TWELFTH YEAR. FRIDAY MORNING, JANUARY 15, 1892. ONE CENT.

A ROYAL LIFE ENDED

The Young Duke of Clarence is Dead.

DISSOLUTION AT 9 A.M. YESTERDAY.

Another Grief Added to the Queen's Many Sorrows.

STRICKEN IN THE EVENING OF LIFE.

An Affliction Unique in Its Heaviness Upon the Parents of the Dead Prince and Cruel in Its Significance to the Sorrowing Bride—Sketch of the Dead Duke—He Lived in the Shadow of the Throne and the Public Knew but Little of Him—The New Heir-Presumptive, Prince George—Sandringham, Where the Prince Died—Comments of the London Press.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The Duke of Clarence and Avondale is dead. The Prince of Wales has sent the following telegram to the Lord Mayor of London:

"My beloved son passed away at 9 o'clock to-day. ALBERT EDWARD."

The news of the death of the Duke of Clarence has caused widespread grief, and already demonstrations of the public feeling are everywhere apparent. All public buildings display flags at half-mast throughout the city of London. The sad intelligence has been received with expressions of the deepest sorrow.

On receipt of the news of the death of the Duke, the Lord Mayor at once gave orders to have the great bell in St. Paul's Cathedral tolled, and also sent the following message to the Prince of Wales:

"We are profoundly moved by the sad news, and have communicated it to our fellow-citizens. We tender our deep and respectful sympathy with your Royal Highness in this great sorrow and national calamity."

The Bells of St. Paul's.

When the solemn tolling of the great bell in St. Paul's Cathedral was heard this morning it conveyed to everyone within hearing the fact that the Duke of Clarence and Avondale had passed away.

The bells in St. Paul's are never tolled save on the occasion of the death of an heir to the throne, and therefore no further information was needed for the people of London to make them aware that after a gallant struggle the Duke had finally succumbed.

The announcement of his death caused far less commotion in this city than was expected, but this was, no doubt, due to the fact that nearly everybody had given up hope yesterday and believed that death was sure to claim the Duke. The telegram from the Prince of Wales to the Lord Mayor announcing the death of the Duke was not posted at the Mansion House until 10 o'clock. When the little piece of white paper was put up there were only a few persons in waiting. They received the news with stolid indifference. The crowd at no time exceeded 30 during the first half hour after the announcement was posted. Scarcely any comments were made.

Discussing the Duke's Death.

At the West End there was a scene that was in striking contrast to the indifference displayed in the vicinity of the Mansion House. Hundreds of persons well known in the upper circles of society, members of the aristocracy and others gathered in little groups and generally discussed the death of the Duke and its effect upon the succession in all its bearings. Serious faces could be seen all along Pall Mall, and there is no doubt the calamity is much taken to heart by the English nobility. The blinds of public houses and many of the private houses and shops are drawn both in the West End and in the city. The afternoon papers all appeared with mourning borders.

At Sandringham Hall.

Up to noon no official bulletin of the death of the Duke had been issued at Sandringham Hall, but after 10 o'clock the blinds of the house were drawn, the flag on the church was placed at half-mast and the church bell began tolling. These facts gave to the people waiting about the gates the first intimation that all was over. From an early hour this morning reinforcements of police were detailed to duty about Sandringham Hall and they prevented access to the house.

As the day progressed the crowd in the vicinity of Marlborough House increased. The Mall was at times completely blocked with carriages conveying the most noted people of the kingdom. Lord Salisbury, the Prime Minister, and Lady Salisbury and nearly the entire diplomatic corps were among the callers.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon the following despatch was received from Sandringham:

After a marked improvement during the early part of the night the strength of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale suddenly failed. About 9 o'clock he began to gradually sink and death occurred at 9.15 a.m.

This despatch was signed by the three physicians who had been in attendance upon His Royal Highness. The bells in Westminster Abbey were tolled at 12 o'clock until 1.

The Queen's Sorrow.

Her Majesty is prostrated by the blow that has fallen upon her through the death of her grandson and did not feel equal to the task of accompanying the Duke of Connaught. She still remains at Osborne House.

Telegrams from all parts of the kingdom show that the news of the death of the Duke was received everywhere with tokens of deep respect and sorrow.

The Duke of Connaught, uncle of Prince Albert Victor and personal aide-de-camp to the Queen, arrived at Portsmouth at noon from Osborne. He traveled in the royal yacht Albert and Victoria. When he entered Portsmouth harbor with the ensign at half mast as the royal yacht got abeam of the flagship Victory the latter's ensign was lowered to half mast, and this movement was followed by all the other ships in the harbor. The Duke of Connaught immediately landed and took a special train and proceeded at once for Sandringham.

Flags are flying at half-mast on the parish churches at Dersingham and Wolferton close to Sandringham, and the flag on the church at the latter place is still floating at half-mast.

The blinds are drawn in the house of every tenant on the Prince of Wales' estate.

Distressing Scenes at the Bedside.

It is learned that most distressing scenes occurred at the bedside of the dying Prince yesterday and last night. Since midnight on Tuesday the Prince was either delirious or wholly unconscious save for a few minutes now and then. During his lucid intervals he was most tender and affectionate to his parents and others who were at his bedside. Between 7 and 8 o'clock last night the condition of the sufferer grew so bad that the usual bulletin was delayed, as it was feared that the end would come at any moment. Soon afterward he became a shade better and toward midnight he fell into a sleep, which, while it was disturbed more than usual, was considered beneficial. At 2 o'clock this morning he again became worse, and the members of the family who had withdrawn from room were hastily summoned. They all remained at the bedside until death occurred.

Both the Prince and Princess of Wales look haggard and worn out by their continued watching by the bedside of their son. They are in deepest distress and nothing can afford them consolation for the loss sustained.

Wales Wrote His Own Messages.

The Prince of Wales would allow no one to write the telegrams announcing the death of his son to the Queen, the Lord Mayor and the various European Sovereigns. He reserved to himself this sad task and all these messages he wrote with his own hand. The telegraph wires leading from Sandringham were kept busy all morning in transmitting messages from the family of the Prince.

This afternoon messages of condolence began pouring in, and already such messages have been received from most of the rulers of the world. Many messages have also been received at Osborne House. The Government is also receiving official messages from the Prime Ministers of many countries.

Up to 3 o'clock this afternoon over 700 persons have signed their names on the visitors book at Marlboro House. The signatures are those of persons in all conditions of life.

Telegrams from all the European capitals report a universal display of tokens of sympathy and visits of diplomatic and royal representatives to English embassies to express condolence with the Prince and Princess of Wales.

The bells of St. Paul's and other city churches have been tolled all the afternoon.

No performance will be given in any of the principal theatres to-night, they having closed their doors as a token of respect to the dead prince.

All the papers dwell upon the event as the saddest that has occurred since the death of Prince Consort.

The greatest sympathy is expressed for Princess Mary. The latest report from Sandringham which, however, is not confirmed officially, is to the effect that the Princess of Wales and Princess Mary are prostrated with illness.

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS.

The Prince of Wales Desires the Remains Interred at Sandringham.

The Prince and Princess of Wales are desirous of having the remains of the Duke of Clarence buried at Sandringham, but it is not thought likely that the Queen will accede to their demands on the grounds of precedence and that others of the family are buried at Windsor.

President Harrison has cabled a message of condolence to the Queen.

Prince Leopold of Belgium will attend the funeral.

The Czar of Russia, Emperor William of Germany, King Christian of Denmark, the Grand Duke of Hesse, the King of Italy, the Queen Regent of Spain, the Emperor of Austria, the King of Portugal, King Oscar of Sweden and King Leopold of Belgium are among those who have already telegraphed their condolence to the Prince and Princess of Wales and the Queen of England. Lord Salisbury has cancelled the date of his visit to Exeter, Devonshire.

The Right Hon. A. J. Balfour also cancelled his big rallying campaign in Ireland, which was to have been opened Tuesday next.

The Prince of Wales, had it not been for the death of his son, was to have gone on Monday next on a visit to the Earl of Lonsdale at Lowther Castle, Westmoreland.

All the Cabinet Ministers and Liberal leaders who had engagements to appear in public have cancelled their dates.

To Be Buried at Windsor.

Her Majesty announces that the funeral of the Duke would be a state function and that it would be held in St. George's Chapel, Windsor Palace. It was in this chapel that the marriage was to have taken place on Feb. 27 next.

There is so much to be done in the way of preparation that the funeral can hardly occur till the end of next week. It will be of a military character.

HIS GRANDMOTHER'S FAVORITE.

The Queen's Sympathetic Message to the Mother and Affianced Bride.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Although the Queen knew she was hoping against hope the announcement of the Duke of Clarence's death was a great shock to her. He had always been her favorite grandson, and his untimely death was a most severe blow to her. She immediately telegraphed a long message of sympathy to the Prince and Princess of Wales. She did not forget, in her own sorrow, the sorrow that has come to Princess May, whose love-dream has been rudely shattered by the hand of death. To her Her Majesty sent a message condoling with her in her sorrow and distress and in loving words expressing her sympathy.

She ordered the Duke of Connaught to proceed at once to Sandringham to represent her there. She also ordered that the court go into full mourning for three months and canceled all the "drawing-rooms" and state levees.

THE FATEFUL FOURTEENTH.

The Queen's Great Sorrow During the Past Thirty Years.

Death of the Duchess of Kent (her mother), March 16, 1861.

Death of the Prince Consort (her husband), December 14, 1861.

Death of the Grand Duchess of Hesse (her daughter, Alice Maude Mary), December 14, 1878.

Death of the Duke of Albany (her son Leopold), March 24, 1884.

Death of Frederick William, Emperor of Germany (her son-in-law and husband of the Princess Royal), June 15, 1888.

Death of the Duke of Clarence (her grandson, Albert Victor, and heir-presumptive to the Throne), January 14, 1892.

Illness of the Prince of Wales, the turning point for the better in whose condition is thus gratefully acknowledged by the following touching words inscribed on a brass lectern in the church at Sandringham:

"To the Glory of God."
A thank-offering for His Mercy.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

Wherein the Special Pathos of the Prince's Death Lies.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The St. James' Gazette this afternoon says: It would be sycophancy to say that the hapless prince was regarded with enthusiastic devotion and intense personal regard by a majority of those over whom he might have ruled. We have the best reason to believe that in the death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale we have lost a promising young prince, whose untimely taking off would claim our sorrow even without the exceptional circumstances of the occasion. But it is the circumstance of the approaching marriage wherein a special pathos lies. The death of the Duke can hardly make a serious difference in the political or dynastic situation. Prince George of Wales steps into the place of heir. If the tragic event has any lesson in it, it is that it's a duty that princes owe to their subjects from their position to take due and reasonable measures to make the succession secure.

The St. James' Gazette adds that the sense that tears are mortal thing, was never more deeply felt. The Duke of Clarence and Avondale, The Gazette continues, was of a retiring disposition and lived in the shadow of the Throne, and the public knew but little of him.

The Star gives utterance to a warm expression of sympathy with the parents of the dead prince and with the Princess Mary.

The Times says that the heart of the nation goes forth to the grief-bowed parents and to his weeping bride. The tragedy, The Times adds, is deepened in intensity by the light shadow which made its approach.

The Evening News remarks that the Queen's advanced years render her susceptible to the sorrow, and that the death of her probable successor has been the most severe blow she has felt since the death of the Prince Consort. The affliction, according to The News, is unique in its heaviness upon the parents of the dead Prince and cruel in its significance to the sorrowing bride.

The Dublin Newspapers.

In Dublin the newspapers appeared in mourning. Many of the leading stores put up their shutters. The Lord Mayor presided at a meeting of 30 members of the municipal council, who passed a vote of condolence with the Queen and with the Prince and Princess of Wales. The civic flag was placed at half-mast over the Mansion House as soon as the news of the Duke's death reached there.

THE DEAD PRINCE.

Brief History of the Man Whose Demise is Universally Mourned.

Prince Albert Victor Christian Edward, Duke of Clarence and Avondale, was the eldest son of the Prince of Wales and heir-presumptive to the throne of England. He was born Jan. 8, 1864, and was consequently 28 years of age. He was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, and at the University of Heidelberg. Before entering college he served two years as a naval cadet on the Britannia, and in 1879 started with his brother, Prince George, on a three years' voyage round the world in the warship Bacchante.

After a visit to India he returned to England, and in 1890 took his seat in the House of Lords, having been in that year created Duke of Clarence and Avondale and Earl of Athlone. He was third major of the famous 10th Hussar Regiment, of which his father, the Prince of Wales, is colonel.

Prince Albert has been known to his associates as "Prince Eddy," and has been disrespectfully nicknamed "Collars and Cuffs" because of his careful attention to dress.

Intellectually he has been unfavorably compared with his younger brother, Prince George. He was very fond of music and was himself a performer on the violin.

In the Duke's Regiment.

A special telegram was despatched to the officers of the 10th Hussars, stationed in the Marlboro' barracks. The Duke was a major of this regiment and the knowledge of his death created much excitement. The barracks were immediately placed in mourning. The men belonging to the regiment were until yesterday engaged in collecting subscriptions for a wedding gift for the Duke.

His Life in Barracks.

For the past two years the Duke of Clarence has been attached to the 10th Hussars, of which regiment the Prince of Wales is colonel. During the year 1891 the Duke was gazetted major, his brother officers being Lieut.-Col. Viscount Downe, Major Manners Charles Wood, Major Hon. James Napier, Major John P. Brabazon, Adjutant Hon. Arthur Lawley. The 10th Hussars is a crack regiment, and additional honor was bestowed on it through its two Royal officers. During the regiment's stay in York the Duke was most attentive to every detail of his military duties. He was a favorite not only with his brother officers, but with everyone in the regiment. His familiar features were well known in the old cathedral city, and on the famed Knavesmire, the scene of many classic races, the ground on which the Duke often drilled his regiment.

Not only in brilliant gatherings in the officers' quarters, where His Royal Highness shone as a genial host, but at the meets of the many hunt clubs for which the broad shire is famous, was the handsome and popular young officer generally found. Many were the good runs he had with the York and Ainsty, the Brambam Moor, the Hambledon, the Holderness, Lord Middleton's and the Earl of Zetland's fox hounds. In fact, the Duke was an ardent lover of sport, and on the two chief racecourses of Yorkshire, those of York and Doncaster, he watched the contests for the blue ribands of the shire. Nor was His Royal Highness merely a worshipper of pleasure, though found in the ball room, at the York Theatre and the best of the local concerts. He took an active interest in the scientific and philanthropic gatherings of Old Ebor, and on several occasions took part in meetings in their behalf. Oft was he seen worshipping with the crowded congregation in the choir of York Minster, where monarchs of long ago had bowed the knee. Proud was His Royal Highness to have his name enrolled as a freeman of the old city, and eloquent was the response he made on being presented with its freedom. Several times he dined with the Lord Mayor and Sheriff and responded to the loyal toasts with facility and grace. Frequently he took his walks abroad to the many charming little villages around Old Eboracum. He was respected, yea almost beloved by all who knew him, and unfeigned was the grief of the citizens when a few weeks ago the regiment was ordered to Dublin.

WHERE THE PRINCE DIED.

Sandringham House, the Residence of the Prince of Wales.

Sandringham House, where the young Prince died, is in Norfolk county, near Norwich. Wolferton Station, on the Lynn branch of the Great Eastern Railway, a train, lies rather low. The country between Wolferton and the Wash, consisting partly of reclaimed land, is a level expanse of meadow and arable; but beyond the station, hills of moderate elevation, which divide the village from what may be termed the plateau of Sandringham, run in ascending waves up to "the Heights." The country seaward is so flat that of a clear day there is a wide view over the sea toward Lynn on the left, and of the Lincolnshire coast, with the spire of Boston Church just visible in front. The farm and laborers' dwellings and a substantial old-fashioned house, inhabited by a country gentleman, on the Prince's estate, are seen below. The station is about seven miles from Lynn, two miles from the house, and not quite so far from the sea.

In 1862 Lord Palmerston recommended the estate to the notice of the Prince Consort, then in search of a suitable residence for his son, and as Mr. Spencer Cowper, the owner, was willing to sell the purchase was effected for the sum of £220,000, or $1,000,000, and in 1863 the Prince of Wales entered on the ownership of Sandringham. The estate contains a little over 8000 acres—one-third being very good mixed soil, one-third grass, marsh and arable and one-third of a kind suitable to game coverts and best left to pheasants and rabbits—and although the Cowpers improved the property the price for which it was sold was certainly tenfold that for which it could have been purchased in the time of Charles II. But the desert may indeed be said to have bloomed into a garden since the manor-house was handed over to the royal tenant. In 1869 Sandringham as it appears to-day replaced the residence which Mr. Spencer and Lady Harriet Cowper had rendered habitable and comfortable.

Sandringham may be considered one of the most successful combinations of the art of "laying out" with the natural condition of the land that can be well conceived; for with infinite care and taste, and at vast expense, every feature of the lanscape has been turned to account. Extensive plantations admirably planned have covered the land, where it is not adapted for pasture or culture, with masses of foliage, and skilfully conducted rivulets have been adapted to feed the lakes which lend such charms to the grounds.

THE DUKE'S BETROTHED.

Sketch and Peculiarities of the Princess Victoria of Teck.

Prince Albert's betrothal to his cousin, Princess Victoria Mary of Teck, took place on Dec. 4, 1891, and was announced with the approval of all parties interested, on the 6th. Princess Victoria, or to describe her more accurately, Princess Victoria Mary Augusta Louise Olga Pauline Claudine Agnes, is the eldest child and only daughter of His Serene Highness the Duke of Teck and Princess Mary Adelaide, daughter of H. R. H. Prince Adolphus Frederick Duke of Cambridge, the seventh son of His Majesty King George III., was born at Kensington Palace on May 26, 1867, and is therefore in her 25th year. Her mother, the Duchess of Teck, has always been a most popular lady and the Princess Victoria Mary is said to greatly resemble her both in person and manner. The duchess is much given to embonpoint, and this the daughter inherits, and rumor has it that so much does she dread the approach of obesity that she has for two years past subsisted almost exclusively on a diet of toast.

The Princess's Anguish.

The condition of Princess May is pitiable. She wanders from room to room, weeping bitterly. She cannot be made to stay in one place for two minutes together, and she appears to be dazed at the sudden taking off of her betrothed husband. She refuses altogether to touch food and her terrible distress and wordless sorrow is causing much apprehension regarding her.

DEATH STOPS THE LOOMS.

The Satin for the Wedding Dress of Princess Mary Will Not Be Spun.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—At Belfast the looms which were weaving the linen for the household of the dead Prince have been stopped, and at Spitalfields where the satin for the wedding dress of Princess Mary was in hand the looms also stand still by order of death.

THE NEW HEIR-PRESUMPTIVE.

The Sailor Prince and His Hearty and Pleasing Manners.

The heir-presumptive, Prince George Frederick Ernest Albert, the second son of the Prince of Wales, was born on June 3, 1865, and is therefore in his 27th year. In 1879, in company with his brother, the late Prince, he started on a voyage around the world in the Bacchante. The voyage lasted until 1882, when Prince George, having been thoroughly grounded in the science of navigation and even in the commoner details of a sailor's life, was entered in the navy. He displayed a remarkable aptitude for his chosen profession and rose rapidly, and on his own merits. When in command of the gunboat Thrush a couple of years ago he was stationed at Halifax for some time and paid a short visit to Montreal.

As the younger son George was much in the background, but his many lovable qualities endeared him to his associates, and their faithful reports won him a greater popularity with the English people than his more exclusive elder brother ever obtained. George was generally supposed, too, to be of much sterner stuff mentally than the heir-presumptive, and the popularity of the young successor will go far to temper public sorrow for the dead prince.

George is something under the usual size, of a slender but well-knit figure. His disposition is remarkably sunny and his manners hearty and pleasing.

Prince George Engaged.

The gossip concerning the succession which was freely indulged in during the illness of the Duke has been greatly increased by his death. It is generally agreed that haste will now be made in bringing about marriage of Prince George to remove the possibility of the Fife succession. As the succession now stands, in event of the death of Prince of Wales and Prince George, the throne of England would fall to the wife of the Duke of Fife, and after her death to Lady Alexandra Duff, her daughter, who is not yet a year old. This possibility is not viewed with equanimity by the members of nobility, who believe that all the heirs to the throne should be of the full blood royal.

It is hinted very broadly that a marriage between Prince George and Princess Victoria Mary of Teck will be arranged.

The weekly paper, Modern Society, however, to-day asserts that a marriage has already been arranged between Prince George and a daughter of Prince and Princess Christian. Princess Christian is the third daughter of the Queen and was married to Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburgh-Augustenburg on July 5, 1866. There are four children of this marriage, two sons and two daughters. The eldest daughter, Princess Victoria Louise, was born May 3, 1870, and the younger Princess, Francesca Josepha, was born Aug. 14, 1872.

The President's Condolence.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Sir Julian Pauncefote addressed to Secretary Blaine to-day a note, in which he said:

"It is my sorrowful duty to announce to you the lamentable intelligence which I have just received from the Marquis of Salisbury of the death this morning at Sandringham of H. R. H. the Duke of Clarence.

In replying to this note Secretary Blaine said:

I have conveyed to the President the melancholy information you communicate in your note of this date of the death of H.R.H. the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, and I am directed by the President to express the sorrow with which he learns of this sad bereavement suffered by Her Majesty and the royal family.

By a telegraphic instruction sent to-day the minister of the United States has been directed to make suitable communication of the President's deep regret and sincere condolence.

TALK ABOUT PICTURES.

A Pleasant Time With Ontario's Artists Last Night.

The Ontario Society of Artists gave last evening the third of a series of art entertainments and a very enjoyable time it was.

Mr. G. Mercer Adam was the chairman, and Messrs. Cameron and Gray and Miss Clark by their songs contributed much to the pleasure of the evening.

The Chairman in his opening address referred to the lack of sympathy for art in Canada and maintained that the real love of the beautiful is present, but needs to be brought out.

This appropriately introduced the lecturer, Mr. J. W. L. Forster, who proceeded to give a thoroughly common sense lecture on "Pictures and How to View Them." Mr. Forster dwelt especially on the public as critics, and candidly acknowledged that it was to a great extent by the public's verdict that artists must stand or fall. He strongly recommended those who are unskilled in art criticism to stand by their own individual judgments and impressions. They have a perfect right to judge of what pleases them. "Study what you like," said he, "if you know why you like it, you have mastered all in art." He then passed in review the unmature student who judges from his inexperience, and the follower of a "vogue" who is really a faddist.

At the close of the address criticism was freely indulged in by the members. This terminated a very enjoyable evening.

ATTACKED THE OUTPOST.

Many British Officers Killed and Wounded by Slave Traders.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—A despatch from Mozambique says: The Arab slave traders in Nyassaland recently combined their forces and made an attack on the British outpost at Makangiras on the southwest shore of the lake, killing Capt. Maguire, the commander of the South Africa Co.'s force of Sikhs; Dr. Doyle, Mr. McEwan, the engineer of the company's steamer, and nine Sikhs. Many more were wounded. The fate of the outpost is in doubt. The Lake Company has asked for a gunboat and a supply of munitions.

The Sheriffs Meet.

The sheriffs of Ontario held their annual pow-wow yesterday at the Palmer House. The following were present: Sheriffs McKellar, Wentworth; Watt, Brant; Springer, Waterloo; McLennan, Victoria; Glass, Middlesex; Brady, Oxford; Smith, Welland; Bowles, Dufferin; Broddy, Peel; Thompson, Algoma; Ferguson, Frontenac; Hager, Prescott and Russell; Deeds, Norfolk; Phelps, Simcoe; Mowat, Toronto; Ferguson, Lennox and Addington; Gillespie, Wellfield, York; Hossie, Perth; Clement, Halton; Dawson, Lincoln; Davis, Haldimand.

After considering the best ways and means of improving their own positions and increasing the fees, the party adjourned to the Rossin House to dinner as guests of Sheriff Mowat.

Egan Has Fled.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Times Santiago despatch states that the last Balmacedist refuge at the American legation has escaped from Santiago by a night train accompanied by Minister Egan.

2 Killed, 13 Injured.

CHICAGO, Jan. 14.—A surface car was struck by a train at the Forty-seventh-street crossing of the Chicago, Pittsburg & Fort Wayne Railroad to-night. Two unknown persons were killed and thirteen injured.

King of Wines.

The town of Ay is the cradle of the champagne district. It is there that Messrs. Deutz and Geldermann own their beautiful vineyards, under which are built their marvelous chalk cellars, measuring miles in length. These are filled with the now famous "Gold Lack Sec" Champagne, each bottle being carefully nursed for at least five years before shipment, and all containing wine pressed from the finest vintages only. Its delicacy, bouquet and effervescence has made the brand win its extraordinary success in the markets of England, Germany and Russia. It is now the favorite of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Court, the Army and Navy. It was also specially selected for the Lord Mayor's banquet, given last month in London.—LAWRENCE A. Winnipeg School Burned.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 14.—Euclid school, one of Winnipeg's handsomest school buildings, was destroyed by fire this morning, but the pupils, numbering between 500 and 600, all escaped safely. The weather was intensely cold, and two firemen were badly frostbitten. The loss is heavy and will be partially covered by insurance of nearly $20,000. Fire originated from one of the furnaces.

A SKELETON IN THE CLOSET.

A RIPLEY DOCTOR CHARGED WITH GRAVE-ROBBING.

After 30 Years' Tenancy of a Sepulchre the Bones of a Huronite are Removed, and His Son Accuses a Physician of Having Despoiled the Grave—An Interesting Case.

KINCARDINE, Jan. 14.—It is a well-known fact, says The Reporter, that some ghouls have been desecrating the graves in the old Alma cemetery in the township of Huron. The grave of the father of Mr. James Hunter was disturbed in September last, and the bones of the deceased after resting for over thirty years were carried off. James Hunter made up his mind from evidence gathered that Dr. Knechtel of Ripley was in possession of the skeleton of his father. How to proceed with a prosecution was the next question. After consulting his solicitor, and the latter in turn consulting with others, they came to the conclusion that while a crime was committed in carrying off any article which might be wrapped about a corpse, the carrying away of the body itself was not a crime. Sir John Thompson, the Minister of Justice at Ottawa, should make it an offence in his consolidation of the criminal law which he proposes to do next session. Mr. Hunter was therefore obliged to proceed with an information, which was laid before Magistrate Joseph Barker, charging the suspected Ripley doctor with doing damage or spoil to a burial plot in which his father was interred. When the charge was read Mr. Macpherson, for the defence, at once objected to the case being proceeded with, holding that inasmuch as the statute under which the complaint was brought contained no time limit, therefore the general provision made in the Summary Jurisdiction Act governed. This provides that all complaints to be disposed of summarily must be laid within three months from the time in which the offence was committed. The alleged offence was committed on or about Sept. 17 last. Mr. Lowcombe, for the prosecution, conceded that the objection was properly taken. The case therefore had to drop.

TWO VERDICTS FOR MARY.

A Goderich Girl Gets Damages Out of an East Flamboro' Man.

HAMILTON, Jan. 14.—At the Assizes to-day Mary Bell, aged 19, of Goderich, obtained a verdict of $500 and $650 against Nathan Dougherty of East Flamboro. The plaintiff testified that she had known Dougherty some years and that he paid attentions to her in 1889 and 1890 and promised to marry her. In the summer of 1891 she had a child to him. She produced one letter from the defendant—the only one she had kept, having at the suggestion of Dougherty destroyed the others. This one letter was pretty full of expressions of loneliness at an enforced absence of a short time from "Mamie" and of hope for a meeting "on Sunday." Miss Bell swore that Dougherty promised in September, 1890, to marry her, but did not set any date.

Leeds Station Burned.

LEEDS, Eng., Jan. 14.—The railway station jointly owned by the Midland, the North-Western, North-Eastern, and Sheffield and Lincolnshire Companies was destroyed by fire yesterday. The station was built upon stupendous arches adjoining the River Aire, which has been converted into a canal. In one of these warehouses—Watson's stores—to-day's fire originated. The stores contained hundreds of tons of the most inflammable commodities, soap, resin, oil and turpentine. Nothing can stop the flames, and the efforts of the firemen to control the conflagration were futile. The loss by the fire will, it is estimated, exceed £250,000.

CARDINAL MANNING DEAD.

The Venerable Prelate Bids Farewell to All His Greatness.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Cardinal Manning died this morning at 8.20.

The Cardinal continued to grow weaker during the night, until finally his prostration became complete. He was able, however, to join in the prayers which were being offered at his bedside. His Eminence continued these supplications for divine mercy until half-past seven o'clock, when he became unconscious. His death was calm, and he passed away evidently without pain. Telegrams of regret from all parts of the world are being received.

Cardinal Manning.

The Father of the Modern Church.

ROME, Jan. 14.—Cardinal Serafino Van Nutelli, Papal Secretary of Memorials, will succeed Cardinal Simeoni as prefect-general of the propaganda. The Pope is sorely afflicted at the death of Cardinal Manning, whom he was wont to term as "the father of the modern church."

The Cardinal has been a prominent figure in England for many years, and his efforts on behalf of the poor and the down-trodden have endeared him to all, while his excellences of mind and heart made him beloved by those who looked with repugnance upon his religious views. The Cardinal is the son of the late William Manning, merchant, London, and was born at Totterbridge, Hertfordshire, July 15th, 1808. He was educated at Harrow and Balliol College, Oxford, where he graduated B. A. in first-class honors in 1830, and become Fellow of Merton College. He was for some time one of the select preachers in the University of Oxford, was appointed rector of Lavington and Graffham, Sussex, 1834, and Archdeacon of Chichester in 1840. These preferments he resigned in 1851 on joining the Roman Catholic Church, in which he entered the priesthood, and in 1857 founded an ecclesiastical congregation at Bayswater, entitled the Oblates of St. Charles Borromes. The degree of D.D. was conferred upon him at Rome, and the office of Provost of the Catholic Archdiocese of Westminster, Prothonotary Apostolic and Domestic Prelate to the Pope. After the death of Cardinal Wiseman, Monsignor Manning was consecrated Archbishop of Westminster, June 3, 1865. Pope Pius IX. created him a cardinal priest March 15, 1875, the title assigned to him being that of SS. Andrew and Gregory, on the Coelian Hill. The same Pontiff invested him with the Cardinal's hat in a Consistory held at the Vatican, Dec. 31, 1877. The Cardinal has been a prolific author. The celebration of his episcopal jubilee took place on Sunday, June 8, 1890.

Toronto's Railway Cases.

OTTAWA, Jan. 14.—To-day Premier Abbott, Hons. Mackenzie Bowell, John Carling, John Haggart and Dewdney of the Railway Committee of the Privy Council heard many cases.

The case of the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk Railway companies and the city of Toronto, relative to a change of tracks on Berkeley-street, was gone into.

Judge Clark, for the Canadian Pacific Railway, explained that the difficulty between the companies had been settled and that the companies wanted a part of Berkeley-street for their own use. They would give some of their own land as compensation.

Mr. Biggar, for the city, said he would not oppose the granting of an order provided the agreement for the removal of the tracks was signed within six months.

For the property-holders, D'Alton McCarthy asked that a clause be inserted in the order that any claims for damages be submitted to arbitration.

The Railway Committee will consider the case.

The Death of the Duke of Clarence.

The World's telegraphic columns yesterday doubtless prepared its readers for the worst result in the case of the Royal Prince on whose bed of pain the eyes of the civilized world have been turned for the past few days. The news of the fatal termination of his illness arrived in the city after the issue of the morning papers, and thousands of our citizens learned of it on their way to their places of business. There was a general expression of keen regret on all hands, for though the young Prince was to thousands of Canadians but a name, yet his close relationship to the Sovereign and as the son of his mother his death calls forth sentiments such as can only be stirred by one who was beloved of the people. And in still another respect does his untimely demise appeal to the public emotions. The picture which the cable has drawn for us of the deathbed watched by the eyes of the fair girl who in one short month would have clasped hands with him in that relationship which the Good Book says no man can put asunder, is one which no one can contemplate with unmoistened eyes. These highly human things appeal to the common heart even more strongly than that unwavering loyalty which the English people have so abundantly accorded the house of Guelph, a loyalty which is nowhere stronger than in this Dominion of Canada.

The lessons that this sad close to an august career inculcates are so trite they need not be enforced. That the grim reaper visits the palace and the hovel alike and that neither the pride of place nor the pomp of power can serve to fend off the universal fate of man has been philosophy's sad song since the foundation of the world.

Do What is Needed, Hang the Expense.

Two of our evening contemporaries on perusing The World's account of the state of affairs at the Isolation Hospital despatched their reporters to investigate the truth of the facts therein stated. There is a good deal of beating of drums in the reports of their young men, but above the noise can be quite plainly heard confirmation of the fact which inspired the publication of the article in question, namely, that the number of nurses was insufficient for the work to be done.

The necessity of an isolation hospital we freely admit. Its establishment is a distinct step in advance in health matters in this city. We would hesitate to do or say anything that would tend to encourage the prejudice that exists against sending patients to what is ignorantly called a pest-house. But telling the truth will not have that effect. It is so desirable that the isolation hospital should not be discredited from the outset that The World after serious consideration determined to publish the facts that were given to it, as the short and most satisfactory way of securing a [illegible] facts as they appeared in our [illegible]ened rather than exaggera[illegible]pers who seem to question [illegible]ment of facts appear to [illegible] Dr. Oldright as a witness [illegible]alf. There must be some mis[illegible] as Dr. Oldright is aware that [illegible] 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 8 next [illegible]ing but one nurse was in charge of [illegible]een or nineteen patients. This nurse [illegible] expected to spray the throats of each of [illegible] charges hourly. There are no tables at the bedsides, so that it was necessary to hold a lamp, to hold the resisting patient and yet perform the spraying and swabbing required. It is not likely that a physician of Dr. Oldright's well-known humanity will say that this was a desirable condition of affairs.

We are not inclined to blame Dr. Allen. Indeed, we feel the citizens are under an obligation to him for the energy and determination he showed in establishing an institution so much required. It would appear, however, that the doctor has been intimidated by the pre-election harangues in regard to the alleged extravagant administration of health matters. Let the doctor put this to one side. He will find that every sensible man will support him in all well-directed efforts towards keeping up this city's sanitary character, and the citizens like one man will be at his back in making this isolation hospital which we are told is filled chiefly with afflicted children of the poor such a place as no fond mother would fear to consign her best beloved to. If there is a taxpayer amongst us who would begrudge it, not alone the necessaries of a sickroom but even the dainties and luxuries of life, we will sorrowfully afford him space in our columns so that our readers may have a chance of knowing who the meanest man in town is.

Let Dr. Allen do what is needed for the hospital. The treasurer will do the rest.

Miasmatic Space.

Some scientist, who narrowly escaped being a poet, advanced the theory that epidemics, such as la grippe, are caused by this terrestrial ball, as the hymn book calls it, in its progress through space rolling through miasmatic patches of the universe. If there is any basis for the theory Tellus must be whirling through a baldly infected spot just now. One hears of nothing but sickness and death. The daily papers are full of obituary notices. Wherever three or four men agree to convene for any purpose when the day meeting arrives one or more of them are absent through sickness. The judge is taken off the bench, the advocate is stricken at the bar, even the prisoner is smitten in the dock. The Chief Magistrate is confined to his room, his officials have to be carried from their desks to their couches and the municipal machinery jolts and jars as if it were coming to eternal smash. So miserable do many of them feel that the prospect of the man with the guillotine who is to convert the hotel de ville into a shambles is regarded with perfect indifference.

If we are in a contagion-laden patch of space it is to be hoped this brave old world will hurry through and bring us once more into the sweet, pure fields of ether where we will be restored to jocund days and rosy health.

A REMINISCENCE.

The Succession—Prince George and the Duchess of Fife.

As the writer's eyes fell upon this morning's bulletin his mind wandered back to the last time he had seen the Duke, five years ago, in one of the loveliest spots in the south of Ireland. No one looking at that tall, handsome young fellow could have imagined that death would overtake him within a few short years. "How like his mother!" a lady exclaimed, and indeed the late Duke resembled the Princess of Wales very closely; the latter and her sister the Czarina are acknowledged to be the most fascinating women in Europe.

The Succession.

In old days, if a king died, according to the Salic law, the next of male kin succeeded him. This was our ancestors' idea of "the survival of the fittest." However, as people became more enlightened the Salic law, which did not allow any woman to reign, was repealed. According to the present English laws of succession the eldest son, who is Prince of Wales, is the heir-apparent, and provided he is without issue the second son is heir-presumptive; in the event of the sons dying without issue, the eldest daughter is the next in succession. From these facts one observes that women have not a very good chance of becoming queens; and yet the best of the English rulers have been women.

"Le Roi est mort, vive le Roi!" the death of the heir-presumptive naturally turns our attention to his successor. This is of course the second son of the Prince of Wales, Prince George, who, if he ascends the throne of England, will be hailed by his subjects as our second "Sailor King," William IV being the first. Prince George is more robust, in appearance at any rate, than the late Duke of Clarence; he is devoted to the navy, beloved by his family and in personal appearance very like his father. In the event of this Prince dying without issue the Duchess of Fife becomes the heir-presumptive, and the attention and interest of a great nation will be centred upon her infant daughter as England's possible Queen.

The Duke of Fife.

The family of the Duke of Fife is of very ancient extraction. Indeed it has been asserted that he can trace his lineage to an earlier date than can be done in the case of his royal wife. Enthusiastic Scotchmen trace him to that Macduff at whose hands Macbeth met his fate. They were created Earls in 1759, and the present Earl was made a Duke on his marriage to the eldest daughter of the Prince of Wales. As a result of that union a daughter was born May 17, 1891. This little one now stands very near the throne, the chain of succession standing at this moment—the Prince of Wales, Prince George, Duchess of Fife, little Miss Fife, to speak democratically.

The "Clarences."

It is a curious and remarkable fact, historically speaking, that from the time of that luckless Duke "false, fleeting, perjured Clarence," persons bearing that title have been dogged by misfortune, another of the house has fallen, and we cannot but recall the famous but sorrowful of Virgil in connection with the late Duke.

Max O'Rell says England is "the grandest of all democracies." "The only country," according to Mr. Taine, "possessing both a past and a present." Both these writers are typical Frenchmen, however much they differ in other respects. In the second place it may be remarked that a King or Queen in a limited sense, as in England, is less an autocrat than the President of the United States, for the simple reason that they have less real power. A figure-head is necessary, and England never loses sight of the sentiment which connects the past with the present.

The News in the City.

It was with sincere sorrow that the citizens learned soon after 9 o'clock yesterday morning that the Duke of Clarence was dead. Expressions of regret were general; but it must be confessed that the public sympathy was principally for the betrothed lady and for His Royal Highness's mother. At all the public buildings, including the drill halls, the National flag was hoisted at half mast. The Freemasons lost no time in forwarding their condolences to the bereaved Royal Family.

Sympathy of the Masons.

The following despatch was sent yesterday:

H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, Sandringham, England.

Will Your Royal Highness, in your deep sorrow, accept assurances of loyal and respectful sympathy from twenty thousand Freemasons and British subjects in the Grand Lodge of Canada.

J. ROSS ROBERTSON, G.M.

THE GENEALOGY.

How the Present Royal House Succeeded the Fated Stuarts.

As Genealogical Tables are not always easy reading, we may give a few words by way of clue. Beginning with James I., the first of the Stuart line in England, we can trace the line through his unfortunate son Charles I. and his sons Charles II. and James II. Here the first break occurs: James I.'s determination to attack the English Constitution and English Protestantism simultaneously caused his son to be disinherited and his daughters, Mary—through whose right William III. reigned—and Anne, to be preferred. On the death of Anne without issue, a successor had to be found. Determined to maintain Protestantism, Parliament rigorously excluded James II.'s son, and also the descendants of a daughter of Charles I.—not mentioned in the table—and fell back to the line of James I. The grandson of the daughter of James I., Elizabeth, was the Elector of Hanover, and became George I. of England. From there to comparatively late times the course of succession is plain. It may be remarked that a King or Queen in a limited sense, as in England, is less an autocrat than the President of the United States, for the simple reason that they have less real power. A figure-head is necessary, and England never loses sight of the sentiment which connects the past with the present.

OSGOODE'S AT HOME.

It Will Be a Brilliant Affair—Progress of the Arrangements.

An opportunity will be afforded those of the legal fraternity and especially the students at the at home to be held Friday evening (the 22nd instant) at Osgoode Hall of discussing and settling little misunderstandings with their lady friends.

The several committees are sure that all preparations are moving forward rapidly and smoothly and with every prospect of the affair being a great social success. They are determined at any rate that it will not be due to lack of attention on their part if the at home does not surpass any gathering of a like character ever held before in the Queen City.

The committee whose duty it is to provide the refreshments for the evening have engaged the foremost caterer in the city and it is expected that the menu presented will be an excellent one in every respect.

The gentlemen appointed to issue the invitations are giving this important matter their careful consideration, and consequently the assembly will be a very select one. Taking everything into consideration there is every reason to believe that those who spend the evening of the 22nd inst. within the walls of Osgoode Hall will find the old abode of legal wisdom transformed into a veritable hall of pleasure and beauty.

UNDER THE CANOPY.

A Hebrew Wedding Last Night—The World Looked In at the Function.

An interesting event took place in the Union Hall, Toronto-street, last evening, when Mr. Solomon King, merchant, of Rochester was united in marriage to Miss Mollie Harris of Toronto according to the rites of the Hebrew faith. Rev. H. Phillips, ex-minister of Holy Blossom Synagog, officiated, and his fine baritone voice, which has an excellent range and compass and has received a European training, showed to great advantage in the chanting of the marriage service. This was of the usual type—silk canopy, Hebrew and English prayers and exhortations, ending in the breaking of the glass and the general all-round kissing. The Misses Harris acted as bridesmaids; the groom's brother, Mr. H. King, supported him. The chief members of the Hebrew community were present on the happy occasion.

Chauncey Depew's Opinion.

Mr. Chauncey Depew says, in an article on "Wine on Fashionable Tables": "Within the last 10 years a great change has come over dinners in the number and variety of wines served.

"Formerly there was a procession of wines, one with each course. Anyone who went through such a dinner, after astonishing his digestion with white wines and sherry, with claret, champagne, Burgundy, Madeira, brandy and liqueurs, became an early subject for Carlsbad waters and a premature grave.

"I have noticed in London in the last two seasons that at the English dinner they now go almost to the other extreme, serving claret and champagne, according to the preference of the guests for one or the other, through the whole meal."

The leading brands of champagne are generally known. In clarets there is a greater latitude in prices, and fewer well-known brands.

We always hold in stock the wines of the leading Bordeaux shippers, in addition to some hundreds of dozens of our own bottling.

On application we will send price list of over fifty different clarets of all grades and prices, samples of which can be seen in our cellars. William Mara, 280 and 282 Queen-street west, Toronto. Telephone 713. 135

ROSE COGHLAN IS HERE.

A Great Night At the Grand—Minstrels At the Academy—Other Attractions for Leisure Hours.

Major-General the Earl of Dunbarton.

Captain Jack Styles	Mr. William Redmund
Charles Pattersby, M.P.	Mr. John T. Sullivan
Bolingbroke Brief	Mr. Thomas Whiffen

Lady Alma, Daughter of the Earl	Mrs. Helen Russell
Dorothy Baring, an Anglo-American Heiress	Mrs. Beatrice Moreland
Antoinette	Miss Adele Palma
Pugios	By Himself

Rose Coghlan is one of Toronto's favorite actresses, and deservedly so. She is one of the few really talented artists possessing at once dramatic ability and all those personal advantages which go to make up an attractive stage presence. The play in which she appears at the Grand for the remainder of this week is of rather a lighter calibre than those in which she has hitherto filled the premier role. "Dorothy's Dilemma" is a charming recherche little comedy, and last night, the opening night of Miss Coghlan's engagement, saw an appreciative audience at the Grand. Shortly before the curtain was rung up it looked as if even Miss Coghlan's reputation would not draw a good audience. But by the time the little bell had tinkled for the orchestra the boxes and orchestra chairs were made bright and attractive by the evening costumes of Toronto's elite theatregoers. In fact the entire lower part of the house presented almost as brilliant an appearance as if a Bernhardt or Langtry were billed to appear behind the sparkling little footlights.

The story of "Dorothy's Dilemma" is briefly told. Dorothy Baring is a dashing young heiress who follows the hunt and does not pay special heed to the proprieties. She undertakes to free a young lady friend from an unwished-for engagement with a young Indian officer whose arrival in England is hourly expected. In order to attain her object she alters herself in the officer's costume, and taking his name conducts herself in such a manner as to disgust the father of her lady friend. The engagement after many complications and humorous situations is broken off. Dorothy, however, through her masquerading costume gets into the dilemma which is the title of the play. Through the whole plot a delightful love story runs, culminating in a mutual attachment between Dorothy and the Indian officer whose name she takes.

Miss Coghlan fills the part admirably, though it may be said that she is seen to even better advantage in much stronger roles, Peg Woffington and Jocelyn for instance. She is aoly supported by the above cast. Thomas Whiffen as the elderly beau is almost perfect; Edward Peiper as the reformed young law student is equally good in his role and John T. Styles, the genuine Indian officer and Miss Coghlan's chief support, played the part well. The remainder of the cast are all up to the mark and constitute a strong support. The play will no doubt draw crowded houses for the remainder of the week.

The Grand orchestra played some unusually good selections last night, notable among which were the principal numbers from Gilbert & Sullivan's opera of "The Gondoliers."

Miss Morrison Next Week.

The charming Rosabel Morrison will commence a week's engagement at the Grand Opera House next Monday evening, appearing in one of Henry C. De Mille's strongest plays, "The Danger Signal." A Buffalo exchange, where the play is being produced this week, says: The play is an exceedingly strong one, abounding in exciting scenes and incidents and most realistic and picturesque situations. The comedy element is very strong. The action and plot of the drama are laid in the Rocky Mountains, and mainly portray hardships in the winter time of western railroad men. In the third act there is a most realistic and original snow scene with a snow plow in full working order. In the railroad scene a locomotive comes on the stage with all its machinery working as "natural as life." Miss Morrison as the heroine of the drama, Rose Martin, achieved a pronounced success. Her acting is characterized by force and gentleness and denotes the true artist. The supporting comp any is an excellent one, and the play was received with flattering demonstrations of applause. The sale of seats begins this morning.

Jacobs & Sparrow's.

Next week, matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. The present is the fourth triumphant season of the "Night Owls." Popular appreciation from the first induced the management to strengthen the troupe until the acme of excellence has been attained. An attractive as well as novel feature in the program for this week is the new spectacle, "The Model." Pauline Markham, a queen of burlesque, has an important part in the new revelation of wit, beauty, magnificent costuming and dazzling scenery. All of the characters are in the hands of vivacious comedienne, funny comedian, sprightly dancers, clever actresses and accomplished vocalists. The numerous concerted pieces of music in the burlesque are heightened by a carefully selected chorus of 20 pretty and shapely girls, with two-score sweet voices. Another taking novelty in the bill is a grand gun coubat composed of young ladies, with fairest of features and most symmetrical of forms.

Minstrels at the Academy.

George Wilson's Minstrels gave the Academy of Music's biggest house of the season two and a half hours' solid enjoyment last night. The performance from rise of curtain on the olio to the drops after the farce is clever and clean.

The company is not a very large one but very choice. There is no dead wood in the lot. And best of all, chestnuts are eschewed. The end men spring new gags that tickle the big crowd in the right place. A. Christie has the choicest lot. When you go to-night or to-morrow cock your ear and grasp all the block swell on your right hag to get the quartes, Messrs. Shattuck, Walling, Davis and Rab, is a brilliant one. The balladists, Messrs. Davis, Christie Bros. and Tom Donnelly, possess the proper power and were forced to respond to encores. George Wilson sings better than ever. He also sighs as of yore, and wears more extensive spring coats and trousers than ever. He doesn't say funny things but it's the funny way he says it. George possesses the rare and happy faculty of extracting from his audience the greatest possible effect with the least possible effort. The big crowd swayed in laughter at his "Comrades," also again at his encore song, and then his pointed address made its sides ache and tears roll down its cheeks. William Rowe's pedestal dance was a feature. Sparrow is one of the most pleasing jugglers seen here. The trapezists Napier and Marzello were applauded. The farce was an operatic melange, as the program has it, with William Rice in petticoats, giving a most ludicrous imitation of Patti and Bernhardt. It was a clever piece of burlesque in which Dan Quinlan, Tom Donnelly, the Fultons and Christies appeared.

"The Witch" Coming.

In one of the scenes in "The Witch," the play based upon the Salem, Mass., witchcraft delusion, in which Marie Hubert Frohman will appear at the Academy of Music next week, the audience is treated to a most novel sight. A slanderous old woman, whose tongue had solved problem of perpetual motion, is punished for reviling certain members of the community. The punishment consists of her head being held under the town pump while, by vigorous manipulation of the pump handle, gallons of water fall upon her sinful head. The play throughout is full of quaint comedy and novel situations.

THE GODSON CASE.

The Well-Known Toronto Contractor on Trial Charged with Fraudulent Misappropriation.

The trial of Mr. Arthur W. Godson, contractor, charged with fraudulent appropriation of $5704 of the city's funds in 1878, was proceeded with at the Assize Court yesterday before Mr. Justice Falconbridge, who presided in consequence of the illness of Judge Street.

The Crown attempt to prove that Mr. Godson charged the city for 570 4 toise of stone which he did not deliver and have undertaken to prove it too from the defendant's own books.

The first witness called was John Patterson, assistant city treasurer, who was a cashier in 1878. He stated that the mode of procedure regarding accounts owed by the city was that they were first certified by the inspector, then referred to the City Engineer, after which they passed the Board of Works and were endorsed by the council. This was only formal and false accounts would be accepted continually if certified by the inspector until the council lost confidence in him.

Mr. Lackie was the inspector who certified Godson's accounts. He bore a good reputation at the City Hall. After the investigation before Judge Macdougall the confidence of the city officials in him was not so great. He was suspended during the investigation and soon after given another situation at the City Hall.

The Bookkeeper's Evidence.

James Hardy, formerly a bookkeeper for Mr. Godson and whose evidence the Crown has all along considered of great importance, was the next to step into the box. He entered Godson's employ in December, 1878, and remained with him till March, 1882, when he went to Chicago, where he is still engaged. Some time after leaving he wrote Mr. Godson demanding $130 for work after hours. The reply was that he had worked for Godson just three years and four months too long, that his services were of very little value and that he had worked after hours because he had not been sufficiently diligent. He was requested not to bother his former employer by sending any more letters. Hardy, however, did send two more letters, one of which read as follows:

An Elegant Epistle.

"I received your very nasty, vulgar letter and it is very characteristic of a man who wears a No. 6 hat and No. 13 boot; the 'Burnt contract'—see Grip. The small sum coming to me for overtime is very small indeed, compared with the amount you have defrauded the ratepayers of Toronto during the time I was with you—which amounts to over $15,000, and I can point to every contract and show how you committed the fraud in getting this immense sum from the city. Where did W. Lackie get all the money to invest? How much did you pay James Craig? Did you perjure yourself in Judge Mackenzie's Court? You advised me to keep your dirty letter as a recommendation. I now return the compliment and advise you to keep this as a small sample of what is yet to come."

Not receiving an answer to either the writer engaged a lawyer, who wrote Mr. Godson and asked him to pay the money because Hardy was destitute and was dependent on charity, but still Mr. Godson was not persuaded to pay. It was then that Hardy resolved to "expose" the defendant.

Mr. Clute asked what payments had been made by the defendants to Mr. Lackie. To this Mr. Osler objected on the ground that the indictment did not charge the defendant with entering into a conspiracy. Mr. Clute held that while this was true he was simply trying to prove conspiracy as another link in the chain of evidence to show that the defendant had intended to defraud.

His Lordship thought so, too, and added: "He was no more obliged to notify you that he would endeavor to prove conspiracy than he was to furnish his brief."

Specimen Bookkeeping.

Hardy swore that Godson paid Lackie $7.50 at one time and at another time gave him a $100 check, charging himself with $50 and Mr. West with the other $50, because, as he said, Mr. West would be as much benefited by Lackie's influence as himself.

The account of Robert Wilson, another inspector, was balanced on Sept. 16, 1879, "by profit and loss $52.15." This the witness had done under Godson's instructions.

The "stone book" showed that more stone had been sold than bought by 232 toise.

In answer to Mr. Osler's question, the witness admitted that, if stone were bought and sold at a profit, there would be stone on hand when there was no debit balance, or that the difference between the debit and credit sides of the account did not represent the value of the stone in hand. Working upon this Mr. Osler showed that instead of $351 worth of stone there was in reality over $4000 worth.

Stock had been taken in June, 1879, and witness had entered it in the ledger himself. But he had neglected to take any account of it in the computations by which he arrived at the amount of money he charged the defendant with having obtained by false accounts. In many other points he had erred in his accounts. He had heard that there was a certain percentage of increase when stone was broken, but he had made no allowance for that. Mr. Osler also found several items in the teaming book which had not been posted and which the witness admitted had been omitted by mistake.

The case was adjourned until to-day.

Local Jottings.

The Nonparell Lodge No. 8, Sons of Canada Benevolent Association, held a literary and musical entertainment in the Temperance Hall last night. Mrs. Sylvester, Messrs. Corry, Mills, Bergman and Rainbow and Mrs. Till were among those to take part in the entertainment.

The choir of St. Michael's Cathedral and the collectors were entertained at a dinner given at the palace in Church-street last evening. About 60 members sat down and Rev. Vicar-General McCann presided. Songs and speeches were delivered by Rev. Fathers Williams, Rohleder, Messrs. Macnamara, Ward, Bowes, Richardson and Miss Murphy.

A pleasant evening was spent by all the young people who attended the entertainment of the Mission Circle in the Sherbourne-street Methodist Church last night. Among those who took part in the program were Messrs. T. Arthur Blakely, W. Martin and Fred Warrington. Dr. J. J. McLaren and Mr. F. S. Spence also delivered appropriate addresses.

"The New Jerusalem," a sacred cantata, was rendered by the choir of the East Presbyterian Church at their annual concert last night. Those who took part in this noteworthy musical production were Mrs. Candiweil, soprano; Mr. C. Dinmeck, tenor; Miss Bessie Bonsall, contralto; Mr. A. L. Davies, bariton; Miss F. Sullivan and Mr. W. A. Lovatt, accompanists, and Mr. J. Stoddart musical director.

Abraham Dunn, a market gardener of Woodbine-avenue, York, was returning from Toronto about 7 o'clock Wednesday night with a horse and wagon, accompanied by his wife and two young women from Little York named Sarah Lambert and Ada Hines, when the animal became unmanageable, ran away and upset the vehicle at the turning by Gerrard-street subway. Dunn was severely cut about the head and remained in an unconscious condition for an hour. Mrs. Dunn had her right arm broken and the young women received some very severe contusions.

Severe colds are easily cured by the use of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, a medicine of extraordinary penetrating and healing properties. It is acknowledged by those who have used it as being the best medicine sold for coughs, colds, inflammation of the lungs, and all affections of the throat and chest. Its agreeableness to the taste makes it a favorite with ladies and children.

THE WORK OF THE ROOTS

A COLUMN OF THINGS INTERESTING TO THE FARMER.

Long Keeping of Potatoes—Queer Freaks of Animals—The City vs. the Country—A Muddy Road Calculation—The Good Effect of Tile-Draining.

THE WORK OF ROOTS.—Everything a plant does costs energy. If it grows there must be some force used up. When a leaf is formed a definite amount of substance is employed and at the same time work is done putting the substance together in the way it is found in a leaf. When a root elongates there must be an expenditure of both material and force. Should the path of growth be easy the cost is less than when it is difficult. It is, therefore, a favor to a plant to have a mellow soil through which to push its roots. For the same reason that one grades down the steep hill and fills up the ravine to make the way easier for the loaded team, so should he provide an easy passage for the roots of the crop.

Long Keeping of Potatoes.

Potatoes have been kept in perfect condition for a year and a half by a process discovered by Prof. Schribaux of France, and the plan has been adopted for preserving potatoes for the French army. Before storing the tubers away plunge them for 10 hours into a 3 per cent solution of commercial sulphuric acid in water; 2 parts of acid to 100 parts of water. The acid penetrates the eye to the depth of about one-fortieth inch, which serves to destroy their sprout-power. It does not have any appreciable effect upon the skin of the potatoes. After remaining in the liquid 10 hours the tubers must be thoroughly dried before storing away. The same liquid may be used any number of times with equally good results. A barrel or tank of any kind will do for the treatment. The acid is so dilute it does not affect the wood. Chemical analysis shows that potatoes treated by that process are as nutritious and healthful after 18 months as when freshly drug. Potatoes thus treated are of course worthless for planting.

Animal Notelets.

A jet black swan was killed on the California coast last week.

A farmer on the shores of Lake Ontario has a mare and colt that chew tobacco with great relish.

An Arkansas pig has a scent equal to a dog's. His wonderful instinct saved his owner's child from drowning the other day.

A blacksnake five and a half feet long in Tennessee in a fight with a rattler two and a half feet long swallowed the latter. He died from the effects of his dose, as did also the rattler.

A Georgian discovered that a chicken snake had taken three of his young chicks. He killed the snake, recovered the chicks, placed them under the hen and now they bid fair to make good broilers in time.

The City Din.

There is no doubt that the noise of the city has been steadily increasing for many years. It is perhaps inevitable, and yet it is plain enough that, if some restriction is not put upon the unnecessary turmoil, there will be no such thing as residence here, except to those unable to retire into the suburbs. One easily becomes convinced of the insensible wear and tear upon the nerves of all the racket incident to the city by noting the irritability it occasions after the annual return from the country, when a term of rural quiet has taken us back to our normal sensibility. Oh, for the conveniences of the city and the country's opportunities for rest.—Boston Herald.

A Bit About Baskets.

A general mistake is made about baskets, most people supposing that the white willow basket is the best. It looks best, but is by no means the strongest. The white willow slips are cut in the fall and kept green all winter by packing their stubs in wet sand or water, and when spring comes the bark peels off with a twist of the hand. The buff baskets, on the contrary, are made from dried willow slips, which have been steamed and then pealed. While not so handsome, they are much stronger, and will wear far longer than the white.—New York Tribune.

A Muddy Road Calculation.

If you wish to make a calculation of the extra work required of the horse on a muddy road, weigh the wagon when starting on the journey and also on the return, and the difference in weight will be surprising. This only represents the extra weight. The effort required to draw the wagon and its extra weight through the mud on the road may be many times that required on a smooth, hard road.

The Castor Oil Bean for Moles.

The Florida Dispatch says: Every farmer who is troubled by moles ought to try a few castor-oil bean plants. We know an old gardener who was noted for raising vegetables who always had a few dozen of these plants scattered about his garden for the purpose of keeping away moles.

Tree Ages in Europe.

It is generally admitted that European trees have rarely exceeded the very respectable age of 800 years. Thus, information recently gathered by the German Forestry Commission assigns to the pine 500 and 700 years as a maximum, 425 years to the silver fir, 275 years to the larch, 245 years to the red beech, 210 years to the aspen, 200 years to the birch, 170 years to the ash, 146 years to the alder, and 130 years to the elm. The heart of the oak begins to rot at about the age of 300 years. The holly oak alone escapes this law, and there is a specimen of this aged 410 years in existence near Aischaffenburg, in Germany. But in England there are several famous old oaks of gigantic proportions, and with ages variously estimated at from 700 to 1,800 years. The latter age, however, seems incredible.

The Art of the Florist.

The history of the chrysanthemum wonderfully illustrates the capabilities of the florist's art. It began its career as a mere field daisy in distant Japan. It has been cultivated with such peristence and skill that there are now about 3,000 kinds of chrysanthemum in existence. Most of these are so rare and delicate as to be practically beyond the reach of ordinary cultivators.

Effect of Tile-Draining.

Experiments have shown that a tile-drained soil is, on an average, about 10° warmed at seven inches below the surface than an undrained surface at the same depth. This fact illustrates the value of drainage. It lengthens the season at both ends for plant growth.

An Important "If."

If cattlemen could see what kind of cattle bring the top of the market and what kind take the bottom of the market, and should compare notes and find that the steer that stands at the top cost no more to raise than the one that goes to the bottom, they would then be reaching for the top place.

BOARD OF TRADE.

Officers Nominated for the Ensuing Year—Election Promises to Be Keen—Interesting Discussion.

The special meeting of the Board of Trade yesterday afternoon to nominate officers for the ensuing year did not attract a large concourse of members. The several interests composing the membership were, however, well represented. President John I. Davidson was in the chair. The anticipated elevation of Mr. H. N. Baird from the first vice-presidency to the presidency was realized, while Mr. Hugh Blain steps unopposed into the office vacated by Mr. Baird. Treasurer G. M. Rose was again elected by acclamation. Of the 25 nominated for the Council 11 are members of the retiring board, and of the 15 aspiring for a seat at the Arbitration Board 9 are those seeking re-election.

The only departure from the ordinary annual nominations was President Davidson's defence of the administration in general and the secretary in particular against the statement published in a morning paper under the signature of Mr. John Brown, a member of the board. Mr. Davidson said that the net income of Mr. Wills as secretary, superintendent of the building, etc., was $2400 annually. "I am in a position to say that the secretary was offered a larger salary last year, and it was only on my solicitation that he refused to accept it. It is my opinion that this discussion has not been brought up in the interest of the Board of Trade, but because the secretary could not be used as a tool to further the interests of someone. There is no one," he concluded, amid "hear, hears," "who could have served the board more faithfully or better than Mr. Wills."

Mr. Brown, who advanced to the table while the president was speaking, said he had been doing nothing but his duty. "I have always thought very highly of Mr. Wills' services," he continued. "It has been imputed to me almost as a crime that I should make any criticism. It is my opinion that we can buy gold too dear. I think we are paying too much in salaries. I believe that in addition to the secretary's allowance we are also paying an assistant $600, a typewriter $400 and two boys are employed besides, making a total expenditure of $3700, or $2800 in connection with this office. Personal animus has been charged against me. Had it been any other gentleman than Mr. Wills I would have made the same remarks. I have never asked the president or any member of the board to further my interests. If I have done anyone an injury," he concluded, "I am sorry for it."

This matter then dropped and the nominations were proceeded with. This was the result:

President—H. N. Baird.

First Vice-President—Hugh Blain.

Second Vice-President—Elias Rogers, S. F. McKinnion, D. W. Alexander.

Treasurer—G. M. Rose.

Council—15 to be elected—G. H. Bertram, A. Campbell, W. B. Hamilton, A. B. Lee, Warring Kennedy, William Christie, W. D. Mathews, Robert McClain, W. R. Brock, D. R. Wilkie, W. J. Gage M. ICEBOATS BEFORE A BREEZE.

BUT IT WAS A MILD ONE YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

George Akroyd Takes First Prize While Brother Malt is Second — How the Nine Starters Were Placed — About Grand's Horse Show — Hockey and Curling in City Rinks.

Quite a crowd collected on the ice at the foot of York-street yesterday afternoon to see the speedy ice sailing craft scudding before the breeze. The wind was very mild and from the northwest.

Many of the winter sporting men asked for a postponement but finally it was decided to sail. Nine of the ten local boats started, Mr. Tymon's Pastime alone being scratched. The ice was far from being perfect, a three inch blanket of the beautiful covering the surface. This the sime was necessarily slow. John Hanlan's speedy Island Girl surprised the crowd by the slow galt she made.

The boats were sent well away together, Reindeer getting the best use of the breeze at the outset, and being cleverly handled by her owner never was headed. The subjoined table gives the places of the boats at the finish of each round of the eight mile triangular course. Capt. Andy Tymon was referee and starter. There were five prizes, going as follows:

Pl.	Boat	Start.	Finish.	Round. 1.	2.	3.
1.	G. Akroyd's Reindeer	2.35	4.31	1	1	1
2.	M. Akroyd's Snowdrift "		4.37	2	2	2

DOMINION'S CRACK SEVEN.

Their 4—0 Victory in the Bank Hockey League Championship.

The bank championship hockey contest in Mutual-street yesterday afternoon was a fast and well-played game and enjoyed thoroughly by the throng in the Galleries.

Dominion won by 4 to 0. But they were obliged to hustle for the victory.

Early in the first half Gillespie tallied. An apparent goal in this half was disallowed on account of offside. In the second half Bethune tallied twice and Walsh once, while the combination couldn't score, although they pressed on several occasions. The victors all played well, Jones, Bethune and Walsh especially distinguishing themselves. Pristick was a combine star. The ice was splendid. The teams were:

Montreal and Union (0): Goal, Webster; point, Rudd; cover, McNeider; forwards, Pristick, Pamberton, Fertie, Kirkpatrick.

Dominion (4): Goal, Bogert; point, Maule; cover, Jones; forwards, Bethune, Brough, Gillespie, Walsh.

Referee—Stuart Morrison, Victoria.

Bankers on Top.

A curling match took place on the Granite ice on Wednesday night between Secretary McMurtry, with a picked team, and the Bank of Commerce rink. After two hours' play the game ended with the bankers on top by four shots. Score:

BANK OF COMMERCE.	GRANITE.
John Cook.	A. W. Dingman.

Ontario Bankers Are Winning Hockeyists.

The Ontario Bank played a picked team from the wholesale warehouse of Messrs. Eby, Blain & Co. at the Alexandria Rink yesterday afternoon. The bankers won by 4 goals to nil. The Ontario team feel rather sore at having two defeats credited in the past week to their account which they are not entitled to. It was the Imperial Bank that the New Fort team defeated on Saturday, and the Bank of Toronto seven who failed to show up in the Wanderers' match in Mutual Rink the other evening.

In Ontario Tankard Group 13.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 14—The primary competition for the Ontario Tankard, in group 13, will take place on the rink here on Tuesday next, when the play will be as follows:

Galt v. St. Mary's.
Bright v. Preston.
Bradford v. Guelph (Royal city.)

Each club will be represented by two rinks.

Chips From the Ice.

The Bank of Commerce plays a championship game with British and Merchants' in Mutual-street to-night.

At the Granite Rink last night, Insurance & Loan hockeyists defeated the Bank of Commerce seven by 1 goal to nil.

The Granite colts play a league match with Insurance & Loan hockeyists next Monday between 9 and 10 p.m. in the Granite Rink.

The Caledonian's match, President v. Vice-President, has again been postponed until next week on account of illness of some of the skips.

Secretary Kerr of the Ontario Hockey Association will referee the championship game at New Fort Tuesday between New Fort and the combined bankers.

Ice-boating is a pleasant sport to participate in and also to watch. A big crowd, including many ladies, saw the races yesterday. But many of these will scarcely return again as they unluckily overheard language of members of some crews that fortunately is not a frequent occurrence at Toronto sporting events.

A Famous Footballer Dies of Lockjaw.

PAISLEY, Jan. 14.—James Dunlop, the Scotch international football player, died here last week from lockjaw. He was playing a game at this place on New Year's Day when one of his knees was cut by a piece of broken glass. Friday last lockjaw set in, which terminated fatally. Although Dunlop was only 20 years of age he had won many laurels in football, and among them places on the Welsh and Irish international teams.

IT WILL BE A GREAT SHOW.

Mr. Grand Gives Particulars as to the Big Horse Exhibition.

That Toronto will have a great horse show is now guaranteed and emphasized by the subjoined letter from Mr. W. D. Grand himself. Another opportunity will be offered fashionable Toronto to view the noble animal in his grandest form, as this city did last spring in the Shaw-street Rink; also intending purchasers the chance of selecting steeds from the finest array of useful horseflesh ever seen in Canada. Mr. Grand writes:

It was with considerable surprise I read your article in this morning's issue of your paper regarding the arrangements for a horse show to be held previous to my annual spring sale, and would consider it a favor if you will kindly correct some of the statements therein made. It is quite true that I am preparing premises especially for this purpose, but it is evident the member of your staff, with whom I was conversing a day or two since, misunderstood me upon one or two points. I had intended the horse show to take place April 14, 15 and 16, but finding from your notice the 15th will be Good Friday, a fact which I had entirely overlooked, I have now decided to hold it a week later, viz., 21st, 22nd and 23rd inst. The Pavilion is quite central, within 10 minutes walk of the postoffice, and is intended to accommodate 4000 spectators and 300 horses. Regarding the prizes mentioned, it is a mistake to suppose them open to the world, but I intend offering liberal premiums for stallions, thoroughbred and hackney, owned in Canada, qualified to sire the class of horses best adapted for our market.

General Sporting Gossip.

Sunnyside Boat Club will give another smoking concert next week.

Mr. James Rowe has formally accepted the position of starter offered him by the Board of Control.

Brantford ice-races will be held on Jan. 28 and 29. There will be four events—2.50 race, for a purse of $100; 2.37, for $125; and free-for-all for $150. The entries will be closed Jan. 27.

Brantford's Amateur Athletic Club has elected these officers: Honorary president, Hon. A. S. Hardy; president, Rev. A. W. Richardson; first vice-president, Fred Burnett; second vice-president, H. Moss; secretary-treasurer, J. Widdup; instructor, A. H. Grant.

Frank H. Welsh of Germantown, who is the captain of the Wissahickon wheelmen, has accomplished a feat which makes him the champion cyclist for a season's mileage. Captain Welsh started to ride for mileage on Jan. 1, 1891, and rode 12,553 miles, including 33 century runs for the 12 months ending Dec. 31, 1891, breaking the world's record by 2358 miles.

THE WORLD'S CONUNDRUMS.

A Host of Answers from Toronto and Other Places.

Editor World: The following is the solution of the problem in this morning's paper:

Let "x" represent number of dollars earned on Wednesday. The number of dollars earned on Tuesday is equal to the number of dollars earned on Monday, added to one-half the number earned on Wednesday, that is to say in terms of the unknown quantity;

5 plus ½ x.

Wednesday's earnings, Monday's earnings, Tuesday's eq. 5 plus (5 plus ½ x)

In other words this is equal to the unknown symbol, eq. x.

Therefore x eq. 5 plus (5 plus ½ x)
x eq. 10 plus ½ x
½ x eq. 10

x eq. 20, eq. No. dollars earned on Wednesday. Therefore, $5 were earned on Monday, $15 on Tuesday (being Monday's plus ½ of Wednesday's), and $20 on Wednesday. Therefore the amount earned in three days is $40.

Editor World: The correct answer to your egg conundrum in Saturday's World is: 319 eggs when he started to market. To the first he sold one-half, 159½ and ½ egg = 160, to the second 79½ and ½ egg = 80, the third 39½ and ½ egg = 40, to the fourth 19½ and ½ egg = 20, to the fifth 9½ and ½ egg = 10, and had 9 left. Editor World: "Belding" is wrong in his answer to the conundrum about the eggs in The World of 13th inst. He does not make correct subtractions. The correct number of eggs was 319. First division 159½ plus ½ = 160, 2nd 79½ plus ½ = 80, 3rd 39½ plus ½ = 40, 4th 19½ plus ½ = 20, 5th 9½ plus ½ = 10, leaving a balance of 9.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELER.
Royal Hotel, Guelph.

Another Commercial Traveler sends a clever and perfect solution of the problem. He traces the transaction through the five divisions with the algebraic "x" as the unknown quantity and secures the correct answer, viz., 319. An easy matter it may be to guess an answer, but the difficulty invariably lies in the solution.

Editor World: I think "Belding" is out in his reply to conundrum. His figures won't do at all. The proper answer is:

319	Eggs sold	159½	and	½	eg.	160	bal	159
158	" "	79½	"	½	"	80	"	79
79	" "	39½	"	½	"	40	"	39
39	" "	19½	"	½	"	20	"	19
19	" "	9½	"	½	"	10	"	9

Lancashire Insurance Company.

Mr. S. C. Duncan-Clark, who has since 1864 held the position of chief agent for this company in Canada, has resigned his position, a mutually satisfactory arrangement having been made between the company and himself. The general agency will henceforth be conducted as a branch office of the company, and the directors in England have appointed Mr. J. G. Thompson to the position of manager. Mr. Thompson has for many years held a responsible position at the Lancashire office, and more recently has had the practical management of the business, so that the appointment is considered a most excellent one. The head office in Canada is situated at 59 Yonge-street, corner Colborne, where Messrs. Love & Hamilton, the Toronto agents, also have their office.

Our Invalids.

On Sunday night Sergt. Adair of No. 3 police division was taken suddenly ill with hemorrhage of the lungs while at the Erskine Church. He was taken to his home, 111 Major-street, and has gradually been growing weaker.

Ald. McDougall is confined to the house with la grippe.

Mr. A. Y. Blain, Clerk in chambers, Osgoode Hall, is still suffering from the prevailing epidemic.

Sir Daniel Wilson was reported last evening by Dr. J. A. Temple, 191 Simcoe-street, as being very much better. He passed a good day.

Bishop O'Mahony's condition, by latest reports last evening, had not improved.

Judge Street was reported last evening as being a little better.

Mr. Noel Marshall has recovered from a severe attack of influenza.

Ald. Hall was not able to attend the meeting of the Street Railway Committee owing to illness through la grippe.

Familiar Family Friends.

The family store of medicine should contain a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil. Mrs. Hannah Hutchins of Rosseway, N.S., says: "We have used Hagyard's Yellow Oil in our family for six years for coughs, colds, burns, sore throat, croup, etc., and find it so good that we cannot do without it."

The Kilted Regiment.

The 48th Highlanders turned out last night in strong force. Lieut.-Col. Davidson was in command, assisted by the popular acting adjutant, Capt. McDougall, "C" Co., I.S.C. Col. Otter, D.A.G., made an informal inspection and was highly pleased with the new attachment to his district. Several men were sworn in, among whom were Staff-Sergt. Harp, late of the Q.O.R., and a corporal, late of the 42nd Black Watch.

Winter Sports.

The gay winter season exposes many to attacks of colds, coughs, hoarseness, tightness of the chest, asthma, bronchitis, etc., which require a reliable remedy like Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam for their relief and cure. Known as reliable for over thirty years. The best cough cure.

THE LEGAL GRIST.

Garbutt Extradition Case—Mr. Ingram Abandons His Appeal—A Batch of Writs and Actions.

The private prosecutors who are pressing for the extradition of Henry Garbutt, the alleged forger from Wingham, who is wanted in Van Alstyne, Texas, U.S.A., tried to accelerate the slow moving machinery of the Court of Appeal by bringing forward a motion to speed the hearing of the prisoner's appeal. Mr. Gunther, who appeared for the City Bank of Van Alstyne, pointed out that the prisoner had been remanded for extradition on three successive occasions; that no court nor judge in passing upon the case had held forth any hope or promise of setting the prisoner at liberty but, to the contrary, all the judicial deliveries on the point affirmed the prima facie case which was established against the prisoner and endorsed the order for extradition. In view of this Mr. Gunther contended it to be only fair to the prosecution to hasten the appeal.

Garbutt's case was shown to be No. 73 on the list and is preceded by many lengthy and important causes, which will more than occupy the attention of the court for the entire present sitting, and so the Garbutt case will be compelled to stand over until the Easter term.

After considering the application to speed the hearing of the appeal at length the four judges decided unanimously not to interfere and ordered that Garbutt's case must take the ordinary course of other matters in appeal.

This judgment gives the prisoner the benefit of the delay, and as his case cannot be reached this sitting Garbutt will remain in Canada at least until May. It is even possible that his case will not be reached on the Easter docket. It is also understood that counsel for the prisoner will renew the application for bail.

Andrew B. Ingram, M.P. (Con.) for East Elgin, who was unseated by the rota judges for corruption by agents, entered appeal to the Supreme Court with a view towards reversing the decree which deprives him of his seat. Messrs. Meredith & Co., counsel for Ingram, announced officially that Mr. Ingram would abandon his appeal to the Supreme Court and bow to the judgment of the trial judges. He will be a candidate again.

The master in ordinary heard evidence pro and con upon the claim of Charles Farquhar against The Sun Lithographing Co. for $3400 for rent.

The Vaughan Road Co. have taken appeal from the judgment of the Common Pleas Divisional Court and the appeal bond for security for costs was allowed by Acting Master Winchester, and proceedings were stayed pending the appeal. The judgment appealed against prevents the Road Company from taking toll until their road is put in a proper state of repair.

Mrs. Emily Ellis has brought an action against the corporation of Toronto for $2000 damages for injuries sustained. Mrs. Ellis while walking along Sackville-street slipped on a piece of ice and fell. The fall brought on a premature birth and for a time the lady's life was in danger.

Martin Foiger of this city has issued a writ against F. J. Fitzpatrick claiming $2000 for improperly distraining.

Under a judgment held by the Ontario Silver Company, Toronto, against W. F. Tasker, merchant, Wellington-street east, for $400, the creditors have seized the debtor's stock. Yesterday the seized stock was claimed by John F. Taylor under a chattel mortgage for $4800. Sheriff Mowat interpleaded and Mr. Winchester directed an issue to be tried between the two creditors who each claims the stock.

Wallace Millichamp trading under the name of W. Millichamp & Sons, and Michael J. O'Keefe have issued a writ against W. G. Barlow, York-street, claiming $1000 damages against the defendant for wrongfully using the plaintiff's name and interfering with the plaintiff's business and for an injunction to restrain the defendant from continuing to do so.

The trial of Manning & Macdonald v. City of Toronto was resumed before Justice Ferguson at the Chancery Sittings.

Justice Galt has referred back to the arbitrator, D. B. Read, Q.C., the award made in the case of Toronto vs. Clayton, by which the city was ordered to pay Clayton $1067 damages on account of the opening of Markham-street. The Chief Justice held that the award was excessive.

Cooke's Church.

The 41st annual meeting was held in the Christian Institute. Mr. P. G. Close presided. The first report presented was the financial statement of the treasurer, Mr. James Alison. The total receipts amounted to $14,334, $6640 of which had been taken in collections and weekly offerings, while $5000 was subscribed towards the building fund. After paying all expenses, including $5700 in salaries, there was a balance in hand of $300. Besides these amounts over $1300 was contributed by the various auxiliary societies of the church. The treasurer announced that the new church would probably be finished by next May. The cost of the new building will be in the neighborhood of $50,000. A cordial vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Alison for his services as treasurer during the past year, and his report was unanimously adopted. The following reports were also adopted: Trustees, sessional, Sabbath-school, W.F.M., Ladies' Aid and Christian Endeavor societies, the latter of which has the largest membership of any church in Canada. The church membership now amounts to 904, an increase during the past year of 223. The following were unanimously re-elected trustees: P. G. Close, James Alison and William Tafts.

The First Reformed Church.

At the annual meeting of the First Reformed Presbyterian Church, Carlton-street, the pastor, Rev. S. Acheson, presided. During the year the membership of the church and also of the Sabbath school have largely increased. The report of the treasurer, T. Carson, was presented, showing the finances of the church to be in a very satisfactory condition, the receipts being $2063 and the expenditures $2000, leaving a balance of $2.63. The Young People's Association, who have fitted up a lecture room in the church during the past year, presented their report, showing the receipts to be $74.75 and the expenditure $73.58, leaving a balance of $1.17. The following trustees were re-elected: James Adams, T. Carson, M. H. Ramage, J. B. Woodside, J. Little, R. Murdock and R. H. Forster.

Presbyterianism Prospering.

The annual meeting of St. John's Presbyterian Church, Gerrard-street and Bolton-avenue, was held last night. During the year the total contributions of the congregation amounted to $2058, and this was increased by $400 from the St. James'-square church. The congregation now numbers 180, which is a net increase of 64 during the year. The Sunday school has a membership of 387, 50 more than 12 months ago. On the recommendation of the Board of Management the sum of $50 was voted to be paid upon the floating debt of the church. The following new members were elected to the Board of Management: James Traill, Thomas Black, James Ross, Robert Little.

The Late F. F. Passmore.

The friends of Frederick Fortescue Passmore, F.L.S., yesterday afternoon accompanied his remains to their last resting place in the Necropolis. His comparatively sudden death has removed one of the best known faces from our midst. Mr. Passmore has been long known in this city. While in the city registry office he was always courteous and obliging. No man in his profession was more accurate or painstaking. It will be difficult to fill the void he has left. His knowledge of the old plans of the various estates and public properties which have been laid out from time to time into streets and blocks was unrivalled. His accuracy was well known and many a time has he in legal proceedings displayed a most intimate acquaintance with the topographical history of Toronto. In his private life he was a staunch friend and just man, and he leaves behind him the memory of industry and strict integrity.

Fined For Cruelty.

On Wednesday evening Reeve Stephenson held court at East Toronto, Richard H. Crew of the township of York, who keeps a hotel in the Kingston-road, was charged before D. G. Stephenson, J.P., and G. W. Ormerod, J.P., with cruelly ill-treating his mare by allowing her to run at large all winter on the plains without providing food or shelter. The defendant pleaded guilty and was fined $1 and costs or 10 days in Toronto Jail.

WAS IT SOMNAMBULISM?

Some Further Particulars Respecting William Scriven.

In respect to William D. Scriven, whose unconventional peregrination of the streets at an early hour last Saturday morning has been previously described, The World has since ascertained some interesting facts.

The young man, so his foster father, R. B. Scriven, who lives in Hiawatha-street St. Thomas; says was in a state of somnambulism on the occasion referred to and would probably have returned to his boarding house had he not been interfered with. The policemen, of course, could not be aware of this. It is a well-known fact that to touch or speak to a person in a somnambulistic state is dangerous, and in this case it evidently threw young Mr. Scriven into an epileptic fit. In a previous one it required four men to hold him. His foster father was able, however, to manage him. This he attributes to the power of magnetism which he possesses.

The young man has always been subject to mishaps, although he has fortunately escaped with his life, sometimes miraculously. About 7 years ago, in company with Frank Farley, he was gathering birds' nests in the ravine near Turvill's mill. Scriven, then a lad of some 12 years, climbed up a dry stub and when he was at a height of 31 feet the stub broke off 10 feet from the ground. The upper part with the boy on it fell, striking the ground 14 feet from the base of the stub, and then toppled over. The boy escaped with the breaking of both bones of one arm at the wrist, and the cracking of one of the bones of the other.

It has been said that the young man attended the inquest on Benwell's body at Princeton, and had always held that Birchall sacrificed his life to save two others who had done the shooting. Mr. Scriven says he has never heard him express any such views, nor is he aware that he was at the inquest, although it is possible he was. The recitation describing the Johnstown flood, which he gave while in the fit, he has given at different times in this city. He is also a good musician, and when in these fits often sings, as on this occasion.

METHODIST MISSIONS.

Work Among the Indians of British Columbia—Troubles in Japan.

General Superintendent Carman presided over the Missionary Committee of Consultation and Finance yesterday. A conference was held with representatives of the Women's Missionary Society regarding a suggestion for co-operation in industrial institute work among the Indians of British Columbia. Entire agreement was reached, and immediate steps will be taken to fix on a site and begin building. The boys and girls will be housed in separate buildings, but there will be a school and chapel in common. A sub-committee was appointed to co-operate with the ladies in dealing with the matter.

The sum of $300 was granted to assist in rebuilding the Indian church at Nanaimo, which was burnt some months ago.

Various letters were read and considered with reference to the work in Japan. Among others were communications from Rev. Dr. Hare and D. W. Stevenson, M.D., missionaries to China. They report that just on the eve of starting for the interior news was received of fresh outbreaks, which made it prudent to delay a little longer before starting for their designated field. Meantime they are busily engaged in studying the language under competent teachers. Dr. Hart is utilising the period of delay by making some evangelistic tours in parts of the country that can be safely reached.

Dr. McLean wrote respecting the distribution of religious literature in the Northwest. This matter will be further considered at a later date, when some additional information will be available.

A Tribute to Ald. McDougall.

City Treasurer Coady pays a high tribute to Ald. McDougall in the following letter to the Street Railway Committee:

"I regret to learn that Mr. Ald. McDougall, the chairman of your committee, is sick in bed, and consequently unable to be present with you at the final meeting this afternoon. I therefore take this opportunity of informing the committee of the many services rendered the city by the worthy alderman which were altogether outside the range of his duties as president of the most important special committee ever appointed by the City Council. It is only just to Ald. McDougall that I should state in my official capacity that during the intervals which elapsed between the reception of the several sets of tenders he came to the treasury department on many occasions, sometimes spending whole afternoons and evenings conferring with me respecting the tenders and other matters. He proposed the preparation of several useful tables to facilitate the estimating of the present and prospective values and earning power of the railway in accordance with the specifications adopted by the Council, and made many valuable suggestions in respect to the construction and working out of such tables with a view of conveying to the public an intelligent estimate of the enormous value of the great franchise then about to be disposed of, and which I am sure were no small factors in securing to the city nearly $1,000,000 more in 40 years under the accepted tenders than would have been received under the previous tenders.

"Mr. McDougall's time and talents were continuously devoted to the best interests of the city for many months, his services during that time being such as could have been rendered only at great personal sacrifice on his part. While every member of the committee worked hard and deserves the highest credit for securing the best possible terms for the city, it must be conceded that Ald. McDougall's position as chairman was one that carried with it a grave responsibility, which can only be estimated at its true worth by those having knowledge of the facts, and that the manner in which he discharged his duty deserves special recognition at the hands of his fellow-citizens."

In the Police Court.

Magistrate Denison disposed of a big docket at the Police Court yesterday morning in short order. Mary Barnhardt, charged with larceny, was sent to jail for 15 days. The theft of a sheep was traced to John G. Fletcher and he was committed for 30 days. For the larceny of $11 from Isabella Clarke, Thomas McCarthy will also serve a similar term. John Nagle, arraigned on a charge of being implicated in tapping the till of Kormann's saloon, was sent to the Central for seven months. Thirty days in jail was the penalty placed on Rebecca Brow for having stolen a quantity of household goods from the Home for Incurables. Col. Alexander and Barrister W. G. McWilliams, charged by Thomas A. Gregg, editor, and W. E. Caiger, advertising agent, with criminal libel, were remanded, on account of illness, until Monday next.

The Oarsman.

Edward Hanlan, the celebrated oarsman, found great efficacy in St. Jacobs Oil, and he says: "It is a reliable remedy for muscular pains in arms and legs and invaluable to oarsmen." All athletes use it.

Fought Their Battles O'er Again.

The Army and Navy Veterans Society held their regular monthly and semi-annual meeting Wednesday evening. President Robert Waterhouse was in the chair. There was a large attendance, The half-yearly report gave great satisfaction and showed the society to be in good financial standing. S. J. Cailis, late of the medical staff corps, who was at Tel-el-Kebir, was initiated. Sergeant Hamblin of the 79th Cameron Highlanders, who was in the same battle, recognized Mr. Cailis and there was a great shaking of hands. The meeting adjourned shortly after 9 o'clock, when a smoking concert was held. A pleasant evening was spent in recalling hard-fought battles; numerous songs were sung and speeches made. Among those who took part in the concert was J. H. Dawson, late sergeant-major of the Commissariat Department, who was with General Roberts at Cabul and Kandahar.

THE WORLD'S LETTER BAG.

Attributes of Judges and Gospel Preachers.

Editor World: The sacred functions of our high court judges debar them from appearing on platforms to discuss political or public objects; they never arrogate to themselves any departure from their fixed strict duties as judges.

The sacred functions of ministers of religion consist not in business or commercial affairs, or any subject of public utility, but only in religious duties and expounding Biblical history. By virtue of their holy calling they are also legally or morally debarred from appearing on public platforms to discuss political or public subjects foreign to their Sabbath duties.

Consequently it is a question whether certain preachers were overstepping orthodox functions at their recent pavilion mass meeting to discuss Sunday street cars and by arbitrarily preventing the audience from putting any question good, bad or indifferent as to car traffic. RIGHT AND WRONG.

Teaching The Teachers.

A public meeting of the Anglican S.S. Association took place in St. Philip's Schoolhouse last night. The names of the successful candidates were read out in order of merit and the diplomas were presented. The fair sex were very much to the fore, both in the schoolhouse and on the examination lists. Only one gentleman made his way to the platform to receive his diploma and he was greeted with a round of applause which somewhat made amends for his isolated position.

The S.S. lesson for next Sunday was taught by Mr. George B. Kirkpatrick. The speaker dwelt on the necessity of honesty and enthusiasm on the part of the teacher. He spoke briefly upon the divine nature from a psychological point of view, and ended by remarking that there was one key to the nature of every child and that was love, love at once sincere and spotaneous. Children, said he, are as impressible as wax and die with which they are to be stamped is the whole truth of God.

The Bishop of Toronto was in the chair. The society is to be congratulated upon a most successful meeting.

Toronto's New Mayor.

[From The Methodist Recorder.]

Robert J. Fleming, Esq., the newly-elected mayor of this city, is essentially a self-made man. He was born in Toronto in the year 1854. Mr. Fleming has already faithfully served the city as alderman for four years. He is a member of the Parliament-street Methodist Church, and was for some years its recording steward. He was a delegate to the Toronto Conference of 1891, and at present is a trustee and steward of the aforesaid church. As a Christian man he is ready for every good word and work. The poor and needy have found in him a friend indeed. There are few more staunch temperance advocates or consistent Sabbatarians than Mayor Fleming; and, like some other good men, he has the happy faculty of being able to give a right royal shake of the hand to rich and poor alike.

The Milk Turned Sour.

I will not tell you her name, but one of the neighbors says that during her brief visit the other day the milk turned sour. Her countenance looks a yard long. She sighs perpetually. The cloud on her brow is deep. If beaten out thin I believe it would cover the sky. Her voice is doleful and her eyes show no radiance. Her wrinkles are numberless. She is a sorry picture, and all because she is the victim of one of those complaints common to women. Her system is deranged. She needs a course of self-treatment with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This will eradicate thoroughly those excruciating periodical pains and functional weaknesses incident to her sex, and at the same time build up and invigorate her whole system by its health-imparting influence. A trial bottle will convince.

Grand Trunk Grain Freights.

The following from Mr. John Earls, district freight agent of the Grand Trunk Railway, was read at the Corn Exchange yesterday:

"We are advised by the managers of railways in Boston that demurrage and other charges will accrue upon all grain sent to Boston and not promptly exported, either from elevators or cars. We are, therefore, obliged to issue through bills of lading at the current export rail and ocean rates as authorized by the steamship companies, and to add to such ladings, in addition to the rate, the following words: 'And Boston terminal charges, as per manifest.' If exporters do not desire to accept these ladings they can surrender our railway bills of lading to the steamship agents at Boston when exporting their grain and take ocean bills of lading from steamship companies after settling rail and terminal charges at Boston."

Mrs. L. Squire, Ontario Steam Dye Works Toronto, says: "For about 30 years I have doctored for Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia without getting any cure. I then tried Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and the benefits I have received from this medicine are such that I cannot withhold this expression of my gratitude. It acts immediately on the liver. As a Dyspepsia remedy I don't think it can be equaled."

TELEPHONE TO THE SUN

A TALK WITH WIZARD EDISON IN HIS LABORATORY.

How the Great Inventor Talks and Looks —He Says the United States Patent-System is a Fraud—The Kinetograph—A Wonderful Invention Soon to be Completed—The Phonograph's Future.

To the New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Press the other day, Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor, said: "Our patent system puts a premium on rascality. I have taken out 700 patents for my inventions, but I have never had one minute's protection." The place was his experimental laboratory near Orange, New Jersey.

Mr. Edison had had no sleep for thirty-six hours, and during the seventy-two hours before this he had closed his eyes for less than six hours. Still he looked as fresh as a daisy when the morning sun strikes the dew on its petals, and the sparkle of his eyes and the laugh which shook his frame from time to time were those of a boy. He was in the midst of one of those inventive periods when he takes but little rest and works away night and day to accomplish his ends. He had left his chemicals to talk to me and he came in his shirt sleeves with his vest of Scotch tweed open at the front and with his shirt bosom of white linen decorated with spots of all the colors of the rainbow. An odor like that of the hell-broth of Macbeth's witches came from the chemicals in the room and all of the surroundings showed the simplicity of its owner.

HIS TELEPHONE TO THE SUN.

When the conversation turned to the telephone I asked Mr. Edison as to his telephone to the sun. This telephone experiment is the biggest thing of the kind in nature. There is in the New Jersey mountains a vast mass of iron a mile long and of about the same width, which runs straight down into the earth for a number of miles. "The telephone," said Mr. Edison, "is, you know, made by running a wire around the top of a magnetic bar and this machine when charged with electricity enables us to register the sounds which come in contact with it. We are using this immense natural bar of iron of the New Jersey mountains as the basis of our telephone. We have wound miles of wire about its top and have formed an inductive circuit in which we will have the most powerful of electric currents. We expect through it to hear the noises made on the sun and the explosions which are supposed to be constantly going on there will, I believe, within a few weeks be heard right here. We have been working at the matter for some time and have it just about ready for testing."

A WHISPER AROUND THE WORLD.

"We have by no means reached the perfection of the telephone," Mr. Edison went on. "Improvements are being made all the time and the day will come when everyone will have his telephone. Long distance telephoning is growing, and the only restrictions of the possibilities of the telephone is in the systematic contact of the electrical wire with the rest of nature. If a single wire could be placed so high above the earth that it would not touch the mountain tops, you could whisper around the world, and you could sing a song in London and have it heard in Peking. Wherever we get the wire comparatively free from contact with the earth, distance seems to make no difference, and on a government line a thousand miles long over a treeless country in Arizona we got a better telephonic connection than we do now between New York and Philadelphia. If we could have a telephone from the earth to the sun—I mean a wire—we could send sounds there with perfect ease, and with the phonograph, were our language unlimited, we could make a speech here and have it recorded and reproduced in any of the great planetary bodies."

THE KINETOGRAPH.

I here asked Mr. Edison as to the phonograph and he told me that a large number of them were in use and that he believed they would be eventually used everywhere. He took me out into his laboratory and showed me his last invention in connection with the phonograph, which he calls by the name of the kinetograph and which is almost as wonderful as the phonograph itself. With the phonograph you can take a song of Patti's from the lips of the Diva and can reproduce it before an audience a year later and a thousand miles away. By the kinetograph with the aid of a stereoptic can you can throw upon a screen a picture of Patti just as she looked and acted at the time she was singing the song; and one of the great exhibitions of the future will be the reproduction of great speeches and songs in this way. You can reproduce a pantomine with the kinetograph and you can make Chauncey Depew deliver the same after-dinner speech a thousand times with the same gestures and the same smile if you can once get him before it. It is made by instantaneous photography of the man who is to be reproduced. The machine takes him in action and it so works that it takes 2,760 photographs every minute that he is speaking, or forty-six pictures of him every second.

These photographs are taken on a long strip of gelatine film and in reproducing them they are made to revolve as fast before the eyes as when they were taken. The result is that the eye does not see the forty-six photographs but it sees only the one with the motions or gestures of the man. I saw one of these machines in motion representing one of Mr. Edison's employees taking a smoke and you can see the man raise the cigar to his lips, turn his head and blow the smoke just as naturally as though he were in life. Another set of photographs represented a boxing match and it was as natural as though the men were actually fighting before your eyes and it sometimes took a dozen photographs to make a single motion.

Mr. Edison expects to show this machine in its perfection at the Columbian Exposition. The machine I saw was a nickel-in-the-slot machine and it will probably be on the market in a short time. The strip on which the photographs are taken is about as wide as a tape measure, but the figures are magnified through a glass in looking at them.

THE FUTURE OF THE PHONOGRAPH.

I asked Mr. Edison as to the profits of the phonograph. He replied that the invention had not been managed as well as it should be and he spoke of Mr. Lippincott, of Philadelphia, the man who some time ago had the contract to manage the phonograph and graphophone. Said he during the talk on this subject:

"Lippincott is suffering from a clot of blood on his brain. The doctors say this clot is about the weight of a gram, but however big it is it has lost Mr. Lippincott a million dollars. A million dollars a gram. Sixty million dollars an ounce. That's the most expensive material I have ever heard of. I don't know whether he will recover or not, but the phonograph will eventually pay and pay well."

GRAIN AND FLOUR.

Closing cables were firmer, while the American markets were lower. Locally business was dull and prices easier.

Wheat—Much about the same, offerings being light and demand poor. Exporters would have paid 88c, same as yesterday, but no transactions on that account were reported. Odd cars of standard white were taken by millers at 86c west. At the call board No. 1 Manitoba hard at North Bay offered at $1.06. Winnipeg inspection, with $1.00½ bid, and to arrive at North Bay $1.05 was asked; No. 3 hard offered at 93c to arrive; 86½c asked; No. 2 hard offered at 93c to arrive; 86½c was bid for No. 1 regular at North Bay with sellers 87c; with grinding in transit privileges 88c was asked and 87c bid; 2 cars of feed wheat offered at 57c spot with 54c bid; 1 car sold by sample at 73c; 7850 bushels in Northern elevator upon which there was no reserve sold at 68½c.

Barley—There was a little better enquiry for heavy dark barley, principally No. 2 extra; 10,000 bushels lying east changed hands at 50c; Manitoban barley at North Bay offered at 45c and same price was asked to arrive.

Oats—Dull and easy. At the call board 30c was asked outside, with 29c bid for mixed on G.T. west; white was wanted on same line at 29½c. Manitoba white oats would have been taken at 35c.

Peas—Quiet and nominal at 60c west.

Rye—Lower; one car was bought outside at 90c and another here at 97c.

Buckwheat—Dull; 48c was asked outside without bids.

Gossip From Chicago.

Estimated receipts of hogs to-morrow 48,000.

Counselman & Day to J. J. Dixon & Co.: Wheat opened bullish on The Cincinnati Price Current weekly review, on extreme cold weather. Small primary receipts and large Atlantic clearances caused sharp rally. The important gossip of the day was the press cable from Odessa, reporting a semi-official rumor that the edict against the exportation of cereals would be rescinded by April 1st. This knocked out the props and the market broke 1⅝c, closing heavy at ¼c decline. Latest private English cables quoted wheat lower and flour demoralized. Provisions were boistered up by local muscle until indications pointed to receipts of fully 40,000 hogs over the estimates for the week, when realizing began and became general and prices broke 22½c in pork, 7½c to 10c in lard and ribs, closing weak and looking lower for to-morrow.

Kennett, Hopkins & Co. to R. Cochran: The wheat market to-day has lived on yesterday's strength. Foreign intelligence has disappointed holders, although closing cables were better. Receipts at primary markets have fallen off materially since first of the new year. Possibly this is due to the extreme cold weather in Northwest. Clearances reported to-day were much above average, aggregating 875,000 bush for wheat and flour. Such matters have a temporary interest. The key to the speculative situation is held abroad and more export orders come from there if prices are sustained. Provisions firm. Hog market turned weak, offerings increased, some of it coming from Armour, and prices closed at the bottom, with indications of lower range to-morrow.

Gulf From Gotham.

Henry Allen to J. J. Dixon & Co.: The market continued its downward movement to-day. The movement downward was general, very few stocks escaping. There is no doubt a great deal of compulsory liquidation is going on since there have been few stocks upon margins whose limits have been reached. The sales have been large for some time back, but it is not, the investment element which has contributed a material factor. The aggregate is evidently the passing of values from the hands of the weak into the vaults of the strong. The market as yet has given no indication that it has felt any influence from better conditions. England is still balancing her accounts, and the signs of poverty are manifest still in many sections of that continent. The liquidation of American stocks continues, while on the other hand a favorable banking situation exists here. Roads that are maintaining large earnings, money seems not lacking, the exporting element is doing larger business than ever before, and many other signs of promise continue. It would seem that stocks must be approaching their lowest quotations.

Business Troubles.

Harry Elton, jeweler, Toronto, has assigned in trust to George Clay.

George A. Mooney, tanner of Montreal, has assigned with liabilities reaching $95,000. The Bank of Commerce is a creditor for $88.8.

James G. Hearle, soap manufacturer, Montreal, has assigned with liabilities $.0,000. The Bank of Montreal is one of the largest creditors.

TENDERS.

SEALED TENDERS

Addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Postoffice, etc., Orillia," will be received at this office until Tuesday, 2nd February, 1892, for the several works required in the erection of Postoffice, etc., Orillia, Ont.

Secretary.

Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, Jan. 11th, 1892.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Stabling, etc., Infantry Barracks, London, Ont.," will be received at this office until Tuesday, 2nd February, 1892, for the several works required in the erection of stabling, etc., Infantry Barracks, London, Ont.

Plans and specifications can be seen at the Department of Public Works, Ottawa, and at the office of J. M. Moore, architect, London, Ont., on and after Tuesday, 12th January, and tenders will not be considered unless made on the form supplied and signed with the actual signatures of tenderers.

An accepted bank check, payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, equal to five per cent. of amount of tender, must accompany each tender. This check will be forfeited if the party decline the contract or fail to complete the work contracted for, and will be returned in case of non-acceptance of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,

E.F.E. ROY,
Secretary.

Department of Public Works,
