadvantage at the present time. Then we have a great many other people there who use the customs, and especially in the summer season we have a large tourist business. A great many of these people come from the United States. They are there for six weeks or two months and they want to use the customs in getting their goods through. Every one of them is in a hurry. We have numerous instances of men coming over during the summer season who are trying to get the requisites for their comfort through the customs and they find that they can come and go before they can get their goods through. The difficulty of getting their goods through is such that it is seriously interfering with our summer resort business. I think this is something that demands the attention of the Minister of Customs and I hope he will give it his consideration and give the people relief in regard to this matter.

Mr. PATERSON. What was the town you mentioned ?

Mr. W. WRIGHT. I might mention all the towns in Muskoka district—Gravenhurst, Bracebridge and Huntsville. We have two chains of lakes, one having headquarters at Gravenhurst and Bracebridge and the other with headquarters at Huntsville. There should be provision made for the summer months at least at two of these places and a permanent port of entry should be granted in the district of Muskoka. I do hope the minister will give it his careful consideration. He practically made a promise last year that we would have it this year, but I do not find anything in the estimates in regard to it, and that is my reason for impressing the matter upon the minister at the present time.

Mr. PATERSON. There is a large tourist travel to the beautiful country that is comprised within the territory that my hon. friend (Mr. W. Wright) represents and we try to give all the facilities we can because these tourists bring a great deal of money into the country and are a valuable asset, if I may use that term. In order to provide for that traffic we appoint, during the summer months, a special agent at Gravenhurst to expedite any business that these tourists may have. But the hon. gentleman is quite correct when he says that the ordinary merchandise of some of the towns there is passed through the customs port of Orillia. I am aware that it is not as convenient as it should be to have a customs port in one of your own towns. But we have a difficulty. We have so many applications for ports that we have been unable as far as our finances went, to grant them all and we do not desire to enlarge them any more than we can help. At the same time we feel that we are in this position that many of the points that are asking for customs ports are as large and their business is as large as some of the places that now enjoy that privilege, and people point out to us that the business of their town is greater perhaps than the business of a town which has a port. This, of course, strengthens the application of the town that asks for it, but if we were to multiply them too fast I am afraid that parliament would hardly agree to give us the money to do it. If we are able in the public interest and with the means at our command to meet the wishes of the people in my hon. friend's district I would be only too pleased but I cannot make him a promise because we cannot grant all that are asked for. We will endeavour to give them such facilities as we can and it may be possible —I do not say we cannot—to perhaps have an additional port in his county. But there are so many of these requests and especially from the Northwest which is filling up so rapidly that it is difficult to grant them all. I may say in reference to the trading public in Canada that I believe it is a fact that the 80,000,000 people in the United States have not as many ports of entry as we have in Canada ; so that we cannot be accused of not trying to meet the convenience of the people in so far as we can.

I find I have some details here that were furnished me by the accountant in reference to this vote that we are asking. He points out that the sum we are asking compared with the full year at the same rate is $87,781 more than the amount which would be required for the service of the full twelve months of the previous year. This is a nine months column we have put before us, but if you take the full year basis we are asking in this main estimate $87,781 more. There is a small supplementary estimate that will have to be added for the next year but this is for the current year. Some $30,000 will be required for increases in the salaries of the officers and the balance will be needed for the salary of additional officers if the trade and revenue go on. These proposed increases of salaries have reference only to exceptional cases where persons engaged in the Customs Department in outlying ports are not receiving perhaps what is the fair equivalent of what other officers were receiving. It would not cover anything like a general increase even to a small amount and we had not contemplated that at the time that these original estimates were prepared.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. What will the total be for the year?

Mr. PATERSON. In the main estimates it will be $1,445,000.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Then you have some supplementaries?

Mr. PATERSON. Yes, there are supplementaries ; that is for the coming year. The expenditure for last year, if it had been on the twelve months basis instead of the nine months' basis, would be $1,345,000, but as soon as this is passed you will find another item in the supplementary estimates of the current year for $22,500 added to this which will make $1,031,150 that we will take for the current year. Then there is an increase over that of $87,781 for the ensuing year.

To pay gratuity to John Bain for special services as secretary of the Tariff Commission inquiry, $1,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Is that in addition to his salary ?

Mr. PATERSON. Mr. Bain, who is not in the service now, was the secretary of the commission.

Mr. SPROULE. He was in the service and drawing his pay when he was secretary of the commission.

Mr. PATERSON. Quite so, but if the hon. gentleman had any idea of the work Mr. Bain performed in connection with the tariff he would recognize that this is only a fair recognition of his services. Both Mr. Bain and Mr. McDougald worked many a night long after midnight and no hon. gentleman can understand the amount of work that was performed by Mr. Bain, in fact he was nearly broken down under the work, while Mr. McDougald has been of the greatest help to the commission.

Mr. SPROULE. It would seem that his work was not of extraordinary importance as he was engaged in writing political pamphlets.

Mr. PATERSON. Mr. Bain has been accused of writing political pamphlets, but I think that charge has been given up. Now that he has left the service I am free to speak and to say that he was one of the most valuable officers it was possible to have, and I think that any gentleman on the opposition side as well as on this side who ever met Mr. Bain found him to be a most painstaking and courteous official.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. PATERSON. And that he was a valuable man is apparent to every one. I regret his loss from the department exceedingly. I view it as a loss not only to myself in administering the department but as a loss to the public service of the Dominion. He was a most valuable public servant.

Mr. SPROULE. What was his salary ?

Mr. PATERSON. $3,000.

Mr. SPROULE. And $1,000 more for his secretaryship of the commission ?

Mr. PATERSON. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Which extended over a period, I suppose——

Mr. PATERSON. Over a year. He was with us all through the country and had all the direction of the compiling and the indexing, &c. The House will understand the amount of work in connection with the preparing of references to those nine volumes. As to his value—well, he left us, we have nothing in the public service and there was no hope that we could give him anything that would repay his services. I do not know exactly what the arrangement is, but I presume he is in a position where he will probably get more than any cabinet minister's position would give except that of the Prime Minister before very long. At any rate he felt that in justice to himself he must take one of several offers that were made to him that were more lucrative than the salary that we were able to pay him.

Mr. SPROULE. I do not underestimate his ability or the importance of his work, but it seems to me that a public employee receiving $3,000 a year or more who is supposed to give his whole time to the service of the country, if you give him $1,000 extra, you are paying him pretty high. If he was doing the work of the commission he could not have been doing the work of the department, that is sure. He could only give at the best his whole time. He might work a little harder or do different work but he could only work his whole time, and it does seem to me that for a few months' additional work an increase of salary of $1,000 is a very high jump.

Mr. PATERSON. The hon. gentleman is right enough that the principle of gratuity is one that is not to be encouraged ; when an official is engaged he is to devote his whole time to his duties and it is undesirable to supplement the payment of officials for special work especially if it be in their line to perform the extra work. This tariff commission work was exceptional and it really appertained more to the Finance Department than to the Customs Department, but Mr. Bain was the best available man for it. As to doing his own work, all I can say is that when we were travelling he had his typewriter along and his work in the office had to be kept up and it was kept up ; I think nothing was neglected and over and above that the work of the tariff commission was being done. It is an exceptional case. He not only gave all his time to the work but he gave time that no reasonable man would ask him to give.

Mr. SPROULE. Did he receive a superannuation allowance ?

Mr. PATERSON. Oh no, he has left the service.

Mr. SPROULE. Then he receives no superannuation ?

Mr. PATERSON. Oh no, he receives no superannuation.

Mr. SPROULE. How long was he in the service ?

Mr. PATERSON. I brought him in ; he would be here 11 years, I think.

Mr. SPROULE. I think it is less objectionable if he is not getting any superannuation.

Mr. PATERSON. He was not on the superannuation list. If he was on the superannuation list and a man comparatively young in years as he is, this gratuity would be a serious thing to contemplate.

Mr. SPROULE. He was only a temporary employee ?

Mr. PATERSON. Oh no, he was not ; I do not know how it was, but I suppose we made the change in the Superannuation Act just about the time he came in, at any rate he gets no superannuation. He was my private secretary for a year or two.

Mr. CROCKET. Perhaps I may be allowed to mention here a matter which I have been asked to bring to the attention of the minister. I refer to the vacancy in the customs office at Centreville, in Carleton county, caused by the recent death of the collector at that place, and the urgent necessity which exists for an immediate appointment being made. On account of the price of potatoes being much higher on the Canadian than on the American side, there is a great deal of smuggling now going on in this commodity. The work of the office now is being performed by a young lady, the daughter of the late collector, who is of course unable to cope with the situation. The smuggling is resulting in a serious loss to the farmers in that neighbourhood, and they are especially anxious that the vacancy be filled without delay.

Mr. PATERSON. We must make a special effort under these circumstances to fill the position as rapidly as possible. Generally we would expect the collector at the main port, which would be Woodstock, to send one of his staff to take charge of the office pending an appointment, but I presume he is trusting to the young lady who who has been mentioned.

To pay gratuity to Mr. McDougald in connection with the Tariff Commission, $500.

Mr. PATERSON. The distinction between Mr. Bain and Mr. McDougald is that Mr. Bain was with the commission the whole year, backward and forward, keeping up his office work as well. Mr. McDougald has been a very faithful help to us here, but he has done it in the past few months when the tariff was being wrought out.

Quebec harbour—improvements, $280,000.

Mr. FISHER. This is a vote to close up the contract for building what is called the Pointe à Carcy breakwater at the city of Quebec. It is an extension down the river St. Lawrence from the old Louise embankment, which was undertaken some four years ago, and is expected to be completed this year.

Mr. DANIEL. What has been the cost hitherto, and will this finish it?

Mr. SPROULE.

Mr. FISHER. Yes, this amount will finish it. The total estimate is $812,500. It is a pier 1,100 feet long, 200 feet wide at the end and 150 feet wide on the top.

Mr. DANIEL. The harbour of Quebec is under a commission, is it not ?

Mr. FISHER. Yes, but this is outside of the work of the harbour commissioners.

Mr. AMES. This work has come in for a good deal of criticism on a number of different occasions. First is the fact that when the original arrangement for construction was made it was supposed that only a comparatively small sum of money would be expended, yet this contractor, Mr. Dussault, who received the contract, when he had completed what he originally contracted for, was permitted to go on year after year without new tenders being called for, and was allowed large amounts at the same figures. When sums varying from $150,000 to $250,000 are being spent from year to year without new tenders being called for, and the same contractor is allowed year after year to have his contract extended, it leads to the application of a very wrong principle. I hope that the minister is bringing to a close this year a chapter in the history of public works which is not altogether creditable to the department. I hope we can expect to see this contract completed, or at least have the assurance that if it is not completed this year there will be a fresh start made and new tenders called, so that there will be open competition for any additional work to be done in connection with these Quebec harbour improvements.

Mr. FISHER. I may say that in the original contract provision was made for the continuation to a certain extent of the scheme of improvement of the harbour of Quebec, and the rates of continuation have been according to the schedule rates provided for in the contract. There was no sort of intention or desire to conceal anything. The contract was discussed in this House several years ago, soon after it was made, and it provided for all that has been done at the rates provided for in the contract. There has been nothing done outside of the contract at all.

Mr. AMES. When the original advertisements were placed in the newspapers in regard to the work to be done, was it intimated that this was to be practically a self-repeating contract, to be continued year after year, and that the amount of the original appropriation represented only one-third or one-fourth of what might be expected to be spent before the work was fully completed ? Did those who tendered, other than Mr. Dussault, know that in receiving the original contract they were likely to have four times the amount of work originally stipulated ?

Mr. FISHER. I am informed that when tenders were originally asked for, the whole plan was prepared, and that all the tenderers knew what the whole amount of the work was going to be, although the original tenders were only for a portion of the work. There was no information given to Mr. Dussault that was not given to everybody else.

Mr. AMES. I would like to call the attention of the minister and of the House to a clipping which appeared some time ago in the Quebec 'Chronicle,' making very severe strictures on the character of this work—a statement which can hardly be allowed to go without at least some defence on the part of the government. The statement is as follows:

Practical contracting experts who have made a survey of the Dominion government contractors work in connection with the breakwater extension, severely criticise the construction of the masonry facing along the river front, and say it does not bear the appearance of good engineering and without a question of doubt will have to be strengthened in the near future to prevent it from giving away and falling into the St. Lawrence. These same experts take exception to the supposed crib work that is being done to support in position the sand filling done by the Canadian Pacific Railway to make new land, and say that the work, notwithstanding the excuse that it is only temporary should not be accepted by the government, and they question if an engineer was in charge to supervise the existing conditions. It is pointed out by the experienced contractors who made the survey that the crib work in course of construction is a very cheap and indifferent article of workmanship, and the material used altogether out of keeping with the demand. The ballast flooring, which should be made of good timber, is made of three-inch deals, and the timber that is used on top is simply fastened with drift bolts or spikes that possibly cannot stand the strain intended, and will allow the sand filling by degrees to exude through the cribwork into the river and thus weaken a portion of the newly made land. The experts are very strong in their strictures on the work performed, and if what they assert is only half true the federal authorities should lose no time in having the proper engineers inspect the work before it is too late.

If that is the character of work that is going on in Quebec and this appeared in the Quebec 'Chronicle' on the 10th of June last—is the government justified from year to year in giving the same contractor permission to continue with work of this character and making a total expenditure of upwards of $750,000 over the original contract? What steps have the government taken to insure this House that these strictures, which are claimed to be made by competent authorities on the spot, are well based? I have also a letter which reads as follows:

This work has been going on for some years. It is under contract to a man by the name of Dussault. It is a contract in connection with the harbour works, and it is made directly with the Department of Public Works. There were no tenders. There is little or no superintendence. Rotten timbers and timbers not in accordance with the specifications are used. The construction is faulty. The work is said to have been moved by the ice last year. It is generally believed that the construction is entirely inadequate for the purposes which is intended to be served.

Mr. FISHER. Did the hon. gentleman say from whom that letter comes?

Mr. AMES. No, I did not, but it is based on this article which I quoted from the 'Quebec Chronicle' of June 10, 1906.

Mr. FISHER. I am sorry the hon. gentleman's correspondent did not have a little better basis than that article for making such strictures. The fact that the article states there was no adequate supervision of the work is sufficient to discredit, in my eyes, the whole article. There is a resident engineer of the department in Quebec, Mr. Valiquette, who has been engineer of the department thirty-five years and who is thoroughly competent, and he has an assistant, Mr. Chapais. The general superintendent, Mr. Valiquette, took particular pains to supervise the whole of that work. Besides Mr. Dussault is a well known, reputable and competent contractor. The work was conducted right under the nose of the people of the 'Chronicle' and the statements in that article are absolutely baseless.

Port Arthur and Fort William—harbour and river improvements, $500,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What kind of improvements are you proposing to make this year which require half a million dollars more?

Mr. FISHER. This is the completion of a large contract, extending over several years, for dredging the channel at Fort William in the Mission and Kaministiquia rivers. It also includes some dredging at Port Arthur and the construction of a breakwater there. This whole work has been going on about a year and is intended to extend over seven years in all, or six years more.

Mr. SPROULE: Under contract?

Mr. FISHER. Yes, awarded after public tender to the lowest tenderer. It was awarded at a rate per yard for dredging and a bulk sum for the breakwater on specifications prepared by the department.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the rate per yard.

Mr. FISHER. On the Mission river nine cents and at Port Arthur nine and a half cents per cubic yard.

Mr. SPROULE. The breakwater is at Port Arthur?

Mr. FISHER. Yes, it is 4,800 feet long.

Mr. SPROULE. Who has that contract ?

Mr. FISHER. The contractor is Mr. M. J. Hogan of Port Colborne and the amount of the contract is $363,000. Mr. Weddell has the contract for dredging in Port Arthur, and the Great Lake Dredging Company has it for dredging at Fort William.

Mr. SPROULE. Was the breakwater let by public tender ?

Mr. FISHER. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Was there any extension of the work after the original contract was let ?

Mr. FISHER. No, the plans and specifications were prepared before the contract was let. It is an extension of the old breakwater from west to east.

Mr. SPROULE. There has been a great deal of dredging done in the harbour the last few years. Is the river filling up again or why is this new dredging being done every year ?

Mr. FISHER. This dredging is new and is to continue until the whole river is dredged out in order to make a harbour for Fort William. The dredging now being done is chiefly in the Mission river. The dredging that has been done in Kaministiquia does not require to be done over.

Mr. SPROULE. I have been there several times, and it was pointed out to me that the trouble consists in the mouth of the river constantly filling up.

Mr. FISHER. I am told that there has been some little silting in of sand from the lake at the mouth of the river but not in the river itself where the harbour is. In the river itself there has not been any silting down from above or falling of the bank. A good deal of the dredging is in the Mission river, which is the western branch or mouth of the Kaministiquia. That is a much shallower river than the main stream. It has been dredged out to form part of the harbour and another channel to the westward of these islands into the lake.

Mr. SPROULE. Are there elevators there ?

Mr. FISHER. Not yet. But the Grand Trunk Pacific terminals will be on the western bank of the Mission river and down the Kaministiquia towards the lake.

Mr. SPROULE. I was told some time ago that a company held most of the land there and that this land, owing to expected development, would be very valuable. I wondered whether this work was being done not to facilitate the building of terminals but rather for the purpose of increasing the value of private property ?

Mr. SPROULE.

Mr. FISHER. No. But the demands of Fort William are very great. It is confidently expected that it will be a very great port.

Mr. SPROULE. I know that it will be, in the future.

Mr. FISHER. The Kaministiquia river alone—

Mr. SPROULE. I am not speaking of that.

Mr. FISHER. The Kaministiquia river was pretty well occupied and if that part of the Mission river could not be dredged out there would be no room for new development. As a matter of fact, the Grand Trunk Pacific have got a large portion of the land on the western bank of this river and will establish elevators and other terminal works there to serve their system west of Fort William. Had they not access to the water there they would be blocked completely.

Mr. SPROULE. And it is in anticipation of that that you are doing this dredging ?

Mr. FISHER. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Am I correct in believing that the river is well dredged out down to the mouth, and no more dredging is needed there ?

Mr. FISHER. Dredging is going on in the Kaministiquia below the junction of the Mission, which, I think, is four miles from the mouth. There is already a channel there but not the 22 feet channel it is hoped to make. It is now about 19 feet.

Mr. SPROULE. And what width.

Mr. FISHER. It averages 260 feet. The Mission river is expected to be dredged to the same depth and width.

Mr. BLAIN. I was under the impression that the harbour of Fort William and Port Arthur were under the control of a commission, a Bill having been put through some time ago for that purpose.

Mr. FISHER. I think not, I am not aware of it.

Mr. BENNETT. How much dredging is to be done at Fort William and Port Arthur ?

Mr. FISHER. We do not expect the whole work $360,000 to be done this year.

Mr. BENNETT. How much will be spent for dredging this year ?

Mr. FISHER. About $193,000 at Fort William and Port Arthur.

Mr. BENNETT. Do I understand that contracts have been entered into, with Weddell at one place and the Great Lakes Company for another, that will run for six years at about $190,000 a year for the two ?

Mr. FISHER. The contract is terminable at any time at the wish of the government. The plan was made for the whole work, and contracts were let for the whole expecting to occupy about seven years.

Mr. SPROULE. The contract was let on estimated quantities ?

Mr. FISHER. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. How can the government let a contract covering work for six or seven years when the money has not been voted ?

Mr. FISHER. The contract can be terminated at any time.

Mr. SPROULE. But if a contract is let and the money is not voted, I take it, the contractor would have reasonable grounds for claiming damages.

Mr. FISHER. The contract is let subject to the voting of the money by parliament.

Mr. BLAIN. In the session of 1904, a Bill was introduced by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries of that time, the late Mr. Préfontaine, relating to these two harbours. I desire information on that subject. The minister at that time is reported in 'Hansard' as follows :

> The purport of the Bill, as I have explained, is to put the affairs of the port in the hands of a commission composed of men of the locality instead of leaving their administration in the hands of the Department of Marine and Fisheries as it is at present. The Department of Marine and Fisheries now sees about the collection of dues, &c., and the Public Works Department sees about the construction of whatever works may be necessary. These two ports are becoming very important ; trade is increasing considerably and it has been represented by the people interested that by putting it into the hands of a commission in this manner the public interest will be better served.

I would like to ask the minister the explanation of this.

Mr. FISHER. The Bill was not passed into law, I cannot explain why.

Mr. BLAIN. Evidently the minister at that time had decided, in consultation with the residents, that it was in the best interest of the public that the expenditure should be made thereafter under a commission rather than by the Public Works Department or the Marine and Fisheries Department. The minister was so well convinced that he introduced a Bill. Now I would like to know why the Bill was not pressed and why a change was made, also why these expenditures are now being made by the department rather than by a commission.

Mr. FISHER. I am unable to give the reasons.

Mr. BENNETT. As I understand the position of affairs nearly $200,000 will be spent the coming year for dredging at these two ports, I think the minister said $190,000, but we may be sure the expenditure will exceed that amount. That work, it is contemplated, shall extend over seven years. So there will be an aggregate of a million and a half, in round figures, worth of dredging done at these two points. I am sure nobody will complain of the prices, because the Weddell Company are doing the dredging at Port Arthur for nine and a half cents a yard, and the Great Lakes Dredging Company are doing the work at Fort William for nine cents. Now I want to refer to the history of the dredging operations that have been carried on at these two points because I think the country, and the government too, are under a lasting obligation to the opposition for the course they have taken in regard to this dredging. If the minister will refer to the 'Hansard' of 1905, volume 2, he will find these facts to be admitted by the Minister of Public Works (Hon. C. S. Hyman) ; First we find, page 4459, that the first advertisement published calling for tenders to close on the 14th of April, appeared on 11th of April. Now what opportunity have contractors to tender between these dates ? This work was to commence within ten days after the acceptance of the contract; in other words, the work was to commence on the 21st of April. Another term of the contract was this, that the dredge should of necessity be up there on the date of the acceptance of the tender, namely the 21st April. Now that practically meant that no person could bring a dredge into Port Arthur by the 21st of April from the outside, because it would be frozen up at that time of the year. But the opposition hammered away at the minister, with the result that a change was brought about and open tendering was permitted. The result was that companies came to the front, and this Weddell Company brought down the price at Port Arthur to 9½ cents, and the Great Lakes Dredging Company were forced, in order to get part of the contract, to tender at 9 cents for the Fort William work. Now how was that brought about ? It was brought about by the opposition compelling the minister to throw open the field to tenderers. As the Great Lakes Dredging Company had their plant on the ground, they would naturally have had the contract at their own figures, but they were forced to come down in open competition against these other parties, and to-day the country is getting a million and a half dollars worth of dredging done at these two points at the figures I have named.

What had been the policy of the government prior to that? Referring to the 'Hansard' of the same year, page 4462, we find the minister admitting that last year $108-000 was spent for dredging, and that this favoured company, the Great Lakes Dredging Company, were paid 25 cents a yard for exactly similar work that is to-day being done at 9 cents and 9½ cents per yard. In the same debate the minister admitted that for two years work had been done there without tender, and that in one of those years it had amounted to the sum of $108,000. Look at the princely fortunes that were made by the Great Lakes Dredging Company in doing the work at 25 cents a yard, which it is now compelled to do at 9 cents a yard. Nobody can commend the government or the Minister of Public Works for having brought about that state of affairs, because he hedged around this dredging contract with conditions and barriers that made it impossible for anybody else but the Great Lakes Dredging Company to secure the contract. But by adopting that course in the House the opposition forced the government to make this desirable change, with the result of saving a great deal of money to this country. But there was a great deal worse than paying 25 cents a yard. In many other cases they were allowed for special work as high as 40 cents a yard, some of it at 90 cents a yard, other cases at 45 cents, and in some cases as high as $1.25 a yard. Now I will be fair, and I will admit that the work might not have been of a uniform nature, and that consequently higher prices should have been paid. But according to this return, and the statement of the minister which tallies with the return brought down last year in answer to a question asked by myself, these two companies, the Weddell Company at Fort William and the Great Lakes Dredging Company at Port Arthur, no matter what difficulties they may meet with, no matter what the formation may be, are doing the work at those prices, and the country is thereby being benefited.

Common report says that the Acting Minister of Public Works is to be the future Minister of Public Works and if the hon. gentleman is to occupy that office I want to throw out a word of warning to him as to the dredging operations that are conducted to-day. I am going to refer to Ontario only. I do not say a word about the other provinces because I am not conversant with them. I hope the committee will bear with me while I point out a case that perhaps is not within the minister's knowledge unless he has read to-day's papers, because he was not present at yesterday's meeting of the Public Accounts Committee. What transpired there? We had before the committee a man who was appointed inspector of dredging ata $3 a day. He frankly told the committee that there was another dredge working near at hand and that he went to the other dredge inspector and paid him $1.25 a day to look after the two dredges. Mark you this dredging work is done in this way: scows are brought there and they are reputed to carry so many yards of material. If you carry away ten scows in a day only half filled it follows that if they were completely filled you could not carry away so many, so that in other words the owner of the dredge is the beneficiary if there is an incompetent or dishonest man there on behalf of the government. I would not say that this man Eastwood, who was before the committee yesterday giving evidence, was dishonest. I think he simply imagined that he could do as he pleased. He gave frank and straightforward evidence. He did not seek in any way to conceal the facts. He told the story frankly. I have made inquiry about this matter at different points where dredging operations are carried on, and I tell the minister now that a strong opinion prevails that because this work is under water you can do exactly as you please. The man you have to calculate on is the inspector on the dredge. What is the position of a lot of these dredges? I will take the very case I cited a moment ago; that is the dredging on Matchedash bay. One of these two dredges is a dredge owned by some persons who call themselves the Penetanguishene Dredging Company, although they are not an incorporated company. The head of that company in Penetanguishene is Dr. Spohn, superintendent of the provincial asylum at that point. One of the largest owners of the dredge is Mr. Gendron, a boot and shoe merchant in Penetanguishene. A brother of this Mr. Gendron is in charge of the dredge. I am not going to say that he is a dishonest man because I cannot say it. I have not stood there day after day and watched to see whether that scow was filled to the top or not.

Mr. W. ROCHE. What sort of material is being taken out—mud or sand?

Mr. BENNETT. This would be a sandy formation—not rock. This government inspector, Gendron, apparently had a stunted sense of what was right and he did not think it was improper on his part to take $1.25 per day from the inspector on the other dredge and profess to do the work on both. What was the result? He got not only the $3 a day which was being allowed by the department but he was in addition being paid $1.25 by Eastwood, while Eastwood pocketed $1.75 a day for doing nothing. I have followed up these dredging operations by correspondence with different parties at different points and the whole of the dredging operations in Ontario are, I believe, quite on a par with the dredging operations at Matchedash bay.

I am not going to assert that every scow there was not filled to the top because I never saw one of them go out but apparently the opinion prevails that they can do exactly what they please and I am going to throw out a suggestion to the minister that I believe will save this country thousands upon thousands of dollars and it is that the department here should send officers out to supervise these operations. My hon. friend from Halifax (Mr. Roche) threw out the suggestion by his question that if it is rock you can exactly measure in situ,—I think that is the phrase that the engineers use—you can go out to the bluff of the rock and measure it and see exactly what has been removed, but you cannot do that as well with a sandy condition because the formation will change and it will not be of a uniform depth. The result is that you are relying entirely on the local inspector's account of how many scows went out each day and relying on each of these scows being completely filled. That is exactly the position of the matter. I am going to ask the minister, if in face of the Eastwood case yesterday —and I hope the minister will read over the evidence in that case—he does not think that the time has arrived when inspectors should be men sent out from the department. I know of other cases, but I am not going to refer to them here, with regard to which I have had correspondence from people entirely unknown to me who, owing to the fact that I have paid some little attention to this dredging question at different points have written to me in regard to the matter. Gentlemen whose reputations are beyond cavil and beyond doubt have written to me and suggested that these very evils were prevailing at different points. I am going to ask the minister what he is going to do about them. The public record is against the department. I am not referring to the acting minister; I am referring to the incumbent of the office. Take this very case of the Great Lakes Dredging Company. I refer to the tenders for dredging at Port Arthur and Fort William. At Port Arthur the Great Lakes Dredging Company put in a tender of ten cents per cubic yard. Mr. A. F. Bowman put in a tender of 22½ cents a yard. Mr. A. F. Bowman is the owner of a quarter interest in the plant of the Great Lakes Dredging Company, and I say that because I cannot be contradicted on that point. A government return shows that. He puts in a tender at 22½ cents and the very concern of which he is a member puts in a tender of ten cents a yard. What does that mean?

Mr. J. T. SCHELL. On the same work?

Mr. BENNETT. On the same work. The Great Lakes Dredging Company is composed of Mr. Whelan, a son-in-law of the hon. member for Thunder Bay and Rainy River (Mr. Commee), Mr. C. A. Bowman, a member of the local legislature of Ontario, and his brother, Mr. A. F. Bowman, who are the sole owners. The stock in it is divided equally between the Bowmans and Mr. Whelan. What are the public going to say when that return is presented to them? They are going to say that Mr. A. F. Bowman must have a strange opinion, and that is putting it mildly, of the Minister of Public Works, because while he is the owner of a quarter interest in the plant of the Great Lakes Dredging Company, he puts in a tender at ten cents a yard and in his individual name he puts in a tender at 22½ cents a yard for the very same work. One deduction and only one can be drawn and that deduction is that Mr. Bowman and the Great Lakes Dredging Company figured in this way that if no tender intervened they would find the Minister of Public Works putty in their hands and that he would allow them to draw out their low tender at ten cents and substitute their higher tender of 22½ cents. There could be no mistake about this, it was not a matter of an accident or of chance because I will take the next dredging contract, that of Fort William. The Great Lakes Dredging Company tendered at 9 cents and A. F. Bowman at 18 cents a yard, and here the same inference can be drawn that had it not been for the three or four intervening tenders the Great Lakes Company expected that Mr. Hyman would allow them to draw out the low tender at 9 cents and substitute the high tender at 18 cents. Fortunately for the country there were these intervening tenders and the Great Lakes Company had to take the work at 9 cents instead of as they anticipated at 18 cents.

I refer now to page V—26 of the Auditor General's Report and find that A. F. Bowman performed certain services with the dredge 'Dominion' which aggregated something over $10,000. At V—27 you will find that the Great Lakes Dredging Company, for services performed by the dredge 'Dominion,' got about $7,000. This was for different work altogether. But what does it show? That the very same dredge 'Dominion,' because there are not two dredges registered under the name of 'Dominion,' is the dredge working under the name of A. F. Bowman in one case and under that of the Great Lakes Dredging Company in another. For fear it might be considered that this is a typographical mistake, I point out that at page 26 A. F. Bowman performed services with a dredge called 'No. 1' amounting to over $25,000, and at page V—27 the same dredge 'No. 1' under the ownership of the Great Lakes Dredging Company does work that is detailed there. There is no doubt about it. I know from the most accurate information received from gentlemen residing there that these two dredges are the property of the Great Lakes Dredging Company. Who superintends the work at this point? I understand it is Mr. Temple, the resident engineer. I do not assume that Mr. Temple could possibly visit all the scows up there and see the filling of each scow, and consequently there are upwards of half a dozen men employed as inspectors of dredging. I have nothing to say against the integrity of these gentlemen; I know none of them. I do not know whether each of them is insistent and assiduous in his duties; that he stays on the dredge and watches the filling of the scows or whether, like Mr. Eastwood, he is half a mile or a mile away from the work. The opposition did their duty by the government and by the country and by themselves when they forced the department to have open tenders called for this work, and I think the opposition may be congratulated that they hammered the price of dredging at these two ports down from more than 25 cents a yard to 9 and 9½ cents a yard, and the country to-day on that $1,500,000 of dredging will be saving upwards of $500,000. I am not going to say anything about dredging in the other provinces. I believe the time has arrived when the department in the defence of the country's interest should see that men are appointed as inspectors direct from headquarters here, because the country is spending millions of dollars in dredging. These figures are becoming enormous. There are large dredging operations at different points and I think the time has come when some steps should be taken to safeguard the public interest in that respect.

Mr. FISHER. I think it would be a pity if I should say anything that would interfere with the hon. gentleman's self-gratulation and complacency. I am sure he will be happy after what he and the opposition have accomplished. I am glad they feel that way and I am willing to give them all credit, but I think there is a little credit to the people who do the things as well as to the people who criticise. As far as concerns the dredging inspector at Matchadash bay I knew nothing about it until it was brought to my attention the other day, and it seems that the agent acted in a way that was improper and as his returns came to the department the department had no means of knowing that they were inaccurate. I think it would be well for the department to see that there would be some check upon superintendents of that class, and that these returns are more accurate, but I confess also that I cannot quite understand that it would be very difficult indeed to force a man under all circumstances and at all times to do his duty if he wants to shirk it. We have to depend on subordinate officers all over the country for the public service. It is unfortunately the case that occasionally—very rarely I am glad to say for the reputation of the people of Canada—but still occasionally a man does what he should not do and in this instance he seems to have made returns that were not justified by his services. I shall be very glad to recommend to the permanent Minister of Public Works that some change should be made which would as far as possible check the action of superintendents and secure that such an incident as this should not occur. It is but little satisfaction to say that the actual loss is small, but still it is a principle and a thing which might have occurred more frequently and might have occurred on occasions of which we know nothing.

With regard to the general question of dredging I am glad to say that the country is getting the dredging done there at a cheaper rate than it was before. The different Ministers of Public Works have been trying different plans and have found a plan which appears to work satisfactorily. I trust it will. My hon. friend himself says it is working satisfactorily.

Mr. BENNETT. I say that as to the price it is satisfactory; as to the other conditions I know not.

Mr. FISHER. As to the price, that is what we are talking about now; it is working satisfactorily, and we hope it will go on satisfactorily in that regard and in other respects to as great an extent as possible.

Mr. BENNETT. I omitted to mention another matter. I know nothing about Mr. Temple, politically or in any other way, but I want to call the attention of the minister to the fact that at page V—392 there is some correspondence in reference to a bill of some $1,400 that was presented for breaking ice at the harbour of Port Arthur in 1902 by the Great Lakes Dredging Company. The papers were moved for and they disclosed that the services were performed in 1902. When the bill reached the department is was cheerfully certified to as being correct, although the service had been performed in 1902. I found out that the original papers were certified to by Mr. Temple. What was the result? The Auditor General's Department called attention, as may be seen by the letter on page V—392, to the extraordinary fact that a bill was presented some four or five years after the service was performed, and the Auditor General refused to pay the bill amounting to some $1,402. After the Auditor General had called the attention of the department to the fact that they must get an order in council if it were to be paid, was the order in council got? Although it is certified to by Mr. Temple as being correct, that bill is unpaid to-day, or at least it was unpaid at that date. Has the account been paid since?

Mr. FISHER. I am told that the account has not been paid, but the matter has been settled in the line that it should be paid. The work was done about three years ago. When the bill came in, it was looked upon as being too high for the work, and the work had not been authorized. In the discussion which occurred, the bill was reduced materially to a basis which was justifiable as pay for the work performed. To the department, on investigation, the work seemed to be in the public interest, although the department at headquarters had not authorized it. The bill as eventually passed was at rates which were considered fair and just for the work actually performed, and on these grounds the department decided to pay it.

Mr. BENNETT. About what was the amount that was paid ?

Mr. FISHER. It is not paid yet ; but the amount agreed upon was $1,402.50.

Mr. BENNETT. That was the amount originally claimed ?

Mr. FISHER. No, the amount originally claimed was about one-third more, that is to say, nearly $2,000.

Mr. BENNETT. And so far the account has not been paid ?

Mr. FISHER. No.

Mr. BENNETT. I find in this same report that this Great Lakes Dredging Company, which seems to have what in common parlance is called a pull with the department, was paid for the use of a yacht called the 'Nahma' at the rate of $100 a day for two days and at the rate of $75 a day for six months. May I ask who settled that amount of pay for that boat ? I have endeavoured to find out what style of boat she was by reference to the Canadian Register, but I find that she is not registered at all.

Mr. FISHER. That is evidently a misprint; so much per day must mean so much per month, because the total payment is $976, and if she had been employed for the time and at the rates mentioned, it would have been ten times that. I do not myself know anything about the matter, but it is evident on the face of the account that that is not correct.

Mr. SPROULE. What was she doing ?

Mr. FISHER. She was used by the inspector going about on inspection.

Mr. BENNETT. What class of boat is she at $75 a month ?

Mr. FISHER. She must have been a gasoline launch. The officers of the department do not know the boat, but at the rate she could not have been a very large one.

Mr. BENNETT. If she was a gasoline launch, the minister would have done better to have bought one.

Mr. SPROULE. With regard to the icebreaker, the minister said that the work had to be done and that good value had been given for the money. How did he reach that conclusion four years after the work was done, and without it being under the supervision of any one?

Mr. BENNETT. Has an application been made by the town of Midland to be reimbursed for breaking ice there last fall, and has the minister considered the application favourably ?

Mr. FISHER. I do not know it myself, and the officers of the department are not aware of it.

Mr. BENNETT. Last fall the town went to the expense, and some citizens also contributed, to cut the ice in order to allow three or five grain vessels to come in. If the application has not been made, I shall advise the authorities to make it to the department.

Mr. FISHER. We will consider it.

Mr. SPROULE. Let me say another word with regard to this Bowman firm, because they seem to be followed by suspicion wherever they go. Some dredging was done by that firm at Southampton, and I was told by a reputable citizen of that town that it was not done in a creditable way, and that a large claim was made upon the government which Mr. Hyman, when he visited the place, declared to be scandalous. A considerable portion of the account was not paid. Has it been adjusted or is it still pending ?

Mr. FISHER. There is an outstanding account for dredging at Southampton, the difficulty being to determine the character of the soil removed.

Mr. SPROULE. Or whether it was removed at all or not ?

Mr. FISHER. No, not as to whether or not it was removed, but as to the character of the soil. The contractor claimed that it was hard material, while the engineers reported that it was not, and that consequently it should be paid for at a lower rate.

Mr. SPROULE. I think there was more than that. I think the contention was set up that, where the soil was soft the contractor took it out, but that when hard pan was struck he went over that, so that the bottom was very uneven and the dredging was not done.

Mr. FISHER. I am informed that that is not the case.

Mr. SPROULE. I was told by a very reputable citizen there that it is the case.

I think there is a good deal more about it than that although I am not in possession of the absolute facts to warrant my repeating all I heard about it. But it left this impression on my mind that the contractor in connection with that and other transactions is well worth watching. The minister laughs. It may be a matter of levity to him but the country is spending the money and expects to get value in return. And the people will not regard it as a laughing matter that thousands of dollars have been taken out of the public treasury and nothing given in return by Mr. Bowman or his associates.

Mr. FISHER. It is the duty of all public employees to see that the work is done.

Mr. SPROULE. Sometimes that duty is not carried out. Let me give another illustration which I cited a few years ago. Dredging was going on in Owen Sound, and a man was appointed to remain on the dredge and see that the scows were properly filled. The company were allowed so many yards per scow, and a government official was put there to prevent their going out with the scow half loaded and charging the whole number of yards. Well, this man spent a large portion of his time around the hotels smoking cigars.

Mr. FISHER. He was derelict in his duty.

Mr. SPROULE. Yes, but although the matter was brought to the attention of the government, the same man was put on again. He was receiving $3 a day for watching what was being done, and I was told that he was absent three-quarters of the time.

Mr. BENNETT. I want to call attention to this fact that these dredging companies are composed of men not at all connected with that class of work. Take the Penetanguishene Dredging Company, what has a physician and superintendent of a provincial institution in common with dredging? He receives a high salary, upwards of $4,000, and yet he blossoms out into a contractor and has associated with him this Mr. Gendron, and Gendron's brother is in charge of the work. Naturally we suspect that everything is not altogether right. The contractors may perhaps be a little light on the price but they make good on the quantity. Take the company known as the Owen Sound Dredging Company. Who compose that company? The minister must know or his officers as there is a record in the department and a return brought down. We have a record showing a telegram from one of the owners of the dredge, Mr. McKay, a practising barrister in Ontario and a member of the late Ross government, asking who has the contract for certain dredging. Everybody knows that Mr. McKay owns that dredge or a half interest in it and that a certain member of parliament owned the other half interest. That member of parliament is no more, but the public records show that his interest in the company stood in the name of a poor school teacher in western Ontario. After the member of parliament died, his stock went in his wife's name and it is there to-day. Let me take another of these companies, the Dominion Dredge and Construction Company. They have a contract at Port Stanley or Port Colborne. Who is that company?

Mr. FISHER. I do not know and do not care.

Mr. BENNETT. But the country does. When you go down the streets of Ottawa and are told that a son of the junior member for Ottawa (Mr. Stewart) is the owner of a dredge, you ask in astonishment where did that boy get it? The hon. Minister has put himself on record as saying that he does not care who owns the dredge.

Mr. FISHER. Practically.

Mr. BENNETT. The public care, the public are interested in knowing whether it is members of parliament or their sons and relatives who are interested in these companies, and who no one would suspect of owning a dredge. It has been the whole policy in Ontario to associate politicians with these dredges. Take the dredges that were owned at Owen Sound by different parties—right after the change of government these parties were practically taken by the throat and sold out their dredges for mere songs to politicians, and these politicians have the contracts ever since. I have made the statement, both in and outside the House that one of the dredges composing the fleet of the Great Lakes Dredging Company was imported by the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Conmee). He denied the statement but I dared the Minister of Customs to say that the customs returns do not show that it was imported by the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Conmee) and the customs duty paid by him.

Mr. FISHER. You have to accept the statement of the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Conmee).

Mr. BENNETT. I accept his statement and accept the customs return which show that a dredge was imported by Mr. James Conmee, of Rainy River. The minister says he does not know who owns the dredges, whether members of parliament or joint stock companies. But the public care and they can readily understand why dredging was given at Port Arthur at twenty-five cents a yard without tender when now that the government have been driven to it, the work is being done at nine cents a cubic yard. The public will draw their own conclusions when they see the Great Lakes Dredging Company put in two tenders, and then expecting to be allowed by the Minister of Public Works to withdraw the low tender and substitute a high one. As regards the appointment of inspectors at Port Arthur and Fort William, is it the member for Rainy River (Mr. Conmee) who recommends them ?

Mr. FISHER. I have not the slightest idea. Mr. Temple, an old engineer, has been working there and is in charge. I am lost in admiration at the hon. gentleman's ingenuity in devising ways to cheat the government. I do not know where he has learnt so well how to do that or what the result may be if the government contractors should be tempted to do the things my hon. friend has been working out so carefully and ingenuously in his fertile mind. I do not believe that the contractors would tender for government work and spend their time in inventing methods to defraud the government. I think they spend their time in their business and that they are generally honourable men who can be trusted. The hon. gentleman seems to forget that there are Conservative as well as Liberal contractors. Some of the largest contractors in the employ of this government were Conservative members of parliament. This government gives contracts to the lowest tenderers, whether Liberal or Conservative.

An hon. MEMBER. Have these men's politics changed ?

Mr. FISHER. No, they are about the same as they were. I believe that they got contracts before in the way suggested by my hon. friend. from Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) as members of joint stock companies. I am not going to ask who the members of a joint stock company are. A son or nephew or aunt of a member of parliament has—yes, and even the member himself—has a right to be a member of a joint stock company having a contract with this government. I can remember when the Conservatives were in power that there were on the very government benches men who were members of companies having contracts with the government. The late Hon. Thomas White, for instance, was a member of the Montreal 'Gazette' Company which, for years had large payments from the government.

Mr. SPROULE. What about the 'Herald.'

Mr. FISHER. I do not know what about the 'Herald.' Hon. members opposite can give dozens of instances of members of this House holding stock in joint stock companies that had contracts with the government. It is not a new thing; that has been allowed under the law of the land for many years. But, of course, those who choose can cast suspicions and give out innuendoes to cause the public to believe that it is wrong for members to hold stock in such companies. But, when a contract is open to public tender there is nothing to be said even though members of this House are members of the joint stock company which gets the contract.

Mr. BENNETT. I take it that the reference made by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fisher) is to Mr. W. J. Poupore as a member of the Weddell Company.

Mr. FISHER. I did not know he was a member of that company.

Mr. BENNETT. I can tell the hon. gentleman that Mr. Weddell and his associates in that company showed a higher estimate of the Minister of Public Works than did Mr. Bowman and his associates. They put in one honest tender and were ready to stand before or fall by it. Does the hon. minister (Mr. Fisher) want a more damning insinuation than that ?

Mr. FISHER. I do not see anything damning about it.

Mr. BENNETT. Well, I have heard of people whose sense of right was stunted. The minister does not see anything wrong in a company putting in one tender in a corporate name and a member of that firm putting a tender for the same work under another name. Why, it so attracted the attention of the hon. member for Glengarry (Mr. J. T. Schell) that, when I spoke about the case he asked if this tender was for the same work. He, a contractor, was astounded to think that these gentlemen of the Great Lakes Dredging Company had so low an estimate of the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Hyman). The hon. gentleman has referred to Hon. Thomas White. Well, Mr. White is dead and gone. But he left a pretty good reputation behind him—I think as good as that held by the ex-Minister of Public Works (Mr. Hyman). The statement is on record in 'Hansard' that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fisher) was a large stock holder in the Montreal 'Herald.'

Mr. FISHER. Years ago.

Mr. BENNETT. Not many years ago—not 'when we were twenty-one,' but much later than that. And when he became a member of this government, he transferred his stock to his brother.

Mr. FISHER. Yes.

Mr. BENNETT. All in the family. And the Montreal 'Herald' is fattening pretty well at the public crib. Here we see the difference between the two men. Hon. Thomas White said; 'No entry by back doors for me; it is my right to be a member of a joint stock company, even if that company does business with the government, and I will hold my stock.' But the acting Minister of Public Works transferred his stock to his brother. I would like to know if any consideration was given for it and who draws the dividends.

Mr. FISHER. I am sorry to say it was never worth anything.

Mr. J. T. SCHELL. These references bring up the question of contracts for many years back. For many years we have had discussions on dredging and dredging contracts. We have had dredging for mud and sand at all prices from 35 cents to 9 cents, and we have had all sorts of conditions in the contracts. One point is noticeable, and that is that when this government came into power they largely inherited the methods that were in vogue under their predecessors, doing dredging by the hour or by the day, or giving closed contracts not asking for public tender. I am pleased to find the hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) is willing to congratulate the government for having developed the idea—and are getting better value for the country by it—of letting these works by open public tender. So far as I am concerned, I believe that is the proper way to do with all government contracts, or any other.

Mr. SPROULE. If they give a reasonable time to prepare tenders and not only three days.

Mr. J. T. SCHELL. I shall not go into the conditions, but I think that the hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) did not go into all the conditions with regard to that limited time. Speaking of the Rainy River dredging as compared with other dredging there is one point to be remembered and that is that on the Rainy River you are dredging into a heavy bank of sand, which is quite different from taking three or four feet, cutting off, as it were, the the tops of the little hillocks at the bottom of the water. In the latter case you bring up dipper after dipper with practically nothing, but in such work as the Rainy River work you are taking it out of a bank where every dipper comes up full. Two years ago the contract was let by public tender and the lowest tender price was 42 cents a foot. It was let to a Conservative because he was the lowest tenderer on that work. But it would not be fair at all to compare that 42 cents or 44 cents, the next lowest tender, with the nine cents. I am quite willing to give all the credit to the hon. member for East Simcoe. I have listened to him criticising and finding fault, and of course making all the political capital he could for his side out of these dredging contracts. That is perfectly legitimate. But there are dredging contracts and there are dredging contracts; there are conditions wherein a price of 42 cents would be the lowest price, and other conditions where a price of 9 cents, 9½, 13, 15 and 18 would be the lowest price, according to the character of the work done, and the conditions surrounding it.

Another point I wish to make is that all these contracts, if the government can at all do so, and if the contract is large enough, should be let by public competition. I consider that is the only proper way to let government contracts. As to the ownership of dredges, time and again in the last few weeks parties have come to me who wished me to join in dredging contracts, and I have invariably told them that I did not understand that business. You need a man who understands the business to run a dredge. When you take the Weddell concern and a good many of these dredging concerns who furnish the money, if they get a good dredge runner they will succeed. It all depends on the man who is running that dredge, and if the owner of the dredge, or the man who furnishes the money, gets a good dredge runner, a man of character and ability to handle the dredge, he will make a success of it. I can name you numbers of men who would be willing to go behind me if I had the money, I have had a number of offers of that kind myself, and I daresay others have too; but I do not care to go into anything relating to government contracts as long as I sit in this House, and I do not intend to.

Mr. BENNETT. I want to ask my hon. friend one question, as I believe he is a fair man and will give an honest answer. To use a mild term, does he not think that the two tenders of A. F. Bowman and the Great Lakes Dredging Company, are rather foxy?

Mr. J. T. SCHELL. I would not give an opinion on a matter of that kind until I understood all about the conditions. I would want to understand thoroughly all these matters before giving an opinion as to prices. There is one point the hon. gentleman has overlooked, that is that when a contract is let it is let at 9 cents; it makes no difference if all the individual members of that concern put in their tenders at 18 or 80 cents, it is the 9 cent price that prevails. But the point I wish to make is that in public tendering, in public contract letting, it makes no difference whether each one of the individual members of that firm puts in a different price so long as the tender is public and the contract is public, it has to go at the lowest price. If there is any departure from that rule the minister is amenable; and I am not prepared to say that the oath of office of a minister of a government in this country is to be lightly called in question. But I would be calling it in question if I took these figures and these alleged facts as being absolutely true.

Red river—improvements at St. Andrew's rapids, $200,000.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Would the minister explain the position of the work at the present time ?

Mr. FISHER. The work is under contract, and it is progressing. It is expected that this $200,000 will be expended during the coming year.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. How much has been spent during the past year ?

Mr. FISHER. This is a new contract which was only let last fall. The old contractor failed and the contract was cancelled.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. The character of the work was changed too, was it not ?

Mr. FISHER. Not materially. The contractor was not making proper progress with the work and the contract was taken out of his hands. When the work was taken out of his hands a radical change was made in the plans.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Who has the present contract ?

Mr. FISHER. Quinlan & Robertson

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Owing to the lateness of the hour I will not discuss this question further. But had the hon. member for Winnipeg (Mr. Bole) been in his place I would like to have asked that gentleman for a little information. In 1904 he promised his electors that if certain progress was not made in connection with that work by a certain time, he would resign his seat. But the progress has not been made and he still keeps his seat.

Transportation facilities—Georgian bay to Montreal—survey for waterway via French and Ottawa rivers, including payments authorized notwithstanding the Civil Service Act, $25,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Will there be anything in the supplementary estimates ?

Mr. FISHER. Yes, there will be a small item in the supplementaries and you can then discuss this question.

Montreal harbour (lower division)—improvements below St. Mary's current, $75,000.

Mr. GERVAIS. I would like to say a few words with respect to the building of wharfage facilities at St. Helen's island. As every one knows St. Helen's island is situated just opposite the city of Montreal on the south eastern side of the deepest channel of the river. By virtue of several Acts of the provincial legislature this island has been annexed to the territory of the city of Montreal. The island, which should form part of the county of Chambly, has been declared to be part of the city of Montreal. The whole administration of the island has been given to the corporation of the city of Montreal.

Mr. DANIEL. Does not Montreal own it now ?

Mr. GERVAIS. Later on, as far as I can see, the corporation of the city of Montreal will become the owner in fee simple of St. Helen's island. For the last thirty years the city of Montreal has been in possession of the island under a leasehold granted by the government to the corporation. There is some talk of a sale in fee simple of the island to the corporation by the government of Canada ; but at this date that sale is not completed. In the meantime, whether it is completed or not, under any circumstances, wharfage facilities should be given to the people of Montreal who have to go over to that island. During the hot season of the summer on many days over 30,000 people have to land on St. Helen's island.

Mr. J. T. SCHELL. Where do they land if there is no wharf ?

Mr. GERVAIS. There are some temporary but inadéquate wharf facilities.

Mr. DANIEL. Do they land from ferries ?

Mr. GERVAIS. Ferries, row boats and steamers plying between Montreal and St. Helen's island. As a matter of fact, for the last twenty years St. Helen's island has been used by the city of Montreal as a public park. It is now proposed that the city of Montreal should buy the island from the government of Canada; but in the meantime, for the benefit of the people of Montreal, proper and permanent wharfage facilities should be established on St. Helen's island.

Mr. DANIEL. Why do they not build the wharf ?

Mr. GERVAIS. They are no more bound to do it than quite a number of fishing villages which have been granted any kind of wharf accommodation. That is why I am bringing this matter to the notice of parliament.

Mr. LENNOX. It is not for the general advantage of Canada.

Mr. GERVAIS. Yes, it is for the general advantage of Canada. If you have good healthy people in the city of Montreal it will redound to the benefit of the people of Canada. If you have good healthy citizens in the city of Montreal the Dominion of Canada will be all right. I may say also that most of the people who have to cross over to the island are people without any great means, are mostly women and children and something should be done to accommodate the 30,000 people who land on that island. Sometimes during the hot season many more thousands of people land on the island of St. Helen than are coming on the Montreal island by water. I may add also that the request for the building of a permanent wharf at St. Helen's island was presented to the Hon. Mr. Hyman last summer. This request was made on behalf of the city of Montreal through its committee on parks and ferries. The Hon. Mr. Hyman ordered his district engineer, Mr. Michaud, to make a report upon the proposed work. The total expenditure was estimated by Mr. Michaud at the sum of $7,000, I am informed. I do not know why there is no amount in the estimates for the construction of a work of such great utility. I would like to be informed by the minister why he has thought fit to disregard the request of the council of the city of Montreal, as well as the request of all the citizens of Montreal? I may add also that I do not understand why such a small expenditure should be refused to the city of Montreal when thousands and thousands of dollars are spent freely right and left from one end of the province of Quebec to the other and also in some other provinces. The people of Montreal need a wharf at St. Helen's island and anybody who is aware of their needs will say that I am right.

Mr. FISHER. This vote does not contemplate the erection of such a wharf as that. This vote is only for the commercial wharf down below St. Mary's current.

Mr. GERVAIS. I know, but I may say, as has been the case for several years past, we never know when an item is coming up. One item is called to-night and another tomorrow morning, and it is quite a task at the end of the session to know how we can ventilate the grievances of the people we represent. I have a chance to-night and I do wish to put before this House the wish, the request, the demand of the people of Montreal.

Port Colborne—harbour improvements, $25,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Will there be an item in the supplementaries ?

Mr. FISHER. Yes, for next year.

Mr. GERVAIS. Before the House adjourns I would like the minister to say if there will be an item put in for the construction of a wharf on St. Helen's island ?

Mr. FISHER. I am afraid I cannot gratify my hon. friend's curiosity as to items in the supplementary estimates which are not yet before the House.

Some resolutions reported.

Mr. FIELDING moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. SPROULE. What business will be taken up on Monday ?

Mr. FIELDING. We will continue in supply with the estimates of the Minister of Public Works.

Mr. SPROULE. Until they are disposed of ?

Mr. FIELDING. Yes, and after that we would like to be free to take up general business, chiefly in supply.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 12.15 a.m. Saturday.
