

excuses for, I will send you copy of what was found by means of the graphology.

It will be delighted to see you in Montreal, but when you will come, let me know a little before hand, as I often go out of town for a day or two.

La petite enfant is well and looks happy. She has a nice little nest of her own, near the mountain. I do not know if you'll ever be invited there. You look such a dangerous man. But a true friend, I hope. Truly yours, on that important question. I know that you can not well come now, and without being asked to, but could you not arrange to be asked? I mean, could you not possibly find somebody that could introduce the subject and seize the opportunity of speaking to Sir Wilfrid, for example. Where
