The young baroness nodded assent. She had by degrees told her friend all about her life. She had become hardened. At a time when most girls were protected by their youth from looking into the abysses of life, she had stood on the dizzy brink and had not known on what to steady herself. "Do not let us speak of it," she repeated, and poured some boiling water on the tea. Its aromatic flavor mingled with the smell of the violet perfume which Hortense always used, and which seemed to come out of every drawer and wardrobe, and out of the folds of her dress. She wore a clinging black dress, her only ornament a valuable cameo. "I have been looking up the photographs, for you," she continued; "would you like to look at them? they are over there on the table."

Mr. Barry Pain in his book, "De Omnibus," tells the following amusing story:

"One aye," said the conductor of the omnibus, "a chap gave me a small furrin coin, 'avin' the look o' silver, which it weren't, and not unlike the onery sixpence. It had a 'ole in it, and that gave me a hidear. I put a tack through the 'ole and fastened thet coin darn ter the floor of the bus. And nar thinks I to myself, we shall see what we shall see. Fust a ole gent gits in, cawsts one glance at the coin and then looks ararnd innocentlike and begins 'ummin' tor 'isself. Then he puts 'is eye on me, and I didn't appear to be takin' no notice of im. Slowly 'e slides 'is 'oof over that coin and stoops darn ter fawsen up 'is boot lice. I sees 'im fumblin' awye theer, tryin' ter git that coin up; then he chucks it and sets up agen. A moment arter 'e gort art, and afore I'd done lawfin' two ole ladies come in. Both of 'em sees the coin and nudges each other. Presently one of them stoops darn ter pick it up. I storps 'er.

"'Egscoose me, ma'am,' I says, 'but whort are yer doin'?' 'Pickin' up a sixpence I dropped just now,' says she as bold as brass.

"'Beg pardon,' says I. 'Are yer sure thet's it?' 'In course I am,' says she.

"'I seed 'er drop it myself,' says the other lyedy, 'and I seed it roll there. So don't you try and pretend it's yours, Master Conductor!'

"'Suttingly not,' says I. 'If it's the lyedy's, let 'er pick it up. I only awst because I 'adn't seed her drop nutthink.'

"Then she tries ter pick it up, and the gime begins. 'It must 've gort caught in sutthink,' she says.

"'Yes,' says I; 'it's caught in a tin tack 'ammered through the middle of it. Likely you dropped the 'ammer and tack sime time you dropped the sixpence—on'y if you look at it you'll see as it ain't a sixpence.'"

TRUE PATRIOTISM.

The Difference Between a Patriotic and a Political Speech.

Prof. Shortt of Queen's University on a recent Saturday night was the guest of the Toronto Queen's University Association. After dinner Prof. Shortt delivered an address on "Patriotism."

After an interesting sketch of the evolution of the idea of loyalty in the growth of society, Prof. Shortt drew attention to the number of objects to which men are loyal—to themselves, to their family, their town, their political party, their church, their country, etc. Curious discrepancies appeared as a result of this diversity; for instance, a man in a patriotic speech would describe his country as perfection and his fellow-countrymen as the best people in the world, and in a political speech immediately after would describe the country as in a bad way, and that portion of his fellow-countrymen who belonged to the opposite party as the most corrupt and dangerous of mankind. Neither of these speeches would be believed unreservedly by his hearers, but their extravagance of statement none the less was demoralizing. There was no need to dwell exclusively upon the bad elements in one's country, nor was there need to exaggerate the good elements which it contained.

In this connection he censured the popular tendency to praise without investigation every Canadian enterprise, pleaded for a sane and fair way of looking at the facts, and suggested that the press might show greater frankness in this respect.

Looking for the Sun.

A correspondent of an English exchange tells a story of an experience which an old Sydney colonist, Mr. Joseph Thompson, who lately passed away at the age of 86, used to tell with a chuckle. He arrived in London on a visit in the midst of a gloomy December, and one day at noon suddenly stood still in the Strand and stared fixedly into the sky. Within three minutes he had the usual crowd around him, all asking, "What is it?" "What's up?" They stared with him at the murky darkness which to the Londoner represents the sky, and at length some one ventured to ask him what he was looking at. "Oh!" answered Mr. Thompson, "I'm looking for the sun. That's all! You see, I come from a land where he's to be seen in the sky at this time of day, and I hoped I might find him here, too, if I looked long enough."

Penny in the Slot Did It.

The English papers are telling a story of Sir Hiram Maxim which is worthy of repetition. Sir Hiram and Lady Maxim were staying at a Southern watering place. When the time came to pay the bill on leaving, the landlord of the hotel looked askance at the proffered cheque. He knew the name, but had no evidence that the signer was the owner of it. And Sir Hiram had not enough cash in his pocket to meet the case. Then Lady Maxim invited the proprietor to go down to the pier, put a penny in a certain slot and look. And he saw a "living picture" of Sir Hiram firing a Maxim gun in the presence of the Shah of Persia. This was conclusive.

British Army Chiropodists.

MIXED THE LETTERS.

Serious Result of a Fool Man Trying to Be Facetious.

A well known citizen of Clay Center had been invited to an evening party. He wanted to go, but his wife declared that she had no gown suitable for the occasion and asked him to send "regrets" to their hostess. The man went down to his office and penned this facetious note of declination:

"We regret that your kind invitation must be declined for all the conventional reasons, but the real reason is that half the family has nothing to wear. My wife's latest dress is over three weeks old, and her hat is twelve hours out of date. You will appreciate the hopelessness of the occasion and excuse us."

He thought this pretty good, and he determined to write a note to his wife also explaining that he would not be at home for an early dinner, as she had asked him. He said in this note:

"I have turned down your invitation because I am going out to another evening party where the guests are not expected to wear anything of importance. Sorry I won't be there to kiss you good night."

And then the fool man carelessly sent his wife's note to the hostess and the hostess' note to his wife.

"Mercuriale Swords."

When was it usual to insert running mercury in the backs of swords?

This was a comparatively common practice among the Italian, French and Spanish swordmakers of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, but it was more of a fancy than anything else, for it never came into general use. It was not, of course, used for rapiers or the lighter kind of swords, but for the heavier cutting swords.

The method was to cast the blade rather broader at the back than usual, with a hollow running down it. This was half filled with quicksilver and sealed up. The idea was that when a blow was struck with such a sword the quicksilver would fly to the point and so increase the weight of the blow. This theoretical advantage, however, did not at all counterbalance the general clumsiness of the weapon and its unhandiness in guarding, and so the mercuriale swords, as they were called, from which their ingenious inventor hoped so much, were rather military curiosities than practical successes.—London Answers.

Something to Be Thankful For.

A Scotchman who has a keen appreciation of the strong characteristics of his countrymen delights in the story of a druggist known both for his thrift and his philosophy.

Once he was aroused from a deep sleep by the ringing of his night bell. He went down to his little shop and sold a dose of rather nauseous medicine to a distressed customer.

"What profit do you make out o' that?" grumbled his wife.

"A ha'penny," was the cheerful answer.

"And for that bit o' money you'll lie awake maybe an hour," she said impatiently.

"Never grumble o'er that, woman," was his placid answer. "The dose will keep him awake all night. We must thank heaven we ha' the profit and none o' the pain o' this transaction."

A Primitive Clock.

A naturalist, while visiting Great Sangir, one of those islands of the Indian ocean known as the Celebes, or Spice islands, found a curious time recorder lodged at the house of a rajah. Two bottles were firmly lashed together and fixed in a wooden frame. A quantity of black sand ran from one bottle into the other in just half an hour, and when the upper bottle was empty the frame was reversed. Twelve short sticks, marked with notches from one to twelve, were hung upon a string. A hook was placed between the stick bearing the number of notches corresponding to the hour last struck and the one to be struck next. The sentry announced the time by striking the hours on a large gong.

"Say, I am going to spend the evening with the daughter of old Professor Noett, and he doesn't like me a bit. I want you to help me through."

"Me? What can I do to help you?"

"Call on him in his study about 8 o'clock and ask him this question: 'Professor, to what do you attribute the decay of Darwinism?'"

"What good will that do?"

"He'll spend the whole evening arguing to prove that Darwinism isn't decaying."

The Trick In Omelet Making.

The omelet is the supposed "impossible" in the average kitchen, when in reality it is but a moments' work which any ordinary cook can accomplish. And once a simple omelet is achieved there is no end to the pretty and toothsome variations easily within one's skill. In the first place, omelets need not be "tossed," but just handled calmly and practically, and, in the second place, the puffy omelet is the "souffle," by far inferior to what might be called the "true omelet," which is not puffy at all nor subject to falling.

The one point in omelet making which must be imperatively observed regards the pan. It is not at all necessary to buy a regular omelet pan, as a smooth, rather heavy, medium sized spider answers the purpose equally well. But it must be kept sacred to omelets—absolutely never appropriated to other uses. It must never be washed, but cleaned by salt and brisk rubbing. Before using melt a little lard in it, drain it off and rub out well with a dry cloth until thoroughly clean and shining smooth. It is not too much to say that a proper pan is two-thirds of the battle in successful omelet making.

Never make an omelet for several persons at once, individual ones being both more satisfactory and more easily managed.—Ella Morris Kretschmar in Woman's Home Companion.

"The" Hague.

Did you ever stop to ask yourself of your knowing friend the meaning of "The" in the place named The Hague? If you are looking for something that will knock the above mentioned knowing friend off his feet, just ask him the significance of the three letters quoted. When he fails to answer the question tell him that the The as it occurs in the instance cited is simply the anglicized form of the Dutch word "S Gravenhaaz" or "S Gravenhaze," either of which in the Dutch language means "the count's hedge" or "the count's grove" or "woods."

Originally the location now occupied by the city of The Hague was the hunting grounds of the counts of Holland. About the year 1240 a palace was built in the grove. Presently a village sprang up around the palace—still it was called "The Count's Hedge" and finally and lastly a large city which in the Dutch language has its original signification, but which in modern parlance has been evoluted into "The Hague."

A Sense of Certainty.

"Is you sho' he loves you?" asked Miss Miami Brown.

"Is I sho'!" rejoined the other pityingly. "Is I sho'! Didn't he refuse a invitation to a dog fight so's he could come a-courtin' las' Wednesday night?"

CONVULSIONS AND ST. VITAS' DANCE

Strike Terror to Every Mother's Heart--
Prevention and Cure is Found in

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

The most pitiful condition into which any child can come is that of nervous and physical exhaustion, which often leads to convulsions, St. Vitas' Dance, rickets or epilepsy.

Because of its gentle action and marvellous upbuilding influence on the blood, nerves and system generally, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is especially effective in restoring pale, weak and puny children to robust health.

CONVULSIONS.

Convulsions are sometimes preceded by irritability, fretfulness, restlessness, grinding of the teeth during sleep and twitching of the muscles of the face, which soon extends through the body. The arms and legs are violently bent and straightened, the head thrown back, the eyes opened widely, and breathing is temporarily arrested. As the spasm passes off the child falls into a deep sleep, and may be days or even weeks in regaining strength. To prevent a repetition of convulsions Dr. Chase's Nerve Food should be used regularly after each meal.

ST. VITAS' DANCE.

St. Vitas' dance is usually preceded by decided pallor, emaciation and a low state of heath. It is first made manifest in a lameness or dragging of the feet. The trouble then goes to the arm and hand on the same side, and the more the patient tries to control his movements the more ridiculous he seems. As this trouble is likely to become chronic, and last through life, no time should be lost in treating it.

These dreaded diseases, as well as many other ailments of childhood, are directly due to low vitality, and can be thoroughly driven from the system by the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. For a young child you can divide the pill in two. This food cure forms new, rich blood, creates new nerve cells and builds up the system as no preparation was ever known to do. Fifty cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50. At all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Character In the Hat.

"Does the hat reveal character?" said an observant person whose specialty is character reading. "Of course it does.

"The man whose hat fits him exactly and is set square and straight on his head is nearly always an orderly, deliberate man, regular in his habits, but very often commonplace as regards mental attainments.

"Men of large mental powers, thinkers and philosophers, affect hats a trifle too large for them. They are men of large ideas, and their big hats will often be found in conjunction with loose, easy fitting clothes, for in this, as in other matters, the body reflects the mind.

"I distrust equally the man who wears his hat at the back of his head and he who habitually goes about with it tilted to one side. The first is of a candid, easy going type, but apt to be flighty; the latter, with a disposition for sport and frolic, is at the same time often frivolous and conceited. Neither of them, however, will be a coxcomb, like the man whose hat is too small for him, nor 'deep' and crafty, like the wearer of a hat which is always pulled down over the eyes."

Danger In Poisons.

It is lamentable that neither repeated warning nor sad experience seems to have the desired effect of making the ordinary person cautious in the use of poisons. In the last few days three children have died presumably from taking poison that was carelessly left within their reach. One would suppose that such accidents would by this time have become almost impossible, yet they are constantly recurring with a frequency that demands further warning. If parents would learn to keep poisons in a place where they could not be reached by others there would be fewer accidents.

It is the old principle of familiarity breeding contempt. It cannot be too strongly impressed upon every one that the only immunity from danger is through constant care and precaution. It is a lesson that needs to be impressed upon every individual without exception.

An Old English Superstition.

Attention has been called to the survival of folklore in rural parts of England by evidence given in a stabbing case tried at the Essex assizes. To quicken the heating of the wounds, the knife with which they were inflicted was smeared with grease and laid on the bed of the patient. The purpose served by the application of grease or oil to the knife or to any steel instrument that has inflicted wounds is to prevent it from rusting, for if the steel is allowed to become rusty the wound is supposed to be affected and festering and mortification follow the progress of the rust. Another quaint belief is that the application of an oiled knife is a certain and quick remedy for scalds and burns.

Milo Was a Glutton.

Milo, the famous athlete of ancient Greece (born 520 B. C.), was victor at both the Olympic and Pythian games for six times in succession. On one occasion he ran four miles with an ox on his shoulder, killed the animal with a blow of his first and then ate the entire carcass in one day. An ordinary meal for this gluttonous Titan was twenty pounds of bread, twice that much meat and fifteen pints of wine.

Franklin's Frugality.

Mr. Fisher, in his biographical sketch, "The True Benjamin Franklin," tells a story to illustrate Franklin's frugality and method of acquiring property.

On the eastern shore of Maryland a young man called one evening on an old farmer to ask him how it was that he had become rich. "It is a long story," said the old man, "and while I am telling it we might as well save the candle," and he blew it out.

"You need not tell the story," said the youth. "I see."

Franklin's method of gaining wealth, as seen in his narrative of how he and his wife lived together, was the one her ancestors practiced. "We kept no idle servants," he says. "Our table was plain and simple, our furniture of the cheapest. For instance, my breakfast was for a long time bread and milk—no tea—and I ate out of a twopenny earthen porringer with a pewter spoon. But mark how luxury will enter families and make a progress in spite of principle.

"Being called one morning to breakfast, I found it in a china bowl with a spoon of silver! They had been bought for me without my knowledge by my wife and had cost her the enormous sum of three and twenty shillings, for which she had no other excuse or apology to make but that she thought her husband deserved a silver spoon and china bowl as well as any of his neighbors."

A Day's Talk.

Few of us probably ever think seriously about the amount of talking we do in a day and how large a factor mere talk is in the life of the world for both good and evil. It has been estimated that a public speaker utters in one hour, on an average, what, if printed, would occupy 15 octavo pages. Ordinary conversation is even more prolific.

Let us suppose, says The Winoniam, that all the talk of one day be estimated as equivalent to four hours' consecutive speaking. In a single week the amount would make what, if printed, would be an octavo of 320 pages. In a year a man would complete 52 such volumes, and in 30 years he would have accumulated a library of 1,560 volumes of his own talk. What value would most of us place on such a library? How many of us could endure to read it? How many would feel satisfied to have such books go on the market?

It is related of Dean Swift that at an evening party, on one occasion, he retired to a corner of the room and commenced noting down the talk of the company. Being asked what he was doing, he produced a verbatim report of the conversation which had just taken place. Most of the speakers, it is added, felt no small humiliation over the superficial and trifling character of their utterances when confronted with them.

Too Inquisitive.

Wife—Such a dream as I had last night, dear!

Husband—May I hear about it?

"Well, yes. I dreamed that I was in a great establishment where they sold husbands. There were beauties, some in glass cases and marked at fearful prices, and others were sold at less figures. Girls were paying out fortunes and getting the handsomest men I ever saw. It was wonderful."

"Did you see any like me there, dear?"

"Yes. Just as I was leaving I saw a whole lot like you lying on the remnant counter."

AN ANXIOUS TIME

EXCURSION STEAMER RUNS ON A CORAL REEF.

The Pilot Misses the Lights in a Dangerous Place off Bermuda Island—Passengers All Safe after Experiences That Made Them Shiver.

The Quebec Steamship company's steamer Madiana, Captain Frazer, which sailed from New York last Saturday with a party of excursionists for a special cruise around the Carribbean Islands, went ashore on the reefs off the Island of Bermuda at 3 o'clock on the morning of February 10.

The passengers had a thrilling experience.

The ship is a total loss, but all on board were rescued and brought safely to land in the lifeboats from the wreck to a tug standing a mile off.

The mails and passengers' baggage were also saved.

According to statements made by those on board, the Madiana was threading her way in the night through the narrow channel between the coral reefs which lead to Hamilton harbor, when she struck a reef one and a half miles northeast of North rock. No explicit explanation is yet forthcoming as to how the vessel went on the rocks, and the only information obtainable from the officials is that the light which indicates the channel, for some reason, could not be seen.

All the passengers were in their bunks when the ship struck the rocks but the shock of the impact awakened them, and they rushed on deck, the majority without attempting to dress.

Considerable alarm, though not a panic, prevailed among the passengers when they found that the vessel was hard on the rocks, but the officers went among them and allayed their fears. Part of the crew did not share the coolness of the officers, but the latter soon restored order among troublesome seamen. Distress signals were sent up, and the passengers passed an anxious time during the latter part of the night.

The Madiana listed heavily in the night, and when morning broke, lay broadside. The passengers, many still scantily dressed, were huddled together on the hurricane deck, and the sea breaking over the sea drenched them to the skin.

As soon as the news of the wreck became known at Hamilton, government and other tugs proceeded to the scene to endeavor to render assistance. A heavy sea, however, was running, and they dared not approach too closely to the reef on which the Madiana was pounding. For some time no communication with the Madiana was possible. The tug Gladisfen stood a mile off awaiting an opportunity to assist, but it was not until 11 o'clock that it became possible to effect a rescue.

The crew of the Madiana launched a boat, but it could not live in the sea then running, and was dashed to pieces against the steamer's side. A second and more successful attempt was made a little later, and some passengers were lowered into it. After much exertion, this boat succeeded in reaching the Gladisfen.

The Madiana's other lifeboats were then launched in succession, and the remainder of the passengers and the captain, and crew gained safely the salvage tug.

By the prompt action of Engineer Wilson, who had the Madiana's bulkheads broken through, the mails and the passengers' light baggage were taken out and brought in the last boats to the Gladisfen, which landed the passengers, crew, mails and baggage in the afternoon.

TRIPLE TRAGEDY.

Three Children Die at Laurier From Mixing Lye With Beans.

A dispatch from Laurier, Man., says: The residents' inquiry into the mysterious death of the three Mousette children has finished. There was considerable excitement until the facts were learned, and this has been followed by deep sorrow for the bereaved family.

The facts of the case are as follows: The mother of the children went out to wash at a neighbor's, and left the little ones at home to shift for themselves. It appears that Mrs. Mousette was in the habit of using Gillette's lye in preparing beans for the table, and the little ones undertook to follow her example in getting the food ready for dinner on the particular day in question. The trouble was that they did not limit the quantity of lye they placed on the beans, and when they partook of them death resulted shortly after by paralysis of their throats. The case has caused a great deal of talk, and many are of the opinion that a government investigation should have followed.

Alaskan Boundary Tribunal.

Several of the questions framed for submission to the judicial tribunal on the Alaskan boundary were prepared by Canada. They are the following:

"What is intended as the point of commencement of the line of demarcation?"

"What channel is the Portland channel?"

"What course should the line take from the point of commencement to the entrance of the Portland channel?"

"To what point on the 56th parallel is the line to be drawn from the head of the Portland channel and what course should it follow between these points.

JIM HILL ON LABOR UNIONS.

He Says That They Will Cause a Financial Reverse in United States.

A dispatch from New York says: After briefly discussing the anti-trust law and the proposed department of commerce, James J. Hill, president of the Northern Securities company, said: "As labor unions killed industrial England, so are they destined to bring about a grave financial reverse in the United States, and the country is swiftly approaching that crisis. It may come in a year; it may be deferred until the presidential year, but it is bound to come."

Mr. Hill denied flatly, but depreciatingly that, as the average person believes, the United States is the leading manufacturing nation, and is rapidly gathering to its bosom the markets of the entire world. This misapprehension, he averred, is the result of the fact that over one industrial victory the country sets up a louder shout than England, Germany and France makes over a dozen.

"There seems to be too much confidence in the ability of the country to walk right ahead of all other countries in manufacturing," continued Mr. Hill. "The country can do it, but not without trouble, and not without changing its present course. It is, indeed, a grave crisis we are approaching, although few seem to appreciate it. A few years may see the closing of many factories and the throwing out of work of hundreds of thousands of men. We have been reaping the harvest and the reverse is coming. How quickly we recover from it will depend largely on who is at the head of the country when the break comes."

FALLS HEIR TO $200,000.

Former Winnipegger Receives a Fortune Through a Relative.

Miss Rose Whalen, of St. Paul, Minn., has fallen heir to $200,000 by the death of her grandmother, Mrs. Annie Whalen, of Halifax, Nova Scotia. This good luck comes to Miss Whalen after a long period of illness and financial and domestic reverses which have brought her to the verge of want.

Her father was Michael John Whalen, sergeant-major in the British army, a leading figure in the great Indian Mutiny and campaign in the Crimea. When Louis Reil started his rebellion in 1885 Whalen was then living in Winnipeg, and although he had been retired on a pension he engaged in a three months' chase of the rebel. Receiving a serious wound in the right arm, Whalen returned to his home. Later his home was burned. The baby sister of Miss Whalen died, then her mother, and in 1901 her father. She graduated as a trained nurse, but was forced to give up work owing to poor health. She had been ill much of the time since coming to St. Paul over a year ago.

Rough Football.

A Vancouver dispatch says: Besides being the hardest fought tie match in a football championship, the final played in the British Columbia league last Saturday between the Vancouver Rugby seniors and the Nanaimo Hornets, was unhappily notable for serious mishaps arising through rough play. The victim is W. H. Kennon, Vancouver, the 200-pound king of the forward line, who, before the match had been five minutes in progress, was kicked in the back of the head and carried senseless from the field. It is now found that there has been concussion of the brain, that the spinal cord is completely paralyzed, and that there is the merest glimmer of hope for his recovery. Captain "Bunch" Marpole, son of the general superintendent of the C. P. R., was also badly injured internally, a husky Nanaimo player giving him his knee in the groin.

C. P. R. Wants to Select Lands.

A dispatch from Ottawa says the government has now under consideration a proposition from the Canadian Pacific railway for the selection of the balance of its land grant of 25,000,000 acres. There are 3,300,000 yet to be alotted. The railway company proposes to take 2,500,000 in the arid belt between Calgary and Medicine Hat, if the balance, 800,000 acres, begiven in the Manitoba and Northwest reserve, which reverted to the government when the Manitoba and Northwestern railway failed to earn its subsidy. The railway company say that they must have the land in the arid belt en bloc, not alternative sections, as they would require to spend from $3.50 to $5 per acre for irrigation. In this way the company say that from $7,000,000 to $10,000,000 would have to be expended.

River Clyde on the Rampage.

A cable from Glasgow says: The river Clyde has burst its banks above Glasgow and inundated the industrial district of Rutherglen, where a dozen extensive works were flooded to the depth of several feet. The main road was ten feet under water, and many houses were rendered uninhabitable. Several residential districts south of Glasgow were also flooded. The damage done was very heavy. The rain-swollen river has submerged miles of the country. Elsewhere in Scotland the traffic on railroads has been stopped, bridges have been swept away, and houses have collapsed. This far no fatalities have been reported.

Advices have been received from Guatemala declaring that war has been declared between Guatemala on one side and San Salvador and Honduras on the other.

CABLE GOSSIP.

FORECAST OF ACTION IN THE COMMONS.

The Redistribution Bill Will Increase England's Representatives in the House of Commons and Decrease the Number From the Green Isle.

London, Feb. 10.—The government is determined to reduce Ireland's representation in parliament. A cabinet minister has foretold the advent of another administration bill and as he is the son of the colonial secretary, it is obvious that he knows what he says. The hands of the cabinet will be quite full this year, with the Irish land bill, the education act and a redistribution scheme. Parliamentary representation in the United Kingdom is full of anomalies. There is no proportional representation. England has only one member to 66,817 people, while Ireland has one member to 43,048 people. On the basis of the present population England has 36 members too few, Scotland three too many, and Ireland 33 too many. There are 103 Irish seats in the house of Commons today and it is an open secret that the government intends to reduce the number to 85 or less. The Nationalists argue that as the Act of Union gave Ireland 108 members the imperial parliament has no right to reduce that representation. When the act passed the population of Ireland was five millions, about half of that of Great Britain. Today the population is 4,430,000, or a little more than one-ninth of Great Britain.

The most interesting topic in the drawing-rooms and clubs has been the compulsory retirement of Col. Kinlock, from the command of the Grenadier Guards in consequence of his neglect to prevent or investigate the "ragging" or hazing of the sons of three peers by their companions in the mess room. There are a dozen versions of the ignominious treatment to which the sons of the Duke of Wellington and Lord Belhaven and a nephew of Lord Desaumarez were subjected, and half a dozen accounts of negotiations of their titled relations and numerous ladies in smart society with Lord Roberts. The result alone is definitely known. One of the most gallant officers in the South African campaign was held responsible by his officers of a mock court martial and compelled to retire on half pay after a futile appeal to the King, and condemned to forfeit £1,000 a year for the remainder of his life in his retiring pension. There is abundant gossip from irresponsible sources about the indignation of aristocratic fathers and mothers, uncles and aunts over the degrading punishment inflicted upon high born subalterns in the Grenadier Guards by their companions for snobbishness and offences against the customs and manners of the corps. There are sensational accounts of petticoat intrigues in the military administration, and Lady Roberts is charged with taking active interest in the vindication of the rights and dignities of the privileged class. The entire scandal will be threshed out when parliament meets. Meanwhile Lord Roberts assumes the responsibility for the most unusual procedure in deciding a case which ought naturally to have been disposed of regimentally, and Col. Kinlock is punished and heavily fined, while the ringleaders in the mess room plot against three titled officers escape.

Big Earnings of C. P. R.

The Canadian Pacific railway directors met in Montreal on Feb. 9, with Sir Thomas Shaughnessy in the chair. A dividend of 2 per cent. on preferred and 2½ on common stock was declared for the half year ending December. The surplus for the half year, after the payments of dividends was $3,202,907. The statement which was submitted is said to be the best in the history of the company, the revenue for the year showing an increase of $5,500,000 over 1901. An additional 155,000 shares, which were issued by the authority of the shareholders at a special meeting March 27 rank for a dividend with existing shares for a half year ending December, 1902, making the common stock 45,000 shares of the par value of $100 to receive dividends. The gross earnings for the year will be over 42,000,000, while the land sales will be over $2,000,000, nearly double those of last year.

May Inflame All Europe.

A London cable says: Right Hon. James Bryce, M.P., speaking at Aberdeen, referred to the Macedonia larger as being real and near. The government, he said ought to exert its most powerful influence in pressing reforms on Turkey, so as to avert, if possible, a European conflagration.

MORE LIKE A PRISON.

Girls Escape From a Nova Scotian Ladies' School.

A sensation was caused at Sydney, N.S., last week by the news that a number of refined English girls, who had been living in what was supposed to be a school for education in colonial life, had appealed to Mayor Crowe for assistance, and had made their escape from what was more a prison than a school. Miss Hagan, one of the young ladies, who is a daughter of Dr. Hagan, professor of Owen college, Manchester, gives the following account of her experiences:

"Early last autumn an advertisement appeared in leading English papers to the effect that a school for English girls desirous of being instructed in life suitable for the colonies, had been established on the farm of Captain Horsfell, situated in Westmount, a suburb and district opposite Sydney. The advertisement promised instruction in market gardening, dairying, and also in English, French and Latin, dancing, and in fact everything that young ladies desirous of living in Canada would require to know. Names of prominent people were given as references, including that of the agent-general of Canada, and I and a number of other English ladies decided to go to Sydney to attend the school. We came, and for a month things went well, although there was not the faintest pretence of keeping school. Later we girls were left to what proved to be the far from tender mercies of Captain and Mrs. Horsfell. Our education in colonial life consisted in doing all the work of the house and farm, caring for cattle, poultry, sawing wood, carrying water, and doing all the house work. We were told that if we went to Sydney without permission we would be driven out of the house.

"Captain Horsfell insulted us. At last we kept to our rooms and did not venture downstairs except in couples. Finally we managed to smuggle a message to the Rev. A. R. Woodroof, English church minister, and to Mayor Crowe, stating the position and asking for help. On Tuesday we made our escape."

New Warships.

A special cable from London says: That is the British admiralty is not blind to the rapid increase in the number of ships of greater displacement and improved armament, which characterizes the building programmes of other maritime powers, is shown by its own programme, the principal feature of which is a new type of warship surpassing all the existing battleships in size and power, designed by Mr. Watts.

There will be three of these big fighting machines built. Their displacement will reach 18,000 tons, which is nearly 2000 tons more than the King Edward class, the largest type of battleship built by any power. They will carry four 12-inch guns, placed in pairs, in two barbettes, fore and aft; also eight new pattern 9.2 inch guns, mounted in pairs; four smaller turrets, with ten or twelve 6-inch quick firers.

As a remarkable feature they carry twelve heavy armour piercing guns, well protected by armor, nine 20-inch guns, an extremely powerful piece, firing a 380-pound shell twice or three times a minute. The speed will be nineteen knots.

Race War in Missouri.

A dispatch from Fayette, Mo., says a race war has been started there as the result of the public whipping of three negroes on the court house steps on Friday night.

A committee of the Law and Order league took the negroes from their homes and whipped them publicly for alleged misconduct. Two of them were women.

Since then the negroes and white people have been in open enmity and twenty-five negro families have been frightened into leaving the place.

The only negro man who was whipped on Friday night made a desperate resistance. It took several men to carry him to the post. He cursed his captors as the lash was applied, which resulted in the whip being weilded only the more vigorously. When the ordeal was ended the negro was so weak from loss of blood that he was put to bed instead of being driven from town.

The women, who were not whipped severely, were taken to the outskirts and told to go. There is much excitement and a clash is feared.

A Long Bridge.

Official announcement of the building of the new bridge across the East River at Hell Gate, New York, by the Pennsylvania Railroad company has been made public by Col. Joseph U. Crawford, engineer of the branch lines of the Pennsylvania system. It is estimated that the new bridge will cost over $8,000,000.

When work will be started has not yet been definitely decided on. It will require about three years to complete the work. The bridge and approaches will be two miles long. The central span will be 840 feet in length.

The bridge will be erected 135 feet above the water. It will extend from Port Morris, Harlem, to Randall's Island, thence to Ward's Island, and from that point to Long Island.

It is announced in a dispatch to a London news agency from St. Petersburg that all the officers of the Russian army reserves have been notified to hold themselves in readiness to rejoin their regiment in 24 hours, in the event of mobilization orders being issued. The measure, it is added appears to be connected with fears of trouble in the Balkans.

The Winnipeg General hospital treated nearly 3,000 patients last year.

ENEMY OF SOCIETY

ANARCHIST INTENDED TO KILL KING EDWARD.

A Letter Produced by Prosecution Said He Contemplated Killing British Monarch on November 25—Prisoner Posed as a Hero at Trial.

A cable from Brussels, of Feb. 6, says: The trial of Rubino, the Italian anarchist, on the charge of attempting to assassinate King Leopold on November 15, by firing three shots at his majesty while the latter was returning from the cathedral here after attending a Te Deum in memory of the late Queen Henriette, was opened to day in the assize court. A large crowd gathered in the vicinity of the court to which only the witnesses, lawyers and reporters were admitted. A detachment of police of considerable strength maintained order.

Rubino replied volubly to all interrogations, and whenever he uttered the word "anarchy" he raised his voice as though exulting in his connection therewith. The prisoner bitterly assailed modern society as the cause of all evil, declaring he only attempted to take the life of the king because the latter was the highest representative of society. Rubino added that he had intended going to Italy for the purpose of making an attempt on the life of the Italian monarch, but he did not have sufficient funds. During the course of the prisoner's examination it developed that he left the Italian army because his officers persecuted him.

Rubino posed as a hero throughout his examination. He declared he gloried in his crime, and in the course of his denunciation of society exclaimed: "I am not the accused. It is you and the whole of your rotten society which keeps labor in slavery that stands accused before me and the anarchist party, and we condemn you to death."

The prosecution included in the indictment a letter from Rubino to a Socialist newspaper published in London, justifying the murder of Senor Canovas Del Castillo, the Spanish premier, who was assassinated at Santa Agueda, Spain, August 8, 1897, by an Italian anarchist, and stating that he, Rubino, had contemplated killing King Edward, on November 25.

UNION OF MUNICIPALITIES.

Memorandum Setting Forth the Views of the Association Regarding Telephone Systems.

Representatives from all the leading cities of Canada and members of the Union of Canadian Municipalities, waited on Mr. Fitzpatrick at Ottawa, on Feb. 5, and submitted the following memorandum:—

"It is submitted that in any measure that may be passed by the Dominion parliament, provision should be inserted to the effect following:

"1. That no local telephone system should be established in any urban municipality without the consent of the council of such municipality, which should have power to impose such terms, conditions, and restrictions as to the use of its streets, the placing of poles and conduits, and of wires and other appliances in all streets and public places and the rates of service to be charged, as the municipal council deem reasonable.

"2. That any company having a trunk line should be compelled to permit any local telephone company or any municipal telephone system to use such trunk line for long distance messages and conversations, and to transmit the messages or permit the use of its long distance system for such conversation upon terms to be mutually agreed on between the local companies and the owners of the long distance line, or in the event of their failure to agree, then upon such terms as might be imposed by order of the governor-general-in-council.

"3. It would be still better in the public interest that the Dominion government should own and control all the long distance lines and permit them to be used by all local telephone systems, under a reasonable tariff of rates to be fixed by the government.

"4. Provision should be made that all telephone companies incorporated by or under the authority of the parliament of Canada should be subject to the appropriation of their local systems by the municipalities in which they are respectively situated, upon such terms and conditions as may be imposed by the legislature of the province in which any of such systems may be located."

Two French doctors have been looking into the question of bearded women, and have discovered that out of every 1,000 sane females 290 are bearded. Of these 230 have only a light down, 40 have a very visible beard, and ten are unmistakably adorned with this hirsute appendage. Out of 1,000 insane women examined 491 had slight beards, while 56 had beards well grown.

A dispatch from Vancouver says: A combination of whiskey, rough water and poor seamanship in a stolen boat was responsible for the drowning of one man in the inlet on Feb. 6, and the narrow escape of his two companions. The man engulfed was named Williams.

MR. HARRIS HONORED.

Is Permitted to Dedicate His Coronation March to the King.

Mr. Charles A. E. Harris, the distinguished Canadian musical composer, who has organized the great cycle of musical festivals throughout the Dominion of Canada, has received signal honor from His Majesty King Edward, and Her Majesty Queen Alexandra, for presentation at the cycle of festivals. Mr. Harris composed a coronation mass in a rich setting, and he has received gracious permission from His Majesty to entitle it "The Coronation Mass of King Edward the Seventh." This would, in itself, be a tribute calculated to reward any composer, but Mr. Harris has been doubly honored, and coupled with His Majesty's sanction has received permission from the Queen Consort to dedicate the mass in her name. Mr. Harris received notification of the marked honor through his excellency the governor-general, and, naturally, was delighted.

So far as is known this is the first occasion upon which a musical composer has received the double recognition, and it is a deserved tribute to the splendid work Mr. Harris is doing in raising the standard of musical education throughout his adopted country.

Shoplifters to Wed.

A Toronto dispatch says: May Sherman and Edith Squire, two young women, whose arrest on a charge of wholesale shoplifting at Eaton's caused a sensation a short time ago, and who pleaded guilty guilty before Judge Morgan yesterday morning, were let off on suspended sentence. Isaac Matchett, their alleged accomplice, pleaded guilty to a charge of having received stolen goods by the young women, and was set free on a like sentence. Miss Squire is but 17 years of age and a nice looking girl. Her young man was in court and stood forth manfully in her defence. "She has always been a good girl when I knew her," he said, with a blush. "Are you still willing to marry her?" asked Judge Morgan. "This will not bother," answered the young man. Isaac Matchett and Mary Sherman announced their intention of getting married immediately, and the judge discharged the party with the remark that the weddings could not take place too soon.

Dispatches from Helsingfors, Finland, announce that the Czar has decreed severe disciplinary measures for all Finns who fail to comply with the military obligations in 1902. These total 14,798 men. The decree orders all the delinquents who are engaged in state service to be immediately dismissed, that no passports shall be granted to any of them to go abroad during the next five years, that all shall be enrolled in the landwehr, and that a full battalion of lifeguards shall be recruited therefrom.

Immigration Commissioner Preston says that the British emigration movement to Canada has already become almost unmanageable under existing conditions, and that the Canadian government will need to make special arrangements for supplying a largely increased number of townships in the Northwest Territories and taking care of the settlers in transit. He admits that the American invasion from the western states has been a convincing argument in favor of a British movement, and asserts, that while few Scotchmen seem interested, thousands of English and Welsh emigrants are applying for passage to the new lands, which the American farmers have pronounced promising.

A Vienna dispatch to the London Express says: "An Austrian engineer of note, Herr Wetkovic, has invented a new type of ship, which he claims will be capable of travelling at lightning speed. Herr Wetkovic declares that when perfected it will enable a journey around the world to be made in a week. The ship does not displace water, but glides over the surface like a skate over ice. Ingenious constrivances are constructed to minimize friction and air pressure.

FERNIE BRITISH COLUMB

THE STRIKE.

A strike has been declared by the employees of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company and this district is again forced into the turmoil of a labor struggle. It is needless to say that we regret very much that such a step has been deemed necessary. The distressing effects of the strike of last summer are still in evidence to keep its memory green.

We publish in this issue a statement authorized by the Crow's Nest Pass District Union setting forth their side of the present labor trouble, and we also expected to publish a detailed report from the General Manager of The Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company giving the exact average earnings of the employees of the Company for the past several months. This report at the time of writing is not yet to hand and owing to the great amount of work it entalls we have just learned that it cannot be ready in time for this issue. We are necessarily handicapped in offering any criticisms we might otherwise observe by comparing the two statements. The FREE PRESS is desirous of seeing fair play, and its attitude is, and will be, governed solely by a conscientious regard for justice and the general well-being of the country at large.

All strikes bring much suffering to innocent people, in fact often more than to those directly concerned. The employer may be willing and able to close down his business indefinitely, the employee has the option of leaving at any time and finding employment elsewhere, and in any case loses nothing more than his wages while idle. The business man on the other hand, who invests, and carries on a legitimate trade by which each of the contending parties gain advantages, is the innocent party; he has no active interest in the struggle and yet the loss to him as a mere on-looker is greater than to either of the principals in the fight.

Widening our range of vision we observe that few strikes affect such a a large proportion of innocent people as does this one. Not only are the business men of Fernie affected, but the whole of the South Kootenays and the Boundary Country, with their ore-producing mines, its roaring smelters, and its hustling towns feel its effect just as keenly as does Fernie. The comparison of the pebble thrown into the water illustrates our meaning. This strike, like the pebble, is, in a comparative sense a little thing but its effect is seen in ever-widening circles of kindred and dependent industries.

We are not disposed to think that the strike must necessarily be a lengthy one or that the points in dispute cannot be easily settled. In our opinion the wage scale is the point about which the most importance centres. Sentiment is all very well in its place, but in this practical age the question of dollars and cents largely governs the relations between employer and employee. The miners ask for a uniform rate; just what they mean is not perfectly clear but we understand that the 40 cent rate at No 1 mine Morrissey is one of the rates objected to. The only satisfactory method of judging of this case is by a careful investigation of figures showing the average earnings, certified by the Company's management, and until we have those figures we are unable to form any opinion as to whether the present rating is uniform or not. Of course the Company assert that No 1 mine at Morrissey is easy to dig, it is a wide seam and does not require powder.

We would like to see the Fernie Board of Trade, as the only organized body in the district, offer their services in the matter. We believe that this organization commands the respect of both Company and men and that the strained relationship between these parties might be eased by the friendly assistance of a third party who has the interests of the country and town at heart. Failing in this, the Board would be justified in presenting an appeal for aid to the Provincial government, setting forth the disastrous effects of the strike if allowed to continue. This is the time for action; other strikes have shown us that final settlements made after prolonged struggles might just as easily have been made at the beginning had the contending parties used a little common sense, and we trust that our miners and their employers will not make the same fatal mistake.

THE MORRISSEY ROAD.

ONE of the most pressing needs of this District is a road between Fernie and Morrissey. New-comers to this town often complain of the "shut-in", isolated, feeling it gives them. Our tall wall of surrounding mountains with no road of egress but that of the steel rails may with reason be compared to prison walls by those not accustomed to western frontier life. But from a practical rather than an emotional stand-point would we urge the necessity of this public work. Several enterprising citizens of Fernie now possess driving horses and there is really nowhere to drive. Were there a good highway to Morrissey many others would be encouraged to keep horses for saddle and driving purposes. This naturally would have a beneficial effect upon the business of the town, harnessmakers, blacksmiths, feed dealers and others all help to contribute towards keeping up these conveniences. The business men of the town and especially the Coal Co. officials require road connection with Morrissey. The latter may often require to make the journey with all possible dispatch and there is nothing to do but risk one's neck over a very uncertain trail or wait for the daily express, which may often mean a delay of more than a day.

The unprecedent depth of snow in our mountains this year make it reasonably certain thot disastrous floods and slides will occur. The connection with the Northern at Morrissey Junction will, it is hoped, lessen the isolation which would otherwise envelope Fernie. It is reasonable to suppose that there will be times when the C. P. R. is blocked and the Northern is open and arrangements could easily be made whereby express and mail could be brought in that way. While there is no doubt in our minds but that another year will see the Northern into Fernie, much inconvenience in the meantime could be saved by pushing this waggon road through with the first advent of spring.

There is now a semblance of a road between Morrissey and Elko which could with little cost be transformed into a fair highway. When Elko is reached we practically have access to outside points and we can breathe freely the air of liberty. So that with the building of the short road to Morrissey we can feel that we are within horse communication of Cranbrook, Fort Steele, Gateway, etc.

The cost of building this road to Morrissey should not be a large amount. At the present time there is a passible waggon road to Coal Creek and a ride over the trail the remainder of the way reveals few difficulties to overcome in completing it. Without bringing any engineering knowledge into the question it is safe to estimate that $5,000 would give us the much desired road. The government of B. C. have been draining from this town a large annual revenue in the form of taxation, licences, etc., and in return we have received practically nothing beyond a bridge across the Elk river and police protection. The amount of provincial revenue gathered from this town is enormous. The Coal Company, alone, pay $200 per day towards the support of the provincial government. If we were allowed that alone to be spent in improvements in this district what vast public improvements could be done in one short year! Over $60,000 per year would build roads in all directions, and bridge every waterway to be met. This sum augmented by other taxation and licences from the district is largely spent in public works in other parts of the constituency and it is times that the government was giving some attention to the wants of this immediate district. It has been hinted that even legislative members from other districts have recognized the scant attention that Fernie is receiving and it is to be hoped that these gentlemen will undertake what our own member has failed to accomplish.

This road is a necessity; the people of Fernie realize it and the agitation will be maintained until it is built. Morrissey should take up the cry. It would be a great boon to the mines and the town there. It would give them easy access to the metropolis of the valley without making it necessary to remain all night, and when the C.P.R. for any reason is tied up along this line it will be doubly indispensable.

The practice so common among boys in Fernie of riding on passing sleighs cannot be too harshly condemned. It is not the fun-loving lads who are mostly to blame nor should the teamsters who do not roughly lay the whip on them be too severely censured for good-naturedly allowing them the self-invited pleasure. The fault lies with the parents to a large degree. Boys should be taught at home the danger of such sport and also the unbecoming appearance of children dashing after every passing sleigh to grasp some hold and climb on as it goes by. The habit should be stopped, and it is to be hoped that it will be before another accident occurs on our streets.

Infringement of a Trade Mark

In an action in the High Court of Justice for Ontario, recently tried before Chancellor Boyd, at Toronto, the Slater Shoe Co., and Chas. E. Slater, president of Montreal, makers of the famous Slater Shoe, obtained a judgment forever restraining F. C. Wilkinson, a boot and shoe dealer, of Owen Sound, from advertising, exposing, or offering for sale or selling boots or shoes not made by the Slater Shoe Co., as "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods" or the Slater Shoe." The Chancellor, also ordered Wilkinson to pay the heavy costs of the action. The Chancellor, after hearing the evidence, decided that no one except the Slater Shoe Co., had a right to use the name "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods," "The Slater Shoe," or any similar names in connection with boots and shoes, and that Wilkinson had no right to use any name or names in connection with boots and shoes which might enable him to pass of a shoe not of the company's make, as being of their make, nor in any way to reap the benefit of the reputation which the Slater Shoe has acquired throughout the Dominion of Canada.

The Genuine Slater

Is positively the best shoe value offered for sale in Canada. You may include the United States and that will pretty near cover the world for fine shoe making. There are shoes sold elsewhere at $4 50 and $6 a pair that carry no more style, are no better fitting and will not wear as well as the genuine Slater Shoe at $4. "Why is it?" you ask. "Just because they are branded with an American stamp."

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

F. J. Mitchell's tweed suits run from $23 to $28 x

Mr. Chas. Waldie returned from a trip to his home near Toronto ou Tuesday.

F W. F. Cuthbert came up from Lethbridge on Tuesday.

Frank Dunn has purchased A. E. Brown's hotel at Wardner and has left Fernie to take charge.

Dr, and Mrs. Barber have taken up their permanent residence in Fernie. The whole upper flat of the Hill block has been rented by the doctor which will be utilized as dental parlors and dwelling apartments.

The practical joker wishes to acknowledge receipt of tender tokens received this morning. Will interested parties kindly mail their address care of Fernie FREE PRESS? No photographs exchanged. Personal interview only.

Wilson's Uncle Tom's Cabin show had a big house last night despite the strike. The company is about as good as could be expected and presented the old story in a fairly creditable manner. Little Eva was the best character. Ten Nights in a Bar-room is on for to-night.

Pete Loubeve the unfortunate epileptic who fell off the express sometime ago near Michel, and who has been confined to the Fernie hospital since, was taken to the Cranbrook hospital by Constable Kummer on Monday. Loubeve's severe frost bites are gradually healing but the terrible mental strain has left its effect upon his mind.

Our Senior Police Officer

A petition is being circulated about town asking the attorney general to appoint Mr. A. P. Walker senior officer in Fernie vice J. H. McMullen who has been appointed chief of police for the District of South East Kootenay. Mr. Walker in this position will rank as a provincial policeman. The petition is being largely signed as he enjoys the respect and the confidence of the townspeople generally.

A Mules Experience.

A mule had an exciting time on the mine road last Saturday evening. The team was being driven up with a load and one getting too near the edge slipped and toppled over into the snow. The harness was cut and the animal rolled down considerably farther and buried itself in the deep snow. When rescued 8 hours later it was in an exhausted condition.

Crow's Nest Hockey Team.

At the Rossland Carnival this week the Crow's Nest will be represented by a crack hockey team which ought to give a good account of itself. The team is made up as follows: goal H. R. Sharpe, Frank; point H. H. Gunn, Pincher; cover point M. A. Kastner, Fernie; forwards: G. Turnbull, & C. Turnbull, Medicine Hat; Wm. Fair, Fernie and T. J. Moore, Pincher. Other teams from Nelson, Sandon and Greenwood will compete and some splendid hockey will be seen.

The B.C. Furniture Co. will sell at cost for cash only to close out their business. The strike is on; Nuff'sed. x

Engine Broke Down.

The engine that run the planer at the Fernie Lumber Company's mill met with a disaster last week which rendered it useless. While repairing the saw-dust carrier a nut dropped between the wrist-pin and the others working parts. The engine was going at a high rate of speed and it was badly wrecked making it useless. The ruined engine is of considerable power having been used for sawing purposes prior to last spring when it was replaced by a much larger one. Mr. L. M. Proctor went down to Blairmore this week to negotiate for the purchase of an engine from the McLaren Lumber Co.

A Hearse for Fernie

The town is gradually attaining the conveniences of civilization, the newest addition, and one which was slow in making appearance. is a hearse. The Fernie Livery company, of which Messrs. Treleaven and Clark are proprietors, have had for some time under construction a fine up-to-date hearse, which is now assuming definite proportions. It will be some time yet before it is completed as the finishing and painting requires much time and care, and it is doubtful if it is used before the wheels are running again. The need of a hearse has long been felt in Fernie and all praise is due the promoters for supplying the town with the means for making our funerals more dignified and impressive.

Leg Fractured

Steve Popevziek a slav boy, nine years of age, was hurt last week while sleigh-riding behind a lumber sleigh. J. F. Jarvis' horse, attached to a sleigh, was standing tied to the post near his store. The horse became frightened at a dog hitched to a sleigh which ran in close under its heels. The horse kicked and finally breaking the chain which held it ran away. In turning the corner between the Victoria and the Coal Co. offices the sleigh swung around and struck two boys who were riding on a small sleigh attached to a lumber rig. One boy was thrown some distance and the other remained on the sleigh. The latter was injured and when removed to the hospital it was found that the bone of the leg had sustained a compound fracture. The lad is doing well and will rapidly recover.

To-day is St. Valentines day.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Clement left for their home rn Nelson yesterday. Mr. Clement has been engaged for some time surveying the 50,000 acres of Government Coal lands at Morrissey and the work was completed this week.

Harry Thomson, the young man who was recently released from the Westminister Asylum as cured of his mental disease was again taken in charge by the police this week. The unfortunate man shows signs of his old trouble.

Adjt. Andrews of Spokane will conduct special meeting in S. A. Barracks to-night, Sunday and Monday nights Subject Sunday night "The First Labor Strike," on Monday night lecture "Almost Wrecked," illustrated by stereoptican views. Admission 15 cents.

L. G. Henderson, representing the Henderson Directory of Vancouver, was in town on Thursday. He reports that the strike took him by surprise and that it practically made his trip useless from a financial standpoint. The directory is published in July.

The weather turned cold again about the middle of the week. On Thursday morning the mercury stood at 20 below zero and this morning it was only a few degrees short of that mark. The days are beautiful and bright and altogether we are having ideal winter weather.

POLICE COURT.

The case against C. O. Demaurez of keeping a gambling house was dismissed at the preliminary trial here.

John Ryan, of Michel, accused Russell Evans with stealing his watch. He claimed he was doped with a single glass of liquor in the Royal bar-room and that the accussed "rolled" him for his watch and some $2.50 he had in his pocket. He afterwards identified Evans on the street and had him arrested. A search warrant was issued and the watch was found in Evans possession. The evidence of the bar-tender of the Royal does not agree with Ryan's. He says the latter took five or six drinks, enough to make him drunk.

Dia Davis, the erstwhile pugilist, was caught in the act of walking off with a pail of oysters from Purdy's store by Constable Kummer. In the police court he pleaded guilty and claimed he was drunk at the time. He got 30 days.

FERNIE VS. MACLEOD.

The juniors again met with defeat at the hands of the Macleod juniors on their ice on Monday evening. The Fernie players were, goal, W. Todhunter; point, F. Perkins; cover point, E. Kirkpatrick; forwards, W. Lawrence, P. Elliott, W. Ross and A. Kanouse. The ice was in wretched condition owing to the dust blown over it by the heavy chinook wind. The game despite this drawback was very exciting and good combination work was done by the visitors. Lawrence scored in two minutes and no more goals were made in the first half. In the 2nd half after 7 minutes play Elliott added another game for the visitors and had the forwards not been too ambitious from this time they could easily have won out. Too much work was left for the defence and three goals in succession were scored by the home boys, giving the match to Macleod by 3 goals to 2. Lawrence and Elliott played an excellent combination game.

The game at Pincher Creek did not materialize though the team dropped off for the day expecting to play. It appears that one or two players were away from town and the remainder did not seem anxious to play. A snow storm was on at the time and as the rink is an open one this was made the pretext for calling the game off. The boys came back on Wednesday and reported that they had a good time at Macleod where they were treated to an excellent supper after the match.

ELIAS ROGERS' VIEW.

Toronto, Feb. 12—Elias Rogers, managing director of the Crow's Nest Pass coal company, referring to the strike declared yesterday at the coal mines, said it would be hard to find a better lot of men on the continent of America.

The demand of the men for an increase of 25 cents would be considered, but British Columbia smelters were strongly prejudiced against the present price of coke, and the coal company have already been losing money in supplying them. The company is anxious to work in harmony with its employees.

MORRISSEY

From Our Own Correspondent.

A new boiler has been put in this week making six in all now, also the air compressor was started, so when the hoists get put in the mines the output of coal will soon increase.

On Thursday evening the Trilby Club boys gave a card party. About 16 were present. Progressive whist was played. This club by its parties and dances does much towards improving the social conditions at the mines.

Morrissey is growing larger every month. The families are coming in rapidly and soon more dwellings will have to be built to accommodate new comers. This month is the largest pay roll on record for Morrissey.

We are pleased to see Charley Armstrong around again, who has been suffering from muscular rheumatism the past two weeks. Although he is on crutches, we hope under Dr. Willson's care he will soon be O. K.

W. H. Moore the barbe at the Mines has received the appointment of Postmaster of the new post-office to be opened at this point. Mr Moore is expecting the outfit this week. The office is a long felt want, as hitherto the mail has been nandled very carelessly.

On Friday evening last Mr. Martin was greatly surprised by a visit from 14 of the young people of Morrissey. As soon as he got over the "surprise" he set about in good style to make things comfortable. His usual good spirits soon made everyone at home. Progressive pedro was played. At 12:30 a very nice lunch was served and after a dinner a speech was given by Fritz. They left for home declaring it was the best time they had had in Morrissey.

There has been quite a number of visitors to see the new fans running at the mines. No. 4 fan is completed, while No. 1 is nearly so. Every one who see them admit they are the finest of that kind in the country. Very little gas can accumulate with such a system of ventilation.

LABOR ON RAND.

CHAMPIONS OF FREEDOM FOR KAFFIRS ARISE.

Sir William Harcourt and Sir William Grey make Eloquent Appeals—Compare Conditions of Blacks With That Under Regime of Kruger.

A cable from London says: The eloquent and powerful letter from Sir William Harcourt, published on Thursday, raises a question which must soon engage the serious attention of parliament.

Sir William protests in language which will command the assent of many who do not agree with him in politics, against the introduction of compulsory black labor into the Transvaal for the benefit of the mine owners. He points out that the government of the late South African republic, which was never accused of any tenderness for the native races, expressly refused the demand that Kaffirs should be forced to work in the mines. He quotes Lord Milner, who said that the administration had nothing whatever to do with the control of the labor market, and on the other hand, he cites the significant admission of Lionel Phillips, the leading magnate of the Rand, that he and his fellow-capitalists cannot afford to employ British miners at good wages.

It is to be remembered that one of the chief arguments by which the support of working classes was obtained for the war was the better position white labor would enjoy when the tyranny of President Kruger had been abolished.

There is, of course, no longer any danger that slavery as such will be recognized in any British colony. Mr. Chamberlain strongly condemned the introduction of Chinamen, which Mr. Phillips does not hesitate to suggest. That precious scheme has been definitely abandoned, but Mr. Chamberlain was much less clear on the subject of exercising practical compulsion uuon the Kaffir by taxing him beyond his means unless he worked in the mines.

This is slavery, call it what you will, and it is against this that Sir William Harcourt takes up his pen.

By curious and significant coincidence, Sir Edward Grey, addressing his constituents on Wednesday night, followed exactly the same views as Sir William. Sir Edward, who belongs to the opposite wing of the Liberal party, put the case with admirable clearness and precision. It was right, he said, that the Kaffirs should be taxed like other inhabitants of the colony, in return for the legal protection which they enjoyed. It would be altogether wrong to tax the Kaffirs at a special rate for the purpose of holding them to labor underground. That is a plain, broad distinction with a difference which no amount of sophistry can obscure. The Kaffir has as much right to live upon the produce of his own potato patch and enjoy the sunshine as Mr. Beit has to build himself a house in Park Lane. To tempt him into the mines by high wages is legitimate, though mine owners have no such designs. To drive him into them by high taxes is illegitimate and would be a departure from the policy adopted by every British government for the last seventy years.

A FICKLE MANITOBAN.

James Murray of High Bluff Elopes With a Girl Near Hamilton, Ont.

A dispatch from Hamilton, Ont., says: The home of Samuel Kieval, at Lynden, is desolate, and the residents of the little village are very much worked up—all because pretty Sophia Kieval, sweet 17, has run away with a married man and the father of several children. The man who has thus been false to his marriage vows and an offender against all that is good is James Murray, son of Robert Murray, long a resident of Lynden. His home is at High Bluff, Man., with a business establishment at Portage la Prairie. James Murray came to his old home a short while ago, and the elopement is the result.

What makes the affair more mysterious to the villagers is the fact that the two were not seen together prior to last Thursday night, when they bade Lynden a long farewell and fled, no one knows whither. Miss Kieval was employed by Mrs. Firman Clement, whose husband is Lynden's postmaster, and the evening she left with Murray she went home bade her people goodbye, and said she was going back to Mrs. Clement. Later she joined Wurray and the two drove to Dundas.

By the time they arrived in the valley town it was rather late, and they could not get into any of the hotels, until they reached John D. Harrigan's hostelry, where they registered as man and wife. Next morning they travelled on without the horse and buggy, but no one knows what direction they took. That day Henry Murray, the eloper's uncle, went to Dundas in search of the missing ones, but found only the horse and rig, which he took home.

Nothing having been heard of the two, Miss Kieval's father and mother came to the city and consulted the police. They were much troubled over their daughter's act.

James Murray is 36 years old, is 5 feet 6 in height, has blue eyes, light hair and rosy cheecks, and wears No. 5 boots.

The strike of the employees of the Montreal street railway is over and everyone has returned to work. The company agreed to recognize the union and pay the increase asked for.

HUGE TIDAL WAVE.

One Thousand Lives Lost in the South Sea Islands.

A dispatch from San Francisco, of Feb. 9, says: A huge tidal wave, accompanied by a terrific hurricane, attacked the Society islands and the Tuomotu group with fearful force, causing death and devastation never before equalled in a land of dreaded storms. The storm raged several days, reaching its maximum strength between January 14 and January 16. From the meagre news received at Tahiti up to the time of the sailing of the Mariposa, it is estimated that 1,000 of the islanders lost their lives. It is feared that later advices will increase this number.

The first news of the disaster reached Papeete, Tahiti, January 26, by the schooner Elmeo. The captain of the schooner placed the fatalities at 500. The steamer Excelsior arrived at Papeete the following day with 400 survivors. The captain of the Excelsior said the total loss of life will reach 600. These figures only comprised the deaths on three islands of Hac L'Hikuera and Makokai whose ordinary population is 1,600. On Hikuera island, where 1,000 inhabitants were engaged in pearl diving, nearly one-half were drowned. On an adjacent island 100 more were washed out to sea.

Makeno and Hao are depopulated. Conservative estimates at Tahiti place the number of islands visited by the tidal wave and hurricane at 80. All of them are under the control of the French government at Tahiti. The surviving inhabitants are left destitute of food, shelter and clothing, all having been swept away by the storm.

All the islands were barely 20 feet above sea level, and were not surrounded by coral reefs. It was necessary for all the inhabitants to take to the cocoanut trees when the tidal wave began to cover the land. These trees grow to an immense height, many reaching an altitude of 100 feet. All of the lower trees were covered by the raging seas, which swept with pitiless force about and over them. The natives on the taller trees were safe until the cocoanut roots gave way, and then they too were swept out into the sea. The four hundred survivors brought by the Excelsior to Papeete gained the ship's side by swimming three and four miles from the tops of the cocoanut trees.

A Disastrous Quarrel.

A Toronto dispatch says: Walter Romaine and Louis Goldsmith, partners in a tailoring business on Victoria street, had a quarrel on Friday in which Romaine made insulting remarks about Goldsmith's wife.

Goldsmith grabbed a pair of shears and started for Romaine, when the latter grabbed a revolver and fired three shots at Goldsmith, one entering his stomach, a second his forehead, and the third inflicting a trifling wound.

Romaine then escaped. He was caught by a policeman and brought back to the shop, when Goldsmith, wounded unto death, seized a lighted lamp and threw it at Romaine. The lamp exploded, setting fire to the store. The flames were extinguished without much damage.

Goldsmith was taken to the hospital, where his injuries were pronounced fatal.

Romaine and two women in the place were locked up.

Food Supply in Time of War.

London—The influential committee, headed by the Duke of Sutherland, Lord Strathcona, Lord Charles Beresford, and a number of other prominent men, which was formed Feb. 1, to agitate the question of the scarbasis for this opinion. The chief reain time of war, has issued a statement in which the opinion is expressed that in the event of Great Britain becoming involved in a European war, the country must be prepared to see bread practically at a famine price.

Various reasons are given as to the basis for this opinion. The chief reasons are that the great source of Britain's food supply is the United States, where the price of wheat can be raised artificially, and that corn trade on both sides of the Atlantic would expect to make profits on a scale commensurate with the war risks.

St. John, N.B., shipping trade is having an unprecedented boom.

The Sultan of Turkey has ordered the mobilization of 240,000 semi-barbarous troops in Macedonia.

James Smit, Winnipeg, was sent to the pentitentiary by the police magistrate for stealing curlers' overcoats.

Miners of Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and Western Pennsylvania have received an increase of pay aggregating 12½ per cent.

Earthquake shocks have been felt in Illinois, Missouri and across the Atlantic.

The former Crown Princess of Saxony has been admitted to a sanitarium for the treatment of mental and physical disorders.

An unknown man forced his way into the telegraph tower at Walton station on the Pittsburg, Virginia & Charleston railroad early in the morning of Feb. 10 and assailed Mrs. Wilson, the operator. She shot her assailant. This so enraged him that he beat her almost into insensibility and then tried to burn her to death by forcing her head into the stove. A freight train approached at the moment, and the would-be murderer fled.

Tombstones are poor proofs of good character.

CATTLE EMBARGO.

ONE OF VISITING CURLERS TALKS.

Large Section of British Public Resents Discrimination Against Canada—Our Cattle Never Suffered From the Disease as Contended.

Among the members of the visiting Scottish curling teams, at present attending the big Winnipeg bonspiel, is one whose visit to Canada is not solely one of pleasure. William Henderson, of Lawton, Coupar Angus, a member of the county council of Perthshire, has, while in Canada, been endeavoring to secure the cooperation of the Canadian people in an attempt to have the embargo now in force against Canadian cattle entering Great Britain abolished.

Mr. Henderson is the accredited delegate to Canada of the Canadian Cattle Importation association, an organization taking in the whole cooperative movement in Great Britain with over 8,000,000 consumers interested, including the Butchers' association of London, with its affiliated associations throughout England. He is an acknowledged authority on every phase of the cattle trade of Great Britain, and is thoroughly posted on the subject of the embargo.

Interviewed on this question of embargo against Canadian cattle, Mr. Henderson denounced the action of the imperial parliament as a piece of most unnecessary legislation and considered that the continuance of the embargo was an exceedingly poor manner of showing gratitude for the loyal spirit shown by Canada in the South African war.

"The time is at hand when the embargo now in force against Canadian cattle entering Great Britain must be abolished and the imperial government realize that this legislation has struck a cruel blow at the best interests of Great Britain and Canada. The demand for the abolition of the embargo is backed up by 8,000,000 consumers throughout the British Isles, and when the matter shall have been properly presented to the British House of Commons, no government, Liberal or Conservative, will have the hardihood to withstand the demand."

Mr. Henderson, however, was most emphatic in stating that the embargo will never be lifted through and representation made to the department of the Rt. Hon. R. W. Hanbury, president of the British board of agriculture, who has handled the subject in a very narrow and incapable manner. This minister, Mr. Henderson said, has unfailingly taken the side of the breeders, who naturally desire the maintenance of the embargo, and who form a ridiculously small proportion of those in Great Britain interested in the subject. The present regulations simply spell 'protection' for those breeders. Before the passing of the act nearly all ports of Great Britain were open to Canadian cattle, but now there were only four or five ports at which cattle could be entered, and the existing regulations provide that such cattle shall be killed within ten days of landing. The result has been that while the demand is exceedingly heavy only those dealers in the immediate vicinity of those few ports are able to buy the imported cattle, while the butchers and other dealers throughout the balance of Great Britain are forced to pay fancy prices to the Irish breeders of Great Britain, who, by reason of the present act, are reaping enormous profits, to the loss, however, of the British consumers.

Mr. Henderson has had great experience in handling Canadian cattle, and pays a splendid tribute to cattle raised in Canada for the British market when he says: "During the years of experience we had in feeding Canadian cattle we found them the healthiest, the best thriving, and the best paying, beyond comparison, of any cattle we ever handled." That this is the experience of all those who have handled Canadian cattle is shown by the fact that at a conference of the representatives of agriculturists, consumers, co-operative societies, commercial and shipping industries, and municipal and local authorities, held in London on October 23, 1902, at the Westminister Palace hotel, the following resolution was unanimously adopted: "That this conference of representatives of agriculturists, consumers, co-operative societies, commercial and shipping interests, and municipal, harbor and local authorities, is unanimously of opinion that the Diseases of Animals Act should be so amended as to admit of the entry into this country of cattle from Canada without the animals being subjected to slaughter at the port of landing, and all necessary steps be taken to promote and attain that object."

A dispatch from Bay City, Mich., says: It is feared that forty fishermen went to their death in the storm which struck Saginaw Bay on Tuesday night. The men were living in shanties built on the ice. The storm burst without warning. It was accompanied by a blinding swirl of snow, and the waves crushed the ice upon which the fishermen's huts were standing into a grinding, crunching mass. Nothing has been seen of men or shanties since.

A man who's in debt doesn't have to worry as much as the man who wants to be and can't.

President Nicholls, of the Ocean and Lake Transportation company, says that three more vessels are being built in England to carry wheat on the Great Lakes. He says the lake fleet will be developed so that it will be adequate to handle the western traffic.

The sardine failure in Brittany has not only caused distress among the fishermen, but has also had a curious effect in another direction. The toymakers of Paris made use of old sardine tins to manufacture toys, as the metal used in the boxes is very pliant and suitable for the purpose. Now that the sardines have failed to appear on the Breton coasts, there is likely to be a lack of toys next winter season, as the makers are not able to afford the use of new metal.

The latest piece of clockwork ingenuity comes from Geneva. In that home of horological marvels a clock with a phonograph attached to it has just been constructed. The clock acts as a mechanical mentor. If a man has to keep a business appointment at 12 o'clock tomorrow he tells his phonograph clock all about it, and sets the alarm indicator at half-past eleven. At that time on the morrow the clock will speak its message of reminder, giving him half an hour in which to get ready.

The Hill of Tara, rich in historic memories, will shortly be sold at auction in Dublin. Until the sixth centurt Tara was the chief seat of the Irish kings, and a pillar of six feet high is still pointed out as the coronation stone. Then it also was a university, the Druid's headquarters, and the site of King Cormack's splendid court. The latest important gathering on the Hill of Tara was in 1843, when a gigantic meeting was held there, under the auspices of Daniel O'Connell, who urged the repeal of the union.

ANALYSIS OF CEREAL FOODS

Rolled Oats is Pronounced the Best All Round Material for Porridge.

The Dominion analyst in a bulletin on cereal breakfast foods concludes as follows: "There is, however another point of view from which these foods may be regarded, viz., their wealth in proteid matter. In this respect peameal excels them all. There is, however, good reason to believe that the proteids of the pea and bean and of vegetables in general are less easily digested by man than are the proteids of the cereal grains proper. Among these oatmeal takes the first rank, but several of the prepared foods stand very well in this regard. If we take into account the mineral matter (ash) which is no less necessary to complete nutrition, we find marked differences among these foods. If one were to live entirely, or principally upon these foods, it would be necessary to take account of this. Finally, on account of its very high energy, we may lay stress upon the contents of fat, and here also oatmeal stands in the first place.

"On the whole, I am of opinion that as a well balanced material for porridge, these analytical results justify me in claiming a very high, if not the highest place for oatmeal, and especially in the form of rolled oats."

There are in Ireland 22 landlords owning over 50,000 acres, while there are in Scotland 47. One of the broadest acred of the Scottish landlords is the Prime Minister, who owns just 90,000 acres, with a rent roll of some $100,000. The laird of lairds is, of course, the Duke of Sutherland, who possesses over a million acres, which bring him in some $350,000 per annum.

AXPHYXIATED.

August Felz and Gus Oleson Lose Their Lives in Kootenay Mine.

August Felz and Gus Oleson were asphyxiated at the Kootenay mines on Feb. 4. The men went into a winz that commences at the sixth level of the mine and is two hundred feet deep with drifts to the east and west at the foot. Gas was present and the men desired to ascend. They became partially overcome and in their struggles slipped the bucket off the skids. Thereupon the bucket jammed and the men died before assistance could reach them. Both were married and Oleson leaves three children.

The men employed in the mine made heroic attempts to rescue their comrades, but the deadly gas forced the rescuers back and there were several miraculous escapes among the party. A. G. Larsen, general superintendent; John Henniger, foreman; Dr. Walter C. Coulthard, who was called in, and six or eight others were prostrated by the deadly fumes arising from the collar of the winz, but were taken to the portal and revived without serious effects. The men were suffocated at 8.30 in the morning and their bodies showed evidences of rigor mortis when removed at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Birth Rate in Ontario.

A dispatch from Toronto says—The report of the registrar-general of the province, Dr. Bryce, contains some interesting information in connection with the vital statistics of Ontario for the year 1901-2. There was again a decline in the birthrate, which, it is pointed out, is becoming a serious matter.

In 1901 the births totalled 46,061, as compared with 46,126 in the preceding year, and commenting on this, Dr. Bryce says: "It appears, apart from influences, whether social or moral, which may affect birth rates, that old agricultural communities will have low birth rates, which are even accentuated in the old villages and small towns, which are not increasing, though they may do so with the introduction of factories, and hence it may be to the growth of virgin lands in new Ontario and the development of manufacturing industries in the cities and towns that we must look for an increase in population. He says the French population is keeping up the birthrate.

Arranging for a New State.

Several members of the legislatures of Montana and North Dakota have just held a conference at Glendive, Montana, to arrange for the segregation of Eastern Montana and Western North Dakota from their present states and the creation of a new state, to be known as Montagu, extending from the Belt mountains in Montana to the Missouri river in North Dakota, comprising strictly a stock-growing section, 1,800 square miles in area. Glendive, being the centre of population and the geographical centre, is to be chosen the capital. It is said the North Dakota representatives are disgusted with the existing conditions in the eastern portion of their state, and the people of eastern Montana with the corruptions of the western part. Hence both wish for a change.

Redmond Released from Jail.

A cable from Dublin says: William Redmond, who was sentenced last year to six months imprisonment because he refused to give bail in £1,000 for his future good behavior as the result of an alleged incendiary speech at Wexford, and who was arrested at Kingstown and taken to Kilmainham jail November 4, was released on Feb. 3, although he had only served half his term. In an interview Redmond said:

"I do not know why I am released, but I certainly do not thank the government who have kept me in jail for three months for really nothing."

Mr. Redmond added that he stood by every word of the speech, for the making of which he was imprisoned, and said there will be no real peace in Ireland until Dublin Castle shall have been cleared out from top to bottom.

Christian science methods and the law relating to them were reviewed by the court of appeal in Toronto, Feb. 4, in the case of James H. Lewis, found guilty by jury a year ago of manslaughter in causing the death of his son Roy, aged six. The charge was for violating a section of the code which the crown says compels parents to provide "necessaries" for their children under sixteen years of age, and the question argued was whether necessaries included medical attendance. Judgment was reserved.

A dispatch from St. Catharines, Ont., says: Because pretty Laura Christine Gordon, an opera singer of New York city, was kissed during the performance of Priscilli at a local playhouse by Mr. Lloyd Richardson, the leading man, there was a lively row behind the stage after the last curtain came down. It was an amateur performance only, and Miss Gordon came from New York to her old home to help the thing out. The parents of the young ladies only let them appear on the promise that the "kissing business would be cut out." The matter was smoothed over, however, and the performance was a great success.

Cool Younger, who was paroled from Stillwater, Minnesota, penitentiary, two years ago, with his brother Jim, will be given a conditional pardon by the state pardon board, which will admit of the ex-bandit returning to his former home in Missouri.

INDIAN SUMMER CAROL.

By Agnes Maule Machar.

"All day the dreaming sunshine steeps
In gold the yellowing beeches;
In softest blue the river sleeps
Among the island reaches.

"Against the distant purple hills
The autumn tints are glowing;
With blood-red wine the sumach fills,
Rich lines of carmine showing.

"Upon the glassy stream the boat
Glides softly like a vision;
And, with its shadow, seems to float
Among the isles Elysian.

"About the plumy golden-rod
The tireless bees are humming;
The aster's clusters star the sod
And wait the rover's coming.

"The birch and maple glow with dyes
Of scarlet, rose and amber;
And like a flame from sunset skies,
Bright tangled creepers clamber.

"The oak in Tyrian purple dight
Burn, where the sunlight presses;
The birch stands like a dryad bright
Beneath her golden tresses.

"So still the air, so like a dream,
We hear the acorn falling;
And o'er the scarcely rippled stream
The loon's long quavering calling.

"The robin softly o'er the lea
His farewell song is trilling;
The squirrel flits from tree to tree,
His winter storehouse filling.

"Like him we, too, may gather store
From all this glorious nature,
Then leave, my friend, dry bookish lore
And dreary nomenclature.

* * * *

"Leave the old thinkers to the dreams
That have been dreamed for ages;
Leave dry old scientific reams,
And study Nature's pages.

* * * *

"Haste to the woods, throw books away;
They'll wait the tardy comer;
For 'them' there's many awinter day,
But brief's our Indian summer."

Sketch of Miss Machar.

Miss Machar is the daughter of the late Rev. Mr. Machar, the second Principal of Queen's University, and is a resident of Kingston, Ont. Her writings have long been familiar to Canadian readers over the pen-name of "Fidelis." She is active, also, in philanthropic and reform circles. The above lines are quoted from a volume of her verse published in 1899 under the title of "Lays of the True North"—a phrase taken from Tennyson. They are a fair specimen of the substance, manner and spirit of her work, which, though always earnest and sincere, is not of a high poetic order. I quote them for the instruction of young readers as illustrative of a large body of writing produced in Canada, and constantly appearing in the daily press, which is only distinguished from average prose by its quality of rhyme—not rhythm, mark you, the former being a non-essential of poetry, the latter as much a part of its form as our muscular system is of our bodies.—Pharos, in The Globe.

Tragedy of a Northern Winter.

Signs, unnoted by the denizens of the city, serve to guide the trappers over trackless wates of illimitable snow. A whitish haze of frost may hide the sun, or continuous snowfall blur every landmark. What heeds the trapper? The slope of the rolling hills, the lie of the frozen river beds, the branches of underbrush protruding through billowed drifts— are hands that point the trapper's compass.

One imminent danger is of accident beyond aid. A young Indian hunter of Moose Factory set out with his wife and two children for the winter hunting grounds in the forest south of James Bay. When chopping the hunter injured his leg. The wound proved stubborn. Wrapping her husband in robes on the long toboggan sleigh, the squaw placed the younger child beside him, and with the other began tramping through the forest, drawing the sleigh behind. The drifts were not deep enough for swift snowshoeing over the underbrush, and their going was not half so speedy as the hunger that pursues northern hunters like the Fenris Wolf of Norse myth. The woman sank exhausted on the show, and the older boy, nerved with fear, pushed on to Moose Factory for help. Guided by the boy back through the forests, the fort people found the hunter dead in the sleigh, the mother crouched forward unconscious from cold, stripped of her clothing, which was wrapped round the child she had taken in her arms to warm with her own body. The child was alive and well. The fur traders nursed the woman back to life, though she looked more like a withered creature of eighty than a woman barely in her twenties. She explained with a simple unconsciousness of heroism that the ground had been too hard for her to bury her husband, and she was afraid to leave the body and go on to the fort lest the wolves should molest the dead.

They Need the Truth.

Millions have been spent in colleges and millions in libraries, and the money has been well spent. Sure as you live, the time is at hand when farseeing men will come forward prepared to spend millions in placing the truth, so far as it can be ascertained, before the people of these United States—the truth about politics, the truth about finance, the truth about art, the truth about business—a true statement of news of the world, not to bolster up a cause, not to make a fortune, not to push a party, but the truth for its own sake because the cause of humanity, which is the cause of democracy, can live by nothing else than the truth.—Rev. W. S. Rainsford of New York, formerly of Toronto.

To give some idea of the increase of electric transportation in cities, it may be mentioned that New York has 1,328 fewer stables, and 8,660 fewer horses than in 1896; and that the Paris omnibus companies got rid of 2,000 horses last year.

Dear Sirs,—I was for seven years a sufferer from Bronchial trouble, and would be so hoarse at times that I could scarcely speak above a whisper. I got no relief from anything till I tried your MINARD'S HONEY BALSAM. Two bottles gave relief and six bottles made a complete cure. I would heartily recommend it to anyone suffering from throat or lung trouble.

These significant words were used in relation to Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, by a gentleman who had thoroughly tested its merits in his own case—having been cured by it of lameness of the knee, of three or four years' standing. It never fails to remove soreness as well as lameness, and is an incomparable pulmonic and corrective.

GOOD BLOOD.

In the Secret of Health, Vigor and Happiness.

Good blood—rich, red blood—is the greatest enemy that disease can have. It stimulates every organ to throw off any ailment that may attack it. Good blood is the only positive cure for such complaints as anaemia, nervousness, neuralgia, skin eruptions, indigestion, rheumatism, etc., because these diseases cannot exist where the blood is good. The secret of good blood—rich, red life-giving blood—is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Where these pills are used it means life, health and vigor. Mr. Robert Lee, a well known resident of New Westminster, B. C., says:—"Before I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills my blood was in a very impure condition, and as a result, itchy pimples was smooth and clear. The pills are appetite was fickle, and I was easily tired. I tried several medicines, but they did not help me. Then my wife urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I got half a dozen boxes, and by the time I had used them. I was fully restored to health, and my skin was smooth and clear. The pills are the best medicine I know of for purifying the blood." Sold by all medicine dealers or sent post paid at 50c per box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Do not take a substitute, or something said to be "just as good." The "just as good" medicines never cured anyone.

IF BABY COULD TALK.

"I am sure if baby could only talk," says Mrs. B. Gaffney, L'Amable, Ont., "she would praise Baby's Own Tablets too. They have given better results than any other medicine I have ever used for my little one." This is the verdict of all mothers who have used Baby's Own Tablets, and it is the very best proof that no other medicine can equal them for the speedy relief and cure of the common ailments of little ones. These Tablets cure colic, constipation, sour stomach, diarrhoea and simple fevers; they break up colds, prevent croup, and allay the irritation accompanying the cutting of teeth, and are positively guaranteed to contain no opiate. All children take them readily, and for very young infants they can be crushed to a powder. You can get Baby's Own Tablets from any druggist at 25c a box, or they will be mailed, postage paid, by writing direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N.Y. Send for our book on the care of infants and young children. Every mother should have it.

MARKETS.

(Compiled from The Commercial)

WHEAT—The past week has been rather quiet in the wheat trade. The feeling, however, has been firm, and although the volume of trade in the speculative markets has been comparatively light, prices in these markets show a gain of 1¼ to 1½c over closing prices of a week ago. France has required to import but little wheat since the season of 1897-8, when, owing to the serious winter damage to the crop of 1897 the Frenchmen required to import 80,000,000 bushels. Should they this year have to buy in even 25,000,000 it would have a very bullish influence on the general situation. At the present time, although the duty on wheat imported into France is 37c per bushel, prices there are on an import level. In connection with this we quote the Liverpool Corn trade News of January 20: "The severe weather of the past week, which was general over western Europe was probably harmful to the winter sown crops in certain localities where they are not protected by a snow covering, but several weeks will have to elapse before any definite knowledge on the subject will be obtainable."

Manitoba wheat has been very quiet during the week. A very large amount of wheat changed hands for immediate delivery, also for February and May delivery during the week previous to last when the markets were advancing. Since they broke and prices declined, sellers having shifted their loads to other shoulders, have withheld from selling freely at the lower prices, and the buyers being well loaded up have not been anxious to take more in the meantime, and the consequence has been very small trading during the past ten days. At the close of this week the feeling among dealers is firm, but there is no attempt to push business. On the week prices have advanced 1c to 1¼c., and at the close of business Saturday quotations were: 1 hard, 74½c; 1 northern, 72½; 2 northern, 71¼c; 3 northern, 69¾c, spot, or February delivery, and for May delivery, 1 hard, 77¼c; 1 northern, 75½c; 2 northern, 74c; 3 northern, 71¾c; all in store Fort William, Port Arthur, or Duluth.

Liverpool—No. 1 northern spring closed on Saturday at 6s. 9¾d.

FLOUR—Best Hungarian Patent, $2.10 per sack of 98 pounds delivered to the trade; Glenora Patent, $1.95; strong bakers, $1.65; and XXXX, $1.35.

MILLFEED—Bran is quoted at $14.50 per ton in sacks, and shorts at $16.50 per ton.

OATS—The price of oats has again gone up and the market is firm at 1c advance. Receipts are very light, and not at all equal to the requirements. There are, as everyone knows plenty of oats in the country, but they cannot become a factor in the market without shipping facilities, and apparently these are not to be had. Cars for loading at country points are very scarce. No. 2 white oats are worth 29c per bushel at Fort William. On track, Winnipeg, this grade is worth 28 to 28½c per bushel, and about 27c is the price for feed white. In the country farmers are getting 19 to 20c per bushel at central points.

BARLEY—Brewers quote 34c for malting in carlots on track. Feed barley is worth 25 to 26c.

FLAXSEED—Market nominal.

SPELTZ—The market holds steady at 30c per bushel of 50 pounds, delivered in Winnipeg.

HAY—Dealers are paying $5.50 to $6.50 per ton for carlots on track.

POTATOES—35c per bushel.

BUTTER — Creamery—City makers have reduced their price 2c per pound and are now quoting 24c for choice, fresh made in one-pound bricks, delivered.

BUTTER—Dairy—Receipts are moderate and mostly of inferior quality. Dealers are paying 21c net for dairy, separator in bricks, delivered at Winnipeg, and 14 to 17 net for tub butter.

CHEESE—The market is quiet. Orders are being filled with Ontario stock. Jobbers are selling to the retail trade at 13½c per pound.

EGGS—Eggs are scarce at 22c per dozen, net, delivered in Winnipeg, subject to candling.

DRESSED POULTRY—Dealers are offering in a wholesale way 10c per pound for chickens, dressed; 9½c to 10c for ducks and geese, and 15c for turkeys.

DRESSED MEATS — Beef, city dressed, 6 to 7½c per pound; country stock, ½c under these figures; mutton, 8 to 9c; lamb, 11½c; hogs, 7c.

HIDES—Country frozen hides are bringing from 5½ to 6c per pound, delivered at Winnipeg, less 5 pounds tare; sheep pelts, 30 to 50c.

WOOL—Market nominal.

TALLOW—No. 1 tallow is worth 5½c per pound delivered here, and No. 2, 4½c.

SENECA ROOT—Market nominal.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—There are very few cattle offering, and it is believed that among the farmers of Manitoba they are scarce. Buyers are now out for stockers, and are taking all they can get at good prices. Finest steers are worth 4c; butchers' ordinary 3½c, and from that figure down to 2½c, according to quality. Stockers, yearlings, $14 to $17; two year olds, $18 to $22 each.

SHEEP—Worth 3½c per pound off cars here. Lambs, 4¼ to 4½c.

HOGS—Packers are still paying 6c per pound for best weights of hogs delivered. Heavy and light weights are ½c lower than choice.

MILCH COWS—Prices are firm at $30 to $45 each, according to quality.

SAVED FROM THE GRAVE

What T. C. Marsh Says Dodd's Kidney Pills Did for Him.

Story of a Nova Scotia Man who had Almost Given Up Hope of Ever being Well Again.

Central Economy, N. S., Feb. 9.—(Special)—"I feel as if Dodd's Kidney Pills had saved me from the grave," is the way T. C. Marsh, of this place, talks of those wonderful exterminators of the pains and aches arising from Diseased Kidneys. And Mr. Marsh should know whereof he speaks. He was under the doctor's care for kidney complaint for some time, and, despite their efforts, continued to grow worse. He was almost in despair when a friend advised him to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. In such a severe case the progress towards recovery was naturally slow, but he persevered, and now he feels justified in using the strong words quoted above. Mr. Marsh thus describes his case:

"I was under the doctor's care, but didn't seem to get any better, only worse. I was advised by a friend to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. After I had used them for a time I began to feel a difference, and I never stopped until I had taken 22 boxes. I suppose I still have to use something as long as I live, but I feel as if Dodd's Kidney Pills had saved me from the grave.

"I have recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to everyone because of what they have done for me."

A WONDERFUL RECORD.

Many so-called "specifics" and "cures" for Rheumatism have already been brought before the public; but when rheumatism, Neuralgia, and kindred diseases have become chronic and threaten serious results, you may rest assured that they will help but very little, if any. Although not recommended as "infallible," the peculiar qualities of St. Jacobs Oil especially adapt it to those cases which may be termed "chronic," and which have previously withstood all known "specifics," as well as the prescriptions of the best physicians.

We would mention, as an example, the case of Mr. A. Heilmann, of Pittsburgh, who suffered with Rheumatism for four years, after vainly using all the best recommended remedies, and exhausting the skill of the most experienced physicians without even temporary relief, it required only two bottles of St. Jacobs Oil to effect a permanent cure. Mr. C. Hanni, a well known citizen of Youngstown, Ohio, secured for his wife, who for twelve years had been a constant sufferer from Neuralgia in the head, the services of the ablest physicians of the land, but they were unable to do anything for her; half a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil cured her. Mr. Wm. Reinhart, Elmore, Wis., reports the case of a neighbor who for twenty-four years had suffered so terribly with Rheumatism that, at times, he could hardly move; a few bottles of St. Jacobs Oil cured him. "To cap the climax," however, Mr A. Neiger, of Taylorville, Pa., writes that his mother, who had been a continual sufferer with Rheumatism for the past thirty years, used one bottle of St. Jacobs Oil and was immediately relieved of all pain. These are results which truly deserve to be brought to public notice; but they are not exceptions, as will be seen by the numerous other certificates from all parts of the United States. It should be the duty of everyone to call the attention of his suffering friends and neighbors to this wonderfully efficacious preparation, especially as the low price of 25 and 50 cents per bottle places it within reach of all persons, rich and poor.

FREE ALKALI.

There are few women in Canada who have not heard of "free alkali," but there are many who do not understand the term. The term is always used in connection with soap. If any think it is meant to convey that it is alkali given free with the soap, then alkali is very dear at the price. But it does not mean that. A soap containing free alkali is a soap in which the alkali is not properly incorporated with the fatty acids used in the making of soap, and such a soap is most injurious to the clothing and hands. Free alkali in soap will burn the nap off wool and the surface off linen, coarsen the skin of the hands, rendering them liable to eczema, make the nails brittle and chip off. Such a soap does not possess thorough cleansing properties. The difference between a soap containing free alkali and a neutral soap is easily tested. Sunlight Soap is a neutral soap, and no one who has once used Sunlight Soap for any time could with satisfaction go back to any of the common laundry soaps on the market. Complaints about the hands and the clothes are unknown where Sunlight Soap is used.

SLEEPLESSNESS is due to nervous excitement. The delicately constituted, the financier, the business man, and those whose occupation necessitates great mental strain or worry, all suffer less or more from it. Sleep is the great restorer of a worried brain, and to get sleep cleanse the stomach from all impurities with a few doses of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, gelatine coated, containing no mercury, and are guaranteed to give satisfaction or the money will be refunded.

There never was and never will be a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in sound, unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grevious ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease and by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses through the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result, improved appetite. Northrup & Lyman, of Toronto, have given to the public their Superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, guaged by the opinions of scientists, this wine approaches nearest perfection of any on the market. All druggists sell it.

VICTORY FOR FERNIE.

PINCHER CREEK DEFEATED AT HOCKEY IN AN EXCITING GAME.

The Locals get Down to Business at the Wrong End of the Season.—Juniors Defeated at Macleod.

Fifteen Pincher Creek Hockey enthusiasts, fnll of hope and confidence landed from the noon train on Monday to again try conclusions with their old rivals. The visitors attached great importance to this game as by winning it it gave them an even chance with Medicine Hat for the trophies, and they brought with them their strongest possible team, their lustiest rooters and a big pile of money which they confidently offered at 2 to 1.

The crowd which gathered at 2:30 in the afternoon to see the last league game of the season was not large but judging from the amount of enthusiasm and accompanying noise one might have thought it was a crowded house. And the cause was apparent, for never did they have more reason to feel proud of their hockey heroes, who played with the old time science and swiftness which landed them at the head of the league last season. Every man on the team played his best game of the season on Monday and it is safe to say that no team on the Crow could stand up against it.

The teams were Referee, Mr. Sharp, of Frank.

From the start it was evident that each man on the ice was doing his best which fact made the game a most exciting one to watch. During the first 12 minutes the play was fast and no score was made, then Boyes got the puck at close range and safely landed it. Kastner with one of his fatal shots from cover evened the score in 7 minates. Several minutes later Sturdy and Fair took the puck down the ice with a brilliant dash and the former scored, 2-1 for Fernie.

The first 15 minutes of second half was a trying time for both teams. The visitors made heroic efforts to even the score while the home team played a careful defence and broke through whenever an opportunity offered. Lafortune in one of the latter finally added another goal for the locals, who now assumed a more aggressive stand and their swiftness and beautiful combination work became a puzzle for the slower team from the prairie. The visitors also played well ou', still hoping to turn defeat into victory. Kenny and Sturdy again broke away with the puck and the former made the winning shot. Pincher Creek rallied for a few moments and Gunn made a phenominal rush and scored, Ziegler failing to check him owing to a fall. Still the fight waged hot neither side seeming to tire. Fair scored again in 3 minutes and shortly after, while the later was on the fence, Grant scored the third and last goal for the visitors.

Toward the last the superior skate work of the locals began to tell and while the defence proved impregnable the forwards made many swift irrisistable rushes down on their opponent's net. Three more goals were added to the safe lead already held by Fernie making the final score 8-3, of these three goals the first was shot by Sturdy in a skirmish and the other two were cleverly landed by Fair.

The work of the referee was scarcely satisfactory. Fair was put on the fence three times and Kenny once. Boyes was continually loafing off-side and the other two forwards did not always exert themselves to keep behind the puck, but not one of the visitors were punished.

Moore played the star game for the visitors, Grant and Gun also worked hard Every man on the local team played a star game.

McKellar made many pretty stops.

Ziegler's heavy checking broke up many a determined rush.

Of Kastner it is only necessary to say that he played his usual game.

LaFortune was one of the most active men on the ice. He makes an ideal rover.

Fair was a whirlwind. He is only just getting into his regular form now.

Kenny played a hard and fast game.

Sturdy understands the rush and no one in the league can match him at drawing-off.

Manager Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada,
Vancouver, B.C.

DEAR SIR,

I am to-day in receipt of your favor of the 21st of October, 1902, enclosing cheque from your Company amounting to $2000.00, in settlement of claim under Policy No. 201203 on the life of my late son, Samuel Hand, who met his death in the Fernie Mines by an explosion, on the 22nd of May, 1902. Your general agent for the Kootenay, Mr. A. B. Docksteader, in the spring of the year induced my son to take out this insurance for my benefit. He paid but one premium of $71.20 on same, and, as above stated, I am to-day in receipt of the Company's cheque in settlement of this claim in full, without any deduction whatever for expenses in settlement of the claim or otherwise. This is particularly worthy of note, owing to the great distance of my residence from British Columbia, and the fact that Mr. Docksteader, to obtain the policy and have the necessary claim papers filled out, was obliged to take a special trip of some two hundred miles to Fernie to secure the necessary particulars, etc., which I understand was entirely disbursed by himself, and certainly has not been charged to me. Therefore I feel it my duty to express my gratitude to Mr. Docksteader for his kindness in sacrificing so much for me in settlement of this claim. Your kindness to me is also praiseworthy and I feel under an obligation in gratitude to you for the courteous and kindly manner you have conversed with me (by letter) to thank you for so promptly settling this claim. I shall therefore speak very highly of you and your Company whenever I can do so.

I have pleasure in attesting to these facts for the benefit of my son's fellow-workers, and I trust it may be of some advantage to the Company and their representatives.

I am, yours sincerely,
(Signed) THOMAS HAND,
On behalf of Hannah Hand.

ARE THE C.N.P. MINERS WELL PAID?

The Sworn Statement of General Manager Tonkin as to the Wages Earned by the Coal Company Employees During The Past Five Months.

IS THERE PROSPECT OF AN EARLY SETTLEMENT?

The Board of Trade Takes Action. G. F. Dougherty, the President of District No. 6 Western Federation of Miners, Investigating the Trouble. Deputy Minister of Labor Will Look into the Affair.

The strike is still on tho Dame Rumor has been busy during the week spreading reports to the effect that a settlement was in sight. These rumors have pierced to outside points and messages have flashed in from these places asking for confirmation of these reports. While at the time of writing it is impossible to truthfully confirm them it is safe to say that an early settlement of the strike is quite within the range of probability.

The idle men are conducting themselves in a most exemplary manner as they have always done in previous labor troubles. The streets wear a more animated appearance than usual and everyone appears to be on the qui vive for new developments. The company stores are doing regular business on a cash basis, being closed down for only one day.

The company officials have not been idle during the past ten days. With much labor several of them have taken the books of the three camps and reckoned out the average of each man during the past past five months. These results in order to save space are not published individually but are boiled down into a more convenient form and General Manager Tonkin has taken an affidavit as to their accuracy. The books from which these statistics have been taken are open to inspection by the men concerned where with little trouble each individual miner can verify his own statements. The figures supplied by Mr. Tonkin are as follows:

NOTE: During the month of November, December and January, the Morrissey mines were operated under a schedule of wages proposed by the Coal Company. During these months, and while the schedule was under advisement it was current information that the local union had instructed the men not to over-exert themselves; that is, to hold themselves down to a certain amount of work daily until the schedule was finally approved.

The schedule as approved, with several minor amendments, was finally approved of by a committee of eight men from the several mines, who met with General Manager Tonkin and General Superintendent Stockett at Morrissey in January, The schedule was then printed and posted at the mines.

DOMINION OF CANADA, PROVINCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA, TO WIT:

In the Matter of statements of earnings of miners employed in the Coal Creek, Michel and Morrissey mines of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company, Limited.

We, John H. Tonkin, General Manager, and Thomas R. Stockett, Jr., General Superintendent, of the above named company, both of the town of Fernie, do solemnly declare 1. That the statement hereunto annexed and marked respectively as exhibits "A", "B" and "C" and to which we have subscrideb our names, are true and correct statements of the facts therein set out and for the months therein mentioned. 2. That the said statements are prepared for the earnings of the miners employed by the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company, Limited, at its mines at Coal Creek, Michel and Morrissey in the district of East Kootenay in the Province of British Columbia.

And we, severally make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing it to be true, and knowing that it is of the same force and effect as if made under oath and by virtue of the "Canada Evidence Act, 1893."

Declared before me at the town of Fernie in the Province of British Columbia, this 21st day of Feb., A.D., 1903, severally by the said John H. Tonkin and Thos. R. Stockett, jr.

JOHN H. TONKIN
THOS. R. STOCKETT, JR

MR. TONKIN INTERVIEWED.

A representative of the FREE PRESS had an interview this morning with General Manager Tonkin, who, when asked about the different points mentioned by the Press Committee in our last issue, made the following statement.

The statement attributed to him that 18 per cent. of the total employees were union men, was not correct; it should read that only 18 per cent. of his employees had voted for a strike and the figures giving the vote from each camp have never been denied. No notice of a strike had yet been served on the Company by the men, which is a most unconstitutional proceeding on the part of any organized body. The eight hour law was generally recognized in other mines, he did not ask for 8½ work and it couldn't possibly be construed in that manner. The understanding between himself and the committee, naming the men who helped to formulate the ageeement, was that a majority of the men employed must vote for the old system in order to re-introduce it. The statement was incorrect that he was present at the vote. The contract men were not affected by the 8½ hour regulation and probably not more than 10 per cent. of his employees were directly interested in it.

A reduction of 15 and 20 per cent. had not been made at Coal Creek. Five cents a ton was taken off when the new closed lights were introduced and this affected only one mine.

The timber question was settled as soon as the landing room could be prepared and the men are having no more trouble with lack of timber. No miners were dismissed on this account, but because it was known that the four men in question were trying to incite a strike.

Mr. Tonkin stated that he had never refused to meet a committee from any one mine, or from any local union. He was at all times willing to discuss their grievances with them in this manner, and more than once he and Mr. Stockett had gone to Morrissey to meet a committee rather than put the men to the expense of coming to Fernie. If after meeting such committee from the local union it was impossible to come to a satisfactory understanding he was always willing to have them refer their grievances to a higher tribunal, the District union of the Western Federation of Miners, but he did not think it wae necessary to involve the latter body until the local unions had presented their grievances, and in the present case they had not done so.

He regretted that the miners had brought into the discussion the burial of the unfortunate Morrissey miner, as he was opposed to making capital out of public sympathy under such circumstances. The whole affair was misrepresented. A committee consisting of J. Galvin, J. Bulko and two others waited on him on the evening preceding the funeral and in a friendly interview he promised to pay for the casket, which he afterwards did. Mr. Galvin had said that it would be necessary for some of the miners from Coal Creek to attend the funeral and he had remarked that he did not see why the funeral of a Morrissey man should close down Coal Creek mines. The next morning Mr. Craig went to the mines on the train and told the men that Mr. Tonkin had ordered the mines closed for the day. He afterwards told Mr. Craig that if he ever issued orders in his name again he would have him arrested.

The objection to the Company stores was certainly late in making its appearance. It was well known to every miner that the Company was disposing of their stores at the three camps and he felt reasonably assured that the transfer would be made by March 1st.

As to the "buttying" system at Michel he was at a loss to understand what it meant unless it referred to the back hand system by which the contractor generally earned a "rake off" from his helper. This system was employed by all mines and without it no one could become a practical miner as the laws of the province require a contractor to hold a miner's certificate and such a certificate cannot be obtained by any who has not worked in a mine for at least 12 months.

Coming to the question of the net average earnings of the men employed at all the mines published in these columns Mr. Tonkin produced the books of the company for inspection. Several individual examples were taken to prove that the figures represented the net earnings after back-hand, powder, & smithing had been deducted. The case of Mr. P. Christopher is given for an example. In Dec. he earned $133.25, 50 cents were deducted for smithing and $46.25 for back-hand; no powder was used. This left a balance of $86.50, which, divided by twenty shifts worked in the month, leaves a daily average of $4.32½. All the others are worked out on this basis, and are sworn to as being correct.

Mr. G. F. Dougherty, of Greenwood, President Provincial District No. 6, W. F. of M., early in the week came to Fernie as a representative of the Western Federation to look into the trouble. Mr. Dougherty has had several interviews with the General Manager in which the earnings of the men was the chief topic discussed. Mr. Dougherty is now visiting the Morrissey and Michel unions and it is thought by many that his efforts as arbitrator, for which he is eminently qualified, will result in the resumption of work in our collieries at an early date.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

ROBERT BELL, STRUCK BY FALLING TREE.

Resident of Whitewater, Man., is Instantly Killed by Being Struck on the Head—A Similar Accident Occurs in Ontario.

On Tuesday last Robert Stanley Bell, fourth son of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Bell, near Whitewater, left his parent's residence and in company with Mr. Herman Campsell, went to the bush to cut some wood. About five o'clock in the evening they cut one tree, which, in falling struck against another and sprung it back quite a way, then slipped off and fell, but the standing tree came back with force enough to break a large piece off the top, which fell with terrible force and struck young Bell on the head, killing him instantly.

His comrade called to another neighbor, Mr. Dougall, to come at once, as he feared that his young friend was killed, which proved only too true. Mr. Campsall and Mr. Dougall at once cut a road to the body and placed it on a sleigh and removed the remains to the residence of the parents.

Henry Worling, of Puslinch, Ont., was killed while felling trees in the woods on Feb. 11.

MORE CRITICISM.

Presbyterian Witness Continues Attack on Scotch Curlers.

A dispatch from Halifax, N. S., says: Referring to the references of Rev. Mr. Kerr, of the Scotch curlers, at Winnipeg, with respect to drinking in Canada, the Presbyterian Witness, which is edited by Rev. Dr. Robert Murray, makes a caustic reply, concluding as follows: "This little escapade at Winnipeg and the Niagara escapade at Toronto have been rather disagreeable. Clearly some old country folk do not understand the ways of Canadians. The Montreal minister simply did his his duty in refusing to drink at a bar, even with so genial and courteous a gentleman as Mr. Kerr. Why should he do so? In this country ministers of the gospel never go to a bar to drink by themselves or at the invitation of others. Mr. Kerr could easily have ascertained this fact. There is no hypocrisy in this abstentation from all appearances of evil. We trust that even distinguished visitors from Scotland will not regard it as a duty to countenance in Canada conduct that is not necessarily associated with good manners of good morals. This remark is intended to apply to even a more prominent personage than Rev. Mr. Kerr. We mean Lord Minto. We do not see any good reason why Scotch ministers of Scotch noblemen should take pains to separate themselves from a morality of which Scotland was wont to be proud, and which certainly is not without warrant in the laws of God and man."

NAVAL REFORM.

New System Prevents Isolation of any Parts of the Navy.

An important naval reform is being gradually accomplished by the British admiralty. At the present time the British navy somewhat resembles a dismembered body. Some part of it floats in almost every sea but in disjointed squadrons that are isolated from ane another. The new system is designed to keep the various sections of the fleet in touch with one another by means of cruiser divisions. Already one has been formed in the Mediterranean and the nucleus of another of which the Good Hope is the flagship in commission. The Australian, the China and the other important stations are also to have their light cavalry divisions, each under the command of a rear admiral, as soon as these can be got together.

It is intended that the cruiser divisions on the different stations shall not be always kept in the shadow of the commander-in-chief's flagship, but shall be in a sense links in a chain that will bind together the British squadrons all the world over. There Good Hope is the flagship in com- a combination of forces right from the channel to the furthermost naval station, making in effect one big fleet instead of several smaller ones. Separate commands are to remain, but isolation will disappear.

Frozen to Death.

A dispatch from Battleford, N. W. T., says: Engineer Vance, of the C. P. R., was found frozen to death on Feb. 14, forty miles east of that town, where he was exploring. He sent his driver ahead with instructions to prepare camp, and he followed on snowshoes, but did not turn up at night. The weather was bitterly cold. The thermometer registered 38 below during the night.

Blown Across a Creek.

A dispatch from Hamilton says: A boiler in Spence and Dean's basket factory at Waterdown blew up on Friday afternoon and totally wrecked the building. Frank Edge, the engineer, was blown 500 yards across the creek, and his escape from instant death is miraculous. He was badly injured, but will recover. The steam guage failed to indicate the pressure as it was out of order.

RECORDS SINCE 1830.

Prof. R. F. Stupart, Director of the Provincial Meteorological Observatory, Compares Our Winters.

As there seems to be a fairly prevalent idea among the old residents of Canada that our winters are milder now than in the early days of settlement. Mr. R. F. Stupart, Director of the Observatory, has recently given a few notes regarding records of temperature since 1830, which will be interesting and instructive.

The coldest winter, December-March, on record at the Observatory was that of 1884-5, when the mean temperature was 18.3, 6.8 below the average of the whole term of years. The second coldest was in 1872-5, when the temperature was 19.0, 6.1 below average, and the third coldest 1855-6, with a mean temperatire of 20.4 4.7 lower than the average. In two of these winters all four months were below average. In only six winters has the average of every winter month been below average, and all of these have occurred since and including 1872.

Extremes of Temperature.

Again, extremes of temperatures are certainly as large now as they used to be. The lowest temperatures of which we have record at Toronto was 25.6 below zero on the 10th of January, 1859, and 25.4 below on the 5th of February, 1885; 22.8 below was recorded on the 5th of February, 1886 and 21.2 below on the 6th of February, 1895. The lowest reading registered prior to 1855 was 18.6 below on the 17th of January, 1840.

The mildest winter on record was that of 1831-2, when the mean temperature was 31.0, 5.9 higher than the average. The second warmest was 1877-8 with a mean temperature of 30.6, 5.5 above average, and the third warmest was 1841-2, with a mean of 30.5, 5.4 higher than average. In nine winters each month has been higher than average and six of these occurred prior to 1865. Dividing the whole term of years into five-year periods, Mr. Stupart stated that the coldest five-year periods were 1885-9 and 1870-4, and the warmest were 1834-8 and 1840-4.

Reason for General Impression.

These being facts, it remains to be considered why there is such a very general impression among old inhabitants of this Province that the winters are not as cold nowadays as they used to be. Mr. Stupart suggested that the solution lies in the fact that the houses we live in today are better heated than when wood was the fuel used. In the city the better class of house is almost invariably warmed by means of a furnace which, remaining alight at night, keeps the house warm, and people wash and dress in the morning in a comfortable temperature. Even in the country house hard coal is now largely used for heating purposes and a self-feeder in the hallway prevents houses from cooling off towards morning, as they most certainly did in the days of wood fires, when it was not an uncommon thing on rising in the morning to find water frozen in the pitchers, and dressing was then a very cold, shivery business. It seems not improbable that the warmer dressing-rooms may wholly account for the fallacious idea of a changing climate, but some weight should perhaps be given to the fact that in early days before the country was as thoroughly cleared as it is to-day, and roads were shaded by trees on either side, the snow lay on the ground longer and more deeply, and sleighing was better and more lasting, and this would also have been the case in the city before the traffic was so large and the snow did not become covered with dirt so quickly.

Accurate Instruments.

There is no doubt Mr. Stupart said that the thermometers used in the early days of the Toronto Observatory were accurate and entirely comparable with those used now, and the observers were equally reliable. The observations have been taken on the same plot of ground since 1840, and while environment has certainly changed somewhat the change inthis respect has been such that we might almost expect to find a tendency for higher rather than for lower thermometer readings near the city. From a close study of climate Mr. Stupart said he could not for a moment suppose that the climate of any locality changes appreciably in the lifetime of a man. Change does certainly occur, but probably at a rate comparable with geological changes.

Mr. Ross Robertson on Skates.

The first appearance of Mr. John Ross Robertson, ex-M. P., Toronto, in 40 years on skates at the O. H. A. match on a recent Saturday night brings back recollections of his early career in athletics. He was a good swimmer, and on one occasion, in 1857, he swam across Toronto Bay, with three other U. C. College boys.

In 1859 he was stroke of a six-oared boat, that was manned by college and Model School boys. A good photograph of the crew, by Carson, an old picture taker, hangs in a room at U. C. College. Max Strange, an uncle of Strange of the Argonauts, and nephew of Judge McLennan; the late Dr. Tom White of Hamilton, and Dr. Alec McDonald, chief surgeon of Ward's Island, N. Y., were in the crew.

Mr. Robertson managed and played in the hockey, or rather, shinney, games in 1856-1857, when U. C. College played Knox Academy, and the old King street Model School. These were played on the Bay, betweeen York and Simcoe streets.

He started the first game of football at U. C. College, and through his efforts the gymnasium at the U. C. College, on King street, was started and built.

He played cricket on the old Wellington Club, that had its grounds on the corner of Front and Brock streets, when the Brunel family lived there.

A STATESMAN ABROAD.

Sir Frederick Borden, Minister of Militia, Tells New York Canadians Something of Their Country.

At the recent banquet of the Canadian Society in New York, Sir Frederick W. Borden, Minister of Militia, said:

"I know that in speaking for the people of my own country," he said, "I can say it is their desire to weld together as firmly and as strongly as possible the sentiment which actuates this country as well as Great Britain to strive together for the improvement of the human race. I doubt if such a meeting as this could take place under any other flag than the Stars and Stripe. Such meetings as this will do good work toward binding together the two great Anglo-Saxon nations. The people of Canada are a unit to this end. One hundred and twenty-five years ago a few colonies along the Atlantic coast became tired of boarding and decided to go housekeeping by themselves. Later the colonists of Canada decided to form a young nation, under the guiding hand of England, but fortunately the latter country was settled in a peaceful manner. In 1896 the aggregate foreign trade of Canada was two hundred and thirty-nine millions, and in 1902 it has mounted to four hundred and thirty-three millions. In both exports and imports the increase has been startling. Canada is more than holding her own with the progressive nations. It is said that Canadians go to the United States, but out of the 600,000 people who came to Canada last year 26,000 came from the United States. One-fiftieth of the population of the United States are Canadian-born, but more than one-fiftieth of the population of Canada came from the States. We hear a great deal to-day of reciprocity, and we are all waiting for something to assist in this direction. After all our efforts to try and sell our potatoes, barley and other products to the United States we were finally compelled to seek a European market, and we found the open market of Britain waiting for us. Now we want to thank the United States for turning us away and teaching us a lesson in self-reliance. About fifteen years ago, the Canadian Pacific was built across the continent and Canadians were of the opinion that the road would never pay. We all know now how wholly inadequate the system is. This shows the growth of Canada and ought to quell the often expressed opinion in the States that Canada consists of only a few border towns. Canada has not only grown in industry and commerce, but is making great strides in art and science. I believe there is no better equipped university on this continent than McGill. You hear a great deal said about the destiny of Canada, but we are perfectly satisfied to proceed upon our present lines, and we feel that we have no better friend to help us to do this that the United States. Some one once bounded Canada as follows: On the north by the north pole, on the east by the Atlantic Ocean, on the west by the Pacific Ocean and on the south by the Monroe doctrine. This Monroe doctrine stands just as much for freedom and liberty in Canada as it does in the United States. It is a guarantee against coercion and oppression. When it was promulgated the leading British statesmen approved it. Canadians know what it means to them, and believe in it in every form. Our mother country will always look to her daughters for counsel, and a separation from Great Britain would be almost impossible. If a war should occur between Great Britain and the United States the result would be more terrible than the war of the rebellion, but we all hope that if the two countries are drawn into any war, they will both be on the same side, and marching in the same direction."

Doukhobors the Salt of the Earth.

R. Rautenberg, who has been investigating the Doukhobors since their pilgrimage was stopped. He says:

As a result of my investigations, I have come to the conclusion that the world does not possess a better, purer, more moral class of people, and that they differ from their detractors mainly in that they are actually trying to live up to the principles of Christianity which they profess. They refuse to fight; they will not bear arms; they persist in turning the other cheek. Are they right from the standpoint of Jesus, or does the hypocritical, bloodthirsty mob which glories in the destruction of the weak better represent the principles of the "Man of Peace?"

They believe that God is the Father of all life; that He loves His creatures with a tender, fatherly love. To serve Him means to the Doukhobor to serve His creatures, for he claims we cannot serve God in any other way than to love and do good to all his offspring, human and animal. Like all high and holy doctrine, this appears extreme from our standpoint, but are not the Doukhobors far nearer to the truth than those men who, while professing to love God, flock in season by thousands into the north to kill and maim, in cruel sport, the innocent deer which harmlessly enjoy their God given life and existence? In my opinion, nothing shows more glaringly the fallen, hideous nature of man than his lust for innocent blood. Tigers only kill to eat; man is the only creature who kills his fellow-creatures for pure sport. Who is right—the Doukhobor or the sportsman?

The Canadian Apple.

The finest fruit that grows is the Canadian apple. If anybody doubts this let him travel the world over, and he will come back convinced of it. He may visit the orange groves of the South, and on into the land of the banana; he may tour the grape countries, and pull figs and cocoanuts where he can find them; and if he but stay long enough at each point in his journeyings, he will tire of the native fruits, and come home fully persuaded that the apple is the leader of them all. We do not properly appreciate the Canadian apple.

Colonel Swayne, in command of the force, personally witnessed the officer's conduct, and describes it as most gallant.

FARMING PAID

41,000 FARMERS PRODUCED $50,000,000.

Report of the Provincial Department of Agriculture Brought Down Shows a Remarkable Progress—Dairying Season Was Somewhat Disapointing—Immigration is Highly Satisfactory.

The report of the department of agriculture, which was laid on the table at the opening session of the Manitoba legislature by Hon. Mr. Roblin, points out in its introduction that the province has had two seasons of unusual prosperity, and that the community of farmers is the rugged pillar around which every commercial enterprise twines. The foundations of this pillar rest upon 25,000,000 acres of rich, arable land. The value of agricultural products raised during the year is estimated at over $50,000,000. "This is a remarkable production for 41,000 farmers," says the report. Another feature is that lands throughout the province, as in the Territories, have largely increased in value, during the last two or three years.

The report also contains the crop bulletins, which were issued during the year and the crop statistics since 1883.

The report of the provincial veterinarian, Mr. S. J. Thompson, V.S., states that during last year a great many horses have been affected with influenza, which, although not often fatal, caused much inconvenience and loss of time. The disease was infectious and attacked every animal in stables where cleanliness and disinfection were not attended to.

Swamp fever continues to destroy more horses in May than any other disease, and the veterinarian believes more than all other diseases combined.

In the past year fifty horses affected with glanders were destroyed, being ten less than in 1901, and 100 less than in 1899. It is hoped that the disease will be practically unknown in Manitoba in a few years, if horsemen will guard against importing animals that have been exposed to the disease.

There have been a number of animals affected with blackleg during the last year, and the only satisfactory method of guarding against it is to have all young animals vaccinated, especially those pasturing in low land.

Lump jaw has also been prevalent in some districts, but this disease can be easily and successfully treated in its earlier stages.

THE DAIRYING INDUSTRY.

The report of C. A. Murray, the superintendent, outlines the work of the dairy school, and the individual work of himself and assistants in inspecting cheese factories, creameries, judging at exhibitions, and so forth. The season of 1902 was disappointing in respect to the dairy products of the province, the spring being so wet and roads bad until the middle of June that milk and cream could not be delivered to the factories. Creamery butter shows a loss of 43 per cent. as compared with last season, and a gain of 6.10 of a cent per pound.

Dairy butter shows a loss of 9 per cent, in manufacture and a gain of 2c. per pound in price. Cheese production has increased 5 per cent., and gained 1 7—10 cents per pound The total dairy products for the year are valued at $747,603.93.

The noxious weeds inspector, R. G. O'Malley, states in his report that the weed pest practically did no damage last year, the straw being so rank as to choke the weeds out Pepper grass was unknown to any extent last year. Large sections of North Dakota has tumbling mustard in large quantities, and, being allowed to mature, is scattered by the winds far into this province, inflicting great hardship on our farmers.

Mr. C. Barber, provincial game guardian, reports that 32 shooting licenses were issued during the year, and the revenue derived therefrom was $821.50. There were fourteen prosecutions for infractions of the Game Protection act, and the fines imposed were $225.

IMMIGRATION.

In his report to the department, Mr. C. J. Golden, of the provincial immigration department, pays a high tribute to the work of the Dominion immigration department, stating that the settlers who arrived during the year have been a superior class from the best agricultural states of the Union, from Great Britain and other countries of Europe. The stream of arrivals has been continuous during the year, numbering in all over 30,000. From authentic reports I judge that we may expect from 60,000 to 75,000 during the coming year.

MAD FROM STARVATION.

A Case of Unbearable Poverty is Brought to Light in Toronto.

A dispatch from Toronto says: Harrowing details of a distressing case of poverty followed by insanity, were narrated to the civic property committee by Alderman Noble. A few days ago he was called to a house in the east end. In this he found a young wife a raving maniac, held by policemen, while half a dozen women and their children stood by screaming.

The husband was lying on the floor, almost desperate. He had struggled to get bread and fuel for the family, but had not got enough for them, and the partly famished wife in vain attempted for some days to nourish her crying infant, and with the added worry attending semi-starvation, had gone crazy.

She was taken to jail, the only place available, and was put in a big room with about thirty other lunatics, and strapped to a straw bed. The only attendant of these insane people was a young girl who had been convicted several times of drunkenness. Dr. Noble tried to get the woman into an asylum, but this was impossible until all the red tapeism of admission, examination by a doctor, committal by a magistrate, committal by a county judge and an order from the sheriff had been gone through with.

The board of control was instructed to wait on the government and urge the necessity of having removed some of these senseless formalities in connection with the care and treatment of the insane and poor, and thus remove a stigma from the Christian community.

FERTILE ATHABASCA.

Wheat of an Excellent Grade Raised in Far North.

An Ottawa dispatch says: J. K. Cornwall, of Lesser Slave Lake, called upon Hon. Clifford Sifton and Sir William Mulock to urge the establishment of a mail service into the Athabasca district. Mr. Cornwall showed that in the Peace River district, and as far north as a thousand miles from the American boundary, wheat of a most excellent character was now being raised, and that recently the Hudson's Bay company had erected four flour mills. He stated that he had lived in this district for some years, and was familiar with its agricultural possibilities, and that grains of all kinds were grown and yield as good results there as in old Ontario.

At the conclusion of Mr. Cornwall's arguments the postmaster-general decided to immediately establish an all year round mail service to Athabasca Landing via Lesser Slave Lake. During the winter the mails will be carried by dog train and horses. In summer the water system will to some extent be utilized, but where not navigable horses will be used. The population of Athabasca, composed of English, half-breeds and Indians, is 6,615.

American Methods in Russia.

Advices from St. Petersburg says that the German national committee, which is opposing the colonization of Eastern Prussia, is successfully recalling the German settlers in South Prussia by offering them land under easy conditions around Posen. Two thousand German families, according to the Voyln, are preparing to leave Khitomir in the coming spring. Hundreds left last year.

An instance of lynch law by Russian peasants had just occurred in the suburb of Kieve, which has long been terrorized by a band of thieves. The peasants armed themselves with clubs, unexpectedly attacked the thieves, when the latter were drinking, and beat a number of them to death. The absent members of the band escaped to neighboring villages but were hunted down and subjected to the same fate.

Another case of lynching is reported from Stavropol, where four men were arrested for horse stealing. After the local chief of police had examined the accused, he stepped into the marketplace and invited the assembled peasants to take the law into their own hands. Three of the thieves were killed on the spot, and the fourth had to be taken to the hospital. The chief of police was arrested.

Cape Dutch are Sullen.

A cablegram from Cape Town, of Feb. 13, says: Mr. Chamberlain arrived at Graareinet, in a Dutch district, today. The welcome extended to the colonial secretary was anything but cordial.

The Dutchmen held sullenly aloof from the reception and functions. Many of them openly paraded rebel badges. The members of the British colony called on Mr. Chamberlain and complained of boycotting at the hands of the Dutch, and the general system of oppression and intimidation, which was also extended to the natives because of the assistance they rendered to the British during the war.

Mr. Chamberlain made a long speech in the course of which he rebuked the Dutchmen in strong terms for their attitude and frankly warned them that it was inconsistent with the enjoyment of the privileges of British administration.

Pimple Causes Death.

A dispatch from Windsor, Ont., says: William Laughart, aged 61, died at the Hotel Dieu last evening after an illness of two weeks' duration The deceased was brought to the hospital suffering from blood poisoning, caused by picking an eruption on his face with his finger nail. He had been in the employ of A. A. Scott, of McGregor, as bookkeeper, up to the time he was taken ill.

OUR OLD FRIENDS
Ever True and Unfailing Are The DIAMOND DYES.

Old friends who are ever ready and able to help us in our time of need are indeed true friends.
Diamond Dyes are the old home friends of our Canadian people, and have proved blessings in thousands of homes. When the heart craved for a new dress, skirt, blouse, jacket, opera shawl, fresh, bright ribbons or feathers at times when economy had to be observed, the Diamond Dyes quickly transformed old and faded garments and materials into new creations, thus saving a large amount of money in the home. If you would have the best results in your dyeing work, always use the Diamond Dyes.
Send your address to the Wells & Richardson Co., 200 Mountain St., Montreal, P.Q., and you will be supplied with new Dye Book, 45 dyed samples and artistic designs of the Diamond Dye Mat and Rug patterns.

TROUBLES OF AN EX-REEVE

Were Easily Disposed of by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

W. G. Cragg, of Dresdon, had Inflammatory Rheumatism, and was Cured Slick and Clean.

Dresden, Ont., Feb 16.—(Special)—"Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me slick and clean of the Rheumatism," says W. G. Cragg, ex-reeve of this town. "It was the Inflammatory Rheumatism I had, and I think Dodd's Kidney Pills are as fine a remedy for that as I want. I am as sound as a bell now as far as rheumatism is concerned."

This is Mr. Cragg's experience, and it is the same as many others. People generally here are learning that Rheumatism is simply a result of Kidney Disease—that if the kidneys do not do their duty and take uric acid from the blood, it crystalizes at the muscles and joints and causes those tortures too many people know too well.

"I had been troubled with Inflammatory Rheumatism for eight years,' continues the ex-reeve. "I could scarcely get around to do my duties in my store. I tried doctors and medicines without getting any benefit till I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Six boxes cured me completely."

Cure the kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills and your rheumatism will cure itself.

MARKETS.

(Compiled from The Commercial)

WHEAT—There have been symptoms during the past week in the wheat markets of an easier feeling, and instead of holding on to wheat already purchased, and adding to their lines, traders have let a good deal of wheat slide out of their hands. This will probably continue for some time yet, as it is the reaction consequent on the January advance, which culminated on the 26th of that month. Compared with that date prices at the close of Friday's business show only a decline of 1½ to 2c per bushel. And the decline over the past week is only ½ to 1c. At the moment cash demand is dull and unsatisfactory. There can be no doubt that buyers of actual wheat loaded themselves up during the advance of three weeks ago and in the absence of a continuation of strong markets they must have time to work off their purchases to consumers, and at present they leave the buying side of the market alone. In the meantime an increasing consumption is using up wheat and flour at a rate beyond all previous records, and while stocks in various positions show a good increase they are still below what they were a year ago. The ensuing six weeks cover a critical period for the winter wheat crops, and should any material damage develop a sharp advance is liable to take place.

Manitoba wheat has been very quiet all the week and comparatively little business has been done. At the close of business Friday prices were 1c under a week ago, and we quote 1 hard 73½c, 1 northern, 71½c; 2 northern, 70c; 3 northern, 68c; spot or February delivery, and for May delivery, 1 hard, 76½c; 1 northern, 71½; 2 northern, 73c; 3 northern, 70½c, all in store Fort William, Port Arthur or Duluth.

FLOUR—Best Hungarian Patent, $2.10 per sack of 98 pounds delivered to the trade; Glenora Patent, $1.95; strong bakers, $1.65; and XXXX, $1.35.

MILLFEED—Bran is quoted at $14.50 per ton in sacks, and shorts at $16.50 per ton.

OATS—Prices are slowly strengthening in sympathy with eastern market. Receipts are light and the market is not at all well supplied. No. 1 white in carlots on track are to-day worth 29c per bushel; No. 2 white, 27½ to 28c, and feed grades, 26c. Farmers' loads on the street are bringing 28c and at country points 23c to 25c. Brokers are asking 25 to 26c for carlots in the country.

BARLEY—The market is firmer. Dealers are paying 31 to 32c per bushel for feed grades on the street at Winnipeg.

FLAXSEED—Market nominal.

SPELTZ—The market is higher at 32c per bushel and 56 pounds, delivered in Winnipeg

HAY—Fresh baled hay on track is worth $5 to $6 per ton.

POTATOES—35c per bushel.

BUTTER — Creamery—City makers and are now quoting 24c for choice, fresh made in one-pound bricks, delivered.

BUTTER—Dairy—Receipts are very light and there is not much ground on which to base a quotation. Rolls are quite plentiful at times, and the price for these is somewhere around 15c net. City retail merchants have paid that much for roll butter this week, although some claim to be buying it for less money. Tub butter is worth from 14c to 17c net, delivered in Winnipeg.

CHEESE—The market is quiet. Orders are being filled with Ontario stock. Jobbers are selling to the retail trade at 13½c per pound.

EGGS—Eggs are scarce at 22c per dozen, net, delivered in Winnipeg, subject to candling.

DRESSED POULTRY—Dealers are offering in a wholesale way 10c per pound for chickens, dressed; 9½c to 10c for ducks and geese, and 15c for turkeys.

DRESSED MEATS — Beef, city dressed, 6 to 7½c per pound; country stock, ½c under these figures; mutton, 8 to 9c; lamb, 11½c; hogs, 7c.

HIDES—Country frozen hides are bringing from 5½ to 6c per pound, delivered at Winnipeg, less 5 pounds tare; sheep pelts, 30 to 50c.

WOOL—Market nominal.

TALLOW—No. 1 tallow is worth 5½c per pound delivered here, and No. 2, 4½c.

SENECA ROOT—Market nominal.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—Butchers are still able to supply their wants at 4c to 4½c per pound, but they seem to look for higher prices later on. Cattle are scarce in Manitoba. Finest steers are worth 4c; butchers' ordinary 3½c, and from that figure down to 2½c, according to quality. Stockers, yearlings, $14 to $17; two year olds, $18 to $22 each.

SHEEP—Worth 3½c per pound off cars here. Lambs, 4¼ to 4½c.

HOGS—Packers are still paying 6c per pound for best weights of hogs delivered. Heavy and light weights are ½c lower than choice.

MILCH COWS—Prices are firm at $30 to $45 each, according to quality.

HORSES—Trade is now confined to a limited demand for general purpose horses, for which prices still rule high. Good teams of work horses are worth $300 to $400, according to weight and quality.

Men And Women of All Ranks of Society Point to Paine's Celery Compound
As Their Rescuer From Disease and Death.

Millions on this North American continent know that Paine's Celery Compound "makes sick people well."
Paine's Celery Compound is to-day the popular medicine in the wealthy and humbler homes of our vast country. The press has given this wonder-working prescription more note, prominence and praise than has ever been given to any other remedy, and physicians of all schools prescribe it daily.
Paine's Celery Compound has become popular and trusted because its results exceed its promises. It is victorious over sickness and disease. It offers hope and cheer to those pronounced incurable by physicians; it saves such from the grave. It is the one medicine, unfailing and all-powerful that promptly brings true joy and gladness to hopeless victims and their anxious relatives and friends.
It is well to remember that one or two bottles of Paine's Celery Compound will, in the majority of cases, banish tired feelings, weary and clouded brain, headache, debility, constipation, nervousness and sleeplessness, which, if allowed to run unchecked, give rise to serious ailments and diseases. If you are rundown, over-worked, have defective digestion and poor circulation, you will obtain blessed results from this grand system-building medicine. Each dose carries new life to all the weak and torpid organs of the body.

THE STRIKE.

Figures talk! The sworn statement produced to-day proves beyond a doubt that the miners engaged at contract labor in the employ of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company are a well paid body of men. Indeed they earn much larger wages than we supposed before the result of the investigation was made known We have personally examined the statement of the Company as shown in their books and any miner of the Company has the same privilege. The books prove conclusively that the net earnings show all reasonable deductions such as are incurred in the work, including smith expenses, powder, and back hand labor, of course the deduction does not include rent and store bills and similar living expenses. On the point of wages we believe the contract men have no kick coming, and they materially weakened their cause by raising the question at all. Taking the average net earnings for the Morrissey mines we find that under the objectionable rate of 40 cents per ton the miners are earning higher wages than at Coal Creek mines where the miners generally admit that they are well paid. We believe that miners should receive good pay for the hard work they perform and for the extra danger to which they are constantly exposed but we do not think any fair minded coal miner could reasonably expect a larger average that $4.50 for eight hours work.

As regards the friction between the Union and the Coal Company the statements made by the respective parties prove that much misunderstanding has existed. The men have claimed that because the General Manager refused an interview to the District Union of the Western Federation he is opposed to unionism. Mr. Tonkin on the other hand points out where he considers the local unions are not acting constitutionally in asking the Federation to step in before they have done what they could themselves to have their grievances rectified. It is a misunderstanding which we feel can easily be satisfactorily adjusted.

Mr. Dougherty is probably one of the best qualified men that the Western Federation could send to represent them. In addition to his practical knowledge of mining and his wide experience in dealing with Unions and their troubles, he possesses an unusual amount of good common sense. Coming, as he does from the centre of a rich metalliferous district where every man, woman and child is indirectly dependent upon the Crow's Nest fuel, he brings with him a wider knowledge of the far reaching effects of the strike than is possessed by the average Fernieite, and he naturally will exert himself to his utmost ability to get at the exact facts in as short a space of time as possible. We understand that Mr. Doherty has satisfied himself as to the accuracy of the average net earnings as shown by the Company's books, and it is devoutly to be hoped that after Mr. Dougherty's return from Michel and Morrissey permanent terms of peace may speedily be drawn up aud signed, and that the long, intermittant struggle between capital and labor in the Crow's Nest may be settled for years to come.

Morrissey Road

We are pleased to be able to state that the article published in these columns last week re the necessity of a road to Morrissey is already bearing fruit. A petition is being circulated about town addressed to Hon. W. C. Wells, Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works praying for immediate attention to this most necessary undertaking. Mr. F. W. Burn has the petition in hand and he is receiving much encouragement from all sides. It is to be hoped that the government, which has already shown signs of awakening to our growing importance, will gain complete consciousness of the practical utility of this public work when the request reaches them. The petition suggests that the two partially constructed roads between Fernie and Morrissey and Morrissey and Elko be completed and that a bridge across the Elk be built to connect them. The Morrissey people have got to work at their end of the line and taken similar action.

F. J. Dean, of the Nelson News, publishes a straight denial of the charge made by the Tribune to the effect that the News was owned by The Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. We fail to see how Mr. Houston could make such an absurd statement after reading Mr. Dean's frequent and impartial criticisms of the said company. We have a faint recollection of a similar charge laid against the FREE PRESS by the same gentleman but it was not thought of sufficient importance to receive comment.

* * *

Mr. Houston evidently does not want to leave the public in doubt as to where he stands in dealing with the strike. He gives his verdict, and then considers the evidence afterwards, if at all. His sympathies all lie with the men, but for a moment he strikes an independent attitude in order to get off something original, and refers to "the pig-headed coal miners and the bull-headed company," an expression probably as much at variance with the truth as with the recognized journalistic rules of etiquette.

* * *

Mr. Wm. Blakemore publishes a letter in the Morrissey Miner putting the doubts of that paper at rest as to the control that that gentleman has over the editorial department of this paper. He also corrects the other important subject mentioned in the Miner by stating that he is not personally antagonistic to the C. N. P. Coal Co. and while admitting his disapproval of many features of the policy pursued by the Company in the past, he speaks in highest terms of the present General Manager and his policy.

* * *

AT the request of Senator Templeman, the deputy minister of labor, W. L. Mackenzie King, is now on his way out from Ottawa to Fernie, for the purpose of effecting, if possible, a settlement of the dispute between the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company and their employees, which has resulted in the present unfortunate strike. Mr. King has had considerable experience in different parts of the Dominion in settling labor disputes which doubtless thoroughly qualifies him for the position as arbitrator in the present trouble. If the strike is not settled before his services are available it is sincerely to be hoped that both company and men will accept the kindly assistance thus offered by the government.

A CHALLENGE FROM FRANK.

The FREE PRESS is in receipt of the following telegram this morning :—

Frank, Feb. 20th

Fernie Free Press.

I will play the Frank Hockey Team against the Fernie same Hockey Team that played here Feb. 3rd for $100 a side. Answer.

S. W. Gebo

The following answer was at once despatched.

Fernie, Feb. 21st

S. W. Gebo, Frank.

Fernie Hockey Team agree to play Frank any time. From $300 to $500 a side.

Free Press

The wording of Mr. Gebo's telegram is somewhat ambiguous unless he means that Frank is to be allowed the privilege of changing its personnel while the same privilege is denied to Fernie. Our answer is meant to imply that the Fernie team will play their strongest team.

The FREE PRESS has evidently got into the bad graces of the Frank people. Last week the Sentinel gave us a great roast and charged us with malice. Nothing could be further from the facts. We did not see the game, but everything published was strongly verified by our players. Affidavits can be produced in defence of the account given by the Fernie players. Fernie can take a defeat in as graceful a manner as any team when it is administered in an honorable manner, but from the best sources of information at our command we gather that this game was a disgrace to the fair name hitherto born by our Frank sports.

NANAIMO MINERS STRIKE.

Victoria, Feb. 16—The miners of Nanaimo have gone on strike. About 800 men went out to-day against the Western Fuel company of San Francisco, which recently acquired the mines at Nanaimo. The miners are asking for a general advance from March 1st of from 75 or 80 cents a ton, and 25 cents per day extra for using safety lamps, claiming that coal cannot be got as quickly with the safety lights, and they also ask $1 a ton for mining in the lower level, which runs under the sea.

WANT AN INCREASE.

Trainmen Will Ask for a Twenty Per Cent Advance.

George Cameron, chairman of local grievance committee of the B. R. T., T. A. Cory, chairman of O. R. C. committee on grievance, and D. Hunt, general chairman of Western division of B. R. T. left Monday for Winnipeg where a general conference of trainmen will be held with the C. P. R. officials, the object in view being a 20 per cent increase in salaries for this division. The reason assigned at this time is the freight rates charged by the company, which the men claim is heavy enough to justify the increase.—Cranbrook Herald.

A report is current that the C. P. R. is taking advantage of the Fernie coal strike to press its claims for the acquirement of East Kootenay coal lands now held in reserve by the provincial government. Rumor has it that the provincial government is ready and willing to make the deal for the benefit of the Canadian Pacific and that Hon. Mr. Wells, chief commissioner of lands and works, has practically arranged the details by which the Canadian Pacific will get 60,000 acres of the most valuable coal lands in British Columbia. While the Canadian Pacific has no prior right to these lands, it is said that Mr. Wells' contention is that the C. P. R. is in a better financial position than any one to break the monopoly enjoyed by the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. and to quickly relieve the situation as regards the fuel supply for southern British Columbia.

ARE C. N. P. MINERS WELL PAID?

To the Editor.

The position of affairs along the C. N. valley remains practically the same. The men remain firm in their decision to be recognized as a district and the manager refuses to meet the board so that affairs are at a complete deadlock. It has been reported that it was a misstatement of facts that we gave last week, here is clause 4 of the original agreement.

"If, at the expiration of two months from the date of this agreement the union shall signify in writing to the company after a vote by ballot amongst the employees employed by the company underground, that they are dissatisfied with the extra half hour at noon, stipulated for by paragraph 3 hereof, the Company hereby agrees that this agreement shall be at an end and that they will forthwith voluntarily return to the system of working the mines as set forth in this agreement with the exception of the said half-hour at noon, which will be discontinued and thereafter a day's work shall consist of one eight hour shift, which shall commence at the fire stations and fire-bosses' room atoresaid at 7 o'clock a.m. and shall end at the same points at the hour of 3 o'clock p.m."

PRESS COMMITTEE.

The Executive of the Fernie Board of Trade had a meeting on Tuesday afternoon and took action on the strike situation along the lines suggested by the FREE PRESS last week. The following resolution was adopted :

"Whereas a continuation of the present strike in the collieries of the Crow's Nest Pass coal company, Ltd., is likely to detrimentally affect the interests of the business men represented by this Board of Trade, as well as the interests of large numbers of workmen and capitalists connected with the mining and smelting industries wholly dependent on the output of the Crow's Nest collieries for their proper operation.

"And whereas a lengthy continuation of said strike will jeopardize the said industries and probably cause a temporary shutting down of the same, resulting in the throwing out of employment of large numbers of workmen.

"And whereas such a result is undesirable and every legitimate method should be adopted to prevent the occurrence of the same.

"Therefore be it resolved that this Executive Council communicate with the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. and the proper representatives of the employees interested with the object of discussing the situation and endeavoring to arrive at a satisfactory solution of the matters at issue at as early a date as possible."

In accordance with the above, letters were addressed to General Manager Tonkin and to the President of the District Union.

Favorable answers have been received from both Mr. Tonkin and Mr. Christopher and doubtless much may be done by this recognized public body to reduce the friction between the company and employees.

George Boss, an employee of the Jaffray mill, broke his leg Monday by being caught in some of the machinery. He was brought to St. Eugene hospital by George Leitch, manager of the mill.

Frank Burns, while at work stringing wires for the telephone company to the C. P. R. pump house Tuesday, fell from the top of one of the poles and was badly shaken up. He was taken to the hospital, and yesterday was in good shape, no serious injury having been received.

T. S. Gill, the engineer, while on his regular run from Medicine Hat to Cranbrook Tuesday saw a bunch of mountain sheep on the track near Crows Nest, and ran very close to them in passing, the animals seeming to be held spell bound by the engine.

A party of surveyors that have been engaged in surveying coal lands south of Morrissey report the snow ten and twelve feet deep in places. On following the trail on the side hills in places where a horse stumbled and got off into the snow it was so deep that they found it impossible to get the animal back and were therefore compelled to shoot him. It was necessary to kill two or three of their horses before their return, and they found it very difficult to accomplish anything owing to the unusual depth of the snow.

Infringement of a Trade Mark

In an action in the High Court of Justice for Ontario, recently tried before Chancellor Boyd, at Toronto, the Slater Shoe Co., and Chas. E. Slater, president of Montreal, makers of the famous Slater Shoe, obtained a judgment forever restraining F. C. Wilkinson, a boot and shoe dealer, of Owen Sound, from advertising, exposing, or offering for sale or selling boots or shoes not made by the Slater Shoe Co., as "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods" or the Slater Shoe." The Chancellor, also ordered Wilkinson to pay the heavy costs of the action. The Chancellor, after hearing the evidence, decided that no one except the Slater Shoe Co., had a right to use the name "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods," "The Slater Shoe," or any similar names in connection with boots and shoes, and that Wilkinson had no right to use any name or names in connection with boots and shoes which might enable him to pass of a shoe not of the company's make, as being of their make, nor in any way to reap the benefit of the reputation which the Slater Shoe has acquired throughout the Dominion of Canada.

The Genuine Slater

Is positively the best shoe value offered for sale in Canada. You may include the United States and that will pretty near cover the world for fine shoe making. There are shoes sold elsewhere at $4 50 and $6 a pair that carry no more style, are no better fitting and will not wear as well as the genuine Slater Shoe at $4. "Why is it?" you ask. "Just because they are branded with an American stamp."

Russell Evans was sent up for trial for stealing a watch from Jas. Ryan, of Michel. Evans tried to put the blame on a man named Demsey who had left the town and a warrant was sworn and for the latter's arrest. Constable Walker brought the accused from Calgary yesterday.

Writs have been served by the Columbia and Western R. Co. on those who have staked timber on the west side of the Elk opposite Fernie. The defendants are summoned to appear in Victoria within 8 days after the writs were served. The writs ask for damages for trepassing and an injunction restraining defendants from further trespass or cutting timber.

Lethbridge Coal

The town is being supplied with Lethbridge coal, a number of carloads have been brought in and it is bought up as fast as it comes in. The coal retails at $6.75 delivered. It is very superior coal for domestic purposes, being clean, and a good burning lignite.

Effect of Strike on C. P. R.

The effect of the strike upon the local C. P. R, employment is very noticable. Already about 20 men have been laid off. These include 6 switchmen, 2 engine crews, 2 office men and several repair men. The work is not heavy for those that remain. The C. P. R. are getting their coal from Frank and considerable of it goes through Fernie for points further west.

Lecture on the Strike

Rev. D. L. Gordon was in Nelson this week attending the session of the Kootenay Presbytery. On Tuesday evening he delivered an interesting address in the Presbyterian church, dealing with the present strike in the Crow's Nest Pass coal fields. He reviewed the miners' side of the case minutely as told by them, and ended by stating that government intervention seemed to be the only likely way of bringing about a satisfactory settlement.

Gareau vs. Cody

Messrs. Cody, Gareau and Bartley were down to Nelson this week as wisnesses in the case of Gareau vs. Cody, an action for the possession by Gareau of the property occupied by the defendant on Baker st. The house was built three years ago by Cody, Gareau furnishing the material. The latter claims that he allowed the defendant the use of the house at a rental which was to be paid in work, while Cody claims that he was simply holding the property as a chattel until the work was paid for the plaintiff. The judge dismissed the action, and the defendant's counter claim with costs in each instance.

The Mine Road

Owing to the closing down of the mines at Coal Creek there is no train service between that point and the town. The wagon road to the mines has long since been blocked with snow and for a few days following the strike there was no other means of getting from one point to other but by walking the railway track. An appeal was made to the government to have the road opened and Chief McMullin this week received a wire to put a team and four men to work on it. Constable Farquharson took the job in hand and by shovelling a lot of snow and trampling the rest under foot the road is again open for traffic.

Local Branch B. C. Mining Association.

A hurriedly called but enthusiastic meeting was held in the office of Messrs. Ross and Alexander at 8:45 last evening to discuss the advisability of organizing a local branch of the B. C. Mining Association. Although the matter was put through in a rush 61 residents of our town signed the membership role. The chair was occupied by W. R. Ross and A. H. Cree acted in the capacity of secretary. It was unanimously decided to organize as a branch of the B. C. M. A, and the following gentlemen were appointed to act as delegates to the forthcoming general convention to be held in Victoria on the 26th inst., J. H. Tonkin, D. V. Mott and Dr. S. Bonnell. The meeting then adjourned.

A Successful Ball

The ball given under the auspices of the Ladies' Hospital Auxiliary on Tuesday evening was one of the leading society events of the season. The ball was well attended almost as many being present as at the memorable Masonic ball. The dances were well patronized, as nearly everybody entered heartily into the amusement of the evening, and in consequence the capacity of the large dancing floor of Princess hall was taxed to its utmost. The music was excellently rendered by four members of the orchestra. The refreshments were supplied by the ladies thus reducing the expense account. Financially the ball was a great success as well nigh $100 was cleared to aid the hospital charities.

Back from the Transvaal

Mr. R. E. Davis and his son, T. L. Davis. who left Fernie last June for the Vereeniging coal field, South Africa, returned to Fernie last week to work in our mines once more. They had a contract for sinking a shaft on the coal property owned by Messrs. Lewis and Marks and which is managed by our former manager, Mr. W. R. Wilson. They relate many interesting features in connection with their experiences. The coal company land embraces 40 square miles and is divided by the Vaal river, thus part is in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony. During the early part of the war the property was seized and worked by the Boers to supply them with coal. It was afterwards captured by the British and Lord Roberts for a time made his headquarters in the house now occupied by Mr. Wilson. The labor situation in South Africa is far from promising. Blacks or Kaffirs do a big day's work, in fact loading 16 tons of coal, for which they receive 50 cents. The only suitable work attainable by whitemen is that of superintending the blacks, and for this purpose one is required for 40 or 50 Kaffirs. The country is flooded with white labor, as after the war a great influx took place. Only about one third of the gold mines in the neighborhood of Johannesburg are now in operation, it being difficult to obtain sufficient Kaffirs, or "boys" as they are called. These blacks were receiving good wages from the war department during the war and two shillings per day now looks small to them. Mr. Wilson wished through Messrs. Davis to be remembered to his old Fernie friends.

The B. C. Furniture Co. will sell at cost for cash only to close out their business. The strike is on: Nuff'sed. x

Coal Company's Statements Forged

R. Ashcroft, of Morrissey, was charged in the police court to-day with forgery and raising money under false pretences. A man named Daniels had lost two original statements and had secured duplicates which he had cashed. Ashcroft somehow got possession of the original statements and forged J. Daniels name, and got them cashed at the Northern Hotel. Ashcroft was sent up for trial.

County Court will be held by Judge Forin in Fernie next Thursday.

OUR FIRE PROTECTION.

To the Editor.

Kindly allow me space in your paper to point out some of the most glaring weaknesses of our fire protection. This matter has been touched upon in your columns several times but the tremendous risk we are constantly running makes it imperative that no opportunity be lost to press for improvement.

Our volunteer brigade, if we have such an organization in Fernie, is not what it should be. Last summer a public meeting appointed a chief and a sub-chief, and at the same time a score or more, mostly middle-aged men, offered their names as members of a volunteer brigade. Since that time nothing has been done towards improving the brigade by practice, and if a fire were to occur tonight the Fernie brigade would not be in any better shape to combat it than the day it was organized. Indeed it is more than probable that many of the original members would make their way to the fire as mere individual spectators, forgetful of their connection with the brigade. We want young men in our brigade. We want a young man as chief. Our present chief told us this when he was elected and he was right. Let the strong athletic lads take charge of the fire protection system. They will take a pride in the responsibilities thrust upon them and they will do all that the muscle and activity of young manhood can do to protect our town against the ravages of the fire demon. A young man's brigade would be a popular organization. It would be an honor to be a member just as it is to gain a place on the hockey or lacrosse teams. They will make practice runs, and a heathful rivalry will strengthen the efforts to reduce each previous record.

We have a fairly good water service in Fernie. We also have by means of private contributions plenty of hose and a reel. There is sufficient hose for another reel and this should be secured without delay. The necessity of a firehall and tower is most urgent and until we have some suitable building to be used as headquarters for the fire appliances and the brigade, the fire system will not amount to much. Probably $1,000 would be sufficient means to furnish a suitable building where the boys could gather and spend a pleasant hour and where in the tower the hose could be hung to dry. The latter feature is one often lost sight of. We can never feel certain that our hose is in good shape when there is no suitable place to treat it after using. Now $1,000 is not a large sum to raise in Fernie, and while the hat system is a rude apology for municipal government it is better than to sit idle under the shadow of a great conflagration. I have no hesitancy in saying that $1,000 in cash can be raised by subscription in a single day's canvas if the right man takes it in hand.

With suitable appliances, a building as outlined and a band of young enthusiastic volunteers Fernie would not stand in the great danger it does to-day of being wiped out by fire.

MY HEART'S DARLING

BY W. HEIMBURG.

Lucie brought over a handsome portfolio and took out one after another.

"Ah, how lovely it must be there!" she cried, showing one of the pictures.

"That is Capri; it looks dull here; the light, the coloring, the glorious clear air, all are wanting. I wish I could describe it to you, or, still better, show you—it is wonderful.

"I shall never see it," said Lucie, sadly, and laid the portfolio aside.

"Why did not the doctor come with you?" asked Hortense.

"He had patients to visit in the country; perhaps he will come for me."

"It is frightful to be so tied down," said Hortense, and poured out the tea. "And for what? People do not thank him."

"It is his profession—his calling," said Lucie, proudly.

"A pity he is in this little town!"

"Perhaps; but the diseases are the same as in a larger town, Hortense."

"But not the people—begging your pardon, Lucie. He is a clever man; he would, for example, soon make himself a practice in Berlin, and be recognized there; now he just stays in this melancholy little hole and offers up his best powers for nothing. What does he gain in the most favorable case? A practice, yes; but he will remain only an average man; his name will never be known. You will both become dissatisfied here."

The girl was silent.

"You must talk to him about it," continued Hortense. "It is really a pity for him."

"I can not do that," Hortense. Alfred never talks to me about those things. And do you know, I believe he has chosen this little town, with its restricted practice, because he wants to marry me, and because we both"—here she hesitated—"are without money."

"You are too shy with him; it would be the best thing for him, Lucie."

Lucie shook her head.

"He ought to know."

Hortense smiled.

"Hush! hush!" she said. "You are the model of the favorite old German idea of a wife. What Jupiter says must be."

"I think it should be so," returned the girl, rather uncertainly.

"Men are all egotists. If you do not take care you will be quite lost."

Lucie stood up, the tears in her eyes.

"Hortense, do not talk so," she begged. "I entreat you—"

Hortense came across the room to her, took her in her arms, and said, hugging and kissing her:

"Forgive me; I do not know any better; perhaps he is an exception."

"My poor Hortense, can you not think otherwise?"

"Never!" said the beautiful woman, coldly. "Never! I have had enough of this so-called happiness. It is only calm, simple natures which have not been disappointed that can believe all this told about love and communion of souls. Love!" she shrugged her shoulders. "Thy lord and master is delighted, of course, that he has found such a good soul, who will recognize it as the ideal of life to see that he always has a good dinner, that will mend his socks and sew on his buttons, and—" A glance at the pale face of the girl made her stop. "I have frightened you, Lucie? Yes, it is one of my bad days to-day. I will not deny it—the day of my mother's death, and of my engagement. A year ago to-day I made one of the greatest, blunders of my life, and allowed myself to be persuaded."

"Poor Hortense! here we are back again on the old theme; let us talk of something else," entreated Lucie.

"Talk!" said the young baroness, throwing herself down in an arm-chair which stood turned away from the window.

Lucie in her embarrassment took refuge in the photographs again. "How beautiful the world must be!" she said at last.

"I wish I could show you everything, Lucie," repeated Hortense. "I would not care to see it again alone; but with you—"

Lucie had seated herself on the arm of the chair, and had thrown her arm around her. "Tell me about it," she begged. And Hortense told of the green Swiss Lakes, of the mountains covered with eternal snow, of sunny Italy, of the blue Mediterranean, and of moonlight nights in Venice. Lucie had clasped her hands together and breathed quickly, her cheeks glowed, and her rosy lips were a little open, she sat there like a child listening to a fairy-tale. She listened in this way for hours.

While they were talking Hortense got up and brought in a little Russia-leather chest, out of which she took all sorts of things. The dried Alpine roses she had picked on the Rigi; the edelweiss came from the Bernina Pass—an Englishman had given them to her; that dagger she had picked up in Florence; the mask was one she had worn during the Carnival at Rome; the little gold-embroidered shoes she had bought in Constantinople in a bazar, and that lava brooch in Naples.

ESKIMO COURTSHIP.

How the Native Selects a Bride—The Marriage Ceremony.

The Eskimo gentleman never selects a wife in his own village. As soon as he is able to make a living for a family he goes into a neighboring village and falls in a fit of love before some likely girl. She is then penned up for some time in a house—a sort of dugout or burrow in the ground—and when the bride day comes he goes there and crawls in. It is in the play that the bride to be shall so strenuously object that she fights him off. He then goes out and gets his dogs and sled, and when they are harnessed up he goes in again, overcomes her, ties her hands and feet, places her on the sled and hauls her to his own village. That completes the ceremony of marriage. The whole village gives them a wedding feast. Next day, or later on, if they don't forget it, they go before a minister of the gospel and are married in due form. This feature of the union, however, is not important and does not bother them very much.

The dressing of the bride's hair is a revelation. It is done up in a series of knots about a foot high on top of her head and pulled so tightly from the scalp that very often big patches of it are fairly pulled out by the roots, leaving bald and barren places around the ears and the temples.

An Intelligent Dog.

A gentleman once had a very handsome and intelligent collie in his possession. One day he lost the dog when taking it through the city. The creature in vain searched everywhere for his master and at last, seeing a hansom cab creeping leisurely along, jumped into it and settled himself determinedly on the seat. The driver tried to entice it out, but without success, and a little crowd collected. None dared to tackle the dog, but at last a facetious spectator shouted out, "I say, Bill, darn me if he don't want to be druv home." "That's it; that's what he wants," they all agreed amid shouts of laughter. Then one examined his collar and found an address clearly engraved upon it. Without further ado cabby jumped up and drove up to this same address, which proved to be the correct one. Needless to say, the cabman was substantially rewarded. The dog had been in the habit of driving home every evening with his master in a hansom and, with doggie reasoning, had decided to follow his usual custom when he had given up hope of finding his master.—London Opinion.

Dr. Jowett and Bible History.

The following story of Dr. Jowett was current among the undergraduates at Oxford in my day. It had reached the master's ears that Balliol men were not so successful in the examination in "Rudiments of Religion" as in the classical schools, so that he determined to call up the next batch of candidates and catechise them himself in Bible history. "Mr. Smith," he is reported to have said, "what prophet went up to heaven in a chariot of fire?" "Elijah, sir." "It is disgraceful that a scholar of this college should be so ignorant! Mr. Jones?" "Elijah, sir." "Mr. Brown?" "Elijah, sir." At this point the library boy entered, and to strike the undergraduates with shame he was appealed to. "Tell these gentlemen what prophet went up to heaven in a chariot of fire." "Elijah, sir." Then ensued a pause and then, "Well, gentlemen, perhaps it was Elijah!"

Butchers Who Swap Meats.

A housekeeper who went to live on the far east side of New York asked a butcher why she couldn't get from him the best cuts of meat. His shop was in Second avenue, above Thirty-fourth street. The housekeeper, although she was economical, occasionally wanted a fine steak or a choice piece of other meat for a special occasion. She learned that while the butcher bought a whole ox he did not keep the best parts of it.

"Every day," he said, "I send the best meats I buy to the shops farther west. The butchers over there buy it from me, and I get from them the cheaper cuts, for which they have no use. We have a regular system of exchange."

A Little Too Much.

"A wife has a right to expect much of her husband," remarked the philosophically inclined person musingly.

"Yes, I suppose she has," replied the meek appearing man with wilted looking whiskers; "I suppose she has, but when she expects him to live up, steadily and without swerving, to the motto on her first husband's tombstone I somehow think she is expecting more than she really ought to expect from a common, everyday, earthly man."

Qualified.

"Yes, he's sure to make a grand president for the college. He's had so much experience."

"I didn't know he was a prominent educator."

"He isn't. He was an insurance agent, and he can coax money out of a stone wall."

Desperate.

Doctor—To remove your mother-in-law in her present condition to the hospital would, I am afraid, prove fatal.

Henripeck—Well, let's try it anyway.

Inane Verbosity.

"Don't you think that Mrs. Chatson is quite a brilliant conversationalist?

"Oh, quite! She can express less in more words than any one I ever met."

Such is the flexibility of our language that a noble brute may be either a thoroughbred St. Bernard or a rascally foreign fortune seeker.—Washington Times.

A REMARKABLE SHOT.

Fired In the Dark. It Injured Three Men Half a Mile Away.

"One of the best and most remarkable shots made during the war with Spain," said a gentleman who made an effort to get into the thick of the fight, "was, in my judgment, made at Miami, and the man who fired the shot was a Louisiana boy and a member of my company. He was doing duty as a provost guard at the time. It was late at night when the soldiers were roused by the quick, clear crack of a Krag-Jorgensen on the outskirts of the camp. No particular attention was paid to the matter at first, as only one shot was fired. But with a couple of officers we went out to where the guard was stationed in order to find out just why it was that he had fired at that time of night. He explained that he had seen a man slipping through the bushes some distance away and had called on him to halt. He failed to obey the command, and the guard blazed away at him, more to frighten him into a stop than anything else. Of course, the fellow never halted He was probably too badly frightened to stop at that time.

"While we were talking to the guard we heard a fearful noise at least half a mile from the guard's station, and we made a break for the place to see what the matter was. We heard several people screaming as if in great agony. Down the road we went at full speed, and in a short while we came upon a little cabin which stood on the roadside. The noise was in this cabin, and I never heard such groaning and wailing in my life. We found three men in the house. They were in great agony, and we asked them what was the matter. 'We have been shot,' they said, and sure enough they had been shot.

"One was shot in the right arm, another in the back and the third in the hip. They had all been wounded by the same bullet. The man who was wounded in the arm was lying on his right side. The ball passed through his arm. Next to him one of his companions was sprawling out on his back, and the bullet split the hide on this part of his anatomy as smoothly as a knife. Then it passed through the fleshy part of the third man's hip and sped on.

"We could not find the ball. It had passed through the side of the house, wounded the three men in the way indicated, bored through the wall on the opposite side and kept on going. Now, that cabin was fully half a mile from the point where the guard was stationed, and yet the shot he fired had wrought all the havoc we found."

The Profitable Sausage.

For the amount of meat used the sausage is the most profitable legacy of the hog. Fully fifty different kinds of this suspected article are manufactured to suit the taste of many peoples—for Italians, with a dominating measure of garlic; for Germans, hard and fatty; for Frenchmen, dry and well larded; for Americans, well spiced, and all of these in several grades. Whatever meat cannot be used otherwise is consigned to the sausage, although for no other reason than that every diminutive piece is available—ham, head and foot trimmings and the odd remnants from the butcher's block. Potato, flour, spices and water are mixed with the meat, which has been finely chopped by rocking knives, and a steam driven piston forces the mass into the casings, whereupon it becomes sausage. The casings are the intestines of the hog, thoroughly scraped and washed by mechanical process. The pig's snout does not escape—that would be a gross oversight—so it is trimmed off and sold as a pickling "delicacy" to new Americans with unpronounceable names.

Sings the bard in a ballad of sorrow.
While the songs that are driving our sleep away
Are the songs of today and tomorrow.

ANATOMICAL.

Each ear has four bones.

The body has about 500 muscles.

The lower limbs contain thirty bones each.

There are 25,000 pores in the hand of a man.

Man is the only animal that possesses a real nose and chin.

The human skeleton, exclusive of teeth, consists of 208 bones.

The eight muscles of the human jaw exert a force of about 500 pounds.

The wrist contains eight bones, the palm five, the fingers have fourteen.

The smallest bone in the human body is in the lenticular, which is seated in the ear.

The work performed by the human heart each twenty-four hours is equal to the lifting of 129 tons to a height of one foot in the same length of time.

Discovery of Purple.

A dog belonging to Hercules Tyrius was one day walking along the seashore when he found and ate a murex, a species of shellfish. Returning to his master, the latter noticed that the dog's lips were tinged with color, and in this manner Tyrian purple was discovered. The color was used in the robes of emperors and nobles, and the expression "born to the purple" meant that the person was of high birth. It is strange to think that the favorite color of royalty can be traced to the curiosity or hunger of the dog of Tyre.

Quaint Court Records.

Among the treasures of the Philadelphia Historical society is the complete record of the "Court Held at Uppland in Delowar River From 1676 to 1681." This was the court conducted by the Swedes, Dutch and English previous to the granting of the state to Penn and previous to its being named Pennsylvania. The record is quaint. One entry is of "Jan Cornellisen of Amesland, complaining to ye court that his son Erik is bereft of his naturall sences and is turned quyt madd;" whereupon it was ordered that "three or 4 persons bee hired to build a little Blockhouse at Amesland for to put in the sd. madman." In the suit of Andries Inckhooren against Constable Andries Homman it appears from the record that:

"The Plt. complains that this Deft. hath pulled him by the Beard and twisted his neck, and desires to know ye reason."

On Oct. 16, 1680, Claes Clam winning an action for slander against Hans Peterss, the punishment meted out to Peterss was that:

"The Deft. not being able to prove what he hath said or any part thereof, the Court ordered that ye Deft. openly shall declare himself a Lyar."

Bet on a Sure Thing.

A broker, telling stories of men in Wall street, said: "Some years ago Jakey Field won pocket money for a week on a fly. He took a fly which had been captured by a piece of sticky paper and transferred it to the ceiling of his office. The fly could not have moved without tearing off its legs. Field leaned back in his chair and watched it. Some one came in and found him gazing upward.

"'Saying your prayers, Field?' asked the visitor.

"'Watching that fly,' he answered. 'It hasn't moved for five minutes.' Then after a moment's silence, 'Say, I'll bet you five that fly doesn't move for three minutes.'

"He won the bet and kept on winning others until some one discovered the trick and posted a sign outside the office door which read, 'Don't bet on the fly.'"

The Other View.

Men Who Do and Don't.

Men, after all, are, and always will be, of two kinds—the men who accomplish and the men who don't. The other day there was an important conference at the office of one of the biggest men in American finance. It began early in the morning, and at noon it was not concluded. Promptly at half past 12 the clerks went out to lunch. The financier apologized to one of his stenographers for keeping him ten minutes after the regular hour—indeed, if it had occurred often the stenographer would have indignantly sought another position. He did not, however, apologize to the other seven or eight millionaires who sat about his desk until well after 7 o'clock, with no thought of luncheon or dinner. These men were willing to make the sacrifice which success demands, says the Cosmopolitan. There is no dearth of openings for the man who will fit himself to accomplish. The fact is that the development of business has been more rapid than the development of men, and today there is a greater need of men of the right sort than ever, and every great business is looking for them.

Pumice Stone For Building.

Pumice stone is used for building purposes in the Canary islands, where it is difficult and expensive to procure stone of any other description. The loose cinder dug from the sides of the volcanic cones is also used for the manufacture of huge blocks of concrete for the harbor works at Las Palmas and Santa Cruz. Pumice stone was originally used for the dome of the mosque of St. Sophia on account of its lightness, but even this proved to be unsafe, and the building has been reconstructed.

In Ceylon the most useful building stone is "cabook," a species of pumice. Scientifically it is known at laterite and occurs in beds lying between basaltic and other lava flows, from the decomposition of which it has resulted. At the foot of Vesuvius there are large building quarries of basaltic lava, and at the same spot, as well as near Rome, a volcanic ash or pumice called "pozzolana" is wrought for the same purpose.

Too Clever For Exclusion.

Thomas B. Reed often related an incident which happened when he first sought to be admitted to the bar. Mr. Reed and a young southerner were before Judge Wallace of the state supreme court to be quizzed on their knowledge of the law. Turning first to the southerner the judge asked abruptly, "Is the civil rights bill constitutional?" "No, sir," replied the young man. Turning to Reed, the judge propounded the same question. "Yes, sir," replied Reed. Whereupon Judge Wallace looked gravely from one to the other before he spoke. "You are both admitted," he finally announced. "Two young men who can handle constitutional questions in an offhand manner like that can't be kept out of the bar."

It Made History.

Such a slight circumstance as a glass of wine changed the history of France for nearly twenty years. Louis Philippe, king of the French, had a son, the Duke of Orleans, and heir to the throne, who always drank only a certain number of glasses of wine, because even one more made him tipsy. On a memorable morning he forgot to count the number of his glasses and took one more than usual. When entering his carriage, he stumbled, frightening the horses and causing them to run. In attempting to leap from the carriage his head struck the pavement, and he soon died. That glass of wine overthrew the Orleans rule, confiscated their property of £20,000,000 and sent the whole family into exile.

Very Awkward.

A young recruit was set on sentry go and was, of course, new to his duty. A good natured comrade brought him a sandwich, and the recruit was about to eat it when the major appeared. As the officer was in mufti the sentry did not recognize him and did not salute. The major took in the situation and asked:

"What's that?"

"A sandwich," replied the recruit. "Have a bit?"

"Do you know who I am?" asked the major.

"Don't know you from a crow. Perhaps you're the major's coachy."

"No; I'm not."

"His groom perhaps?"

"No; try again."

"Perhaps the old chap himself?"

"Right this time," said the major.

"Oh, good gracious!" exclaimed the frightened sentry. "Hold the sandwich while I present arms!"—London Answers.

Applying the Argument.

There are times when one pursues an admirable course of reasoning with a child only to find that it results in his own undoing.

"I don't want to wear my old hat to church," said eight-year-old Gladys, "not even if it does rain. The trimming on that hat is all worn out, mother."

"It's the best thing for you to wear on a day like this," said her mother firmly, "and you must remember that it's the inside and not the outside—what is unseen, not what is seen—that God looks at, my little girl."

"Yes'm," said Gladys eagerly, "I do remember, but the lining of that hat is worn even worse than the trimming is!"—Youth's Companion.

Up to Date.

"Will you walk into my parlor?"
Said the spider to the fly.
"Oh, not today, I thank you, sir;
For that I'm much too fly!"

Effect of a Tropical Climate.

"The laziest fellers I ever see, not barrin' Thompson there even," said the man with the ginger beard, "was down in Central America. Tell you what I see once. I wandered into a little saloon that one of the greasers kep', and what should I see but a lot of fellers settin' round a table with a lot of dice on it and all of 'em watchin' them dice as if they s'pected them to turn over of theirselves, which, sure enough, they did in a minute. Then I got on to their game. You see, about every three or four minutes they is a earthquake in that country, and them lazy half breeds was lettin' the earthquake do the shakin' of the box for 'em. Now, what do you think of that?"

In summer the continuous coil takes up the slack.
In the winter season pays it back.

All fences slacken in warm weather and tighten in cold—except the Page Fence. Page spring coil takes up the slack in summer and lets it out in winter. No loose sagging in summer, no straining or breaking in winter. Common crimped wire is not spring tempered and if it slackens it stays slackened; if it tightens it loosens again worse than ever. Page wire is tempered to regulate its own tension summer and winter. 60,000 miles of Page wire fence in use now.

EASY TO LET A COLD RUN ON.

Until It Develops into Pneumonia or Consumption—Easy to Cure a Cold if You Use

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE.

It is easy to let a cold run on. You may say with others that you always let a cold take care of itself. There is a danger of following this plan once too often. At this season of the year the lungs seem to be unusually susceptible to disease, and before you suspect it pneumonia or consumption has seated itself in your system. It is possible you have tried the cough mixtures which druggists offer to their customers. These may do well enough for slight colds, tickling in the throat, but they are powerless in the presence of serious disease.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is far more than a cough remedy. It cures the cold as well as loosening and easing the cough. It takes the pain out of the bones, and reaches the very seat of disease when there is pain and tightness in the chest. It would not be too much to say that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has saved thousands of people from pneumonia and consumption. There is not a village or hamlet in Canada where this famous family medicine is not recognized as a most unusually effective cure for croup, bronchitis, asthma, coughs and colds.

Mr. Donald Graham, 45 Callendar St., Toronto, states: "My boy, who is six years of age, was developing all the symptoms of pneumonia when we commenced giving him Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. It very quickly checked the advance of disease, and in a few days he was as well as ever, and is now going to school regularly. I have now great faith in this valuable remedy, and shall recommend it to my friends."

Don't take anything said to be "just as good." There is no throat and lung medicine just as good as Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Remember this when buying, and insist on having Dr. Chase's; 25 cents a bottle. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Trouble in the Balkins.

The officials in Paris are not disposed to accept the Porte's assurances that Turkey has no intention of mobilizing a large force of troops. When the Turkish denial was brought to the attention of the officials here, who have access to the government's source of information, the following reply was made:

"We have received similar pacific assurances from Turkish sources, but our own information is positive, and specific, that orders for the mobilization have been actually issued. This was three days ago and we are unable to say whether in view of the effect they have produced among the powers who are seeking to enforce reforms in the Balkans. Our advices further show that the mobilization would effect 240,000 troops."

The French government's policy appears to be shaping on its own advices, without reference to the quieting Turkish assurances.

500 NEW SPECIMENS.

Handsome Gift Made to the Chemical Department of the University of Toronto — A Fine Set of Pure Chemicals.

Through the kindness of friends interested in the chemical manufactures of Great Britain, Prof. Lang of Toronto University has been able to secure a very fine set of specimens of pure chemicals, which are now housed in the chemical laboratory and in daily use for lecture illustration. The specimens include samples of pure salts and metals, of the raw materials used in the most important chemical industries and of the products obtained from them. Messrs. Tyrer & Co., London, give a very fine collection of compounds of mercury, tin, bismuth, phosphorous, copper, zinc and aluminium, along with specimens of the pure metals themselves. Large crystals of the alums and of the native bauxites from which they are made are supplied by the Manchester Alum Works, now the only makers of alum in Great Britain, while Sir James King, Bart., of Campsie, gives two large crystals of yellow and red prussiate of potash, each standing about a foot high. From Mr. George Beilby of the Oakbank Oil Company come specimens of the bituminous shales used first by the late Dr. James Young for the production of naphtha, lighting and lubricating mineral oils and solid paraffin waxes. This collection is particularly interesting as, beginning with the shales themselves, there are to be seen the crude and refined oils of gradually increasing density, the vaselines and waxes, and finally the resulting spent shale. Dr. Ludwig Mond, F.R.S., to whose munificence the capital of the Empire is indebted for the Cavendish Laboratory, sends specimens of soda crystals and other alkali products from the famous Brunner-Mond Works, and the United Alkali Company adds to this collection by the gift of their own alkali and bleaching products with specimens of "black-ash," "Weldon's Mud" and of the materials used at the various stages in the production of soda and of bleaching powder.

"Wickets" of Lead.

The Glasgow Lead and Color Works provide a series of mineral pigments and several "wickets" of lead before and after their conversion into white lead. To Lord Overtoun the laboratory is indebted for a complete series of compounds of chromium, including a magnificent rose or crystal of bichromate of potash, in height about a foot and proportionately broad. This crystal was specially grown for Prof. Lang, and has taken about a year to reach its present size. Messrs. John Broadfoot & Sons send a selection of brass and gun-metal alloys, showing fractures, with the breaking strains and analyses attached. Natural dyewoods and extracts are provided by the British Dyewood and Chemical Company, and an exhaustive collection of coal-tar colors, manufactured at the Elberfeld Works, are, through the kindness of Mr. M. J. Taylor of Toronto, the gift of the Dominion Dyewood and Chemical Company.

Messrs. Allan of the Allan Line very kindly transported these numerous consignments free of charge from England, and their carriage to Toronto was undertaken by the Grand Trunk Railway without further cost. In all, the specimens number well over five hundred and form in themselves a chemical museum of great educational value.

BERT E. COLLYER'S TALE.

Strange Story of an Ancient and Vanished Race by Dawson City Editor.

Mr. Bert E. Collyer, of Dawson City, the editor and proprietor of The Yukon, was in Toronto during the first week of 1903's January, on a holiday trip, which will embrace Florida, the West Indies, and the Holy Land. He states that not only is the gold-producing area being constantly enlarged, but that coal of commercial utility is being mined. At present in Dawson steam heat generated by Yukon coal is being distributed in pipes by a company just as is gas in the City of Toronto. He also alleges that the remains of a prehistoric civilization have also been discovered in the Yukon. It must have been of a very high order, for coins have been unearthed at a depth of over two hundred feet, which indicate great skill and workmanship. These coins have been examined by numismatic experts, who have been utterly unable to decipher the hieroglyphics stamped on them. They have been able to decide, however, that the coins were struck in dies, as our coins of to-day are, and that whoever made them must have been highly skilled workmen, with tools that would indicate an advanced state of civilization. The coins are made of an alloy of gold and bronze. Besides this a coffer dam has been dug up from a great depth almost intact, so that it is evident that the present miners are not the pioneers of the district, but that its gold resources were known and worked in prehistoric ages.

Sir A. L. Douglas, K.C.B.

Vice-Admiral Sir Archibald Lucius Douglas, K.C.B., a native of Quebec, is Commander-in-Chief of the North American and West Indian stations, a part of whose command is now in Venezuelan waters. Sir Archibald was born in 1842, and after completing his education at the Quebec High School, joined the Boscawen, the then flag-ship of the squadron of which he is now the head, at Venezuela, where he is likely to become much more prominent if the present difficulties increase. Sir Archibald became Lieutenant in 1861, Commander in 1872, Captain in 1880, and Vice-Admiral in 1901. He served with the Naval Brigade up the Congo and in Gambia in 1860; was Director of the Japanese Imperial Naval College from 1873 to 1875; Commander-in-Chief of the East Indies 1898-99; was Lord of the Admiralty from 1899 till 1902, and Vice-President of the Ordnance Committee, 1896-98. Sir Archibald was A.D.C. to Queen Victoria from 1893 till 1895.

ARTIST LOSES HIS REASON.

James Kerr is Sent Home to Manitoba From Fergus Falls Aslyum.

A dispatch from St. Paul says: Having won fame as a landscape painter, attaining the high honor of hanging his canvases in the salon at Paris, James Kerr, a Canadian, originally from Toronto, has been sent from the Fergus Falls Insane asylum to the home of his father in Manitoba. Fifteen years ago, even then an artist of promise, a deplorable accident resulted in the amputation of his left leg between the knee and thigh.

The misfortune brought temporary solace in the world of art for adopting the easel and the brush as a means of livelihood Mr. Kerr, then 25 years of age, went abroad, where studying under the best masters, he soon achieved such success as brought him into the front ranks. But his success as an artist was won at the ultimate cost of his reason, and now he is on his way to the Canadian Northwest, there to spend his last days with intellect dethroned, a charge upon his kinsfolk.

Monday night Kerr was found by the mail agent running between Detroit and Pelican rapids, lying in a ditch by the roadside, his crutches beneath him, unconscious and nearly frozen to death.

He is thought to have tried to freeze himself. Examined at Pelican Rapids, where he was taken, the fact was discovered that he was hopelessly insane. He was sent to the Fergus Falls asylum until inquiries could be made as to the whereabouts of his people.

Agent Gales ascertained that Kerr's father and four brothers were living at Franklin, Manitoba, and that they would be willing to care for him.

FINDS STRANGE PEOPLE.

Explorer Tells of Traits of Natives of Fernando Po.

Lieut. Boyd-Alexander, who has just returned to London from the Island of Fernando Po, the Spanish island in the Bight of Biafra, Western Africa, gives an interesting description of the curious inhabitants the practically previously unexplored interior of the island. These are known as "Boobies." Very few of them have ever seen a white man, and they never leave their primitive dwellings in the rocks, except on organized drinking bouts. The race is fast dying out from the effects of rum and palm wine

The natives are mostly quite naked except for a curious straw bonnet. They paint their bodies with colored mud and are unspeakably filthy, for they never wash, but occasionally use a knife to scrape off the surface dirt. They create artificial deformities by tightly enwrapping their limbs.

The Fernando Po natives are exceedingly timid, and when sighted by the whites bolted into the depths of the jungle.

At certain hours each day the villages are quite deserted, every one, including the children, going off on a carouse

The lieutenant adds that although he searched for them assiduously he could find no trace of the burial places of the natives of the island.

ASKED TO CALL A HALT.

Farmers' Association Objects to Further Grants to Railways.

At Ottawa, on Feb. 11 the Farmers' association on its own behalf presented the views of the farmers generally to the premier and the other members of the crown as being against the granting of assistance in any form whatever by the Dominion government either to the Pacific extension of the Grand Trunk or any other railway. The association believes that sufficient has been done in this direction already by the Dominion. The time has now come to call a halt. Public assistance was no longer necessary to this end. Railway building was no longer speculation, it was an ordinary business enterprise. Manitoba last year produced fifty million bushels of wheat, the whole Northwest will next year produce one hundred million bushels. Something like 30,000 American settlers had gone into the Northwest last year. Three times that many are expected during the coming season. A railway through that country should, therefore, be a paying enterprise and there was no justification for the granting of subsidies as in years past.

"Not another dollar of public money for private interest," voices the sentiment of the Farmers' association, and, it believes, the voices of the farming population of Canada.

All news agents on the western divisions of the C. P. R. have been dismissed, and will be replaced by eastern men.

The postmasters of Manitoba met in Winnipeg on Feb. 11, and discussed grievances, organizing an association to secure more pay.

HOUSE IS OPENED

FOURTH SESSION TENTH LEGISLATURE.

Lieutenant-Governor McMillan Reads the Speech From The Throne—Which Contains Little of Startling Interest—Ladies Were Present at Opening.

The fourth session of the tenth legislature of the Province of Manitoba was formally opened on Feb. 12 by the lieutenant-governor, Sir Daniel McMillan. There was the usual large crowd present at the opening, and the ladies were very much in evidence, the wives of the ministers and members of the house occupying seats on the floor of the chamber directly in front of the speaker's throne.

When the usual formalities had been observed, the following speech from the throne was read by his honor:—

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

I cordially welcome you to the fourth session of the tenth legislature of this province.

I am pleased to remind you that, since you met last year, His Majesty King Edward the Seventh has been happily crowned as King of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Dominion beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

In common with all the people of this province, and all our fellow subjects throughodt the British Empire, we endured intense sorrow and anxiety during His Majesty's illness, which caused a necessary postponement of the coronation ceremonies. The suffering of His Majesty, however, brought forth from every part of the province, and from all quarters of the empire, the indubitable proofs, if any were needed, of the deep, heartfelt loyalty and affection cherished by all classes of the people for our beloved sovereign and royal family. I am sure we are all truly thankful that a kind Providence mercifully spared His Majesty, and that the hearty manifestations of affection and loyalty exhibited towards our Sovereign at the coronation of Their Majesties in August last, demonstrated to the world how deeply rooted in the hearts of the British people everywhere is the love of that united British empire over which King Edward the Seventh now powerfully and peacefully reigns.

I also note with great satisfaction that peace has been declared in South Africa; we are encouraged to look forward to a speedy and a harmonious unification of all the conflicting elements of that colony, in which our Canadian troops suffered heroically and fought triumphantly in maintaining the cause of the empire.

With thankfulness I call your attention to the fact that the province has enjoyed continued prosperity during the past year, and an abundant harvest, through the blessing of God, has been vouchsafed to us, which has attracted the attention of the world, and has been a source of wealth, not only to our province, but to our Dominion

I have noticed with much pleasure the increased interest manifested by Britain, Europe, and America in Manitoba as a place for immigration. This no doubt, is due in a great measure to the export of a large surplus of wheat and other grain from this province during this season, and to the exertions of my government in making known to the world the advantages of Manitoba as a place for settlement.

My government have decided to recommend to you the establishment of an agricultural college, whose special object will be the development of those industries that will promote the interests of the farmers and stock-raisers of the province.

During the past year the federal government have paid over to the province the interest derived from the sale of school lands. The increased revenue thus derived will enable my government to provide such additional facilities as will increase the efficiency of our educational systemf

My government intend to press upon the Dominion government the necessity of obtaining the absolute transference, for administration by this province, of all its unsold school lands.

It is with regret that I announce that the federal government refuse to rectify their retroactive legislation in the reduction of interest, to five per cent. upon the unpaid purchase money secured under executed agreements for sale, bearing six per cent., without consultation with the province, to our detriment, and against our wishes. The federal government being trustees for this province in regard to this matter, my government have presented a claim for the loss caused by this reduction of interest, and you will be asked to endorse their action in that respect and convince the federal authorities that their action in refusing to grant our request does not meet with your approval.

The much needed consolidation of the statutes has been proceeded with by the commissioners, and their report will be presented to you, and effect given to it by an act embodying its results; and I feel confident that this consolidation will be of great benefit to the legal procedure and the general business of the province.

Acts will be submitted to amend "The Joint Stock Companies Act," and "The King's Bench Act," and your judgment will be asked upon other measures of public importance

The public accounts for the past year, and the estimates for the current year, will shortly be submitted to you, and you will find that the estimates of expenditure have been prepared with a due regard to economy and the requirements of progress.

I leave you to the consideration of the business that may require your attention, in the fullest confidence that your deliberations will be conducted with a single desire to advance the best interests of the province.

Following the reading of the speech his honor withdrew, when the floor of the chamber was cleared and the sergeant-at-arms placed the mace upon the table. Some formal notices of bills were given, and the house adjourned until Monday evening.

The C. P. R. will build an air line from Beausejour to Marquette or Reaburn, passing St. Andrews Rapids, to relieve the congestion in the Winnipeg yards.

The miners at Morrissey, Michel and Fernie, B.C., went out on strike on Feb, 12, and all the coal mines are tied up. It is understood that the chief grievance is the scale of wages paid at Morrissey. The price paid there is forty cents per ton, while at Coal Creek the miners are paid 60 cents. At Coal Creek there are 138 employees, at Morrissey 564 and at Michel 372.

A wireless telegraph station is being erected at Point Hill, on the shore of Hamilton bay, for experimental purposes, the other station being at Toronto. The contract has been let for a tower 180 feet high, and a building for the plant has been secured.

Magistrate Denison sent William Birchall to jail for twenty days on Feb. 12 for stealing silverware from the Grand Union hotel, Toronto. Birchall is general utility man in Mrs. Patrick Campbell's company, and claimed to have taken the stuff off the table as souvenirs. In his trunk was found property of many hotels in New York and alsewhere. Col. Denison's reference to the practice of thieves going through the country stealing stuff from hotels was particularly severe.

The Glut of Railway Traffic.

The railway blockade in the United States is causing great inconveniere and loss to shippers who have contracts to fill. The Baltimore Sun points out that the dealers of that city have legitimate cause for complaint, their reasonable expectations being befeated by the extraordinary state of affairs. The Pennsylvania, the Baltimore & Ohio, Louisville & Nashville and Chicago, Burlington & Quincy are among the great systems that confess themselves practicaly unable to handle the business offered them. East-bound traffic suffers chiefly from this deficiency of transportation facilities, but westbound freight is also closely pressed for room. The essence of the trouble is a shortage of locomotives, though want of cars is also complained of.

Other centres of commerce are in the same, if not a worst plight than Baltimore. In fact, the blockade seems to be general across the line

The remedy, the Baltimore paper says, is not very obvious. The railroads should have more cars, and, above all, more locomotives. The supply is evidently inadequate. But they say for themselves that their rolling stock has been increased at an unprecedented rate in the last two years, and would now be amply sufficient but for the exceptional circumstances. They have spent vast sums out of current earnings for locomotives and cars, and must keep within their means The present exceptional prosperity was expected to end a year ago. The concurrence of a coal lamine and general prosperity could not have been reasonably anticipated.

There has been a congestion in Canada, too, but it is some satisfaction to know that the Canadian roads have grappled with the difficult problem in a way to produce much better results than have those in the United States. It may be only a melancholy consolation to learn that one is not so badly off as his neighbors, but it is some satisfaction, in the light of the happenings across the border, to know that the glut here might have been worse than it is.—Montreal Sun.

MURDER AT ST. EUSTACHE.

Leading Citizen of a Quebec Town Meets Death By Violence.

A dispatch says. For the first time since the memorable days of 1837, St. Austache bows before the weight of a death by violence. At some hour between noon Thursday and 9 o'clock on Friday Antoine Seguin was apparently murdered in the foulest manner possible to conceive.

The murdered man lived with his brother-in-law and his half-sister, Theophile Belanger and his wife. Their home was a happy one in every sense of the term. Mr. Seguin was devoted to his sister and her children, and it was one of his boasts that the little ones were neverso happy as when they were with him.

Mr. Seguin, as far as now known, went along to his solitary barn, and in that barn the assassin awaited his coming and killed him without a moment's warning The shot which killed him was evidently fired at close range, for his beard was singed. The victim was widely known, and was popular in this district.

A CROOKED PALMIST.

Swindles a Subject Out of $450 and Commits Suicide When Arrested.

A dispatch from St John, N. B., says: Paul Grey, palmist and clairvoyant, Regent street, left the city suddenly Saturday evening, taking with him $450 which Victor Dikeman, a draughtsman in the McAvity & Sons brass foundry here, says he was buncoed out of by Grey.

Dikeman informed the police, and telegrams were sent to Vanceboro to arrest Grey. The reply came through that he was caught, and later another telegram was received that he committed suicide by cutting his throat.

Grey came here in December and had been doing a big business. Among his clients last week was Victor Dikeman, who he told was to come into a big fortune, but that it was necessary to procure a large amount of money to assist in tracing the fortune. Dikeman brought $450 and on Saturday the money was put through a process by Grey and the package wrapped in silk, which Dikeman was told contained his money, was handed back to him with the advice to keep it intact till Tuesday and then return it to Grey.

Dikeman after he left Grey became anxious and opened the package, finding some brown paper.

The Egyptian government, seconded by the British motorist enthusasts on the Cairo staff, has successfully completed a series of experiments in desert travelling by motor. A desert motor-wagon conveying a half company, consisting of forty soldiers, at Abbassieh, spun down the Suez road, negotiating the rough passage in fine style. On getting into the desert the real trial began. Where the sand was fairly firm good running was made. The wagon was fitted with tires having broad flanges which gripped well and drove the machine onward. Where the sand very loose the going was difficult, the wheels occasionally churning sand without progressing, and making it necessary for the "Gipies" to get out and give a friendly push. This fault will be removed by the use of broader tires.

Hill-climbing experiments were made in Cairo, and a wagon carrying freight equal to three tons covered the great citadel hill in fourteen minutes without a stop. The representatives of the ministry and the army were well satisfied with the general efficiency of the wagon for transporting troops, and a report is being made upon it by Miralai Peake Bey, C.M.G. Trial was also made of a desert transport wagon for camel [illegible] or motor traction. The Arab population were amazed at the work of the motors.

H. L. Watts, who formerly occupied the pulpit of the Anglican church in Virden, and was the first rector of that parish, is reported to have become enamored of a pretty New York actress, and to have deserted his wife and family and clerical calling for his enchantress. He will seek divorce from his present wife and will in future appear before the footlights instead of in the pulpit.

CARNIVAL AT ROSSLAND.

Crow's Nest Hockey Team brings back Medals and a Beautiful Cup.

The carnival at Rossland last week is reported by all who attended from this district to have been a great success. The weather was perfect, the different contests were keen and the crowd attending was large and appreciative.

In hockey, the team gathered up by Mr. Schofield from the Crow's Nest district clearly proved their superiority over all the other teams present by defeating Nelson, the winner of the league cup. Nelson defeated Grand Forks 5-4, Sandon 4-3, and Rossland 3-1.

The final game, that between the champion Nelson team and the Crow's Nest aggregation, was played on Saturday evening. The Rossland Miner has the following to say of the game. The readers will do well to substitute "Crows' Nest district" for "Pincher Creek."

"Pincher Creek had an easy time last night defeating the battered Nelson team. Nelson was sore to a man, the effects of the Rossland contest not wearing off as rapidly as anticipated. With a couple of the men wearing bandages they went on the ice confident of defeating the prairie team, but Pincher Creek's splendid combination play proved a factor hard to beat. The score at the end of the match was Pincher Creek 9, Nelson 3. Pincher Creek could have made the score much larger if there had been any need.

The game began with Pincher Creek on the offensive, like every team that has so far gone up against the Nelsons. The puck, as in the Rossland game, was kept continually in the territory of the Nelsons. For a while the Nelson defense held before the persistent attacks of the prairie boys, but the strain proved too much and Nelson gave ground. From that time until the finish it was one long sweeping combination of red and white of Pincher Creek and goal shots from every corner of the rink. The men from Pincher Creek were accurate in their shots and had a combination play that was worthy of all admiration. The game was not as rough as the afternoon contest, the Nelsons being too weak to indulge in much of that kind of work, and Pincher Creek not caring to take the trouble."

The teams lined up as follows:

Pincher Creek		Nelson
Sharp	goal	Bishop
Turnbull	point	Archibald
A. Gunn	cover point	Jeffs
J Moore	rover	Hacker
C Turnbull	centre	Baker
M Kastner	right wing	Perrier
Wm Fair	left wing	Thompson

The Crow's Nesters were each presented with a handsome medal and ex-Gov. McIntosh, of Rossland, gave them a cup even prettier and more valuable than that won by the Nelson team. This cup will be played for annually by the Crow's Nest league and will be held at present by Pincher Creek.

The Nelson News in speaking of the game does not admit that the Nelson team is inferior to the Crow's Nest aggregation, but states that the former were in no condition to play. This is generally conceded by the victorious team, but it is not true as stated in the News that they refused to stop off at Nelson and play another game on Monday. As a matter of fact we understand the Nelsonists distinctly refused to agree to this proposal.

The Nelson-Rossland people are now discussing a proposition to raise an aggregation from the Kootenay clubs to play the Crow's Nest team. It is proposed that the game be played for $1,000 a side, that Nelson furnish 3 men and $250, Rossland two men and $250 and Sandon and Grand Forks the balance of men and money. This at least is a fair admission that no one team in that district can stand up against the Crows Nesters.

THE FALLEN ANGELS.

Last Night at the Rink—Hockey Match and Races.

The Hockey Match between a picked team and the Angels' Rest resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 5 goals to 3. The team were fairly evenly matched; the goals were scored alternately until the last when the Angels somehow missed their turn. The game was refereed by D. Lafortune. The teams were:—

Picked team		Angels Rest
McLean	goal	Mathieson
Poole	point	Laidley
Farquharson	C. point	Thomson
Rhodes	forwards	Ziegler
Jarman		Wallace
Bell		Taylor
Bean		Liphardt

The mile championshlp race in which entered Ziegler, Wallace, McKellar and Hagley was an easy victory for McKellar, all the others dropping out before it was completed.

The race open to all others was won by Rupert Dunlop, the smallest of the bunch of starters. The obstacle race with barrels to crawl through and a canvas to creep under furnished considerable amusement, it was won by C. Eschwig. The three legged race proved a mystery to one pair of urchins and their funny antics were the cause of much laughter.

A glove contest between Jack Slavin and Jas. Burrows will take place on Tuesday evening next.

Miners Contradict Company's Statement. Few New Developments in the Strike Situation.

The strike situation is unchanged. Deputy Minister King has been busy during the week securing all available facts in connection with the trouble and President Dougherty has also been here all week doing everthing in his power to effect a settlement. The latter stated this morning that if the Company and the representatives of the men would get together he had no doubt that a satisfactory settlement could soon be arrived at. He had advised the men to split up the district union executive into three bodies and to interview the management on behalf of their respective local unions, after which, failing to come to an agreement Mr. Tonkin was pledged to meet the District union, but this had been voted down by the local unions. He believed that Mr. Tonkin had made a concession in offering to meet the men on this ground. Mr. Dougherty when asked if he had found the Company's net-earning figures correct stated that he had, with the exception of deductions for powder and smithing which had not been made.

MR. KING INTERVIEWED.

Mr. King when interviewed yesterday afternoon stated he had gone fully into the grievances presented to him by the miners and that he had also gone over these grievances with Mr. Stockett on behalf of the Company. He had been to Michel to secure further facts in connection with the matter. The result of the investigation was being fully reported to the Minister of Labor at Ottawa and he was not in a position to make that report public or to express an opinion on the strike situation.

Mr. King stated that he had been met most cordially on the part of Mr. Stockett and the representatives of the Western Federation of Miners. All desired information had been cheerfully supplied by both parties and he had had free access to the Company's books.

Mr. King when asked the object of his mission replied that under the Conciliatory Act of 1900 the government was empowered to investigate labor troubles either at the request of either parties or when deemed necessary for the general good of the country. He had under this Act investigated about twenty strikes and similar difficulties. He was here simply to investigate the trouble with a view to assisting the opposing parties to an amicable settlement.

"What do you regard as the chief obstacle to an immediate settlement of our strike?" Mr. King replied, "the unwillingness of either party to meet the other excepting under conditions which were stipulated by them on the start, appears to me to be the great difficulty."

Mr. King stated that he would like to meet Mr. Tonkin but was not able to remain longer than Saturday in Fernie on account of his pressing duties at Ottawa. As editor of The Labor Gazette he was required at his post very soon. The report of his investigation would be published in full in that journal.

To the Editor.

In last weeks issue there appeared a wage scale supposed to have been earned by the employees of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. during the last few months. A more barefaced, deceptive, cunning piece of jugglery with figures it is seldom our privilege to see. After an investigation of numerous statements we find that the Coal Co. method of book keeping is not infallible as a copy of some of the statements will prove. Again, through these statements, we find that the Coal Co. is not above trying to buy the officers of our union if they could, in fact, we consider they have tried and failed. Now we do not make statements we are not prepared to prove and to do this let us look at the following lists of wages:—

J. Ballusky worked 18 shifts, earning $173.20. He had the following backhands:—

M. Kovalik	27 days	@ $2.50.....	$67.50
H. Smith	5 "	" "	12.00
G. Erison	1 "	" "	2.50
J. Teman	7 "	" "	17.50

Total for backhand labor $100.00

Now this man had nothing stopped out of his earnings to pay these men. Had their earnings been deducted from his net earnings there would have been a remainder of $73.20 for his 18 shifts instead of $173.20 as given by the company due bill.

Wm. Murray worked 20 shifts, earning $143.65. Now $51.30 of this amount is given as consideration for which nothing is shown. He employed three backhands for 20 days each at $2.50 per day making a total for backhand labor of $150. Take $150 from $143.65 and poor Murray is in debt to the backhands to the amount of $6.35 after working 20 days for nothing. But this would not do to put before the public so the company generously deduct $33.20 to pay for 60 days work instead of $150. For what purpose this is done we cannot tell.

Phil Christopher worked 16 shifts:

To mining 113 tons @ 40c. per ton	$45.20
To 13⅓ yds. entry @ $2 per yd....	26.65
To 3 days company work @ $3.....	9.00
Total earning.....	$80.85

The company give a total $102.85. What is that $22 given to Christopher for? Again the company deducts $39.00 for backhand labor instead of $60. Why was not the full backhand earnings stopped from Christopher? $60 for $80.85 leaves $20.85, pay 50 cents for smithing leaves $20.35 for 16 shifts, or an average of $1.27 per shift.—A magnificent sum for the dangerous occupation of coal miner.

John Spok worked 9 days in No. 3 mine earning $20.40. $22.50 the company deducted for backhand labor so for the privilege of working for the C. N. P. Coal Co. nine days he paid them $2.10. In fact to pay these backhands their proper days compensation he started on company work in preference to digging coal.

Question: Have the contract men room for kicking?

The men whom the company call pushers are actually engaged in loading coal for miners. They are paid by the company right along and have been paid by them ever since the miners have been working under the protested wage list. We know by experience that as soon as the men would accept this scale of 40 cts. per ton that they would be required to pay all backhands themselves according to the usual custom. There are several reasons why the company have given these miners so much help. It may have been that they wanted to make a big average wage for the miners to get them to accept the wage offered or it may have been to bribe them to work away contented and not to trouble about their less favored fellows, for they undoubtedly would not leave these men to work as pushers and loaders as soon as the price of 40 cents per ton was established. It has come as a revelation to the miners of this valley that the company are in the business as philanthropists; if not why are these men's wages (loaders and pushers) not deducted from the miner's due bill?

Why did they not deduct $100 from Ballusky's pay and give it to the back hands? Why did they not deduct $150 from Murray's $143.65 and leave him $6.35 in the hole. Why did they pay Christopher $22 more than he had earned and why did they deduct $39 for back hand labor instead of $60 and pay the difference themselves, for Christopher's backhand statement showed that he received $60. Again, why was the backhand's wages deducted from J. Spok? In 9 days he earned $20.40 and $22.50 was deducted for backhands. How was it that he was not to enjoy the same privilege as others? Was it because he was not able to put his trouble into good hands or was it because he was not occupying any prominent position in the local union and therefore they did not consider that it was worth the expense to bribe him into quietness? This question we leave to the public decision.

Well Mr. Editor figures do talk don't they? The miners of the C. N. P. C. Co. are certainly a well paid body of men. Indeed they earn much smaller wages than supposed before this investigation was made. The statements prove conclusively that the net earnings do not show all reasonable deductions since in many cases no backhand labor is deducted at all. On the point of wages we believe the contract men have just room for kicking, and we cannot see how we materially weaken our cause by raising this question. The miners at Morrissey were always likely to earn high wages under the objectionable rate for the reasons shown. No greedy coal miner expects a larger average than $4.50 for 8 hours work. As long as the management ignore the union and refuse their officers audience misunderstandings will never be cleared up. The secry. of Gladstone Union and also of the District board has asked time after time for an audience and were invariably refused.

Mr. Dougherty has not satisfied himself as to the accuracy of the net earnings in the company's book because he was deceived as the public were by Mr. Tonkin's figures in your last issue. The union officials however have not been idle for the past week. With much labor the January statements have been collected in the three camps and in order to save space the results have been boiled down. The officials of the union will take an affidavit as to their accuracy before Mr. Tonkin himself. Again you seem to believe that only contract miners are kicking about the wages. This is not the case, but all company men, all outside men and all coke oven men as well. The accompanying list of wages show how these men are paid. In many instances the wage would not be sufficient for a man to live in an eastern town much less in the west.

Taking 73 of the Fernie miners' due bills for January after smithing and blasting expenses are deducted we find that 11 men earn $100 and over, 22 earn under $100 and over $75, 14 earn under $75 and over $60, 25 earn under $60.

The following is the list of 130 men employed in the Fernie mines at company work, such as shiftmen, trackmen, rope riders, drivers, brattice men, couplers, switch boys, etc.

These are only Fernie prices and at Morrissey and Michel they are even lower. We regret that we have not been able to get the due bills from these places in time for the Press as it would have shown just how much lower they are than here. However we are safe in saying that they are below a fair living wage, and that they should be raised to Fernie rates is only just. In the interview with the Press representative Mr. Tonkin states that the timber trouble was settled as soon as landings were made and that the men are having no more trouble about lack of timber. We say the timber trouble was not settled and the men did have trouble for lack of timber right up to the time they came out. Those 4 men spoken of last week were dismissed for trying to get some redress to the timber trouble and for coming out of the mines for want of it. Indeed several other men on different occasions were told by the overman, that if they went out for the want of timber they would be dismissed. Further Mr. Tonkin states that he was always willing to meet the committee of the local unions. Well the local committee did meet him often, and stated their greivences but could get no redress. So at last to stop further encroachments they had to place the whole of their troubles before the district board. The trouble with the butting system is that under that system the Company do not pay enough to give the miner a good wage and allow him to pay a helper as he should be paid. It forces the helper to work for a lower wage than the general rate of the country. In all the West the government price for outside labor is $2.50 and in quartz mines the muckers get $3. per day yet these men are expected to work in the hazardous calling of coal mining for $2.50 when they are working for a miner, and for $2.25 when they are working as helpers for the Company at Michel. These are the complete facts of the case as taken by the Press Committee after going through all the due-bills that could be got, and we think it answers the question "Are the men of the Crow's Nest Valley well paid?"

PRESS COMMITTEE.

The following correspondence took place between Mr. King and the Union:

Fernie, Feb. 27, '03.

Fernie, B.C., Feb. 26. 1903

Dear Sir: In reply to a communication sent by me to the General Superintendent of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., in reference to the present strike of the company's employees, and asking for a statement setting forth the company's attitude towards its employees, I have today received a communication from the General Superintendent of the company, in which, among other things, the General Superintendent says: "The company has not at any time declined, nor does it now decline to discuss with the employees, or a committee of its employees, the grievances which may, or which may seem to exist at that mine, and if the employees of any mine have a grievance we shall be glad to receive a committee of them at any time to discuss the matter with them, and endeavor to rectify the same." Elsewhere in his communication the General Superintendent says: "The men ceased work without any notification or presentation of grievances to the company, nor up to this writing have we received any notification from its employees that grievances exist."

In my communication to the General Superintendent asking for a written statement, setting forth the company's attitude towards its employees, I mentioned that I was asking for this statement that there might be a perfectly clear understanding as to the attitude of both parties, and that I might communicate the facts contained in the company's statement to the committee managing the present strike, with a view to ascertaining definitely the attitude which they intended to assume. I have, therefore, to respectfully request that your committee would inform me at its earliest convenience of the attitude of the employees towards the company, and that in this particular connection you be kind enough to state clearly: (1) what explanation the committee has to give as to the company's statement that the men ceased work without any notification or presentation of grievances to the company, and that up to today no notification from its employees that grievances exist has been received by the company; and (2) what attitude the employees at present on strike intend to assume towards the offer of the company to receive a committee of the employees at any mine to discuss with them any grievances which may or may seem to exist at the mine.

Yours faithfully.
W. L. Mackenzie King,
Deputy Minister of Labour.

J. T. Davis, Esq.,
Sec. District Union, No. 7, W. F. of M.

Fernie, B.C., Feb. 27th, 1903.

W. L. Mackenzie King, Esq.,
Deputy Minister of Labour,

Dear Sir: Replying to yours of the 26th inst., I would say, that prior to the strike the Secretary of the District Union wns instructed to write Mr. Tonkin requesting an interview. This communication remains unanswered. After waiting a reasonable length of time a committee from this union waited on Mr. Tonkin for the purpose of ascertaining when it would be convenient for him to have a meeting with the members of this union, the said meeting being for the purpose of presenting our grievances. Mr Tonkin's reply was "I have been conferring with the Gladstone Union two or three times a week and am getting sick and tired meeting committees. I am ready to close the mines down for eight months if necessary."

As you have been already informed a strike was declared at Michel some time in November. While this strike committee was discussing matters with the management, he stated that he had been informed that they (the miners of the three mines) were contemplating the forming of a district union. His exact language was as follows: "Now you fellows are getting down to business, we can meet and discuss matters and form agreements that will last for one, two and three years."

This union was organized for the purpose of doing away with those monthly strikes, as we are of the opinion that we would be better able to handle the situation through an Executive Board consisting of three men from each mine. This Board is ready and willing to meet the management at any time for the purpose of presenting and discussing our grievances.

We admit that the management has not been notified officially of any grievance. He himself is to blame for that. He ignored our communications and refused our committee a hearing.

Very Respectfully Yours,
District Union No. 7, W. F. M.,
Jno. T. Davies,
Secretary.

Fernie, Feb. 27, 1903.

Dear Sir:

I desire to acknowledge receipt of your communication of to-day in reply to mine of yesterday, asking that the committee of District Union No. 7 would inform me of the attitude of the employees towards the company, and in this particular connection what attitude the employees at present on strike intend to assume toward the offer of the company to receive a committee of the employees of any mine to discuss with them any grievances which may or may seem to exist at that mine.

I notice in the reply received to-day that you take up other matters mentioned in my communication, but you do not state definitely the attitude of the employees towards this offer of the company. Doubtless this is an oversight in your reply, and I would therefore be obliged if you could let me have a direct answer on this point.

I might add that my purpose in asking for this information is that I may know definitely the attitude of each of the parties towards the other.

Yours faithfully,
W. L. MACKENZIE KING,
Deputy Minister of Labour.

J. T. DAVIES, Esq.,
Sec. Dist. Union No. 7,

Fernie, B.C., Feb. 27, 1903.

W. L. Mackenzie, Esq.,
Deputy Minister of Labour,

Dear Sir: I desire to acknowledge receipt of yours of this a.m. I regret very much that I did not make myself plain to you in my previous letter and assure you that omissions were unintentional.

In re meeting committees from the mines separately. This matter was submitted to Mr. G. F. Dougherty by the management. He referred the same to this union and recommended that the same be referred to the locals for their action. This was done, and the locals were unanimous in their demand that the District Union deal with the matter all through.

In view of this fact we cannot entertain the proposition of meeting separately without further instructions from the local.

Very respectfully yours,
District Association No. 7, W.F.M.
John F. Davis,
Secretary.

MY HEART'S DARLING

BY W. HEIMBURG.

"Will you have them, dear?"

Lucie held the delicate little slippers in her hand, and inhaled the soft musk perfume. "The wise men's gifts that we hear of in the Bible must have smelled like these."

"Take them," said Hortense, "take all, if it would be any pleasure to you; they have no longer any value for me. Do not shake your head, you must take everything. I will send them over to you. You can enjoy them; they make me feel badly. Papa and I made that journey just after I became a widow. He gave me his word of honor to do nothing I should disapprove of, and not to gamble any more; and I—believed him."

She shrugged her shoulders.

"You give me too much, Hortense," said Lucie, turning away. "I have nothing for you."

"Yes, you can love me!"

They sat down again, and were silent.

"Would you like to travel with me, Lucie?"

The girl gazed out into the distance.

"Ah, travel, travel!" she whispered.

"If you will—why should we stay here?"

"We two together?" asked Lucie, breathlessly; and a look of delight shot out from her eyes and her delicate nostrils vibrated.

"Have you ever traveled at all?" asked Frau von Lowen.

"Never! Oh, yes, that is, I went once for two days with my sister and brothers to Holstein to spend Easter with my brother-in-law's father; but not on the sea. Ah! and I long so to see it; it has always been my dream of happiness!"

"Would you like to travel, Lucie?"

"Hortense! But I can not!" cried the girl, with a frightened look. "Do not speak of it—Alfred—"

"Whether you stay here or not, he is never at home; he might allow you that little before you are chained to him forever."

"No, no, Hortense; I will not ask it of him; it would vex him. Do not speak of it."

"I will ask him. If he loves you, little one—if he does not love selfishly he will say yes."

"No, please don't—please don't!—at least not to-day!" repeated Lucie, her face whitening, for just then she heard his well-known firm tread, and Alfred entered. Lucie sprung toward him with more eagerness than was her wont, and seized his arm as if she had something to ask of him.

Hortense held out her hand to him, and waited for him to sit down. He sat down opposite to her, still holding Lucie's hand; an unusual look of contentment was in his grave face.

"Do you know where I have been, Lucie?" he asked. "Just guess."

"With my grandfather," said Hortense.

"Yes, certainly; but the old lady and gentleman are so deep in their game of chess that they scarcely noticed me. But before that, Frau Baronne? I think only Lucie can guess."

The girl shook her head, and looked at him hesitatingly.

"In our future home," said he, and pressed the little hand before he let it go. "Everything is now so far ready that you can come and survey your kingdom and order when the furniture is to be placed, and—"

"Were you there to-day?" asked Hortense.

"Just a few minutes ago. I have already found a place for your work-table, Lucie," he added, "at the window of the corner room which looks out toward the street. I must have the carpenter make you a shelf for flowers there."

"The house looks so small from the outside, that I should never have thought—" interrupted Hortense.

He laughed. "It was originally a garden house; and now it is only large enough for very modest people, Frau Baronne. I can not buy a villa. But it pleasantly situated, and suits us, and is our own—is not that so, Lucie?"

"Yes," she said, and looked beyond him out of the window.

Hortense sat quietly in her armchair. "When," she began, "shall you—?"

Lucie got up and went to the piano and turned over the sheets of music.

"When will we move in, do you mean, Frau Baronne? In the autumn, I think, when the leaves begin to fall."

"Shall you make a wedding journey?" she continued.

He laughed loud and heartily. "That will not do for a physician who has just established himself, Frau von Lowen."

"But formerly you used to travel a good deal?" she inquired.

"Not much. But I did see a good deal of my own country and its surroundings."

"Were you in Switzerland?"

He nodded. "Yes, and even in Italy. While I was a student I wandered about a little on my savings, which were quite considerable. I have visited the Tuilleries in Paris, and the Tower in London, and even went so far as to wander under the midnight sun."

"Then you know and can appreciate how beautiful the world is?"

After the Discount.

"Ef you please, suh," said the Georgia darky, "how much fer a marriage license en a divorce dockiment?"

"A marriage license and divorce document?"

"Yes, suh. I been studyin' 'bout gittin' married, en I 'lowed dat ef I got de two tergether dey'd come cheaper!"

An Incomprehensibility.

OVER AN UMBRELLA

By C. B. LEWIS

Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company

Mrs. Josiah Peabody, wife of Deacon Peabody of the village of Glenville, had a remarkable umbrella. It had witnessed the struggle for American independence and had taken many journeys by land and water. The ribs had been bent or stove in on numerous occasions and the handle broken and glued together half a dozen times. It had attended funerals, camp meetings, quilting bees, husking frolics and town meetings without number and at the age of 120 years was still doing business at the old stand and holding its own against all competition.

Mrs. Levi Cantwell, wife of Deacon Cantwell of the same village and living right across the way from Mrs. Peabody, was a remarkable woman, and what more natural than that a remarkable woman and a remarkable umbrella should adventure together? Mrs. Cantwell was remarkable in so much that she would never stir out of her house without an umbrella. She dreaded rain like a cat and, no matter how clear the day, was always looking for a sudden downpour. She had an umbrella of her own, and it was large enough to shelter her, but now and then she was forced to lend it or send it to the shop to be repaired.

The day she started to drive over to Rawsonville in the deacon's one horse wagon was one of the occasions when her umbrella was "not at home." It was a beautiful June morning, with no rain in sight for a week, but Mrs. Cantwell didn't propose to run any chances. After trying in vain at three or four houses she called upon Mrs. Peabody to lend her that remarkable old colonial.

Her request fairly stunned the owner of the sacred relic and was at first peremptorily refused, but after considerable discussion, remembering that Mrs. Cantwell had the reputation of being careful handed and tender hearted, Mrs. Peabody yielded.

"You know what store I set on it and what store the deacon sets on it," she said as she brought out the blue covered umbrella and dusted it off.

"I do," was the reply, "and you needn't worry one single bit. You must know what a careful woman I am when you remember that I've made one set of cups and sassers last me fourteen years."

Mrs. Cantwell might have driven away with the umbrella raised over her head, but as she needed both hands to manage the lines the deacon carefully stowed it away under the seat.

Arriving at Rawsonville, the old horse was hitched to a post in front of a store, and Mrs. Cantwell entered to do some "trading." She was an hour or so about it, and during this interval a stray cow came down the street hunting for something better than burdocks to eat. She found it when she looked over the tailboard of the wagon and espied the sacred umbrella. She had never seen the like of it before, and the taste was novel and palatable. The more she ate the more she wanted, and she never stopped until the last inch of cover had been swallowed and a vigorous but unsuccessful effort made to devour handle and ribs.

Mrs. Cantwell drove home without having looked under the seat and realized what a wreck accompanied her. It was only as she reached her own door and Mrs. Peabody came across the road that the tragedy was discovered. Excuses and apologies and offers to make repairs didn't go. With the wreck hugged to her bosom Mrs. Peabody retired to her own house, and good will to men flew out of the back door as she entered the front.

A quarrel over a broken flatiron may be confined to two neighbors, but a difference of opinion over a remarkable umbrella is a different thing. No one charged Mrs. Cantwell with deliberately bringing about the wreck, but she was blamed for not keeping one eye on hungry cows outside the store while she had the other on seven cent calico inside. She knew the associations and sentiments surrounding that relic, and sooner than submit it to peril she should have hired a boy to watch it. The pros and cons were discussed at every fireside in the village, and of course a feeling of bitterness was engendered. In less than a week neighbors who had always borrowed sugar and tea of each other were refusing to lend, and back gates were being nailed up.

Deacon Peabody was a good man. So was Deacon Cantwell. Together they had passed the contribution boxes in church and counted up the receipts after the sermon. They had worked out their road tax side by side and had stood elbow to elbow in temperance crusades and town improvements. That long friendship was now broken. After looking at the dilapidated umbrella for the fiftieth time Deacon Peabody had said to his neighbor:

"Deacon Cantwell, I never dunned a man in my life, but you owe me 50 cents."

"I do, and here it is," replied Deacon Cantwell, "and I'm free to say I think you are a mean man."

"I don't want any words with you."

"Nor I with you."

"You'll take your hoss out of my pasture!"

"And you'll keep your hogs outer my garden!"

The minister naturally heard of the rise and fall of the remarkable umbrella, and, although he refused to become an adherent of either side, he felt it his duty to touch upon the affair from his pulpit. He didn't mention the umbrella by name, nor was he too hard upon the hungry cow. He didn't hint that Mrs. Cantwell was careless or Mrs. Peabody impetuous, and the meeting between the deacons was passed over entirely. He simply found a Biblical parallel and worked it up for the benefit of both sides, and the result almost wrecked the church. For the next three months there was more backbiting in the village than should have been heard of in ten counties, and there were no signs of a let up when incident stepped in to restore peace.

One day Deacon Peabody's wife went up into the garret to overhaul on old trunk. The place needed airing, and she raised a window. A hand organ was playing down the street, and she held up the sash with one hand and leaned out to see and to hear. Next thing she knew she was hanging head downward on the outside of the house, while the sash rested on her ankles and held her fast.

Deacon Cantwell's wife was sewing carpet rags in her sitting room when a series of shrieks lifted her out of her chair and propelled her to the front door. For a few seconds she was overcome by the sight opposite. Then she made a run for it, and two minutes later she was in the Peabody garret. Colonial umbrellas, hungry cows and the tongue of gossip were forgotten as she tugged and pulled at the hanging burden. When it was finally drawn back over the window sill, both women fainted away and tangled up with each other, and Silas Goodheart, who had heard the last shrieks and come running, stood over them with uplifted hands and said:

"Now let the heathen rage, for umbrellas is nowhar, and peace is restored to Glenville forevermore!"

Modern Manners.

Somebody has discovered that the decadence in modern manners does not necessarily denote our increased brutality or absolute indifference to the feelings and needs of other people. It is balm to the soul to be assured of this fact, says the Atlanta Journal.

We have admitted to ourselves for some time past that our manners have not the repose which should mark the caste of Vere de Vere and that we are indeed frankly discourteous to each other. We also know that many men are no longer particular how they act or what they say in the presence of women and do not even observe the small courtesies of life where members of the opposite sex are concerned. Men no longer hesitate to let a woman wait on them or to push her aside in a crowd or to smoke in her face unapologetically, as if that were their natural right. We certainly are less polished and ceremonious than were our forefathers.

Facing this fact, it is pleasing to be assured that the change is not due to selfishness, but is simply the expression of our desire to be honest, to avoid shams. Therefore if we sometimes overstep the limit and cultivate unpleasant freedom of speech and action, manifest unrestrained rudeness, we are to be excused on the ground of our excessive frankness and honesty.

Tried to Improve His Name.

The old lady who admired her pastor because he said "Mesopotamia" so beautifully has been outdone by a Broadway office boy.

He was not pleased with the surname of Mulligan, to which he was condemned, and so when he applied for a new position in another office he decided to give himself a new name, and for this purpose borrowed what he thought was a name from the financial statements which he had to sort and file in the office in which he was last employed.

"What is your name?" inquired the clerk to whom he made application for work.

"William Recapitulation," replied the boy.

"That's a funny name," said the clerk after he had the boy repeat it several times.

"Don't you know General Recapitulation?" asked the boy in surprise.

"Never heard of him."

"Why, his name is in all Blank & Co.'s Wall street reports."—New York Times.

She Got Up a Blush.

A contributor to a Boston paper says that he always thought until recently that the blushing cheeks of a bride were a certain indication of either her embarrassment or her abounding health. He was disabused of this opinion by what he saw at a wedding the other day. The wedding party was in the vestibule, all ready to proceed to the altar, awaiting the wedding march. He noticed that the bride was very pale, and the bridesmaid noticed it about the same time and proceeded to take the bride's cheeks between her thumbs and fingers and give them a good, hard pinching. Under this process they soon showed a good color, whereupon the bridesmaid carefully performed the same operation on herself, and they proceeded with glowing cheeks to the altar.

"She can sow and reap, hold a plow and drive a team and would answer any stout, able man that can hold a tight rein, for she is hard mouthed and headstrong, but if properly managed would either lead or drive as tame as a rabbit.

"Her husband parts with her because she is too much for him. Inquire of the printer.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE OF THE KIDNEYS.

Symptoms That Warn You of the Approach of This Malady so Dreadfully Painful and Fatal in its Results.

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Bright's disease is in reality a chronic inflammation of the kidneys, and is the natural consequence of neglecting ordinary derangements.

At first you may notice a slight swelling of the feet after the day's work is over, slow but unmistakable failure of health, pallor of face, and loss of flesh, shortness of breath when going upstairs rapidly, and dimness of sight.

Soon the digestive system becomes deranged, the appetite impaired, and in many there is a tendency to diarrhoea and formation of gas in the intestines. There are frequently recurring headaches, attacks of dizziness and severe pains in the back and limbs.

The accumulation of watery fluid—dropsy—continues in the cavity of the chest, and may at any time cause death from heart failure or dropsy of the lungs. Sometimes uraemia, stupor, convulsions and death occur suddenly, before the other symptoms have become prominent and while dropsy is still slight in quantity.

As Bright's Disease causes a wasting away of the cells and tissues of the kidneys themselves, as well as of the whole body, it can only be perfectly cured if treatment is begun in its early stages, when the first symptoms become noticeable. Because of their remarkably prompt and direct action on the kidneys, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have time and again proven their superiority as a preventive and cure for Bright's Disease.

While toning and invigorating the kidneys, and making them active in removing uric acid from the blood, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills also regulate the action of the liver and bowels, and encourage the digestive organs to properly perform their duties. Their use will quickly stop the dreadful wasting process, which accompanies Bright's disease, and restore the deranged organs to health and activity. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Why do we wear

Granby Rubbers and Overshoes

Dealers all over Dominion say they give better satisfaction than any others. The people say they fit better, look better, wear better.—Because they are honestly made out of pure new rubber.

"Granby Rubbers wear like iron."

A young man by the name of William Kotz, coachman, came to my store, complaining that his feet hurt him badly. He had in vain tried to get relief by consulting physicians. Being exposed a great deal to the cold by his occupation, his feet got worse daily, until one day he fainted in the street. A few days after he again came to my store and showed me his feet. I have seen a great many sores in my life, but nothing to equal this, and was afraid the poor fellow would lose his limbs. He asked me for St. Jacobs Oil; we rubbed his feet well with the Oil, and he took the remainder with him. After nine days the same man again came into my store, perfectly well, and requested me to write to you of this most wonderful cure; he also stated that two other persons had been cured of Rheumatism by the same bottle which helped him.—John Lenzen.

THAT OLD PAIN AGAIN.

Gnawing, Piercing Pains That Almost Make You Scream.

It is your old enemy, rheumatism, come again with the winter to torture you. These pains, remember, are caused by bad blood, you may ease them by rubbing with liniments and outward lotions, but cannot get rid of them in that way. Rheumatism is caused by bad blood, and the only certain way to drive it out of the system is to enrich your blood by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. There is no case of rheumatism Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will not cure if given a fair trial. By making new, rich red blood and strengthening the nerves they strike at the very root of such diseases as rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago. We give one case out of thousands to prove the truth of this statement. Mr. A. G. Lacombe, Sorel, Que., says: "For five years I was a victim to the tortures of rheumatism. At times the pains in my knees, shoulders and hips were almost past endurance. Often I could not dress myself without assistance. I tried many remedies, but I never got more than temporary relief until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I used altogether eight boxes, and since taking them I have not had a twinge of the trouble, and I feel better in every way than I did for years before. I would strongly advise every rheumatic sufferer to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial." Remember that only the genuine Pills will cure, therefore see that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" is found on the wrapper around every box. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent post paid at 50c per box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing direct to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Billion and Trillion.

There are two systems of numeration in use at the present day, commonly called the English and the French systems. In the former the billion is a million of millions, a trillion a million of billions, and each denomination is a million times the one preceding. In the latter, which is the system used in the United States, the billion is a thousand millions, and each denomination is a thousand times the preceding. Therefore, according to the English notation, a trillion is the product of a million involved to the third power, or the number represented by a unit with its ciphers annexed; according to the French notation, the number expressed by a unit with twelve ciphers attached. A billion according to the French method is the number represented by a unit with nine ciphers and according to the English method with twelve ciphers annexed.

Pulling a Tooth.

An Irishman who had gone into a dentist's to get a tooth pulled had it out in a few minutes.

"That will be half a crown," said the dentist.

"Half a crown!" said Pat. "Why, the last tooth I got pulled at home the old doctor set me down on the floor and put the nippers in my mouth and pulled me round and round the room, out of the door and down the stairs. When we got to the foot, the doctor said, 'By the help of heaven and the attraction of gravity we'll hev her out yet,' so when we got to the top out came the tooth, and he only took a shillin'!"—London Tit-Bits.

CAPTURED BEARS ALIVE.

Daring Adventure of Japs in British Columbia.

A Vancouver dispatch says: Rev. Goro Kaburagi, Japanese missionary in this city, has asked the Vancouver zoo to accept a male and female bear, captured alive without the aid of weapons by eight of his countrymen. The male bear weighs 320 pounds, and the female bear 210 pounds.

Kaburagi says that two of his countrymen were at work in the woods cutting shingle bolts, when one noticed something bright in the dark hole of a hollow tree. It was the eyes of some wild animal. The man called the other Japanese, and together they built a cage five feet high, put it in front of the hole, with a trap door, and started to smoke the animals out. The she-bear left the tree and rushed into the trap.

The Japanese were dancing around the cage with delight, when the huge male bear, whose presence they did not suspect, rushed from the tree and charged them. They ran for a short distance. Then one of them, Nishimito, with a daring never heard of in the wildest tales of British Columbia, threw himself on the back of the huge monster. He was able to hold the brute just long enough for his comrades to arrive, and all eight of them fell on the bear and crushed him to the earth. Six sat on his rump, while the others held his neck down with a long pole. Finally one was sent for a rope, when the bear, kicking scratching, howling, but securely gagged was trussed securely and hauled into camp none the worse for wear. The female bear was also carried to camp, cage and all.

The Japs were scratched from head to foot, and their clothes torn, but they had no serious wounds. This is the first time in British Columbia that full-sized bears have been caught alive without steel traps or being wounded with firearms.

MAIL CLERKS' AWFUL FATE

Four are Burned to Death in Their Car as the Result of a Head on Collision

A dispatch from Cleveland, O., says:—As the result of a head-on collision between a westbound passenger train and an eastbound freight train, a mile or two east of Berea, Ohio, on the Big Four railroad on Feb. 24, four mail clerks were burned to death and several trainmen more or less seriously hurt. All the injured were taken to a hospital in Cleveland. It is reported that no passengers were hurt.

The passenger train was well filled and many of the passengers were school superintendents and teachers on their way to Cincinnati to attend a meeting of school directors and teachers in that city.

The unfortunate mail clerks were caught like rats in a trap within their car when it caught fire, and being locked in were unable to release themselves.

The injuries to the train crews consisted mostly of cuts and bruises and are not considered serious. All but two of the cars of the passenger train were destroyed by fire which probably started from the overturning and explosion of oil lamps in the express and mail cars.

CATTLEMEN VS. SHEEPMEN

Settlement Provides That Sheepman Must Stay in Own Territory.

The Calgary Herald says' It is understood that the main featuresof the recent settlement of disputes between cattle and sheepmen in the Medicine Hat and Maple Creek districts, which Inspector W. W. Stuart has been looking into during the past year, are that hereafter the department will refuse to grant leases for cattle grazing within the limits of the areas set apart for sheep, thereby securing for the sheepmen protection against encroachments upon their territory and such regulations will be enacted and enforced as will confine the sheepmen strictly to their own country.

The new areas set apart for sheep comprise a larger number of townships north of the C. P. R., and extending from the vicinity of Irvine station to some distance east of Crane Lake, and north to township 16. This territory is admirably adapted for sheep raising and there is plenty of room for a large expansion of the industry.

Portions of the old sheep districts, where it could be done without interfering with vested interests, have been withdrawn, experience having demonstrated that they were unsuitable for sheep grazing, and some minor changes made in boundaries as existing conditions seemed to demand.

If the new policy and regulations are strictly enforced there should be no serious trouble in the future. It has been demonstrated by the history of the range country in Montana and elsewhere that the indiscriminate right to range cattle and sheep over the same territory has led to serious trouble in many instances and the enactment of regulations with a view of preventing this is a step in the right direction.

PEACE RIVER WHEAT FIELDS

Northern Country Has Favorable Seasons for rowing the Cereal.

E. J. Ecker and Robert Jones, of Fort Vermilion, arrived in Edmonton February 4th from Fort Vermilion by dog train, a distance of about 1,000 miles. They left January 9th, being over three weeks on the road and making good time, too. They say that the Peace river district is a very sure wheat country. The Hudson's Bay mill at Fort Vermilion, of which Mr. Ecker is engineer, (also builder for the district) in its December grinding turned out 500 100-pounds of excellent strong baker's flour. There is still a month's grinding to be done, and over 500 sacks will be turned out. The Peace river country has the advantage over other districts in the raising of wheat by having one long day from May the first to October the first. The price paid for wheat is $1.50 per bushel. There is no trouble from early frosts. The seed is sownabout April 20th and reaped the last of August. Last year the wheat crop was light and averaged 22 bushels to the acre. In a good year the average is 29 to 30 bushels per acre. Wheat and barley are grown and vegetables flourish luxuriantly. Tomatoes ripen in the open air. There is an abundance of fish and game. Just the day before they left Fort Fort Vermilion there were 20 moose killed in one bunch. Bear is also plentiful.

In connertion with the grist mill there is a saw, planing and shingle mill. The lumber is used for local purposes principally. This year a considerable quantity is being sent to Fort Smith still further north.

Must Vacate Odd Sections.

Many persons have been going on unsurveyed land in the west as squatters and taking possession in hopes of ultimately getting homestead entry for such land. Some of these are found, after survey, to be located on odd numbered sections, and the department has been asked to determine whether anything can be done for these settlers on odd numbered sections. The commissioner has now decided that as odd-numbered sections are not available for homestead entry all squatters on them must get off and get on even numbered sections as entries will not be granted for odd sections. It will be seen, therefore, that squatters on odd numbered sections (such as 1, 3, 5, 7, etc.) are wasting their time and labor in making improvements which will have to be ultimately abandoned.

Fatally Stabbed.

A dispatch from North Bay, dated Feb. 22, says: Joho McDonald, a teamster, employed in a lumber camp, was brokght to the hospital here on Friday suffering from knife wounds inflicted by another teamster named George Williamson.

Yesterday his injuries proved fatal and his assailant is in jail facing a charge of murder.

It appears that the two men were driving along the Temiscamingue wagon road when they quarrelled and came to blows. McDonald, who was the more powerful of the two, was getting the best of it, when Williamson drew a knife and used it with fatal effect.

Two children of James Drain, of the township of Drummer, Peterboro county, Ont., were left alone by their mother, one a boy of three months and the other a girl of three years. IS IT HUMAN BLOOD?

Developments in Connection With the St. Eustache Murder.

A dispatch from Montreal dated Feb. 18 says: There is no arrest yet in connection with the St. Eustache murder, but a pail of bloody snow was found at the barn of Theophile Belanger, a brother-in-law of the murdered Antoine Seguin. Belanger claims the blood is that of a pig.

The inquest was continued Thursday, when a son of Belanger did not corroborate the evidence given by his mother yesterday as to quarrels between the murdered man and the brother-in-law. These were not serious, but were frequent towards the last. Some of the neighbors state that within the last few days Belanger has asked a couple of people whether there was any visible difference between human blood and the blood of a pig or any other animal.

ANOTHER ROYAL SCANDAL.

Husband of Princess Louise of Belgium of the Tenders Hooks.

Sensational charges against Prince Philip, of Saxe Cobourg Gotha, who is an Austrian field marshal, and husband of the Princess Louise, of Belgium, eldest daughter of King Leopold, were made on Friday during the debate on the army bill in the reichsrath, at Vienna, by Herr Daszynski, the Polish leader. The latter denounced the prince as a criminal, and referred to the imprisonment of the former lieutenant of onment of the former lieutenant of hussars, Mattascich (who eloped with the Princess Louise of Coburg several years ago, and was sentenced to four years' imprisonment in December last for forging the signature of Princess Stephanie, Countess of Lonyay,) asserted that while in prison, Mattascich drew up a formal accusation charging Prince Philip with forcing the Princess Louise, who was confined in an asylum for the insane, near Dresden, some time after her elopement, to encourage the advances of the late Baron Hirsch and with compelling her to ask the Baron for money.

Rudyard Kipling, it appears, is fond of apple pie baked on the American system. To gratify his taste a glass rolling pin specially used in the manufacture of these pies has just been forwarded to the novelist from Wanamaker's. The glass rolling pin has among other advantages the merit of always being sweet and clean, and of being hollow so that it can be filled with ice to cool the pie crust. When Mrs. Kipling, who is an American, was in this country last summer, she greatly admired this contrivance, and knowing that her husband and children were fond of American pies, decided to get them the next best thing by having her pies made with an American rolling pin.

Commenting on the fondness of young students to use long words and Latin quotations, in order to appear convential, Dr. Lorimer, of New York, says: "I once knew a promising candidate who was given charge of a funeral in the absence of the pastor of the church. THE GLADSTONE OF CANADA.

Mr. Blake's Return to the Platform—Opinions From Ireland.

"The appearance of the Honorable Edward Blake," says The Belfast Times and News, "upon Canadian platforms, has attracted considerable notice in the Dominion, as the contents of the last mail show clearly enough. There is nothing surprising in that. The temporary return of 'the Gladstone of Canada' to the public life of the country in which his political fame was won was an event in Canadian politics, and of particular interest to the Canadian Liberal party, which he led through the wilderness for six years. It is almost ten years since he gave up his seat in the Parliament of Canada to devote his great abilities to the cause of Irish self-government, the cause to which he has devoted the remainder of his life. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has alluded to Mr. Blake as "the greatest of all Canadians." Ever since the general election of 1892 he has represented South Longford in the House of Commons.

"Few men can be better qualified," says The Daily News, "to point the ever-recurring moral of the extension of self-government to Canada than Mr. Blake. There are, of course, differences at all points between the cases of Ireland and Canada, as no doubt there are between those of South Africa and Canada; but striking illustrations of the benefits of self-government have come about in Mr. Blake's colonial experience. The contrast between the rebellious Canada of 1837 and the contented Canada of the present day is one to which Mr. Gladstone pointed often enough. Again, the separation of Upper and Lower Canada was a measure based upon the same principle of gaining peace and unity by the grant of self-government. To go further still, it may be said that the rights which were at last won by the advocates of provincial management of the affairs of each province have immeasurably strengthened and not weakened the Federal union of the Dominion. 'I know of no way,' said Fox, more than one hundred years go, 'of governing mankind but by letting them have their own way.' Mr. Blake has probably seen more of the application of that sound principle than any statesman in Parliament."

How Mr. Urquhart Was Courteous Under Difficulties Election Night

Two ladies who take an interest in municipal affairs went down town Monday evening about ten o'clock to hear the latest election returns, so a Toronto journalistic Man About Town. They took a Belt Line car going west on King. As they passed The Mail building one of them caught sight of a bulletin saying that Mr. Urquhart headed the poll.

"Why, Urquhart is ahead!" she said.

"Oh, no, it must be Howland," the other replied. They were both supporters of Howland.

"No; I am sure it was Urquhart."

While these remarks were being exchanged the ladies noticed a gentleman enter the car and take a seat opposite them. They noticed him especially on account of his nervous manner. They, however, continued to express their surprise at Urquhart's election and their disappointment at Howland's defeat.

"I am so sorry Mr. Howland was defeated. He was so different from our former Mayors."

"Yes. He was a gentleman."

"And this Urquhart is nobody."

"Oh, that is the way in Toronto: the nobody always gets ahead."

"Perhaps all the returns are not in."

"Perhaps not."

All this time the gentleman opposite seemed very much amused. When the car reached Spadina and Queen, he got up and crossed over to the ladies.

"Mr. Urquhart is ahead now, but there are still some places to be heard from."

"Oh, that accounts for it," one of Mr. Howland's supporters replied, 'Howland will get in all right."

The gentleman bowed and smiled pleasantly, as he left the car. The ladies went home. Each of them, as she picked up Tuesday's paper with the picture of the Mayor-elect, exclaimed:

"Why, that's the man we were talking to in the car."

It seems that it was.

RELIGIONS OF TORONTONIANS.

Anglicans Lead, With Methodists Next, and Presbyterians Third.

A man of studious disposition could spend many a profitable hour conning over the census volume issued at the close of 1902. Ten years ago there was only one Pagan found in the whole of Canada. That one has evidently increased, as there are 13 in Toronto and one in Ottawa, besides others scattered all over the Dominion. There are 173 Mormons in the Queen City, 221 Quakers, 95 Mennonites, 80 Adventists, 13 adherents of the Greek Church, 682 Brethren, 524 Disciples, 625 Salvation Army. The Anglicans in Toronto are the largest religious community, numbering 62,406. Next comes the Methodists with 48,278; Presbyterians, 41,629; Roman Catholics, 28,994; Baptists, 11,698; Congregationalists, 3,658, and Hebrews, 3,083.

Ike's Correction.

Ike is a veritable pickaninny who flings the King's English around in true negro style, much to his mistress' amusement. One day she observed that his two very prominent front teeth had disappeared, and quizzically asked: "Ike, what has become of your teeth?" "Dey dropped out," promptly replied Ike, "What?" exclaimed his mistress, as if horrified. Ike was baffled, but only for a moment, when he announced with an air of triumph at having corrected himself, "Dey dripped out!"

THE TURKISH WOMAN.

Her Friday Excursions on the Sweet Waters of Asia.

Friday is the only day on which Turkish women enjoy a little liberty and release from the dreadful seclusion in which they are always kept, and they are not slow to avail themselves of the chance. On Fridays every one goes to the Sweet Waters of Asia, which consist of a small river running about two miles inland, with trees and meadows on each side. Hundreds of boats assemble and glide up and down the river. Every boat or caique has two or more Turkish ladies on board. The sight is a very fine one, as each private caique is most carefully got up, and the boatmen wear brilliant liveries to match the cushions and the long embroidered cloth which hangs over the stern and trails in the water. The khedivah of Egypt is one of the finest, in crimson and gold, embroidered with crowns and fishes. Besides the liveries the parasols make a wonderful show, and here may be seen all the latest Parisian creations. The ladies must not speak to men, but the careful observer can frequently catch sight of veils lowered or other signal given when a particular boat is passing, and habitual frequenters can point out boats which are sometimes close to each other. It is a very innocent diversion and would not satisfy western ladies. An hour before sunset the police boats appear and force all women to leave.—London Telegraph.

Scotland's Round Towers.

Scotland boasts of two round towers, said to be stragglers from the great typical group found in Ireland. The one is attached to the handsome cathedral of Brechin and the other stands in the center of Abernethy, near the entrance gate to the churchyard. The Brechin tower, built in six irregular courses and rising over 100 feet, is the more perfect of the two. It dates from Kenneth's reign, 971-95, and has a most graceful appearance. Pennant in his history speaks of having, in 1772, found handsome bells within its walls. These were afterward removed and now hang in a neighboring steeple. The origin of these towers is now somewhat doubtful, but archæologists are generally agreed that they were built in connection with churches "for defense and faithfulness of watch" during the Norseman raids. They were afterward used as belfries, the Brechin tower having done duty as such for generations. The tower is now one of the sights of the ancient town and is regarded as a memorial of its early conection with Ireland.—Scottish-American.

The Changed Grizzly.

There are numerous reliable statements of grizzly bears having attacked men, but nowadays the grizzly does not seek out his human victims, as there are credible statements that his forefathers used to do. Neither does he lie in wait and, pouncing upon a hunter, tear him into bloody shreds in delighted fiendishness, as the old time stories used to tell. The change in the grizzly's disposition is likened by veteran hunters to the change in the character of the white cousin of the grizzly, the polar bear of the arctics. When the stations for the Hudson Bay company were established, the diaries of the men there often referred to the fright of attacks by polar bears. Many a navigator in the arctic seas has been clawed and chewed to death by polar bears. But for nearly a century the polar bear has not been regarded as so very fierce, and nowadays it is looked upon as a cowardly beast. Association with armed men has modified the polar bear's disposition.—Outing.

Cobweb Pills.

In New England cobweb pills are supposed to cure the ague, and in the south a certain knuckle bone in a pig's foot is a sure cure for rheumatism if it be carried in the pocket or worn suspended from a string around the neck. Tracing the spider web pill, it originated in China, where all species of insects have certain positive or negative values in medicine. In Peking it is customary to give two or three scorpions or spiders to a patient ill of fever. In Ireland the peasantry swallow small spiders alive to effect cures. From these the cobweb pill of the New England native was easy. In Flanders the live spider is fastened into the empty shell of a walnut and worn around the neck of the patient. As the creature dies the fever decreases until it is gone entirely.

His Question.

Sister—You've seen Mrs. Newpop's baby, haven't you?

Brother—Yes, but I'm afraid Mrs. Newpop must think I don't take any interest in babies.

Sister—Of course, if you don't ask questions about it she—

Brother—But I did ask a question; asked if it could sit up on its hind legs and beg yet, and she wouldn't answer

The Wise Deacon.

"Deacon," began the old colored parson, "do you ebeb say, 'Git behind me, Satan?'"

"No, bruddah, Ah do not," said Deacon Green. "Ef Ah told Satan to git behind me, he might stick me when Ah wa'n't lookin'. Ah keeps him right in front whah Ah kin see him."

An Offhand Answer.

"Who can tell me the meaning of leisure?" asked the teacher.

"It's a place where married people repent," replied the boy at the foot of the class.

C.P.R. IN EAST KOOTENAY

IN another column will be found an article showing the brazen attempts of the C.P.R. to obtain control of the lands of South East Kootenay.

The present is an opportune time to bring this important matter before the public and to caution the Goverment against further indiscretion in strengthening this great monopoly by more land grants. In looking over the map issued by the Land Department of this organization covering the District of East and West Kootenay our readers will see that probably one half of the southern half of the two districts are colored red to show that they are crown granted to the C.P.R. and in studying South East Kootenay more particularly we find that more than three fourths of our lands are owned by the C.P.R. or by Companies whose charters are controlled by the Directors of this road.

We now hear that the Columbia and Western Ry. Co. whose charter is also controlled by this Canadian octopus has commenced suit seeking an injunction and damages against holders of timber and coal licences on the west side of the Elk and east of Lot No. 4590.

"The land grant of the Columbia and Western railway reads as follows: "It shall be lawful for the Lieutenant Governor in Council to grant to the said railway company lands in the district of Kootenay and Yale not exceeding 10,240 acres for each mile of narrow guage railway to be constructed by said company, upon condition of their constructing the said Columbia and Western railway within the time and according to the terms of this act of iucorporation."

"A tract of land extending 16 miles on each side of the line of the section or sections as aforesaid of the proposed railway, and also such futher area contiguous to the railway as the lieutenant-governor-in-council may direct, in order to make up a sufficient quantity under this act."

This land was originally reserved by the Government but was thrown open to the public last spring and many claims were staked and licences issued, not only was the Crown grant never issued for this land but the Columbia and Western never had the lands surveyed in accordance with the provisions of the Land Act under whidth act all Crown grants areissued. This last feature is noticable in all cases in which lands have been Crown granted to the Companies controlled by the C.P.R. Take lot 4590 for instance, while this lot is outlined in the above mentioned map, the Eastern boundary has never been surveyed and it is extremely doubtful whether a surveyor has ever been through this County on behalf of the patentee.

The unwisdom of waiving any of the requirements of the Land Act in favor of this corporation is seen in the present instance. The eastern boundary of C. P. R. lot No. 4,590 not being surveyed, persons desirous of taking up the government lands to the east of this lot are compelled to guess the actual boundary line. Again, these lands have been crown granted for over two years and persons applying to the land department of the company for lands in the blocks are refused on the ground that the company are not in a position to deal with their lands until their surveyors have been over them. The nett result of the government's carelessness and of the C. P. R's. greediness is that intending settlers are kept out of the country and the progress of the district is thrown back for years.

It was well enough from a politician's point of view to assist Corporations to build railways through the country, the idea being, no doubt, that the districts would be opened to the pioneers of civilization, and the wealth of the country in minerals, coal and timber exported for the general good of the people of Canada. This was the prime thought which moved the then legislature to grant the land subsidies above referred to ; but how different has the result been. It is true people have come into the country, built homes for themselves ; erected mills to convert the wealth of the forest ; smelters to turn into productive commodities the rich ores of the earth ; but who secures the profit of all these enterprises? Not the manufacturers as it was anticipated for the C.P.R. so manages its freight rates as to leave them a mere interest on the capital invested, while the profits, if any, go to the shareholders of this great transcontinental line, which received in assistance from the Canadian Government millions of dollars in hard cash and millions of acres of fertile lands which are steadily increasing in value as the result of improvements on adjoining lands made by industrious Canadian settlers.

The management of the C. P. R. claim they are paying only 4 or 5 per cent on their capital which may be true ; but their present capital is many times as large as the amount invested by promoters. In other words the stock has been watered to this extent and for two purposes; to make money out of the sale of stock for its promoters and to keep down its actual dividends in order to evade the government control of its freight and passenger rates, which, according to its charter, will occur when the dividends exceed 10 per cent.

Now how long are we as Canadian people going to stand in the background and allow this mighty monopolist to steal our heritage from under our very nose. A determined stand should be taken throughout the length and breadth of Canada to bring the company to the recognition of the fact that it is the servant, not the master, of the people of Canada.

It is also commonly reported that the C. P. R. not satisfied with the enormous territory which they claim, is endeavoring to force the provincial government to make them a present of a large and rich reserve in the extreme south eastern portion of the district. The present fuel shortage, caused by the strike, is used as a lever to influence the government to open up competitive mines. While it is doubtless advisable to have these mines developed at once it is folly for Chief Commissioner Wells to argue that the C. P. R. has the prior right to them owing to their ready means to open them up, and any such outrageous grant would be looked upon with indignation by the electors of the Province.

Provincial Elections.

The recent election in West Yale seals the doom of the Prior Government. It is problematical whether the Colonel will meet the house on April the 2nd, but it is reasonably certain that if he does he will find himself in a hopeless minority. The province is face to face with a general election. In this district an election cannot take place for three or four months at least as South East Kootenay is not legally divided until the legislature is dissolved after which the voters' list has to be prepared. The general election will be run on party lines and the labor and socialist elements will doubtless take a hand in many constituencies. In this district a warm battle is anticipated. The liberals are rallying and the conservatives will likely take the matter up at once, while among the union men the opinion prevails that a labor man will be forthcoming.

The Strike

The statement made by the Press Committee this week deals with only a few specific cases and isin no sense a conclusive argument. The cases stated do not agree with the books of the company and it would be interesting to know who is right. The figures of the day men of Coal Creek and the oven-drawersat Fernie are doubtless correct. The rate of 75 cents per oven has always been the rate, and it is well known that the lack of slack at the Fernie ovens has considerably handicapped the workmen. At Michel they are paid the same and the slack is supplied more regularly. When the report of Mr. King is published the public will be in a better position to size up the situation. Mr. King is regarded by all concerned as a man who is perfectly impartial and his opinion will no doubt have great weight.

Infringement of a Trade Mark

In an action in the High Court of Justice for Ontario, recently tried before Chancellor Boyd, at Toronto, the Slater Shoe Co., and Chas. E. Slater, president of Montreal, makers of the famous Slater Shoe, obtained a judgment forever restraining F. C. Wilkinson, a boot and shoe dealer, of Owen Sound, from advertising, exposing, or offering for sale or selling boots or shoes not made by the Slater Shoe Co., as "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods" or the Slater Shoe." The Chancellor, also ordered Wilkinson to pay the heavy costs of the action. The Chancellor, after hearing the evidence. decided that no one except the Slater Shoe Co., had a right to use the name "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods," "The Slater Shoe," or any similar names in connection with boots and shoes, and that Wilkinson had no right to use any name or names in connection with boots and shoes which might enable him to pass of a shoe not of the company's make. as being of their make, nor in any way to reap the benefit of the reputation which the Slater Shoe has acquired throughout the Dominion of Canada.

The Genuine Slater

Is positively the best shoe value offered for sale in Canada. You may include the United States and that will pretty near cover the world for fine shoe making. There are shoes sold elsewhere at $4 50 and $6 a pair that carry no more style, are no better fitting and will not wear as well as the genuine Slater Shoe at $4. "Why is it?" you ask. "Just because they are branded with an American stamp."

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

The Lenten season began on Wednesday.

Service to-morrow evening in the Baptist church at 7:30.

D. V. Mott left on Tuesday morning on a business trip to Revelstoke.

The Liphardt Cup was taken to Medicine Hat last week by Mr. Turnbull.

Mr. and Mrs. McEvoy moved into their handsome new residence in the Park on Wednesday.

A rally of the Liberal Association will take place in Joyce's hall on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. James Broley and children returned from a visit to Ontario on Wednesday morning.

Percy F. Godenwrath, of Greenwood, Secretary of the Boundary Coal Mines Co., was in town this week.

Solicitor W. R. Ross went up to Fort Steele on Tuesday to attend the sitting of County Court held there this week.

Mr. J. McEvoy is very ill with pneumonia. He was attacked very suddenly on Wednesday. A trained nurse is in attendance.

The teamsters' union have issued a uniform scale of wages governing the work done by the members in and around the town.

Services at the Methodist church tomorrow will be. Subjects, morning, "The Holy Spirit." Evening, "A Man With One Eye."

J. H. Tonkin and Dr. Bonnell left on Sunday's train for the Coast to attend the convention of The B.C. Mining Association. D. V. Mott the other Fernie delegate was unable to go.

J. F. Jarvis has purchased from Mr J. Macdonald the property recently occupied by Mr. Mott and is now having the house repaired and overhauled. He expects to move into it next week.

In view of the limited supply of coal at the power house, it is hoped that the merchants and others will shut off the lights they do not need in the stores on Sunday, so that the churches may not be short of light during service hours.

The masquerade ball given by Mr. Stephens of the Australian Hotel Morrissey on Monday night is reported to have been a success. Many of the dresses were well gotten up. The Fernie Orchestra supplied the music and owing to unsatisfactory train service they walked both ways.

Another glaring hold-up occurred last Saturday on the railway track north of the water tank. A Swede named S. Trapp was knocked on the head and relieved of a roll of bills amounting to $79 He was unable to give the police any clue as he was stunned by the blow and the night was dark. There were two assailants and they were in hiding behind a car waiting his approach.

Crushed his foot.

Charles McInnes a young man working at Mott's Mill met with an accident last Saturday. While engaged in handling logs one rolled on his foot crushing it severely. He was removed to the Fernie Hospital for treatment.

Raising the Rates

The barbers of the town who are members of the Federal Union have resolved to raise the rates as soon as the strike is off. The price of a shave will be increased from 15 cts. to 25 cts. and it is probable that a hair-cut will then cost 50 cts. instead of 35 cts.

Slavin-Burrows Contest

The glove contest in Princess Hall on Tuesday evening between Jas. Burrows and Jack Slavin was quite a surprise to the sporting element of Fernie. Slavin had come to Fernie with a big fighting reputation and most people thought that the local man would not be in the fight for a minute, but the contrary proved to be the case. From the start Burrows had everything his own way and although he stayed until the close of the fourth round he was completely out-classed.

Gone to Washington.

Mr. James Dunlop and family left Fernie yesterday for Cheney, Wash. where they will take up ranching. They were among the first settlers of Fernie and during their long residence in the town they have won the respect and friendship of everyone. Their place in the Presbyterian Church where Mr. Dunlop has been one of the main pillars will be hard to fill. Mr. Dunlop has followed mining for many years and has now decided to go back to agricultural pursuits again. In Mr. Dunlop's departure the town has lost a good citizen and the miners a careful and wise adviser. Their many friends wish them god-speed.

Hand Mutilated.

A young man named Robert Chapman son of Foreman Chapman, met with a serious accident at the Fernie Lumber Co.'s mill yesterday morning. Upon commencing work in the morning he tried to pull out the stick that is usually left in the "sticker" machine over night. In some manner the carrier caught the stick and carried it into the "sticker" and the knives caught the man's hand which was covered by a mitt, and cut off the thumb and all the fingers but the first one. Luckily it was his left hand. Chapman was brought to the Fernie hospital where Dr. Higgins attended him.

Mrs. J. Todhunter is very ill this week.

M. B. King, of Cranbrook, was in town this week.

Mr. Harry Dunlap left last Saturday for Nova Scotia.

Mrs. John Morrison of The Mines left for Nova Scotia this week.

Mr. A. B Trites returned from a hurried trip to the East on Saturday last.

Miss. McCallum from Nova Scotia is visiting her sister Mrs. A. Cameron.

Walter Bennett has moved into the house recently occupied by Mr. Stewart.

Constable Drummond, of Moyie, is in town this week assisting the local police force.

N. E. Suddaby was confined to his room several days this week, owing to a heavy cold.

Found—On the road between the town and the Fernie Lumber Co., a lady's cape. Owner can have same by applying at P. Burns & Co's. shop.

S. Graham and family have moved into Mr. Rogers house where they will live for a short time while their residence is undergoing some alterations.

Services to-morrow at Christ Church will be held as follows. Matins and Holy Communion, 11 a.m.; Sunday School 2.10 p.m.; Evensong, 7:30 p.m. Collections in aid of current expenses.

The carnival last evening was not as well attended as the previous one. The prize-winners were. Best dressed lady, Mr. J. B. Turney; best dressed gentleman, T. Bell; represented character, F. Bean: best comic, L. Rhodes: best dressed school girl, Marjorie Ganong; best dressed boy, Fred. Eschwig.

Board of Trade Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the Board of Trade in Joyce's Hall on Monday at 8 p. m., to take up the matter of making arrangements for the reception of the delegates of the Associated Boards of Trade of Eastern British Columbia, which is to meet in Fernie on the 18th.

SOCIAL EVENTS.

Mrs. E. H. Bird entertained a number of friends on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. A. B. Trites gave a very pleasant informal dance to the members of the Fernie Snow Shoe Club and some other friends on Monday evening. Princess Hall was appropriately arranged for the occasion, and a reception room was tastily curtained off. Dancing was the chief amusement of the evening and all present thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The large gathering was treated to a splendid supper in the Royal Hotel dinning room. The dancing was afterwards continued into the early morning hours.

The most brilliant social function of the season was the "At Home" given by Mrs. J. H. Tonkin, Friday afternoon, Feb. 27th, at her residence, Park House. The spacious rooms were brilliantly lighted and looked very attractive—the tea room especially, with its decorations of crimson carnations and shaded candles—the latter producing a most charming effect. The guests were received by Mrs. J. H. Tonkin, gracefully assisted by Mrs. Herchmer and little Miss Marjorie, the tea room being presided over by Miss Fry and Miss McDonald, charmingly attired. The following guests were present: Mesdames Ganong, Corsan, White, Keay, McMullin, Trites, Rennie, Jarvis, McEvoy, Forbes, Purdy, Clode, Ross, Houghton, Joyce, Bonnell; Misses Chambers, Edmunds, Thompson, Hall, Mott, Todhunter, McDonald, Kidd, McBroom, Ryan, Kirkpatrick, Lawrence, Church, Ross, Knisley, and Mesdames Bird Whimster, Watson, Gordon, Drinnan, and Richards.

MICHEL

From Our Own Correspondent.

An application for an hotel license in our town is being made by L. R. S. Herchmer. This will fill a long felt want.

J. R. Wallace, manager of the Fernie Free Press, visited Michel last week.

The new stables and granery of the Coal Company is nearing completion. These buildings will be up-to-date in every particular.

Mr. G. F. Dougherty, District President of the W. F. of M., has paid Michel several visits the past week.

Deputy Minister of Labor King visited Michel this week in connection with the strike situation.

Mr. Pushee, of Cranbrook, was a visitor in town this week.

Constable Kummer, of Fernie, was on duty in Michel about pay-day.

The Michel Literary Society held a mock trial on Tuesday evening which proved very interesting to a large audience. A spelling match will fill the program for next Tuesday evening.

Mrs. J. R. Walsh, wife of our popular station agent, arrived from the east this week.

The accomodation at the C. P. R. depot here is very inadequate. The waiting room in the evening is not fit for any lady to enter owing to the crowd which congregates and owing to the amount of smoking, the waiting room at times being so full of tobacco smoke that one can scarcely breathe. Ladies have been noticed many times standing outside in the cold for this reason. We hope the C. P. R. officials will take a hand to remedy this grievance.

WEST YALE ELECTION

Ex-Premier Semlin defeats Dr. Sansome

Ashcroft, Feb. 26.—As predicted all along, ex-premier Chas. Semlin has been elected in West Yale by a large majority over his opponent, Dr. Sansome. The returns so far received give Semlin a majority of 77, with three places to hear from, Otter Valley, Granite Creek and Princeton. The total vote polled at these points will be small, and will not affect the result.

FIRST COUNTY COURT.

The Wheels of Justice are not in Good Running Shape Yet.

Judge Forin came in on Thursday intending to hold the regular County Court for which there were several criminal and civil cases. Owing to neglect on the part of the government it was found that no County Court registrar had been appointed for Fernie and in consequence the business of the day had to be postponed until the evening when J. F. Armstrong came in and acted in that capacity. As the judge was unable to remain longer in town only one case was tried and the others will likely be tried in Nelson. A registrar will be appointed at once.

Robert Ashcroft who was committed for trial by Stipendiary Magistrate Forbes last Saturday for forgery and obtaining money under false pretences was tried before Judge Forin on Thursday evening, S. Herchmer appearing for the prosecution and W. R. Ross for the accused.

W. Eschwig, H. W. Herchmer and A. Klauer were the witnesses for the former. Their evidence went to show that the accused had presented two C.N.P. Coal Co's statements made out in the name of Jos. Daniels Jr. and amounting to $27.95 to Mr. Eschwig to cash. The latter refused without an assignment being made and later in the day the accused agreed to sign the required documents which was done in the presence of H. W. Herchmer and the money less the costs was paid to the accused by Mr. Eschwig. These statements had been lost and application had previous to this been made by Daniels to get duplicate statements and subsequently he had drawn his money on these duplicate forms. The presentment of the original statements by Mr. Herchmer at the Coal Company offiice revealed the fraud, and Ashcroft was arrested.

The evidence of several miners called by the defence went to prove that Daniels, Ashcroft and some of their friends had been doing considerable drinking just prior to the incident. The accused swore that Daniels had asked him to get the statements cashed for him, that he was too drunk himself to attend to it, and that Daniels had told him to act as his agent and get them cashed somehow. He admitted that he signed Daniels name and swore that he paid all the money received from Eschwig over to Daniels.

The Judge in summing up the case stated that there was no doubt in his mind as to the guilt of the accused. He believed that the offence would never have been committed but for drink and while he did not claim to be a prohibitionist he strongly condemned the practice of excessive drinking that had come under his observation while in Fernie. For this reason and because he believed the accused to be an industrious man and also because it was his first case in Fernie he would be very lenient with accused. He then ordered him to be allowed to go free on suspended sentence.

MORE DISASTERS.

SIX CARS WENT OVER AN EMBANKMENT.

Passengers Pulled out on the Snow in Their Night Clothes—No One Killed, But Many Injured.

Frost on Wednesday night caused a rail to break on the main line of the Grand Trunk railway half a mile from Whitby, Ont. The first train to pass over the tracks on Thursday morning, the Chicago express, tumbled thirty feet into the field below. Six cars followed each other over the steep embankment, just east of the junction, and rolled down the hill, all but one overturning.

The express was two hours late and was running immediately ahead of the local train. Engineer Ireland, the driver, had just slacked speed for Whitby Junction when he felt the hind trucks of the mogul engine leave the track. He tried to stop the train but the engine rushed on, dragging car after car from the rails The faulty rail was at a sharp switch, and instead of following the tender the baggage car shot over the rail and down the embankment. The second class coach, which was filled with emigrants, followed and then each coach went over in turn until all were piled in a heap at the bottom. After the slide down the hill, the overturning of the cars produced a scene of terror, and men and women fought for doors and windows. The train had been crowded with passengers and the screaming of the women and children was heart-rending. Conductor Charles Stewart smashed a window in the vestibule of the Pullman coach and crawled out, being followed by the brakemn. While the latter ran back to flag the local train which was just behind, Stewart secured the assistance of the passengers in the first-class coach, and began the work of relieving those in the other cars. The occupants of the Pullman sleepers had just arisen and were dragged in night clothes out of windows and through doors of the upturned cars into the snow. Mrs. Langhill, of Waltham, Mass., whose hip was dislocated, had to be pulled through the car window and was terribly cut; other passengers had similar experiences. It is wonderful no loss of life took place.

RAILWAY HORROR.

Car Filled With Children Cut in Two Many Killed and Injured.

A fast express on the Lackawanna railway cut through a trolley car crowded with 100 school children at the Clifton avenue crossing, at Newark, N. J., on Thursday. Eight of the children were killed and a score or more of them injured. The motorman of the car, who stuck to his post, will die, and the engineer of the express was so badly hurt that there is little hope of his recovery.

Both the express and the trolley were on a steep grade, going at right angles. The express was signalled and the crossing gates were lowered while the trolley car was yet half way down the hill. The motorman shut off the power and applied the brakes, but almost immediately the car began to slip along the icy rails. It gained in momentum tremendously, and at the bottom of the hill crashed through the gates directly in the track of the incoming train. The locomotive ploughed its way through the trolley, throwing the children in every directian.

The children say that when the car was less than half way down the hill the railroad gates began to drop. Peter Brady, the motorman, promptly shut off the power and applied the brakes. The speed of the car was checked, but it continued to move slowly down the incline. There was no thought of danger. Then it began to move faster and faster. The ice-covered rails afforded no hold for the wheels, and although Brady jammed his brake harder, and then swung on his reserve, the momentum of the car grew at every yard, until it shot down toward the railroad.

When the car was right at the gates the express thundered into view. Warned by the cries of those afoot and by their sense of danger, those on the platforms began to throw themselves off into the snow, and as the car sped along the few remaining fled toward the railroad. Perhaps one-third escaped death or injury in this way, but there was no time for those within the car to do more than rush toward the rear door. The gates were swept aside like toothpicks, and before the cracking of these died out the crash came. For thirty seconds before the accident the air was filled with the frantic cries of those who saw death dashing down upon them.

The wreck of the trolleycar was complete. The pilot of the engine struck it almost in the centre and turned it partly around and then the ponderous engine cut it in two. The upper part of the trolley was reduced to fragments under the drivers of the locomotive. One half of the car was thrown to one side and lay on the tracks. The other section was hurled some distance away. In every direction lay the dead and injured. The engine was brought to a standstill and from the train and from nearby houses men rushed to the rescue. The spectacle was apalling, and many who started to work had to give up, unnerved.

A dispatch from Ottawa, Ont., under date of Feb. 19th says: A runaway horse from a milkman's sleigh attempted to get through a glass door into a butcher's store on Gladstone avenue and got stuck half way. The lower part of the door was wood. The animal was disembowelled and had to be sawn in two before the door was cleared.

A TRUE CANADIAN.

Give me the drifting snow, the strong north wind,
A path that cracks with the frost—
There's a warm hearth-stone and a log well timed
When the snow-capped hills are crossed;
There's a rollicking lad to climb my knees,
A bowl and a deep flagon,
So give me the snow the whistling breeze—
I'll be home when the night comes on.

Give me the barking wolves, the wildcat's cry,
And the dreary, ice-bound mead—
There's a welcome place where the hot scones fry
When the dreary wastes recede;
There's a toddling tot, whose mirth foretells
A wife that knows not a frown,
So give me the snow, the jingling bells—
I'll be home when the night comes down.

Give me the swinging ax, the woodman's call,
The hunter's horn on the hill—
There's a hearty hand and a kiss for all
When the blows and blasts are still;
There's a rollicking lad to climb my knees,
A pipe and a heap of fun;
So give me the snow the whistling breeze—
I'll be home when the day is done.

—Newton MacTavish.

MEDICINE HAT.

Editor Writes That All the Bad Weather Does Not Originate There.

Fred G. Forster, editor of The Medicine Hat News, has written a somewhat long letter to The Chicago Tribune, defending his town against the aspersion that all the bad weather comes from that place. He says: "Medicine Hat is a town of 2,500 people, delightfully situated in the valley of the South Saskatchewan River. We are 1,000 miles west of Lake Superior, 200 miles east of the Rockies, and 70 miles north of the Montana boundary between Canada and the United States. To be more exact, our latitude is 50 degrees 1 minute north, our longitude 110 degrees 37 minutes west, and our elevation above sea level, 2,161 feet. We are in the centre of that district of Western America which is swept by chinook winds. These winds are the bright influence of our 'Banana Belt' winters." Continuing, Mr. Forster remarks that: "There is a district around Medicine Hat about 200 miles in diameter where the winters are short and the temperatures moderate. The district comprises what is the stock grazing country of the Northwest—which district is attracting attention from stockmen from every stock state in the country to the south of us. The town is a growing, progressive place, a railroad centre, has coal mines, and is a great stock shipping point. The town enjoys the advantages of up to date commercial and business facilities. The town owns its waterworks plant and supplies citizens with good water at a moderate rate. The town owns its natural gas system and gives citizens gas for fuel and light at less than 20 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. The Canadian Pacific Railway has a yearly pay roll of $250,000, and this year the stock business brought into the ranches $800,000. We have five churches, two schools, two hospitals, three chartered banks, all lines of mercantile business represented, and are, in fact, a unique community. The citizens know how to enjoy life as they find it here, and life on the prairier and in the prairie towns has an enticing fascination. There is an unaccountable charm about the free, open Western life."

INDIANS EARN MORE MONEY.

They Are Improving in Morality, Says Commissioner Laird.

The Indian population of the Dominion has increased 8,790 during the past year, owing largely to the bringing in of 7,518 Indians from beyond treaty limits. Births were 2,500, deaths 2,349. The aggregate sum earned in wages was $1,181,760, an increase of nearly $150,000.

As to their social development, the departmental blue book contains conflicting opinions. Mr. Jas. Gibbons, of the Edmonton agency, states that after 40 years' experience he has yet to meet a Christian Indian, or one who will not steal, lie and be immoral. In reply, Mr. Alex McGibbon, of Qu'Appelle, speaks of the Indians at Pelican Narrows, away north of Prince Albert, as men who could be trusted, and who, morning and evening, always had prayers in their little tent.

Mr. David Laird, Indian Commissioner for Manitoba and the Territories, considers that, on the whole, the Indians are improving in morality. Plurality of wives is found only in some of the western reserves. Although vigorous efforts have been made to suppress unlawful dancing, sun dance, had been held on the Blood reserve. The dance lasted three days only, although the gathering extended over about a month. Valuable haying time was wasted, but the illegal features of the dance were not at all prominent. A similar dance on the Peigan reserve was devoid of objectionable features.

Some Points About Menier.

M. Menier, the proprietor of Anticosti, is a genuine politician. He was a candidate in the last French elections for Meanx. After he had made a speech at one of the meetings an angry-looking workingman rose in the audience and propounded a series of questions to which he replied in a most satisfactory manner and received great applause. Someone had the curiosity to follow the workingman elector, and noticed that after he had gone a little way he got into M. Menier's carriage and drove off to another part of the town, where a little later the candidate for political distinction appeared and made another speech After he had finished the formidable-looking workingman got up, pulled out a bit of crumpled paper, and read the same three questions as before, to which M. Menier gave the same "grateful and comforting" answers. This was rather a curious coincidence, and someone, looking over the inquisitor's shoulder, recognized the handwriting on the paper as M. Menier's own, and the inquisitor as M. Menier's gardener! Possibly M. Menier has learned this expedient during his experiences in the neighborhood of his Canadian resort.

CABLE GOSSIP.

UNEMPLOYED CAUSE ANXIETY IN LONDON.

John Burns, Sir John Gorst and Kier Hardie, Raise the Question in the House of Commons, but Receive Little Encouragement From Ministers.

Criticism of the British war office culminated in the House of Commons on Feb. 23rd in a motion for a vote of censure against War Secretary Broderick. The motion was in the shape of an amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne regretting the fact that the "organization of the army was not suited to the needs of the Empire, and that no proportionate gain in strength or efficiency had resulted from the recent increase of military expenditure."

The motion was identical with an amendment moved by Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Liberal leader, when Mr. Brodrick introduced his army reform scheme in 1901.

The vote of censure was proposed by Mr. Beckett, an influential Conservative, who was backed up by a considerable section of revolting Unionists. In introducing the motion Mr. Beckett declared Mr. Brodrick had deplorably neglected the greatest opportunity ever given to a minister and had produced a scheme which was not sound in principle, but was ruinous in practice and enormously costly.

The negotiations for the purchase by the Canadian Pacific Railroad company of fourteen Beaver line steamers from the Elder Dempster & Co. were satisfactorily concluded on February 23. The price paid is said to be about $7,500,000.

The deal is regarded in London as having an important bearing on the proposed fast mail service, as it will probably eliminate the tender of Elder Dempster & Co. therefore, and leave the Canadian Pacific Railroad company in a better position to secure the contract.

Last week the House of Commons settled down after the ceremonial and pageantry to a two days' debate on questions of paramount importance connected with the poverty and physical degeneracy of the swarming masses of darkest London. John Burns, Jesse Collins, Sir John Gorst and Kier Hardie proposed remedies for this social leprosy, which hard working vicars and missionaries in the east end have been struggling to overcome by organized religious and charitable efforts. The ministers took an easy going view of existing evils, and declined to commit themselves to drastic measures for promoting emigration from the overcrowding towns to the country, or providing public work on a large scale, or rehousing the poor. There are half a million unemployed in London, in the worst seasons, and another million may be irregularly occupied with wretchedly paid work, and the process of deterioration in the working capacity is constantly going on among the ill-housed and half-starved masses of the imperial capital. It is a question which appeals to practical church workers among the poor in London.

In accordance with an arrangement arrived at between the parties to the suit, the court on Feb. 23rd awarded the Taff Vale Railway company $115,000 damages against the Amalgamated Society of Railway servants.

After a long trial in the King's Bench division of the high court of justice the case of the Taff Vale Railroad company against the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, involving many questions of great importance to trade unionists, resulted December 19 in a verdict for the plaintiffs. The latter complained of malicious molestation, picketing, intimidation, etc., during the strike of 1900.

Mr. Hanbury, speaking to the farmers of Preston, last Saturday, said he doubted if Canadian cattle would come in even were their ports opened. The Canadians preferred feeding their cattle at home, sending them over here finished. He added: "Canada used to send 60,000 steers yearly, now Ireland sends an additional 120,000, so it is not true, as sometimes said, that we are short of store cattle."

There is considerable surprise at Marconi's announcement that he had arranged with a great London paper to supply a wireless message daily from Canada. Nobody supposed that Marconi's arrangements were sufficiently forward to contemplate such a development.

With the object of stemming the wholesale emigration of young girls to America, which is occasioning the Hungarian government considerable concern, Premier Coloman De Czell has sent a circular letter to the local authorities of Hungary calling attention to what he describes as this "melancholy fact," and directing that they only permit minors to emigrate when sanctioned to do so by their parents or guardians and when they travel in charge of adults.

Princess Djemil Toussoun, sister of the Khedive of Egypt and wife of Prince Djemil Toussoun, recently made an unsuccessful attempt at self-destruction by taking poison.

The act is said to have been prompted by jealousy. The Princess subsequently left Egypt on board one of the royal yachts, refusing to see her husband. Her highness went by way of Trieste to Vienna, where it is said she is about to wed an Austrian count.

A "Hoodooed" House.

A dispatch from Chatham, Ont., of Feb. 23, says: James McGarry, a sewing machine agent, dropped dead this afternoon. Deceased was sitting in a rig in front of his house on Harvey street when he was seized with an attack of heart failure.

The house where McGarry lived has a record of disasters in connection with it. About three weeks ago Mr. McGarry's son fatally shot himself in the house. Johnson McAullay was killed on the railway while a tenant of the house. Dr. Richardson, the original owner, dropped dead while splitting wood in the back yard.

A Windsor Mystery.

A Windsor dispatch says: The sudden and inexplicable disappearance of Frank Hill, a resident of Sandwich East, and his wife, is causing considerable comment in the neighborhood. The couple disappeared simultaneously one night last week, leaving no trace behind. All the furniture was left in the house, the doors of which were not even locked. Hill and his wife came to live in Sandwich about two months ago. Domestic quarrels were of frequent occurrence.

Last Tuesday night the pair engaged in a violent altercation, which was heard by several of Hill's neighbors. The following morning the place was found deserted as related above. The authorities were notified of the affair and will institute an investigation.

A peculiar incident in connection with the disappearance is that a pet dog of Mrs. Hill's which invariably followed its mistress wherever she went, remains in the cellar of the house, and cannot be driven away.

An Unfortunate Conductor.

A dispatch from St. Thomas says: A Police officer from Haldimand Co., arrived in the city Sunday night with a warrant for the arrest of William Leek, M. C. R. conductor, on a charge of manslaughter. Leek was acting as pilot for a Pere Marquette crew, in charge of a light freight train, which ran into the rear of Conductor Charles Kennedy's freight at Perry station, disregarding the signals against him, and killing John Davis, of Hagersville. The coroner's jury returned a verdict placing the blame upon Leek. Leek was a conductor previously, and was set back some ten years ago being recently reinstated, and it is said that the trip on which the collision occurred was his first since his reinstatement.

The hens that finish sixth or better in the contest will become the property of the Australian government and their former owners will receive $25 for each of them.

KILLED A MAN

THEOPHILE BELANGER CONFESSED TO THE CRIME.

He Shot His Brother-in-law on account of the latters intimacy with the Farmers Twenty-year-old Daughter.

Advices from Montreal dated Feb. 20th state that at 1 o'clock Friday morning Chief of Provincial Detectives McCaskill arrested Theophile Belanger for the murder of his brother-in-law, Antoine Seguin, at St. Eustache on Thursday last. On the way to St. Scholastique, Belanger confessed the crime. The confession shows that the cause of the crime was the intimacy between Seguin and Belanger's daughter, which it appears became known to the murderer. Belanger says that he had suspected this intimacy for some time, and finally, having assured himself of the fact, he awaited an opportunity to catch the old man alone. On Thursday Mrs. Belanger was out visiting, and the children were all at school. The murderer does not say where the daughter was at the time, but about noon Belanger met Seguin some twenty yards from the back of the house, where both of them lived, and put a shot gun to his shoulder and shot the man dead. Belanger then put the body on a sleigh and took it to his barn, half a mile away. It seems that while this was all done in the daytime, even to the hauling away of the body, no one appears to have witnessed anything which gave even a clue that Belanger was the guilty man. Detective McCaskill, however, strongly suspected that there was an intimacy between the murdered man, Seguin, and Belanger's daughter, in spite of the fact that she was twenty and he sixty-three, and that they were also uncle and niece. He worked upon this clue, the result being that the detective finally secured a confession.

Walked Into Driving Wheel.

A Brandon dispatch, dated Feb. 19th, says that a serious accident happened to R. B. Currie, of Souris, who was visiting in Brandon. He was going over the electric light station, and in turning to come out walked head first into the great driving wheel, which was revolving at a rapid rate. The engineer saw his danger and shouted, but was too late. Mr. Currie received a serious injury to his head and a compound fracture of his leg. The ambulance conveyed the injured man to the hospital, where he at present lies, living, but with the question of his recovery in grave doubts. He is a son of Mr. W. Currie, insurance agent, of this city.

Poison in Prison.

A dispatch from London, England, states that a startling story of the wholesale poisoning of a large number of convicts comes from Maryborough, Ireland. On Monday the soup was served in the ordinary way to the convicts in the prison there, with the result that 120 men became ill. On Tuesday soup was again served, when 200 more became ill, many seriously. Three doctors were called in to assist the prison doctor, and later, Dr. Woodhouse, the principal medical officer to Irish prisons, was summoned. The utmost reticence was observed by the prison and other authorities about the occurrence, but the lives of five convicts are said to be in serious peril.

Evils of Quick Lunch.

Lancet, the leading medical journal of the world, publishes a warning framed in the most solemn terms against the American quick-lunch system, which is about to be inaugurated in London, Eng. It says: "We do not hesitate to ask our readers to impress upon their patients that the adoption of this proposal would be a wicked physiological step. The demands of business may be pressing, but the demands of the body are a reality and are more serious." The article continues in the same vein and predicts that if the people of London take favorably to the quick-lunch system, there will be a break-down of the maltreated humzn machine.

Many schemes for pushing business are worked out these days, but just a little the most enterprising we have yet come across is the modest modus operandi of the Three Girls Co., of Orillia, Ont. These three frisky yogng women advertise themselves as dealers in novelties. Their plan is to send through the mails a sample of their wares, such as a set of cuff buttons, to men whose names they have obtained. A circular letter is enclosed asking the receiver to send the price of the articles, or if he does not wish to keep the goods, to return them. Of course, only a brute of a man would return the buttons, after gazing at the portraits of the three girls which adorn the top of the circular letter. "Cherchez la femme," is a common explanation when a good man goes wrong. In this case we would wager a sixpence that the Three Girls Co. is a man, the portraits notwithstanding. If they are the genuine feminine article, they will not be long with the company, as no doubt, offers of marriage will flow in freely by the time these circulars become freely circulated.

Lengthy as some of the cattle ranges of Texas are they will appear small when compared with the fence to be built at the joint expense of the Canadian and American Governments. This will be on the boundary line between Montana and Canada, and will be built of barbed wire for seven hundred miles. The necessity for this huge undertaking arises in a peculiar way. Cattle from both countries stray across the boundary line, and are seized by custom-house officials on the ground that they have been smuggled.

Only a score of people were present. The ceremony was performed by the former chaplain of the Irish Brigade.

Principal Cameron Drops Dead.

A dispatch from Halifax, of Feb. 22, says: Last evening the janitor of the Yarmouth Academy found Principal Cameron lying dead in his class room. The immediate cause of death was not apparent, but he had been in poor health for some time.

Mr. Cameron went to Yarmouth from Pictou a quarter of a century ago, since when he had been head of the educational department in Yarmouth. His pupils fill responsible positions in many parts of the world. He leaves a widow.

The body was found lying at the foot of the hatrack, as if he had been reaching for his coat when he fell dead. The coroner's jury brought in a verdict that as far as they could see death had not been caused by violent means.

Steepest Railway in the World.

A wonderful mountain railway is being constructed at present in the Tyrol, and when completed next summer it will be the steepest line in the world. The railway, which will be two and a half kilometers in length, will join the village of Kaltern to the summit of the Col de Mendel at a geight of 2,550 feet. The distance will be covered in exactly twenty-seven minutes, while by road it takes four hours to reach the top. The force is electricity, and the cog (middle) rail system has been employed. The maximum grade is 64 in 100, surpassing that of the Stanserhorn line, which formerly held the European record. The coaches will hold fifty persons and baggage, and special precautions have been taken to enable the tourist to view the wonderful scenery through which the line passes. M. Strubb, a Swiss engineer of Clarens, is carrying on this wonderful enterprise.

HOME THOUGHTS.

You sometimes see a woman whose old age is as exquisite as was the perfect bloom of her youth. You wonder how this has come about. You wonder how it is her life has been a long and happy one. Here are some of the reasons:

She knew how to forget disagreeable things.

She kept her nerves well in hand, and inflicted them on no one.

She mastered the art of saying pleasant things.

She did not expect too much from her friends.

She made whatever work came to her congenial.

She retained her illusions and did believe all the world wicked and unkind.

She relieved the miserable, and sympathized with the sorrowful.

She never forgot that kind words and a smile cost nothing, but are priceless treasures to the discouraged.

She did unto others as she would be done by, and now that old age has come to her, and there is a halo of white hair about her head, she is loved and considered. This is the secret of a long life and a happy one.

A Wellington tradesman had posted to him from Edinburgh some months ago a letter, the address of which, did not, unfortunately, give the name of the county. The post officials forwarded it to Wellington, New Zealand. Then it travelled about that colony for a time, but, becoming tired—it was virtually "worn out"—a kind-hearted official patched it up with a gummed label and dispatched it to England again On its arrival it found its way to Somersetshire, but eventually, after a well-earned rest of a few days, it went to Wellington, Shropshire, and was correctly delivered. There was no extra charge.

Gravel Permanently Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Reuben Draper, of Bristol, Gives His Experience, and is Prepared to Furnish Proof of What He Says.

Bristol, Que., Feb. 23.—(Special)—It is with feelings of intense relief that people here now admit that the operating knife is no longer necessary to cure that once dreaded disease—Gravel. Experience has shown it to be one of the numerous family of ailments arising from diseased Kidneys, and as such easily curable by those sovereign Kidney remedies, Dodd's Kidney Pills. Reuben Draper well known in this neighborhood, is one of those who can speak from experience. He says:

"I was taken ill with what I thought was gravel. I consulted two doctors, but got no lasting relief, and I continued to grow weaker all the time. Then a man advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, for he said they had cured his mother, so I thought I would try them.

"Just one week after starting to use Dodd's Kidney Pills I passed a stone as large as a small bean, and four days after I passed another about the size of a grain of barley. This gave me great relief and I began to feel better and gain strength. I have the stones in a bottle and can show them to anyone who may doubt what I say.

"That happened four years ago, and I have had no return of the trouble since."

MARKETS.

(Compiled from The Commercial)

WHEAT—During the past week the speculative markets have been very dull and dragging, and prices almost on a dead level. There has been some development of the easier feeling noticed last week, and it has led to considerable selling of long wheat by holders who were getting tired, and short sellers were encouraged thereby to sell short, and help prices down, but the markets have taken all the wheat without any break, and although there is a good deal of bearish sentiment in evidence it would seem that the undertone is strong. Prices at the close of business Friday show unchanged to ⅛c. advance on closing prices of a week ago. The movement of wheat in the States the past week shows some decline a year ago, but this may be partly attributed to the cold and stormy weather hindering outside work. Exports from both coasts show a marked falling off, and should this continue it may have a strengthening effect on European markets. There are reports of better flour trade at Minneapolis and the cash demand there remains strong, as both millers and elevator companies continue to pay from ½c to 1c over May price for spot wheat. The recent cold weather has been very severe over the winter wheat belt in the States and there is almost certain to be more or less damage, but it will not develop till later on. The Argentine is now shipping freely and it is a bearish feature, but with no exports from Australia, a lessening quantity from North America, and a continuation of large consumption, Europe may easily absorb without difficulty all that Argentine will have to send her.

Manitoba wheat has been very quiet all week, with very little doing. The demand is very light, but at the same time sellers are indifferent, and wheat is never pressed on the market. The range in prices during the week has not got beyond ½c, and at the close of business Friday prices were: No. 1 hard, 74c; 1 northern, 72c; 2northern, 70⅝c; 3 northern, 68¼c., spot or February delivery; and for May delivery, 1 hard, 76⅝c; 1 northern, 74¾c; 2 northern, 73c; and 3 northern, 70¼c; 3 northern and lower grades are very dull and hard to sell. Some 3 northern for May delivery was sold as low as 70c. Buyers are not in the market for it. All prices are in store Fort William, Port Arthur or Duluth.

FLOUR—Best Hungarian Patent, $2.10 per sack of 98 pounds delivered to the trade; Glenora Patent, $1.95; strong bakers, $1.65; and XXXX, $1,35.

MILLFEED—Prices are up 50c per ton, making bran $15.50 and shorts $17.50 per ton in bulk.

OATS—The market seems to be continually on short allowance. Stocks in farmers' hands are undoubtedly large, but as they find their way to market very slowly this fact does not help things very much. Farmers are notoriously unfaithful in the discharge of their contracts, too, which makes it difficult for dealers to know just what oats they will have at a given time. Contracts to ship oats at stated prices are being continually broken by farmers without the slightest compunction. As to prices, we note an advance of about 1 to 1½c to those in vogue a week ago. No. 1 white in carlots on track are today worth 30½c per bus.; No. 2 white, 28½c, and feed grades, 27c. Farmers' loads at country points are bringing 25c.

BARLEY—The market is firmer. Dealers are paying 31 to 32c per bushel for feed grades on the street at Winnipeg.

FLAXSEED—Market nominal.

SPELTZ—The market is higher at 32c per bushel and 56 pounds, delivered in Winnipeg

HAY—Fresh baled hay on track is worth $5 to $6 per ton.

POTATOES—35c per bushel.

BUTTER — Creamery—City makers and are now quoting 24c for choice, fresh made in one-pound bricks, delivered.

BUTTER—Dairy—There is but little doing in the dairy butter market. Receipts are very light. Rolls are now being offered to the retail trade at 15 to 17c per pound. Tub butter is worth 14 to 17c per pound delivered in Winnipeg, net price.

CHEESE—The market is quiet. Orders are being filled with Ontario stock. Jobbers are selling to the retail trade at 13½c per pound.

EGGS—Eggs are scarce at 22c per dozen, net, delivered in Winnipeg, subject to candling.

DRESSED POULTRY—Dealers are offering in a wholesale way 10c per pound for chickens, dressed; 9½c to 10c for ducks and geese, and 15c for turkeys.

DRESSED MEATS — Beef, city dressed, 6 to 7½c per pound; country stock, ½c under these figures; mutton, 8 to 9c; lamb, 11½c; hogs, 7c.

HIDES—Country frozen hides are bringing from 5½ to 6c per pound, delivered at Winnipeg, less 5 pounds tare; sheep pelts, 30 to 50c.

WOOL—Market nominal.

TALLOW—No. 1 tallow is worth 5½c per pound delivered here, and No. 2, 4½c.

SENECA ROOT—Market nominal.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—There is nothing doing in the cattle market beyond a little trade with city butchers. Cattle are scarce in Manitoba. Finest steers are worth 4c; butchers' ordinary 3½c, and from that figure down to 2½c, according to quality. Stockers, yearlings, $14 to $17; two year olds, $18 to $22 each.

SHEEP—Worth 3½c per pound off cars here. Lambs, 4¼ to 4½c.

MILCH COWS—Prices are firm at $30 to $45 each, according to quality.

A Text That Stumped Him.

"I once heard a minister who boasted from his pulpit that he was able to preach from any text in the Bible offhand without thought or other preparation, and as a test of his talent in extemporaneous speaking he invited his congregation the next Sunday morning to hand in any texts they would like him to preach from, when he would show them what he was able to do," relates the Chicago Record-Herald. "In order that he might not be suspected of surreptitious preparation the passages of Scripture were to be written upon slips of paper, sealed up in envelopes and placed upon the pulpit immediately before the opening of the service. The next Sunday morning the pastor came bounding in, pride and confidence gleaming in his eyes, and found a number of sealed envelopes lying upon the big Bible. After the preliminary service he called attention to them and said he would preach from the text contained in the envelope that lay on the top of the pile. The remainder he would reserve for future Sabbaths. Tearing it open, he unfolded a slip of paper and read the words once addressed to the prophet Balaam, 'Am I not thine ass?'"

Wanted the Whole Outfit.

A friend once wrote to Mark Twain asking his opinion on a certain matter and received no reply. He waited a few days and then wrote again. His second letter was also ignored. Finally he sent a third note, inclosing a sheet of paper and a two cent stamp. By return post he received a postcard on which was the following: "Paper and stamp received. Please send envelope."

CUTTING TEETH.

A Trying Time to Both Baby and Mother

There is no time when baby requires more attention than during the teething period. At that time the little one is always cross and fretful, subject to stomach disorders and sometimes convulsions. Often mothers are absolutely worn out caring for baby, and the whole household is in a condition of anxiety. This condition can be easily remedied by the use of Baby's Own Tablets, which cool the sour little stomach, allay the inflammation of the gums, and give the little one healthy, natural sleep. A mother's word can always be depended upon where the health of her little one is concerned, and thousands of mothers praise this medicine. Mrs. R. L. McFarlane, Bristol, Que., says:—"In my estimation, Baby's Own Tablets have no equal as a medicine for children. They are invaluable at the teething period, and I would not be without them as they keep my baby healthy and happy."

The Tablets relieve all the minor ailments of little ones, are guaranteed to contain no opiate or poisonous "soothing stuff," and may be given with absolute safety to a new born babe. Sold at 25 cents a box by all druggists, or sent post paid, by writing direct to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N.Y.

There never was and never will be a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in sound, unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grevious ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease and by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses through the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result, improved appetite. Northrup & Lyman, of Toronto, have given to the public their Superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, guaged by the opinions of scientists, this wine approaches nearest perfection of any on the market. All druggists sell it.

C. P. R. ENTER SUITS.

THEY CLAIM LARGE TRACT OF LAND ON WEST SIDE OF THE ELK.

Many Fernie People Interested. They Will Put up a Big Fight in the Courts For Their Rights.

The following is from the last issue of the Fort Steele Prospector.

The Canadian Pacific Railway company has commenced suit in the supreme court Vancouver registry, claiming title to 240,000 acres of land in the Elk River Valley, asking for damages for trespass, and an injunction restraining so-called trespassers from further trespass, and from applying to the crown for title to said land.

The claim to the land by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company is based upon the Provincial land grant by the government in aid of the Columbia and Western railway.

The announcement of the C.P.R. claiming title to 240,000 acres on the west side of Elk River, is a statement in which the whole of British Colnmbia is interested, for it will delay the opening up and development of a part of Southeast Kootenay which has been proved to possess quartz mines of exceptional richness, considerable areas of coal lands, and vast areas of choice timber lands.

Anybody who knows anything about Southeast Kootenay and its land grants to railway companies are emphatic in condemning this attempt of the C.R.R. to obtain still further concessions in this district.

The land in question was supposed to have been under reserve for railway purposes, but this was found to have been a mistake and the Government during the past year has allowed pre-emptors to take up land, issued coal licenses, and permits and leases for timber limits. The new town of Morrissey, many ranches and homesteads, sawmills, timber limits and coal lands are within the confines of the tract claimed by the C.P.R.

The history of railway building in the Crow's Nest Pass does not show that managers of the C.P.R. have made it a point to treat fairly with the people of this district. The total acreage of Southeast Kootenay is about 4,400,000 acres. Of this amount the C.P.R. have succeeded in getting possession of 3,400,000 acres under land grants for railway construction in West Kootenay and the Crow's Nest line.

It is understood that the Canadian Pacific does not intend to be satisfied with its present holdings in this district, but will endeavor to force the government to make them a present of the land now held in reserve in the extreme southeastern portion of the district, which contains unlimited resources in coal, oil and minerals, besides vast forests of the choicest timber in the province.

There is no doubt but that the C.P.R. company has resumed its crusade in favor of its plan to absorb not only the 50,000 acres of coal land owned by the Dominion Government, but from patriotic feelings think that the coal areas of South East Kootenay, as an asset, should belong to the C.P.R., it affects to be fearful that the smelting and mining interests of the Kootenays will in some way be affected—unless the entire coal fields of South East Kootenay are given to them.

British Columbia suffers from the "hold-up" "stand and deliver" policy of the C.P.R. If men who constitute the government at Ottawa, by a railway commission, would put in force that special c use in the Crow's Nest charter, "government control of freight rates," it would go a long way towards Lettering the existing conditions of the mining anp smelting industry of the province.

TO MEET IN FERNIE.

Fernie is honored in being chosen as the place of meeting for the annual convention of the Associated Boards of Trade. March the 18th was the date fixed, but owing to the date of the legislature meeting being postponed it was at first thought advisable to put off this meeting. The present strike situation has had a counteracting influence however as it is hoped that this convention might do something towards a settlement if such is not arrived at before that date, and the convention will take place as originally planned. Pres. Buchanan, of Kaslo, has made this announcement and quotes his reason for arriving at that conclusion.

Mr. Buchanan says: "The question comes up as to whether we should now postpone our meeting for three weeks on account of the postponement of the date of the meeting of the legislature. My present intention is to proceed as at present announced. I have a request from Greenwood, or at least a suggestion, that I should hurry up the meeting in view of the coal mines strike, and while I do not see that we could bring it on earlier than the time now fixed, a further adjournment would seem like a shirking of a call to a mission of possible service to the country."

Secretary Jackson, of Rossland, will send out special notices at once to all affiliated boards stating that notwithstanding the announced postponement of the meeting of the legislature, it is deemed advisable in view of the meeting of the Dominion parliament, and in view of the deplorable strike in the coal mines, to adhere to the date fixed, viz., Wednesday, March 18th. This will obviate any misunderstanding in regard to the matter.

POLICE COURT.

Chief McMullin has begun a crusade against undesirable characters who have no visible means of support and who are known as tin-horns and frequenters of the tenderloin district. This is a work that will meet with the approbation of every healthy-minded citizen of the town.

In this connection Fred Grant was arrested and brought up before Stipendiary Magistrate Forbes on Monday. He had no evidence to offer to disprove the charge, but begged piteously for mercy and promised to leave the town at once. He was sentenced to three months imprisonment at Nelson.

Geo. Fay, who came to town recently with a female companion, was up under a similar charge. Word was received from Calgary by the police of his true character and he was not allowed the privilege of long enjoying Fernie society and scenery. He was ordered to pay $10 and leave the town, which he immediately did.

James Howarth is another hanger-on whose presence was not felt to be conducive to the well-being of the town. Plenty of evidence was produced to show that he belonged to this undesirable class who do not work for a living and he was ordered to leave town by Wednesday or spend a month in jail. He left for parts unknown.

Several trivial cases were disposed of. Frank Nicola and Frank Marconi, both of Morrissey, were found guilty of the theft of small quantities of coal and received a light sentence.

John Carroll, more popularly known as "Sailor Jack," again wearied of liberty and sought refuge in the king's boarding house by getting on another "spree." He is in for thirty days this time.

Fred Smith was brought in by Constable Tranter charged with being drunk and disorderly. He was sentenced to three months at Nelson.

John Lyon was charged by John Hunter with using abusive language. He was given $5 and costs or ten days and as he couldn't rustle the required $6 in eight hours he was locked up. The next day, however, his friends paid the fine and he was released.

Constable S. H. Hoskins of Kimberley, who has been assisting the force in Fernie for several days, took Grant and Smith to Nelson on Tuesday.

ARE THE C. N. P. MINERS WELL PAID?

Specific Cases Published by the Miners last Week Refuted by General Superintendent Stockett.

A representative of the FREE PRESS interviewed General Superintendent Stockett regarding the correctness of the statements published in our last issue, showing the earnings of certain contract miners at the Morrissey Mines during January.

Mr. Stockett stated that the statements referred to were so manifestly unfair and incorrect that he did not think any intelligent workman could, or would, be deceived by them. In order, however, that the general public, who are not so conversant with the facts, may have a correct idea of the conditions prevailing and the gross attempt to deceive, he requested the printing of the following statements. These facts can be substantiated by the pay-rolls, and signed statements, which are open to the inspection of any interested parties.

Mr Stockett added that the complaint that the Company Stores were a source of grievance to the employees could no longer be used, as the stores at the three mines had been disposed of entirely and that the Coal Company was in no way interested with the new owners. The stores had been started and operated by the Coal Co. because there was demand for them and outside capital had been loath to make the venture, happily the conditions in this country were now so well known and the future prospects of the Valley so bright that outside capital recognizing the stability of the Coal Company's business were eager to come forward and relieve the Coal Co. of what had always been a source of annoyance to them.

PHILIP CHRISTOPHER—JANUARY STATEMENT.

Worked, 3 shifts company work. 13 shifts contract work. Total 16 shifts.

Cr.—3 shifts company work	@ $3.00		$ 9.00
112.18 tons coal	" .40		45.20
13⅓ yds. entry driving	" 2.00		26.65
11 sets timber and lagging	" 2.00		22.00
Total earnings,			$102.85
Dr.—Back hand labor, as turned in by Christopher		$ 39.00
Blacksmithing		50	39.50
Net earnings,			$63.35
Deduct $9.00 for 3 shifts company work			9.00
Leaving 13 shifts contract work, or			54.35
Average per shift on contract work,			4.18

Note.—Wm. Ackland was back hand for Christopher and also for James Greenman. He earned during January, $78.50. This was made up of 13 shifts for Christopher, 6 shifts for Greenman, 8 shifts company work, 6 as bratticeman, and 2 repairing trap doors.

Query.—(1) Why does Christopher question the "consideration of $22.00" when he knew it was for timbering? and if he was not entitled to it, why does he not return it to the Company?

(2) Why does Christopher state that his back hand should have been paid $60.00, when by his own return to the office, as well as by the Company's records it was $39.00 as shown?

(3) If Christopher's net earnings were only $1.27 per shift, or $20.35, how was it that he drew $7.65 in cash after paying $55.70 out of his January earnings, for rent, coal, doctor and store?

JOHN BALLUSKY—JANUARY STATEMENT.

Worked, 18 shifts contract work.

Cr.—308 tons of coal	@ $ .40		$123.20

Blacksmithing		50	90.50
Net earnings for 18 shifts			82.70
Average per shift of 8 hours			4.59

Query.—(1) Why did Ballusky fail to turn in his back hand labor, as is the rule, and as has always been done heretofore?

(2) How is it that Ballusky who only claims to have had a second back hand for 5 shifts should have a total of 36 shifts for back hand or 13 shifts over and above the 18 shifts worked by himself? Was it not that he was absent at Fernie encouraging the present strike and taking the earnings of his back hands over over and above the wages paid them, a practice he is so loud in denouncing?

(3) Was it not Ballusky's idea to draw all his earnings and leave the country? and was it not the fact that a garnishee being served against his wages that blocked his scheme and forced his turning in the time of his back hand?

WM. MURRAY—JANUARY STATEMENT.

Deduct $4.50 for 1½ shifts company work			4.50
Leaving for 20 shifts contract work, or			100.55
Average per shift of 8 hours on contract work			5.03

Query.—Why does Murray question the "consideration of $51.30" when he knew it was for timbering? If not entitled to it, why did he not return it to the Company.

(2) Why does Murray state that his back hand labor should have been $150.00, when the total back hand labor chargeable to the Contract work done by himself and partners, was only $108.75, and his proportion of same only $33.20, as turned in by themselves?

(3) If Murray was in debt to the Company at the end of the month, to the extent of $6.35, after working 20 days, how was it possible to draw $39.90 in cash after paying $67.15 out of his January earnings, for board, doctor, store etc.?

JOHN SPAK—JANUARY STATEMENT.

Workod, 2 shifts back hand, 13 shifts Company work, 9 shifts Contract work. Total 24 shifts.

Cr.—2 shifts back hand	@ $2.50		$ 5.00

Total earnings,			$64.40
Dr.—Back hand labor as turned in by Spak		$22.50
Blacksmithing		50	23.00
Net earnings			$41.00

Note.—This statement shows an apparent loss to Spak of $2.60, and nothing for his own time while working the 9 days' Contract work,—Spak was a partner with Krall and Lapsonsky in the driving of No. 3 mine main level, and as such was entitled to a share in the Yardage, Timbering, and Pushing, as well as coal. Krall and Lapsonsky came to the Company's office and stated that they had an arrangement with Spak, whereby all Yardage, Timbering and Pushing should be turned in to them, and they would settle with Spak. As will be seen by statements following, Krall's average per shift of 8 hours while working Contract was, $5.58, and Lapsonsky's average per shift of 8 hours was $7.25.

Query.—How much of their earnings did Krall and Lapsonsky turn over to Spak? Was Spak fair in withholding the amount received from Krall and Lapsonsky in submitting his statement for publication?

TO SETTLE STRIKE.

B. C. MINING ASSOCIATION ACT DEFINITELY AND UNANIMOUSLY.

Commission of Six, With President Keen, Appointed to Bring About a Settlement. Prior Offers Aid.

The B. C. Miners Association at its convention at Victoria passed many important resolutions bearing on the different phases of mining interests in this province but probably all the other business put together would not equal in importance the unanimous approval of two resolutions dealing with disputes between capital and labor. The first of these with an additional clause added by Chris. Foley read as follows;—

"Resolved that the government of British Columbia be hereby requested to forthwith appoint a commission of three members, whose duty it shall be to examine as fully as possible into the existing relations of employer and employees engaged in the mining industry in this province, and to gather data on the questions of capital and labor therein employed; said commission to meantime be regarded as a conciliation board in any mining labor troubles that may occur, with a view to the settlement and prevention of such trade disturbances.

Chris Foley moved the following resolution which was also adopted.

"Resolved that the government be respectfully requested to constitute said board of conciliation by the appointment of the following: (a) One practical mine manager: (b) one practical mine worker and (c) a chairman mutually agreed upon by the other two. This board shall have the power to collect information under oath, and its further duty shall be to make prompt report from time to time to the minister of mines, through whom the press and public may be informed of the situation."

The other, coming nearer home, dealt directly and practically with the live question of the day,—the Fernie strike—which is tying up the industries of a large portion of B. C.

On Saturday evening the convention passed a resolution dealing with the Fernie strike. The convention appointed a committee consisting of Messrs Gaunce, Greenwood, Keefer, Greenwood and Flumerfelt, Grand Forks, representatives of capital; and Seaman, Rossland, McAndrews, Kaslo, and Chris Foley, Vancouver, representatives of labor, together with chairman Keen, to proceed at once to Fernie and attempt to settle the strike, the association to pay all expenses.

Premier Prior was present later on and said he had just learned that a resolution had been passed by the convention favoring the sending of a commission of enquiry to Fernie to attempt to bring about a settlement of the disastrous coal strike. Mr. Mackenzie King, deputy minister of labor was there now attempting to adjust the difficulty, and it might not be wise to interfere with him unsolicited, but he thought it would be well for a telegram to be sent to Mr. King offering the co-operation of the commission. When he (Col. Prior) had telegraphed to Fernie a few weeks ago offering his good offices, the reply had come back that Mr. King was coming. If Mr. King failed in his mission, he thought the convention should try and get a committee to go up at once and attempt to relieve the country from the disastrous consequences which threatened it. He had understood that there was a shortage of funds in the treasury of the Association at the present time, and that this fact might delay the sending of the commission. He had much pleasure in announcing that under the circumstances the government would provide the funds. (Cheers.) There had, of course, been no provision in the estimates for such an expenditure, but the government would take the responsibility for the expenditure and believed it would be backed up in this position by the support of the whole House. (Tremendous cheering.)

Smith Curtis, M. P. P. rose at once and moved a hearty vote of thanks to the premier for this prompt action in a situation which demanded immediate action. (Cheers.)

J. H. Tonkin, who was present, was asked by chairman Keen if he would accept the manly and honest mediation of the conciliation committee. Mr. Tonkin, amid loud applause, cordially accepted their good offices and offered to show them every courtesy, even to opening the Company's books. This commission left Victoria early in the week for Fernie.

A motion was passed urging the government to resist the claim of the C. P. R. to the coal, petroleum and timber lands of south east Kootenay and to open the reserve on those lands as well as on those of Graham Island. Another resolution asked the Dominion Government to open up their 50,000 acre reserve at Morrissey.

The following officers were elected by the association for the ensuing year.

President—John Keen, Kaslo.

First Vice-President—J. B. Hobson, Bullion.

Second Vice-President—D. W. Higgins Victoria.

Secretary—A. L. Belyea, Victoria.

Assistant Secretary—Marston Williams, Victoria.

Treasurer—A. B. Fraser, sr. Victoria.

Executive Committee—Harry Seaman, M. McAndrews, Chris Foley, P. J. Pearson, F. Dockrell, Leslie Hill, E. B Kirby, Henry Croft, W. M. Brewer, John H. Tonkin, H. C. Bellinger, A. J. Gobbell, W. H. Aldridge, J. J. Campbell, A. C. Flumerfelt, S. L. Taylor, A. C. Galt, A. C. Howse, C. Sweeny, L. W. Shatford, C. Phillipps-Wolley, T. Borland, W. McLean, M. Lehman.

The next meeting of the association will take place in Victoria.

Mrs. James Cranford, of Medicine Hat, who has been visiting her sister Mrs. Moran, of Fernie, returned home yesterday.

THE STORES ARE SOLD

A. B. TRITES AND R. W. WOOD ARE THE PURCHASERS.

Particulars of the Sale—Coal Company out of it Entirely.

One of the largest and most important commercial deals in the history of the Crow's Nest was put through last Saturday when Messrs. A. B. Trites and R. W. Wood became the owners of the big stores of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. at Coal Creek, Morrissey and Michel.

The reports published in different papers last week of this sale were premature as the time for tenders to be received did not expire until Feb. 28th. In an interview with Mr. Trites yesterday a FREE PRESS representative learned the particulars of the deal.

The business will be known as The Trites, Wood Company, Limited. A. B. Trites and R. W. Wood are the sole owners and they are paying spot cash. The price paid is based on the invoiced price, and it is estimated that this will run well up to $125,000. The buildings at these points have been leased for a term of ten years. On March 15th stock taking will be commenced and the business will be taken over about April 1st.

The business will be conducted by a company which will be formed at once. A. B. Trites will be president, R. W. Wood, vice president, and Mr. J. McCuaig, of Philadelphia, will be secretary. The latter gentleman is well known in Toronto where he formerly lived. He bears the highest recommendations. Mr. McCuaig is expected to arrive in Fernie on Monday.

The London & Liverpool business is to be taken into the company and the head office will be situated in this store, the upper floor will be suitably fitted for the purpose. The company is to be capitalized at $250,000, of which $175,000 will be paid up capital.

A uniform price list will be arranged for the four stores, so that the same price will prevail at all the stores for similar classes of goods. No change will be made with the present managers of the stores.

None of the directors of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company will have a dollar invested in the business, an agreement to this effect having been adopted by them. The Coal Company will have no voice in the business whatever, and of course will take no part in the collection of store bills.

GUILTY OF INTIMIDATION.

James Feeney and Jos. DeLaurier Intimidate Edward Tazzaman.

James Feeney and Jos. De Laurier were tried in the police court on Tuesday on a charge of intimidation. Edward Tazzaman had been working for the Coal Company at the Coal Creek mines up till last Saturday evening supplying coal to keep the fans running and he charged the accused of intimidating him on that evening against going back to work. The case was heard before Magistrate Forbes, W. R. Ross of Ross & Alexander ably defended the accused while H. W. Herchmer of Herchmer & Herchmer conducted the prosecution.

The evidence of Mr. and Mrs. Tazzaman and daughter agreed that the accused visited their home on Saturday evening and Feeney, as the spokesman, told Mr. Tazzaman that if he continued to work while the strike was on he would be run out of town and that but for him (Feeney) he might have been run out before ther. Wm. Martin of the Mines, also swore that Mr. Feeney had told him that if Tazzaman persisted in working he would be driven down.

The defence through the evidence of the accused attempted to modify that of the above witnesses. They swore that they were appointed as a committee by the Gladstone Union to interview any who might be found working after the strike was inaugerated to request them to show their sympathy by quitting work. They denied that any intimidation was used in this or any other case. Feeney's statement was that if Tazzaman did not give up his job he was liable to be run out of town.

Magistrate Forbes reserved his decision until Wednesday morning. He found the accused guilty. Feeney was sentenced to a fine of $15 or two weeks in goal, and both were bound over on their own and another party's surety to keep the peace for six months. Mr. Ross gave notice that he would appeal the case.

Mrs. W. A. MacKenzie of Moyie is the guest of Mrs C. A. Klinginsmith of the Fernie Hotel.

Some Rochester boys made an extraordinary find recently. While they were playing among the heaps of scrap iron at an engineer's wharf, they unearthed a box, and prying it open, they found it contained seventy gold and silver watches of all periods and types and a remarkable collection of wedding rings, keepers and chains. The police think it is a burglar's hoard.

The postal telegraph authorities have long insisted that Richmond, by the silvery Thames, shall have 'Surrey' after the name to distinguish it from the Yorkshire town. It is now suggested that the Surrey Richmondites shall be allowed to save their halfpenny in the telegraphic address by putting a final 'e' to the word 'Richmonde.' Mr. Austin Chamberlain has not yet decided the point.

Alfred Jolly, a property owner, and until recently a licensed victualler, has been charged at Chatham with unlawfully taking a pensioner's certificate as security for a loan. It transpires that a pensioner named Stone borrowed £3 of the defendant sixteen years ago, on the understanding that he was to pay 10s a year for every pound he borrowed, and defendant took possession of his pension papers as security. In sixteen years he had paid £21 for the loan of £5. The stipendiary magistrate sentenced Jolley to three months' hard labor.

The transfer of Osborne to the Crown authorities, though formally effected on New Year's day did not actually take place until the end of last month. The aged servants on the King's estate were then pensioned off, and to younger employees gratuities of varying amounts were given. On the same date the island police, who patrol the grounds, handed over their charge to Royal Marines from Portsmouth. Mr. Thompson, clerk of the works at Osborne during the late Queen Victoria's reign, remains at Osborne in that capacity under the Crown authorities.

In the little village of Bearsted, a few miles from Maidstone, there died recently a remarkable old gentleman by the name of Colegate, who had attained the ripe age of ninety-four years. His faculties of sight and hearing were almost unimpaired to the last, and he possessed a wonderful memory. He used to relate how he heard the bells of Kennington Church being rung in honor of the victory of Waterloo, the death of George III, the coronation and death of George IIII and William IV., and the ascension of our late Queen. By profession he was an engineer and architect, and during the time of difficulty of launching the "Great Eastern" he was invited to send in plans. For many years he had owned a sand quarry near Bearsted, and almost every pane of glass used in the huge exhibition of 1851 was manufactured from Colegate's quarry.

The late Sir George Stokes (says the 'Westminster Gazette') left one piece of work unfinished, which, it is strange to say, was an article on the subject, 'Is death a sleep?' He had promised the article to the 'Church of Ireland Gazette,' to which he was an occasional contributor, but death came before he formulated an answer to the momentous question.

The 'Irish Bee Journal,' referring to the assistance which bee-keepers' societies may derive from the operations of agricultural banks, when they find themselves hampered in their operations by the need of funds, says the opening of banks in rural districts has gone ahead, and we know of more than one bee-keeper' society helped in its work by loans at the rate of 1d per £1 per month.

The latest Irish magazine is the 'Loc Lein.' It is from Killarney. Its first number, which appeared in January, gives promise of good things. A Vancouver dispatch says: Last Tuesday morning in this city, Mrs. J. J. Blake, widow of Vancouver's first magistrate and city solicitor was married to Wm. Gowdy, a prosperous rancher of Ladner, whose first wife died some few years since under tragic circumstances, never explained to the full satisfaction of the public. This morning the bride of less than a week died, heart disease being the alleged trouble, although a coroner's inquiry is probable. The fates apparently pursue both families, for Mrs. Gowdy's first husband was drowned in a well in which he had taken refuge during the great Vancouver fire, while her second committed suicide.

BRITISH HOUSE

MR. REDMOND MOVES AN AMENDMENT

He Speaks in a Conciliatory Manner in Referring to the Proposed New Land Laws—Trying to Appease the Irishmen.

The Irish leader, John Redmond, in the House of Commons, on Feb. 25, moved an amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne, on the subject of the Irish land question.

Mr. Redmond's speech was most conciliatory. He said the amendment was not intended as a hostile demonstration against the government, but as a "friendly warning" to the ministry that he and friends believed the government is engaged in framing a great measure of justice and appeasement for Ireland, which, in the words of the King's speech, will "complete the abolition of the dual ownership of the land." All he, Mr. Redmond, wanted was an assurance from the chief secretary for Ireland, Mr. Wyndham, that the government is engaged in an honest attempt to solve the problem on the lines suggested by the report of the recent land conference which, the speaker added, offered an unexampled opportunity to end the agrarian troubles and conflicts between classes in Ireland

Mr. Wyndham, in replying, declined to commit himself to any wholesale official approval of the land conference report, which he said avoided or skirted any considerations which must be taken into account. He expressed hope that the spirit of goodsense and good-will animating the report would be emulated by the House in its consideration of the forthcoming measure, which would make it possible for Ireland to lay the social foundations upon which it was alone possible to rear the fabric of healthy national life.

Mr. Redmond eventually withdrew his amendment.

Although John Redmond failed to draw out the chief secretary for Ireland, Mr. Wyndham, into a revelation of the contents of the coming Irish Land bill, his amendment provoked quite a remarkable debate. Seldom in the history of the Irish question has such a conciliatory spirit been displayed on all sides. The only disappointing aspect from the point of view from the Nationalists was the ominous silence of the members of the Unionist party, who seemed apprehensive regarding the heavy demands on the nation's purse when the bill is introduced a fortnight hence. For the present, however, the old animosities seem to have disappeared. John Redmond and Mr. Wyndham exchanged almost flattering compliments.

Col. Saunderson, the member for North Armagh, confessed that he was wrong in disbelieving in the Dublin landlord and tenants' conference.

T. W. Russell (Liberal-Unionist) expressed the strongest belief in the government's generosity, and hardly a dissenting voice was raised.

John Morley, the former chief secretary for Ireland, rose to speak during the hurricane of cheers which marked the close of Mr. Wyndham's speech. Mr. Morley began by declaring that nothing like the present situation had happened since Strongbow landed in Ireland. The demand was no longer to get rid of the landlords, but that provision should be made to enable them to remain on their estates. He was greatly pleased with the tone and temper now prevailing in Ireland, and with the speech of the chief secretary for Ireland. He said that the difficulty of the question lies in the financial aspects, and estimated that the Dunraven land purchase scheme would involve a free grant of $110,000,000 and a loan of $500,000,000; but, he continued if the matter was proceeded with in a cautious manner it would not be necessary to spend the whole sum at once.

Sir Edward Grey, the former under secretary for foreign affairs, Mr. Haldane (Liberal), and others urged the government not to be niggardly in the matter.

Anarchists in Convention.

A dispatch from New York says: The Evening Telegram prints a story to the effect that Anarchists from all over the world are about to meet in a convention at Paris, to devise plans that may radically affect the crowned heads of Europe. All preparations for the convention were carefully guarded, but the plans became known through the boastfulness of a youthful delegate from this city. He is an Italian, known as "Angelo," and "Rudolph."

The Telegram says "Far reaching anarchistic plans are to be discussed and perfected at this world's convention, it is said, and it is even whispered that, before an adjournment is taken, a meeting of the anarchistic inmost cabal will have been held, and lots will have been drawn assigning to deeds, the foul accomplishment of which may shape the destinies of the reigning heads of Europe."

Workmen tearing down the old hall of records in the City Hall, New York, have uncovered six gloomy vaults which had not seen a ray of light for nearly a century. The dungeons were built about 147 years ago by the British as a part of a prison on what was then the northern limit of the city. They were separated by walls three feet thick. They had openings far above the prisoners' heads. It is known that Ethan Allen, the hero of the Ticonderoga was an occupant of one of the cells and it is believed that Nathan Hale was here confined from the time of his capture to his execution nearby. The building was refitted in 1830, and since had been used for municipal offices.

The Allans have ordered a new steamship similar to the Bavarian and Tunisian for the Canadian service. The tonnage of the new boat will be 10,500. Her delivery is expected in March, 1904. The Allan line has also purchased two new 5,000-ton freight steamers for the Canadian trade. They are the Hungarian and the Hibernian, bought from builders on the other side.

A cable from London, England, dated Feb. 27, says: Alien immigration was the chief topic of yesterday's debate in the Commons. Sir Howard Vincent urged that the great increase in the number of destitute aliens in the east end of London constituted a national danger, but withdrew his amendment when Premier Balfour assured the House that the government only awaited the guidance of the royal commission to take action in the matter.

A dispatch from Toronto, of Feb. 27th, says: Before Judge McCrimmon today Sam Lewis was found guilty of impersonation at the referendum, and sentenced to one year in prison and a fine of $400. Larry Shea was acquitted of a charge of personation. J. D. Coulter was fined $100 and costs for attempting to secure personators. The charge against Lawrence Shea, already fined $50 by Police Magistrate Denison, was dismissed. Several convictions will be appealed.

TRADE WITH THE YUKON.

Cold Storage Must be Established in Order to Hold Business.

Representations have been received by the government at Ottawa that there is a splendid field for private enterprise in the providing of cold storage facilities on the Yukon route. The deterioration of perishable articles en route to Dawson, it is claimed, keeps produce at fabulous prices. Prof. Robertson, of the department of agriculture, has been asked to take up the question of refrigerator accommodation on one or two of the boats between Vancouver and Skagway, refrigerator cars on the White Pass railway and cold storage equipment at White Horse. It is believed it would be a profitable investment for Canadian firms to erect up-to-date cold storage at White Horse and Dawson with refrigerators on the boats plying between these two points.

It is estimated that Yukon consumes annually about 500,000 lbs. of butter, besides a large quantity of eggs, cheese, fruit, vegetables and other perishable goods. With cold storage at Dawson and White Horse every Yukon boat during the season would be certain of perishable cargoes to fill their refrigerators and the people of Yukon would be able to get fruit and farm produce at reasonable rates.

The trouble at present is the heavy freight rates which are paid, not only on stuff that arrives at its destination in good condition, but also on that which has been spoiled en route. And owing to changes in temperature, especially on boats, the proportion of deteriorated goods is very large.

A remarkable picture which is likely to create a sensation in London has just been secured for the Dore Gallery, where it will shortly be placed on exhibition in a room by itself. It is entitled "A Mysterious Painting of Christus," and the mystery lies in the eyes of the figure depicted. The face—ineffably sad and tranquil so long as the eyes remain closed—apparently becomes transfigured as they slowly open and turn a piercing gaze on the spectator. The change is startling in the extreme, but not less so than that wrought by the subsequent closing of the lids over the eyes. The closest inspection of the picture will be invited, but the secret lies with the painting and with the artist.

Cultivate prudence; do not eat tomorrow's dinner today.

STRANGE BELIEF

RUSSIAN PEASANTS WORSHIP FATHER JOHN.

They March a Thousand Miles to see Him—Special Body Guard Required to Keep the Crowd From Pressing on Him.

Advices from St. Petersburg say: Measures have been taken by the ecclesiastical authorities to destroy the widespread belief in the divinity of the famous Father John of Kronstadt, but so far they have not attained their object. Only recently the ecclesiastical authorities of the Don territory were informed that a number of peasants of the district of Karpooka had left their homes for Kronstadt. The Kronstadt police searched the various lodging-houses of the town and discovered 20 pilgrims, who declared that they had made the thousand-mile journey in order to worship Father John. They persisted in their contention that he was the Christ.

The veneration in which Father John is held was well illustrated five days ago when he was leaving St. Petersburg. Despite the secrecy that is always maintained concerning his movements, he had to be escorted at a considerable number of stations to the railway carriage by ten or twelve stalwart gendarmes, who joined hands and formed a ring around him. Despite these precautions, women in the crowd made every effort to get near him. Some threw themselves on the ground and tried to crawl inside the ring of gendarmes and kiss his feet or his garments. When he got inside the train gendarmes formed a line in front to prevent people from pressing too closely. One woman approached and besought the passengers to ask Father John to show himself, if only for a moment.

COLLEGE FOR FARMERS.

Necessary Funds Secured to Start an Institution at Regina.

A dispatch from Ottawa says: The difficulties which beset new settlers in the Northwest Territories in the matter of adapting their ways to local agricultural conditions, will shortly be overcome by the establishment at Regina, through private intervention, of an agricultural college and experiment station.

The necessary funds have been provided to insure the work for a couple of years, and an efficient staff is being engaged to cover a series of three months' courses in the seven main branches of practical agriculture, under the managing directorship of W. H. Coard, LL.D., of the Dominion department of agriculture. The fee for the short course will be $10, and Dr. Coard will leave Ottawa for the west March 2 to "spy out the land," and arrange for the commencement of active educational operations.

The staff will comprise professors of agriculture, chemistry, veterinary science dairying, horticulture, and natural history and anatomy; a lecturer on domestic science and cookery, a bursar and librarian. Dr. Coard will hold the professorship of agriculture and the lectureship on entomology; and the names of the other professors and lecturers will be announced during Dr. Coard's visit to the west. The syllabus will be issued shortly, and the short course will present exceptional opportunities to farmers' sons as well as to new settlers, to receive an agricultural training of a practical character. The college is being established under substantial patronage, and, while not being inaugurated by either the federal or the provincial legislatures, will receive the educational support of both.

REVOLT BREWING.

Conspiracy in China to Depose Kuang Hsu From His Throne.

Mail advices from Shanghai state that telegrams are constantly being exchanged between prominent officials at Pekin and Tung Funsiang, who is now at Hsuenping, in the Liang Chow prefecture, with his army. The messages are in pre-arranged cipher, but at Pekin it has been learned from conversation between the senders that the Pekin officials, all of whom are reactionary, who were prominent in the Boxer troubles, urge that the Kansu ex-general shall lose no time in hoisting his standard in favor of Pu Chun, the son of ex-Prince Tuan, and ex-heir-apparent as emperor, and march upon Pekin to dispose his majesty, Kuang Hsu, incidentally driving out the foreigners.

The messages from the Kansu end ask what sort of aid in men and money the ex-general is to expect from his friends. As the telegraph line only runs through Liang Chou and does not connect with the headquarters of Tung Fuhsiang, that is to say Hsuenping, the conspirators have a very convenient ally in the person of Taotai Poh Yutac, the present prefect of Liang Chou, who forwards the messages between the parties.

Munich's city council has thrown its public dog-slaughtering establishment open to government inspection on account of the discovery that certain butchers have been selling the flesh of animals not freshly killed. A Southern Congressman Thinks Canada Needs Freedom.

A dispatch from Washington, D.C., of Feb. 26, says: Representative Dearmond (Missouri), today introduced a concurrent resolution providing as follows: "That the president be, and is, hereby requested to learn and advise Congress upon what terms, if any, honorable to both nations and satisfactory to the inhabitants of the territory primarily affected, Great Britain would consent cede to the United States any part of the territory lying north of and adjoining the United States, to be states, and admitted into the Union formed in due time into states upon an equality with the other states, the inhabitants thereof in the meantime enjoying all the privileges and immunities guaranteed by the federal government."

Trying to Remove the Embargo.

A London cable says: Mr. Price, (Liberal), in the House of Commons moved an amendment to the address providing for the repeal of the law excluding Canadian store cattle from the British markets

The debate on Mr. Price's amendment occupied the night session. Mr. Hanbury, president of the board of agriculture, opposed the amendment on the ground that it would be a dangerous precedent to admit Canadian cattle, thus giving them a preference over others. He said he was anxious to meet the wishes of the colonies, but that 99 per cent. of the farmers in Great Britain were opposed to the admission of Canadian store cattle, and nothing would induce him to abate a particle of the present act. The amendment was rejected by 190 votes to 38.

Dynamite Explodes.

A dispatch from Port Hope, Ont., says: Near Port Britain on Wednesday afternoon, five men were eating their dinner in a blacksmith's shop. One man had been thawing out some sticks of dynamite beside the boiler. The men were eating and talking when suddenly the dynamite exploded, and Robert Hewson and K. Brownell were very seriously hurt, while the other three got off with less serious injuries. Robert Hewson had the side of his cheek torn open. K. Brownell had his face badly cut and it is not known whether his jaw bone is broken or not. The blacksmith's shop was blown into fragments.

MESSRS. C. C. RICHARDS & CO.,
Yarmouth, N. S.

Gentlemen,—In January last Francis Leclair, one of the men employed by me, working in the lumber woods, had a tree fall on him, crushing him fearfully. He was, when found, placed on a sled and taken home, where grave fears were entertained for his recovery, his hips being badly bruised and his body turned black from his ribs to his feet. We used MINARD'S LINIMENT on him freely to deaden the pain, and with the use of three bottles he was completely cured and able to return to his work.

MARKETS.

(Compiled from The Commercial)

WHEAT—The speculative market has got into a rut, which it has stuck in during the week, and there has been the slowest kind of a market and the narrowest range in price fluctuations that have been seen for months. The bearish sentiment does not seem to have increased any at least, it has not become so aggressive as to lead to much short selling. At the same time there has been nothing definite to encourage the buying side, and between the two speculating traders have stood still, awaiting for something to develop which would show with some clearness what might be expected of the future. The export trade for Europe has lately been extremely backward. They bought heavily last fall, and in the meantime these purchases have to be absorbed, and as the general situation the last four weeks has not seemed so strong as previously, the foreign trade is also holding off awaiting developments. Should any serious damage happen in America or Europe, or both, to the winter wheat crop, prices will easily advance. In the meantime there is not much new to report as to crop prospects. Generally speaking they are not as good as last year, but it will still be some weeks before definite estimates can be formed as to the prospects. Argentina is now shipping freely, the quantity this week exported being 2,336,000 bushels.

Manitoba wheat has been very quiet all week. There has been very little demand, and at the same time no pressure of offers to sell. Prices on the week may be quoted ¼c higher for spot, and ¼c lower for May. There is no feature to the trade, which is practically a waiting one. We quote values for spot or early delivery at 74¼c 1 hard, 72¼c 1 northern, 70¾c 2 northern, and 68c 3 nothern; and for May delivery, 76½c, 1 hard; 74½c, 1 northern; 73c, 2 northern; and 70½c, 3 northern; all in store Fort William, Port Arthur or Duluth.

FLOUR—Best Hungarian Patent, $2.10 per sack of 98 pounds delivered to the trade; Glenora Patent, $1.95; strong bakers, $1.65; and XXXX, $1.35.

OATS—The market for oats has firmed up a little and sellers are now asking ¼ to ½c more than last week. Receipts are light, and as there are some demand for shipment east holders are not disposed to accept the prices offered here. Enquiries for seed oats are beginning to come in freely. No. 1 white in carlots on track are today worth 30½ to 31c per bushel, No. 2 white, 28½c to 29c, and feed grades, 27 to 27½c. Farmers' loads on the street are bringing 28c, and at country points, 25c. Brokers are asking 25 to 26c for carlots in the country.

BARLEY—The market is firm and the movement light. Dealers are paying 31 to 32c per bushel for feed grades on the street here.

FLAXSEED—Farmers have been delivering some flax this week for which the price has been $1 per bushel here.

SPELTZ—The market is steady at 32c per bushel of 50 pounds, delivered here. Demand is good.

POTATOES—40 to 45c per bushel.

BUTTER—Dairy—The market is but poorly supplied with dairy butter. At times rolls and bricks come in rather plentifully but these receipts are spasmodic and the stock is not always good. Shippers still stick to their old and foolish practice of using soap boxes, shoe boxes and any other old receptacles which happen to be handy for packing the butter in, consequently when it arrives here it is only worth about the price of soap. Nice, clean, well packed butter, in rolls, is worth in a jobbing way 21 to 22c per pound net with inferior qualities ranging down as low as 10 and 12c. Tub butter will bring at jobbing houses as high as 18c per pound if fresh and well packed, with a range of from 14 to 18c for the various qualities offering.

HIDES—Frozen hides, 5 to 5¼c per lb., less 5 lbs. tare; city butchers', 6¼c per lb. for No. 1s; 5¼c for No. 2s, and 4¼c for No. 3s. Sheepskins, 30 to 50c each.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—The market is gradually becoming firmer, and 4¼c is now the regular quotation for prime beef cattle delivered here. Several lots of western range cattle have been brought in to supply the select trade, and these realized top prices. They were in splendid shape for the season and made good beef. Those who have been out to the ranges say that they have never seen the cattle looking better in February than they do now. Most of them are quite fat, and in splendid condition to stand the spring storms. Stockers are beginning to move freely now and are firm in price. We quote: Best steers, 4 to 4¼c; butchers' ordinary, 3½ to 4c, and from that figure quotations run down to 2½c, according to quality. Stockers, yearlings, $17; two-year-olds, $22 each.

SHEEP — A few lots have been brought in for the better class of for sheep, and prices are nominal.

HOGS—Receipts have increased to much larger proportions than has been the case for some time, and the market is easier at 5½ to 6c for choice weights, ranging from 150 to 250 lbs., off cars here. Heavy hogs and light fats, 4½ to 5c, according to quality.

MILCH COWS—There is a good demand for all the cows offering at prices ranging from $30 to $45 each.

HORSES—The market is more active, as the demand for spring is now in evidence. A good many horses are being brought in from the south and east, but the demand is greater than this supply, and prices hold firm. Teams of work horses are worth from $300 to $400, according to weight and quality.

REMARKABLE MEDICAL CASE; BRIGHT'S DISEASE CONQUERED.

Startling Cure Reported From a Small Town in Nova Scotia.

From Mail and Empire.

Halifax, N. S., Feb. 5.—(Special.)—News has reached here from the little town of Shubenacadie, on the Intercolonial railway, in Hants County, of a cure that is just as important from a medical point of view as the operations of Dr. Lorenz are from a surgical standpoint. The disease that has at last yielded to medical research is the long unconquerable Bright's Disease, that has for so many years held physicians' skill at bay, and its victims at its mercy.

The patient in this case is said to have been a young girl named Alice Maud Parker, and two doctors who diagnosed her case gave it as their unalterable opinion that Brights' Disease had her in its clutches, and that only the grave awaited her. The parents, unwilling to give up the struggle while life remained, are said to have experimented with special preparations, and as a last resort pinned their faith to Dodd's Kidney Pills, with the result that to-day the girl is in the best of health.

Details of the cure are not yet to hand, but it will be investigated, as both the medical fraternity and the public are deeply interested in the matter.

Three years ago some gold rings, chains, and a crown decorated with jewels were found in the Dresden Kreuz Kirche in the grave of Duke Albrecht of Holstein, who died in 1619. They were claimed by Duke Ernest Gunther, and the courts have now acknowledged his claim to them.

Living by His Books.

An amusing story is told of Robert Buchanan, the author, who, like many another well known literary man, had a hard struggle at the beginning of his career. He had just published one of his early novels when one day he found himself the possessor of a fine appetite, but without any money in his pocket at the moment to get a meal. He thought of ways and means for some time and finally hit upon an idea.

He went to the office of his publisher and asked for three copies of his new novel, directing that the cost should be placed to his account. Armed with the fresh, nicely bound volumes, he immediately sought out the nearest secondhand bookseller and disposed of the copies for as much as they would bring.

"I remember I enjoyed that dinner tremendously," he said. "It proved to my entire satisfaction that even the humblest author could live by his books!"

New York Pawnbrokers.

In New York the pawnbroker is compelled to wait a year and one month before offering pawned articles for sale. During the last month of this period the merchandise must be so advertised that the person who pawned the goods may recognize them as his property from the description given in the published notice.

As an instance of the severity of the court against any infraction of this rule a pawnbroker who loaned a certain lady $6,000 upon a valuable necklace valued at $12,000 and at the expiration of the required limit sold the jewels without specifying explicitly enough so that the lady was enabled to recognize and redeem her property the New York court ordered that the lender pay to the lady $6,000 and a year's interest on the value of the necklace.

THE FERNIE FREE PRESS,
FERNIE BRITISH COLUMBIA

SATURDAY, MARCH 7, 1903.

THE COMMISSION.

THE MINING convention at Victoria has been a success notwithstanding the pessimistic predictions of a few cranks in different parts of the province. The convention was of a thoroughly representative nature, consisting of about five hundred members elected from every district of the Province, from the far-famed coal fields of The Crow's Nest Valley in the extreme South-East to the distant golden sands of Atlin in the extreme North-West corner.

This great body of men, selected from the ranks of the mine worker, the mine manager, the merchant and the professional man, represented the best brains of the Province and they possessed the the confidence of the people of British Columbia in a fuller sense than any government has ever had.

These delegates gathered with the common purpose of furthering the general mining interests of the Province and on the whole we believe much good will result from the meeting. It is quite probable that some of the resolutions making demands on the government will not be viewed by the latter in the same light but the government cannot now plead ignorance of what the representatives of the mining industry want.

The all important question at the convention was the Fernie Strike, and as such it was put off till the last, all saw the necessity of action on the part of the convention and a feeling of relief was felt by all when the matter was left in the hands of a conciliation commission. The great strike which so far is hardly felt in Fernie, was talked everywhere, on the street corners, on trains and street cars and by all classes of delegates, many of whom were personally affected at their homes in distant places.

Coming to the commission itself we find that half of it is composed of men representing capital while the other half represents labor, with chairman Keen who enjoys the honor of being the unanimous choice of the convention for president. This committee were elected by that large body of men without a dissenting voice and therefore they are backed by the confidence of the entire province in a most representative sense. The commission also has the financial support of the Government which also goes to prove that the latter has sympathy with, and confidence in the undertaking.

These men are sent to Fernie with the object of bringing the strike to a close. They are so thoroughly supported by public opinion that they possess power that a compulsory arbitration commission might lack. We believe that their verdict will be final and that the opposing parties will be forced to accept it as such The country cannot afford to be tied up because two parties refuse to come to terms and the country will demand in unmistakable tones that work be resumed at once.

That the commission will meet with the approval of both parties is generally believed. Mr. Tonkin was present when they were elected and gave them assurance of his assistance in any way possible while Mr. Dougherty, of the Western Federation of Labor, has expressed himself that he believes the commission is as fair a one as could have been selected in the assembly. He personally knows them, and of those representing capital he speaks in the highest terms.

We feel more hopeful of a permanent and satisfactory settlement than at any time since the strike began and when it is over the province will have ample cause for gratefully remembering the great and lasting service the first Mining Association of British Columbia has rendered to the country.

THE transfer of the Company stores should give general satisfaction to the public. For some time they have been denounced as a curse by the miners and they can no longer retain this in their catalogue of grievances. To the brother merchants of Fernie it will no donbt be regarded with favor, as the new firm will stand on the same level as themselves without the advantage of the miners' pay roll behind them. Too much credit cannot be given Mr. Tonkin for the decided stand he has taken against the principle of Company stores ever since he came to Fernie. We believe it is largely due to his influence that they are a thing of the past in the Crow's Nest Valley.

* * *

THE men at the head of the Trites, Wood Company, Limited, are well qualified for the position they will fill. Mr. A. B. Trites is well known as a practical and thorough business man. His career in Fernie from its earliest days proves this better than anything else. We believe that one would have to travel far to find a better President for this big company than Mr. Trites. Mr. Wood has had much experience in mercantile life and his experience at Morrissey as manager of the company store will enable him to understand the technical working of the stores in the three mining camps with out any delay. Of Mr. McCuaig we know little beyond the fact that he comes with exceptionally good recommendations and that he has a wide experience in commercial life on both sides of the international line,

THE FERNIE STRIKE.

A rumor has been in circulation for some time to the effect that some outside influence was behind the present strike. The following article from the Canadian Mining Review would seem to substantiate this rumor:—

"It must be a matter of great regret, as it is in every sense a serious one, that the coal miners at Fernie are once more on strike. What the effect may be to the mining and smelting industries of the Province it is impossible to say, and indeed this will entirely depend upon whether the disagreement is speedily settled or not. If it drags on until the the very slender supplies of fuel in stock at the various smelters are consumed it is impossible to tell what the consequences may be, as supplies cannot be obtained from any other source, and if the smelters are once put out there will be very little encouragement in the present depressed condition of the copper and lead markets to resume operations.

On the merits of the question in dispute we have nothing to say, because obviously it would be imprudent to express an opinion on a fair wage or otherwise, without having all the data necessary to arrive at a fair decision, but there are several aspects of the case to which we wish to refer, and which are well worthy of consideration.

The first is that whatever the relative value of the wages paid may be when compared with others, it is not denied that the men's earnings are large, and in the present depressed state of trade in British Columbia they shonld at least hesitate before precipitating a struggle that may be both prolonged and disastrous.

In the next place, from a press despatch dated "Fernie, February 18th," we learn that the actual number of men who voted in favor of a strike, constituted a very small minority of the total number employed—as a matter of fact not more than one-fifth. It seems to us that to take so serious a step on such a vote is indefensible. There are occasions on which it is perfectly legitimate to strike, and possibly this may have been one, but if so, it cannot be denied that steps should have been taken to obtain a much larger vote, and that so serious a course should not have been decided upon by so small a minority. Probably the various unions which took the lead in the strike acted strictly in accordance with the rules of their organization, and no doubt a majority of those present at each meeting actually voted in favor of the strike, but this only emphasizes our contention that the union should improve its organization or it can never gain any public confidence or support; the least that should be done under such circumstances is to follow somewhat upon the lines of the referendum, and insist that a majority of the workmen actually employed should vote in favor of a strike before that extreme course is resorted to.

The last consideration, and possibly the most important of all, is based upon what is alleged to be a fact, namely, that the whole agitation has been brought about through the agency of American Representatives who settled at Fernie for the express purpose of fomenting strife. On this point we wish to say that in our judgment Trades Organizations are perfectly legitimate; we only take exception to some of their methods, but not to the principle of organization, which is legitimate in the case of workmen as of employers, but we have always believed that there are most potent economic and political reasons why Canadian Unions should not be controlled by United States organizations. It is not necessary here to recite these reasons, they will be perfectly obvious to the veriest tyro, and no one who has considered the matter doubts that there are many points at which they clash. Some effort has recently been made to emancipate Canadian Unions from this control, and we can only hope that the effort will be successful, for undoubtedly the Fernie strike is another illustration of the iniquity of the present system under which men who have no stake in the country are able at their will to paralize an important industry and to plunge a whole district into commercial disaster.

Infringement of a Trade Mark

In an action in the High Court of Justice for Ontario, recently tried before Chancellor Boyd, at Toronto, the Slater Shoe Co., and Chas. E. Slater, president of Montreal, makers of the famous Slater Shoe, obtained a judgment forever restraining F. C. Wilkinson, a boot and shoe dealer, of Owen Sound, from advertising, exposing, or offering for sale or selling boots or shoes not made by the Slater Shoe Co., as "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods" or the Slater Shoe." The Chancellor, also ordered Wilkinson to pay the heavy costs of the action. The Chancellor, after hearing the evidence, decided that no one except the Slater Shoe Co., had a right to use the name "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods," "The Slater Shoe," or any similar names in connection with boots and shoes, and that Wilkinson had no right to use any name or names in connection with boots and shoes which might enable him to pass of a shoe not of the company's make, as being of their make, nor in any way to reap the benefit of the reputation which the Slater Shoe has acquired throughout the Dominion of Canada.

The Genuine Slater

Is positively the best shoe value offered for sale in Canada. You may include the United States and that will pretty near cover the world for fine shoe making. "Just because they are branded with an American stamp."

Miss Jessie MacLachlan, the famous Scotch soprano, is on her way west and through her manager has signified her willingness to fill an engagement in Fernie. Some institution ought to take the matter up as it is sure to be a financial success and the townspeople would have an opportunity of hearing this famous singer.

Mr. G. F. Dougherty on Wednesday received a wire from John Keen, chairman of the conciliation committee, stating that they would arrive in Fernie on their mission on Saturday evening, and would at once get to work. Mr. Dougherty left for Nelson early in the week but will return on Sunday. Messrs. Baker and Dougherty will probably both be on the ground during the investigation.

La Grippe in Town

The grip is prevalent in town this week. Four members of the Free Press staff were laid up at different times during the past week owing to this disease and in consequence the paper has been gotten up this week at considerable inconvenience.

Hurt While Coupling Cars

A C. P. R. brakeman named Delay whose home is in Cranbrook received serious injuries while at work in the Fernie yards on Thursday. Delay was severely squeezed while coupling a car to the tender. He was removed to the hospital where Dr. Bonnell found the man suffering from severe abdomenal injuries.

Cut His Foot.

Wm. Martin was working at the mines on Thursday and was being interviewed by a representative of the union who was trying to persuade him to stop work, when he cut his foot with a small axe he was using. He was giving his attention to the speaker at the time and did not notice what he was doing, so Mr. Martin stopped work after all.

Hockey Match

On Thursday evening the boys of the Angels' Rest played the same picked team that beat them a couple of weeks ago. This time the tables were turned, the score being 3-2 in favor of the winged players, who declare that their victory would have been much more pronounced but for the very able manner in which the opposing goalkeeper, Duncan Maclean, defended the goal.

All Should Attend.

A very important general meeting of the Board of Trade will take place in Joyces hall on Monday evening at 8 o'clock. Many important matters relative to the meeting of the associated Boards of Trade in Fernie on the 18th, will be discussed and the reports of the committees appointed at last meeting will be dealt with. All members should make a special effort to be present.

Writs Served by the C. P. R.

In cannection with the claim made by the C.P.R. on the land across the Elk River we have learned that the following Fernie citizens have had writs served upon them to appear at Victoria. Messrs. W.S. Keay, F. S. Wallace, A. J. Farquharson, G. H. Scott, J. D. Quail, H. J. Johnson, A. T. Claxton, F. G. Brown, D. V. Mott and A. J. Mott. Appearances have been entered by Messrs. Herchmer & Herchmer through their agents Bodwell & Duff.

Railway Changes

The C. P. R. has made another division from Moose Jaw to Laggan and Kootenay Landing. The headquarters will be at Calgary and Superintendent J. J. Jamieson, of Cranbrook, will be the General Superintendant of the newly created division. Mr. Jamieson takes charge of his new office on April 1st. He will be succeeded in Cranbrook by Mr. J. G. Taylor, formerly chief despatcher at Cranbrook and now superintendent at Brandon.

Licences Granted

The Board of Licence Commissioners consisting of J. D. McBride, F. W. Burn and W H. Whimster met last night to consider applications for licences. The license of Spence Lyon, of the Union Hotel, was transferred to A, Mutz. P. Carosella was granted a licence for the Rome hotel on condition that the house when completed satisfied the inspector. G. H. Scott received a transfer from A. E. Brown, Wardner. A. A. Currie's of Wardner was granted. L.R. S. Herchmer, Michel, was also granted a licence.

Wreck at Crow's Nest.

On Wednesday a rear end collision occurred just east of Crows Nest. A local freight whose destination was Michel was standing east of the "Y" while the engine was detached for the purpose of turning for the return trip. The brakeman did not get back in time to flag another freight train approaching from the east and the latter crashed into the rear of the first train with tremendous force. The caboose was piled on top and was destroyed by fire, while the next two cars loaded with merchandise were badly wrecked. The locomotive was also badly used up. The boiler and tank sustained considerable injury as well as the more intricate parts. The trainmen jumped and escaped injury.

Shocking Death at Frank.

Wm. Burke formerly switchman in the Fernie yards met with a horrible death in the Frank yards on Thursday evening. A heavy train was cut to make the grade, the rear part commenced to run back and the conductor and Burke started to set the brakes; the former set two brakes and as the cars were almost stopped he jumped off and proceeded to the other division leaving the other half in charge of the switchman. Burke was found dead a few minutes later being cut in two by a car wheel. The cars had not gone more than 30 feet after the conductor had left it. It is not known what caused the unfortunate man to fall between the cars. Mr. Burke was well liked here where he had the reputation of being one of the best yardman ever employed in our yards.

Mr. Robt. Jaffray vice president of the C. N. P. Coal Co., accompanied by General Manager Tonkin arrived from the west last evening. Mr. Jaffray is on his way from California and will proceed on his way to his home in Toronto tomorrow.

A son of James Browley's was striken with scarlet fever this week. The attack is a mild one and the little lad is doing well. The disease is thought to have been carried from a neighboring house where, owing to a belief in Christian Science no precautions were taken to quarantime the place.

Improvements at Frank.

Hon. H. L. Frank of Butte, Montana, was inspecting his properties at Frank last week. Mr. Frank announces that the mines will be fully equipped at once with the most up-to-date appliances, including a complete electric haulage plant. The horses and mules now used in the main entry will be replaced by a locomotive with a haulage capacity of 100 tons, the power will be furnished by the electric light plant which will be pushed to completion as soon as possible and whose two powerful 300 horse Mumford boilers and big dynamos will also furnish light for the town. A substantial brick office building will also be erected this season.

LIBERAL ASSOC'N. MEET

Report of the Annual Election and Other Business.

The annual meeting of The Fernie Liberal Association took place in Joyce's Hall on Wednesday evening. The attendance was large and considerable enthusiasm was displayed by those present.

The election of officers for the ensuing year was the first matter of business. The following is the result of the election. President, Fred Stork; Vice President, J A. Maclean; Secy.-Treas, J. H. Bricker; Executive Committee, Messrs. C. W. Laidley, F. J. Watson, Dr. C. P. Higgins, W. W. Thomson, H. H. Trites, A. K. Farquharson and R. W. Coulthard.

The question of forming a District Association was discussed and the Secretary was instructed to communicate with the Association at Morrissey and prominent Liberals in other parts of the District with a view of acting on the proposed suggestion.

The need of sewer drainage of the town of Fernie into the Elk River was discussed and a strongly worded resolution was passed authorizing the Executive to instruct the nominee of the Liberal party of this district in the next Provincial election that one of the conditions of the Fernie Liberal Association's aid was his faithful advocacy of legislation allowing the above mentioned drainage.

Different members spoke with assurance of the success of the Liberal Party in the Fernie District -in the next Provincial election and other matters of a strictly party nature were discussed after which the meeting adjourned.

MY HEART'S DARLING

BY W. HEIMBURG.

"Oh, glorious! glorious!"

Hortense smiled now. "Do you think other people like to travel too?"

"He would be a fool who would not!"

The young baroness stood up and put her hand on her shoulder. "Caught!" she cried, as delighted as a child.

"I?—how?—what?"

"You must now!"

"What?"

"Let Lucie travel with me for two months."

He stood up and looked in astonishment at his fiancee, who leaned speechless against the piano.

"Lucie?—you?—now?" he asked.

She shook her head. "No, I do not wish to," she said.

"Oh, she does wish it: she has the greatest desire to. Think, Herr Doctor, she has only just come from the provinces!"

He passed his hand over his brow, but did not answer.

"We will talk it over at home, Lucie," he said at last. The color had not yet returned to his face. The girl tried to smile, but did not succeed; she sat down without a word. There was a curious struggle in both their hearts.

"He knows the world," thought she; "he has enjoyed everything that is beautiful, but I shall never see anything—"

And he stared vaguely at the shining tea-kettle. "She is willing to leave you in what should be the happiest time of her life, when she is your affianced wife."

CHAPTER VIII.

A long pause ensued. Hortense put the pictures in the portfolio and the curiosities and mementoes in their casket; and as she still could not find a word to say, she seated herself at the piano and began to play as if she would give those two silent people an excuse for their silence. Hortense played very well, and had a deep, clear alto voice. But, as in her views of life, so here she preferred sad music. "Chopin's Funeral March" sounded grandly from her fingers. She often played for the young pair. Alfred had been in the habit of occasionally coming for Lucie, and was the attentive listener that her fine playing deserved. To-day it jarred upon him and awakened no echo in his heart. He only roused himself from his dreams as Hortense's voice sounded through the room. She sung an Eichdorf ballad; the longing of a young heart to go out into the world.

The doctor raised his head. Ah, youth and longing! And he remembered the delight with which he had first seen the Rhine near Bingen.

Had he any right to deprive the young heart of his future wife of such a harmless pleasure? No; she should see and admire — but with him. She was still so young, she could wait, and then, when he had made his way somewhat here, then—How could he think of allowing Hortense the pleasure of seeing that young heart re oice in God's beautiful world — he to whom that heart belonged! Never! And as he fixed his gaze upon her, and noticed the slender figure, the large eyes looking out from under their long lashes so dreamily into the distance, the little mouth painfully compressed, a feeling of deep compassion came over him. "Does she understand you? can she love you?" he asked himself.

"Come, Lucie," he said, quietly, getting up, "they are waiting for us at home."

She got up like an obedient child and brought her waterproof. Hortense made no effort to detain them; she gave the doctor her hand, and pressed Lucie to her heart.

"Au revoir!" she cried after them, and leaned over the balustrade as they went silently down.

At home the same ominous depression reigned as before. The Frau Counselor sat in the same place; Tante Dettchen had awakened from her nap, and was reading by the last rays of daylight in her soiled library book. The poor little servant-girl looked more starved than ever in her tight little black confirmation dress, which she wore in honor of its being Sunday, and she sat the table in the adjoining room as silently as if the plates had all been made out of felt. They were soon seated in the back room at tea; but there was no flow of conversation. At length the mother began.

"Well, Alfred, I hear that you have been to see your new house? Pastor Wissman saw you going in. How do you like it?"

"I am quite satisfied with it," he returned.

"As we had nothing on hand this afternoon, we have been looking at the patterns of wall-papers which the man sent — that is, Dettchen and I — Lucie was not here," she added, with a side look at the girl.

"Ah, so. Are they pretty?"

Optical Illusion.

A firm which was sued in an English court for the price of a sign defended the case on the ground that the "o" in their name was smaller than the other letters. It was proved by measurement, however, that it was a sixteenth of an inch larger, allowance having been made for the fact that, owing to an optical illusion, the letter "o" always looks smaller than the neighboring letters. Judgment was given for the signmakers.

A LESSON IN ETIQUETTE.

To Bow or Not to Bow—An Important Kind of Small Change in Modern Social Daily Life.

Indecision with regard to "when to bow and "when not to bow" is painfully common.

It may perhaps be considered a matter of little moment whether a bow is given or withheld, or whether a shake of the hand is given in lieu of a bow, but in reality it carries a distinct significance whether the right or the wrong thing is done on the spur of the moment. Also it is a two-sided question, and affects equally the one who receives a bow and the one who gives it, the one who is not bowed to and the one who does not bow.

It should be understood that a bow is a ceremonious recognition between those but slightly acquainted, and who do not know each other intimately enough to speak to or to shake hands when they meet. These conventional bows are quite outside of those constantly exchanged between friends who are unable at the moment to offer any other kind of greeting.

Out of doors is naturally the field for bowing, and where it comes most prominently forward. When, for instance, two women meet who have been recently introduced, if bows are got exchanged when passing each other it would be next to impossible to do so on a subsequent occasion, and thus the acquaintance comes virtually to an end. Again, it is equally required that bows should be exchanged between friends unable to speak to each other on the occasion of meeting, more especially between men and women than between women themselves. If a woman does not bow to a man she knows when he looks expectantly at her, he considers himself cut by her, although she has no such intention, and was really postponing her greeting until—say, she had shaken hands with her host and hostess. This phase of bowing often repeats itself, and goes to prove that the right thing should be done at the right moment—a bow given when due.

The same equally holds good between men and women as between women. An introduction at a ball or dinner, indeed, if made at any function or at any time, almost obliges a woman to recognize the acquaintance by a bow at any future meeting. If she does not take advantage of her privilege to acknowledge it in this manner, it is taken to mean that she does not desire to continue it, and, once relinquished, it cannot be readily resumed. Oftener then not this is not the reason why a woman does not bow to a ballroom acquaintance; the actual one is, in most instances, the doubt whether he will recollect her or not and whether she is expected to bow to him. Thus the bow should be forthcoming without hesitation.

A merely bowing acquaintance is somewhat monotonous when people meet frequently during each day out of doors, more particularly at seaside places. To bow at each meeting would be out of the question, and the received social law is to bow once only. A smile does duty on the second occasion, and during the remainder of the day no further notice is vouchsafed or expected.

Under ordinary circumstances a bow is the received way of acknowledging an introduction. At after meetings within doors the bow is often a prelude to a slight conversation, and also concludes it when the two separate. Again when long and pleasant conversation follows upon an introduction, although a bow acknowledges the same, yet in this case shaking hands takes the place of bowing on departure, but this is exceptional, and a bow is the usual mode of taking leave between newly met acquaintances.

All Feet.

The sight of a full-grown centipede is said by travelers in tropical lands to be enough to affect that strongest nerves. Ten to eleven inches is the average length, although larger ones have been seen. Lafcadio Hearn, in "Two Years in the French West Indies," says that the vitality of the centipede is amazing.

Mr. Hearn kept one in a bottle, without food or water, for thirteen weeks, at the end of which time it remained active and dangerous as ever. The centipede has one natural enemy able to cope with him, the hen.

The hen attacks him with delight, and often swallows him, head first, without taking the trouble to kill him, but she is careful never to put her head near him. She has a trick of whirling him round and round upon the floor so quickly as to stupefy him; then when she sees a good chance she strikes him dead with her claws.

There are superstitions concerning the creature which have a good effect in diminishing his tribe. If you kill a centipede you are sure to receive money soon; and if you dream of killing one it is good luck.

The Fleet Street Pilgrimage.

When tourists make pilgrimage in the precincts of Fleet Street they generally have a look at "Goldsmith's house," as it is sometimes called, in Wine Office Court. At present they would find it propped up with strong beams to prevent its being disturbed by the taking down of the building next door. Goldsmith, could he return to these old haunts, would probably not recognize it in its splints. It seems to have been in the year 1760 that he moved to these "superior lodgings at No. 6 Wine Office Court." He had been writing for John Newberry, and here he lodged with one of Newbery's relatives, who, perhaps, kept an eye on his errant industry. As we may read in the "Dictionary of National Biography," Johnson supped at Goldsmith's lodgings on May 31, 1761. He had heard that Goldsmith had quoted him as a "precedent for slovenly habits," and so he came to the supper "dressed with scrupulous neatness."

SOLAR PHYSICS.

R. A. Stupart, F.R.S.C., Observatory Chief, on Matters Meterological and Astronomical—Trolley System Troubles.

At the Canadian Institute rooms in Toronto on a recent Saturday night, an address was read by R. A. Stupart, F.R.S.C., on astronomical matters. Mr. Stupart said the world was awaking to the importance of solar physics, meteorology, seismography and terrestrial magnetism. Much good work had been done by the Toronto Observatory, and he was glad to say that Canadians generally were beginning to appreciate it.

The lecturer traced briefly the rise and growth of meteorological and magnetic science, and stated that the British Association in 1834 ordered a magnetic survey to be made of the principal lands of the two hemispheres. In 1837 a report was published, and in 1838 an expedition, partly subsidized by Queen Victoria, was organized under Sir John Ross and sailed for the Antarctic on a voyage of discovery and magnetic investigation.

Canada and Van Diemen's Land were selected as being nearest the magnetic poles, and St. Helena, because it was in the sphere of least magnetic disturbance, and in these three places observatories were ordered to be erected.

Toronto was chosen as the most suitable point in Canada, and King's College granted a site. In September, 1840, the first magnets were suspended in a wooden structure, and from then until 1892 constant and careful observations of diurnal changes in magnetic declination and dip were made, but in 1892 the magnets were ruined, as were those of other observatories in Potsdam, Greenwich, Kew and Washington by the advent of the trolley car, the electro-magnetic force utilized being so strong as to set up local attractions which destroyed the influence of earth magnetism.

Prof. Stupart then dealt with light, noting that light exerts pressure, as is proved by the radiometer. He gave a lengthy and lucid description of the Aurora Borealis, and explained it according to the theory of primordial matter, with which Dr. Osborne Reynolds of Owen's College, Manchester lately startled the scientific world.

Next Mr. Stupart touched on the superheated steam theory of seismic and volcanic disturbance, referring, of course, to Pelee.

The red spot on Jupiter, the Nova Persei and the desirability of increased membership of the society each had a place in the professor's remarks.

JUMPING.

One of the Toronto Globe's Best Sporting Articles.

This form of sport, while not so attractive to the spectator as running, is nevertheless a very important event on every athletic program, whether at the big national championships or the small country fairs.

There is no doubt that jumping would be more popular than it is if provision were made so that every spectator could get a good view of the contestants, but, as a rule, there is always a great number of officials and hangers-on standing around, thus spoiling any chance of seeing the sport. Until this is remedied I don't think it will ever amount to much as a drawing card at any meet.

To be a good jumper requires a lot of hard work and a certain amount of cat-like spring. Not one out of ten who go in for jumping make anything like a success out of it for the reason that it is so hard and violent an exercise. Let any person go out some evening and try the running broad jump several times. They will find next day they are sore in every joint and no doubt would not try it again for any amount. An athlete who follows jumping must keep continually in training, for if he does not he will find he cannot do as good work when it comes to a contest.

The events generally on a program are the running broad jump, standing jump, running high, standing high and hop, step and jump, the last one, I think, being the hardest to get proficient at.

Of course it is necessary to have a good pair of jumping shoes, with oak tan soles fitted with steel spikes, six in front and two behind. They should be made of calfskin and lace to the toes.

In practising for the standing jump it is a good idea to use weights at first, say, about five pounds each, toe the mark and swing the arms several times, throwing the weights behind you as you leave the mark. You can gradually decrease the weights till you can jump without them altogether. In making the jump bring the knees well up toward the chin and do not drop them till you have to. In this manner you cover more ground. Ten feet is a good jump. Also try and bring both heels together. If one is six inches ahead the judge is sure to mark the back one.

The running broad and hop-step require that the athlete possess some sprinting ability, as it is necessary to run a short way to get a good send-off. There is no regular mark for this event, the judge merely marking from where you step off.

The standing high and running high have no regular method to go by, as any way to get over the bar without knocking it off counts, and I have seen jumpers light on their hands and sides. On the whole, jumping is a hard game and requires a lot of pluck and endurance.—Wm. Devine, St. Thomas, in The Globe.

New Archaeological Names.

Russia has decided to found an archaelogical museum in Sevastopol. IN FOUR HOSPITALS IN MONTREAL

But the Doctors Could Not Cure Mr. Cloutier--Said He Would Never be Well Again--After Six Years of Helplessness He Was Cured by

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

The case of Mr. Siman Cloutier, shoemaker, 110 Lagouchetiere street, Montreal, deserves more than passing notice, because his case was unusually severe.

For six long years Mr. Cloutier was an invalid, unable to attend to his work, and much of his time was spent in the hospitals of Montreal. The doctors gave him no hope of recovery, but on the contrary, told him that he would never be well again.

A treatment that will restore to good health a person whose case was considered hopeless must be of more than ordinary value, and this is only one of a series of remarkable cures that have been brought about by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mr. Simon Cloutier, shoemaker, 110 Lagouchetire street, Montreal, Que., states: "For six years I was not able to work, my nerves were all unstrung and my digestion bad. I had severe attacks of headache, could not sleep, and suffered with shooting pains in the small of my back. I was in four hospitals, but the doctors could not cure me. They said I would never be well again. In spite of their decision I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food some months ago, and am convinced that I owe my life to this medicine. I have now been at work for over two weeks, and believe that my health has been fully restored. It is a pleasure for me to add my testimony to the hosts of others from persons who have been cured by this wonderful medicine."

How a Lincoln, Nebraska, Young Man Was Kept From Death—Respiration Ceased While he Was on the Operating Table.

A dispatch from Lincoln, Neb., says: For more than four hours and a half members of the Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity, of which Frederick Joseph Hurtz is a member, worked over the body of Hurtz to keep life in his body.

For that length of time they worked in relays, keeping up artificial respiration until at length natural respiration was restored, and the young man will soon be restored to health.

It was a task that has never before fallen to the lot of a college fraternity.

The task was accomplished while young Hurtz, who is a law student at the university, lay upon an operating table, where he had been operated upon for appendicitis. The young man is a son of Theodore Hurtz, a well known business man, who was present during the operation. He had been suffering for days, and at last an operation was decided upon as the only means of saving his life. The pus had been removed and also the appendix, which was found to be perforated.

But before the wound was closed it was noticed that the patient was not breathing as he should. Even after the abdoman was flushed with hot salt water there was no response. The body began turning purple, indicating that respiration was clogged.

The ether was at once withdrawn, but as the respirations grew fewer and fewer the usual remedies were applied. A mustard plaster caused the characteristic reddening, but there was no response from the lungs. Slapping was resorted to, but without avail. A Faradic battery was applied, but the breathing still slowed down, and artificial respiration was then called into play.

Up and down at the rate of 18 to 24 movements a minute his arms were kept going. Sylvester's method, the same as is applied in cases of drowning, was employed. The arms were extended full length, filling the lungs with air. Then they were brought sharply downward, the elbows pressed against the ribs and abdomen, expelling the air.

The physicians soon became exhausted physically, and then it was that word was sent to Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, and a dozen students responded. These were worked in relays, with a physician at the head directing the movements.

When one squad tired another immediately took its place. Hour after hour passed, but there was no response from the patient. His heart and pulse beat away steadily, however, and while these performed their functions there was hope.

The moment, however, that the respiratory movements ceased the body began turning blue. At the end of four hours and thirty minutes a faint sign of response was elicited. For nearly thirty minutes more the relays worked with renewed vigor. At the end of that time the patient gave one long respiration. A few minutes later complete respiration was restored and the patient, struggling to a sitting posture, querulously inquired:

"Are you through yet?"

He had reference to the operation. Not an inkling has he had of the struggle that had been carried on, and the heroic measures that had been resorted to. From that moment his recovery was rapid, and in a few days he will be discharged.

The physicians who performed the operation, Drs. M. H. and H. H. Everett, and the half dozen others who looked on are among the most prominent surgeons in the city, and every phase of the remarkable case was noted. Their theory is that the ether, as it very rarely does, caused a paralysis of the nerve centre of the brain, which controls respiration and that it was not until the effects of it had been completely eradicated that this organ was able to perform its function. At no time until near the close was there any indication of a normal respiration. At the close all of the attendants were on the verge of physical collapse from exhaustion.

But my friends, I found they were dragging me down to perdition; so I gave them all to my sister!"

DEATH TO TWO.

Asphyxiation in a Winnipeg Hotel Results Fatally.

A. G. Nilsson, of Barrett, Minn., who was asphyxiated with two companions at the Imperial hotel, Winnipeg, on Thursday night last died at the general hospital at 5.30 o'clock Saturday evening. Deceased never regained consciousness from the time he was discovered lying prostrate on the floor of his room at six o'clock Friday morning, medical aid being unavailing to bring back the heart beats to their normal condition.

The unfortunate man, in company with Messrs. Peterson and Olson, two well-to-do Minnesotans, came to Winnipeg on Thursday last intending to purchase a farm in Manitoba. He was possessed of a large farm at Barrett, Minn., but hearing of the splendid opportunities in the Canadian west intended to avail himself of them. He was a single man, and his relatives reside in Sweden. They have been cabled to, but as yet no reply has been received. Deceased was very well-to-do, and leaves a considerable amount of money. Mr. M. P. Faune, of Thorsburg, Minn., has arrived and will accompany the remains south. Deceased was 40 years of age.

John M. Peterson, the second victim of the gas asphyxiation to succumb, died at the general hospital at 9.15 Monday morning. The remains were taken on Tuesday last to Barrett, Minn., with the remains of the other victim, Nilsson. Peterson leaves a wife and four small children, residing four miles from Barrett.

SPEAKS OF HIS END.

Despite Efforts of Physicians, Pope Leo Receives Cardinals.

A dispatch from Rome under date of March 1st says: Dr. Lapponi, the pope's physician, made this morning a last effort to induce his holiness to renounce his receptions of the cardinals, but without avail. The audience was held in the pope's private library and Leo XIII spoke continuously for half an hour with the 42 cardinals. No address was delivered.

The pope, in the course of his remarks, referred to his approaching end. The cardinals greeted this reference with a chorus of noes, and with exclamations of "we have all come to wish you a long life."

By this time the excitement of the reception improved Pope Leo's appearance. When he entered the library his form was bowed and trembling, but now he seemed to have acquired strength and animation. Before retiring he presented to each cardinal a richly bound pamphlet, reviewing the chief events of his pontificate and containing a Latin poem of his own composition, and five of his most important encyclicals.

FOREMAN SUFFOCATED.

C. N. Hinchliffe Lost His Life Trying to Save His Property.

C. W. Hinchliffe was suffocated in a fire at the camps of the Lake Superior Timber Co., near Port Arthur, on Saturday morning, and his wife and daughter are said to be in a precarious condition.

Hinchliffe was the foreman of the camps, and resided with his family in a house on Point Nepigon Straits about 150 yards from the other portion of the camp. At 6 o'clock on Saturday morning he was awakened by finding his house on fire. Hinchliffe, his wife and daughter, ran from the house in their night clothes. He ran back to try and save their clothing, but was finally overcome by the smoke and flames. It is said that his wife succeeded in rescuing the body from the burning building. When Hinchliffe's brother left the sleeping camp he saw the state of affairs and ran to give assistance. He found Mrs. Hinchliffe and daughter nearly perished in the snow. A fierce gale was blowing. All that was possible was done for them. The body of the dead man was not burned. The dead man came from Appleton, Wis., about a year ago.

ROUGH WEATHER

STEAMERS ARE ROUGHLY HANDLED BY WAVES.

Liners Forced to Put Back for Shelter—Wreckage Washed upon Shores of England—Tidal Wave Sweeps French Coast.

A cable from London, dated March 1, says: The gales over the British Islands continued Saturday night and today, but with much less violence. Vessels are still taking refuge in ports and arrive battered by the storm. Others have gone ashore. A quantity of wreckage has been seen off the coast of Northumberland and the indications point to the wreck of the British ship Cambrian Prince.

The British steamer Pharsalia went through a terrible experience. She left Boston on Jan. 30 for Leith, calling at St. John, N.B. The hurricane struck her on Feb. 24 and the heavy seas flooded her hold, damaged her cargo, smashed the bridge and almost all the deck fittings, stove in the boats and swept the binnacle overboard. The captain and several of the crew were injured. The Pharsalia was obliged to put into Queenstown.

The British steamer Cebrian, from London, Feb. 17, for Boston, also put back to Queenstown after being 17 days out. She only got 700 miles west of Ireland and experienced repeated hurricanes. The decks were swept of everything moveable and the boats damaged. The captain thought the steamer would never weather the storm.

The storm passed away towards the coast of Scandinavia, but belated reports establish the widespread character of the havoc which it caused throughout the United Kingdom. No great disaster has been recorded, but the material damage done is enormous. Reports of wrecks continue to arrive, but only a few persons were drowned, considing the severity of the gale.

Among the incidents was the exciting experience in the docks at Barrow of the new Chilian battleship Libertad, the British cruiser Niobe, and a big cargo steamer, which broke from their moorings and drifted around considerably damaging themselves and their surroundings.

The Cunard liner Campania, which arrived at New York from Liverpool on Sunday last after a most tempestuous passage of seven days, nine hours and twenty-two minutes. From the time of leaving Dauntsrock up to the time of her arrival she experienced a succession of terrific southwest and northwest gales, with violent squalls and mountainous seas. During the voyage a paper containing Marconigrams was published.

A cable from Paris, dated Feb. 28, says: A tempest raged all night long on the west coast of France and caused a tidal wave which flooded the St. Francois district of Havre. The steamer La Bretagne was unable to leave the Harbor. Waves swept over the quays at La Rochelle, and did considerable damage.

Preserve The Forests.

While there are numerous areas of very fertile land awaiting occupation by the settler in different parts of the Dominion, there are also large districts which are unfitted for agricultural settlement, but which, if held by the country as timbered lands, may be made to yield large and constant revenues. The national and common sense view that the country should endeavor to make the best use of the heritage it possesses in its landed property, by directing the settlement of its best agricultural holdings where success in farming is easy, and retaining the poorer classes of land for timber growing, has not until recent years taken possession of the public mind. The wholesale destruction of forest properties by a lack of management and by destructive fires has aroused public attention and the wisdom of a better policy has become so apparent that the tide of public sentiment has set strongly in its favor. Hence, governments now have the backing of a large majority of intelligent people in every movement they make towards a rational policy in the treatment of this important part of the country's wealth, which may with proper handling be made to yield a large annual income.

Non-agricultural lands should be retained as forest reserves and every effort should be made to protect the timber from destruction by fire. By careful selection of the timber, these forests may be preserved for all time. Efforts should also be made to reforest some districts where the timber has been destroyed, or which are only lightly timbered, such, for instance as the sand hill districts in Manitoba. There are other forest areas which should be preserved on account of their value as water-sheds in holding the flood-waters back, and for their influence upon the climate of the country. The destruction of the water-shed forests would be nothing less than a calamity to the country. The effect of the destruction of such forests would be to cause alternate floods and drouth.

A remarkable incident occurred on the roof of a London 'bus one morning recently. As the vehicle was proceeding over Blackfriar's bridge a seagull took his stand upon the roof and took little or no notice of his fellow passengers. He rode several blocks and a young working girl opened a parcel containing her day's food and gave the gull some bread, which it ate with avidity.

MANITOBA LEGISLATURE.

Wednesday, Feb. 25.

The budget speech was delivered by the Provincial treasurer, Hon. John A Davidson. A surplus of $289,686 was shown. The reply will be made by Hon. Thomas Greenway. Mr. Johnson presented the petition asking for the incorporation of the Manitoba and Midland railway. The membership of the legislature will be increased to 42.

Thursday, Feb. 26.

Hon. Thomas Greenway criticized the government on the budget. Before the orders of the day were called, the member for Gimli, Mr. Baldwinson, tendered a public apology for statements made by him from his place in the House, and his newspaper, Heimskringla, accusing Mr. Greenway of stealing about $3,000, being collections made in connection with Icelandic immigration in 1893. Attorney General Campbell announced that the Redistribution bill would be brought down next Monday.

Friday, Feb. 27.

The time of the sitting was chiefly occupied by Mr. Rogers, minister of public works, who occupied over two hours on the budget. Less than half an hour was given to the rest of the business and the house adjourned until Monday at 8 p. m.

Monday, March 2.

The Budget debate was continued by Messrs. Burrows, Johnson, Norris and Fowler, and at the close an amendment was moved by Messrs and Young, regretting the steady and growing increase in the expenses of the legislature, a party division resulting in its defeat, 18 to 11. The budget was adopted on a similar division. Hon. C. H. Campbell introduced the distribution bill. The session is expected to end in two weeks.

Tuesday, March 3.

The Legislature spent the day in committee of supply. A number of returns were moved for and several petitions were presented, noteworthy among which were two asking that railway companies be held liable for fires kindled by their locomotives. A number of bills were advanced a stage, and notices of important motions and enquiries were given. An act was introduced by the Hon. C. H. Campbell to compel keepers of hotels and lodging houses to have proper ventilation and heat.

To Judge a River's Breadth.

It is necessary to make use only of the eyes and the brim of a hat to guess the width of any ordinary stream or even of a good sized river, and here is the way to do it:

Select a part of the river bank where the grounds run back level and, standing at the water's edge, fix your eyes on the opposite bank. Now, move your hat down over your brow until the edge of the brim is exactly on a line with the water line on the other side. This will give you a visual angle that may be used on any level surface, and if, as has been suggested, the ground on your side of the river be flat you may "lay off" a corresponding distance on it. To do this you have only to hold your head perfectly steady, after getting the angle with your hat brim, supporting your chin with your hand, if necessary, and turn slowly around until your back is toward the river. Now, take careful note of where your hat brim cuts the level surface of the ground as you look over the latter, and from where you stand to that point will be the width of the river, a distance that may readily be measured by stepping. If you are careful in all these details, you can come within a few feet of the river's width.

Her Latest Break.

"My six-year-old girl is an awful chatterbox," said a broker, "and the worst of it is that when we have guests at the house she is continually making breaks of the worst sort—breaks that tend to rattle the dry bones of the family skeleton in the closet. Recently when we had company at dinner she allowed her tongue to run away with her, as usual, the result of which was that she very much embarrassed both her father and mother, although the guests, I am free to say, seemed delighted. I had a very serious talk with her and impressed upon her, or tried to, that she must not tell any family secret. The next time we had company she was permitted to come to the table only by promising that she wouldn't utter a word. She behaved beautifully and had nothing to say until the dessert was about to be taken away. Then her lips began to quiver, and finally she burst into tears. 'Why, what's the matter, darling?' her mother asked. 'I—I want some more ice cream, if that isn't a family secret!' she wailed between sobs."

UNCLE SAM SCARED

DON'T LIKE EXODUS TO CANADA.

Land Agents in Western States Ask Government at Washington to Interfere and Stop Railroad Excursions to Manitoba and Northwest.

A dispatch from Washington, D.C., says: The interior department has been receiving alarming reports of the exodus to Manitoba of settlers from Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and North Dakota. The department has been asked by real estate dealers in those states to intervene, as the rush to Manitoba and the Northwest Territories continues to grow larger every week. The petition requests that the government will take steps to prevent the United States railroads from offering excursion rates to intending settlers to Winnipeg and and Northwest Canadian points.

Letters received state that the Canadian railways and government have sent agents through the northern states working up parties of settlers and offering inducements which real estate dealers believe this government and the northern railroads in the United States should be offering. Agents declare that hundreds of people are preparing to start for Canada. Excursions leaving the Western States on the 3rd, 19th, 17th and 24th of March and also at various dates in April, will convey hundreds of American settlers and their families. Some of these have already been in the Canadian west, secured their locations and made necessary arrangements for the accommodation of their families.

The prediction that from 50,000 to 100,000 Americans will settle in Manitoba and the Canadian Northwest this year seems more than likely to be fulfilled.

From the west comes the story that at various centres real estate speculators are combining in order to try to stop the movement. They have sent out agents to intercept parties en route for Canada, and are distributing literature designed to show that all the fertile land in the United States is not yet exhausted. One of these pamphlets is entitled "Out of the Clutches of the King," and appeals to the patriotism of Americans, enjoining them to stay at home and build up their own country.

The department of the interior is puzzled what to do in the matter, but may consult with the state authorities regarding future action.

CONFESSES HIS CRIMES.

Degenerate Causes Death of Five Women—Is a Moral Prevert.

Five murders, the victims of which were all women and two of them his wives, is the revolting record of Albert Knapp, given in a sworn confession before Mayor Bosch at Hamilton, Ohio.

Knapu, according to the police, is a degenerate of the most pronounced type. The murder of his third wife, Annie Goddard Knapp, which led to his arrest at Indianapolis, was done for no apparent reason.

Knapp, according to the police, is er, made a long statement at the jail. He adhered to his written confession and added some points. Of these, the fate of his first wife, Emma Stubbs, whose fate had been overlooked. Knapp declares that she is still alive and is now in Louisville, Ky. He says she got a divorce from him. He asserted that he was implicated in several holdups last December.

He was asked why he committed his various crimes, and how he felt when he was choking a woman to death. He said: "I can't tell. I was seized with an irresistible desire to choke them, and I can't help it. I could not let go when once I began, even if I wanted to. I never felt any remorse, only a feeling of satisfaction when I knew that they were dead. I used my hands in every case, except that of Mary Eckert. I choked that woman with a towel, but could have done it with my hands. I got acquainted with Mary in Dayton, Ohio, through an advertisement, and when she went to Cincinnati, I visited her at her room and choked her to death one night."

Every doctor who has seen Knapp agrees that he is a moral pervert, similar to "Jack the Ripper," except that he finds satisfaction in choking women and children.

The parents of Knapp said he was insane, and that his confession should not be believed. He had given them so much trouble they believed he would be much better dead. Wenzel, his sister, on hearing of the confession, went to the Cincinnati police headquarters and thence to Hamilton. She said her brother when 5 years old was kicked by a colt and later was struck by lightning, and but for her parents she would have had him adjudged insane.

A party of British farmers, forced out from Australia by drought, is expected to arrive in England next week, says a cable from London. They will proceed in April to the all-British colony in the Canadian Northwest, accompanied by their relatives and friends. British farmers who are coming, and who twenty years ago reported favorably on the Saskatchewan district as having ample means, will want considerable areas of land.

Cincinnati was visited by a disastrous fire on Feb. 26, which destroyed property worth millions. No lives were lost.

A London cable says: The building erected by the Church of England Army, an organization similar to the Salvation army, for the shelter of the poor, Uas destroyed by fire on Feb. 28. There were 300 people in the building when the fire started. Several of them are missing and probably were burned. One body was recovered.

While John Birch, quarryman for the Rathburn company at Gananoque was blasting, the charge hung fire. Birch went to see what was wrong, and the charge went off, blowing him some distance. The injured man was taken to the Kingston general hospital with a fractured skul and broken arm, injured hand, eye, chest and forehead. There is little hope of recovery held out.

Alfred Jeffs, a freight brakeman in the employ of the Grand Trunk railway, was accidentally killed at the St. Catharines station on Feb. 28. It appears that Jeffs was in the act of coupling a crippled locomotive when the accident occurred. His neck was broken and he expired almost immediately. He resided in Sarnia. He was unmarried.

COLONIALS ARE SUPERIOR.

Evidence in War Commission Shows This to Be the Case.

A London cable says: Major-Gen. Sir John Frederick Maurice, K.C.B., in an address here urging physical training of children, said that England was threatened by physical degeneracy. Three out of every five who offered themselves as recruits for the army were wholly unfit. Some children were fed on cold cabbages. Others possessed gin livers. They could not build up a nation on gin and cold cabbage. The future depended upon the training of both mothers and children.

Before the war commission on Feb. 28, Gen. Sir J. F. D. French praised the colonials' work in South Africa, and thought that the weakness of the army was due to the lack of mounted men.

General Bruce Hamilton testified that he did not think the English regulars were the equals of either the colonials or the Boers in individual intelligence, in power of observation, and in the power of looking after themselves. The Boers were undoubtedly the best shots.

The commission has so far heard 91 witnesses, who all unanimously admit the superiority of the colonials.

First of The Settlers Sail.

The immigration department at Ottawa has been advised that the Tunisian, of the Allan line, sailed from Moville on Feb. 28 with 115 first, 310 second and 570 third class passengers, also 310 military reservists, bound for the Canadian Northwest. This is the largest number of passengers that ever sailed for Canada so early in the year. They are due in Halifax March 6. The militia reservists will be well looked after and escorted west directly on their arrival.

The immigration department will give every possible assistance and accommodation to the 2,000 settlers who are coming with Rev. Mr. Par- Tents, 30 by 20, will be erected along the route from Saskatoon to their destination. Mr. C. W Speers, Canadian immigration agent, will have charge of the party.

The story is told that a negro church, thinking a D. D. after the name of their pastor would add to his usefulness, and understanding that the fee for the degree at a certain university was $50, made a determined effort to secure the amount. They were able, however, to raise only $25. So they sent the $25 and asked the university authorities to give him one D. forthwith, promising to remit the balance for the other D. as soon as they could.

FERNIE BOARD OF TRADE

General Meeting on Nonday Evening Makes Preparations to Receive Visitors.

The Fernie Board of Trade met on Monday evening to take steps toward receiving and entertaining the delegates of the Associated Boards of Trade which meet here on March 18th.

A committee consisting of Messrs. H. W. Herchmer, J. A. Rennie and A. H. Cree was appointed to make arrangements to secure a hall and report at a general meeting called for Mar. 9th.

Messrs. Fred Stork, H. A. Kanouse and J. S. T. Alexander were appointed as a committee to make preliminary arrangements to entertain the visitors to a banquet. This committee was also instructed to make arrangements for hotel accomodation for the delegates.

The following names for membership were submitted. W. B. Ganong, John Hunter, J. L. McIntyre, W. A. Ingram, C. M. Henretta, E. H. Bird and J. H. Tonkin.

THUGS AGAIN AT WORK.

Nearly Kill a Man For a Small Sum of Money.

Another cowardly hold-up occurred in Fernie on Sunday evening which nearly resulted in a cold-blooded murder.

J. Crouch, employed as cook in D. McPhail's railroad camp at Coal Creek, left town somewhat under the influence of liquor on Sunday evening about 10 o'clock. When he had got about half a mile below the bridge he was struck on the head from the rear and from that time he did not recover clear consciousness until Monday forenoon. About 2 o'clock Monday morning he made his appearance in a dazed condition at the brewery where he was at once taken care of. His story at first was evidently the result of delirium. He said he had met two men at a small fire near the bridge and had offered them a drink from a bottle which he was carrying. Later on, at the hospital, he was unable to corroborate this story. He did not remember meeting anybody and he had no clue whatever to offer the police.

Mr. Crouch was evidently struck with some sharp instrument directly from behind. The first blow caused an ugly scalp wound near the top of the head and the second a murderous gash behind the left ear. Had the victim not recovered sufficiently to make his way to the brewery it is probable that he would not have recovered from the loss of blood and exposure. Mr. Crouch was relieved of all the money on his person which amounted to probably $15. He does not think the deed was committed from malice but simply for plunder and he hasn't the faintest idea of who his assailant is.

Chief of Police McMullen, is much annoyed that these thugs get away without leaving any clues but he is making special efforts to bring the cowardly dastards to justice.

Later reports from the hospital state that the unfortunate victim is more seriously injured than at first supposed.

LABOR IN POLITICS.

I have seen several articles on "Labor in Politics" and the question arises in my mind, why should labor not control our Government, in these advanced days when every class of labor is organized, for the moral, financel and educational advancement of all, why should it be nessary to elect our representatives for the moneyed men, from the ranks of men who are doing their utmost to keep the masses in a poverty striken condition, surely we have men in our ranks who are thoroughly compentent to look after the affairs of the government, take a glance at some of our labor leaders, is any futher argument nessary to prove that we have men of righ caliber, knowing that we have such men in our ranks, why in the name of heaven do not the laboring men throughout the country sink party politics into oblivion, aggree on a laboring man as candidate, stick to him through thick and thin, is there any dout to the ultimate result, it has been said and with a certain amount of truth that every man has his price, Brothers, let our price be the advancement of the laboring classes, not only of our own but others, look at the great coal strike in our vicinity in the neighborhood of fifteen hundred men out and everything closed down tight, any thing less would be an insult to our manhood, and we deserve to be on a plane with the veriest savage, God in his infinate mercy and goodness has placed in our hands a weapon with wich to defend ourselves, it is our duty to see we use it effectually, and not sully and defame our God given rights, the ballot is placed in our hands to protect our own intrests as well as the intrests of our country, and rest assured we will be called upon to give an account of our stewardship, it is surprising to see the number of men who are corruptible the almighty dollar will do anything, but to men who are men enough to belong to an organization of their craft, the almighty dollar should have little effect, when used for the purpose of depriving them of their manhood, I do not think enongh attention has been paid to this important subject, the laboring classes have been heretofore like so many sheep, they simply go where they are driven, this is not an enviable comparison, but, Brothers am I very far from the truth, can any man stand up and say I have drawn on my imagination, I think not and it is time we threw off the fetters of slavery and assert our rights, and assert them in no unsertain tone, Oh! had I the elequence of a Sparataeus, then would I say with him, if ye are beasts then stand here like fat oxen waiting for the butcher's knife, if ye are men, follow me. If we must die, let us be under the clear sky, by the bright waters, in noble, honorable, battle and let our fight be waged with our ballot, do not fear for the result, we have might as well as right on our side, it will not be nessary to die by the bright waters, we can have the noble honorable battle, and when the smoke has cleared away, it will be found that no deaths will be recorded, except death of tyranny, trusts and monopolies, and our generals who have fought the good fight will be resting before entering our legislative halls, to enter on another fight for God, country and freedom, I have only touched on the subject, there is a great deal more that could be said, but is it nessary to do any more than call the laboring man's attention to such a state of affairs, it should not be "Breathes there a man with soul so dead, who never to himself has said, This is my own my native land, Scot's immortal words ring in my brain, can we stand idly by and see our native land and its countless millions of laboring men subjected to the gravest possible danger, surly, when we take into consideration our rights, our homes, our loved ones and last but not least our country, we will "be not like dumb driven cattle, but heroes in the strife,

A SETTLEMENT IN SIGHT

The Commission Instrumental in Bringing the Men and Company Together.

The conciliatory commission which arrived in Fernie last Saturday for the purpose of doing all in their power to bring peace and harmony out of chaos and to report to the mining convention on the condition of affairs as found by them in the strike situation have been working hard this week.

The chairman of the committee, Mr. John Keen, of Kaslo, is an affable gentleman of mature years. His evident knowledge of human nature and his perfect disinterestedness in the present trouble fit him for the impartial position in which he is placed. Mr. A. C. Flumerfelt, of the Granby smelter, Grand Forks, is a representative of capital, and he is deeply interested in the fuel supply. Mr. F. Keffer, of the Mother Lode mine, Greenwood, also represents capital and also directly interested in our coal and coke. Mr. W. G. Gaunce, of Greenwood, is favorably known as a mining man and also represents capital. H. Seaman, president of of the Western Federation of Miners at Rossland, and M.P. MacAndrew, president of a similar union at Kaslo, are intelligent and practical men who possess the confidence of the mining association, not only to the extent of this appointment but also in that they are on the executive of the Mining Association. The third member to represent labor, Chris Foley, is too well known in Fernie to need more than mere mention. Mr. Foley has enemies even among strong union men but the great majority of right thinking men regard him as a good man for the position. Such is the personnel of the big commission which landed here on Saturday and got down to business on Monday morning

Monday and Tuesday were consumed in preliminary work, securing an outline of the attitude of each party towards the other, etc., and making preliminary arrangements to bring the two parties together. The local unions first presented their grievances and three meetings took place, Wednesday afternoon and evening and Thursday morning, when three men from each camp in turn met the General Manager. At each of these meetings two of the conciliatory committee were present.

On Friday morning a meeting was arranged between the District Union and Mr. Tonkin.

This meeting was followed by another in the afternoon and two more to-day. At each of these meetings were present two of the conciliation commission, one representing each side. The questions in dispute are being discussed in a thorough manner and it is generally thought that a settlement is in sight.

A representative of the FREE PRESS had a talk with Mr. Keen, chairman of the Commission on Thursday evening. Mr. Keen was unwilling at that stage to make a full or definite statement on the strike situation. He spoke of the delicate nature of the situation in which the commission were placed, and of probable disadvantages arising from any premature statement from him. He was hopeful of a satisfactory settlement of the great labor trouble.

Mr. Keen spoke enthusiastically of the B. C. Mining Association. He declared that it was absolutely non-political and that so long as it remained so its work in the province would result in much good. Politicians were kept far in the background at the meeting in Victoria and men who were independent and loyal to their province controlled the meeting. He as president was determined that so long as he held that position the organization would not swerve from the progressive stand it had taken. He stated that the burning question at the convention was the strike in the Crow's Nest collieries, and that everything else faded into insignificence beside the importance of the strike which affected the whole country. He believed if the commission were instrumental in bringing about an adjustment of the differences between the contending parties that alone would amply justify the formation of the Association. Mr. Keen claimed that the commission, supported as it was in a most representative sense by the whole province, was in a better position to deal with the Fernie strike than a compulsory arbitration committee appointed by the Government. Mr. Keen urged that the local branch of the B. C. Mining Association get down to business and organize. He had copies of the by-laws of the Association with him and would be glad to see immediate action taken in Fernie to strengthen provincial organization.

MR. ROBERT JAFFRAY HERE.

Mr. Robt. Jaffray, Vice President of The Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. while in town this week was interviewed by a representative of the FREE PRESS. Mr. Jaffray is on his way home from California where Mrs. Jaffray is spending the winter for the benefit of her health, and he left on Friday for Toronto via Spokane. He stated that he regretted very much the present strike. He did not deny that it was causing a very great loss to the Coal Co., to their employees and to the country at large. He believed that the struggle had been forced on them largely through the influence of American agitators, and he had also reason for believing that this movement was fomented by American Smelter men who took this effective method of paralyzing Canadian metalliferous mining.

The men had as yet not presented their grievances to the Company nor officially notified the Company of a strike. He was therefore unable to discuss the subject minutely. As far as wages were concerned, the statement made by Manager Tonkin he declared to be correct in every detail and these showed clearly that the coal miners of the Company were an exceptionally well paid body of men. The Co. was not opposed to unionism on the part of their employees but they did not wish any unnessary and uncalled-for intervention from outside unions until such time as the local unions had done what they could towards securing an adjustment of their difficulties.

Mr. Tonkin had the unanimous support of the Board of Directors and the settlement of the strike was left entirely in his hands.

The directors of the company were most anxious to work harmoniously with their employees. It was a grave mistake to think that they were pursuing a course antagonistic to the interests of their employees. The Company was a business enterprise organized with the object of making money and with this object in view they recognized the advantage of general prosperity among all with whom they came in contact, and on this principle the Company had done all they could to foster Canadian Smelters. When the Coal Company produced its first coke, the Smelter at Nelson was paying $14 per ton for American coke and they at once laid down to them at $7 per ton a class of coke admitted to be at least one-third better. They were not restricted in the price of coke but they had never taken unfair advantage of the smelters. The Company recognized the fact that the metal ores of B. C. were of a comparative low grade and while the quantity was unlimited it was necessary to obtain cheap fuel in order to work them with profit and they had therefore placed their coke at a very moderate price.

Mr. Jaffray felt that the press of B.C. were not treating the Company fairly, in that they failed to appreciate the work the Company had done towards building up the Province, and that many newspapers took a prejudicial view of any difference between employer and employee in the latter's favor, probably to secure a larger number of readers, but which often left erroneous impressions upon those not personally acquainted with the facts.

While not optimistic as to an early settlement of the present strike Mr. Jaffray was hopeful that when it was settled it would be settled on a permanent basis. The Company had found the petty strikes of the past detrimental to their interests and they were anxious to ensure against a repetition of these troubles. The Co. had grievances which also must be rectified.

When asked how he regarded the opening up of the Government coal reserve at Morrissey Mr. Jaffray replied that when this property would be thrown open they no longer would be tied down to the present low price on coal. He expected competition as there were vast areas of coal in the Province as yet unopened and the Company was prepared to meet with friendly competition in supplying the fuel markets of B. C.

BOARD OF TRADE MEETS.

Preparations for March 18th—Fire Protection Discussed.

A large and representative meeting of the Fernie Board of Trade occurred on Monday evening. The committees appointed on the preceeding Monday reported that Princess Hall had been engaged for the meetings of the Associated Boards of Trade, and that suitable arrangements had been made for the hotel accommodation of the visitors as well as for a banquet in their honor. This banquet was to be held on the evening of March 19th at the Royal hotel.

Messrs. Ganong, Bird, Tonkin and Henretta were elected members of the board.

Messrs. H. Bentley and J. H. Tonkin along with President W. R. Ross, as ex-officio member, were elected as delegates to represent the Fernie Board of Trade.

The subject of fire protection was discussed at length. The secretary had been instructed to wire Govt. Agent Armstrong as to who the fire wardens were and he had ascertained that Messrs. A. K. Farquharson, C. J. Digby and H. W. Barnes held that position.

Messrs. Cree and Quail were appointed a committee with instructions to report to the Board at a later date on the condition of the fire protection system of the town. Messrs. Cree, Watson and Tuttle were instructed to call a general meeting of citizens to discuss the situation and to take such action as might seem advisable.

CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE.

Amalgamation with The Halifax Banking Company.

It is announced from Halifax that a provisional agreement has been made under which The Halifax Banking Company is to be amalgamated with The Canadian Bank of Commerce. The latter bank has at present a paid-up capital of $8,000,000 with a rest of $2,500,000, but a week or two ago a special general meeting of the shareholders was called for 14th April next to pass a by-law increasing the capital stock to $10,000,000. Its head office is in Toronto, and it has now 84 branches throughout Canada and the United States, stretching from Sydney, Cape Breton, in the extreme east, to Victoria in the west, and from Dawson in the north to San Francisco in the south. It is represented at all the principal business centres in Canada west of Montreal, and has its own offices in New York, Portland (Oregon), Seattle and London, Eng.

Until the recent establishment of a branch at Sydney, the Bank of Commerce had no office in the Maritime Provinces. Its stock, however, has always been a favorite investment with Nova Scotians, no less than $800,000 of its capital being held in the province. The purchase of The Halifax Banking Company will give it offices at fifteen additional points in Nova Scotia, including Halifax, Truro and Windsor—in fact, all the more important places. Two branches will also be obtained in New Brunswick,—at St. John and Sackville.

The Bank of Halifax has a paid-up capital of $600,000 with a rest of $525,000. Its deposits are about $4,000,000, its total assets about $7,000,000, and with the added strength and prestige which its incorporation into the Canadian Bank of Commerce will necessarily give, a large increase in the present business may confidently be expected. When the amalgamation has taken place the Canadian Bank of Commerce will have a paid-up capital and rest combined of nearly $12,000,000, and total assets of some $80,000,000 with 101 branches distributed throughout the length and breadth of Canada.

STRIKE IN CRANBROOK.

Men in Robinson-McKenzies' Saw Mill Quit Work Because of a Chinaman.

Cranbrook, March 12th, 1903.—Last Saturday afternoon about thirty five men employed at the Robinson-McKenzie company's saw mill walked out, claiming that they had protested to the manager about the language used by a Chinese cookee employed at the camp and the manner he washed the dishes.

The men took their blankets and came to the town in a body and in a short time there was considerable excitement around the streets caused by the various arguments presented by the dissatisfied ones.

The company claim that the Chinaman knew little English, and what he did know was confined to a few cuss words, which he used in his trouble with the met, hence the trouble. They claim that the dishes and food were clean.

Most of the men have gone to work in other camps, and as men are hard to get just now, it makes it somewhat inconvenient to the firm.

ANNUAL CONVENTION.

ASSOCIATED BOARDS OF TRADE MEET IN FERNIE ON WEDNESDAY

List of Resolutions that will be Discussed by the Delegates.

Some forty or more representative citizens of Eastern British Columbia will meet in Fernie on the 18th at the Fifth Annual Convention of the Associated Boards of Trade. The following is a list of the resolutions for discussion of which notice has been given to our local secretary.

BY KASLO:

That the Provincial Government be called upon to make immediate provision for the prevention of forest fires.

That a tract of not less than 100,000 acres of the pine lands of East Kootenay be acquired by the Province and held as a public park.

That the Dominion Government be required to establish an experimental orchard at some favorable location in the Rocky Mountain region.

That the executive of the Association be instructed to call a convention to consist of two delegates from each legally constituted Board of Trade in the Province, said convention to meet at Kamloops, at a date to be fixed by the executive, the same not being later than Dec. 31st, 1903.

The object of the convention to be the organization of a permanent Provincial Board of Trade.

WHEREAS, There has been a noticable diminution in the supply of fish in the streams and lakes of Southern British Columbia;

AND WHEREAS, It is believed that the propagation and preservation of the fish has not received that attention from the authorities which the importance of the subject requires;

BE IT RESOLVED, That the governments of the Province and the Dominion be urged to investigate the requirements, and take such action as may be necessary in the premises.

BY TRAIL:

WHEREAS, The smelter at Trail has been repeatedly closed down on account of its inability to secure adequate coal and coke supply;

BE IT RESOLVED, That means be discussed for arranging, so far as possible, for sufficient and cheap supply of fuel.

RESOLVED, That the members of the Trail Board of Trade do hereby endorse the action of the silver-lead miners, in their efforts at Ottawa, to secure equitable and adequate protection upon their product. That we recommend that means be discussed by which the Associated Boards of Trade may further aid the silver-lead miners in their cause.

RESOLVED, That the members of the Trail Board of Trade recommend that a general discussion be had upon the question of smelting in Canada, with a view of further stimulating and encouraging smelters in Canada as opposed to those in the United States.

BY KASLO:

RESOLVED, That the Dominion Government be memorialized to appoint a commission to consist of three competent persons, whose duty it shall be to visit New Zealand and investigate the operations of the Act providing for the arbitration of labor disputes, which is in force in that colony, and to report to the Dominion Government the result of their investigations.

That negotiations be opened with the railway and steamboat companies interested, with the object of securing tourist rates from Revelstoke and Spokane to all Kootenay and Boundary points and return, interchangeable over either Company's lines of railway or steamboat, and

That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Boards of Trade of the district and to the mayors of each town and city requesting endorsation and assistance to secure to the Kootenays, an adequate share of the tourist trade.

BY NELSON:

WHEREAS, This Board views with alarm the repeated industrial disturbances in all parts of the province, which have a deterrent effect upon the investment of capital, and tend to retard the development of our natural resources.

RESOLVED, That the Government be requested to introduce legislation at the coming session of the Legislature that will make imperative the immediate investigation by the Government of all industrial disputes, and the publication all the facts connected therewith.

The Rossland Board of Trade deems it in the general interest of the Province to question the policy of the Provincial Government in that it has for a lengthy period locked up and reserved large tracts of coal and petroleum land in the South-eastern section of British Columbia.

It is stated that the applications to prospect for coal and oil have been declined by the Government on the plea that the ground is under reservatjon, whereas on investigation it has been found that the reservation is only against "Sale, preemption and settlement," and therefore does not apply to coal and oil locations.

RESOLVED, That this Board consider such action inimical to the interests of the Province, deflecting capital to Alaska in the United States, and the Northwest Territories of Canada, where immense areas of coal and petroleum are thrown open for location and are obtainable on reasonable and advantageous terms.

RESOLVED, That the existing coal and coke trouble in East Kootenay, threatening as it does to cripple for the time being the industrial resources of the entire Province, is a sufficient justification for this Board urging the Provincial Administration to take prompt action towards remedying what is reasonably considered a public grievance, from every point of view.

RESOLVED, That this Board would further urge the Government that in the granting of Leases or Crown Patents in connection with the said coal and oil lands in Southeast Kootenay that they would as far as possible safeguard the public interests by preventing any control over the new areas by Companies at present in existence, thus avoiding a monopoly in an industry of vital importance to the mining section of the Province.

That in view of the evident necessity for the transcontinental railroads of Canada ultimately extending their lines of Railway to the Pacific Coast, and in view of the present financial position of the Province, it is inadvisable for the Province of British Columbia to subsidize the building of any such railroad.

BLOCKADE AT CROW'S NEST

Many Slides and a Terrific Blizzard tie up C.P.R. Trains for Three Days.

On Tuesday the soft condition of the weather started some slides on the Crow's Nest line between the tunnel and the Summit. A snow plow was sent down at noon and managed to get through but the loosened snow at once filled up the track again. The plow was sent back to open it again for the evening express but the latter found it impossible to get through and left Michel for the West next morning. A freight train tried to get through from the West on Tuesday night and got stuck about a mile East of the tunnel.

The Wednesday morning express was held at Crow's Nest and did not get through until Friday morning. Altogether there were six engines in the mix up and two ploughs were kept at work trying to clear the track. On Wednesday afternoon a terrible blizzard set in and the weather turned very cold. The storm was the worst the trainmen had experienced in years. It lasted until Thursday forenoon and during that time little could be accomplished. The drifting snow filled up the track that had been cleared. During the rest of Thursday and the following night the plows, assisted by a force of nearly 100 men succeeded in opening up the line again and establishing traffic. The slides extended nearly all the way from the tunnel to Crow's Nest. The largest were several hundred feet in length with a depth of about 12 feet. Supt. Jamieson was in the blockade all the the time and personally directed the work. The men had an uncomfortable time of it and many had no sleep during the three nights.

A smaller slide occurred this side of Sparwood on Wednesday and a freight was stuck in the snow there until relieved ed by the plow returning on Friday morning. A strong force of men had been sent down from Fernie but they had been unable to dig it out.

The C.P.R., anticipating a troublesome season, are making arrangements to put a rotary plow on this line. A rotary ought to work effectively as the force of gravitation will carry the snow well out of the way of further trouble.

THE STANLEY CUP.

CONSUMED IN OIL.

AN OIL TANK TRAIN IN COLLISION.

Spectators to the Number of Twenty-Two Are Burned to Death as the Result of An Explosion of Oil—An Indescribable Horror.

A dispatch from Olean, N. Y., Mareg 4, says :—A collision occurred two miles from the city at about 9 o'clock to-night. One of the trains in the crash was made up principally of tank cars filled with oil. Some of the cars were demolished, and the oil caught fire. The sky was lighted up for miles and a large number of people were attracted to the scene of the accident from the city.

Several terrific explosions, presumably of oil in tank cars not demolished by the first impact of the collision, occurred about 10 o'clock. Soon afterwards a telephone message was received at police headquarters asking for all the ambulances and doctors in the city. Sidney Fish, a prominent business man, returned from the scene of the fire at midnight. He said : "I was attracted to the scene of the fire about 10 o'clock. When I was within a quarter of a mile from the scene of the accident there was a terrific explosion. Flames shot outwards and upwards for a great distance. I saw several persons who started to run away, drop on the railroad tracks, and they never moved again. Others who stood close to the tanks were for hundreds of feet. The scene was awful. Half a dozen young boys ran down the track with their clothing a mass of flames. They resembled human torches. I could hear their agonized screams distinctly from where I stood. They ran some distance down the track and then threw themselves to the ground, grovelling in the ditches in their efforts to extinguish the flames. Then they lay still, some of them unconscious ; others dead. I don't know how many were killed, but I counted twenty bodies before I came away."

Word was at once sent to Olean police headquarters by telephone. Every doctor and ambulance in the city was summoned. Grocery waggons, and carriages of all kinds were pressed into service, and everything possible was done to bring the wounded without delay to the city hospitals for treatment. The first bodies to arrive at the hospital at midnight were four young boys. Great patches of their flesh were burned off, and hung in shreds from their bones.

A man who returned from the scene of the fires at midnight reports having counted twenty bodies scattered along the track after the fire subsided.

The latest estimate of the casualties places the number of dead at 22 and the injured at 45.Some of the injured will die.

MINERS SMOTHERED.

Four Men Meet Death at Ferguson, British Columbia.

A serious accident, resulting in the death of four miners at the Nettie L. mine, Ferguson, B. C., occurred on Saturday evening when the night shift were going on duty at 7 p m. The day shift had quit work at 4 p. m. and fired their shots, and it is supposed that some of the lower workings were filled with powder, gas and smoke.

Robt. Savage was the first man to descend to his work, and when at the bottom was heard to call for help, saying he was suffocating. George Grochey descended to his rescue and succeeded in bringing him up to the floor level when Groshey became insensible and Savage's body dropped back, a distance of about forty feet. Allan Caulder then rushed down the ladder, and on reaching the bottom called out for help, and Pat Crilley, the shift boss, and a brother of the superintendent, went down to share Caulder's fate. Barxclay Crilley then went down and actually reached his brother, but the gas drove him up to the level more dead than alive. "Jack" McLeod a Cape Breton miner of great experience, made an attempt with a rope. He secured a body with the line and bore it to the ladder foot. The men above raised Paddy Crilley to the level, McLeod partly sustaining him from the ladder. Six times McLeod came up with the body of a rescued comrade and six times went down perhaps to meet his own more than probable death. The sixth and last man having been carried up, McLeod collapsed and Jack Sweeney descended to see if any more remained in the mine, and McLeod had to go down again and bring Sweeny out. McLeod came out of his experience uninjured.

The names of the dead are : Pat Crilley, shift boss ; Allan Caulder, Ed. Cognan and Robt. Savage. Two men, Nels Johnson and Otto Bloom, are now under the doctor's care and are expected to recover. No blame is attached to the mine management, the appliances or the equipment .

A PATHETIC INCIDENT.

Prince George, of Saxony, Found Praying in the Cathedral for His Mother.

A cable from Dresden, Saxony, dated, March 8, says : Little Prince George, eldest son of Crown Prince Frederick, was missing from the palace yesterday, and for several hours his tutors and the household officials were in consternation. The favorite rumor was that the Prince had been abducted by agents of his mother, the former Crown Princess Louise, but the boy was found praying in the cathedral that his mother might return. He was found in an agony of tears and supplications.

The Socialists are using the Crown Princess's episode for political agitation, and the unpopularity of the Saxon monarchy appears to have been considerably heightened. The carriage of Princess Mathilhe, sister of the Crown Prince, was surrounded by a crowd in one of the principal shopping streets of Dresden one day last week and cries of "Give Us Our Louise" were raised. Princess Mathilde was so frightened that when the police reached the scene she was escorted into a shop and eventually went out by a rear door and took another carriage home. Several similar incidents, showing the unpopularity of the royal house, have occurred since the agitation caused by the elopement of the Princess Louise but none of them has been mentioned in the newspapers of Dresden.

A STRANGE CASE.

Oswego Lawyer Sues to Establish That a Certain Women Is Not His Wife.

The most unusual case that has engaged judicial attention in Oswego, N. Y., in many years was tried before Supreme Court Justice Wright yesterday (says a dispatch of Feb. 8) Wardell G. Robinson, 73 years old, a leading member of the bar, president of the Oswego Bar association, and colonel of the 18th military regiment in the Civil war, sued to judicially establish the fact that Louise Simmons, aged 76, of Newark, N. J., is not and never has been his lawful wife. Mr. Robinson was successful.

Miss Simmons is a sister of the Rev. W. H. Simmons, a Methodist preacher of Oswego. Mr. Robinson claimed she wilfully, fraudulently and for the purpose of scandalizing and degrading him, held forth and pretended to be his lawful wife, thus casting a cloud on his estate. Her answer alleged she had been Mr.Robinson's wife for 36 years, and that a 17-year-old daughter was born of said marriage. Mr. Robinson on the stand exhibited papers showing he had paid Miss Simmons $5,800 during the past twelve years, and large sums years ago, in exchange for a release for any right to his estate. Judgment was taken by default, it being agreed that he pay the defendant $600 annually during her life.

Advices from Cairo say that Mr. Davis, an American, who has expended considerable sums in exploration work near Thebes, has found a splendid chariot in the tomb of King Thothmes. The fittings of the chariot are of bronze, and the remainder is of gilded wood. The chariot is valued at £5,000.

According to one of the passengers who arrived at Halifax last week on the steamship Canada, the voyage across the Atlantic was the roughest in 35 years. The weather was so boisterous for three days that none of the passengers who were on board were allowed on the decks. The captain of the ship has spent 40 years on the Atlantic and has not seen as rough a voyage since 1868. The confinement below decks was a hardship, and the passengers suffered to such an extent that two men and a woman went insane. All three were en route to Winnipeg in search of new homes in western Canada. One of them was a young dentist, who expected to start business in a western town.

Favors Home Rule.

A London cable says : Lord Spencer, the Liberal leader in the House of Lords, speaking at Accrington on March 6, replied to the criticisms of his speech last Saturday and said he was as strongly in favor of Home Rule as ever, but that he believed it would be eventually conceded by the Unionists.

Lord Spencer's speech, to which he referred, was made at Birmingham, and in the course of it he said that Home Rule for Ireland "was very distant and that it would be impolitic to bring it forward." He had always believed that it was more probable that the Unionist party would eventually carry some measure of self-government for Ireland than that the Liberals would do so.

A FATAL PANIC

CROWD WAS WATCHING A BURNING VESSEL.

One Man Was Killed and a Hundred Injured by the Collapse of a Steel Freight Shed While Watching the Destruction of a New Steamboat.

The burning of the magnificent palace steamer Montreal at her moorings in the St. Lawrence at Montreal on Saturday night resulted in the death of one man and the almost certain death of two more; the serious injury of six and minor injuries to nearly a hundred others, as well as the loss of the pride of the Richelieu and Ontario fleet, valued at about $500,000.

The loss of life and limb was caused by an excited crowd clamoring for vantage points from which to view the conflagration. At the Allan wharf several hundred feet across the frozen dyke from the burning vessel, the freight shed stood, but the iron sides and doors had been removed for the winter. People, anxious for a view of the great blazing steamer thronged the wharf, and hundreds climbed on the rafters. Suddenly there was a crack and the great structure collapsed, and the heavy rafters crashed down upon the crowd below. Many jumped or were forced over on the ice. Others went down under the weight of the falling beams. There was momentary panic, and then the work of getting out the injured rapidly began. Police patrol wagons, salvage wagons and cabs were hurriedly pressed into service to augment the ambulances, and soon a hurried procession of carriages filled with wounded was wending its way to the hospitals, while people on foot aided in carrying torn and bleeding men and boys to taverns and other temporary places of refuge in the vicinity Hundreds who simply received cuts on hands and faces, but were able to get about, had their injuries dressed as well as possible near the scene of the trouble and were assisted to their homes. Of the least injured it is impossible to give a record. The hospital staffs had their hands full.

The fire started about a quarter to nine and from that time to midnight Montreal has seen nothing to compare with the pandemonium that reigned on the wharf and the river front. From the four corners of that great city a cry went up that there was a bad fire, all occasioned by the glare in the sky, and when the mob of people assembled at the river's edge it was only to hear the hushed whisper of the possible dead and the dreadful story of the falling in of a shed near the scene of the fire.

It seemed incredible that such masses of people could gather in so short a time, and in the midst of the wild yells of the fire brigade and the calls of police, the throng pushed their way into the shed just over the harbor dyke at the foot of St. Peter's street, all anxious to avoid the possibility of walking through the mud and the melting ice that was so apparent on all sides. Had they remained where the police had them the accident would have been averted.

The vessel was in the customs basin, close to the Allan wharf, and before any of the fire apparatus could get to the scene of the conflagration the fire had complete control of the whole hull, and was licking the masts and the upper works. It became at once apparent that there could be no hope of saving the vessel. The whole structure was nothing more than a huge bonfire when the fireman and others from the city arrived, and soon nothing remained but the charred and smoking steel hull.

In the after part of the main deck, where there was to have been the great main dining saloon, temporary heat was furnished by a big Quebec heater and an open Beacon grate, such as is sometimes used in new buildings to dry out plaster It was from this part of the vessel that the fire seems to have started. An investigation will be held to ascertain the real cause.

Five of the city hospitals were heavily taxed to accommodate the many wounded, who were coming in from all sides. All the available ambulances were called into requisition and besides the police patrol wagons and the cabs were fitted with extra stretchers, brought to the scene by the hospital ambulances. The doctors in the General and Notre Dame hospitals were too few in number to accommodate the number of patients. Mattresses were placed on the floor and the wounded laid there. Some convalescents gave their beds to the maimed and wounded.

The exact number of the injured cannot be ascertained, but the hospitals have cared for nearly seventy, and many went home after having their wounds dressed.

The Montreal was one of the finest steamers afloat. She measured more than 500 feet in length, and was to be furnished in a most luxurious manner.

MANITOBA LEGISLATURE.

Wednesday, March 4.

There were a number of ups and downs in the provincial legislature during the sitting yesterday afternoon. The several resolutions necessary to pass the second reading of the bill granting supplies to his Majesty were not all approved of by the opposition and amendments were freely offered. Explanations by the ministers proved satisfactory in some cases and the amendments were then withdrawn, but in thers ro amount of explanation would suffice and divisions of the house occurred. For a while the members were kept busy standing up to be recorded, aye or nay, and sitting down again.

The strenuous opposition was not fatal to any of the resolutions, and every grant in the estimates was passed, so that the bill might be read a third time in the same shape as it came from the committee of the whole house the day before.

The discussion at one stage became heated and some unkind things were said. One member of the opposition was called to order by the speaker of the house for the use of unparliamentary language. Two of the ministers and the leader of the opposition were, in the spirited debate, brought to their feet and some terse speeches resulted.

During the afternoon the premier announced that on Monday next he would introduce a bill to provide for the establishment of an agricultural college in the province.

Thursday, March 5.

Attorney-General Campbell submitted the redistribution bill to the house. The number of constitfiencies remain at 40 ; five are wiped out and five new ones appear. No additional membership is given to Winnipeg. Twenty-seven constituencies have had their boundaries altered. The supply oill was passed. A motion asking for a return showing the cost of printing and binding was made. The report of the department of education was laid on the table.

Friday, March 6.

Mr. Johnson moved the second reading of the bill to incorporate the Midland Railway of Manitoba, the application for a charter for which has been asked by C. E. Hamilton. The bill was read a second time and referred to the private bills committee. Mr. Greenway characterized Mr. Hamilton's application for a charter as a big bluff. There was a protracted discussion on refusal to extend the charter of Manitoba Midland & Western railway last session. Redistribution came up and Mr. Greenway moved the adjournment of the debate. The lieutenant-governor assented to the bill of supply. Considerable routine business was also disposed of.

Monday, March 8

In the House. Hon. Thomas Greenway attacked the Redistribution Bill, claiming municipal boundaries were not respected. Hon. C. H. Campbell, Mr. T. C. Norris and Mr. Greenwood followed, the latter criticized the extinction of North Brandon. The House divided on the second reading, and the bill carried 20 to 10, Mr. Greenwood voting with the opposition.

Tuesday, March 10.

The Franchise Act was debated in the House, Hon. Thomas Greenway, Premier Roblin, Messrs. Young, Greenwood, Neilson and Lyons taking part. Mr. Greenway moved a resolution favoring a return to the old system of preparing voters' lists,but it was voted down, 23 to 10, Mr. Lyons seconding the resolution and voting for it. A large number of bills were advanced a stage and several inquiries were made of the ministry. Business is being rushed through and an early prorogation is expected. The Midland railway bill has been reported from committee.

To Judge a River's Breadth.

It is necessary to make use only of the eyes and the brim of a hat to meas ure the width of any ordinary stream or even of a good sized river, and here is the way to do it:

Select a part of the river bank where the grounds run back level and, standing at the water's edge, fix your eyes on the opposite bank. Now, move your hat down over your brow until the edge of the brim is exactly on a line with the water line on the other side. This will give you a visual angle that may be used on any level surface, and if, as has been suggested, the ground on your side of the river be flat you may "lay off" a corresponding distance on it. To do this you have only to hold your head perfectly steady, after getting the angle with your hat brim, supporting your chin with your hand, if necessary, and turn slowly around until your back is toward the river. Now, take careful note of where your hat brim cuts the level surface of the ground as you look over the latter, and from where you stand to that point will be the width of the river, a distance that may readily be measured by stepping. If you are careful in all these details, you can come within a few feet of the river's width.

MARKETS.

(Compiled from The Commercial)

WHEAT—Three weeks of stagnation in the American speculative wheat markets came to an end on Thursday, when suddenly and without warning prices broke, and a flood of wheat was thrown upon these markets which resulted in a decline in values of 1c to 1½c from the closing prices of the previous day. Latterly there has been an increase of bearish sentiment due partly to enlarging exports from Argentine to Europe, which have resulted in increasing the quantity on ocean passage, and partly to the absence of anything definitely unfavorable to the growing crops of winter wheat. Besides these facts there is the other, that at present and for some time back, speculative trading in grain and produce has not interested the general public. Trading in the speculative markets has been left to what are called professional speculators and to the traders in actual grain and produce. In the United States all business people have for some time been too well employed in their respective lines to hanker after speculating in grain. Everybody has in a general way been having all the business he could do and has been making good money at it.

Manitoba wheat has been very dull all week and with the break in prices on Thursday there has been manifested more disposition to take hold of business. At the prices reached yesterday a decline of 1c is shown from the prices of a week ago, which compares with 1¾ decline in American markets. We quote values up to close of business yesterday at 73¼c 1 hard, 71¼c 1 northern, 69¾c 2 northern, and 67c 3 northern, spot or delivery first half of March, and for May delivery 1 hard 75¼c, 1 northern 73¼c, 2 northern 71¾c, 3 northern 68¾c, buyers at these prices, all in store, Fort William, Port Arthur or Duluth.

FLOUR—We quote : Best Hungarian Patent, $2.10 per sack of 98lbs. delivered to the trade; Glenora patent, $1.95; Strong Bakers, $1.65; and XXXX, $1.35. These prices are subject to the usual trade discounts.

OATS —The oat market firmed up early this week on better demand and continued slow receipts. The large quantities of oats known to be in the country do not seem to have much bearing upon prices, owing probably to the fact that most of them are not a real factor because of inability to get them to market. The market is today about 1c higher than a week ago. No. 1 white in carlots on track are worth 32c per bushel; No. 2 white, 30c and feed grades, 28c. Farmers' loads on the street are bringing 28c, and at country points about 25c. Brokers are asking 25c to 27c for carlots in the country. There is nothing doing yet in seed oats.

BARLEY—The market is firm and the movement light. Dealers are paying 31 to 32c per bushel for feed grades on the street here.

FLAXSEED— There is some business doing in seed flax, for which the price to farmers is $1.00 per bushel here.

SPELTZ—The market is steady at 32c per bushel of 50 pounds, delivered here. Demand is good.

HAY — Hay is plentiful and the market rules steady. Fresh baled in cars on track is worth $5 00 to $6 per ton.

POTATOES—40c to 45c per bush.

POULTRY—Dealers are offering in a wholesale way 11c to 12½c per pound for chickens, dressed; 9½c to 10c for ducks and geese, and 15c for turkeys.

BUTTER — Creamery—City makers are asking 24c for choice fresh made in one pound bricks, delivered.

BUTTER—Dairy—Very little dairy butter is coming in. Most of the receipts are rolls and of mixed quality, mostly poor. Well packed butter, in rolls, is worth in a jobbing way 21c to 22c per pound net, with inferior qualities ranging down as low as 10 and 12c. Tub butter will bring at jobbing houses as high as 18c per pound if fresh and well packed, with a range of from 14c to 18c for the various qualities offering.

CHEESE — The market is quiet. Jobbers are supplying the trade with Ontario stock at 13½c to 14c per pound.

EGGS — 20c per dozen, subject to candling.

DRESSED MEATS — Beef, city dressed, 6c to 7½c per pound: country stock, ½c under these figures; mutton, 8c to 9c; lamb, 11½c; hogs, 7c to 7¼c; packers' price, for best weights; heavies, 1c less.

HIDES—Receipts are light and the market quiet. Frozen hides, 5½c per pound, less 5 lbs. tare; city butchers', 6¼c per lb. for No. 1s; 5½c for No. 2s and 4½c for No. 3s. Sheepskins, 30c to 50c each.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE — The market is quiet. Western cattle are being brought in to meet the demand for fresh killed. We quote : Best steers, 4c to 4½c; butchers' ordinary, 3½c to 4c, and from that figure quotations run down to 2½c, according to quality. Stockers, yearlings, $17; two-year-olds, $22 each.

SHEEP—Market nominal.

HOGS—Receipts are moderate, and the price holds at last week's level. We quote 5½c to 6c for choice weights ranging from 150 to 250 lbs., off cars here. Heavy hogs and light fats 4½c to 5c, according to quality.

MILCH COWS—There is a good demand for all the cows offering at prices ranging from $30 to $45 each.

HORSES—The market is more active, as the demand for spring is now in evidence. A good many horses are being brought in from the south and east, but the demand is greater than the supply, and prices hold firm. Teams of work. horses are worth from $300 to $400, according to weight and quality.

SPIRIT MESSAGES

STRANGE TALE TOLD IN LONDON COURT.

An African Explorer Relates With a Solemn Contenance How He Was Imposed Upon--He Lost His Estate to a Clever Swindler.

A London cable says : The Court of Chancery on March 2nd heard evidence in the extraordinary suit of Henry H. S. Cavendish to have set aside a deed by which Major C. H. Strutt is alleged to have obtained almost complete control of Cavendish's estate. Cavendish is the wealthy African explorer, who married Isabel Jay, the leading actress of the Savoy theatre in April last. and whose name had been connected with that of Edna May previously.

Cavendish, looking weary, and whose boyish ingenious face was pale, gave his testimony. He explained to the court the workings of the planchette, or writing table, through which the spirits are supposed to communicate with mortals.

A planchette is a small heart-shaped or triangular board mounted on three supports. Two of these three supports, on little legs, move easily on castors, while the third has a pencil point. By placing the tips of the fingers or the palm of the hand on the board, it may be so moved that the pencil point will trace letters and words. The planchette has been invented about half a century, and is used by spiritualists to write alleged messages from the dead.

Cavendish said that his experiments culminated in Mrs. Strutt writing with the aid of the planchette upon an open Bible. "I believed the communications were from my mother," he said.

These experiments in spiritualism continued daily, being interrupted only long enough for meals. Continuing, Cavendish said : "We also had communications from angels and arch-angels. All sorts of messages came from them—prayers, poetry and stories of processions in heaven. Sometimes the angels made reference to our business matters. Their advice always coincided with that of the Strutts."

Cavendish related these matters with no evidence of incredulity upon his solemn face.

According to statements made by plaintiff's counsel, it was in the belief that he was receiving spirit messages from his dead mother that Cavendish agreed to a settlement, by which, it is asserted, what remained of his fortune after the legal firm of Lake and Lake had dealt with it passed into the control of the Strutts.

Mr. Cavendish's father, Mr. William Thomas Cavendish, died in 1878. The plaintiff, his eldest son, was born in 1876, thus becoming of age in 1897. Shortly after his father's death Mr. Cavendish was made a ward of the Chancery Court, and directions for his support and education were given. While still under age he took part in exploring expeditions in East and South Africa :On coming of age he was entitled to a large amount of money, a considerable portion of which he lost through the action of Lake and Lake who had effected mortgages on the property for £89,000.

Benjamin Green Lake, of this firm, was convicted two or three years ago of fraudulently dealing with trust money, and was sentenced to a term of penal servitude.

A portion of Cavendish's estate had been sold to wipe out these mortgages, but the remainder belonged absolutely to Cavendish. Of the £100,000 which was raised on Lake's advice Cavendish received but little, and he took proceedings against Lake, who then became bankrupt, with the result already mentioned.

It was in 1902 that Cavendish went to live with Major and Mrs. Strutt at 89 Picadilly. Subsequently the family moved to Maidenhead, Cavendish going with them. An arrangement to divide the cost of living was not carried out, but Cavendish paid at the rate of £30 a week for his expenses, some of which were of a lavish character.

Thus Major Strutt got to know Cavendisn's affairs, and frequently accompanied him to his solicitor,Mr. Taylor, and was regarded by Taylor as he was by Cavendish, as a confidential and independent adviser. Taylor at that time being engaged in carrying out the arrangements with the mortgagees. It was proposed that Cavendish should join an enterprising company, which required the expenditure of a sum of money, and as theonly way that he could obtain money was by further mortgage, Taylor, who disapproved of the scheme declined to act.

In August, 1901, at the Maidenhead residence, a number of transactions were commenced. There was dissatisfaction with the rate of allowance, and Major and Mrs. Strutt began to awe Cavendish and get him under their control and influence his mind by means of a "panchette." Several messages purported to come from the spirit of his mother through Mrs. Strutt as a medium, advising him what to do. The advise at this time was to invest in acetylene gas, as thereby he would get back the money he had lost.

As time went on the "panchette" was still used to induce Cavendish to act in a certain way.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Onions will prevent small-pox. Well no one ever doubted but that they were strong enough to prevent something.

Impure blood is the breeding place for innumerable illnesses. When we see anybody suffering from rheumatism, limping on crutches, or find on our way a person covered with sores, we feel tempted to call out to them, as well as to those suffering from anaemia, scrofula: "Poor man the help is within your reach, and you still continue to suffer!" We have the right to say that, since we have known the history of this popular medicine, hardly any other medicine has succeeded in achieving such remarkable and thorough cures as Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops. Facts are eloquent. Thousands of testimonials bring news of cures by these "life-drops" as a grateful patient named them, and every day the list of them is increasing. It must be further said in praise of Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops that they are prepared from plants and roots without any admixture of mineral substances, such as mercury, zinc, etc., and therefore do not have the unpleasant after-effects resulting from the use of other so-called blood purifiers and purgatives, which often remove small ills and cause much greater ones. We are often asked: "When should the system be purified?" This must be left to personal judgment, and we can only reply: When nature demands it. The spring is generally considered the proper time for purifying the system. We do not want to upset that theory, but we must point out that blood should be purified also at other times, when there are signs that it is not clean and wants regulating.

Many claims have been made on behalf of the modern newspaper. It is now held forward as the only reasonable cure both for cold and poverty. If you stretch it over you at night it is better than a warming pan, better than an eiderdown quilt. If you roll it up into wet balls and put it on the fire it does instead of coals.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia.

Prince Joachim Albert of Prussia, has written both the scenario and music of a ballet entitled "The Miracle of Spring."

There never was and never will be a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in sound, unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grevious ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease and by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses through the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result, improved appetite. Northrup & Lyman, of Toronto, have given to the public their Superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, guaged by the opinions of scientists, this wine approaches nearest perfection of any on the market. All druggists sell it.

Oliver Rogers, a seaman, adopted a peculiar method of ending his life at Southampton, Eng. He put three pennies into a slot gas machine, and then fixed a long piece of rubber tubing to a burner. Turning on the gas he placed a pillow slip over his head, into which he put the end of the tube. Then, lying on the bed, he slowly suffocated. He was dead when discovered.

According to the Daily Mail Mr. Bosttock has bought the London Zoo's biggest elephant, Jingo, and will transport the animal to the United States immediately. Jingo was a baby when the elephant Jumbo was shipped to the United States. He is now 22 inches taller than Jumbo was, and is still growing. The price paid is not known, but is said to have been four figures in pounds.

For a Cold that hangs on

For obstinate coughs and colds there is nothing equal to that old reliable remedy Gray's Syrup of Red Spruce Gum. Prepared from Red Spruce Gum it is soothing and healing to the Lungs and Throat. It stops that tickling in the throat, and after a few doses that tight feeling in the chest is relieved and the cold and cough pass away.

ONLY A SLIGHT COLD.

Yet it May Lead to Consumption and an Early Grave.

If your blood is poor or watery, a touch of cold or influenza will settle in your lungs, and the slight cough of today may turn to the racking consumptive's cough of tomorrow.

Weak lungs are caused by weak blood; weak blood is an open invitation for consumption to lay upon you the hand of death.

Stop that cough by enriching your blood and strengthening your lungs with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new, rich, red blood. They add resisting power to the lungs. They have saved hundreds from a consumptive's grave. Here is a positive proof that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure where other medicines fail. Miss Katie Henry, Charlottetown, P. E. I., says: "Some months ago I got caught in a rain storm, and the wetting was followed by a cold. At first I paid but little attention to it, but as the cold clung to me and finally developed into a hacking cough, I became alarmed and consulted a doctor, who gave me a bottle of medicine. Unfortunately, it did not help me, and I began to grow pale, lost in weight and my appetite completely left me I was now regularly under the care of the doctor, who told me my lungs were affected, and that I was threatened with consumption. The doctor's treatment did not seem to benefit me in the least. I grew steadily weaker, and finally was compelled to remain in bed. At this time a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and even brought me three boxes before I finally consented to take them. I have reason now to bless my friend's persistence, because I felt better before the pills were all gone, and I gladly continued the treatment, and was soon able to be out of bed and take a walk every day. I am now in the best of health and weigh ten pounds more than I did before I took sick. I feel that I owe my life to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and hope my experience will benefit some other sufferer."

All diseases which come from poor blood or weak nerves can be driven from the system by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which may be had from any dealer in medicine, or will be sent post paid at 50c per box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Remember that substitutes and medicines said to be just as good do not cure.

There was once a man who admitted there were others as smart as himself—but he died before the flood.

STILL ANOTHER TRIUMPH — Mr. Thomas S. Bullen Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with Piles: and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have also been subject to Quincy for over forty years but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the Piles nor Quincy have troubled me since."

DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION.—C. W. Snow & Co. Syracuse, N. Y., write: "Please send us ten gross of Pills. We are selling more of Parmelee's Pills than any other Pill we keep. They have a great reputation for the cure of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint." Mr Chas. A. Smith, Lindsay, writes: "Parmelee's Pills are an excellent medicine. My sister has been troubled with severe headache, but these Pills have cured her."

Seventy poets of Germany have agreed with one another to sell no poems for less than 12 cents a line.

Mr. T. J. Humes, Columbus, Ohio, writes: "I have been afflicted for some time with Kidney and Liver Complaints, and find Parmelee's Pills the best medicine for these diseases. Those Pills do not cause pain or griping, and should be used when a cathartic is required. They are gelatine coated, and rolled in the Flour of Licorice to preserve their purity, and give them a pleasant, agreeable taste.

Trollope Disagreed.

Although Anthony Trollope never smoked, he liked being with those who did. It soothed his nerves, he said, and sent him to sleep. On one occasion, when he had just returned to London from South Africa, he was talking at the Cosmopolitan club to Lord Carnavon, Lord Derby, Froude, the historian, Lord Wolseley and one or two others equally famous on the future of that country. In the midst of the discussion Trollope fell asleep, and after a quarter of an hour's doze he awoke, shaking himself together like the faithful, growling Newfoundland dog he so much resembled. Dissentient even in his unconsciousness, he spluttered forth: "I utterly disagree with every one of you. What is it you said?"

Here's a Queer Fish.

Each one of us has at some time eaten too much, but we have surely not gone to such an excess as this fish has. It is called the "black swallower" and as a swallower takes first place, for its stomach is much larger than its body. It will seize by the tail a fish eight or ten times its own size and work its way over it by repeatedly sliding forward one jaw and then the other. Before taking a meal the swallower is a very respectable looking fish, except for a voracious cast of countenance, but afterward he certainly has the appearance of having eaten too much. Then the walls of his stomach are so stretched as to be transparent. Later digestion begins and the swallower is turned belly upward by the imprisoned gas and his stomach becomes a balloon, which lifts him from the depths of the ocean to the surface, and in this helpless condition he is thrown about by the waves, perhaps cast ashore and left high and dry by the receding tide, in which case he does not swallow any more, for the returning tide finds him a dead fish.

The Constitution In Practice.

The theory of the constitution is that the three departments of the government—the legislative, the executive and the judiciary—are independent of one another. In practice the government is not carried on in harmony with this theory. The system of checks and balances does not operate as its inventors intended. The president was to have had the power of selecting his subordinates; the senate, through the exercise of the power of confirmation, was to prevent the appointment of unworthy men, especially of men who might conuive with the president to usurp power. In practice most of the president's subordinates are forced upon him. He usually selects after consultation with a senator, who stands for the whole senate, for he has its power behind him through a custom which has grown to be a rule of conduct, known as the "courtesy of the senate."

CROSS BABIES.

How to Make Them Bright, Good Natured and Well.

A crying baby is an unwell baby. The little chap is not cross for the fun of it. He cries because that is the only way he has of expressing the fact that he is either in pain or discomfort. Most of his little troubles are due to some disorder of the stomach or bowels and if Baby's Own Tablets are given both the trouble and resulting crossness will disappear. You can take a mother's word for it, and Mrs. John T. Sutherland, of Blissfield, N. B., says: "I think Baby's Own Tablets the best medicine in the world for little ones. My baby was very cross and used to keep me awake half the night before I got the Tablets. Now she sleeps soundly, is good natured and is growing splendidly." You can give these Tablets with perfect safety to a new born babe. They are guaranteed to contain no opiate or poisonous sleepy stuff, and are a sure cure for all the minor ailments from which little ones suffer. Sold by medicine dealers or sent postpaid at 25 cents a box by writing direct to the Dr. Hilliams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE FERNIE FREE PRESS,
FERNIE BRITISH COLUMBIA

SATURDAY, MARCH 14, 1903.

WHERE IS HE?

DURING the present industrial crisis when this district in particular and the Province in general is suffering from the dire effects of a suspension of work in our collieries our member, Mr. E. C. Smith is conspicuous by his absense. Is it possible that the man elected to represent this district in our legislature has so far forgotten his pledged duty as to stand idly by and watch the struggle without showing any interest or sympathy in the life-throbs of this great constituency? It is not claimed that Mr. Smith has the power of settling the strike or that he has the right to take any arbitrary stand in the matter but we do claim it is his duty to be on the ground to take advantage of every opportunity of impressing upon both parties the importance of an early adjustment and ever ready to offer his services in a conciliatory capacity to bring about that much desired end. It is also a recognized fact that the Government at Victoria are not fully alive to the importance of an early settlement and no one should be in a better position to post them than our local member. This lack of attention but proves what has often been urged before, Fernie should be represented in the legislature by a man whose interests are centeredi n Fernie. Until we a representative this town will not receive just treatment.

The Political Aspect

Current reports from Victoria show that Hon. Col. Prior is making a strong effort to stem the tide of political adversity which after the West Yale election threatened to wreck his government. These crises during the past few years have occurred with such monotonous regularity as to now create little more than mere notice on the part of the public. We have seen all kinds of incongruous coalitions to keep a minority government in power and once again it appears as if the schemes of those at the head of the government are to be successful.

Jos. Martin now shows a leniency towards the Prior government on the pretext that he prefer Col. Prior to Richard McBride as leader, but what the real understanding is between the wary Joe and the gallant Colonel will perhaps never be made public.

Mr. Houston and two or three other members who were considered in the doubtful class are disposed to support the government in passing the regular estimates for the year 1903-04, as well as private bills and legislation of a non-contentious nature, on the understanding that the house would then be dissolved and an appeal made to the country. So that it seems reasonable to believe that under any circumstances the general elections will not be brought on before autumn, and with the advantages that time and scheming may add it is just possible that the present legislature may live to the end of its natural life. Whatever may be the outcome the opinion is more prevalent than ever that the province will not have a sound and progressive government until an appeal is made to the electors on party lines.

County Court Registrar

We were beginning to hope that we had at last secured the ear of the Government, but the condition of affairs at present indicates otherwise. We were led to believe that a Registry of the County Court was to have been established in Fernie some months ago. No Registrar has been appointed, and Judge Forin was obliged for that reason to abandon his intention to hold Court on his last visit. This condition obliged us to fall back again to the facilities afforded by the Small Debts Court. Since then Mr. Armstrong, who gave every satisfaction as Judge of the Small Debts Court, was notified to discontinue holding Courts in Fernie, and no successor was appointed in his place. The net result is that we have here a population of several thousand people without any Court facilities. The people of Fernie should bestir themselves to secure proper representation at Victoria. Let us nominate some capable person who will see that our business necessities are satisfied before taking up abstruse political questions.

* * *

Associated Boards of Trade

The fifth annual meeting of the Associated Boards of South Eastern British Columbia is to be held in Fernie before another issue of this paper reaches its readers. The scope of this organization is not so extensive as that of the recently organized Mining Association, but many of the objects of these institutions are common to both. During the five years of its existence, as an association it has done much to remedy existing defects in our economic system, and vividly draw attention to others. Its influence as a remedial agency is on the increase. In past years its meetings were synonomous with the foregathering of the brightest business minds in this section, and this year's meeting will be no exception. We are, at this juncture, passing through the travails of an industrial trouble which has affected every community which will be represented at the meeting, to a greater or less extent. Not withstanding this the local Board of Trade and citizens generally should, on this occasion, endeavor to excel their well-earned reputation for past hospitalities. Let the guests, their labors being ended, carry away the idea that the metaphorical storm clouds which seem to envelop us temporarily, are but the natural precursors of that sunburst of prosperity which is not far distant, and the dawn of a better day.

* * *

The C. P. R. Strike.

Referring to the inconvenience caused to the general public by the C. P. R. strike now in progress, the Toronto News (independent) says editorially: "It does not matter which side is right. It does not matter whether our sympathies are with company or strikers. The general public is injured in a quarrel with which it is only indirectly concerned. Sooner or later the practice of forcing the innocent users of great public services into quarrels of the management must cease. The service must be maintained. An equitable method must be found of adjusting differences between employers and employees—a method which will protect the interests of that little-considered third party, the public. We are not sure but the remedy has been found in the arbitration bill which Sir William Mulock will submit to parliament at the coming session."

* * *

The Strike.

The latest reports indicate an early settlement of the strike. At the present time it would be unwise on our part to indulge in any speculation as to the terms upon which the differences will be adjusted. The commission and the two parties concerned maintain a discrete silence as to the progress of the negotiations and we heartily agree with their actions. We believe that the matter is in good hands and that the outcome will be satisfactory to all concerned.

* * *

Retraction

The following appeared in our issue of last week in connection with an interview with Mr. Stockett "Was it not Ballusky's idea to draw all his earnings and leave the country? And was it not the fact that a garnishee being served against his wages that blocked his scheme and forced his turning in the time of his backhands." Mr. Ballusky denies the truth of this statement and we take this opportunity of withdrawing it.

* * *

Morrissey Road.

Definite information has been received in answer to the large petition sent to the Government, that the road between Morrissey and Fernie will be built in the spring and also a bridge across the Elk at the former place for general traffic. A Government appropriation for the Fernie district is like "getting money from home" and congratulations are due all around for the speedy manner in which this has been rushed through. It is now up to the Government to push the work at the earliest possible moment.

* * *

A perusal of the last few issues of the Morrissey Miner shows that a condition of political unrest and indecision obtains in that burg, if the Miner is any indication of the pulse of the people.

A change in the political possibilities is announced with each succeeding issue and we wonder whose turn it is next. Brother Simpson has temporarily overlooked a few of us but we are satisfied we will all be there if an election is not sprung too soon.

Mr. Prest has spent a great deal of time in the business and has produced some very fine work. Mrs. Prest has just returned from a two months trip of instruction, and is now familiar with the latest mode of producing artistic work. They will maintain their studios in Cranbrook and Fernie.

Infringement of a Trade Mark

In an action in the High Court of Justice for Ontario, recently tried before Chancellor Boyd, at Toronto, the Slater Shoe Co., and Chas. E. Slater, president of Montreal, makers of the famous Slater Shoe, obtained a judgment forever restraining F. C. Wilkinson, a boot and shoe dealer, of Owen Sound, from advertising, exposing, or offering for sale or selling boots or shoes not made by the Slater Shoe Co., as "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods" or the Slater Shoe." The Chancellor, also ordered Wilkinson to pay the heavy costs of the action. The Chancellor, after hearing the evidence, decided that no one except the Slater Shoe Co., had a right to use the name "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods," "The Slater Shoe," or any similar names in connection with boots and shoes, and that Wilkinson had no right to use any name or names in connection with boots and shoes which might enable him to pass of a shoe not of the company's make, as being of their make, nor in any way to reap the benefit of the reputation which the Slater Shoe has acquired throughout the Dominion of Canada.

The Genuine Slater

Is positively the best shoe value offered for sale in Canada. You may include the United States and that will pretty near cover the world for fine shoe making. "Just because they are branded with an American stamp."

H. Bentley went down to Lethbridge on Monday.

G. O. Foss, contractor, was up from Morrissey on Wednesday.

H. F. Martin, manager of the Morrissey mines, was in Fernie this week.

Mrs. J. H. Bricker gave a Thimble Tea on Wednesday afternoon.

H. N. Galer, of the Granby smelter Grand Forks, was in Fernie this week.

H. G. Macdonell, of Nelson, was registered at the Royal this week.

T. Lucas of the C. P. R. at Cranbrook was in Fernie on Monday.

Frank Clapp, of the East Kootenay Bottling Co., was up from Cranbrook this week.

Mr. J. F. Jarvis has moved into his new house recently purchased from Mr. D. Macdonald.

Mr. J. Elliott and family have moved into the house recently occupied by Mr. Jarvis on Gemmill St.

Mr. J. F. Armstrong of Ft. Steele was in town yesterday and held a small debts court.

Mrs. Keay and Miss Keay arrived from the east on Monday and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Keay.

Mr. J. F. McCuaig, of Trites, Wood Company, Limited, arrived in Fernie on Tuesday.

Mr. Wm. Blakemore, of Montreal came in on Monday, and left on Thursday for Spokane. He intends to return this way shortly.

We are glad to report that Mr. N. E. Suddaby is rapidly recovering from his indisposition and that he will soon be able to leave the hospital.

Mr. Walter Harwood, of E. J. Peltier & Co., who broke his leg by a severe fall some time ago, is around on crutches and will soon be fully recovered.

Mr. E. J. Peltier left for the coast on Thursday. He will proceed via San Francisco and St. Louis to his old home in Chatham where Mrs. Peltier is now living.

Mr. Frank Constantine who has been with Mr. Stork for the past 18 months has purchased a tinsmith and hardware business at Innisfail, Alta. He left on Sunday evening to take charge of his new undertaking.

Four gentlemen and a lady were stopping at the Royal this week at the expense of the C. P. R. They had through tickets and owing to the blockade on the line were given free hotel accommodation until the road was opened.

The election of officers for the Gladstone Union last Saturday resulted as follows :— President, J. Galvin ; Vice Pres. Mr. Kali ; Secretary, T. Craig ; Executive, Messrs. C. Burrows, J. Feeney, J. Kobus, Wilson and Geo. Sulphur.

The Snow Shoe club gave a very pleasant party on Thursday evening at "The Quarters". Dancing and card playing were the chief amusements. Refreshments were served by the lady members of the club, and a most enjoyable evening was reported.

The boys of the Angels' Rest and the picked team who opposed them in hockey buried the hatchet on Thursday evening by joining forces in giving a pleasant party to their lady friends in the apartments of the Angels' Rest. Cards and dancing were indulged in until a late hour. Refreshments were also served.

D. V. Mott returned from Revelstoke this week. He made a trip on snow shoes about 65 miles north of Revelstoke into the Big Bend country. He was at Arrowhead when the mountain top rolled into the Arrow Lake and caused tremendous waves ; the first of which landed the steamer Revelstoke on the beach imbedded in a huge piece of ice, but the second wave brought it back to its original position. He reports general commercial depression in the smaller town where he called on account of the fuel shortage.

Succumbed to his Injuries

Daniel Delay, the C. P. R. brakeman who was injured last week while coupling cars, succumbed to his injuries at the hospital on Monday. Mr. Owen Delay, of Lethbridge, the father of the unfortunate man, was present at the time of his death. To his father he stated that no blame could be attached to anyone for the accident. Coroner H. H. Trites who took the case in hand decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The body was shipped to Lethbridge for interment on Tuesday.

Morrissey Miner : Up to the present time the only names that have been seriously discussed in this district as candidates for the provincial parliament are those of W. Blakemore and Fred Stork, of Fernie. Mr. Blakemore is looked upon in a favorable light on account of his experience and general knowledge of the needs of the district. But politically Stork seems to be the strongest of the two, and will undoubtedly be the candidate of the Liberal party, unless things undergo a material change between now and nomination time.

C. Burt, of Nelson, traveller for the Hudson Bay Co., is in town.

Fred Smith, representing Gage & Co., of Toronto, was in town this week.

A. Mutz was in the snow-bound train at Crow's Nest from Tuesday till Friday.

The Mackenzies gave a successful entertainment before a crowded house in Cranbrook on Monday evening.

Mr. G. Aldrich recently employed by the C. P. R. here has been transferred to Prince Albert where he has been promoted to locomotive foreman at the roundhouse. Mr. Aldrich left on Monday for his new home.

Football Meeting.

A meeting of all those interested in foot-ball will take place at the Royal Hotel tonight at 10 o'clock. A large attendance is desired as the important subject of a Crow s Nest League will be discussed. Some communication with other towns on this matter has already taken place.

The Pollock Wine Co., Ltd.

An important deal was put through this week by which E. J. Peltier disposed of his interest in the wholesale liquor business of E. J. Peltier & Co. and in the lease of the Alberta Hotel. These two concerns are now controlled by a stock company named the Pollock Wine Co., Ltd., with a fully paid-up capital of $11,200. One half the stock is owned by Mr. J. R. Pollock who has been appointed manager. The Alberta will continue to be run as a first-class hotel in every respect.

MORRISSEY

From Our Own Correspondent.

J. O. Foss of the firm of Foss & McDonald has returned from a business trip to St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Harry Simmons accountant for the Coal Company at this place is a business visitor to Fernie this week.

A new Doctor in town ! Dr. Wilson is not a bit jealous of his successor young Dr. Wilson, he arrived Thursday the 12th about 12 o'clock, the gentleman weighs 10 pounds.

Miss. Hattie Lamon who has resided in Morrissey for the past four mouths left on Saturday last for Cowley, Alta., where she expects to make her home. We regret to loose Miss. Lamon from our midst.

Geo. A. Petrie one of Foss & McDonald's old timers has concluded to become a farmer. He went to Alberta recently and located a ranch 8 miles east of McLeod, on the Old Man river.

Snow slides are beginning to move, on Wednesday afternoon one of considerable size came down the hill across from the Cottages, attracting much attention.

The Sunday School is making splendid headway under Mr. Conner ; the average attendance of scholars being about twenty-eight, showing that our new Church building is very badly needed.

A large snow slide come down the mountain about two miles below the junction, completely covering the track of the Crow's Nest Southern with many feet of snow. Trains will be blockaded for some time.

Fritz Bachor expects to leave Morrissey in a few days for Vausau, Wisconsin, and will return about the first of April and dame rumor says that when Fritz returns he will not be alone and numbered with the forlorn bachelors of "Tribly Cottage."

Fritz entertains his friends at the Tribly cottage Friday night. Dinner will be served at 7 p.m., after which there will be a smoking concert and other refreshments. This will be an enjoyable affair, Fritz does not do things by halves.

A ball was given on Monday night by Mr. and Mrs. Haesler at their residence which was a decided success. The attendance was large, two sleigh loads of guests come up from the junction. Music was furnished by local talent. A sumptuous supper was served at 12 o'clock. After supper was over dancing was resumed and continued until 3 o'clock in the morning. Mr. and Mrs. Haesler deserve much credit for this entertainment; it was unsurpassed by any thing of the season.

D. T. Williams has just returned from a three weeks visit to eastern B. C. and tne Northwest Territories. Mr. Williams reports great progress all along the line between Calgary and Edmonton. At many points along this line where two years ago there was no buildings, flourishing towns have sprung up as if by magic. You find banks, stores, hotels, schools. churches, and all the conveniences of an old settled country. People are becoming very much interested in Northern Alberta as a mixed farming country and thousands of emigrants are already beginning to come in. People desiring to secure land along the Edmonton branch in many places will be compelled to go back from 15 to 20 miles from the railroad , people can hardly realize how rapidly the country is settling up.

Mr. Fred W. Burn who has been laid up with grip for several days is around again.

Rev. F. W. Auvache, of Cranbrook, will preach in the Baptist church tomorrow evening at 7:30.

J. M. Zeller, of Canton, S. D., and G. C. Henderson, of Beloit, Iowa, were in the district last week looking over the water powers. They were favorably impressed with the Elk canyons below Elko.

Officer Walker Promoted.

We are pleased to announce that Mr. A. P. Walker received an official notification this morning of his appointment as senior officer on Chief McMullin's staff. Mr. Walker is now a provincial policeman. The appointment dates from March 1st.

PARLIAMENT OPENED.

The Dominion Parliament opened on Thursday. The speech from the throne contained references to the great influx of settlers to the North West and the need for increased tarnsportation facilities, to a redistribution bill, to Chinese immigration, to the creation of a railway commission and the settlement of railway disputes. The session promises to be a long and busy one.

TWO HOCKEY GAMES LAST NIGHT

Juniors Win a Brilliant Victory—Angels again Defeated.

Two interesting games of hockey were played on the rink last night. The first was between the Angels' Rest and the "Imps". This game was to decide the championship as each side had won one game before. The game was very even throughout and was won by the "Imps" by the close score of 3-2. The strong defence work of the latter was a noteworthy feature of the game. The game was a warm one and a trifle rough.

The second game was between the regular junior team and a combination of married men and seniors. The teams were :

Juniors		Married Men
Todhunter	goal	McKellar
Kirkpatrick	point	Liphardt
MacGuire	cover point	Ziegler
Lawrence	forwards	McIntyre
Elliott		Lafortune
Ross		Gendreau
Kanouse		Label

It will be seen from this that four members of the married men's team have played on the senior team this year.

The seniors started off alright and scored two goals in the first 10 minutes but the Juniors pulled themselves together after that and scored 3 straights, making it 3-2 at half time. During the second half four more goals were alternately scored making the final count 5-4 in favor of the Juniors. The game was rough but very interesting at times. The Juniors played good hockey and they naturally feel elated over their victory.

MY HEART'S DARLING

BY W. HEIMBURG.

"There are some very good practical patterns among them; a well-covered ground and dull colors. The furniture dealer was also here this noon, and said he should like to have his orders soon as he had some large orders for a factory to be filled before September. I told him that you only expected to have some very simple and practical things. He wanted particularly to tell you about a buffet that he had at the exhibition last year. How foolish! A buffet! It is a most unnecessary and useless thing. Everything gets so dusty on the top, and then gets broken in dusting!"

"But nowadays—" interrupted Aunt Dettchen.

"Dettchen, I beg of you!" said her sister-in-law; and Dettchen was silent. She had, in the course of the afternoon, heard so many sighs over the paltry three thousand thalers which was the only dowry Lucie had, and which must pay for everything, that she feared the little bride-elect might have her feelings hurt, so did not dare to say anything more.

"Well, we will think about that," he said, taking a couple of radishes; "will we not, Lucie? First of all, we must take the dimensions of the house. But I must ask you to excuse me. I have some papers to write. A pleasant repast, ladies!" He stood up; pushed his chair back to the table, and left the room. At the door he turned round. "Ah, Lucie, just a word!"

She followed him to his study and leaned against the old writing-desk which he had inherited from his father.

It was a bare, cheerless-looking room. A book-case stood on one side of the sofa, and an instrument-case on the other; before them a stiff round table covered with books. Between the windows was a looking-glass, the shelf under it having a water-pitcher and glasses; an elaborate yellow porcelain stove and an ancient arm-chair completed the furniture. A peculiar odor of carbolic acid or some such thing pervaded the room and made her feel physically very uncomfortable.

"Lucie—" he began.

"I know," she said, interrupting him. "I do not wish to travel."

"That is good. I could not have allowed it."

She drew herself up. "I do not wish to." She emphasized the "wish" sharply.

"That is very fortunate," he returned, quietly; but a slight color rose to his temples, "for, according to my ideas, you could not accept such an invitation."

"You think not—considering the terms Hortense and I are on?"

"No; not according to my view of it. But we need not argue about it, as we are agreed — is it not so?"

He took her hand and tried to look into her eyes, but she did not see his honest, kindly look, for she turned her face away.

"I do not feel well this evening," she whispered; "I have a headache. Good-night, Alfred."

"Good-night," said he. His voice sounded as if he were disappointed.

She went slowly upstairs to her own little room and bolted the door behind her. Then she threw herself on the bed and began to weep violently. It felt so lonely and comfortless in her young heart. He had not once thanked her for wishing to stay with him; he had merely said that he would never have given his permission. Was she then already irrevocably claimed? Ah, Hortense was right; he was selfish, he thought only of himself!

After awhile she became quieter, and kinder thoughts came into her mind. The little house, her place by the window, the happiness that would go with them over that threshold, the golden halo that had hitherto been thrown over her timid maidenly affection flared up again. She sat on the edge of the bed and rearranged in her mind his study; it must not remain so ugly and cheerless; her father's study, how bright and cheerful that had always been! Her own room should be next to it, and on both sides of the front door they would have climbing roses. She sprung up; she had all at once a strong desire to bid him a kindly good-night. She slipped out and touched lightly the latch of his door. A flood of lamp-light spread out toward her; he was sitting writing, but did not look up.

"Alfred!"

"Yes. Excuse me, child; will it not be time enough to-morrow morning?"

She closed the door till it latched and went back to her little room. She sat down by the open window and gazed out into the silent quiet of the garden. The only sound that the west wind brought her was the whistle of a locomotive and the distant sound of car-wheels as the express train flew on past the next little town out into the wide, wide world.

Ah, if one could travel out there with it! It was so different here from what she had expected—so bare, so dull, so unsatisfying.

If Hortense were to go!—a shiver went through her heart — she would run after her; yes, certainly she would run after her. She could not live any more without Hortense.

The Last Straw.

"Well, what do you want now?" queried old Growells as the insurance solicitor entered his office. "You have bullied me into insuring my life, my store and the title to my real estate. What is there left to insure?"

"I just dropped in," calmly replied the man with the adamantine cheek, "to see if you would like to insure your insurance policies."—Chicago News.

"WE TOO SHALL SLEEP."

A "Message" From One of Archibald Lampman's Poems.

A few short years,
We of the living flesh and restless brain
Shall plumb the deeps of life and know the strain,
The fleeting gleams of joy, the fruitless tears;
And then, at last, when all is touched and tried,
Our own immutable night shall fall, and deep
In the same silent plot, O little friend,
In peace that changeth not, nor knoweth not,
We too shall sleep.

—From Archibald Lampman's "We Too Shall Sleep."

Lampman's "Call to Arms."

So Lampman wrote to one who, only a little sooner, was laid in the same silent plot where the poet sleeps under the beech trees in Beechwood Cemetery at Ottawa. Tuesday, the 10th of February, was the anniversary of the poet's death. To those who love and revere the memory of Lampman, it was consoling to know that each anniversary of his death marks a milestone in the spreading of his message. For a "message" there is running through all his poems, says Pharos in The Globe. It is a veritable "call to arms," ringing clear as a silver trumpet note, to all Canadians, to watch, listen, imbibe the beauty and marvel of the world about them. Thousands of us are fated to remain within a small area of ground. Many of us know little of the great world, save from what we read in books, but Lampman would transform close environment to a world which admits of no horizon. He plumbs the depths, admits no limitations, says here is the "charm": "Within this ten-acre field you have the great world and all its problems solved and unsolved."

Nothing Common.

The meanest things in life to him revealed their power and secret purpose, all in harmony with divine ends. The truth of life, truth of nature, and the very core and heart of things were his, and with the generosity of the great poet—nature—he fain would give to each of us a particle of the charm he possessed, telling us:—

"If we could but lift our earthward eyes,
To see, and open our dull ears to hear,
Then should the wonder of this world draw near,
And life, innumerable harmonies,"

HER HUNREDTH BIRTHDAY.

Story of the Remarkable Life of a Dufferin County Lady.

The Orangville Sun tells the following story of one of the very few of Canada's citizens who have passed the century mark:

Historic old Mono has within her borders a woman who has passed the one hundredth milestone on the journey of life. This distinguished personage is Mrs. Alexander Laidlaw, who recently celebrated her one hundredth birthday. Her maiden name was Margaret Frame and she was born at Kilbride, Scotland, in 1803. She came to New York when 19 years of age and lived in that city for a few years. She was married while there to a young Scotchman by the name of Alexander Laidlaw. She and her husband then removed to Canada to seek their fortune. They settled on a farm which has been known ever since by the name of Craiglee, upon which the hamlet of Mono Centre stands. She lived on Craiglee farm, the original homestead, for 65 years, and had a family of seven sons and two daughters. Until a few months ago this aged lady could read the newspapers with ordinary glasses and would doubtless be very active only for an accident which occurred three years ago when she fell, breaking her hip. She is an interesting talker and good conversationalist. Mrs. Laidlaw belonged to a long-lived family. Her brother, Dr. Frame, died a few years ago, aged 96. On the great anniversary friends and relatives from far and near gathered at her home and an enjoyable and happy day was spent.

FOUND MONKEY'S SKELETON.

Discovery by Laborers at the Old Parliament House.

The laborers engaged in demolishing the old Provincial Parliament buildings in Toronto have found in an out-of-the-way corner in an attic the skeleton of a large South African monkey. How it came there and how it could have been overlooked so many years is a mystery. Mr. Chase lived in the buildings for many years, and thought he had explored every nook and corner before he left. Mr. John Notman, a former caretaker, kept a small museum, but he was not known to possess such an animal.

Some Parliamentary Facts.

Since Confederation there have been 37 openings of Parliament; 6 of these took place in January, 17 in February, 5 in March, 5 in April, and one each in August, October, November and December.

Leaving out these last four as exceptional ones, the latest date at which the Parliament has been called together was April 18, 1895, and the earliest Jan. 2, 1896. The average of the January sessions is 110 days, of the February 97, of the March 94, and of the April 83 days. The longest session since 1867 was that of 1885, when, from opening to prorogation there were 173 days. This length of session has never been exceeded in the history of Parliament in British North America, though in 1858 the Legislature sat for exactly the same number of days. The next longest session since Confederation was that of 1900, when 168 days were required.

Some Canadian Imports.

Furniture valued at $443,308 was brought into Canada during last year from the United States, all other countries making up a total of $480,306. Canada imported over $2,000,000 worth of hats and caps, made of beaver, silk, straw and felt, during 1902.

Desert Lizards.

There is no place like the desert for lizards. As a man rides through the white sands or over the black malapai mountains in Arizona or southeastern California and sees the flash and scurry of these brilliant and graceful creatures the suggestion of death and solitude is broken, and, beholding so much life, he is brought to wonder if the country is really a desert or only a land to which a man is not adapted, for here are animals which never drink, yet frisk about through thorns and cactus and fatten on the bitter plants. Many a desert prospector had lain down with his burros to die and seen on the rocks about him the black heads of the chuckwalla lizards outlined against the brazen sky. The chuckwallas were happy and corpulent with good eating. It was their country. For thousands of generations their ancestors had never thirsted for water, and plants which the starving burros passed by furnished both food and drink for the scaly natives on the rocks. Next to the slow moving and deadly Gila monster the chuckwalla is the largest lizard of the desert, being from a foot to a foot and a half in length.—Country Life In America.

How Snakes Fascinate.

The cobra of the Cape fascinates birds by coiling itself on a branch, erecting its head and swinging to and fro. Sundowner states that the snake will go on "fascinating" and keeping the bird twittering and unable to leave the tree in which it is "for hours" and that if the bird is driven away it comes back. This may be a "yarn," but from the curious fascination which nonterrifying objects, such as "lark glitters," have for some birds and their apparent inability to resist hovering around the lure the far greater mesmerizing power of the serpent may be conjectured. Movement, more or less regular, is always part of the means of fascination employed by snakes. Their fondness for music of any kind is not extended to the sound of the human voice singing, which snakes clearly do not appreciate at all. They only care for "instrumental music," which includes the concertina, tomtom and Jew's harp. But from experiments made in this country it was evident that they like the bagpipes best.

Brought Down From Heaven.

According to Mohammedan belief, the first copy of the Koran, or Alkoran, their sacred book, was brought down from the highest to the lowest heaven by Gabriel on the mysterious night of Al Khade in the month of Ramadan. This wonderful book, written in heaven and bound in satin, jewels and gold, was communicated to Mohammed at different times during a period of twenty-three years. This was done, according to Mohammedan belief, either by Gabriel in human shape or by God himself. When Gabriel acted as translator and communicator, he did so "with a great sound of music and bells." God appeared either "veiled or unveiled during Mohammed's waking hours or during dreams at night."

Virginia's Only Slave.

The state of Virginia once owned a slave, the only one probably the commonwealth ever did own. He was known as Ben the Bell Ringer of the University of Virginia. The university only had $200 left over when it was endowed, and it was proposed to buy a negro with this amount and keep him as a bell ringer. They bought Ben, and in his time he became a great character at the university. He knew everybody and was very useful to everybody. Ben used to get very drunk on the liberal and constant fees he received from students. He died in the Albemarle poorhouse at an advanced age.

A Lark's Lofty Flight.

Some Bavarian officers experimenting with a balloon 6,000 feet aloft noticed a little black speck that seemed to accompany them and which, they thought, was one of the cards they carried for throwing out reports and that the dropping of the balloon drew it along, but on looking at the barometer they found that the balloon was rising and not dropping. Suddenly, however, a loud chirping showed that it was a lark which, flying at this extraordinary height, had been frightened by the balloon.

The Highest Waterfall.

There is in Mexico a wonderful waterfall, which probably enjoys the distinction of being the highest waterfall in the world. The fall is known by the Indian name of Basaseachic and is located about 190 miles west of the city of Chihuahua, near the summit of the Sierra Madre mountains. The elevation of the mountain is 6,500 feet above sea level. The cascade falls 978 feet.

A Mighty Serious Thing.

"You printed my death notice, and that's no joke."

"But, my dear sir, that's not my fault. It's the fact that you are alive that makes it no joke."

There was a subtleness to this that made it most annoyingly puzzling.

How They Do It.

Gossipy Man—The Joneses keep up a very imposing establishment.

Grocer—They do that, indeed, and my store's the one that's mostly been imposed on.—New York Times.

Quashed.

"William," asked the regular patron, "is this real pumpkin pie?"

"It's de punkest we got, sah," stiffly replied the austere waiter.

Riches Versus Luck.

Wig—Would you rather be born lucky or rich?

Wag—I'd rather be born rich. Then you don't have to be lucky.—Exchange.

Riches That Brought Worry

"One day three or four years ago," said a Pittsburg lawyer, "I received instructions to notify an old shoemaker living in the suburbs and pegging away for a bare living that he had become heir to $75,000 by the death of a relative in Ohio. I jumped on a car and rode out to his place, and I wondered whether he would fall off his bench or swing his hammer and cheer when I broke the good news to him. He did neither. He just sat and stared at me, and gradually a look of trouble came into his face.

"'What is it, Uncle Jerry?' I asked. 'You don't seem to be a bit pleased over the great news.'

"'Y-e-s, I am pleased, of course,' he answered, 'but'—

"'But what is it?'

"'Why, I was just thinking that I'd probably have to have oysters at every meal if I wanted to be an aristocrat, and I'd give more for one piece of corned beef than for a whole wagon load of oysters.'"

Equal Honors.

Fannie—My big sister is coming out this evening.

Katie—Dat's not'ing. Me big brudder is comin' out tonight, too. He was up fer six months.—New York Times.

Divine Shooting.

We doubt if any repartee ever surpassed in delicacy the reply made by an East Indian servant of Lord Dufferin when he was viceroy of India. "Well, what sort of sport has Lord Blank had?" said Dufferin one day to his "shikarry" or sporting servant, who had attended a young English lord on a shooting excursion.

"Oh," replied the scrupulously polite Hindoo, "the young sahib shot divinely, but God was very merciful to the birds."—Forest and Stream.

Exonerated.

When the urgent call was received at the doctor's office, he was out attending another patient and consequently did not reach the house until two hours afterward. As he entered he met the undertaker coming out. "Ah!" he exclaimed, with a look of deep chagrin, "this is bad. I am, then, too late."

"Don't blame yourself," said the undertaker composedly. "It is not your fault. You were not here."—New York Herald.

Annoyed.

"Everybody has his little peculiarities," said the broad minded man. "I don't doubt that you have your own way of looking at some things."

"My dear sir," answered Mr. Meekton, "I wish you wouldn't talk about my having my own way in that offhand manner. Henrietta might hear you."—Washington Times.

A Reasonable Explanation.

"She has some queer freaks about her."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, last night she ordered me to take my arm from her waist."

"I should think that an indication that she didn't want a queer freak about her."—Chicago Post.

Needed His Help.

Hostess—Won't you please sing something, Mr. Screecher?

Screecher—But there are so many people here I really—

Hostess—That's just it. I want to get rid of some of them.—Chicago News.

Thought He Knew.

"A learned Boston professor has carefully explained what it is that causes an intoxicated man to see double."

"Well, well! I always supposed it was drink that did it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Hard Job.

Doctor—Your digestion is utterly ruined. What have you been doing?

Patient—I'm the man they try new dishes on at the cooking school.—San Francisco Examiner.

As a result of the introduction of the Bertillion system by the Zurich police the town has practically cleared out all its bad characters. Even tramps give the town a wide berth, for as soon as a person is arrested he is photographed and his measurements taken, even if the charge is not serious. Of late the police have had so little to do that there is talk of reducing the number of the force. So few crimes are committed in the town that Zurich is considered to be the most moral town in Switzerland.

A writer in London Nature describes a white marble slab, two inches thick and 35x70 inches, which is supported on stone posts and sags in the middle three inches out of level. It furnishes evidence that marble is in reality a fluid of enormous viscosity. This has some bearing on the question of the frigidity of the rocks composing the crust of the earth and the gradual adjustment of the earth's contour under gravity. The slab was placed in its present position in 1853.

MANY CHILDREN OUT OF SCHOOL

With Coughs and Colds, and Parents Everywhere are Proving the Wonderful Curative Powers of

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine

When grown people neglect their ailments and allow them to develop into serious diseases, they have no one to blame but themselves.

With children it is different, because they do not realize the seriousness of a neglected cold nor the means of obtaining a cure, and many a child, as he grows older and finds himself a victim of pneumonia, consumption, bronchitis, asthma or throat trouble, cannot but see that his parents were responsible for neglecting treatment when his ailment began in the form of a cold.

Today the schools have many a vacant seat on account of coughs and colds, and many children who are there should be at home. What treatment are these children getting? Do their parents realize the seriousness of neglecting to cure a cold? Have they proved the merits of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as a cure for coughs and colds, bronchitis, croup, whooping cough, and all kindred ills?

Very many have, for there is no preparation for throat and lung diseases that has anything like the sale of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

Be careful when you buy to see that the portrait and signature of Dr. Chase is on the wrapper. If you send the children to the store, warn them not to accept any imitation or substitution. Children like to take Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and there is no remedy so prompt and effective. 25 cents a bottle; family size, three times as much, 60 cents; at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto

Free—Gratis—For Nothing

YOU CANNOT LONG FOOL A WOMAN.

When the white man wants the black man's land he approaches the innocent black with "presents" of beads, colored cloths, ribbons, and other useless trinkets that catch the eye of the poor black—but that are no earthly use to him. These are all "gifts—free—gratis—for nothing!!!" We all know who soon owns the black man's land.

Yet this system of conciliating the innocent is not practiced alone on the negro. How many women read that they can get a certain "present" with a certain purchase and forthwith they make the purchase to get the "present"—free—gratis—for nothing!!! The present may or may not be useful—but in this twentieth century are there those who believe they have not in the purchase paid for and often dearly paid for the "present"?

When you want a horse you cannot buy his teeth at ten cents a tooth, and get the horse thrown into the bargain.

When you buy a dress you do not buy the buttons, and have the dress thrown in.

And no more than you can thus get the present of a horse or a dress can you get a "present"—free—gratis—for nothing—of diamonds, gold, jewellery, and cutlery, with the purchase of a bar of common soap.

When you buy Sunlight Soap you are presented with pure quality in the soap itself. You do not pay for loading refuse at the price of soap. You don't wear out your clothes in half the time, and ruin your hands with Sunlight Soap, as with common soap.

If you want soap, buy Sunlight Soap—Octagon Bar—and you have paid for nothing but pure soap. If you want something else than soap, buy it independently of the soap, and you know what it has cost you.

"You may fool some people all the time;
You may fool all the people some of the time;
You cannot fool all the people all the time;"
You cannot long fool a woman. 615

SHE SAVED HIS LIFE.

Also Won Gratitude of the Community by Her Bow.

It was a train on an Alabama railroad, and as it stopped at a small station a man entered one of the coaches, presented a fine bouquet to a woman and said:

"Madam, you see that man leaning against the door over there?"

"Yes, sir."

"If you will lean out of the window and bow to him, you will win my eternal gratitude."

Somewhat confused and surprised, she obeyed the request. The man at the door straightened up as if shot, pulled off his hat with both hands and bowed almost to the ground in reply.

"Madam, accept not only my thanks," said the man on the car, "but of this whole section of Alabama. That man is Colonel Goodsell, and this is the first time he has had his hands out of his pockets for over seven months. Thanks—thanks! You have saved his life!" M. QUAD.

The war office has issued an order abolishing the use of the lance in the British army. The lancers and dragoons will retain their lances, but they will only be used at reviews and ceremonial occasions. All cavalry in the future will be armed with carbines and swords, but the carbine will be the principal weapon.

The inhabitants of the Arran Isles are in a state of semi-starvation in consequence of the prolonged storms on the west coast of Ireland. The wants of the population are ordinarily supplied by steamer three times weekly, but communication with the islands has been completely cut off since February 21, and all attempts to provision the islanders have had to be abaodoned.

Following the old-time custom, the little town of Pluvignier was given over to festivities to celebrate the annual crop of marriages which always takes place during Lent. Some forty couples were united at the altar, and as practically every inhabitant is a relation or friend of one of the contracting parties, no special invitations were issued, but the whole community celebrated the occasion together.

A dispatch from Berlin says:—During the five years, 1869-73, the percentage of suicides among children between the ages of 10 and 15 was just over 31. From 1884 to 1888 the percentage was over 44, while from 1894-98 it had increased to 52. This increase of suicide among children is attracting serious attention. The motive in most cases appears to be the dread of punishment, and many cases which have been investigated show that suicide was resorted to when a child expected to be punished for some trifling misdeed.

The British army estimates for 1903-4 show, despite the disappearance of war demands, an increase of £104,000 over the normal expenditure. This gradual growth has apparently become chronic. The total estimates amount to £34,500,000. A report on recruiting, which is issued simultaneously with the estimates, remarks upon the anxiety regarding future enlistments, owing to the gradual deterioration in physique among the working classes, from whom the bulk of the recruits are drawn.

Many horses in St. Paul, veterinarians say, are afflicted with a complication of influenza and pleurisy. Influenza is said to be common among horses in the spring, but this year it is accompanied by attacks of pleurisy and is more severe than usual.

A New York dispatch says: The Anchor line steamer Karamania, from Marseilles, Palermo and Naples was detained at quarantine because a number of the crew and passengers died under peculiar circumstances on the voyage. Six died in all, two of the crew and four passengers. All were taken with the same symptoms, cramps, nausea and collapse. It is thought they were poisoned by some noxious gases emanating from the cargo.

The first death occurred on February 8. Doctors at the Palermo hospital said the men, who were taken ashore as soon as they became ill, were suffering from poisoning. All the dead passengers had occupied adjoining bunks in the steerage. They were buried at sea.

A Peterboro Mystery.

A dispatch from Peterboro, Ont., of March 9 says: John Wood, aged 35, was found dead by some school children on the road at Harrison's Corners. He was lying face downward with his hat and coat off and had from all appearances been dead for some time. There were no marks of violence on the body. The village constable of Wellwood was at once notified.

The unfortunate man was in Peterboro Saturday, and there was found in his pocket a G. T. R. ticket to Birdsall, the nearest station to his home. The police are investigating.

BRITAIN'S FOOD SUPPLY.

Its Security in Time of War to be Enquired Into by a Commission.

Replying to a large and influential deputation which visited the foreign office, London, Eng., March 5th, to urge the appointment of a Royal commission to inquire into the question of the security of the food supply of Great Britain in time of war, Premier Balfour expressed the opinion that the danger Great Britain had to meet was not the exclusion of meats and the raw materials to meet the country's national existence, but the cost of introducing them and the question of price was ultimately a question of insurance. He admitted that an inquiry into the matter was advisable, because it would tend to allay some unfounded fears as well as show that some of the difficulties of the situation could not be wholly removed. Mr. Balfour added that he thought the inquiry ought to include the question of insurance, the conditions of modern maritime warfare, the methods by which commerce could be protected and destroyed and the amount of actual grain supply in the country. He hoped, however, that nothing would be done to establish a government machinery which would injure the national commercial machinery by which Great Britain was supplied.

Rockslide at Revelstoke.

A Revelstoke, B.C., dispatch says: Thousands of tons of rock slipped from the tall bluff known as "Whiskey Point" on Friday night and plunged into the lake causing a tidal wave, the effects of which were felt from Comaplix to Arrowhead. The steamer Kootenay, which was tied to the wharf, had a narrow escape. The wave drove the steamer on to the wharf. The captain saved the boat from serious injury by cutting loose and making for open water. The steamer Revelstoke was thrown up on a sandbar, but has settled back by the receding water. The shores of the lake are piled with ice cakes thrown up by the big wave. If the rock had come down while the steamer Archer was making a trip, it is believed that she would have been swamped. The descent of the rock made a terrific noise on its way mile course from the top of the mountain down to the lake below.

Carous d Around a Corpse.

A Fort William dispatch of March 7th says: At the police court the C.N.R. had a trapper named Bradley up before Magistrate McDougall for breaking doors and windows in the pump-house at Mattawin. From the evidence of witnesses it appears that the section boss and his two men had procured a jug of whiskey and all three became drunk on Monday night. From the evidence it was shown that O'Connell, the section man who was killed by a passenger train on Monday night, was one of the three men. The other two men kept watch all night by the body, which lay by the track, and to keep up their spirits they kept drinking whiskey. On Tuesday they were joined by Bradley, who also took a hand in the spree, and during it he got very boisterous and was supposed to have broken the windows and doors. Bradley was pitched out of the station by Mrs. Deharnais, wife of the tankman, and afterwards Deharnais gave Bradley a bad thumping. The magistrate sentenced Bradley to three months for damaging the pump house and one month for disorderly conduct.

Railway Blockades Elsewhere.

The Baltimore "Coal and Coke," a trade journal, in its last issue says: "The coal operators of the Pittsburg district assert that conditions as to car supply are worse now than ever before, and while the shortage has been pronounced for months past, it has now reached a very serious stage, curtailing operations over 60 per cent. Outside of the river mines and those along the Pittsburg & Lake Erie and the Monongahela division of the Pennsylvania railroad, fully 70 per cent. are idle. Of the 28 mines of the Pittsburg Coal Company on the Pittsburg, C. C. & St. Louis Ry., (Pan Handle) 16 are closed down, and the others have only a fair supply of cars. Six of the largest mines on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad out of 15 owned by the Pittsburg Coal Company are idle." The blockade is Canada is a small affair compared with that of our neighbors in the United States.

The advantage or disadvantage of woman suffrage will have a thorough test in the new Commonwealth of Australia. Every woman will have the same right to vote that every man has in the Federal election there next year. In New Zealand women have voted for several years, but under the confederation of all the provinces into the Commonwealth, the women will all vote. They number 854,000, and the men 973,000, so the men will have the advantage. But in some of the provinces and in some of the cities the women are in the majority—a rather unusual thing for a new country. The Philadelphia Press says: "A good many young women, it is thought, will not vote because unwilling to admit that they are 21 years old, while a considerable number of older women have opposed woman suffrage. There is not much expectation of opposing views on the part of the two sexes, but a great many women in Australia work for a living, and there may be some danger of them differing with their brethren on the question of free trade or protection, it being assumed that the women will vote for free trade."

PUT UP THE BARS

ALLAN LINE WILL NOT HANDLE CONTINENTALS.

Five Thousand Immigrants Are Awaiting to Embark at Rotterdam, and Hundreds also at Libau, Russia—Poorh use Orphans for Canada.

A London cable says: The Allan steamship line has notified continental bookers to decline to accept further booking of continental emigrants for Canada.

As a result there is an outcry among their agents upon the continent, as 5,000 emigrants are at Rotterdam and hundreds at Libau, Russia, waiting to embark for Canada, but cannot. Continental emigration to the Dominion is now at a standstill.

AN OFFICIAL TALKS.

Montreal—"Emigration to Canada is going to be the biggest in years this season," said G. Hannah, passenger manager of the Allan line office here, "and while we have not heard that the line is refusing continental emigrants for Canada, it is entirely likely.

"It means that we can now choose our passengers and still fill our ships, and we shall take those passengers that we prefer. We have been refusing continental passengers to the United States for some few months, indeed, I think we have done so in previous years at the busy season. They are the least desirable class and we can do without them.

"Of course, these restrictions don't apply in slack seasons. Continental emigrants do not include those from Scandinavia and Finland, who have always travelled by British lines and been classed with British emigrants. Excluding these, our continental bookings to Canada would not be much over five per cent. of the total. There is no reason to fear that they will not be able to get to Canada on other lines, and a good proportion of them come with a view of going over the border, anyhow, which is one reason why we do not want them."

Apparently the Allan line this summer will be able to keep its steerage bookings lull with British and Scandinavian emigrants. The Hamburg-American and other lines will attend to the other.

POORHOUSE ORPHANS.

A London cable says: "The local government board has issued a circular to boards of guardians recommending the emigration to Canada of poorhouse orphans. It considers that Canada never presented such opportunities for emigrants as now.

ABOLISH BAR ROOMS.

Toronto Globe Advocates Their Discontinuance in Ontario.

The probable future temperance legislation of the Ross government is foreshadowed in the following editorial in the Globe of March 4 under the title 'What Ought to be Done."

"Bar rooms ought to be abolished throughout Ontario, and all sale of intoxicating liquors for scientific, mechanical, domestic and other uses, ought to be through a limited number of shops conducted either under special license or under government control.

"We have no hesitation in saying legislation securing such ends would best serve the highest interests of the industrial, social and moral life of the province. Bar rooms as an institution are discredited, and their continuance is a standing menace to the economic, social and spiritual well being of every community that supports them.

"The bar room serves no good purpose, and the growing distrust with which it is regarded only confirms it in its down-grade tendency. Its evils are inherent. It ought to be abolished.

"The sale of liquor for specifid purposes ought to be under a stringent and well enforced license regulations or under government control."

New Device for Lighting Cars.

Advices from New York state that representatives from many railroads have witnessed a successful demonstration of a device for lighting cars with electricity. The invention was tested on a run over the New York Central to Croton and return, and the system will shortly be adopted. The light is generated by a dynamo by a belt connected with the axle of the car. When the train stops the lights are supplied from storage batteries in the car. A speed of only 12 miles an hour is needed to generate sufficient electricity to light the lamps. The surplus obtained at a higher rate of speed is used to recharge the batteries. The car used in the test was equipped with 23 lamps of 16 candle power each. During the trip 46 stops were made, and no appreciable difference was noticed in the brilliancy.

Likes Pulling Teeth.

Duluth has a man who has a weakness for pulling people's teeth against their will. Last Wednesday, John Simonson, armed with a pair of foreceps, walked up to an old man in a saloon, asked him how his teeth were, was told that they were all right, and then knocked the old man down and pulled two of his teeth. He also visited the home of Mrs. Eliason, on the avenue, and pulled one of her teeth before he was driven off. He operated on eight or ten men in different saloons during the day. He claimed to be a dentist, but when asked for his license pulled out a contract for cutting cordwood

WESTERN FATALITIES.

Run Over By Cars at Eli—Struck by a Fallen Tree.

Portage la Prairie— Word reached town giving particulars of a fatal accident which occurred March 2nd at Eli on the Canadian Portage-Winnipeg branch. The victim, Alfred Carrier, a young man of about years of age, was loading sand on the cars near the station. He was standing on his waggon in close proximity to the car when the locomotive shunted without warning. Carrier's clothing caught on the brake beam and he was pulled beneath the moving cars. Both his legs were taken off, one at the knee and the other at the thigh. He was otherwise badly bruised up and died almost instantly, although medical attendance was summoned at once. The young man an employee of the Stephens Brickmaking company, in Portage, and was loading sand for the yards here when he met his death.

Moose Jaw—Wesley Griffith, a young fellow about 17 years of age, employed in the C.P.R. yards here, was killed March 1st in a peculiar manner. He was standing on a tender, tugging at the chains of a coal chute when five tons of coal came on him before he had time to escape. He was found twenty minutes after crushed to death. He had been working in the yards only a few days.

Dauphin—Robert Stewart, employed in Neil Keith's camp at Erwood, met instant death a fews ago in the woods. At the time the accident happened he was felling a tree which lodged in falling in the top of an adjoining tree, the top of which broke off and hit the unfortunate man on the top of the head, immediate death resulting. Deceased was a man about 35 years of age, and came from Durham, Ont.

The building, according to the plans, is to be five stories high, 80x100 feet on the ground and built of brick.

A dispatch from Ottawa dated 2nd March says: At a metting of the cabinet today Mr. Fred T. Congdon, crown prosecutor in the Yukon, was appointed commissioner of the Yukon to succeed Hon. J. H. Ross, who was elected to represent the Yukon in the Dominion Parliament. Mr. Congdon went to the Yukon as legal adviser of the Yukon council, and afterwards resigned to practice on his own account, becoming at the same time crown prosecutor. Mr. Congdon leaves in a day or two for the Yukon. He will be sworn in governor at once.

An action involving seventy-five million francs has been decided by the civil tribunal at Grenoble. It was brought by M. Garnier, a druggist of Paris, who is the nephew and heir of Father Garnier, the inventor of the famous liquer chartreuse, who sued the Carthusian Friars for one-sixth of the profits derived from selling the liquers for a period of 30 years. The court ruled that Father Garnier during his lifetime ceded all the rights of manufacture to Father Grenzier, who in turn ceded the right to Abbe Rey. The plaintiff was nonsuited, with costs.

A dispatch from London, Eng., dated March 4 says: There was an interesting discussion in the House of Commons yesterday on the colonial office vote. Edmund Robertson wanted more information about the colonial conference, and asked whether any prokosal was made at the conference as to the amount the colonies should be asked to contribute towards the cost of the Imperial army, or navy, or to the general plan for the defence of the Empire. Austen Chamberlain, replying for his father, said the proportion of naval and military expenses, which Great Britain and the colonies now shared, might not always be maintained, but that any increased share from the colonies would have to come spontaneously, and not from any attempt on the part of the Imperial government to impose a greater contribution on them

POWERS ALARMED OVER BALKAN TROUBLE.

Winston Churchill Leading an Independent Wing of the Conservatives Successfully in the House of Commons—Canada and the Empire.

A dispatch from London says: The foreign offices of the continent succeeded in concealing their uneasiness and serious apprehensions of war in the Balkans and official circles here maintain a studied air of incredulity respecting the Macedonian crisis. The powers are asserted to be united and the Sultan is alleged to be co-operating with them in good faith. Sofia is the main centre of interest and the adoption of stringent repressive measures on the frontier by the Bulgarian government is expected.

The fourth party resumed operations in the House of Commons March 4 on the grant to new colonies and succeeded in cutting down the goverbment majority to forty-three on supply. Austen Chamberlain is at a disadvantage in repelling the assaults of the Tory guerillas. An older parliamentary hand, Joseph Chamberlain, who is now at sea, is needed in the Commons when South African questions are discussed. Winston Churchil is gradually taking the lead of a small group of independents, and reviving memories of his father's stand for retrenchment.

A London cable says: A letter Rhich Lord Strathcona has written would indicate the rejection of the various schemes submitted to the British and Canadian governments for assisted passages for hundreds of thousands of British families suitable to settle in Canada. It says the matter has been under consideration for many years and that no scheme has commended itself to either these governments or capitalists. Lord Strathcona argues that some organized plan for emigration would be of great mutual advantage for British manufacture, solving the problem of British food supplies.

At the Canada club dinner March 4th Admiral Freemantle urged Canadians to remember that they had a considerable stake with the empire which rested on their naval strength, towards which Canada gave nothing though it was agreed Canadians could not be expected to contibute till given a voice in the management of the empire. Colonel Kitsoo, late commandant at Kingston, said Canadians were not lacking in bravery, but were wanting in organization. For the last two years he had been military attache at Washington where he had plenty of opportunity regarding the frontier problem from a United States point of view. Fortunately the possibility of trouble was farther off than ever, but he was assured that the Canadians would enter the campaign under great stragetical difficulties. They would be very lucky in Upper Canada if they had any ammunition at all as the main lines of communication would be all along the frontier and open to attack. The only arsenal was at Quebec, the extreme end of the line. Without better organization and without another arsenal in the interior Canada would never be safe.

A STRANGE CAREER.

Grand Daughter of a Scotch Nobleman Found Penniless.

A dispatch from Denver, Col., says:—Mrs. Georgia Stanley, who was on Wednesday last found unconscious in the house where lay the dead body of Major Marshall F. Hurd, proves to be a granddaughter of Lord Kercastle of Inverness, Scotland. Her mother was Lady Allen, and her father governor of an English province in India. Lady Allen, by a second marriage, became the mother of Sir James Grant, of Ottawa, Ont., an eminent physician.

Her first husband and their four children died from black diphtheria in Quebec. Several years later she married a resident of Washington, D.C., who was in the government service. A year or so later he killed himself in a hotel at Syracuse, N.Y. She subsequently married Herbert Stanley, a government clerk, and came to Denver.

About a year ago Stanley died from paralysis and left his widow practically penniless and helpless on account of ill-health.

Major Hurd, an inmate of the Old Soldier's home at Montevista, Col., came to Denver and undertook to care for Mrs. Stanley, whose late husband was his friend. His small pension was scarcely sufficient, and assistance was rendered by charitable persons.

On March 4 one of the latter visited the house and found Hurd dead from fumes of coal gas, which had escaped into the room through accident. Mrs Stanley was unconscious.

The members of the outside civil service at Ottawa, are arranging to present their claims to the government for an increase in their salaries. They will take the same ground as the inside man, namely that the advanced prices of living and the difference in the salaries o those employed in industrial, commercial and professional positions justifies an increase in the government rates of pay.

The record of immigration into the Canadian west during the month of February has been compiled by the department. The figures for this year are 2,860. The returns for the same month of 1902 give 1,675. The influx from the United States represent 1,420, or about half the month's arrivals.

GOOD NEWS.

Newspapers Can be Sent to the Old Country at Ca adian Rates.

Sir William Mulock has effected another post office reform in connection connection with postage on newspapers and periodicals from Canada to Great Britain and Ireland.

Since 1847 he has been endeavoring to induce the imperial government to consent to the reductian of the rate of postage on newspapers and periodicals passing between the two countries to the domestic rate. The imperial government has, however, continuously refused to reduce their outgoing rate to Canada. They advanced various reasons, one being the financial loss to the revenue, another that they did not feel at liberty to make an exception in favor of Canada alone of all outlying British possessions. Sir William has, however, kept the subject actively before the British post office department, stating that Canada was prepared to make the reduction on her outgoing mail matter if the imperial government would consent.

It appears that, under the terms of the universal postal convention, the consent of any two countries concerned is necessary. On March 4 Sir William received a communication from the postmaster-general of England giving his consent. Accordingly on and after Saturday the 7th inst., the rate on Canadian newspapers and periodicals posted in Canada for transmission to Great Britain will be the same as if posted for delivery in Canada. Doubtless this will lead to a considerable circulation of Canadian newspapers and periodicals throughout the United Kingdom.

The benefits which will accrue to the public through this latest reform will be be considerable. Besides reducing the rate of postage on newspapers to one-half it enables publishers to reach the British public at greatly reduced cost, and subscribers and friends of those living in the old country may secure a year's delivery of weekly papers at just half the present cost. In the western part of Canada it will be received with particular good pleasure. Many hundreds of papers are sent from the west to Britain each month with a view to showing the friends at home the present and future greatness of the west; the reduced cost will enable such good immigration literature to have a wider and more powerful scope.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Telegrams and Cablegrams Condensed for Busy Readers.

The Pope's condition continues to cause alarm.

Josepa Henry Shorthouse, an English author, died on March 5.

Sir Thomas Lipton is greatly pleased with the Shamrock III.

Senator Beique will be the new lieutenant-governor of Quebec.

A street railway for Portage la Prairie is among the probabilities.

Brandon senior hockey team defeated the Shamrocks of Winnipeg by a score of 5-4 on March 5.

Mr. Charles R. Devlin has resigned as Canadian immigration agent in Ireland.

The Manitoba Orange Grand lodge has elected new officers. It was decided to hold a big demonstration in Winnipeg in July.

Mr. Robert Simpson of Manitoba college will be the first Presbyterian missionary to work in the Peace River country.

The Thistle hockey club of Rat Portage will leave for the east on March 7. Stanley cup matches will be played on the following Thursday and Saturday.

The curriculum was considered at a meeting of the Manitoba university on March 5. The question of the Icelandic language as an optional subject provoked some discussion.

A cable from London of March 5 says: Over 2,000 immigrants left Liverpool today for Canada. The immigration season is considered as having opened. This month's bookings by all the Canadian steamship lines are the largest for 40 years.

RURAL SCHOOLS.

Prof. Robertson Delivers an Address to Nova Scotia Legislature.

Prof. Robertson, Dominion commissioner of agriculture, delivered a brilliant address on March 5 before the members of the Nova Scotia legislature and a large deputation of farmers and fruit growers on the subject of an agricultural college. It has been talked of in Nova Scotia, but recently the better opinion has been that the establishment of a well equipped agricultural college would be too expensive for the province. Prof. Robertson was invited to state his views and the plan he proposed met with general approval and will likely be adopted by the government. It is in brief the expansion of the consolidated rural school system, and the establishment of a college devoted to short courses. The latter will probably be established in connection with the provincial agricultural school and farm at Truro.

Polar Expidition.

A dispatch from New Bedford, Mass., says: Captain Edwin Coffin, who is to command the North Pole expedition and to take up the work where Evelyn Baldwin left off when he was recalled by Mr. Zeigler last fall, has just arrived here from a hunt for his crew for the steamer America, which will be fitted out at Tromsoe, Norway. The sailors will practically all be old and experienced whalemen, who know the features of ice travelling as well as they do the slush of the water front.

Captain Coffin and his party will go from here to New York, being joined on the way by the men from Boston. They will sail on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse next Tuesday. From Hamburg they will take steamer for Bergen, Norway, and then travel by rail to Tromsoe, where the America awaits them. They should reach the steamer between March 25 and 30. Some time in June the America will be ready to sail. Her chief engineer and his assistants, who have been with her before are already

THE MINT.

Royal Mint at Ottawa Is to Be Erected on Nepean Point—Description of the Building.

The Royal Mint at Ottawa is to be erected at Nepean Point, to the northwest of the Government Printing Bureau, and fronting Major's Hill Park. It is to face south and have its principal entrance on St. Patrick street. The building will be plain and substantial, quadrangular in shape, the walls of native limestone, and fireproof construction throughout. The south front will consist of two stories and a basement, and will be 40 feet deep, exclusive of projections, but 60 feet over all. On the ground floor will be located the mint office, chief clerk's office, assayer and assistant assayers' offices, entrance hall, bronze store, a stronghold and a furnace room. On the first floor there will be a laboratory, a suite of offices for the deputy master and staff, and a four-room suite of living apartments. The basement will contain the heating furnaces and fuel and stores. To the rear of the south front there will be a courtyard enclosed on all sides except at the southeast corner, where entrance will be obtained. The extreme dimensions of this courtyard will be 70 feet by 90 feet. On the north side of the courtyard will be a rolling and cutting room, 100 feet by 60 feet, excluding a space 22 feet by 23 feet, which is to be used as a stronghold. It will be enclosed on the north, east and west, by other portions of the building, light being derived from clerestory windows and large skylights. On the eastern side of the building, to the north of the two-story wing, will be established the following:—Melting house office, stronghold melting room, grinding room, kitchen, gas plant room and disc room. On the west side, abutting on the two-storey wing, will be successively a weighing room, a press room, a washing and pickling room, and a storeroom. Excepting on the southern front, and on the north side—where there is to be a basement for use as a boiler house and fuel store—the mint will be a one-storey building.

COLOR OF WATER.

Its Varying Shades Are Due to Two Distinct Causes.

Recent investigations of natural color in water show that it is due to two distinct causes—vegetable stain and suspended matter. When the latter is present in a preciable quantity, it causes turbidity and is not a real pigment. The true color of vegetable stain is greenish yellow to reddish brown and is due to decayed plant growth; the suspended matter is generally mineral and often contains iron. The color acquired by water at the bottom of a deep pond is largely due to this cause.

Experts have adopted a method of stating the depth of color in water by comparison with a mixture of platinum and cobalt, the color produced by one part of platinum to 1,000,000 parts of water being taken as the unit.

Thus it has been shown, says a writer in Success, that the color of surface water depends both on the character of the neighboring vegetation and on the time that the water remains in contact with it. Water near steep rocks, where there are few trees, will generally be below twenty units in color; steep wooded or cultivated slopes give twenty to fifty units; similar but gentler slopes from five to 100, and swamp areas 100 to 500, or even higher. Highly colored waters are more common in the northern states than in the south. Colored water is gradually bleached by sunlight, the action taking place chiefly within one foot of the surface.

The study of color in water is of commercial importance because most people object to drinking brownish water; hence in a town water supply the color must either be removed or its formation must be prevented. The latter is often the most economical thing to do and it may be accomplished by intercepting the water from the uplands and leading it into the streams without letting it pass through the swamps.

A Gorged Java Snake.

An Englishman, residing on the island of Java, reports that a large pitile was shot in a rice field back of his bungalow which had swallowed a good-sized pig. The snake measured nearly eight feet, but even considering his size the big meal must have caused him considerable inconvenience, for when discovered he was unable to make his escape and fell an easy victim to the skin-hunting natives. Snakes in Java are not killed because they are a menace to human life, as they never attack men, but simply because of the commercial value of their skins.

Woman to Build Boulevard.

THE C. P. R. STRIKE.

The members of the W. B. R. E. at Nelson, Calgary and Winnipeg are out on strike in sympathy with the Union at Vancouver who went out last week The members of this union are composed of the freight handlers, office employees, etc. The demands made by this union upon the Company at Vancouver, and the latter's refusal to meet them started the trouble and it has spread to other points. Attempts have been made to settle the matter by arbitration. The Vancouver Board of Trade has been suggested by the strikers and other railroad brotherhoods by the company while Premier Prior has offered his services as a meditator but as the situation now appears both sides are determined to fight it out. The company are bringing in men to fill the vacancies and the men are attempting to prevent this under the protection of the Alien Labor law.

POLICE COURT.

Ed. Dargenais accused Geo. Shea in the police court on Thursday morning of stealing $15. and a gold watch from his person while he was sleeping in the Waldorf Hotel on the night of March 9th. The evidence of the prosecution was purely circumstantial and the accused was found "not guilty."

Constable Drummond was up to moyie this week on a burgulary case which occurred in that town.

Judge Forin will hold county court in Fernie on 17th. Demsey who was taken to Nelson charged by Russell Evans with stealing a watch will be brought back here for trial. There may be other cases brought up.

A vagrant, O'Connor by name, got one month for begging.

E. H. Stubbs was given 2 weeks on a charge of vagrancy.

J. Matlock was fined $1 and costs on the charge of being drunk and disorderly.

Russel Evans was arrested on information laid that he was preparing to jump his bail. He was released upon fresh bail being furnished.

The Weather

During the past week Fernie has been experiencing some of the severest weather of the winter. Last Friday it started in to snow and from then to the following Thursday morning a steady storm of wind snow and rain made things generally uncomfortable. The climax was reached on Wednesday evening when it turned colder and a piercing blizzard swept through the mountains. On Thursday morning the weather cleared and since then zero atmosphere has been the order. We are now well on in the fifth month of solid winter weather and as yet the only sign of approaching spring is the heightening circle described by the sun. Travellers and newspapers report an entirely different kind of weather at Vancouver and towns to the south. Grass is two inches high, streets are artifically sprinkled and people are wearing straw hats. On the prairie a couple of hundred miles to the east of us the farmers were plowing last week.

BRIGHT TIMES AHEAD.

Lead £13 8s 9d.

That price means prosperity in South East Kootenay. That means active resumption of work at the St. Eugene and Sullivan and extended operations at the North Star. That means active development work on every lead property in the district that has any kind of a showing. That means the employment of several nundred men in this district at good wages. It means prosperity for Moyie, for Marysville, for Kimberley, for Cranbrook, for every part of the district that can be effected directly or indirectly by this increased activity. It has been a long wait, and many have suffered by the depression, but the change is now in sight. The opening of spring will undoubtedly see the opening of the big lead mines of the district, for there is every reason to believe that the high price will remain permanent for some time to came, which will make the securing of contracts an easy matter.—Cranbrook Herald.

FOSTER DEFEATED.

Toronto, March 10.—The bye-election for the House of Commons for North Ontario, the seat rendered vacant by the death of Angus Macleod, resulted in the return of George Grant, liberal, by a majority of 166 over the Hon. Geo. Foster.

In view of the impending session of Parliament a meeting of the town council was called on Friday last to talk over the C. P. R's. proposed change of route. It was decided to again communicate with Mr. Oliver and remind him of his promise to notify a Pincher Creek representative should any application from the C. P. R. for a change of roadbed be filed with the Railway committee. Rumors are current to the effect that James Hill is about to build a spur line to connect his branch of the Northern now running into Morrissey, with Lethbridge. In the event of the road being built it will pass Pincher Creek a few miles to the south.—Pincher Creek Echo.

ASSOCIATED BOARDS MEET

Important Business Transacted---Banquet at the Royal Hotel.

The fifth annual meeting of The Associated Boards of Trade of Eastern British Columbia was held in Princess Hall this week. On Wednesday afternoon Mr. D. V. Mott who had gone west to meet the delegates wired that eighteen were on board the train. These were put up at the Alberta and Royal. In the evening the first meeting occurred, Pres. G. O. Buchanan of Kaslo being in the chair and H. W. Jackson of Rossland in his place as Secretary-Treasurer. The credential committee reported the following delegates:—from Nelson, W.W.Beer, R.R. Hedley and Jas. Johnstone; Rossland, A.B. MacKenzie and R. W. Grigor; Greenwood, C.S. Galloway, J.R. Brown and Duncan Ross; Cranbrook, W.F.Gurd, and J. Hutchison; Fort Steele, J. A. Harvey, W. R. Grace and H. Kershaw; Trail D. Moore and N. Binns; Fernie W. R. Ross and H. Bentley, and Thomas R. Stockett, jr., Messrs. Keen, Flumerfelt and Gaunce of the conciliation committee were also admitted on credentials forwarded from Greenwood and Kaslo and they took their places at their respective tables.

The large hall was appropriately fitted for the occasion and reflected much credit on the committee who had it in hand Tables were ranged along each side of the hall and behind them, on the wall, letters centred in wreaths of evergreens designated the town which each table represented. In the rear of the hall seats were arranged for the public and the walls were artistically decorated with flags and bunting.

The first matter of business was a resolution inviting the public to attend the sessions and then preceding the election of new officers the retiring President presented his address. He said in part:—

"I welcome you to this our fifth annual meeting. It is opportune that this town, the metropolis of the coal mining section of our territory, has been selected for this convention. In an important sense the business of this town lies at the basis of all our industries, and an inadequate and intermittent production here means paralysis and disaster in all the communities that we represent.

It is again our lot to mourn the loss of one of our most esteemed members, Mr. T. C. Thompson, of the Fernie Board of Trade. He was courteous and genial in personal character and tactful and capable in the discussion of public matters. He occupied a public position and we expected for him a long career of usefulness in connection with the industrial development of the province. I recommend the preparation of a resolution which shall express our regret for his untimely demise.

The populous cemetery in the environs of the town will remind those of us who visit it of the terrible catastrophy by which the town was visited on the 22nd of May last. A coroner's inquest and a special commission have already investigated and endeavored to trace the causes of, and fix the responsibilities or the explosion that caused so frightful destruction of life and property. I am sure that Board of Trade men everywhere join in the demand that the most ample safeguards that knowledge and experience can suggest shall be insisted upon in order that the risk of recurrence of such fatalities may be minimized.

Messrs. Cronin, Aldrich and myself visited Ottawa and presented to the ministers the resolutions of the association upon subjects of Dominion jurisdiction. We were informed that our recommendations in regard to the selection by the government of the coal areas on the south side of Morrissey creek had already been acted upon but that no action was contemplated in regard to the operation of these areas we were promised by some members of the government favorable consideration on the needs of the lead mining industry but the session of parliament closed without anything being done in that respect.

Since that time stress of continued low prices has almost extinguished the industry and the mine owners have undertaken an aggressive campaign in favor of the preservation of the Canadian market for our lead product. Some of our local boards, notably those of Nelson and Kaslo, have assisted this movement with ample contributions of labor and money. We have the promise from many members of the government and of the House of Commons and Senate of careful consideration of our requests at the present session. Resolutions covering the subject will come before this meeting and will no doubt receive the attention that their importance demands.

From semi-official figures I estimate the total metalic production of the province to have been for 1902 $11,850,000, as compared with the production for 1901 of $14,653,144. In lode gold the production has been $4,800,000 in comparison with that for last year of $4,348,603, a gain of $451,457. In copper the production has been 29,000,000 lbs. as against the amount in 1901 of 27,603,646 lbs, but in 1901 copper was entered at a rate of 16 cents per lb. or a total value of $4,446,963, whereas the price this year has averaged not to exceed 12 cents, $3,480,000. Silver has fallen off from 5,151,333 oz. worth at 56 cents, $2,844,745 to 3,900,000 oz. worth at 50 cents, $1,950,000, a loss of $934,745. Lead from 25,791½ tons worth at $77.50, $2,002,733, to 11,500 tons worth at $50, $570,000, a loss of $1,432,733.

The production of coal and coke from the Crows Nest Pass mines has been for 1902 as follows: Coal, 441,236 tons; coke, 120,774 tons. On the whole I estimate that the mineral production (other than coal) of Yale and Kootenay was for 1901, $13,683,044, and for 1902, $10,800,000, a reduction of $2,883,044, the greater part of which reduction is of course due to the shrinkage in value.

The prices of lead and copper have now returned to normal levels, and silver shows a rising tendency, and the output of all these metals should therefore (if other unfavorable conditions are removed) speedily exceed anything known in our history. The economical success of the experiments in electrolytic refining of lead bullion at the Trail smelter is a subject for congratulation, as is also the fact that a market for zinc ores hitherto unsalable is being opened up.

In copper mining and smelting the results of the year have been not entirely unfavorable. In the Boundary and Rossland camps a record has been established in the line of economical extraction and treatment of copper-gold ores, and the results are being published abroad with the most complimentary references to the perfection of mechanical and metallurgical appliances, and methods, which have been attained by our mine and smelter managers.

The last year has been one of almost complete immunity from labor difficulties in the metalliferous mines. Two protracted strikes have however disfigured the year's operations in the coal mines. The latter of these at this moment we trust through the efficient labors of the conciliatory commission appointed by the Provincial Mining Association is on the point of an amicable settlement These coal-mine strikes are particularly disastrous inasmuch as they not only inflict misery upon the districts immediately contiguous to the coal mines, but by shutting off the fuel supply necessary for the treatment of ores, they derange the industry of our whole territory. At the request of the Fernie Board of Trade I called in July last a meeting of the Executive of this Association to be held in Fernie, with the hope that successful mediation might be offered in the strike then in progress. As a majority of the Boards declined to send representatives to the meeting it was abandoned. The strike was soon after terminated by mutual agreement of the parties, but the settlement reached unhappily turned out to be temporary only.

The subject of the prevention, or cure of labor troubles is one commanding world-wide attention, the disease having become chronic and universal. The practice of allowing strikes to continue until terminated by the casual and voluntary intervention of third parties, combines many evils. Such intervention is uncertain, it is generally offered only after the situation has become desperate, the settlement reached is generally a compromise, and not a finding upon the merits of the case, it is not binding, and has no permanence. If there is to be interference it should be prompt and authoritative, there is a wide spread demand for the enactment in Canada of a law for the compulsory arbitration of labor disputes, such act to be modelled upon one in force in New Zealand. As that country has had the benefit of several years experience of the operation of such a law, it would seem judicious that before proceeding in the matter we should have the advantage of full information as to the success or otherwise that has attended its enforcement there. A resolution suggesting this will come before the convention. In the meantime blessed as we are with prodigious quantities of coal of the finest quality and easiest possible extraction in both the east and west of our territory it seems needless that we should suffer from an insufficient supply. There is no doubt that the discussion had last year, in regard to the coal lands reserved by the Dominion government, will this year be renewed with added force.

The temporary depression of our mining interests have directed attention to some of our other resources. The cut of lumber in Yale and Kootenay for the current year will probably reach 100,000,000 feet. The value of this at the mills will approximate $1,400,000. The territory of Alberta is almost entirely supplied with lumber from this district. Our lumbermen are also shipping large quantities to Assiniboia and Manitoba, but at that distance east the competition of lumber from Lake of the Woods and from Minnesota is very close. The eastern mills having the advantage of cheaper labour and lower freight rates.

The frightful destruction of our forest wealth by summer fires continue. Beyond the issue of some special instructions to their officials the Provincial government have so far done nothing to check this waste. In the Dominion government belt along the C. P. R. main line a corps of forest rangers under a competent superintendant was on duty during the dry season of 1902. The superintendant (Mr. Leamy) has reported that at trifling cost almost entire immunity from bush fires was secured for the whole belt. As the preservation of public property to the value of millions of dollars is involved I recommend that we renew our requests for action by the Provincial government similar to that taken in the matter by the Dominion authorities. It seems reasonable that provision should be made whereby railroad companies and other large holders of timber lands should contribute to the costs of protective measures.

It is demonstrated by numerous experiments that all the land in the mountain region up to an altitude of 3,000 feet is well adapted for the growth of such fruits as can be grown in other parts of Canada. It is highly desirable that one or more stations in charge of expert fruit growers should be established, at which the problems arising from the diverse circumstances of the case such as altitude, selection of suitable varities, irrigation, and so forth and so forth may be investigated. Such stations might be branches only of the Dominion experimental farm already established in the province, or the work might profitably be taken up by the railway companies, which hold for sale immense blocks of land suitable for the purpose.

In conclusion I desire to thank the Board of Trade of Eastern British Columbia for the honor which I have enjoyed of acting as the president of the association for the last year. I trust that my successors in office may in their respective terms receive the same measure of kindness and consideration that I have been shown."

The President and Secretary were re-elected to another term of office. A business and program committee were appointed and the convention got down to business. Resolutions dealing with prevention of forest fires, the formation of a public park in S. E. Kootenay and the establishment of an experimental orchard in the Rocky mountain district were rushed through after which the convention adjourned until the following morning.

On Thursday morning the meeting was called to order at 9:30. The resolution offered by Kaslo re the formation of a Provincial Board of Trade was lost on the ground that it was more to the interests of the association to confine its work to the Kootenays. The silver-lead question took up the attention of the Boards for some time. Two of the Greenwood delegates expressed some doubts as to the ultimate results of increased duties. Messrs. Buchanan, Grigor, Johnstone and Bentley strongly represented the necessity of government protection and finally a strong resolution was passed unanimously and wired to the Dominion government. A resolution asking for an extension of time till July 1st, 1904, of Government bounties to the Trail smelter which has introduced a new electric system, was passed. A resolution asking steam boat and railway companies to sell interchangeable tourist tickets throughout the Kootenays was passed.

The Rossland Board of Trade submitted the following resolution: That in view of the evident necessity for the

THE STRIKE SITUATION.

Commission at Work---Excitement at the Mines---Alleged Scabs Run Out.

This is 39th day since the strike was declared and still it wears wearily on. On Tuesday evening of this week the signs of an immediate settlement looked extremely bright, in fact an agreement was practically arrived at but the meeting on Wednesday morning between the Executive of the District Union and the Company developed unlooked for features which may take a little longer to straighten out.

The Committee has been at work during the entire week taking evidence from the miners as to the wages earned, the number of shifts worked per month, the facilities they are favored with, the obstacles they have to contend with, and the general condition of mining in the three camps of Coal Creek, Morrissey and Michel.

During the week the Commission have examined upwards of 40 witnesses under oath. The investigation took place in the club room of the Royal Hotel. A vast amount of information was gathered by the Commission and this we believe is to be made public in due time.

The investigation has induced the men to take a more reasonable veiw of the wage question and the revised rates of pay for the different classes of work at the three various camps, the conditions of which vary considerably.

An unfortunate and regrettable incident occurred on Thursday night while the banquet was in progress. A number of men taking advantage of the absence of Constable Routh who was on a business trip to Nelson, took the law into their own hands to drive out several men who were employed at the Coal Creek mines in keeping the engine and fans working.

A mob estimated at between 50 and 70 men at 12:30 in the night forced two men named Dupries and Geo. Serino to leave their work at the boiler house. They also forced an entrance into the house of T. Evans and took Evans and three boarders named John Hunt, E. Tazzaman and O. Spencer. They also went to the house of Wm. Alexander but he strategetically escaped through the upstair window. The underground superintendent who was aroused by the noise, and the night-watchman were unable to do anything to check the mob who started off on foot towards the town bringing the six captives with them. At the town they were joined by another lot of men. No stop was made at Fernie, but branching off behind the coke ovens the march was continued east on the mainline. A short distance below the Fernie Lumber Co.'s mill the mob stopped and ordered the men to walk on and not to return to Fernie on pain of their lives. The mob then returned to their homes.

The first inkling the police had of trouble was a rumor about 10:30 p.m. that mischief was brewing. Constable Walker was ill and Constable Hoskins on a business trip to Jaffray but the remaining members, Chief McMullin and Constables Drummond and Kummer patrolled the town well, thinking that the trouble would occur in town. About 2 o'clock the police attempting to get telephone communication with the mines learned that the wire was cut and they at once proceeded to walk to the mines.

The mob had already left the spur line and the police missed them. They learned little information at the mines and coming back to town secured the mine train and went east in search of the missing men. Two were found at Hosmer and three others five miles further on. The other, Dupries, is supposed to be in the neighborhood of Sparwood where he has friends. The men were brought back to their homes. They did not bear any serious marks of rough treatment.

A searching investigation by the police followed. The men who were in the mob either had their faces blackened or covered with masks which rendered it difficult to recognize the assailants. One whose mask was snatched off was said to be J. W. Morrisson and he was arrested. About a dozen summons were also filled out and served.

Morrisson was up for trial this morning R. Drinnan, the only witness for the prosecution, swore he tore the mask from a man's face and he positively identified the accused as being the man. The defence, as we go to press, are producing ten witnesses to prove an alibi.

The case, if unfinished by to-night, will likely be adjourned until Wednesday of next week, as W. R. Ross, who is defending the accused is attending the county court at Nelson early in the week. Morrison is out on $1000 bail.

The Miners Union repudiate all connection with the whole affair and to make clear their attitude they appointed several of their best members to assist the police in protecting the town last night. Nothing occurred of a suspicious nature since Thursday night's "run out" and we believe that no further acts of violence will occur. The men have so far conducted this strike in a clean manner and we believe all right thinking union men will agree with us that such occurrences are to be deplored and cannot fail in every instance to work to the disadvantage of the men.

COAL CREEK.

Mr. O. Cretty returned home from Minneapolis.

Mr. W. Timlick made a flying visit to Coal Creek this week.

D. T. Williams renewed old acquaintances here on Thursday last.

Mr. D. McPhail has moved his cars to Fernie for a few days until the bridge is finished, this leaves Coal Creek dull.

Mr. Geo. Clapp expects to be moved to Morrissey soon. We are sorry to loose Mr. Clapp and family from our midst.

Mrs. H. L. Halpin is preparing to move to Cranbrook. But owing to the sickness of her little daughters, she is somewhat delayed in getting ready.

Mr. John Wood who has been residing in Coal Creek for some time left this week with D. McPhail's bridge crew. We regret to loose Mr. Wood from our midst.

A. D. McRae expects to start planing his lumber as soon as Mr. Geo. Jewell arrives from the east, where he and Mrs. Jewell have been visiting friends for sometime.

Miss Amy Williams was the guest of Miss Gertrude Clapp a few days last week. She returned home on Sunday accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Trenall and the Misses Fulljames, who spent Sunday here.

Wedding Bells

The marriage of Miss May Z. N. Taylor of Stewartville, Ont. to Mr. Joe. Belanger formerly of Renfrew took place at the Manse on the 16th inst. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. L. Gordon. The bride was handsomely attired in a brown travelling suit and was assisted by Miss K. Belanger, sister of the groom. Mr. Ed. Kummer ably supported the groom through the trying ordeal. At the conclusion of the ceremony and after the usual round of congratulations the happy couple departed for Cranbrook where it is understood they will make their home.

MY HEART'S DARLING

BY W. HEIMBURG.

CHAPTER IX.

And every hour she had spent with her from that first dreadful one till to-day passed before her memory. It is wonderful that one can grow so fond of a person one hardly knew a few weeks before, and one so entirely opposite from one's self. Hortense had roused her out of her thoughtless life, had awakened in her her slumbering desire for everything that was beautiful in life; she had now a dawning conception of what life might be. She drew the curtains, lighted a lamp, fetched her portfolio from the bureau, and began to write to her sister.

"Dear Mathilda,—Forgive me for not letting you hear from me for so long; I have had very little time; my future mother-in-law keeps me so busy about the house, and in the afternoon expects me to make visits with her; and when I have time to myself I go to see Hortense. Dear Mathilda, if it were not for her I should die of homesickness for you and the children. Alfred is—"

Here she stopped abruptly. She remembered with terror that she had not said good-night to Frau Counselor. She hastily shut the portfolio, put it back in the drawer, and went to find the old lady. A narrow ray of light streamed from under Alfred's door on the dark floor without, and his mother's sharp voice struck on her ear.

"You may be grown up, Alfred, but do not be angry with me; you are still the same—" She stopped.

"Silly youth," said he, finishing for her. "Is that what you wanted to say? Perhaps you are right."

"I have warned you often enough; but if ever there was any one who would not hear, it is you! And you have not even the courage to say: 'This running to Frau von Lowen must stop, and at once.'"

"It is a weakness in me. You are right again," sounded from his voice at the moment when Lucie shut her door again.

She stood with her lips tightly pressed in the little room, her hands clinched together. Let them only try, only dare to quench the only light in this cold, horrid, dry life!

She threw herself on the bed and stared into the darkness.

"I wish I had never seen him. I wish I were dead!" she cried to herself. And she lay down in a tearless, speechless rage until day-break.

The next morning Lucie was standing pale and exhausted in the kitchen ironing her future mother-in-law's caps and laces. Tante Dettchen sat at the kitchen table shelling pease. Nothing was to be heard but the light sound of the iron being pushed backward and forward, and occasionally a sigh from Tante Dettchen. The window stood open, a dazzling light streamed in, and that, with the heat from the coal fire, made the young girl's headache unbearable.

The Frau Counselor was in the sitting-room mending the wash. Alfred was off, busy with his patients.

Tante Dettchen had something on her mind. Various subjects which she began were dropped again without finding the right turn; so at last she asked directly: "Have you and Alfred had any differences?"

"No," said Lucie, and pushed a fresh steel into the iron.

"You are a very curious engaged pair," said the elderly maiden, in a complaining voice, "one here, the other there. I thought it would be so different. Your future mother-in-law is quite hurt about it; she thinks you neglect her for Frau von Lowen. I think it is the other way. 'Just notice,' said I, 'he is not attentive enough: he kisses her so seldom.' 'Oh, well, it is all right; Alfred has other things to do, just in the beginning of his practice;' but it seems to me you have been hurt about it. It is so, child?"

Lucie blushed deeply.

"But, aunt, I beg you—" she said, much embarrassed.

"Well, now, no harm meant," said the stout little lady taking a couple of peas with her lips from the palm of her hand. "He is so much absorbed and so much away; and when one is young one thinks so much of one's engagement. But, child—" and suddenly the tears welled up in the kindly eyes—"he always was so quiet and undemonstrative; you must not take it ill of him. He is the soul of goodness; you will only know him thoroughly when you have lived long beside him. I have carried him in my arms — he is a jewel, believe me!"

Lucie did not look up from her ironing. "I do not take it ill of him," she said, faintly.

At this moment there was a knock at the door, and upon Tante Dettchen's saying, "Come in," the Herr von Meerfeldt's old servant appeared with a magnificent bouquet of roses, and a little note, and under his arm the Russia-leather box with Hortense's mementoes of her travels.

"With Frau von Lowen's compliments."

It was as if the hues of the roses suddenly dyed the young girl's cheeks, the color came so quickly. She read the note hastily and said, smilingly:

"Many thanks; and I will come."

The old man set down the little chest on the kitchen table and disappeared.

Varnish Stains.

Varnish stains may be removed from clothing by wetting the spots with alcohol, letting the cloth lie for a moment and then sponging again with alcohol If this should fade the color of the fabric, it may be restored by sponging lightly with chloroform.

Making a Name.

Wigg—As a painter do you think he will be able to make a name for himself?

Wagg—He ought to. You see, he's a sign painter.—Philadelphia Record.

There Was No Unnecessary Delay

There had been trouble between Mr. William Scott and Mr. Samuel Brown at Red Dog City, and Mr. William Scott started out one evening to locate the exact whereabouts of the other gentleman. When he had done so, he bustled into the saloon with the remark:

"Sorry to disturb anybody, but I'll get through with this matter as quick as possible."

He had scarcely entered when there was a pop! pop! pop! lasting for sixty seconds. Then the fusillade ceased, and the smoke lifted up to reveal two dead men lying on the floor.

"Boys," said the saloonist to the men who crowded in, "it was a fair fout and a genteel fout. They died like reg'lar gentlemen."

The crowd stared at the faces of the dead and nodded approval.

"And they shall be buried like gentlemen," continued the man. "Here, you Chinese heathen, take this dollar and go out and dig two holes and plant these gentlemen on their backs and give 'em elbow room to shake hands in the next world!" M. QUAD.

Desperate Looking Party—I want to buy a revolver.

Dealer—Yes, sir. Here's the three latest styles. This plain, substantial arm is much used for self defense; this silver mounted one, with pearl handle, is used for shooting sweethearts, and this cheap, common affair is usually used to shoot wives. It's very popular just now.—Baltimore American.

Honey From the Spelling Bee.

Churchman—We had a spelling bee at the church last week. The pastor gave out the words. Did you hear about it?

Ascum—No. Was it interesting?

Churchman—Rather. The first three words he gave out were "increase," 'pastor," "salary."—Philadelphia Press.

Very Strange.

Tourist—I must move. I couldn't get a wink of sleep all night on account of a baby in the next room that cried all night.

Waiter—I don't understand that. The parents slept in the same room, and they never heard it.—Nordiske Blade.

"Neither would I," answered Mamie. "I'd rather say it where he can hear it, so as to have the fun of seeing him get angry."—Washington Star.

Only Possible Reason.

"Yes," said the sweet young thing proudly. "I've never been kissed by a man in my life."

"You ought to quit eating onions," said the old bachelor sourly.—Chicago Tribune.

A Different Locality.

HANS PETERSON'S ROMANCE

By F. A. Korsmeyer

Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company

Hulda was having a hard time of it. In her heart of hearts she could not quite decide which one she loved best. Hans, she had to confess, had some advantages which weighed with her. Mr. Barton, the man who owned the place across the street, was particular about his furnace man, and she knew he liked Hans. Besides, Hans could speak Swedish, and she couldn't deny that it was pleasant to talk with him in the accents of the dear old home she had left so far behind.

But whenever his plain, open countenance, with the blue eyes twinkling below the yellow hair, was pictured in her mind she blamed him for being a little too ordinary. She could see a dozen such any Sunday in the little Swedish church. Now, with a man who wore a long blue coat with a five pointed star on the front of it and carried a mahogany club it was different. No one who looked at him could fail to see that he, being a part of the government, was superior to the common run of men.

James had told her that he was "the right arm of the law," and she had looked her admiration. She had known him almost as long as she had Hans, and he was so good to her. On Sundays in the park he would get her a seat close up to the band stand. Then when the concert was over he would buy some peanuts, and together they would stroll through the part of the park that had signs to keep off the grass stuck up all over it. Of course he could go anywhere.

James knew that Hans was his rival, for one Saturday night he had come to see Hulda and had found Hans there. Hulda had said:

"Hans, this is Mr. Daniels."

And Hans had said, "I am vaar glad to see you," while James had mumbled, "How d'ye do?" and then sat scowling at the sink all the rest of the evening.

After that James never came on a Saturday. He asked to be shifted to another platoon, so that he could do his calling on Monday or Tuesday nights. Hans did not change his night, and so they never met at Hulda's home again. Indeed James took so little pains to cultivate Hans' acquaintance that he never even learned what his rival did for a living. And this disdainful indifference proved costly in the end.

How Hulda would have learned to know her heart had not Hank O'Day, the iceman, set in motion a fateful train of circumstances one cannot even guess. Hank did not know Hulda. He does not know her to this day. And yet it was none other than Hank who, all unknowing, unmasked her heart's desire.

Hank O'Day drove to his ice wagon a pair of high spirited horses. One morning when his wagon was empty his æsthetic instincts led him to lay his route back to the ice yards along the street that skirted the park.

Just as the chariot of fate was nearing Hulda's home the chain at the back of the wagon slipped and let the end gate drag upon the ground. Hank swore softly, stopped his team and jumped to the pavement to fasten the chain. He jerked it quickly through the iron rings and then—swore again as the team, alarmed by the sudden noise, galloped madly down the avenue and made straight for the nearest entrance to the park.

The horrified Hank stood still long enough to see the end gate banging out defiance. Then he started after the runaways as fast as his rubber boots would let him run.

When Officer James Daniels turned from his faithful guardianship of a bevy of simpering nursegirls in the park, he saw coming toward him at full speed a pair of wild eyed horses and an ice wagon swaying from side to side. Behind the seat of the wagon stood a man trying desperately to get hold of the reins.

In an instant James recognized the waving yellow hair and pale features as those of Hans Peterson, and in the same moment, like an inspiration, there came to him the realization of his opportunity. He ran out into the roadway and as the flying wagon passed caught the chain of the end gate and swung himself into the box.

As he gained his feet the wagon slowed suddenly, and he lurched forward to bring up against the back of the sturdy Swede. Seizing him firmly by the collar, Officer Daniels gasped:

"I arrest you—in the name—of the law!"

Hans did not quite understand, but the hand on his collar in the moment of his success made him angry.

"Whad yo' say? Led me go!"

"I say you are under arrest." James was getting his breath again. "This is against the law, you know."

"Whad is agains' da law?"

"Driving traffic teams in the park. Come, you'll have to go with me to the station."

The officer tried to pull Hans out of the wagon, but the latter still held the reins and refused to go. In his broken English he explained, he expostulated, he all but exploded. Another officer was approaching.

"Come on now; drop those lines. This other officer will take care of your team."

Hans dropped the reins and appealed to the other policeman. But the newcomer was indifferent. If Hans had been arrested, why of course he would have to go to the station.

The magistrate was busy when they arrived, and it was upon the officer's recommendation that Hans was allowed to go until afternoon, when he would have his hearing. To have Hans released was the scheme James had evolved. Hans would have to explain where he wanted to go when he left the house in the afternoon. Thus his employer would learn all and Hans, at least disgraced, might possibly lose his place. Would she of the flaxen hair and the wide, admiring eyes hesitate any longer? James smiled as he strolled back on post.

In the afternoon Officer Daniels, Hans Peterson, Hank O'Day and Mr. Barton, the man Hans worked for, came into court. The officer told the circumstances of the arrest and dwelt at length upon the plain case of violation of the city ordinances. Then Hank O'Day explained who he was and how his horses had become frightened. Hans took the stand and said he "yust yump in da wagon to stop id," and finally Mr. Barton informed the court that Hans worked for him and had never driven an ice wagon in his life.

The judge turned to James again, and when the officer had nothing to say began to talk himself. He talked for quite awhile, and most of the time he addressed his remarks to Officer Daniels.

When the butler had read to Hulda from that evening's paper the account of the runaway and the trial, what the judge had said to James and what he had said about Hans, she went out into the kitchen and sighed and thought. That night Hans came and talked long and earnestly, and as he talked the fading glimmer of that five pointed star went out, and naught remained for her but the light in Hans Peterson's blue eyes.

Wool and Hair.

The life and growth of wool and hair are not identical with the life of the body, but they will grow after the death of the animal in whose skin they have taken root. The root of the hair exudes the hair pulp, which is formed into cells containing the pigment which gives color to the hair itself. Each row of these cells forms a ring. As the rings of cells are pushed away from the skin by the giving out of fresh pulp from the roots the cells dry, forming scales which curiously resemble miniature fish scales. A hair is simply a long tube formed of these rings into a sort of sheath. These "saw teeth," which the older writers mention as being one of the characteristics of the human hair, are formed by rings of these dried up cells, which are very fine and closely set.

Goat's hair has a more rapid growth and longer cells, so that it is less regular and straight than that of the human species; consequently it shows little of the toothlike edge. The hair of the sheep of the common sort is irregular, with a tendency to curl or wave, but, unlike that of the goat, shows marked toothlike edges. Wool has barbed projections along the "hairs," which is one of its distinguishing peculiarities. The "wool" of the negro is really hair, but is less perfect than straight hair. The same may be said of "kinky" hair in the white races.

Love and Quarreling.

Every man and woman of us who has lived long enough in the world to gain wisdom by experience will be obliged to admit the strange sad union of love and quarreling. But every one of us who has lived deeply enough to know that experience worketh hope will admit that when love quarrels with its beloved it is just because this noble ideal of unity has run off the track, so to speak; a virtue has gone to seed; a divine quality has developed a defect. The outlook for quarrelsome love is not so hopeless when we can understand this. See how it would work if those two squabbling sisters would either of them stop to remember that it is only love, foolish, exasperating, unbalanced love, that is responsible for the ill bred domestic criticism that spoils the home life. If Jane once honestly believed that Mary's love made her so unpleasant she would stop aghast, amused no doubt and very likely touched, but almost certainly silenced. And that would be the end of the quarrel.—Margaret Deland in Harper's Bazar.

Qualities of the Topaz.

The name of the precious stone inserted in the ring of Gyges has not been handed down to us, but it is probable that it was the topaz, whose wonders Philostrates recounts in the life of Apollonius. An attribute of the sun and of fire, the ancients called it the gold magnet, as it was credited with the power of attracting that metal, indicating its veins and discovering treasures. Heliodorus in his story of Theagenes and Charicles says that the topaz saves from fire all those who wear it and that Charicles was preserved by a topaz from the fiery vengeance of Arsaces, queen of Ethiopia.

This stone was one of the first talismans that Theagenes possessed in Egypt. The topaz at present symbolizes Christian virtues—faith, justice, temperance, gentleness, clemency.—Paris Figaro.

Parrot Language.

Do parrots understand what they say? A correspondent writes that a friend with a fine green Brazilian parrot has been staying with her. A gray parrot was introduced one day, but the Brazilian haughtily declined to have anything to say to the gray. Then another friend who had just been given a newly imported green Brazilian brought the newcomer to call. The moment the parrots caught sight of each other they broke into a torrent of apparently articulate language, consisting, as it seemed, of questions and answers, but what the language was no one present could tell, and a few days later, when they met again, exactly the same thing happened. Was the first parrot, long exiled from its native forests, asking eagerly for news of its people?

The Paris Mousetrap.

Paris has been described as a gigantic mousetrap with three doors labeled, respectively, hotel, cafe and restaurant. The city has about 10,000 hotels. There are restaurants in every block, and you can find cafes at almost every step. At almost any restaurant you are sure of good cooking. You can eat well anywhere and at any price. There are scores of places where the meals cost as high as in the better restaurants of New York and hundreds where you can get a very fair dinner for 50 cents, or, if you would have wine, for 10 cents additional. There is one stock company which does an enormous business in supplying cheap and good food for Parisians. It was founded by a butcher who has his shops still in different parts of the city. This company has 100 or more restaurants where you can always be sure of good service and good food. You pay for what you eat and pay for everything, but the prices are low.

His Vexing Problem.

The boy was greatly troubled.

"Is it true, father," he asked, "that they have whipping posts in some states?"

The father assured him that it was.

"And they whip grown people?" asked the boy.

"When they deserve it," said the father.

"Well," asserted the boy, with conviction, "if that's the case I don't see what's the use of growing up."—

The Once Splendid Portuguese City In India a Magnificent Wilderness. Its Masterpiece of Art the Tomb of St. Francis Xavier.

It was said that during the prosperous times of the Portuguese in India you could not have seen a piece of iron in any merchant's house, but all gold and silver. They coined immense quantities of the precious metals and used to make pieces of workmanship in them for exportation. The very soldiers enriched themselves by commerce.

But then at last came the inquisition, which celebrated its terrible and deadly rites with more fervor and vehemence at Goa than in any other place. Religious persecution, pestilence and wars with the Dutch, disturbances arising from an unsettled government, and, above all, the slow but sure workings of the shortsighted policy of the Portuguese in intermarrying and identifying themselves with the Hindoos of the lowest caste, made her fall as rapid as her rise was sudden and prodigious.

In less than a century and a half after Da Gama had landed on the Indian shore the splendor of Goa had departed forever. The inhabitants fled before the deadly fever which soon fastened upon the devoted precincts of the city, and in 1758 the viceroy transferred his headquarters from the ancient capital to Parjina, about eight miles distant. Soon afterward the religious orders were expelled, leaving their magnificent convents and churches all but utterly deserted, and the inquisition was suppressed upon the recommendation of the British government.

The place is now a grass grown wilderness. But still the firm and well built causeways of this olden city and its moldering splendors are reminiscent of echoing pageants and the tramp of armies which once sounded there. As we tread the ancient wharf, a long, broad road, lined with a double row of trees and faced with stone, a more suggestive scene of desolation can hardly be conceived. Everything around teems with melancholy associations, the very rustlings of the trees and murmur of the waves sound like a dirge for the departed grandeur of a city.

Towering above a mass of ruins a solitary gateway flanks the entrance to the Strada Diretta, the Straight street, so called because almost all the streets in old Goa are laid out in curvilinear form. It was through this portal surmounted by the figures of St. Catherine and Vasco da Gama that the newly appointed viceroys of Goa passed in triumphal procession to the palace.

Beyond the gate a level road, once a populous thoroughfare, leads to the Terra di Sabaio, a large square fronting the Primacial, or Cathedral of St. Catherine, who became the patron saint of Goa when the place was captured by Albuquerque on the day of her festival. Groves of cocoanut palms and mango topes now incumber the ground once covered by troops of horse. The wealth, the busy life and the luxury of the old place are dead. Kites and cobras infest the crumbling halls which once resounded with the banquet and the dance, and naught but a few old monks and nuns keeps vigil amid its desolation today.

But Goa possesses one treasure of great interest. This is the tomb of Francis Xavier, the great Jesuit missionary to the east. It is to be found in the Church of Bon Jesus. It is a masterpiece of art which is lost to all but the casual visitors to old Goa. Some have ventured to suggest that no other mausoleum in India or even in Asia except the Taj Mahal can equal it. It is built of rich marble of variegated colors. The lowest stage is of red and purple jasper and Carrara alabaster adorned with statuettes and cherubs The middle stage is of green and yellow jasper decorated with beautiful bronze plates representing incidents in the life of the saint. The highest of the three stages is surrounded by a lovely railing of red jasper marked with white spots, the adornments being figures of angels, while its middle portion is graced with columns elegantly carved, whose intervening spaces are surmounted by arches showing further incidents in the life of the saint. The friezes of the four lateral columns are of black stone and the plinths of yellow jasper. Surmounting this last stage lies the coffin overlaid with silver, a gorgeous receptacle embellished with many exquisite specimens of relief work Lumps of silver depending around complete the adornment of the shrine. It is a worthy relic of Goa's departed glory.

The bell of the Augustinian convent still rings forth its vesper peal above this old city of ghosts, and it is impossible to forget the effect of the deep, mournful notes as they strike upon the ear. Never was heard a more beautiful or more sadly musical summons than that which calls in vain from the tower of the Augustinians to the forsaken and solitary city.

It is all summed up in the eloquent apostrophe of Sherer: "Goa the golden exists no more; Goa, where the aged Da Gama closed his glorious life; Goa, where the immortal Camoens sang and suffered. It is now but a vast and grassy tomb, and it seems as if its thin and gloomy population of priests and friars were only spared to chant requiems for its departed souls."

ANOTHER COLLISION.

Two Men Killed and Four Injured At Islington, Near Toronto.

A head-on collision occurred near Islington, nine miles west of Toronto, on the C. P. R., Tuesday morning, between 7 and 8 o'clock, and two men were killed and four injured, two badly. The trains were freights and were piled in a heap and both engines demolished.

The dead men are David Taylor, brakeman, of London, Ont., aged 22, and Charles Winger, fireman, of Windsor, Ont.

William Morrison, engineer, aged 34, was badly scalded about the hands and neck, and is suffering from the shock, but is expected to recover. The train crew's homes are in Toronto Junction and London. The collision occurred during a thick fog and the trains were going at a good rate of speed at the time. The cause of the wreck is said to be in the blunder of a young operator.

HIS HAIR TURNED WHITE.

Thrilling Experience of a Sydney Driver in a Runaway Accident.

A most miraculous escape from death was witnessed here on the principal street of Sydney, N. S. A pair of horses owned by Rhodes, Curry & Co., attached to an express, took fright at an electric car and dashed up Charlotte street at breakneck speed. When near the corner of Dorchester street they struck a telegraph pole and the driver was thrown violently to the ground, but fortunately escaped uninjured.

But here is where the most remarkable part of the runaway comes in. The horses continued their mad flight and just at the corner of Dorchester street struck a team owned and driven by a man named Bezanson, a produce dealer. His wagon was completely overturned, he fell beneath it and with the runaway horses on top of it. Scores of people witnessed the accident, and they could hardly believe their eyes when they saw Benazon emerge from the wreck unscathed. But those who knew him recognized a change in him, for in that terrible moment his hair changed from black to white. His wagon was completely demolished, and the horses of Rhodes, Curry & Co. were slightly injured.

Passion of a Princess.

A despatch from Dresden says:—The King of Saxony has written an open letter to his people thanking them with his whole heart for the proof of their sympathy with him in the "sad misfortune" which had befallen himself and his family.

His Majesty expresses the hope that the "perturbation and excitement which seized on a large section of the population in consequence of the distressing events of last winter," will now give place to quieture and the old feeling of confidence. In conclusion the king begs the people not to believe those who aver "that behind all the miserable business lies a tissue of falsehood and deception, but to believe the word of your king that this infinitely painful affair arose solely from the ungovernable passion of a woman who had long before secretely fallen."

HE GOT SEVEN YEARS.

Clerk Martineau, of the Militia Department Sentenced.

A dispatch from Ottawa says:—Martineau, the clerk, who was arrested some weeks ago on a charge of stealing money amounting to about $75,000 from the militia department, has been sentenced to seven years in Kingston penitentiary by Police Magistrate O'Keefe. Martineau pleaded guilty to six of the charges laid against him and two others are withdrawn.

Martineau signed a release of the money found on him, $12,444, to Col. Sherwood and also checks for the balances to his credit in the Quebec, Royal and Sovereign banks. Martineau also signed over some securities in the form of promissory notes. The total restitution, County Crown Attorney Ritchie says, will not exceed $14,000. The loss to the militia department will therefore be over $60,000.

The charges to which Martineau pleaded guilty were for forging a check on the Bank of Montreal for $4,355, payable to C. D. Cote, April 26, 1902; for forging a check on the Bank of Montreal, payable to A. Martineau for $13,500, on Oct. 19, 1902, and for forging a check on the Bank of Montreal, for $6,700, payable to C. D. Cote, on July 7, 1902. He also pleaded guilty to the charges of uttering these three checks. Two charges of issuing checks through the Sovereign bank were discharged.

Magistrate O'Keefe told the prisoner that he was glad to see that he (the prisoner) had done his best to make restitution for what he had done, and that he would be pleased to exercise clemency if it laid in his power to do so. If the money had been taken in a case of excitement it would have been different, but the forgery had been done deliberately and very skilfully executed. "By reason of the ability you have shown," said the magistrate, "you are a dangerous man to the community, and I cannot let you away easily. I will therefore sentence you to seven years in the Kingston penitentiary on each charge of forgery and four years on each charge of uttering, all this sentence to run concurrently.

Martineau took the sentence coolly and never winced. He tapped the side of the box with his finger tips once or twice and stepped out of the box to the elevator without a quiver. His pleas of guilty and his decision to restore the money as far as possible was made after he had fully thought the situation over and discussed it with his counsel and his family.

A Buffalo Tragedy.

A despatch from Buffalo, N. Y., of March 11, says:—Mr. Pinnell was out riding in his electric automobile with Mrs. Pennell. They were on Kensington avenue, near Fillmore avenue, skimming along the edge of the Gehre's stone quarry, which is a huge rock ribbed hole in the ground on the right side af the avenue going out. Mr. Pennell's hat blew off. The automobile swerved, and in some inexplicable manner it leaped over the curb into the abyss below. Pennell was killed instantly, his head being crushed to an unrecognizable mass. Mrs. Pennell was injured so severely that the surgeons at the Sisters hospital, to which she was taken, said her chances of recovery were very slight.

MET AN AWFUL DEATH.

Body of an Indian Found in St. Boniface Horribly Mutilated.

The mutilated body of a middle-aged Indian, believed to be John Spence, who lived at St. Peter's reserve, was found on Wednesday morning lying between the rails of the "Y," about one hundred and fifty yards east of the C. P. R. bridge, on the St. Boniface side. Fred McKerchar, the junction section foreman, made the discovery.

When found the body was lying face downward, the right foot was taken off at the ankle, the index finger of the left hand was also cut off. The face and forehead was so disfigured as to be unrecognizable. The detached thumb was found ten yards west of the body. The clothing was torn from the lower part of the body.

It is supposed that the Indian, while intoxicated, was run over by a switching engine. A bottle labelled "Pure Fruit Champagne, free from alcohol," was found sixty yards west of the body, where it is apparent the man was first hit by the engine. The bottle was half emptied of liquid which resembled cider.

PUGILISTIC ENOCH ARDEN.

Returned Klondiker Finds Husband No. 2—He Uses Him as a Football.

Returning to his home after a long absence to find his wife had married another man, Michael Glenn, 13 Peoria street, Chicago, declined to follow the course pursued by his traditiobal predecessor, one Enoch Arden.

Instead of continuing along the liaes laid down by the poet, he embraced his wife, ran his fingers through the locks of the curly-headed little stranger who had arrived during his absence, and then proceeded to go through a series of physical exercises, in which he used the other fellow as a combined punching bag and football.

When the police reached the scene in response to the anxious summons of the woman, who was afraid she was going to lose both husbands at once, and the two men had been pried apart, they decided that it were better to arbitrate the matter. Accordingly the police departed.

THOUGHT MIKE WAS DEAD.

Mrs. Glenn, or Mrs. Walters, whichever you choose to call her, first told her story. She said that she knew that the Klondike, whither Michael, Husband No. 1, had gone, was a long way off, but she had waited patiently for a letter. When it failed to arrive she realized the dangers which beset one in that country and concluded he had been eaten by polar bears or run over by the Chilcoot Pass limited. So she looked around for another husband.

At this point in her explanations she made a knot in her thread of discourse and stopped.

"This is my husband, Mr. Glenn, Mr. Walters," said she. "Mike, this is my husband, Lee.":

After which she recovered the lost chord and proceeded to unravel the tangled matrimonial skein. She said that she and Walters had been married, right and proper, all right, believing that Michael was dead. At which Mike thought of the bootleg soop and canned beans and said something under his breath.

MIKE'S PROPOSITION.

It was a long story. When the end came Mike slapped his chest like a true miner and said, or at least said something which conveyed the same idea:

"Well, pard, I've got a heap of dust here. Now, I takes half and the woman, and you takes half and yourself off, or off I goes with it all. Which?"

The former proposition was accepted. The stake Glenn had brought back from the mines was divided and the two men were ready to shake hands on the agreement, when the golden-haired cherub began to cry.

"Of course," says Walters, "I takes the baby, seeing that I've got a proprietary interest."

"No, no," cried the woman. "If you take the baby, you take me."

"I'll be hanged if you're going to have my wife," Glenn broke in.

And in that way the trouble started again. Both men were badly used up when the police got them to the station, and the woman was hysterical. Only the baby, which was crowing like a neighbor's rooster of a Sunday morning, had enjoyed the affair.

Lieut. Harding heard their versions of the affair, and, not considering himself a Solomon, he locked the trio up and now some justice will have to straighten out the affair.

Cannot Practice in Transvaal.

Doctors Parly and Dumville, of Ontario, and Dr. Donaldson, of McGill, who went out to South Africa with the Canadian army medical corps tried at the conclusion of the war to practise in the Transvaal colony.

They were prohibited from doing so, because only English diplomas were legal there. They appealed to Lord Milner, but he refused to alter the regulation on the subject.

A Silkworm of the Sea.

Silk is obtained from the shellfish known as the pinna, which is found in the Mediterranean. This shellfish has the power of spinning a viscid silk which in Sicily is made into a regular and very handsome fabric. The silk is spun by the shellfish in the first instance for the purpose of attaching itself to the rocks. It is able to guide the delicate filaments to the proper place and there glue them fast, and if they are cut away it can reproduce them. The material when gathered (which is done at low tide) is washed in soap and water, dried, straightened and carded, one pound of the coarse filament yielding about three ounces of fine thread, which, when spun, is a lovely burnished golden brown color.

POLICE REPORT.

COMMISSIONER PERRY'S ANNUAL REPORT.

The Large Influx of Immigration Calls for an Increase in the Number—Doukhobors Doing Well—Yukon Force—Great Prosperity all Through the Territories

The annual report for the year 1902 of the Northwest Mounted Police Department was issued Thursday. Commissioner Perry, of Regina, says that the increased demands on the force mentioned last year have since been emphasized. The continued development of the country, the increase of population, the settlement of remote districts, the springing up of new towns and the increased development of new railways have all added materially to the work. In the train of the immigration has come a number of the criminal class which, though large, will probably increase. The new settlers, a great many from the United States, are much impressed by the fair and impartial administration of justice. He finds a constabulary such as he has not been accustomed. But the advantages of which he is quick to acknowledge and a country free from all lawlessness and enjoying liberty without license. The European sees no novelty, but he quickly learns that there is no oppression. The commissioner gives high praise to the work done by the force among the immigrants.

HORSE AND CATTLE STEALING.

Horse and cattle stealing still continue to be the most difficult classes of crimes the police have to deal with. During 1902 there were 38 convictions fro this offence compared with 10 in 1901. Offences against property show an increase of 129 cases. Theft alone has increased by 50 per cent. In several cases the thieves were professional Montana horse thieves operating along the boundary. The boundary has been carefully patrolled this year with much success. The number of offences against the Northwest ordinances have increased 40 per cent. The number of convictions under the prairie fire ordinance is double the number of last year. The general behavior of the Indians is very good. There has been an increase of offences under the Indian Act, and convictions for drunkeness have increased by forty-two. There were fifty-nine convictions for supplying liquor to Indians.

There were twenty more prisoners received in 1902 than in the previous year. Three prisoners escaped, two of whom were recaptured. During the year, smallpox has been prevalent in the Territories and the work of stamping it out has fallen largely on the police. The commissioner draws attention to the increase of police work which will be occasioned by the building of the Grand Trunk-Pacific railway and recommends that the force be increased. The total strength of the force at present is five less than last year. The drain on the force during the past three years has been excessive. Two hundred and fifty-six officers and men served with the various South African contingents, 251 officers and men have been transferred from the Northwest Territories to the Yukon. Five hundred and one recruits have been engaged during that period. During the past year 137 recruits were engaged. During the year 10 were released as time expired, 31 purchased their release, 14 were invalided, 7 were dismissed, 6 deserted and 1 died.

DOUKHOBORS DOING WELL.

Superintendent Griesbach, of "C" division, Battleford, says: "I am glad to see that the Doukhobors in the district are doing well. They had good crops and are apparently contented and prosperous, and happily up to the present time they do not seem to have been affected as their brethren further east were."

IN THE YUKON.

Commissioner Wood, of the Yukon force, remarking upon the agriculture in the Yukon territory, says that it has been carried on with great success. Hay grown in the Yukon sells for $100 per ton.

With few exceptions the Territory has been free from crime of a serious nature. The volume of business transacted in the Yukon during the past year has shown a substantial increase over preceeding years. Canadian goods have largely replaced similar articles of American manufacture, in fact with the exception of mining machinery Canadian firms have captured the whole trade of the Yukon.

EDWIN BURDICK'S WILL.

The Murdered Man Left His Wife Nothing and Nearly All to His Children.

Buffalo, March 13.—The will of the late Edwin L. Burdick, murdered in his home on Ashland avenue, Friday, Feb. 27, was made public to-day. In his will Burdick cuts off his wife, whom he was suing for divorce, without a cent. He leaves $2,500 to relatives, and the rest of his property to his three children, share and share alike. The will was made Dec. 8, 1902. Mr. Burdick names Chas. Parke and Risley Tucker, his business associates, as guardians of his three children.

In the petition for probate no definite idea of the correct valuation of Burdick's estate is given.

The Edinburg papers say that the emigration to Canada is likely to affect house letting in Edinburgh this year. More people are leaving Edinburgh for Canada this year than during the past quarter of a century.

THE FERNIE FREE PRESS,
FERNIE BRITISH COLUMBIA

SATURDAY, MARCH 21, 1903.

AN APPEAL.

The Fernie strike has now lasted nearly six weeks and for just two weeks the conciliation committee has labored incessantly to bring about a settlement. Whatever the result of their efforts may be they are entitled to the thanks of every man in the Kootenays for the diligence and thoroughness with which they have discharged their onerous duties. If unfortunately, they should fail in their mission, and we are far from anticipating such a thing, their report will be of the utmost value in informing the country on the points incidental to the strike and will have great weight in determining the future action of all parties concerned.

Meanwhile, unless we greatly mistake a crisis has just been reached in the negotiations. Both sides have made important concessions and appear to think they have gone as far as they ought. In consequence something like an "impasse" has been reached. It is a moment of danger and decision. In fact the psychological moment has arrived and the next step may either lead to an amicable settlement or precipitate a struggle of which no one can fortell the end.

At this crisis we wish most seriously to urge upon the consideration of both parties a factor which so far has been overlooked. It is that in this as in every strike there is a third party—the public—the people of Southern B.C. The interests of the latter far out-weigh in value and importance those of the immediate parties to the dispute. Probably $3,000,000 would cover the amount of cash invested by the Coal Co. and $150,000 a month, the wages of the employees. In the Kootenays more than $20,000,000 of actual cash has been invested in the smelters and metalliferous mines which are now tied up and how much in other industries and enterprises indirectly affected it is impossible to estimate. The Coal Co. employ about 1,000 men, the smelters and mines of the Kootenays not less than 6,000. Upon the operation of the coal mines a population of 4,000 at the very outside depend, on the other industries not less than 25,000. In addition it should be borne in mind that the Province has been passing through a period of great depression during the last two years which is just beginning to pass away and with the greatly increased prices quoted for copper, lead and silver there is every probability of an era of prosperity.

We urge a due consideration of these facts upon both parties and appeal in the most earnest manner for the exercise of forbearance on both sides in bridging the last difficulties which stand in the way of a settlement especially as there is evidence that many of the men are prepared to accept the concessions already made and rather than prolong the strike give a fair trial to the terms agreed upon so far between the concillation committee and the management. Let both remember that there is a third party interested whose time of passivity has already been unduly prolonged and whose reluctant but inevitable activity may deprive both parties to the dispute of some of their most valued privileges.

CHRIS. FOLEY ON POLITICS

MR. Chris. Foley, the well-known labor representative who is in Fernie on the strike commission, was interviewed by a FREE PRESS representative this week, Mr. Foley, like the rest of the commission, had nothing for publication on the strike situation. He was hopeful of an early and permanent settlement along the lines of a compromise policy on the part of the C mpany and the men. Mr. Foley is loud in his denunciation of the campaign put up against him by his chief opponent in the recent election at Burrard. He stated that the poverty of his party together with the split in the ranks of the socialists was responsible for his defeat. Speaking of Provincial politics Mr. Foley took a moderate view of the situation. He believed Col. Prior would not only meet the house and pass the estimates but that the Government would live through the session and probably to the end of its natural life. He was hopeful that an election would not be sprung soon, as the country was ill-prepared to stand the extra expense and he believed that an election would result in no better than existing conditions. The Province was not ready for elections on party lines. Mr. Foley when asked if the report that he would be a candidate in this field was true replied with a decided negative, that he was not running around the country looking for such an opening. He was confident however that a labor candidate would be in the field and if a good labor man with a leaning towards socialism could be found he had no doubt he would be elected.

E. C. Smith, M.P.P., in Town.

Mr. E. C. Smith, M.P.P. came into Fernie on Tuesday evening. Mr Smith is a gentleman well liked in Fernie and his many friends were pleased to see him. On the government situation at Victoria Mr. Smith did not claim to have any inside information. He felt confident the house would meet on April 2nd, but as to the outcome he was unable to predict. No doubt the members would agree to the passing of the estimates and it was possible that conditions would be so arranged that the wavering members would support the government through to the end of the session. He was unable to account for Mr. Joseph Martin's change of attitude on the day following the West Yale election, but at any event Mr. Martin and his party did not represent much influence at Victoria. Mr. Smith spoke of the great possibilities of this district, of the responsibility of his position as sole representative of two important constituencies and of his intention to urge their importance upon the government during the coming sesson. Speaking of the many shuffles that have taken place in the legislature since the last general election, Mr. Smith declared that he had not cast a single vote in violation of his election pledges, and that he had at all times stood by the principles upon which he was elected. He did not believe the next election would be run on party lines for two reasons. Both Conservative and Liberal parties were hopelessly split ; and the politics of B. C. were of too local interest to divide into two general policies. Each district was more interested in securing a local man who would well represent them than in sending down a man simply because he was a supporter of a party. Mr. Smith was unable to say whether he would be a candidate for election again. Conditions might naturally change before an election occurred and he considered it premature to speak of probable candidates at this juncture.

Fernie's Distinguished Visitors.

SPACE does not permit us to comment at length upon the Convention of this week. Many of the weighty matters discussed were of peculiar importance to this district and will prove food for thought in these columns for many weeks to come. Fernie has seldom enjoyed the honor of the presence of so many "big men" as during this week. The members of the Associated Boards of Trade are selected from the towns of Eastern B. C. who naturally send their brightest representatives. These men in council showed a harmony of purpose and a common interest in the whole of the territory represented, which augurs well for the outcome of their delibrations. All eyes are on Fernie this week. Eastern B. C. people turn this way to follow the important resolutions of the Association, while upon the conciliation committee are centred earnest, appealing looks from every district in this extensive Province.

Infringement of a Trade Mark

In an action in the High Court of Justice for Ontario, recently tried before Chancellor Boyd, at Toronto, the Slater Shoe Co., and Chas. E. Slater, president of Montreal, makers of the famous Slater Shoe, obtained a judgment forever restraining F. C. Wilkinson, a boot and shoe dealer, of Owen Sound, from advertising, exposing, or offering for sale or selling boots or shoes not made by the Slater Shoe Co., as "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods" or the Slater Shoe." The Chancellor, also ordered Wilkinson to pay the heavy costs of the action. The Chancellor, after hearing the evidence, decided that no one except the Slater Shoe Co., had a right to use the name "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods," "The Slater Shoe," or any similar names in connection with boots and shoes, and that Wilkinson had no right to use any name or names in connection with boots and shoes which might enable him to pass of a shoe not of the company's make, as being of their make, nor in any way to reap the benefit of the reputation which the Slater Shoe has acquired throughout the Dominion of Canada.

The Genuine Slater

Is positively the best shoe value offered for sale in Canada. You may include the United States and that will pretty near cover the world for fine shoe making. There are shoes sold elsewhere at $4 50 and $6 a pair that carry no more style, are no better fitting and will not wear as well as the genuine Slater Shoe at $4. "Why is it?" you ask. "Just because they are branded with an American stamp."

STILL MORE HOCKEY.

Exciting Game in which the Juniors hold down the Seniors.

The Junior Hockey club have been playing good hockey of late but when a game was arranged between them and the seniors it was generally thought that the latter would have an easy walk-over. The game on Tuesday evening brought out the best efforts of the junior players and revealed the fact that they are a swifter bunch than was previously supposed. J. Miller played goal for them while on the senior team, A. Taylor, F. Bean and J. McIntyre filled up the gaps caused by the absence of regular players. Mr. A. C. Liphardt refereed the game.

The game commenced with a rush and before a minute had elapsed Kastner scored from a long shot. During the remaining 29 minutes till half time both sides failed to find the net but Miller was called upon to stop more shots than was McKellar of the seniors. In the second half the juniors woke up and played a more aggressive game. Goals were scored at frequent intervals by both teams and at full time each had four to their credit. It was mutually agreed to play five minutes each way and during this time each added another goal to their account. Another five minutes each way was then played and neither side succeeded in making the lucky shot and the referee declared the game a draw.

The onlookers thoroughly enjoyed the keen contest throughout. For the juniors Miller, Kanouse and Elliott did the effective work, while for the seniors Kastner and Lafortune played in their old-time form.

A VERY SAD FATE

VICTIMS INCLUDE THE FATHER AND 2 CHILDREN

Three Members of an Icelandic Family in the Settlement of Hnausa Burned to Death—Home Caught Fire early Sunday Morning.

News of a shocking tragedy, resulting in the death of three persons, was received in Winnipeg on Monday from the Icelandic settlement of Hnausa, situated on Lake Winnipeg, about twenty miles north of Gimli.

At $ o'clock Sunday morning fire broke out in the house of Steffan Oddleifsson, who lives two miles south of Hnausa. The family were awakened by clouds of smoke pouring into the bedroom. Escape was almost impossible, but Oddleifsson caught up two of his children, and with his wife, clad in their night attire, rushed into the open air. The heartrending cries, however, of two remaining children affected him so that he rushed into the flames, which had by this time enevloped the house, to save his little ones. Just as he entered the structure the roof fell in, smothering him and his children. When the debris was cleared away nothing but the charred remains were visible.

The deceased settler was a member of the Independent Order of Foresters; the wife and two children survive. The terrible event has cast a gloom over the entire neighborhood, the victims being among the pioneer settlers.

Died Almost Together.

Ebenezer North, aged 70 years, a prominent contractor, and one of London's oldest residents, died very suddenly Saturday of heart failure. Mrs. North, his wife, also passed away on Saturday, eight hours after her husband's death. Mr. North had been in good health up to the time of his demise, and the shock was too much for his wife, who became very ill shortly after the news was broken.

He Wanted the Half.

An Irish stevedore while recently unloading a ship in New York, went to the hatchway and shouted down to the men in the hold: "Now, thin, how many of yez is down there?" "Five of us," was the answer. "Thin half of yez cum up aimmediately!" cried the stevedore.

Just Like Her Ladyship.

The wife of a well-known landlord in Cavan, Ireland, directed the steward of the estate to purchase a sow of a particular size and description at a local fair. On his return he burst into the drawing-room, where the lady was entertaining some guests, proclaiming, with a satisfaction he could not suppress' "I've been to the fair, me lady, and I've got a sow exactly of your ladyship's size and description.

Over 600 Lives Lost.

A despatch from San Francisco, says;—The steamer Mariposa arrived here from the Samoan Islands, bringing full particulars of the terrible hurricane which visited the Poumotu group of islands in January. Over 600 lives were lost and the damage exceeded over $600,000.

The Poumotu group of islands numbers about 100 island divisions. Relief measures have been issued, and everything has been done at Apia and other places in the Samoan group to relieve the suffering.

MANITOBA LEGISLATURE.

Thursday, March 12.

The member for Brandon spoke to a question of Privilege, reciting the history of the Brandon college's efforts to secure the rights of examinations. Mr. Greenway suggested that the Midland railway directors be compelled to do certain amount of work within six months from the granting of the charter, but Mr. Johnson refused to accept this idea. The attorney-general presented the government's school lands resolution. The House will sit Saturday.

Three deputations appeared before the legislative committee. A Portage la Prairie delegation asked for power to build a waterworks system; a Brandon delegation desired certain improvements to the waterworks of their city system sanctioned; a Selkirk deputation requested government assistance to pay off a debt of $20,000 contracted some years ago. Mr. Greenwood's Grain Act amendments will be reported.

Friday, March 13.

Several bills were put through committees and given their final readings. The committee on agriculture brought in a voluminous report and the method of presentation was criticised by Hon. Thos. Greenway. The report was allowed to stand.

Monday, March 16.

Attorney-General Campbell referred at length to a charge in connection with the purchase of a $10,000 normal school site. Resolutions concerning the administration of school lands and a commission to enquire into St. Andrew's drainage were introduced. The supplementary estimates, amounting to $166,389.37 were put through. They included $75,000 for an agricultural college and $56,200 for other buildings. The Redistribution bill is still in committee. Prorogation is expected to-morrow or Thursday.

Tuesday, March 17.

Hon. Mr. Rodgers, in the absence of the premier, brought in a bill granting a guarantee of $10,000 a mile to the Canadian Northern railway to secure the construction of 338 miles of branches in Manitoba. This would make the liability of the province in connection with the C. N. R. $22,000,000.

The report of the committee on public accounts was presented. Mr. T. C. Norris introduced a Grand Trdnk Pacific resolusion of appreciation. Several bills received third readings. Prorogation takes place this afternoon; a morning session will be held.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Thursday, March 12.

The House of Commons was opened yesterday, the most important subject mentioned in the speech being the announcement that a commission would be appointed to report on the transportation question in the west, of which Sir William Van Horne will probably be chairman. Several new members were introduced. Already Messrs. Bourassa and LaRiviere have given notices of motions for returns.

Friday, March 13.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier in an excellent speech reviewed the results of the Liberal policy in upbuilding Canada and maintaining the dignity of the nation. Col. Thompson moved the address in reply to the speech and Mr. Demers seconded it. Mr. R. L. Borden followed and the premier replied. The House adjourned until Monday.

Monday, March 16.

The Commons sat for one hour and a half to-day. There were a number of bills introduced. The first government answers brought down were a batch of seven bills from the minister of justice. One was an act which will allow the judges of the superior court to retire on full pay on attaining a certain age, say 75, and after a certain number of years on the bench. Others were departmental bills of more oe less local interest.

Tuesday, March 17.

The Ontario political crisis was brought up in the House by Mr. W. F. Maclean, who also intimated the government should relieve Sir Oliver Mowat of the lieutenant-governorship. Sir Wilfrid Laurier in replying paid a tribute to Sir Oliver's statesmanship, and scored Mr. Maclean for his discourteous methods. Sir William Mulock introduced his bill for the settlement of railway disputes; the Chinese tax will be considered Friday.

MARKETS.

(Compiled from The Commercial)

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

The trade in Manitoba wheat for the past week has for the most part been quiet, but with the advance in American markets on Wednesday a better inquiry started up, and although these markets have not held their advance; there is only a difference in the value of Manitoba wheat of ¼c. from a week ago. What is most striking is that the downright dullness of a week ago has been succeeded by eager inquiry. A week ago a buyer was scarcely to be found, but now buyers at what is considered to be the market price are not scarce. Holders are not ready sellers except at high prices. At the close of business Saturday we quote values: No. 1 hard, 73c.; 1 northern, 71c.; 2 northern, 69¾.; and 3 northern, 67c., spot or delivery, first half of March, and for May delivery, 1 hard, 75c.; 1 northern, 73c.; 2 northern, 71½c.; 3 northern 68½c., all in store, Fort William, Port Arthur or Duluth.

FLOUR—The market has declined 10c. per sack. Trade is good and mills are all busy. Best Hungarian Patent, $2 per sack of 98 lbs. delivered to the trade; Glenora patent, $1.85; strong bakers, $1.65, and XXX, $1.35. These prices are subject to casual trade discounts.

MILLFEED—Demand is good and prices steady. Bran is worth $15.50 per ton in bulk, and shorts $17.50.

GROUND FEED—Oat chop is steady at $21 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley chop, $16.50; mixed barley and oats, $18; chop speltz $16 per ton; chop, screenings, $12; oil cake, $25 per ton.

ROLLED OATS—Millers are asking $1.75 per sack of 80 lbs. for carlots. Jobbing lots are worth $1.85 per sack. Standard and granulated oatmeal is worth $2.40 per sack of 98 lbs.

OATS—Receipts are moderate and there is at no time a surplus in the market. There is some demand for oats from the east, which is helping to keep up prices. The fact that country roads are beginning to break up, thus preventing traffic, should be kept in view now in considering the oat market. Sone are of the opinion that this will produce higher prices. There will also in the near future be a good demand for best grades for seeding As compared with a week ago prices are to-day ½c. lower. We quote: No. 1 white in carlots on track are worth 31½c. per bushel; No. 2 white, 29½c., and feed grades, 27½c. Farmers' loads on the street are bringing 28c., and at country points about 25c. Brokers are asking 25c. to 27c. for carlots in the country.

BARLEY—The market is firm and the movement light. Dealers are paying 31c. to 32c. per bushel for feed grades on the street here.

FLAXSEED—Market nominal.

SPELTZ—The market is steady at 32c. per bushel of 50 pounds, delivered here.

HAY—Stocks are ample for all requirements. Fresh bailed in cars on track is worth $5 to $6 per ton and loose hay on the street $5 to $5.50.

VEGETABLES—Prices remain unchanged:—Potatoes, 40c. to 45c. per bushel; parsley, 40c.; cabbage, $20 per ton; imported celery, 90c. per dozen; carrots, 40c.; beets, 40c. per bushel; turnips, 25c. per bushel; lettuce, 40c. per dozen bunches; mint, 20c. per dozen bunches; dried onions, 60c. per bushel; parsnips, 1c. per pound.

POULTRY—Receipts are light and the maeket unchanged. Dealers are offering in a wholesale way 11 to 12½c. per pound for chickens, dressed; 9½c. to 10c. for ducks and geese, and 15c. for turkeys.

BUTTER—Creamery—City makers makers are asking 23c. for choice fresh made in 56 kound boxes.

BUTTER—Dairy—Receipts are very light and the market is quiet. A few lots of rolls are coming in occasionally, but there is no movement to speak of. There is still a considable quantity of held butter on hand here. Well packed butter, in rolls, is worth in a jobbing way 21c. to 22c. per pound net, with inferior qualities ranging down as low as 10c. and 12c. Tub butter will bring at jobbing houses as high as 18c. per pound if fresh and well packed, with a range of from 14c. to 18c. for the various qualities offering. These prices are nett, Winnipeg.

CHEESE—The market is quiet. Jobbers are supplying the retail tade with Ontario September stock at 14c. per pound, and with Manitoba at 13½.

EGGS—Receipts are increasing and the market has declined sharply. The recent mild weather which started the hens laying is largely responsible for this change in the market. Choice candled eggs are to-day worth 17c. net, Winnipeg.

DRESSED MEATS—The market for beef is quiet as there is still considerable frozen stock on hand. Mutton is also quiet for the same reason. Hogs are easier at packing houses and 6½c. is now the best price some of these will pay. We quote: Beef, city dressed, 6c. to 7½c. per pound; country stock, ½c. under these figures; mutton, 8c. to 9c.; lamb, 11½c.; hogs, 6½c.; packers' price, for best weights; heavies, 1c. less.

HIDES—There is but very little doing in the hide market. Receipts are light. We quote: Frozen hides, 5½c. per lb., less 5 lbs. tare; city butchers, 6½c. per lb. for No. 1s.; 5½c. for No. 2s, and 4½c. for No. 3s. Sheepskins, 30c. to 50c. each.

WOOL—Market nominal.

TALLOW—No. 1 tallow is worth 5½c. per pound delivered here, and No. 2 3½c.

SENECA ROOT—Market nominal.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—There is not much doing in beef cattle as receipts are light and the demand limited. We quote: Best steers, 4c. to 4½c.; butchers' ordinary, 3½c. to 4c., and from that figure quotations run down to 2½c., according to quality. Stockers, yearlings, $17; two-year-olds, $22 each.

The wreck was all cleared away at eleven o'clock, but by using the double track, traffic was not delayed.

The Long-Headed Slav.

One day a well-dressed gentleman entered a leading London jeweller's, and, describing himself as a Russian Count, said that he wished to purchase some valuable jewellery on credit, giving the name of a Russian Prince then resident in London, as a reference Inquiries proved satisfactory, and eventually the Count selected a fine diamond, priced £5,000. Then he asked whether the jeweller whom we may call X., could match it, saying that he wished to make a really handsome present to a lady. X. could not, but said he would try, pointing out that the cost of two perfectly matched stones would be considerable, probably £20,000. This the Count agreed to pay, and in the meantime was allowed to take away the gem, X. promising to try and find its match. The Count visits a big pawnbroker, Y., and, again giving references, pledges the diamond for a trifling sum. Y., in common with gem dealers and pawnbrokers receives a circular from X., describing the stone he requires to match another, and offering £8,000 for it. Y. bethinks himself of the recent pledge, and, naturally, finds on examination that it exactly complies with X.'s requirements. The Count returns to Y., redeems the diamond, and remarks casually that he would not mind selling it for a fair price. "How much?" "Not a penny less than £7,000." The pawnbroker boggles, the Count is firm, and seemingly indifferent, and eventually he departs with the money straightway to X., to whom he says that he has suddenly to return to Russia, and that X need not trouble any more about matching the stones. He, the Count, will pay for the one he has, and forthwith hands over £5,000. He really was a Count, but an adventurer, exiled on account of a disgraceful duelling affair, and one need hardly say that the Russian Prince was no party to this clever swindle. But it was one?

ESTIMATES $767,500,000.

What it Will Cost the British Nation This Year for Government.

Among the civil service estimates for 1903-4, issued Saturday morning appears the sum of $150,000 as a grant in aid of the expenses of the royal commission for the St. Louis exposition. A note appended explains that any further contributions decided upon will be provided for in the estimates of subsequent years.

Saturday's final batch of civil service estimates brings the total estimated expenditure for that branch of public service up to $225,391,265. With the army and navy estimates and the service of the national debt the total expenditure for the year will approximate $767,500,000, which is nearly $7,500,000 in excess of revenue to be expected from the existing sources.

Whitaker Wright Arrested.

Whitaker Wright, the London promoter, accused of fraud in connection with various financial corporations, wat arrested at New York on Sunday at the request of the London police upon his arrival on the French line steamer La Lorraine. With Wright was a young woman who was on the passenger list as Miss F. Browne, and whom Wright represented as his niece. Wright was at once turned over to the U. S. authorities and taken to Ludlow street jail.

The militia department has received a cable stating that thirty members of the South African Constabulary from Canada are stranded in London without any funds, and unable to pay their way to Canada. They called upon the high commissioner and laid their case before him.

Lord Strathcona communicated with the authorities here, and the matter was laid before the minister of the interior. Mr. Sifton has arranged to bring them to Canada as distressed Canadians. There is a fund in the immigration department for this purpose.

Bricked up Alive.

A singular story, which sounds more like fiction than reality, comes from Baku, says The London Express, to the effect that a stonemason who was at work in one of the main streets of the town was recently kidnapped and compelled to wall up a living woman. The mason was seized by two men, who drove up in a rubber-tired, covered carriage; his head was enveloped in a sack, and he was driven away rapidly in a direction he was unable to indicate. After a lengthy drive, which was accomplished at a good speed, the carriage stopped, and the workman was taken to an empty room in a house apparently some distance from the town. From a large hole in the wall the terrified face of a woman looked out, and a man in a mask ordered the mason to brick up the wall. Seeing that a terrible crime was about to be perpetuated, the man refused, but, on being threatened with a revolver, was compelled to do the work, and the wall was filled up. He was then again muffled in the sack, and driven back into Baku, where he was reagain muffled in the sack, and driven leased. The police were duly informed of what had taken place, but no traces of the kidnappers could be discovered, but the victim was released.

DESTITUTE NORSEMEN.

The Suffering is Widespread—State is Over-Burdened.

The destitution in Sweden for which relief has been collected in Winnipeg and forwarded to its destination is unfortunatley not confined to that part of Scandinavia. The distress is widespread in Finland also; and northern Norway is similarily afflicted. Active steps have been taken to afford relief, but there is need of further effort. The Scandinavians of Winnipeg are laying plans to do something for their Norwegian brethren also.

A private letter from Henry Bordewich, Unites States consul-general to Christiania, Norway, dated Feb. 16, published in the Minneapolis Journal, gives the following late and reliable information relative to the suffering in northern Norway.

"In regard to the subject of your letter, I may state that there never was a time in the history of northern Norway when substantial help for its poverty-stricken inhabitants would be more welcome than at present. The utter destitution among the fisher population of the Lofoten islands and Finmarken is lamentable. The poor little patches of potatoes and grain were a complete failure last year in most of these tracts, and through some as yet unexplained revolutions of nature, the cod, which from time immemorial has sought spawning grounds on the banks around the Lofoten islands, has so far not made its appearance this year. Intense cold in the Arctic regions or a change in the course of the Gulf stream may be the cause. In the place of cod, the seas and bays are filled with Greenland seals, which seize and devour all sorts of fish, so that the people do not even obtain what little is needed for their domestic use. The communities are in many instances so poor and debt-ridden that they are unable to give sufficient aid, and even the state seems just now to have more of a load than it readily can carry.

"The Lofoten fisheries bring 30,000,000 cod in good years, the average may be placed at 20,000,000. The fisheries begin after New Year's, and last until April 14. So far nothing has been caught. On night settings of 1,500 hooks and strings of nets reaching 600 feet through the sea, the catches are from nothing to six, according to daily telegrams.

DOCTOR SUPPLIES POISON.

Geo. Hossey in Jail at Philadelphia being Charged with Causing 34 Deaths.

The police authorities have directed the opening of thirty-four graves at Philadelphia, having secured evidence which leads them to believe that George Hossey, the negro herb doctor,' is responsible for at least that many deaths. Hossey is in jail as an accessory to the murder of William G. Danze, whose widow is charged with having administered to her husband slow poison furnished by the negro.

Detectives are searching for a white woman, who is alleged to have represented Hossey in the preliminary dealings with his patrons.

Miss Tellier Returns Small's Watch.

Miss Emma Tellier, for the love of whom Alex Small committed suicide Friday night at Windsor, Ont., has handed over to the police a beautiful watch, said to have cost over $100, saying it had been given to her by Small. Chief Willis has received from Small's father, who is well to do and lives at Maple Creek, N. W. T., a check for $200 to cover all expenses. The remains were sent to Maple Creek last evening. The watch will be sent to Small's father.

Use for the Whole Ox.

Not many years ago when an ox was slaughtered 40 per cent. of the animal was wasted; at the present time "nothing is lost but its dying breath." As but one-third of the weight of the animal consists of products that can be eaten, the question of utilizing the waste is a serious one. The blood is used in refining sugar and in sizing paper, or manufactured into door-knobs and buttons. The hide goes to the tanner; horns and hoofs are transformed into combs and buttons; thigh-bones, worth $80 per ton, are cut into handles for clothes brushes; fore-leg bones sell for $30 per ton for collar buttons, parasol handles and jewellery; the water in which bones are boiled is reduced to glue; the dust from sawing the bones is food for cattle and poultry; the smallest bones are made into bone-black. Each foot yields a quarter of a pint of neat's-foot oil; the tail goes to the "soup," while the brush of hair at the end of the tail is sold to the mattrass-maker. The choicer parts of the fat make the basis of butterine; the intestines are used for sausage casings or bought by gold beaters. The undigested food in the stomach, which formerly cost the packers of Chicago $30,000 a year to remove and destroy, is now made into paper. These are but a few of the products of abbattoirs. All scraps unfit for any other use find welcome in the glue-pot, or they do missionary work for farmers by acting as fertilizers.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. SCHUBENACADIE'S FAMOUS CURE; STORY OF ALICE M. PARKER.

How Bright's Disease was Vanquished by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mother of the Girl Tells the Story in Full.

Terrible Struggle With Most Deadly of Kidney Disease.

Step by Step the Monster was Driven Back Till Medical Science Triumphed

From the Mail and Empire.

Shubenacadie, Hants Co., N. S., Feb. 6.—(Special)—This little town, which has been brought out of obscurity and thrust into the broad glare of public notice by the almost miraculous cure of a young girl of Bright's Disease, takes its new-found fame with a sort of surprise. All the village knows Alice Maud Parker, all thought that a few months ago she was sick beyond the hope of recovery, that Bright's Disease had her in its clutches, and once that monster had fastened on a victim the only release was death; and all know that to-day she is a comely maiden of fifteen with health beaming from every feature and speaking in her every movement. And all have heard time and again that this remarkable change was brought about by that old reliable Canadian remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills. Yet it is with something like surprise that they hear the noise the cure has made in the outside world. The thing that has come as a revelation to the world has come on them day by day, so gradually that they fail to grasp its magnitude.

Beyond All Doubt.

But as to the cure itself. Of that there is no possible doubt. The facts are all easily obtained and can be sworn to, not only by the Parker family, but by a hundred other people who watched the girl gradually sinking into the grave, and saw her snatched from its very mouth.

It was Mrs. T. G. Parker that your correspondent found at home when he called. Mrs. Parker is a bright, intelligent woman, one whose brave and honest face tells that she could act quickly in an emergency, and whose every word and action show her honesty of purpose. Her face brightened when spoken to of her daughter's remarkable case.

"Yes," she said, emphatically, "my daughter had Bright's Disease in its worst stage. Two of the best doctors in the vicinity gave her up to die. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her." Asked to begin at the beginning, and tell the complete story of the case, she complied willingly, for she felt she said, that all the world should know how her daughter escaped from the supposedly fatal Bright's Disease, and that she owed her escape to Dodd's Kidney Pills, and to no other agency.

The Mother's Story.

"Alice," Mrs. Parker began, "was always a delicate child from her birth. When she was twelve years old she was not any larger than an ordinary child would be at eight years old. But like many other delicate children, Alice pulled along as delicate children will, till June, 1900. She was then thirteen years old. On July 7th she was taken seriously ill. Her eyelids swelled till she could hardly see, her legs swelled from her ankles to her knees. I took her to a doctor, and he said she had Bright's Disease, and could not live long. The doctor tended her for about six weeks, but as she grew worse, I stopped the doctor and tried different kinds of patent medicines. But all the time she got worse and worse. Her sufferings had by this time become so great that I again turned to the doctors. This time I tried another one. He had no hesitation in pronouncing her disease Bright's Disease of the worst kind.

Belt Measured 48 Inches.

"By this time Alice was in a terrible state. Her belt in health measured twenty inches. When she was at her worst it was forty-eight inches. Her flesh was hard and looked ready to burst. The doctor who was a very nice man, said he could not do anything. It looked as if all that was left for my daughter was to go on suffering till death came to her relief.

"She was in this terrible state when she chanced to read some testimonials as to what Dodd's Kidney Pills had done for others. She showed them to me, and I grasped at this last chance to help her, as a drowning man grasps at a straw.

How the Cure Began.

"She began taking Dodd's Kidney Pills on November 25th, and before she had finished the first box I could see a change for the better. By December 19th there was a marked improvement in her condition, but there was a large gathering across the small of her back and ready to lance. When it was opened it emitted a quart of matter, besides blood and water. Again we feared for her life, and again the doctor warned me that she might die at any moment. But my faith in Dodd's Kidney Pills had grown, and all through that long winter she took them regularly, and under the treatment continued to gain in strength till by April her back was well, and the swelling had all left her, though her urine when tested was milky and at times it would curdle.

"Still she was vastly improved, and I was greatly encouraged, and continued to give her the pills till November, when she appeared to be perfectly well and was growing faster than she had done for years."

A Nearly Fatal Mistake.

At this point Mrs. Parker nearly made a fatal mistake. She stopped the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills before the disease had been thoroughly cleared out of the system. There could only be one result. The Bright's Disease gradually regained its hold on the victim. "And," said Mrs. Parker, continuing, "to our great surprise, in January, 1902, the swelling came back.

"This time, though, I knew what to do. I sent at once for six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. She began at once to take them, and gradually the dread monster fell back before the great remedy. By the time she had taken four boxes the swelling began to leave. This time I made no mistake. I kept right on with the treatment till every vestige of the disease had disappeared, till my daughter was given back to me, not as the puny, delicate child she was before her sickness, but as you see her now, a big, strong, healthy girl of fifteen, full of vim and go, ready to hold her own in the struggle of life.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Did It.

"And all this I charge to Dodd's Kidney Pills, and to nothing else. The doctors told me my daughter could not live. When they knew I was giving her Dodd's Kidney Pills, they said that if they cured her it would be one of the greatest miracles in the world, for the like had never been in this province or anywhere else. And Dodd's Kidney Pills did cure her. I gave her 70 boxes of them altogether, but they gave her life in return, and I feel that I cannot say enough for Dodd's Kidney Pills."

The Summing Up.

This is the story of the famous Bright's Disease cure, as told by the mother of the sufferer herself. There can be no doubt as to the truth of the story. Scores of people corroborated it. The case was thoroughly diagnosed by skilled physicians, who unhesitatingly pronounced it Bright's Disease.

Neither can there be any doubt as to what caused the cure. It was Dodd's Kidney Pills. For, after the doctors had given the patient up for lost, Dodd's Kidney Pills were the only medicine used. The fact remains that Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured Bright's Disease. And if Dodd's Kidney Pills can and do cure Bright's Disease, which is the worst stage of Kidney Disease, how sure must it be that they are a sovereign remedy for those earlier stages of Kidney Disease from which thousands of the Canadian people are suffering.

A VERY SAD FATE

VICTIMS INCLUDE THE FATHER AND 2 CHILDREN

Three Members of an Icelandic Family in the Settlement of Hnausa Burned to Death—Home Caught Fire early Sunday Morning.

News of a shocking tragedy, resulting in the death of three persons, was received in Winnipeg on Monday from the Icelandic settlement of Hnausa, situated on Lake Winnipeg, about twenty miles north of Gimli.

At 8 o'clock Sunday morning fire broke out in the house of Steffan Oddleifsson, who lives two miles south of Hnausa. The family were awakened by clouds of smoke pouring into the bedroom. Escape was almost impossible, but Oddleifsson caught up two of his children, and with his wife, clad in their night attire, rushed into the open air. The heartrending cries, however, of two remaining children affected him so that he rushed into the flames, which had by this time enevloped the house, to save his little ones. Just as he entered the structure the roof fell in, smothering him and his children. When the debris was cleared away nothing but the charred remains were visible.

The deceased settler was a member of the Independent Order of Foresters; the wife and two children survive. The terrible event has cast a gloom over the entire neighborhood, the victims being among the pioneer settlers.

Died Almost Together.

Ebenezer North, aged 70 years, a prominent contractor, and one of London's oldest residents, died very suddenly Saturday of heart failure. Mrs. North, his wife, also passed away on Saturday, eight hours after her husband's death. Mr. North had been in good health up to the time of his demise, and the shock was too much for his wife, who became very ill shortly after the news was broken.

He Wanted the Half.

An Irish stevedore while recently unloading a ship in New York, went to the hatchway and shouted down to the men in the hold: "Now, thin, how many of yez is down there?" "Five of us," was the answer. "Thin half of yez cum up aimmediately!" cried the stevedore.

MANITOBA LEGISLATURE.

Thursday, March 12.

The member for Brandon spoke to a question of Privilege, reciting the history of the Brandon college's efforts to secure the rights of examinations. Mr. Greenway suggested that the Midland railway directors be compelled to do certain amount of work within six months from the granting of the charter, but Mr. Johnson refused to accept this idea. The attorney-general presented the government's school lands resolution. The House will sit Saturday.

Three deputations appeared before the legislative committee. A Portage la Prairie delegation asked for power to build a waterworks system; a Brandon delegation desired certain improvements to the waterworks of their city system sanctioned; a Selkirk deputation requested government assistance to pay off a debt of $20,000 contracted some years ago. Mr. Greenwood's Grain Act amendments will be reported.

Friday, March 13.

Several bills were put through committees and given their final readings. The committee on agriculture brought in a voluminous report and the method of presentation was criticised by Hon. Thos. Greenway. The report was allowed to stand.

Monday, March 16.

Attorney-General Campbell referred at length to a charge in connection with the purchase of a $10,000 normal school site. Resolutions concerning the administration of school lands and a commission to enquire into St. Andrew's drainage were introduced. The supplementary estimates, amounting to $166,389.37 were put through. They included $75,000 for an agricultural college and $56,200 for other buildings. The Redistribution bill is still in committee. Prorogation is expected to-morrow or Thursday.

Tuesday, March 17.

Hon. Mr. Rodgers, in the absence of the premier, brought in a bill granting a guarantee of $10,000 a mile to the Canadian Northern railway to secure the construction of 338 miles of branches in Manitoba. This would make the liability of the province in connection with the C. N. R. $22,000,000.

The report of the committee on public accounts was presented. Mr. T. C. Norris introduced a Grand Trdnk Pacific resolusion of appreciation. Several bills received third readings. Prorogation takes place this afternoon; a morning session will be held.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Thursday, March 12.

The House of Commons was opened yesterday, the most important subject mentioned in the speech being the announcement that a commission would be appointed to report on the transportation question in the west, of which Sir William Van Horne will probably be chairman. Several new members were introduced. Already Messrs. Bourassa and LaRiviere have given notices of motions for returns.

Friday, March 13.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier in an excellent speech reviewed the results of the Liberal policy in upbuilding Canada and maintaining the dignity of the nation. Col. Thompson moved the address in reply to the speech and Mr. Demers seconded it. Mr. R. L. Borden followed and the premier replied. The House adjourned until Monday.

Monday, March 16.

The Commons sat for one hour and a half to-day. There were a number of bills introduced. The first government answers brought down were a batch of seven bills from the minister of justice. One was an act which will allow the judges of the superior court to retire on full pay on attaining a certain age, say 75, and after a certain number of years on the bench. Others were departmental bills of more oe less local interest.

It is proposed to amend the criminal code by providing more severe penalties for those who take part in the immoral or indecent plays that occasionally are presented in large cities.

Tuesday, March 17.

The Ontario political crisis was brought up in the House by Mr. W. F. Maclean, who also intimated the government should relieve Sir Oliver Mowat of the lieutenant-governorship. Sir Wilfrid Laurier in replying paid a tribute to Sir Oliver's statesmanship, and scored Mr. Maclean for his discourteous methods. Sir William Mulock introduced his bill for the settlement of railway disputes; the Chinese tax will be considered Friday.

MARKETS.

(Compiled from The Commercial)

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

The trade in Manitoba wheat for the past week has for the most part been quiet, but with the advance in American markets on Wednesday a better inquiry started up, and although these markets have not held their advance; there is only a difference in the value of Manitoba wheat of ¾c. from a week ago. What is most striking is that the downright dullness of a week ago has been succeeded by eager inquiry. A week ago a buyer was scarcely to be found, but now buyers at what is considered to be the market price are not scarce. Holders are not ready sellers except at high prices. At the close of business Saturday we quote values: No. 1 hard, 73c.; 1 northern, 71c.; 2 northern, 69¾.; and 3 northern, 67c., spot or delivery, first half of March, and for May delivery, 1 hard, 75c.; 1 northern, 73c.; 2 northern, 71¼c.; 3 northern 68¼c., all in store, Fort William, Port Arthur or Duluth.

FLOUR—The market has declined 10c. per sack. Trade is good and mills are all busy. Best Hungarian Patent, $2 per sack of 98 lbs. delivered to the trade; Glenora patent, $1.85; strong bakers, $1.65, and XXX, $1.35. These prices are subject to casual trade discounts.

MILLFEED—Demand is good and prices steady. Bran is worth $15.50 per ton in bulk, and shorts $17.50.

GROUND FEED—Oat chop is steady at $21 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley chop, $16.50; mixed barley and oats, $18; chop speltz $16 per ton; chop, screenings, $12; oil cake, $25 per ton.

ROLLED OATS—Millers are asking $1.75 per sack of 80 lbs. for carlots. Jobbing lots are worth $1.85 per sack. Standard and granulated oatmeal is worth $2.40 per sack of 98 lbs.

OATS—Receipts are moderate and there is at no time a surplus in the market. There is some demand for oats from the east, which is helping to keep up prices. The fact that country roads are beginning to break up, thus preventing traffic, should be kept in view now in considering the oat market. Sone are of the opinion that this will produce higher prices. There will also in the near future be a good demand for best grades for seeding As compared with a week ago prices are to-day ½c. lower. We quote: No. 1 white in carlots on track are worth 31½c. per bushel; No. 2 white, 29½c., and feed grades, 27½c. Farmers' loads on the street are bringing 28c., and at country points about 25c. Brokers are asking 25c. to 27c. for carlots in the country.

BARLEY—The market is firm and the movement light. Dealers are paying 31c. to 32c. per bushel for feed grades on the street here.

FLAXSEED—Market nominal.

SPELTZ—The market is steady at 32c. per bushel of 50 pounds, delivered here.

HAY—Stocks are ample for all requirements. Fresh bailed in cars on track is worth $5 to $6 per ton and loose hay on the street $5 to $5.50.

VEGETABLES—Prices remain unchanged:—Potatoes, 40c. to 45c. per bushel; parsley, 40c.; cabbage, $20 per ton; imported celery, 90c. per dozen; carrots, 40c.; beets, 40c. per bushel; turnips, 25c. per bushel; lettuce, 40c. per dozen bunches; mint, 20c. per dozen bunches; dried onions, 60c. per bushel; parsnips, 1c. per pound.

POULTRY—Receipts are light and the maeket unchanged. Dealers are offering in a wholesale way 11 to 12½c. per pound for chickens, dressed; 9½c. to 10c. for ducks and geese, and 15c. for turkeys.

BUTTER—Creamery—City makers makers are asking 23c. for choice fresh made in 56 kound boxes.

BUTTER—Dairy—Receipts are very light and the market is quiet. A few lots of rolls are coming in occasionally, but there is no movement to speak of. There is still a considable quantity of held butter on hand here. Well packed butter, in rolls, is worth in a jobbing way 21c. to 22c. per pound net, with inferior qualities ranging down as low as 10c. and 12c. Tub butter will bring at jobbing houses as high as 18c. per pound if fresh and well packed, with a range of from 14c. to 18c. for the various qualities offering. These prices are nett, Winnipeg.

CHEESE—The market is quiet. Jobbers are supplying the retail tade with Ontario September stock at 14c. per pound, and with Manitoba at 13½.

EGGS—Receipts are increasing and the market has declined sharply. The recent mild weather which started the hens laying is largely responsible for this change in the market. Choice candled eggs are to-day worth 17c. net, Winnipeg.

DRESSED MEATS—The market for beef is quiet as there is still considerable frozen stock on hand. Mutton is also quiet for the same reason. Hogs are easier at packing houses and 6½c. is now the best price some of these will pay. We quote: Beef, city dressed, 6c. to 7½c. per pound; country stock, ½c. under these figures; mutton, 8c. to 9c.; lamb, 11½c.; hogs, 6½c.; packers' price, for best weights; heavies, 1c. less.

HIDES—There is but very little doing in the hide market. Receipts are light. We quote: Frozen hides, 5½c. per lb., less 5 lbs. tare; city butchers, 6¼c. per lb. for No. 1s.; 5¼c. for No. 2s, and 4¼c. for No. 3s. Sheepskins, 30c. to 50c. each.

WOOL—Market nominal.

TALLOW—No. 1 tallow is worth 5½c. per pound delivered here, and No. 2 8½c.

SENECA ROOT—Market nominal.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—There is not much doing in beef cattle as receipts are light and the demand limited. We quote: Best steers, 4c. to 4½c.; butchers' ordinary, 3½c. to 4c., and from that figure quotations run down to 2½c., according to quality. Stockers, yearlings, $17; two-year-olds, $22 each.

The wreck was all cleared away at eleven o'clock, but by using the double track, traffic was not delayed.

The Long-Headed Slav.

One day a well-dressed gentleman entered a leading London jeweller's, and, describing himself as a Russian Count, said that he wished to purchase some valuable jewellery on credit, giving the name of a Russian Prince then resident in London, as a reference Inquiries proved satisfactory, and eventually the Count selected a fine diamond, priced £5,000. Then he asked whether the jeweller whom we may call X., could match it, saying that he wished to make a really handsome present to a lady. X. could not, but said he would try, pointing out that the cost of two perfectly matched stones would be considerable, probably £20,000. This the Count agreed to pay, and in the meantime was allowed to take away the gem, X. promising to try and find its match. The Count visits a big pawnbroker, Y., and, again giving references, pledges the diamond for a trifling sum. Y., in common with gem dealers and pawnbrokers receives a circular from X., describing the stone he requires to match another, and offering £8,000 for it. Y. bethinks himself of the recent pledge, and, naturally, finds on examination that it exactly complies with X.'s requirements. The Count returns to Y., redeems the diamond, and remarks casually that he would not mind selling it for a fair price. "How much?" "Not a penny less than £7,000." The pawnbroker boggles, the Count is firm, and seemingly indifferent, and eventually he departs with the money straightway to X., to whom he says that he has suddenly to return to Russia, and that X need not trouble any more about matching the stones. He, the Count, will pay for the one he has, and forthwith hands over £5,000. He really was a Count, but an adventurer, exiled on account of a disgraceful duelling affair, and one need hardly say that the Russian Prince was no party to this clever swindle. But it was one?

ESTIMATES $767,500,000.

What it Will Cost the British Nation This Year for Government.

Among the civil service estimates for 1903-4, issued Saturday morning appears the sum of $150,000 as a grant in aid of the expenses of the royal commission for the St. Louis exposition. A note appended explains that any further contributions decided upon will be provided for in the estimates of subsequent years.

Saturday's final batch of civil service estimates brings the total estimated expenditure for that branch of public service up to $225,391,265. With the army and navy estimates and the service of the national debt the total expenditure for the year will approximate $767,500,000, which is nearly $7,500,000 in excess of revenue to be expected from the existing sources.

Whitaker Wright Arrested.

Whitaker Wright, the London promoter, accused of fraud in connection with various financial corporations, wat arrested at New York on Sunday at the request of the London police upon his arrival on the French line steamer La Lorraine. With Wright was a young woman who was on the passenger list as Miss F. Browne, and whom Wright represented as his niece. Wright was at once turned over to the U. S. authorities and taken to Ludlow street jail.

The president promised to take the matter to congress and use his influence to secure the sale.

Margaret Shepherd Dead.

Detroit, Mich., March 13.—It has just been learned that Margaret L. Shepherd, the alleged ex-nun and anti-Catholic lecturer, died in Detroit at the Harper hospital, March 8, after an illness of four weeks. The woman suffered with cancer and died a few minutes after being taken from the operating table at the hospital. She had recently returned from Australia, having spent three years on lecture platforms.

Stranded in London.

William Rose, who lived alone on William street, London, Ont., was found dead in bed Friday night.

The militia department has received a cable stating that thirty members of the South African Constabulary from Canada are stranded in London without any funds, and unable to pay their way to Canada. They called upon the high commissioner and laid their case before him.

Lord Strathcona communicated with the authorities here, and the matter was laid before the minister of the interior. Mr. Sifton has arranged to bring them to Canada as distressed Canadians. There is a fund in the immigration department for this purpose.

Bricked up Alive.

A singular story, which sounds more like fiction than reality, comes from Baku, says The London Express, to the effect that a stonemason who was at work in one of the main streets of the town was recently kidnapped and compelled to wall up a living woman. The mason was seized by two men, who drove up in a rubber-tired, covered carriage; his head was enveloped in a sack, and he was driven away rapidly in a direction he was unable to indicate. After a lengthy drive, which was accomplished at a good speed, the carriage stopped, and the workman was taken to an empty room in a house apparently some distance from the town. From a large hole in the wall the terrified face of a woman looked out, and a man in a mask ordered the mason to brick up the wall. Seeing that a terrible crime was about to be perpetuated, the man refused, but, on being threatened with a revolver, was compelled to do the work, and the wall was filled up. He was then again muffled in the sack, and driven back into Baku, where he was again muffled in the sack, and driven leased. The police were duly informed of what had taken place, but no traces of the kidnappers could be discovered, but the victim was released.

DESTITUTE NORSEMEN.

The Suffering is Widespread—State is Over-Burdened.

The destitution in Sweden for which relief has been collected in Winnipeg and forwarded to its destination is unfortunatley not confined to that part of Scandinavia. The distress is widespread in Finland also; and northern Norway is similarily afflicted. Active steps have been taken to afford relief, but there is need of further effort. The Scandinavians of Winnipeg are laying plans to do something for their Norwegian brethren also.

A private letter from Henry Bordewich, Unites States consul-general to Christiania, Norway, dated Feb. 16, published in the Minneapolis Journal, gives the following late and reliable information relative to the suffering in northern Norway.

"In regard to the subject of your letter, I may state that there never was a time in the history of northern Norway when substantial help for its poverty-stricken inhabitants would be more welcome than at present. The utter destitution among the fisher population of the Lofoten islands and Finmarken is lamentable. The poor little patches of potatoes and grain were a complete failure last year in most of these tracts, and through some as yet unexplained revolutions of nature, the cod, which from time immemorial has sought spawning grounds on the banks around the Lofoten islands, has so far not made its appearance this year. Intense cold in the Arctic regions or a change in the course of the Gulf stream may be the cause. In the place of cod, the seas and bays are filled with Greenland seals, which seize and devour all sorts of fish, so that the people do not even obtain what little is needed for their domestic use. The communities are in many instances so poor and debt-ridden that they are unable to give sufficient aid, and even the state seems just now to have more of a load than it readily can carry.

"The Lofoten fisheries bring 30,000,000 cod in good years, the average may be placed at 20,000,000. The fisheries begin after New Year's, and last until April 14. So far nothing has been caught. On night settings of 1,500 hooks and strings of nets reaching 600 feet through the sea, the catches are from nothing to six, according to daily telegrams.

DOCTOR SUPPLIES POISON.

Geo. Hossey in Jail at Philadelphia being Charged with Causing 34 Deaths.

The police authorities have directed the opening of thirty-four graves at Philadelphia, having secured evidence which leads them to believe that George Hossey, the negro herb doctor,' is responsible for at least that many deaths. Hossey is in jail as an accessory to the murder of William G. Danze, whose widow is charged with having administered to her husband slow poison furnished by the negro.

Detectives are searching for a white woman, who is alleged to have represented Hossey in the preliminary dealings with his patrons.

Miss Tellier Returns Small's Watch.

Miss Emma Tellier, for the love of whom Alex Small committed suicide Friday night at Windsor, Ont., has handed over to the police a beautiful watch, said to have cost over $100, saying it had been given to her by Small. Chief Willis has received from Small's father, who is well to do and lives at Maple Creek, N. W. T., a check for $200 to cover all expenses. The remains were sent to Maple Creek last evening. The watch will be sent to Small's father.

Use for the Whole Ox.

Not many years ago when an ox was slaughtered 40 per cent. of the animal was wasted; at the present time "nothing is lost but its dying breath." As but one-third of the weight of the animal consists of products that can be eaten, the question of utilizing the waste is a serious one. The blood is used in refining sugar and in sizing paper, or manufactured into door-knobs and buttons. The hide goes to the tanner; horns and hoofs are transformed into combs and buttons; thigh-bones, worth $80 per ton, are cut into handles for clothes brushes; fore-leg bones sell for $30 per ton for collar buttons, parasol handles and jewellery; the water in which bones are boiled is reduced to glue; the dust from sawing the bones is food for cattle and poultry; the smallest bones are made into bone-black. Each foot yields a quarter of a pint of neat's-foot oil; the tail goes to the "soup," while the brush of hair at the end of the tail is sold to the mattrass-maker. The choicer parts of the fat make the basis of butterine; the intestines are used for sausage casings or bought by gold beaters. The undigested food in the stomach, which formerly cost the packers of Chicago $30,000 a year to remove and destroy, is now made into paper. These are but a few of the products of abbattoirs. All scraps unfit for any other use find welcome in the glue-pot, or they do missionary work for farmers by acting as fertilizers.

For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Out of Sorts.—Symptoms, Headache, loss of appetite, furred tongue, and general indisposition. These symptoms, if neglected, develop into acute disease. It is a trite saying that an "ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and a little attention to this point may save months of sickness and large doctors bills. For this complaint take from two to three of Parmelee's Vegetor's bills. For this complaint take two for three nights in succession, and a cure will be effected.

SCHUBENACADIE'S FAMOUS CURE; STORY OF ALICE M. PARKER.

How Bright's Disease was Vanquished by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mother of the Girl Tells the Story in Full.

Terrible Struggle With Most Deadly of Kidney Disease.

Step by Step the Monster was Driven Back Till Medical Science Triumphed

From the Mail and Empire.

Shubenacadie, Hants Co., N. S., Feb. 6.—(Special)—This little town, which has been brought out of obscurity and thrust into the broad glare of public notice by the almost miraculous cure of a young girl of Bright's Disease, takes its new-found fame with a sort of surprise. All the village knows Alice Maud Parker, all thought that a few months ago she was sick beyond the hope of recovery, that Bright's Disease had her in its clutches, and once that monster had fastened on a victim the only release was death; and all know that to-day she is a comely maiden of fifteen with health beaming from every feature and speaking in her every movement. And all have heard time and again that this remarkable change was brought about by that old reliable Canadian remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills. Yet it is with something like surprise that they hear the noise the cure has made in the outside world. The thing that has come as a revelation to the world has come on them day by day, so gradually that they fail to grasp its magnitude.

Beyond All Doubt.

But as to the cure itself. Of that there is no possible doubt. The facts are all easily obtained and can be sworn to, not only by the Parker family, but by a hundred other people who watched the girl gradually sinking into the grave, and saw her snatched from its very mouth.

It was Mrs. T. G. Parker that your correspondent found at home when he called. Mrs. Parker is a bright, intelligent woman, one whose brave and honest face tells that she could act quickly in an emergency, and whose every word and action show her honesty of purpose. Her face brightened when spoken to of her daughter's remarkable case.

"Yes," she said, emphatically, "my daughter had Bright's Disease in its worst stage. Two of the best doctors in the vicinity gave her up to die. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her." Asked to begin at the beginning, and tell the complete story of the case, she complied willingly, for she felt she said, that all the world should know how her daughter escaped from the supposedly fatal Bright's Disease, and that she owed her escape to Dodd's Kidney Pills, and to no other agency.

The Mother's Story.

"Alice," Mrs. Parker began, "was always a delicate child from her birth. When she was twelve years old she was not any larger than an ordinary child would be at eight years old. But like many other delicate children, Alice pulled along as delicate children will, till June, 1900. She was then thirteen years old. On July 7th she was taken seriously ill. Her eyelids swelled till she could hardly see, her legs swelled from her ankles to her knees. I took her to a doctor, and he said she had Bright's Disease, and could not live long. The doctor tended her for about six weeks, but as she grew worse, I stopped the doctor and tried different kinds of patent medicines. But all the time she got worse and worse. Her sufferings had by this time become so great that I again turned to the doctors. This time I tried another one. He had no hesitation in pronouncing her disease Bright's Disease of the worst kind.

Belt Measured 48 Inches.

"By this time Alice was in a terrible state. Her belt in health measured twenty inches. When she was at her worst it was forty-eight inches. Her flesh was hard and looked ready to burst. The doctor who was a very nice man, said he could not do anything. It looked as if all that was left for my daughter was to go on suffering till death came to her relief.

"She was in this terrible state when she chanced to read some testimonials as to what Dodd's Kidney Pills had done for others. She showed them to me, and I grasped at this last chance to help her, as a drowning man grasps at a straw.

How the Cure Began.

"She began taking Dodd's Kidney Pills on November 25th, and before she had finished the first box I could see a change for the better. By December 19th there was a marked improvement in her condition, but there was a large gathering across the small of her back and ready to lance. When it was opened it emitted a quart of matter, besides blood and water. Again we feared for her life, and again the doctor warned me that she might die at any moment. But my faith in Dodd's Kidney Pills had grown, and all through that long winter she took them regularly, and under the treatment continued to gain in strength till by April her back was well, and the swelling had all left her, though her urine when tested was milky and at times it would curdle.

"Still she was vastly improved, and I was greatly encouraged, and continued to give her the pills till November, when she appeared to be perfectly well and was growing faster than she had done for years."

A Nearly Fatal Mistake.

At this point Mrs. Parker nearly made a fatal mistake. She stopped the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills before the disease had been thoroughly cleared out of the system. There could only be one result. The Bright's Disease gradually regained its hold on the victim. "And," said Mrs. Parker, continuing, "to our great surprise, in January, 1902, the swelling came back.

"This time, though, I knew what to do. I sent at once for six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. She began at once to take them, and gradually the dread monster fell back before the great remedy. By the time she had taken four boxes the swelling began to leave. This time I made no mistake. I kept right on with the treatment till every vestige of the disease had disappeared, till my daughter was given back to me, not as the puny, delicate child she was before her sickness, but as you see her now, a big, strong, healthy girl of fifteen, full of vim and go, ready to hold her own in the struggle of life.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Did It.

"And all this I charge to Dodd's Kidney Pills, and to nothing else. The doctors told me my daughter could not live. When they knew I was giving her Dodd's Kidney Pills, they said that if they cured her it would be one of the greatest miracles in the world, for the like had never been in this province or anywhere else. And Dodd's Kidney Pills did cure her. I gave her 70 boxes of them altogether, but they gave her life in return, and I feel that I cannot say enough for Dodd's Kidney Pills."

The Summing Up.

This is the story of the famous Bright's Disease cure, as told by the mother of the sufferer herself. There can be no doubt as to the truth of the story. Scores of people corroborated it. The case was thoroughly diagnosed by skilled physicians, who unhesitatingly pronounced it Bright's Disease.

Neither can there be any doubt as to what caused the cure. It was Dodd's Kidney Pills. For, after the doctors had given the patient up for lost, Dodd's Kidney Pills were the only medicine used. The fact remains that Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured Bright's Disease. And if Dodd's Kidney Pills can and do cure Bright's Disease, which is the worst stage of Kidney Disease, how sure must it be that they are a sovereign remedy for those earlier stages of Kidney Disease from which thousands of the Canadian people are suffering.

trans-continental railroads of Canada ultimately extending their lines of railway to the Pacific coast, and in view of the present financial position of the province, it is inadvisable for the Province of British Columbia to subsidize the building of any such railroads.

The majority of the delegates spoke strongly in favor of the resolution and their remarks reflected on the past actions of the Government in giving away much valuable land in the Province. The President and Mr. Harvey were the only two to venture a word in support of the principle of subsidizing and the motion was passed unanimiously. Mr. Brown of Greenwood in his remarks referred to the recent attempt of the C.P.R. to grab a large tract on the west side of the Elk in this district on the plea that sufficient contiguous lands could not be obtained along the Columbia and Western to satisfy the subsidy clause in the charter.

The Daily mail service on the Crow's Nest was next grappled with. Complaints were made by many delegates on other defective features as well and Messrs. Beer D. Ross and Harvey were elected a committee to draw up a resolution dealing with the details. Later on in the day the committee presented a resolution which was carried. It asks the postmaster general to institute a daily mail service on the Crow's Nest and to appoint a resident postoffice inspector for the district.

On Thursday afternoon the lack of a county court registrar and a Judge of the small debts court of the Fernie District was strongly set forth by W. R. Ross who moved a resolution calling upon the government to rectify these grievances and the attention of the government was also directed to the many neglected wants of the District in the way of roads and other public works. Mr Bentley on seconding the motion particularly referred to the lack of transportation facili ies. The motion was unanimously passed.

Mr. W. R. Ross in moving the next resolution that any special convention called by the executive of the Associated Boards of Trade be considered impe ative by the different Boards, referred to the attitude of the different boards last year when they neglected to send delegates to a meeting called by the President for the purpose of offering their aid towards bringing about an amicable settlement of the then existing strike. Several delegates in defence stated that thy did not then recognize the gravity of the situation as it was the first strike, but that they now appreciated the vital importance of a prompt recognition of such a call and the motion was carried.

The Fort Steele delegates introduced a motion favoring cash subsidies by the Provincial government in the building of branch railway lines within the Province this was understood to particula ly refer to the Kootenay Central Railway and it met with no opposition.

The Cranbrook delegates introduced a motion asking for increased court facilities and an extra constable. The convention seriously objected to dealing with a matter of such local importance but it was allowed to stand.

A re o'ution introduced by Nelson del e gates that the Dominion Government be requested to introduce legislation providing for the immediate investigation of industrial disputes, was passed and this was followed by a Kaslo resolution urging the same body to appoint a commission to investigate the operation of the compulsory arbitration law in New Zealand with a view to applying some similar measure in Canada. This was also carried.

The most important matter of business was reserved till the last and from 4 o'clock to 9 o'clock with an intermis sion of one hour a warm discussion took place. It was over the question of fuel supply introduced by the Greenwood delegates. Their resolution asked that the Dominion Government open up and operate their coal reserve at Morrissey. This was considered by the majority of the delegates to be a step too far in advance and the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved that the Dominion Government be requested to throw open a portion of the Dominion reserve of coal land and that the same be leased with such safe-guards as will absolutely preclude now and in the future the possibility of their amalgamation with, or control by, the C.N.P. Coal Co. or any allied corporation and that the maximum price to be charged for coke be $3.50 per ton f.o.b. and the maximum price for 3-4 inch screen coal be $1.75 per ton f.o.b.

This measure is similar to the one sent to the Dominion Government last year with some changes, made necessary by the changed conditions.

After deciding to hold the next annual meeting at the town of Rossland and passing the usual vote of thanks the meeting adjourned.

On Thursday evening the Fernie Board of Trade tendered a complimentary banquet to the visiting delegates of the Associated Boards of Trade. The large dining hall of the Royal Hotel was taxed to its utmost and the excellent manner in which every detail was arranged reflected great credit on the management of the Board of Trade and on the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Tuttle. Three members of the Fernie orchestra supplied excellent music at intervals during the evening. About one hundred guests sat down to a sumptuous repast. Following was the menu for the evening:

The banquet was somewhat late in commencing owing to the evening session of the convention and it was after midnight before Mr. W. R. Ross, president of the local Board of Trade and toast master for the evening, rose to propose the health of the king.

TOAST LIST

1. "The King."
2. "The Associated Boards of Trade," G. O. Buchanan, G. S. Galloway, H. W. Jackson.
3. "The Dominion of Canada," J. A. Harvey.
4. "The Province of British Columbia," W. Blakemore, Duncan Ross.
5. "The Mining Industry," Thos. R. Stockett, jr., R. W. Grigor, Jas. Johnstone.
6. "Our Provincial Legislature," E. C. Smith. M.P.P., Hugh B. Gilmour, M. P P.
7. "Trade and Commerce," W. W. Beer, Noble Binns, John Hutchison.
8. "The Smelting Industry," R. R. Hedley, D. W. Moore.
9. "The Learned Professions," Rev. D. L. Gordon, J. R. Brown, W. F. Gurd, S. Bonnell.
10. "Our American Cousins," J. R. Pollock and H. F. Brandow.

12. "The Press," A. B. Grace, A. B. Wilcox, J. R. Wallace.
13 "Our Guests," H. Bentley.
14. "Our Host and Hostess."

The gathering included many of the brightest intellects of the interior of B. C. and many of the speeches made were gems of wit, logic and oratory. Mr. Buchanan referred in glowing terms to the progress made by the association and the great success of the present convention. He also touched lightly on local politics. Ex-President Galloway spoke of the future of the Province and of the interdependence of the coal and metalliferious industries. Mr. Jackson paid a hearty compliment to the town by saying the association had never been treated as well as by Fernie. Mr. Williams hore entertained the guests with a song.

Mr. J.A. Harvey made an excellent address. He referred to the patriotism of Canadians as shown under the burning African sun, and he deplored the fact that the Government had not suf ficently felt the importance of doing its share towards maintaining the defences of the Empire. If the old mother land did not safeguard Canadian interests sufficiently in the aproaching Alaskan boundary convention probably the Canadian Government on this account would have itself to blame. The late Cecil Rhodes was eulogized for the broad international system of education he had encouraged. but he thought the practical nature of the system on this side of the water superior to the more literary attainments of the Britisher. Mr. R. Coulthard followed with a song.

Mr. Blakemore made a capital fifteen speech. He said that the impression he formed when he first visited the province in 1897 had been intensified each year since, that in the value and extent of its natural resources, the beauty of its scenery and the salubrity of its climate it was nnequalled in the Dominion. With reference to the chief industry, mining, true it had recently been under a cloud this was due to several causes which had often been enumerated but were rapidly passing away and with the economical management now prevailing and the most perfect smelting in the continent there was undoubtedly a great future of prosperity and profit in the mining and smelting of the low grade ores of the province. With reference to the unfortunate labor troubles the situation called for the greatest forbearance on both sides. He had always been a friend of and a believer in organized labor but possibly of late years it had exceeded in some occasions the strict limits of justice and right and might have to be curbed. In the other hand capitalists must realize that the day for arrogancy or antocratic dealing with men had passed away and mutual courtesy and forbearance was to be the key note of their future relations.

Mr. Duncan Ross, who followed is a popular member of the Association. He is the editor of The Greenwood Times and a firm and persistent advocate of the importance and requirements of his District. He gracefully complimented the Fernie Board of Trade on the magnificence of their reception in Fernie. He went into the lumbering and fisheries of the Province and ended up by scathingly denouncing the Govt. the province of British Columbia has been under during the past few years, and eloquently pleaded for a government responsible to a regularly established party. Mr. J. A. Rennie then followed with a scotch song.

Mr. Stockett on behalf of the mining industry confined his remarks to the coal and coke industry. He dealt clearly with the development of the Crow's Nest Pass coal fields from their earliest days and he paid a glowing tribute to the pioneers who had overcome so many difficulties under the very unfavorable conditions then existing. He spoke with assurance of the future of the industry and of the ability of the company to supply the demands of the B. C. market.

Mr. Grigor, a member of the medical profession of Rossland, is a pleasing peaker and a deep thinker. He spoke of the wonderful advantages acruing from the solving of the problem of smelting low grade ores and predicted a great future for the province. He denounced the present system of government and urged strongly in favor of party politics.

Mr. Johnstone who followed is an old resident of Fernie and has many friends here. He referred to old associations and briefly dealt with the silver lead and boundary smelters.

Mr. Leitcher here favored the audience with a song.

Mr. Smith M.P.P, jokingly spoke of his "troublesome subject" but he come through the ordeal quite safely. He spoke hopefully of the future but refrained from entering into a detailed discussion on the political outlook.

Mr. Gilmour, M,P.P., for Vancouver, came out boldly and stated that if the government was no good it was the people's fault for electing them. Prior was an untried man and it was unfair to condemn him now. The opposition leader was not as good a man as Prior. If the coast members were to travel through the Kootenays we might have less difficulty in impressing upon the legislature our pressing needs which he knew we were not getting now. He paid a hearty compliment to Mr. Smith on his efficient work in the legislature and drew special attention to the securing of the B. C. Southern. He closed by coming out straight for party politics

Mr. Galloway then sang a song the chorus of which was taken up by the audience.

Messrs Pollock and Brandow briefly replied to the next toast.

Messrs. Beer, Binns and Hutchison spoke briefly on the subject of Trade and Commerce.

Mr. Hedley, of Rossland, who has had a very wide experience in the smelting business in many countries spoke with authority on the ores and their treatment in the Boundary country. He stated that the smelting industry had so improved that 5 years ago $8 ore was the lowest that could be worked with a profit, now $4 ore could be handled at a safe margin. He referred to Crow's Nest coke as second to none in the world.

Mr. Kanouse in introducing the "learned professions" indulged in a humorous preamble. Rev. D. L. Gordon delivered an impressive address along the lines of universal morality. He referred to the importance of keeping our legislative hall free from corruption and of being guided in all our dealings by principles based on business integrity.

Mr Brown made a happy response and ended by tendering his hearty thanks to the Fernie people for their hospitality. Mr. Gurd, lawyer of Cranbrook spoke briefly and Dr. Bonnell in imagination sawed off Mr. Hedley's leg and then got in a few slashes at the government, which he thought should be responsible to a party.

Mr. McKenzie accused Mr. Harvey of delivering his address but his impromptu reply to "The Ladies" proved that the committee had made no mistake in selecting Mr. McKenzie for this toast. Mr. S. Herchmer also suitably replied to the toast.

Mr. Wilcox, editor of the Phœnix Pioneer who arrived that evening, referred to the importance of his district and told some thing of the hardships of country newspaper work. Mr. J. R. Wallace also briefly acknowledged the toast on behalf of the Free Press.

Mr. Bentley in reply to "Our Guests" referred to the success of the banquet at Greenwood. He spoke of the growth of the association from its first inception and of the present unfortunate labor struggle in the Crows Nest collieries.

A hearty toast was drunk to "our host and hostess" after which Auld Lang Syne and God Save the King brought Fernie's most successful banquet to a close.

THE FIRST ALLOTMENT OF TREASURY SHARES OF THE Boundary Coal Mines Co.

Limited,

is now on the market at

Ten Cents per Share.

This Company has recently been organized to acquire, prospect and develop 2,560 acres of coal land in the heart of the west Fork of the North Fork of the Kettle River (Boundary District) coal basin.

DIAMOND DRILL

The Company purposes to instal a portable horse power diamond prospecting bore drill to test the measures at depth.

Situate as the property is, only 52 miles north of Grand Forks, B.C., should a workable seam of coking coal be struck at depth a magnificent home market is available for the entire output of coal.

THE STRIKE SITUATION.

Latest Returns Give a Majority for the Acceptance of Agreement.

A Vote Taken to Reconsider their Verdict---Fernie Rejects the Settlement on the Second Division by a Vote of 136-34. Michel Accepts Settlement by 139 to 15, and Morrissey by 62 to 28.

The latest developments in the strike situation indicate that a settlement is near at hand. The District Executive went up to Michel last night to again put the matter to a vote and a report this morning from that place gives the figures at 139 for and 15 against. A vote will be taken at Morrissey to-day and it is confidently expected that the former result will be reversed. It is expected that the question will again be submitted to a vote in Fernie early in the week.

The latest report from Morrissey states that the result of the vote there this afternoon was 62 for and 28 against.

The result of the polls are as follows:

	FOR	AGAINST
Michel	139	15
Morrissey	62	28
Coal Creek	34	136
Total	235	179

Majority for 56.

Since our last publication many incidents have been added to the history of the strike

Last Saturday night a report spread like wild-fire through the town to the effect that a settlement had been reached. The Commission confirmed the report. The executive of the District Union had agreed to the terms submitted as the best that could be got and were prepared to recommend the settlement to their respective unions, the acceptance of which would be only a matter of form. The manner in which this was agreed is explained in Mr. Keen's address.

The local union at Morrissey was the first to take the matter up and on Monday afternoon a vote was taken which to the utter surprise and bewilderment of all, turned down the proposed terms by an almost unanimious vote of 10 for and 113 against. The same evening a vote was taken at Michel which barely supported the proposition by 71 for and 60 against. After this it was hoped that Fernie, seeing the peculiar and inconsistent view that Morrissey union had taken would exert itself to make the vote almost unanimous for the settlement in order to give a necessary majority from the three camps, but the result of Tuesday's vote of 20 for and 165 against was a staggering blow to such hopes.

The commission keenly felt their disappointment. They met and decided that as they had accomplished what they had come for, viz., a settlement between Mr. Tonkin and the representatives of the miners, their services as a conciliation committee were no longer required as they were not here for the purpose of enquiring into subsequent quarrels between the union and their legally qualified executives. Consequently they disbanded themselves, handed in their expenses to the government and decided to stay on as private individuals to see if they could yet render more assistance.

A meeting of the miners was called by the conciliation commission for Wednesday morning in Princess Hall. The six members of the commission took their places on the platform accompanied by John Keen who at once took the chair and announced that in view of the fact that the executive committee (nine members) of District Union. No. 7, of W. F. of M., were not yet present that tne meeting exercise a little patience and wait for them, as he was anxious that they should be present before he addressed the meeting.

At length the whole district committee arrived with Mr. Dougherty and at once took seats on the platform with the conciliation committee when the chairmen said mainly as follows:

"Gentlemen: Our conciliation committee which I have invited you to meet and hear this morning were selected by a convention of some 300 men sent as delegates to Victoria, on Feb. 25 last, and which delegates represented in their time some 7,000 members of the Provincial Mining Association of B. C. Now gentlemen you see we are a committee sent here to do certain work and having done, are about to go back and report to those 7,000 men and to whom we are directly responsible and no one else. Let me now tell you how we have done our work since we arrived.

"First we met the district union with Mr. Dougherty and they presented us with their side of the dispute. We then went to General Manager Tonkin and heard what he had to say, and here I want to impress on your minds the fact that Mr. Tonkin insisted on seeing your local unions first, and failing agreement with them he was preferred to see the District Union, No. 7. To this the district union would not agree, but insisted that he would and should see them together. It took us two days to get them finally together as "locals" and finally each local saw Mr. Tonkin separately and when all three locals had been with him Mr. Tonkin met the district union, which district union was composed of the three locals combined.

"On Saturday, the 14th, a deal-lock arose and with it the question as to the power of the district union to settle on any terms. It was decided that the locals should return to their respective headquarters viz., Morrissey, Michel and Coal Creek and seek authority. This was done and on Tuesday another interview took place when it was stated authoritatively that the district union had power to settle the matter, subject only to the formal ratification of the locals.

"Negotiations were continued until another dead-lock occurred, when we immediately commenced to take evidence from the men who tendered their evidence under oath.

"We examined some 31 witnesses and elicited the fact that good wages were being earned in most cases and high wages in many cases, and in all cases much higher than in our matelliferous mines in West Kootenay. At length we got them together again at 2 o'clock on Saturday and after two hours work the differences were defined and we left Mr. Tonkin to go into the matter and we met againat his request to try for a final settlement.

"At 5 o'clock on Saturday evening, the 21st, we met and Mr. Tonkin raised and altered the points complained of and said, "That is the best I can do." Mr. Christopher, the president of the District Union, then consulted with his colleagues and rising in his place said, "Well gentlemen, on behalf of the District Union of the W. F. of M., I accept the terms" which statement was cheered by those present.

"Immediately afterwards Mr. Christopher made a motion that Mr. Dougherty and Mr. McAndrew be appointed to look after the interests of the miners in drawing up the contract for two years, Mr. Flumerfelt and I were nominated on behalf of the conciliation committee and Mr. Tonkin and Mr. Stockett acted for the company. This was agreed to.

"On Sunday we met at 10:30 and drew up the agreement, which I will read you presently, and it was approved and ordered to be reproduced in four copies and sent to the locals for ratification.

"It was approved at Michel and rejected at Morrissey and Coal Creek. I may say the agreement was drawn with the greatest care to provide for your welfare. I will now read it

"NOW THIS AGREEMENT WITNESSETH:—That for and in consideration of the several schedules attached hereto and made a part hereof, viz.: Schedules A B and C and for the further consideration of the following articles, viz:

Article 1. That the company shall pay the sum of three (3) dollars per day for all miners taken from piece working places, if taken from face to do company work.

Art. 2. That in any case where it may appear that a man is not being fairly treated, the company will meet, through the mine manager of the mine in question, a committee of Investigation, as provided by the statute of British Columbia. In the event of a non-agreement, the company, through its high officials, will discuss the question with the committee.

"Now you will see what you have gained by it:

1. Recognition of your unions.

2. The right to lease and buy lots for your union buildings.

3. That timber for your use shall be placed at the foot of rooms.

4. That no discrimination shall be permitted against union or non-union men by either party.

5. That a grievance committee shall investigate disputes between the bosses and the men.

6. That miners taken away from contract shall be paid miners' wages.

7. Track laid by miners shall be paid by company.

8. That men working in one room shall have preference in new rooms opened adjacent thereto.

9. The company insist on eight hours only for 8 hours pay.

10. The agreement shall be for two years with 60 days notice on either side.

11. That in the event of a better price being obtained for coal than $2 for run of mine, the wages shall be open for revision.

12. Some mines have pay increased considerably while others have in two or three cases suffered a slight reduction but on the whole all have gained considerably.

"Now this agreement is to be executed between the coal company and the men by the District Union, No. 7, W.F. of M., and as it has received the unanimous adoption by that district union I think you are honor bound to ratify it, and I urge you to do so when you meet again to reconsider it as I understand is your intention."

A careful comparison of the schedule accompanying the agreement with the rates paid by the company reveals the following information:—

COAL CREEK

In No. 1 mines the mining rate has been reduced from 60 to 55 cts., while in in No's. 2 and 3 mines the old rate of 60 cts. is unchanged. The yardage in levels, parallels and crosscuts in No. 1 has been reduced from $2.50 to $1 in No. 2 from $2.50 to $1.50 and No. 3 from $2.50 to $2 while the room crosscuts in all three remain at the old rate of 50 cents per lineal yard.

MICHEL.

In No's. 3, 4 and 8 mines the old mining rate of 55 cts. per ton is maintained, while in No. 5 mine the old rate is increased from 55 to 60 cts., the yardage rate in No. 4 has been increased from $1.85 to $2, in No. 5 the old rate is maintained on yardage with the exception of a reduction from $2.40 to $2 per yard on crosscuts between levels. In No. 3 mine the yardage in levels and parallels is raised from $1.40 to $1.75 and the crosscut rate between levels is increased from $1 to 1.75, all other yardage rates remain unchanged.

MORRISSEY.

The mining rate at No. I mine has received an increase of 10 cts. a ton, the old rate of 40 cts. being raised to 50 cts., while 3, 4 and 5 are offered the old rate of 55 cts., the yardage rate in levels and parallels in No. 1 mine has been reduced from $2 to $I, in No. 2 mine from $2 to $1.50 and in No. 3 mine from $2 to $1, while the rate for crosscutting between levels in No. 3 has been increased from $1 per yard to $1.50, all other yardage rates remain unchanged.

In all the mines of the three camps the rate for timbering to be fixed at $1 per set, with lagging and centre post when required. All timber and lagging will be delivered by company as near the workings as possible, and thereafter handled, framed and set by the miner. The old rate was 75 cts. and $I according to the mine.

Tracks with 16 lb. rails to be laid by miners, in levels and parallels and in rooms and inclines to be laid by miners after one length of rail from frog and switch is laid by company. In rooms a rate of 15 cents per lineal yard for single track, and a rate of 30 cents per lineal yard for double track will be paid for all track laid by miners. Company to deliver all materials as near the working place as possible and thereafter to be handled by the miners.

Company will build first section of chutes, miners to build thereafter, and will be paid a rate of 30 cents per lineal yard for all chutes built. Company to deliver all material to foot of chute.

Brushing: Clear foot wide, 5 cents per inch in depth per lineal yard; 12 feet wide, 10 cents per inch in depth per lineal yard. This is reckoned on a new system but it is practically the same rating as the old.

From a long list of wages offered by the company and from the old figures which were paid by the company we find that no changes have been made in day work except in the following instances:

Fire-boss increase from	$3.00	to	$3.25
Bratticemen " "	2.75	to	3.00
Hoistmen " "	2.50	to	2.75

General outside laborers increased from $1.75 to $1.80. This does not effect outside men who were earning $2.

No reductions were made in any day labor. Miners, timber-men and track-layers to be placed at their old $3 rate.

W. G. Gaunce, of Greenwood, secretary of the commission, followed and in an eloquent address showed the men that the vote against the settlement submitted to them represented only about 25 per cent. of the employees of the company. He had in his possession a large amount of manuscript covering the report of the commission and the evidence taken from miners who had volunteered to give evidence under oath re their average net earnings. This evidence did not favor the miners side. The Crows Nest Pass Coal Company presented 12 men who averaged $5.62 and 20 more who averaged $5.93 per day. Then the com picked out 20 of the worst paid men they could find and still this was not satisfactory to the District Board and the latter were invited to select a number of men for examination. They selected 15 men from Coal Creek, 1 from Morrissey and 2 from Michel, 18 in all, of the lowest wage earners among the miners. These men's statements did not show the number of shifts worked but their memorandum or memory were trusted for that data and the result of their investigation proved that those 18 men averaged a daily net earning of $3.70. This had convinced the District executive on the wage question.

Mr. Foley delivered a powerful address. He struck right out from the shoulder and spoke as he thought, regardless of what the men might think of him. He strongly censured the miners for going back on their district executive and said they had given a blow to unionism which it would take years to recover from. He stated that their brother unionists in other parts of the province and the public generally would not endorse their action. The strikers had practically won the fight. The recognition of the union was fully conceded by Mr. Tonkin and while all of their other demands had not been granted he believed the men should show a conciliatory spirit and a willingness to give and take, which they had not shown. He spoke very strongly against the agitators in their ranks; these men showed by their actions and utterances that they did not want a settlement on any terms. He had been prohibited from addressing them in their union hall and he reluctantly was forced to make these admissions in public. He urged the men to reconsider their decision, to break away from the influence of these few agitators who possessed the gift of the gab to some extent but were light in their upper storey, and to save their union from disaster. He showed them the fallacy of the idea that the Coal Company could be driven into submission and cited a similar case in Rossland, where the men, thinking they had the company "on the run" after they got their demands granted, still stood out on trivial matters. The result was that they lost what had been gained and Rossland, to-day, was one of the worst camps in the country. Agitators were the worst enemies to organized labor. He asserted that the miners had ample cause for striking, but believed at any rate that it was now their duty to accept the offer made by Mr. Tonkin who had conceded to most of their demands. Men should follow thinkers and not talkers. Young men who can pack their blankets and get out at any time should think of the position of their elder brothers who were settled here with their families. He pictured to them the probabilities of the future. One week might see a strong force of constables landed in Fernie, and a few more days the arrival of other coal-miners; the local unions would then stand alone and helpless. He referred to his past public experience and stated that he was prepared to out-live the bane of their condemnation as he had that of other labor organizations in the past because he was acting according to the dictates of his conscience. He referred to a report in the Morrissey Miner that he was looking for political honors in this constituency which he characterized as a lie. Before closing his able speech he highly eulogized his brother commissioners and the members of the District Executive.

Mr. Flumerfelt gave a very able address. He represents large metalliferous industries at Grand Forks, and while he

G. T. R. ACCIDENT

SEVERAL PASSENGERS INJURED NEAR GUELPH.

Went Over the Trestle and a Baby was Drowned—List of the Injured—Engine did not Leave the Track.

One of the most serious accidents which has occurred on the Wellington, Grey and Bruce branch of the Grand Trunk took place about 11.30 Wednesday morning, seven miles north of Guelph. The morning train north, with Conductor Lillis and Engineer Hazlewood, left Guelph about 11 o'clock, and was running at its usual speed, when one of the trucks jumped the track; then over went the coaches. The last coach went off over a trestle above Acre, taking a drop of ten feet into the water, which was swollen by the spring thaw, and filled the car one to two feet deep when it turned on its side. The mail car was almost completely turned over. The engine did not leave the track.

The passengers in the last coach suffered the most seriously. The injured passengers made their exit, when the coaches stopped rolling, out of the windows and doors. The slightly injured in the rear coach quickly helped the injured, and were assisted by those from other coaches and farmers in the neighborhood. The mail clerk, Andrew Cheney, was very seriously injured, his chest being crushed in. He was sent to the Fergus hospital. The only passengers seriously injured in the last car was Mr. F. Farrelley, of Peel township, the stove in the smoker fell over on him and he was badly burned. He was taken to Fergus.

WHERE MOST SUFFERED.

It was in the back car that the most serious injuries were sustained. This coach landed on its side in the creek and swampy ground, some fifty feet from the track. The passengers were piled in a heap in the bottom after being bumped round in the fall and few escaped without severe scratches and bruises. A family named Hustin, of Thessalon, were on their way to Kincardine. A two-year-old boy got caught under the seat and before the baby's injured parents could acquaint any one with the fact that there was a little one missing it was drowned. The father was badly hurt about the face, and the mother was almost drowned and is suffering severely from the shock. They both were sent to Fergus. All the passengers had their clothes torn and their faces besmirched and altogether presented a woe-begone appearance.

THE INJURED.

Following were seriously hurt:

Conductor Lillis, Brantford, seriously injured.

Mail Clerk Cheney, Hamilton, seriously injured.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hustin, Thessalon, seriously injured, one of their children killed and the other not expected to live.

Judge Jamieson, Guelph, arm broken.

Miss Gibson, Guelph, arm broken.

Wm. Brennen, 503 Napier street, Hamilton, seriously injured.

Several others were slightly bruised.

Lilian Irvin, the infant, travelling with her parents of Niagara Falls, N. Y., died from injuries at a farm house near the scene of the wreck.

Emigrants Too Numerous.

Thos. Southworth, commissioner of immigration, received a cable from W. T. R. Preston stating that there was not sufficient steamship accommodation in sight to meet the demands of emigrants who wished to come to Canada.

JAILED A QUACK.

Sold Ear Drums and Had Branches in Seventeen Cities.

John Henry Nicholson, who, when he was arrested on charges of fraud, preferred by the Berlin authorities, said he was a Philadelphian, and a physician in New York, was arraigned in the Bow Street Police Court, London, on Saturday, and committed pending an investigation of the case. It is stated that Nicholson has had a long career as a quack doctor on the Continent. He is the founder of the Nicholson Aural Institute, which sells ear drums, and has branches in seventeen cities. Nicholson now claims that he is a Canadian, and an enquiry will be made into this point before he is extricated.

A Philadelphia Idol Factory.

There is an idol factory in Philadelphia that turns out a great many of the idols used in India, Corea Japan and other Buddist countries. The proprietor has recently been subjected to very general criticism in religious circles. In the course of an interview he said:—"I am not ashamed of my business."

He led the way into a small room that had a white curtain. Here a man in a blue cap was carving a Buddha of white marble.

"The Buddha of white marble is one of our more expensive gods," the proprietor said. "This god, two feet in height, costs $50."

He pointed to a little wax Buddha that stood upon a shelf.

"That is the model," he explained, "which my man here follows. It is a copy of a Siamese Buddha that has the reputation of being the best image of the god extant. But my man has made so many Buddhas that he hardly ever looks at the model now. I guess he could carve a Buddha in the dark by this time."

In a second room another man was carving a strange god, a god with four arms and an elephant's head, the Hindoo deity Ganesha.

"This is another expensive idol," said the proprietor. "Plain it costs $50, and decorated $75. Two of my girls are decorating a Ganesha now.

"Most of the gods I make are images of Budha. Buddhism is an old creed. There are over five hundred million Buddhists in the world. Here are some of the rules of Buddhism, and I think they are good rules:—

"'Forget the world.

"'Reverence old age and the oppressed.

"'Respect the religious beliefs of others.

"'Destroy no tree.

"'Kill no animal.

"'Drink no intoxicating beverage.

"'Boast not of your own sancity.'

"I make Buddhas. These Buddhas go out into the world and turn men's thoughts to the rules of Buddhism. They cause men to pray, to be clean, to be temperate, to be kind. Stabbed in Toronto Streets.

George Williams, of Toronto, was fatally stabbed near the heart on Sackville street Monday night. He managed to get to a drug store and was taken to the hospital. He says his assailant was an old man, name unknown, with whom he had religious disputes in the past. Doctors would have taken Williams' antemortem statement only for his assertion that he would not die.

Chas. McCain was arrested after midnight on a charge of stabbing Williams. The victim could not identify the prisoner.

Major-General Talbot, commanding the forces in Egypt and the Soudan, has published in the British newspapers, a personal appeal for funds wherewith to establish a soldiers' institute at Khartoum, in which there is no church or chapel of any kind. The proposed institute is to consist of an entrance hall, reading and writing rooms, a billiard and games room, a temperance bar and supper room, and a private room for meditation and devotional purposes.

The institute will be freely open to all wearing the King's uniform.

An American has invented an envelope which records of itself any attempt to tamper with its contents. The flap is imbued with some chemical composition, which, when operated upon by a dampening process or any other means of penetrating to its enclosure, records the transaction by causing the words "Attempt to open" to appear. It is thought that the inquisitive will think twice before pursuing their researches in face of such an invention.

High Water at Montreal.

The biggest ice jam of the season took place at Montreal Tuesday. The water rose to 43 feet, 4 inches, 12 inches from the high water mark of the great flood of 1886. Two and a half feet more and the water would have been running over the wall. As it was, it rushed by three feet above the level of Commissioner street. For a time the city pumps were unable to empty the sewers and many cellars were flooded, especially in the wholesale section.

The Vancouver Way.

A passenger on a Robson street car tendered a $5 bill for his fare. The conductor would not change it, but stopped the car so the passenger could get out and change it while he waited. The passenger refused to comply with the request, and on the approach of another car the conductor and motormen of both cars carried out the passenger and deposited him on the street, when the passenger struck the conductor, who refused his $5, a blow in the face.

Samaritans and Jews.

For the first time in history, a Samaritan high priest, Israk ben Amram ben Shalma, has left the Holy Land; for the first time, probably, in history the Samaritans have appealed to the Jews, and the appealant is in London asking aid for a school. It is remarkable that this event should not have aroused more interest. The Samaritans have dwindled to 250 souls, but they still have their synagogue at Nablous and their old and beautifully written books. Education will probably not save them, though the remnant is well worth preservation. Serizim (ancient capital of Samaria) is hiding its head before Zion. One-third of the population to-day is Jewish, but there is no fear of the old dispute being revived. Samaria and Judah have alike suffered from the ravages of time.

SEA WALL OF GALVESTON.

In Its Construction $3,750,000 Will be Expended.

The report of the board of engineers on plans for the sea wall to protect Galveston calls for three miles of concrete breakwater, seventeen feet above mean low tide. The estimated cost of the sea wall is $1,294,755, and that of filling in the entire city so as to bring its grade up to the proper level is $2,210,285 additional, making a total of $3,506,040. After the hurricane that almost swept out the city, it was evident that steps should be taken to protect Galveston from another like calamity. A sea wall was the means decided upon, a plan which calls for the most pretentious piece of engineering of the sort ever attempted in the United States.

The money needed for the enterprise will be raised under a constitutional propision granting coast counties the privilege to issue bonds for protection against the encroachment of the gulf provided the proposition is ratified by a two-thirds vote of the taxpayers of the county. The proposition was submitted to the taxpayers of Galveston county to issue $1,500,000 sea-wall bonds, and was carried, only 26 votes being cast against it. The people of Galveston bought the bonds, with the exception of a very small amount. Still the money for the filling in was yet to be provided for. The eighth bill introduced in the present legislature provided funds to prosecute the work, by allowing the city of Galveston to divert for fifteen years its state taxes from the treasury into a fund to be used solely for grading the city.

The Most Direct Route.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway confirming the statement that the Beaver line steamers will run between London and Montreal, adds: "We have decided to establish a biweekly service between London and Montreal and a weekly service between Liverpool and Bristol and Montreal, temporarily leaving out Glasgow, which we shall take in later, with a number of other ports of the United Kingdom, when additional facilities are secured. Eventually we hope to have semi-weekly sailings from London.

We are unable to make any more definite statement at present. The general idea, however, is to link the producing and consuming terminals by the most direct route."

Company Claims Damages.

The executive of the striking U. B. R. E. were served Thursday morning at the instance of the C. P. R. with writs for damages owing to their quiting the service without notice. Thus six of the strikers are down for $2,500 damages. If these test cases are successful it is said all the strikers will be prosecuted.

The names of the ones served are: J. D. Turnbull, chief wharfinger; R. Robinson, baggage master; R. Brooks, accountant; F. J. Walker, telegraph clerk; David La Rourke, checker; P. D. Dotson, chief billing clerk.

MARKETS.

(Compiled from The Commercial)

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

WHEAT—There has been no special feature in the wheat market during the past week, the whole week having been more or less dull and uninteresting. It may be said that it is a waiting game at present.

Manitoba wheat has been quiet and dull all week, with very little trade passing, and the better inquiry noticed last week has fallen off. Prices, however, hold up well, and at close of business yesterday we quote 1 hard 73½c., 1 Nor. 72c., 2 Nor. 70c., and 3 Nor. 66¾c., for spot or March delivery, and for May delivery 1 hard 74¾c., 1 Nor. 73c., 2 Nor. 71¼c., and 3 Nor. 68c., all in store, Fort William, Port Arthur or Duluth.

FLOUR—Demand is good and prices hold steady at last week's advance. We quote: Best Hungarian Patent, $2 per sack of 98 lbs. delivered to the trade; Glenora patent, $1.85; strong bakers, $1.65, and XXXX, $1.35. These prices are subject to usual trade discounts.

MILLDEED—There is a big demand for bran and shorts and mills have no trouble in disposing of all they produce. We quote: Bran, in bulk, per ton, $15.50; shorts, $17.50.

GROUND FEED—Oat chop is steady at $21 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley chop, $16.50; mixed barley and oats, $18; chop speltz, $16 per ton; chop, screenings, $12; oil cake, $25 per ton.

ROLLED OATS—Millers are asking $1.75 per sack of 80 lbs. carlots. Jobbing lots are worth $1.85 per sack. Standard and granulated oatmeal is worth $2.80 per sack of 98 lbs.

OATS—The week has been a comparatively quiet one in this market. Farmers have not been moving about much as the roads are bad. There is supposed to be a large quantity of oats still in farmers hands throughout the west and this fact is keeping the market down. On the other hand there is a good shipping demand and the new settlers who are pouring into the country are liberal buyers, whirh are the principal bull features. As compared with a week ago the market is ½c. lower. We quote: No. 1 white in carlots on track are worth 31c. per bushel; No. 2 white, 29c., and feed grades, 27c. Farmers' loads on the street are bringing 28c., and at country points about 25c. Brokers are asking 25c. to 27c. for carlots in the country. Seed oats are worth 35c. per bushel.

BARLEY—The market is firm and the movement light. Dealers are paying 31c. to 32c. per bushel for feed grades on the street here.

FLAXSEED—Market nominal.

SPELTZ—The market is steady at 32c. per bushel of 50 pounds, delivered here.

HAY—Stocks are ample for all requirements. Fresh baled in cars on track is worth $5 to $6 per ton and loose hay on the street $5 to $5.50.

VEGETABLES—Potatoes have advanced slightly during the week and are now worth full 45c. per bushel. Green onions are offering at 35c. per dozen bunches. We quote - Potatoes, 45c. per bushel; parsley, 40c.; cabbage, $20 per ton; imported celery, 90c. per dozen; carrots, 40c.; beets, 40c. per bushel; turnips, 25c. per bushel; lettuce, 40c. per dozen bunches; mint, 20c. per dozen bunches; dried onions, 60c. per bushel; green onions, 35c. per dozen bunches.

POULTRY—There are practically domestic stocks to be had. Chickens are being brought in from the south to meet the high-priced trade. Dealers are offering in a wholesale way 12½c. per pound for chickens, dressed; $ 9½c. to 10c. for ducks and geese, and 15c. for turkeys.

BUTTER—Creamery—City makers are asking 23c. for choice fresh made in 56 pound boxes.

BUTTER—Dairy—The market is a quiet one. Receipts are light and are mostly in rolls and bricks. Some commission houses have considerable on hand out of which they are supplying their trade. Best butter, in rolls is worth in a jobbing way 21c. to 22c. per pound net, with inferior qualities canging down as low as 10c. and 12c. Tub butter will bring at jobbing houses as high as 18c. per pound if fresh and well packed, with a range of from 14c. to 18c. for the various qualities offering. These prices are nett, Winnipeg.

CHEESE—The market is quiet. Jobbers are supplying the retail trade with Ontario September stock at 14c. per pound, and with Manitoba at 13½c.

EGGS—The market has slumped sharply owing to large receipts. This was expected. Eggs have been coming in very freely. Dealers are now offering 15c. per dozen, commission basis, delivered Winnipeg. It is not expected that they will go much lower than this till after Easter.

DRESSED MEATS—There is nothing new to note in dressed meats. The market is steady and demand good. Stocks of frozen mutton are still quite large. Dressed hogs are coming in freely. We quote: Beef, city dressed, 6c. to 7½c. per pound; country stock, ½c. under these figures; mutton, 8c. to 9c.; lamb, 11½c.; hogs, 7c. to 7½c, packers' price, for best weights; lights and heavies ½c. to 1c. less.

HIDES—There are not many hides coming at present and the market is quiet and steady. We quote: Frozen hides, 5½c. per lb., less 5 lbs. tare; city butchers, 6½c. per lb. for No. 1's; 5½c. for No. 2's, and 4½c. for No. 3's. Sheepskins, 30c. to 50c. each.

SENECA ROOT—Market nominal.

WOOL—Market nominal.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—Receipts are light and there has not yet been any change in the market. There is still considerable cold storage beef on hand and the demand is being supplied with this. We quote: Best steers, 4¾c.; butchers' ordinary, 3½c. to 4r. Stockers, yearlings, $17; two-year-old, $22 each.

SHEEP—Market nominal.

BAR OF GOLD MISSING.

Valued at From $20,000 to $23,000 Disappears From an Express Car.

A special from Detroit says:—A bar of gold, said to be valued at from $20,000 to $23,000, disappeared from the express car of Wabash train No. 4, which arrived at the Union station from the west at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening and left for Buffalo at midnight. The property was in charge of the Pacific Express Company, and was consigned to Buffalo.

Just as soon as the messenger missed the gold, he notified the local express agent of the company, who in turn asked the police to assist in the search for the missing treasure Every available detective has been assigned to the case.

The general manager of the Express Company is expected here at noon. Pending his arrival no details will be given out at the local office. It is supposed that the gold was shipped from some western mine. The bar was missed just before the train pulled for the east. "We are patiently waiting for news from Buffalo," said the manager of the local branch of the Express Company. It was said to be possible that the bar had been misplaced and will be found at Buffalo.

A Buffalo despatch says:—The local office of the Express Company say they know nothing about the missing gold bar.

DEXTER MAN DERANGED.

Pumpman Orlandson Found in the Woods in a Sad State.

On Tuesday, Orlandson, the pumpman at Dexter, boarded the local train for Finmark, and upon arrival of the train at the station no trace of him could be found. His disappearance was reported by Conductor C. P. Rapelje to Superintendent Brady here, who gave orders for the sectionmen to hunt for the missing man. Yesterday at Buda Siding, Foreman Riddle and his men found Orlandson about three miles from the track as they traced him from the siding in the snow. He was sitting on a stump in a dazed condition with his clothes all torn and bare-headed and had his braces around his neck. It is thought the man's mind is deranged and that he tried to hang himself. Orlandson was brought down on last night's local train to West Fort William, and is now under the care of Jailer McNabb.

COSTLY INVITATION CARD.

San Francisco Club Asks Roosevelt to Be Its Guest.

President Roosevelt has received an invitation engraved on a plate of solid gold, six inches long and three-quarters of an inch wide, to be the guest of the Union League club at San Francisco on the occasion of his visit to that city, on his approaching western trip.

The plate weighed 8½ ounces. The invitation was presented by Col. G. P. Pippy, president of the club, and was accepted by the President with expressions of cordial appreciation. He will be the guest of the club at a banquet on Thursday evening, May 14.

Bad Wreck at Rathwell.

There was a bad freight smash-up at Rathwell, on the Chicago branch of the C. P. R., on Tuesday night. A freight train was standing on the track in the Rathwell yard when, without warning, a westbound freight crashed into the caboose and cars. The engine and six or eight cars were piled up in a heap, flour and merchandise being scattered on all sides. Fortunately no one was seriously hurt, the engineer escaping with a few bruises. The cause of the accident is unknown.

Blame Rests With Operator.

The collision between two freight trains on the C. P. R. near Islington on Thursday, in which two train hands were killed, is said to have been due to Operator K. E. Pennell, at Cooksville, the last stop before the accident, who failed to hand the order to Conductor Pink, of the eastbound train, to pass the other train at Islington

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co. Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

A Quaint Belief.

Attention has been called to the survival of folklore in rural parts of England by evidence given in a stabbing case tried at the Essex Assizes. To quicken the healing of the wounds, the knife with which they were inflicted was smeared with grease and laid on the bed of the patient. The purpose served by the application of grease or oil to the knife, or to any steel instrument that has inflicted wounds, is to prevent it from rusting. For if the steel is allowed to become rusty, the wound is supposed to be affected, and festering and mortification follow the progress of the rust. Another quaint belief is that the application of an oiled knife is a certain and quick remedy for scalds and burns.

SOME TINY PLANETS.

Celestial Bodies That Astronomers Are Not Greatly Pleased to Find.

In the space between Mars and Jupiter there are hundreds of little planets called asteroids which have been discovered during the last century by astronomers all over the world. Some of them are hardly bigger than a big western farm, and very few are large enough to be seen without the aid of a powerful telescope. Nowadays they are noted chiefly by photography and are interesting to professional astronomers only for their eccentricities.

It has been found, for example, by a computation made by astronomers that one of them approaches nearer to the sun than any other known planet and at the same time describes a greater ellipse around that body. This special asteroid was originally discovered on one of the photographic plates taken at Arequipa, from which the entire sky south of the equator and extending to the antarctic pole is photographed as a matter of routine once every month.

Astronomers do not take any special delight in finding asteroids, which, in fact, cause more trouble than they are worth, since, once discovered, they have to be first catalogued and then constantly watched in order to keep them in their proper relation to the other heavenly bodies in the more essential business of cataloguing the important stars. One German observatory accordingly makes a specialty of taking care of all asteroids and wherever found carefully numbers, names and describes them as rapidly as possible for the benefit of other astronomers with other work to do.

Ignorance of Canada.

The London Globe, in commenting on an article entitled "Canada and Imperial Ignorance," which appeared in a recent issue of The Monthly Review, says: "Not only do we fail to grasp the historical and political problems of Canada, but the great mass of working men are wholly unaware of the potentialities of that vast country. A Canadian lecturing in this country was once tackled by a working man. 'Mister,' said the interrupter, 'can you tell me what's the good of all this talk about Empire and federation and ships when lots of us here are starving?' This was the lecturer's opportunity. He told the audience that in the land he came from were millions of acres of rich land untouched. 'It is a country as big as the United States of America, and has only 5,000,000 people—no more than you have here heaped upon each other in this sweltering city.' The writer of the article appeals to the common sense of the English people and asks whether it would not be wisdom to spend the £12,000,000 devoted every year in this country to the maintenance of paupers in some bold and comprehensive scheme of emigration. In spite of emigration offices, the subject does not get home to the bosoms of men, and until Carlyle's hero arrives to lead our surplus population forth to the Golden West, something might well be attempted by the State to render emigration easy and attractive."

Electrical Farming.

The agricultural district of Hanover, Germany, has witnessed a remarkable growth during the past few years in the use of electric current for agricultural purposes. There are at present 38 villages, representing a population of 37,500, connected to the tramway mains of the local railway. The greatest demand for power is for the driving of farm machinery, threshing machinery, pumps, hay presses, straw cutters, etc. Where a local system of electric mains already exists supplying a trolley or factory, the occasional demand of the farmer can be profitably catered to, but if a special system had to be installed it could hardly be made a paying investment. This results principally from the fact that the consumption of power is very spasmodic, and it is not for any great length of time. The same applies to its use for lighting, as the farmer and his family naturally retire early and rise early, thus cutting down the time during which lights are usually burned.

A Japanese Hygienic Bath.

In hygienic matters the Japanese have everywhere a habit which may have a lesson for us. In their nightly bath and morning wash the water is never cold, never warm, but always as hot as it can be borne. To foreigners this habit seems very surprising, but the most inveterate Englishman, if he stays in the country long enough, abandons his cold tub in its favor.

The cold taking which, it is suspected, must follow it is not found to occur if the water has been hot enough. This heat is maintained by a little furnace beneath the bath. In the bath the bather or bathers take a prolonged soaking, the washing proper being done on the bathroom floor; then follow a second and final soaking, drying with towel and a lounge in bathing wrapper.

This habit seems to promote softness and suppleness of the skin and by persons inclined to rheumatism is soon found to be altogether preferable to the cold bath in every particular. The poorest of the Japanese hear of a cold bath with amazement and would be sure the man who used it must be a barbarian.

PARKER CURE IS ONLY ONE OF MANY

Bright's Disease Invariably Vanquished by Dodd's Kidney Pills

Other Cases in Which the Great Kidney Remedy Conquered.

Reliable Men Tell of Victories Over The Dread Disease.

From Mail and Empire.

So great has been the interest in Toronto over the cure of Bright's Disease, reported from Shubenacadie, Nova Scotia, that a reporter yesterday visited the head office of the Dodds Medicine Co., 62 Yonge Street, Toronto, to ascertain the views of the management concerning the case. He found the management satisfied, but by no means surprised.

"No," was the answer to the reporter's question. "We are not surprised that the public generally are at length being forced to the conclusion that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure Bright's Disease. We have known it for a long time ourselves. The Parker cure is only one of many of which we can furnish proofs.

A Specialist's Prescription.

"The troubles in these cures have been made by what is termed a 'patent medicine.' Had they been made by a physician in the regular way, and that physician had been able to tell exactly how he brought them about, they would have been talked of learnedly from one end of the country to the other. But when people talk about our cures there is a tendency to say, 'Oh that is only a patent medicine advertisement.'

"They forget that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the life work of a doctor. That they have been uniformly successful in treating all diseases of the Kidneys, and that the only feature in which they differ from regularly obtained medical advice is that the prescription of a specialist is given the public at popular urices.

No Room for Doubt.

"Now, you have seen the particulars in the Parker case. Nobody can doubt for an instant that that was a veritable case of the 'incurable' Bright's Disease, neither can anyone doubt that the cure was effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills and by no other agency. Of course, it took time and perseverance; but the patient was in the last stages of the disease before she started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Had she started sooner the work would have been easier and the results would have been obtained treme case and took time."

"You know of other cases of Bright's Disease that have been cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills?" queried the reporter.

The manager walked over to a safe and produced a bundle of letters. Holding them up, he said:—"Every one of those letters tells of a case of Bright's Disease cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and every case has been thoroughly investigated and verified. Let me read you a few of them.

Robt. Bond Cured.

"This one, you see, is signed, 'Robert Bond, Mt. Brydges, Ont.' You see what he says: 'My attending physician said I was in the last stages of Bright's Disease. I commenced using Dodd's Kidney Pills in July, 1894, and used in all about twenty boxes, and have used no other remedy or medicine of any kind since, and I feel well, sleep well, and I have a good appetite, etc.'

"That is away back in 1894. Here's another letter from the same Robert Bond, dated May 2nd, 1902. You see what he says in it. 'The cure is permanent as far as I know. My general health is good.'

C. A. Harris Cured.

"Here is another case. If you'll take the trouble to look at this letter you'll see it is written by the Postmaster at Lovett, Ont., Mr. C. A. Harris. Notice what he says: 'In 1897 I was at the point of death from Bright's Disease, and was a complete wreck, could not even dress myself or turn in my bed, but now I am, I may say, a well man, and I attribute it all to Dodd's Kidney Pills.' That's from a postmaster, a man who undoubtedly knows what he is talking about, and there's no uncertain sound about what he says.

Chas. Ingram Cured.

"Here's one from a Toronto man, Charles Ingram, 58 Humbert Street. He's a stonemason, and well known among the working men in the building trade. See what he says: 'For ten years I have been troubled with the first stages of Bright's Disease. I tried several other medicines, but could not get cured. A friend of mine told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I have used four boxes, and am now cured of the first stages of pains.'

G. H. Kent Cured.

"I could go on showing you similar letters most of the afternoon. But I'll just give you one more—that of G. H. Kent, of 408 Gilmour Street, Ottawa. His was a remarkable case, indeed, so remarkable that we afterwards got him to make his statement under oath before a notary public.

"Mr. Kent is a printer in the employ of the American Bank Note Company. He suffered for four months from Bright's Disease, and had actually reached the stage when the doctors declared he could not live till the next morning. While the sorrowing wife waited by his bedisde watching for the end, her eye chanced to fall on an advertisement which said that Dodd's Kidney Pills would cure Bright's Disease.

"As a drowning man grasps at a straw, so this despairing woman grasped at this last chance to save her husband's life. A messenger was procured, a druggist roused out of his bed, a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills bought, and the dying man given his first dose. That dose brought an improvement, gradually the pain ceased and health returned. It took seventeen boxes to cure him completely. But that's seven years ago, and he's been working every day since. Surely a cure like that is enough to make the whole world believe that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure Bright's Disease.

Where the Trouble Lies.

"The whole trouble is in making people believe. This is a skeptical age. It used to be 'If you see it in the paper's it's true. Nowadays it is 'If you see it in the papers don't believe it.' If we could bring the people here one at a time and let them read these letters, or bring them face to face with the men and women who wrote them, our struggle would be over, for the whole world would admit that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure Bright's Disease.

Lots More Cures.

"As you can see these are only a few cures of Bright's Disease picked at random from the many. There are dozens of others equally as remarvable and all carefully investigated and attested to by reliable people. Surely you would think that as doctors can give no hope to those threatened with this terrible disease, there should be no hesitancy in giving Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial. And if Dodd's Kidney Pills can cure Bright's Disease, the most deadly form of Kidney Disease, how sure it is that they can cure those earlier stages of Kidney Disease, such as Diabetes, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Pain in the Back, etc. Remember, as I said before, Dodd's Kidney Pills are a specialist prescription for diseases of the kidneys, and in the twelve years they have been before the public they have proved their worth by curing thousands of sufferers from all forms of kidney disease. They are no cure-all; but they do cure all forms of kidney disease. Time and the public have proved that."

Mrs. Nextdoor—"Take my advice and advertise for a good-looking kitchen lady, and you'll be overrun with applications."

It is easier to invent a windmill than it is to raise the wind to make it go.

St. Jacobs Oil is a physician's formula, established fifty years; the pain soothing virtues are so evenly balanced as to meet all cases where pain exists, and where an outward application is generally applied. St. Jacobs Oil is truly worth its weight in gold, even for the cure of nerve pains (and pretty well all bodily pains proceeding from the nerves). It illustrates how wonderfully the essential elements are combined; its marvellous penetrating power enables it to seek out the painful spot in the sciatic nerve, deeply embedded, as well as the face and brain nerves. It cures neuralgia gently and surely, and after the application, if the nose of the bottle is held to patients' nostrils for, say, ten minutes, they will fall into a restful, peaceful sleep. There is no other remedy in the world that will do so much, and do it so quietly and effectively as St. Jacobs Oil. Every family should have a bottle handy by them in the house. It acts like magic, it always conquers pain.

CONGRATULATORY

Hurrah for the miners of Michel and Morrissey! We think it not out of place here to thank them on behalf of the citizens of Fernie and district, and also on behalf of the citizeus of the whole Province for the manly stand they have taken in upholding their executive and accepting the contract offered by them. We hope that the Gladstone Union will meet at an early date and unanimously adopt the settlement.

THE CRISIS.

THE present dead-lock in the strike situation reveal an unique feature in the government and constitution regulating labor organizations. The exact relationship between, and the comparative powers of the local unions and the executive committee of District Union, No. 7, of W. F. of M., were always very hazy to us and apparently the same view was taken by the Conciliation Committee for on March 14th, when they began to treat with the District Board they questioned the responsibility of the board and its power to treat for the unions it represented. This question followed very naturally after Mr. Tonkin's refusal to treat with the said board because in his opinion it did not possess that power.

The answers given by the Executive Board and by Mr. G. F. Dougherty, of No. 6, W. F. of M., were to the effect that they believed they did have the power to make an agreement on behalf of the locals but that said agreement would have to be presented to the locals for their formal ratification.

The Conciliation Committee evidently anxious to get to the bottom of what might afterwards prove a dangerous oversight on their part requested that they go to their respective unions to make sure that they were invested with this power, which they did and they came back confirming what they had formerly stated, that they had full power to make an agreement on behalf of their unions subject to the latters' formal ratification.

The Conciliation Committee now thought they were on solid ground and negotiations between Mr. Tonkin and the District Executive were continued with every confidence on both sides that what ever was decided upon between them was to stand. Finally a week ago an agreement was reached and a committee was appointed to draw up the articles of agreement.

The first text of agreement was not satisfactory to the District Executive owing to omissions and errors and the District Executive and a committee from the Conciliation Committee went to Mr. Tonkin for certain changes which were made to the satisfaction of the District Executive. The agreement was then recommended to the locals for their ratification, and with what results the public are acquainted.

We contend with Mr. Foley and other members of the commission that the action of the locals in repudiating the work of their executive officers is thoroughly inconsistent with the principles governing labor organizations all over the country, and if they persist in taking this stand it cannot fail to seriously weaken the cause of organized labor everywhere. The local unions have refused to acknowledge the rights of their executive board that they were so anxious to have recognized by the company, the refusal of which by the latter they claimed was the primary cause of the strike.

We cannot but think that the union men did not fully realize the importance of upholding this principle when they cast their ballots against the terms approved of by their executive officers and the vote taken at Michel this morning which almost unanimously supported the proposed settlement goes to show that a better understanding of this principle is spreading among them.

The merits or defects of the terms of settlement do not enter into the discussion in this connection, but we cannot refrain from congratulating the union on the unqualified recognition they have gained from the company.

The Nelson News, considering the limited data in its possession, has grasped a very correct idea of the situation, and voices our own opinions. It says:

"Strikes are usually settled on more or less of a compromise basis. It was not to be expected that the men would get all they asked for. It appears though that the chief demand, namely recognition of the district executive, was conceded, and also that some appreciable increase in pay at the Morrissey and Michel mines was secured. These concessions indicate a conciliatoty spirit upon the part of the management, and in face of this agreement thereto by the executive it is wholly unintelligible why the miners should have voted as they have done. The only inference to be drawn from the facts as at present reported is that the Morrissey men are not prepared to meet the management in a conciliatory spirit, and would rather prolong the trouble that is injuring the entire province than make any concessions. If that be a fair inference, public sympathy will be entirely lost to the men, and, what from their own point of view will be more immediately serious, the Western Federation may be driven to withdraw their participation in the dispute.

"If unionism is to prevail at Fernie there must be a different spirit displayed on the part of the men than has been evidenced by this vote. It should be a point of honor with all unionists to stand loyally by their executive officers unless they have absolute proof of treachery, and in this case there is not the slightest ground to believe that the men, who agreed to the settlement arranged by the conciliation committee, did other than what they honestly thought to be in the best interests of those they represented."

CONSTABLE Farquharson has been appointed Sanitary policeman. The medical health officer will doubtless find a valuable assistant in the new appointee. With the opening of spring both officers will find much to do and it is to be hoped that they will be assisted in every possible manner by the citizens of the town. With total lack of drainage and sewerage it will be a marvel if the town escapes epidemic form of sickness and it is the duty of every householder to keep back-yard and cess-pool in as sanitary a condition as possible.

Fernie's Fair Name

THE reports published in outside papers of the disturbance which occurred at Coal Creek last week are very much exaggerated. First impressions in cases like this are certainly the most lasting and it is to be regretted that these misleading accounts have appeared in print. We can, and do deny many of the statements made,—four hundred men did not march through the streets of Fernie, no one was seriously hurt, and the whole affair did not bear the blood and thunder appearance which the big scare-heads of the large outside dailies would lead the public to believe, but we feel that the sensation-loving public will now turn to these more sober accounts of the "run-out" with much the same relish that a greedy boy would take to barley meal after feasting on plum-pudding. While we wish to express our severest censure of such illegal acts under any circumstances we would draw attention to the extra and undeserved injury that has been done the town by the exaggeration of the actual facts. The town was full of visitors at the time, many of whom probably had never had any experience with strikes and who left the town before the facts became known and it is not surprising that the unfortunate event of that night reached the public in the form it has. The fair name that Fernie has enjoyed of being a law-abiding town has received a dark blot and it is up to its citizens to see that no further lawlessness of this order occurs to make that blot deeper and more indelible.

Mrs. C. J. Digby has been very ill with influenza this week.

Infringement of a Trade Mark

In an action in the High Court of Justice for Ontario, recently tried before Chancellor Boyd, at Toronto, the Slater Shoe Co., and Chas. E. Slater, president of Montreal, makers of the famous Slater Shoe, obtained a judgment forever restraining F. C. Wilkinson, a boot and shoe dealer, of Owen Sound, from advertising, exposing, or offering for sale or selling boots or shoes not made by the Slater Shoe Co., as "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods" or the Slater Shoe." The Chancellor, also ordered Wilkinson to pay the heavy costs of the action. The Chancellor, after hearing the evidence. decided that no one except the Slater Shoe Co., had a right to use the name "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods," "The Slater Shoe," or any similar names in connection with boots and shoes, and that Wilkinson had no right to use any name or names in connection with boots and shoes which might enable him to pass of a shoe not of the company's make. as being of their make, nor in any way to reap the benefit of the reputation which the Slater Shoe has acquired throughout the Dominion of Canada.

The Genuine Slater

Is positively the best shoe value offered for sale in Canada. You may include the United States and that will pretty near cover the world for fine shoe making. Mr. J. G. Taylor, the new C. P. R. superintendent, accompanied by his wife passed through town on Sunday on their way to their new home in Cranbrook.

The Methodist church was filled to overflowing last Sunday evening on the occasion of the song service. The program was well arranged and the music was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

A. K. Farquharson has had a gang of ten men opening up the mine wagon road a couple of days this week. Mr. Farquharson is of the opinion that the road will soon be blocked again with mudslides etc.

Mr. Wm. Blakemore who went down to Cowley to inspect a coal proposition last Saturday returned to Fernie on Monday morning and left on the evening train on a through trip to his home in Montreal.

The attention of our readers is called to the millinery opening adv. of Mrs Todd. Owing to Easter being late this year she has decided to open on April 1st. A very fine display of goods will be seen and the prices will agree with the strike times.

L. R. Forbes has received the appointment of County registrar which was left vacant when this court was instituted. The appointment meets with general satisfaction. Mr. Armstrong came from Ft. Steele to act in that capacity on Tuesday evening.

Mr. Harry Howard of Blairmore was in town this week and gave the FREE PRESS a call. Mr. Howard is satisfied that Blairmore will go ahead this summer. The townsite question has been settled and the Fishburn and Newport coal properties will likely be developed at once.

On Tuesday evening the members of the conciliation committee presented their chairman, Mr. John Keen, with a beautiful silver tea set on a silver tray, as a mark of respect and esteem in which he is held by them. The set was purchased at Mr. Liphardt's and it is a beauty. Mr. Keen is very proud of the gift he is taking back to Mrs. Keen.

Mr. Andrew Thomson of the Crow's Nest Trading Company is severing his connection with that house, having accepted a position with a large mercantile business at Medicene Hat. Mr. Thomson leaves to-morrow for his new post. On Thursday evening his fellow-boarders at The Angel's Rest gave him a send-off party at which attended many of his friends who regret his departure.

The Turner sale was poorly attended. The house and lot was purchased by Mr. H. Bentley for $1,800 and but little of the furniture was sold as Mr. Bentley made arrangements with the owner for it. Mr. H. J. Turner and family are moving to the prairie shortly where they will take up ranching. Mr. Bentley will make his home here in the future and will move his family up from Lethbridge at an early date. His new home is favorably situated between his business and the town.

Griffith the Hypnotist performed his interesting blind-fold, street trick on Monday afternoon. Blind-fold he drove a spirited team at a fast gait through the streets and over the exact course taken by the committee while he was carefully watched in another part of the town. Returning, he found a knife that had been hid by the same committee. Griffith is no fake. His evening performances during the week were very satisfactory on the whole and they were well attended, considering the unfavorable season.

THE STRIKE SITUATION.

frankly admitted that the present tie up in these collieries affected his company very vitally, his remarks evidenced a keen interest in the welfare of labor organization. He believed in labor organizations and gave them his hearty support. He had never had any trouble with his men since his company was organized four years ago, and he was loath to admit that these men in whom he took a personal interest would soon be cut off from employment because of lack of fuel. The strike so far had cost the Granby Co. over $40,000. He showed the interdependence of the one industry upon the other, and appealed for a give-and-take policy on the part of all. The sentiments expressed by Mr. Flumerfelt were heartily applauded by the audience.

Mr. Craig attempted to dispute some of the arguments put forward by the different members of the commission that they should accept the terms submitted by their executive. He signally failed to do so and only accomplished the feat of proving a statement of Mr. Foley's, that he was trying to disprove, viz, that agitators were taking a prominent part in opposing the terms agreed upon.

Mr. Hescott drew attention to some defects he thought existed in the wage scale.

Mr. Balluski, a member of the district Executive, addressed his fellow-country men and we understand the gist of his remarks were "don't accept those terms."

Mr. Christopher, president of the District Union, warmly replied to some slighting remarks by Mr. Craig about the District Executive.

The meeting was largely composed of miners, who showed considerable interest in the subject discussed but little enthusiasm.

After the meeting some of the executive committee were in favor of resigning but they were persuaded to continue in their office.

The following afternoon, Thursday, another vote was taken in the Gladstone Union and this time the vote stood 34 for and 136 against. From careful observation it was ascertained that the great majority of those who voted against the settlement were Slavs who, headed by John Balko, were determined to oppose the terms submitted. Mr. Balko in the union hall that afternoon stated, "If you go back to dig coal at 55 cents a ton I will put in men who will dig it for 50 cents." It was felt that the Slavs were being wrongly informed and attempts were made to give them a clearer insight into the terms of settlement. The coke oven men had been promised by Mr. Tonkin that large ovens would be used hereafter for which they would receive 95 cents and this was added to the terms of agreement. The $2.00 per day outside laborers were under the impression that they would come under the $1.80 rate and it was made clear to them that they would receive no reduction.

Yesterday afternoon the Fernie Board of Trade, on behalf of the citizens of Fernie called a public meeting to show to the Conciliation Commission their appreciation of its untiring labors to effect a settlement. The meeting was largely attended Mr. Rennie the newly elected President of the Board of Trade, occupied the chair while around him on the platform were seated the gentlemen of the commission, General Manager Tonkin, Rev. D. L. Gordon, Dr. Bonnell, F. Stork, A. Joyce, H. A. Kanouse and Messrs. Galvin and Carruthers of the Miners Union.

The chairman briefly outlined the object of the meeting, that it was not for the purpose of discussing the pros and cons of the case but merely to offer public thanks to the commission sent by the B. C. Mining Association to help us in our trouble.

Mr. Stork in moving that a hearty vote of thanks of the people of Fernie and district be tendered the gentleman of the Commission referred to the strike and said it was not for him to discuss the merits of either side but that the public would be in a position to judge for itself when the commissions report would be published. He paid a tribute to the unimpeachable character of each gentleman and of the zeal and tact they had exhibited in treating with such a delicate matter.

Rev. D. L. Gordon seconded the motion and Messrs. Joyce, Kanouse, Dr. Bonnell, Galvin and Hescott who followed all bore eloquent testimony to the golden opinions that each gentleman of commission had earned during their short visit in Fernie.

The vote of thanks was passed amid much enthusiasm. Each of the gentlemen of the Conciliation Commission acknowledged the thanks in a neat speech.

Mr. Keen said this was a test case fo the settlement of labor disputes by conciliatory efforts and he trusted that by dealing harmoniously, calmly and carefully with this matter they would yet effect a satisfactory ending. He believed the union showed a want of understanding of, rather than a lack of confidence in, their District Board.

Mr. Flumerfelt in his happy style interested the audience in the great possibilities of our province. He pleaded eloquently for a shoulder-to-shoulder policy by which her great resources would be developed.

Mr. Foley acknowledged the honor done them in a strong address and closed with optimistic predictions of the outcome.

Mr. Keffer who followed stated that about 250 men in his employ in the Boundary were now idle but he was hopeful yet of an early settlement.

Mr. Gaunce is one of the cleverest speakers a Fernie audience has had the pleasure of listening to, and while he carefully avoided any approach to a discussion of the issues of the question he succeeded in putting the audience in the best of good humor.

Messrs. Seaman and McAndrew also suitably acknowledged the thanks of the citizens of Fernie and district after which the meeting adjourned.

Mr. F. Keffer. of Greenwood, said to a FREE PRESS reporter yesterday that while the Committee was greatly disappointed over the non-acceptance by the Unions of the agreement made by the Miners' Executive with the Coal Company still it felt that it had fulfilled the object for which it had been created, namely to bring the contending parties together and effect a settlement.

The miners Executive had stated to the Committee that although any agreement entered into with the Coal Company would have to be ratified by the union, still such a ratification was merely a matter of form. This statement, although made in perfect good faith by the miners Executive, events have since proved to be unfounded. It was most unfortunate that after a long fight by the unions to have their organization duly recognized by the company, and that after such recognition had been granted together with other concessions, and embodied in an agreement which he regarded as eminently fair and just to both sides—that after this, the union should be the first to turn down its own executive, thereby relinquishing all the hard won gain. The result could not but be a serious blow to labor in this Province, and would certainly shake public confidence in the organizations, and also render employers very wary of entering into contracts with executive boards of labor unions, which boards, present events have clearly shown to be utterly powerless with the rank and file: an organization which cannot trust its own duly appointed leaders need scarcely expect the public at large or employers in particular to repose much confidence in it.

Mr. W. G. Gaunce, the secretary of the committee, who had very pleasantly but very persistently declined to be interviewed during the progress of affairs, expressed himself yesterday as very sorry that no better results had attended the efforts of his colleagues and himself. He said: "We early found that we had a most difficult task in hand. Not only were there many classes of labor to be dealt with, but there were 11 different mines, in three different collieries, each with its own set of conditions. The more important issues were many, and the lesser important ones were legion. We thought we had gotten over our great difficulty when we secured Mr. Tonkin's concession to treat with the District Executive instead of with committees of his employees of each mine, or the executives of the different local unions. When we requested the three component parts of the District Executive to return to their local unions on March 14th and receive authority to treat as an executivewith the company through the medium of the Conciliation Committee, and when this Committee returned confirmed in their position and claimed that the submission of any agreement they might reach would be ratified by the Unions, we felt that at last we were on solid ground. Had we not be so abvised I do not think the committee would have made any further efforts. The surprise of every member of the Conciliation Committee cannot be discribed when the union repudiated the acts of their own executive, and their refused to recognize the very organization they had been insisting the Coal Co should recognize. I am persuaded that Unionism has recieved a severe shock by the attitude of the Unions, in this repudiation of an executive which under the leadership of Mr. Dougherty had made a strong, intelligent fight for the demands of the men, and who only laid down their arms when they had won a large part of what they asked for, and that in the face of evidence which they must have seen disproved much of their own contention. Doubtless some of the employees of the company are not receiving a fair wage, but most of the men, outside the coke-oven men appear to be well paid and under the proposed arrangement the coke oven men get better wages. I am sorry that as things are constituted 338 men so voting, can compel an enterprise employing over 1,300 men to lie idle and at the same time throw many thousands of others elsewhere out of work. I fear and yet think I foresee the inevitable out come, although I am not yet without hope.

MY HEART'S DARLING

BY W. HEIMBURG.

Tante Dettchen shook her head as she saw Lucie read the note again, roll it up and put it like a flower between two buttons in the waist of her dress, press her face into the roses, put them carefully in water, sprinkle them, and quickly disappear with her treasures.

After a few minutes she came back and continued her ironing.

Tante Dettchen was astonished. After a little while Alfred came in heated and in haste.

"How industrious!" he said, as he passed the kitchen door. "Would you like to go with me to-day to see the house, Lucie?"

"When?" she asked

"Toward evening; we might perhaps meet there at six o'clock."

"I will come, Alfred."

"Adieu, my love. I must go."

He went.

Lucie had finished her work, and now sat in the sitting-room; her head ached violently. The Frau Counselor was counting change at the writing-table, and scolding the little servant-girl, who had just returned from market. A fifty-pfennig piece was missing.

"Go right back and ask around where you could have got too little change! Can't you be more careful, you little goose!"

The little girl disappeared, and the old lady, glad to have an outlet for her secret annoyance, went on scolding. "There is no dependence to be placed on any one nowadays; all the good, sensible people seem to have disappeared out of the world. Foolishness in the head, and no sense of duty in the heart. And so it is in all classes. When I think how it used to be in my youth, so straightforward and plain and simple! One could trust one's servants then, and the young girls who were fortunate enough to be engaged to be married did not have their heads turned with the silly ideas of the present day. They felt their highest happiness was to marry a good man, and to become a good housewife!"

Lucie felt every word was a stab. Was she then so bad? Was she alone to blame? Ah, she had come here with her heart full of love and happy hopes; she did not know herself how they had all withered so soon. She laid down her work and stood up.

"Excuse me," she said, "I have such a bad headache."

"Well, then, lie down," said the old lady, in a vexed tone. And as she saw her pale face, she asked: "Do you often suffer from it?"

"Sometimes."

"Oh, yes; the nerves of the present day!" and with that she was excused.

She eat nothing at noon, and did not appear until about three o'clock and then came down dressed to go out. The Frau Counselor was just taking her black silk dress out of the wardrobe in the hall; she had been invited to a coffee party.

"Well," she asked, "is the headache better?"

"Not yet; but I think it will do me good to go out in the fresh air."

"That, of course, is only to be found at Frau von Lowen's," was the cutting reply.

Lucie did not notice it; she forced herself to say, pleasantly: "Adieu, mother," and went out.

CHAPTER X.

She found Hortense in the stable, and in her riding-habit; she had just returned from a ride. The young baroness had a basket of pieces of bread and carrots on her arm, and was feeding her horse, while the groom was carefully rubbing down her favorite with a woolen cloth. She was so absorbed in what she was doing that she did not notice Lucie until she came close up to her.

"How badly you look!" she cried, gazing with a shocked expression into her friend's pale face. She put down the basket on the manger, and drew the girl out of the stable and up into her own cool room. "Now lie down on the chaise-longue, and my maid shall make you a cup of coffee."

She gave the necessary directions, darkened the room, changed her riding-habit, and sat down by Lucie.

"Now tell me what has happened, my darling?"

"Nothing, Hortense, nothing," returned Lucie, in a tired voice.

"Say that to other people, not to me; something has troubled you. Listen, my dearest," she continued, after a pause, "you remind me so much of a palm that grandpapa took out of the damp, warm greenhouse and put in his smoking-room; it could not stand that air; it became ill."

"I don't know," returned the girl, and burst into tears.

Hortense took her hand. "I will tell you something," she said, slowly, but quite audibly, "you do not love him!"

The sobbing ceased.

"Hortense!" stammered Lucie, and sat upright, while her little hands pressed her temples as if she wanted to grasp what she had heard.

The habit of drugging their babies so that they can be left alone is very common in India among mothers who work in factories. In the city of Madras the infant mortality is given as 295 per thousand.

A WISE LEADER.

Verigin Talks Sense to Pilgrims—Ingenious Ways—Reasons With Doukhobors.

Peter Verigin, one of the leaders of the Doukhobors, who has been in Russia, and of whom great things are expected in the way of inducing the people to settle down and give up their foolish idea of another pilgrimage in the spring to convert the world, is now in the Doukhobor villages north of Yorkton, and, according to reports from there, is meeting with considerable success in his effort. He started at the village of Troterpersky, where his home was before leaving for Russia, and where his mother still lives. His first meeting was held in his own house, and in the course of his address he discussed the whole situation. He began by taking up the question of the suitability of Canada as a place for the Doukhobors. He declared that the Doukhobors were here by God's will, and that there was no need to look anywhere else. While the climate was cold it was healthy, and the soil produced all manner of grains and vegetables, so that there was no reason why they should not be happy and prosperous. Having a good soil and climate, the other essential to success was the possession of animals. Every family should have a team of horses and two or three cows.

Animals Co-Workers With Men.

One of those who had been on the pilgrimage here broke in with the remark that in Canada all the work was done by horses, and man got the benefit of enslaving them. Verigin's reply was that the relation was not that of master and slave but of fellow-workers; that while the horse worked for the man, both labored to produce oats for the horse as well as wheat for the man. Hay was cut and stacked and stables built for the horse's benefit, so that the benefits were mutual. Animals were in this sense to be considered members of the community. But the leader was not yet "out of the woods," for the same pilgrim raised the point that if they kept cows for the milk and butter there would be the annual excess of males, and it would not be right to sell these to the butcher. Verigin had evidently thought this matter out further than the pilgrim, and he was ready. He said that on the ship he came across in from England there were 700 immigrants, poor people, who expected to settle on land. If the Doukhobors found they had too many bullocks they could give the surplus to these poor immigrants to plow with.

Urged Adaptation.

Then he went on to counsel them to adapt themselves to their surroundings, and settle down. He urged them to take up land without delay. They had been in Canada four years, and had been acting as if they were not going to stay. The Government might have given away the lands to others, but it had been patient. It was not right for them to be looking for trouble, and expecting evil. They were no longer in poor Russia, ground into the dust of bad government. Canada was a free country, and he saw no dangers ahead, but even if evils did come they could meet them like men as they had before. They should also comply with the law in regard to the registration of vital statistics, which law was meant for their good.

Turns Tables on Them.

Verigin dealt with the late pilgrimage. Some felt called to do no work, but to go out and preach the conversion of the world. Of course if they saw that as their duty they must go, but they should consider it well. Were they so perfect that there was no reforming to be done in their own lives before they were quite ready to preach perfection? If such was the case, why, of course, they should start again in the spring. But they must remember this, that while they were free to adopt such a mode of life and to subject themselves to any privations they might see fit, they had no right to involve their relatives, and especially their wives and children. If any of them should again go out they should leave behind their wives and children, with their relatives, who would, no doubt, be glad to take care of them.

Things Look Hopeful.

Verigin is now traveling from village to village with a party of selected followers, and talking to all in the same strain. The party travel in sleighs drawn by horses, and have met with a very good reception wherever they have appeared. The appearance of milk and butter on the tables indicates that part at least of the Doukhobors have given up the worst features of the craze. It cannot be told until spring how successful Verigin has been, but everything now looks very hopeful for another pilgrimage being prevented.

The Same Old Cry.

Scarcity of Canadian Timber. We have heard it stated by several who are interested in the trade, that the scarcity of Canadian timber, especially for building purposes, is already beginning to be felt by a considerable increase in price. This is ascribed to the circumstance of so many vessels being devoted from the staple traffic of the Saint Lawrence in order to convey emigrants to Australia and the States, and as the weather may shut up the chance of further supplies, for some time, it is feared that those who have entered into large building contracts when timber was at a low price, will now suffer loss and embarrassment by its increased value in the market.—Liverpool Albion.—From The Globe of Jan. 8, 1853.

Over 500 Students.

President Mills of the Agricultural College, Guelph, reports that during the month of January there have been no less than 554 students on the roll, divided as follows among the different courses: Regular students, 210; short course in poultry-raising, 14; short course in stock judging, 220; dairy school, 50; special weekly lectures on domestic science, 60 ladies.

For

Mrs. Tillinghast's Accommodation

By H. Faber Osterheld

Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company

Edyth was sitting in one of the comfortable chairs of a parlor car as the train pulled out of the New Haven station. She was regretting the short halt there when a newcomer, who had planted his traps on the floor near the large armchair facing her, bowed. Edyth thought it was an apology for having upset her valise with his golf sticks and returned the salutation.

The one second sufficed to show her it was the same jolly, broad shouldered chap she had seen on the platform with a crowd of Yale boys. They both bent to pick up her valise when she heard him say, while his eyes twinkled with suppressed fun:

"I'm going to talk to you until your station comes, so you'd better make believe you know me."

Edyth looked up indignantly, but she could detect no disrespect in his face, just pure rollicking college boy fun, ready for a lark.

"Suppose I don't want to talk to you?" she challenged.

"You needn't, just as long as you'll let me talk to you. I've worked like a nigger the whole term, and I can't waste a moment beginning to have a bully time."

"What would the people on the car think if they knew I've never seen you before?" she demanded.

"They won't know if you smile at me and go right on chatting," he assured her.

"But you know it isn't proper, and I promised Miss Stanton to be cautious if she let me go alone." She smiled bewitchingly and began to page in her book.

"That old lady opposite is growing suspicious on account of your book." He leaned forward in his armchair and contemplated her with joy.

"Who is Miss Stanton?"

"Our teacher of mathematics. She usually chaperones me, but I made her see there was no occasion"—

"Not the least in the world," he said fervently, setting his tie.

"I'm beginning to think she had better have come! I think I'd best whirl my chair around. I've misgivings!"

"You can't. It's stationary," he exulted.

"I might change my seat," she began.

"I might, too," he threatened.

"No room."

"The chair has comfortable arms," he said suggestively.

"The old lady," reminded Edyth.

"Better stay then," he advised.

"Now, Harry wouldn't have forced himself upon"—

"Who's Harry?" he interrupted.

"He is at Harvard," murmured Edyth.

"We beat Harvard badly last Thanksgiving," he mused.

"Were you at Yale last Thanksgiving?" she queried innocently.

"Senior!" He looked hurt.

"Ah! So is Harry," she replied.

"On the team?" he demanded.

"No," she admitted unwillingly.

"Shortstop," he announced and drew himself up proudly.

"Harry is in a senior society," she began.

He smiled in a superior fashion and touched the golden wolf's head on his waistcoat.

"Well, all the same, he wouldn't have talked to me," she said in a tone of reproof, "and," she added, "I like his name."

"Burton sounds less frivolous."

"Awfully long," she demurred.

"Burt for short," he volunteered.

"I like Burt, too," she admitted.

"Yale blue would be becoming to you." He pulled out a blue silk scarf.

"So's red," she protested.

"Too like your hair. Let's try blue." And he handed her the scarf. She glanced at the old lady and stealthily held the scarf near her face.

"It's enchanting—the only right color," he beamed upon her.

"To speak of my hair as red!" she began. "You're the only single man"—

"I know, but I'm willing to change."

"What, the hair?" She bent over the glass and patted her pompadour into shape.

"No," he too hastily contradicted.

"Harry says it's pretty."

"I'd like to put Harry off the earth," he said emphatically.

"Then I couldn't wear blue. It would have to be black." She gave a little sigh.

"Black for Harry? Absurd!" he scorned.

"As I said before, you're the only single man"—

"And I told you before," he interrupted, "I'm eager to have you alter that."

"I think I was just at that point in my story," she said thoughtfully, picking up her book.

"Don't read or I'll change my seat, with all my traps, and the people will think we've had a quarrel."

"Then I won't talk to you any more." Edyth leaned far back in her chair and looked out of the window.

"I'll keep right on, and people will soon see something is wrong," he threatened. He tied his shoestring, and Edyth saw the very sole of his boot chuckle.

"Naturally it isn't proper for a very young lady to speak to a total stranger."

"I was seventeen last February."

"But you don't know anything about me!" he censured severely.

"I know your name is Burt." Edyth lingered over the name and smiled up at him.

"Sign of knowing one pretty well."

"I confessed about one named Harry," she admitted coyly.

"Yes, about one." He nodded his head.

"About the only Harry," she put in as an afterthought.

The conductor had walked through the train, calling out the next station. Neither of them observed him. They were both engrossed in studying out the initials of her traveling bag. The train was pulling into the station when Edyth accidentally looked out and recognized Mrs. Tillinghast. She snatched her small satchel and rushed from the train. Mrs. Tillinghast was looking anxiously at the forward car when Edyth touched her arm.

"Mercy, child, I feared you had not come!" she exclaimed in a tone of relief. Suddenly she extended her hand to greet some one else. Edyth turned, and her face assumed a perfectly rigid expression.

"Edyth, let me present Mr. Burton Gilmore—Miss Edyth Lawton!"

Her sin had found her out. This young fellow probably lived near the Tillinghasts and would some time or other disclose her whole disgraceful proceeding. She bowed mutely and frigidly.

"Why, you must have come on the same train!" Mrs. Tillinghast exclaimed. Edyth's face burned.

"Why, yes; pity we didn't know," Gilmore remarked chivalrously.

"He looked too nice not to be a gentleman," thought Edyth.

"Now, look here, both of you," said Mrs. Tillinghast as she led the way to the carriage. "I have all the rest of my house party assembled, and I find three couples can't abide each other."

A light began to break in upon Edyth. Her face was dimpling—enchanting, Gilmore thought.

"I'm so upset about your brother Harry not being able to come. I have a girl here who is so interested in Harvard," Mrs. Tillinghast explained.

Gilmore winked furtively at Edyth. "I'm awfully sorry, too," he said, stowing in the luggage. "I've heard lots about him lately."

As they sped up the drive Mrs. Tillinghast went on with her troubles. "I'm reduced to a stage of idiocy almost by getting the wrong people together. If you two are going to make it hard for me by deciding to be uncongenial, there's nothing in the world left for me to do but to jump off a dock."

Gilmore looked beseechingly at the girl.

"I won't make it hard for you, dear Mrs. Tillinghast," said Edyth, rubbing her head caressingly against her hostess' shoulder. But she smiled at Gilmore.

And they didn't.

Betting on a Certainty.

Peter Schemm, says the Philadelphia Times, was fond of telling the story of a German typesetter who had been boasting of his capacity for lager.

"Youse Dutchman," he was told by a bartender, "don't drink as much beer as people says youse do!"

"Of course not," chipped in one of the customers. "And I'll bet you, Dutchy, you can't drink a bucketful."

The German was lost in thought for a moment and then hurriedly rushed from the saloon, while the others roared with laughter. His boasting was still the topic of conversation when he returned, five minutes later, and calmly said:

"I'll take that bet."

The money was posted, a bar bucket holding five quarts was filled and the German promptly drank the beer and took the $5. Nobody questioned that he had won fairly, but one of the onlookers asked:

"Say, what did you leave the saloon for that time?"

"Why," he said as he winked with the air of a man who was far too smart for his fellows, "I yust went down to Schmidt's and drank a bucket to see if I vould be safe in taking dot bet."

The Great Vidocq.

Vidocq, the great French detective, was born in Arras in 1775. He began life as a baker and early became the terror of his companions by his athletic frame and violent disposition. At the same time he was a notorious thief, and after many disgraceful adventures he enlisted in the army. In 1796 he returned to Paris with some money, which, however, he soon squandered. Next he was sentenced at Lille to eight years' hard labor for forgery, but repeatedly escaped, and in 1808 he became connected with the Paris police as a detective.

His previous career enabled him to render important services, and he was appointed chief of the safety brigade, chiefly composed of reprieved convicts, which purged Paris of the many dangerous classes. In 1818 he received a full pardon, and his connection with this service lasted until about 1828, when he settled at St. Mande as a paper manufacturer. Soon after the revolution of 1830 he became a political detective, but with little success. In 1848 he was again employed under the republican government, but he died penniless in 1857.

Her Apology.

The local singer was resenting mildly to the hostess the large amount of praise which her guests was bestowing upon the visiting vocalist.

"They didn't applaud me that way," he complained.

"Oh, well, you know," she said apologetically and sympathetically, "he is a visitor whom we don't hear often, while we think of you as the Bible says, 'The poor we have with us always.'"

Then she was very much hurt because he refused to accept her apology and left the house in a huff.

First Old Maid—"Well, you know, marriage is a lottery, and I truly believe it."

Second Old Maid—"So do I. But where do you suppose I could get a ticket?"

Gladys—"How did you enjoy Mrs. Upperton's reception?"

Ethel—"Oh, great! It was the most complete failure I ever saw!"

Smith—"See Jones over there laughing so heartily? Somebody must have told him a funny story."

Brown—More likely Jones told it himself."

The man who is poor by nature is apt to be ruined by cultivation.

Many a courageous man will take water rather than pay for a drink.

RID THE SYSTEM OF POISONS

And You Need Have No Fear of Appendicitis, Peritonitis and Other Dreaded Ills.—

DR CHASE'S KIDNEY LIVER PILLS,

the Great Family Medicine.

When the bowels are constipated or sluggish in action the human body seems an easy prey to nearly every ailment to which human beings are subject.

The immediate result of inactivity of the bowels is the clogging and obstruction of the action of the kidneys and liver, the upsetting of the digestive organs and the forcing back into the system of poisonous impurities which contain the germs of disease.

Not only are colds and all contagious and infectious diseases more likely to attack a person subjected to constipation, but appendicitis, peritonitis, inflammation of the bowels and chronic dyspepsia are the direct result of neglecting to keep the bowels regular and active.

In health the bowels should move about once a day, otherwise, the effects are soon felt in the way of indigestion, headache, dizziness, bodily pains and feelings of uneasiness, languor and depression. The most prompt relief as well as the most thorough cure for constipation is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

No merely cathartic medicine can do more than relieve constipation. The bile which is poured into the intestines by the liver is nature's cathartic and consequently healthy liver action is essential to regularity of the bowels. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have a direct action on the liver and kidneys as well as the bowels, and for this reason effect a thorough cure of constipation.

Home of a Prince.

Very ingenious is the home of the Prince of Agra, in India, which is a floating palace of the most stupendous and magnificent proportions. Although of only two stories, its height is immense, the rooms being grand vaulted chambers, furnished in the most gorgeous oriental manner. All the chairs have golden arms, and precious stones are set in the backs. The wall decorations are beautiful beyond description, while the ceilings are tinted to represent the sky, silver stars appearing here and there on the dark blue background. The palace is made of both wood and stone, but so constructed that it floats with ease. When not in use, it is moored to the banks of the river Jumna.

Here the prince and his royal retinue betake themselves on sultry afternoons, and lazily the palace glides down the river to the soft, sweet music of harps. Up and down the tide it majestically floats like a huge white swan, while within the royal guests sip cooling beverages and idly dream away the sultry hours.

"How is that?"

"Why, just before the assessor gets to him he always manages to have a lot of stuff printed to the effect that he has been giving several millions to charitable and educational institutions. That makes his assessment schedule look more plausible."

Her Blessings.

When a man begins to count his blessings, he can generally find plenty to be thankful for, although sometimes he may include things which might not be regarded by other people as altogether joyous.

"I'm thinking about the wonderful progress the world has made and how much we've got to be thankful for," said Mrs. Matthews, rocking in her old stuffed chair, with a pair of knitting needles in her hands and a placid smile on her face.

"It is wonderful," admitted her niece.

"Seems as if everything turned to good. There's lightning, now. If it hadn't been for that, I never should have had those fine rods on the house and barn that make me feel so safe in a thunderstorm. And there's smallpox. If it hadn't been for that, we never should have known the blessings of vaccination, and if there hadn't been nearsighted folks nobody would have thought to invent magnifying glasses and specs. I declare, there's a sight of things to be thankful for."

Ended the Dispute.

Two ladies at a tea party got quarreling about their respective ages. At last, to end the dispute, one of them said in a conciliatory tone of voice:

"Don't let us quarrel over the matter any more, dear. I, at least, have not the heart to do it. I never knew who my mother was, for she deserted me when I was a baby, and who knows but that you may have been that heartless parent?"

CANADA'S VOLCANO

IT LOOKS AS IF CANADA HAD AN ACTIVE ONE.

Smoke and Large Rumblings Followed the Recent Slide of Rock into Arrowhead Lake—Various Theories as to the Cause—Roaring Was Continuous For Fully Five or Seven Minutes.

The Kootenay Mail has regarding the recent mountain slide into Arrowhead lake: "Many theories are rife as to the cause of the big slide at Arrowhead. Perhaps the most acceptable is that of ice expansion. According to this the recent thaws had filled every crevice with water and Friday being a very cold night, and freezing more and more all night and until late Saturday morning, the many bodies of water freezing expanded and forced the face of the mountain toward the water until at last it overbalanced and fell into the lake. If this be true the bodies of ice must have been many and the expansion very great.

"Another phase that has exercised the minds of the Arrowhead people is: Why was it that immediately after the mountain fell into the lake the water receded from the shore at Arrowhead? Should it not rather have risen? One seemingly satisfactory explanation is this: The face of the mountain fell sideways into the water, and away from Arrowhead, consequently the water would gather around the place of commotion, and for the time being leaving the vicinity of Arrowhead. This may have caused the receding wave.

"The freight shed at the deep water landing near Beaton was almost overwhelmed, and a quantity of freight was washed away.

SMOKE AND RUMBLING.

"Joseph Mailloux, who has charge of the freight shed at Beaton, declares, as do other creditable witnesses, that heavy volumes of smoke were visible round the mountain, from which a deep rumbling or roaring was plainly audible. The distance would be about four miles.

"John Copper, of Rossland, says: Just below the Lake View hotel where I was staying, the steamer Revelstoke was lying in her winter dock, with the ice around her perfectly solid. The waves, which were fully a dozen feet high, caught her and the ice and hurled them upon the Cottonwood Island shore. The returning wave dragged them back, and another dashed them ashore again, only to be sucked once into deep water as the wave receded. So it went on until she was severely damaged.

"Everyone was watching the peak. We noticed what we considered smoke or steam arising. It then became apparent that a portion of the mountain had fallen into the lake. As the Arrowhead had bot arrived I grew anxious, fearing that she might have been involved in the convulsion, and determined to investigate facts for myself.

"Accompanied by the Rev. Mr. McColl and his son, I set out along the north shore of the arm towards the peak. On every hand we could see the effects of the waves. At one point about 60 feet in shore, and full 25 feet above the normal level of the lake, we found block and slabs of ice, tons in weight, dashed up high and dry among the scrub and timber. As we advanced the smoke or steam rising from the mountain kept increasing in volume. We could hear loud rumbling, as of falling rocks.

"We reached a point where we could see the place the slide or avalanche had come down and plunged into the lake. Vast quantities of rocks, earth and timber lay piled on the narrow foreshore.

A PARALYZING SIGHT.

"While looking at the sight we were nearly paralyzed with horror at an outbreak of fearful groaning or bellowing which appeared to come from a point about 2,000 feet up the side of the precipice. I could not hear my companions' voices.

"I noticed no sign of eruption except the smoke, which may have concealed many things from us. The smoke rose to an immense height above the mountain, and floated away to the southeast. I know how dust, pulverized earth and snow will hang suspended in the air for a little time after a rock-fall of heavy blasting. The smoke, or steam and smoke mixed, which we saw was not of that kind. It was ejected or blown upwards in immense billows, accompanied by the roaring.

"I cannot be persuaded to believe the convulsion was caused by the falling of part of the mountain, owing to the freezing and expansion of large bodies of water. The and lasted for fully five or seven minutes.

"I confess I was terrified beyond power of description, and am sure my companions shared my horror. We retraced our steps as best we could, and as fast as we could stumble or scramble over rocks, logs, snow and ice to get anywhere from what seemed to us to be the beginning of the final destruction of things. In sober fact, it was the most awful experience of my life—an experience nothing could tempt me to repeat.

"Naturally we watched the mountain all day after our return. The smoke kept ascending during the time we had it under observation, and the rumbling was audible from time to time. It quieted down as night approached.

"The Rev. Mr. McCall will bear me out in all my statements and agrees with me as to the cause of the convulsion. Professor Dawson, of the geological survey, failed to obtain sounding in front of the peak, which shows a marked subsidence of the lake bottom, possibly corresponding with the uplift on the shore."

FREEDOM HAS NO CHARMS

Italian Likes the Penitentiary Better Than Toronto.

Michael Basso, the well-known Police Court interpreter, of Toronto, was in Kingston lately on business, and called at the penitentiary, where he met several acquaintances. Among them was Santillo Vincenzo, the Italian belonging to Toronto who was sent down for three years last summer for shooting at a comrade on a railway train near Rat Portage. Santillo was looking sleek and happy. When he saw Mr. Basso his cup of joy overflowed.

"The only thing required to make my existence perfect was to see you, dear friend," he exclaimed, in eloquent Italian, shaking Mr. Basso warmly by the hand. "I never was in a better place in my life," he went on rapturously. "I've got a good room, and clean, and more to eat and better than ever I had before. My, but it is a fine room, that one of mine. Say," he exclaimed in confidential tones, "I'd rather live here ten thousand times than in the City of Toronto, and if they let me stay here all the rest of my life I'll be satisfied.

"Then you don't wish me to use my influence to get your sentence shortened?" queried Mr. Basso.

"No, no, no, no!" cried Vincenzo. "I'm very good here. Don't do it, I pray you."

A Wonderful New Industry.

American farmers and newspaper men are very likely to become great beneficaries of a great scheme of cooperation in making the most of the corn crop, says The St. Paul Pioneer Press. Not of the grain merely, but of the whole plant, stalk, leaves, pith, tassels, husks, cobs and kernels. After a long course of experimentation, carried on at Kankakee, Ill., under the encouragement of the National Agricultural Department, it is found that high grade paper can be profitably manufactured, in different varieties, from various parts of the plant. One kind is made from the hard shell of the stalk, another from the pith, and a third from the husk. "From the pith is turned out the finest grade of oil paper, almost equal to linen paper," so it is claimed by experts at the department.

A machine has been invented, and is now being manufactured, which will take the cornstalk, with the ear still on it, husk the ear, separate the husk from the stalk, and then remove the shell fom the pith. Sending this machine into the fields, the paper manufacturers will propose to farmers to buy their corn crops as they stand in the fields. If the farmers wish the corn after it has been husked, it will be passed back to them; otherwise it will be marketed by the owner of the machine, who will convert every remaining part of the plant into some form of manufacture.

Betrayed By Egg Shells.

One of the most peculiar cases of circumstantial evidence bringing home a crime to its perpetrators has just resulted in the sentence of an Ohio man to death in the elcetric chair. Ai. Wade, the condemned man, was convicted of the murder of the Sullivan sisters, near Toledo, through a clue given by a lot of eggshells. The Sullivan sisters raised poultry and sold eggs and produce in the Toledo market. A 12-year-old boy informed one of the detectives assigned to the case that the day before the murder he had gathered enough eggs for the sisters to fill a big market basket so full that if the basket had been jarred the top ones would have fallen off. After the crime the basket was missing, but the boy followed a trail of broken eggs which had fallen off a wagon with a wobbly wheel that had been used by the guilty men, for there are others yet to be tried in addition to Wade. This trail led to the home of the Wade brothers, who are hucksters and known as bad men generally. Further investigation showed that there was a wagon in their barn with a wobbly wheel, and later eggshells bearing the Sullivan testing mark were found in a garbage barrel in the rear of the place. With this evidence the detectives faced the wife of one of the men, and she at once admitted having washed some bloody clothing for them. The first clue was a strange one, but it was sufficient to seal the fate of three men.

No other author receives more than £50 $250) per thousand words.

To Study Chinese Language.

An important question has been brought up at a meeting of the Chinese Empire Reform Association in Vancouver, that of the building of large headquarters building and the opening of a night school for the Chinese or for those who wish to study the Chinese language. It is proposed to appoint a highly educated and thoroughly up-to-date teacher, especially capable in present-day Chinese literature, who will have charge of the school. Under the new system a fairly complete education in the Chinese language may be given in five instead of ten years as formerly.

TO BE RELEASED.

Mrs. Maybrick Will be Released From Jail Next Year.

Mrs. Florence Maybrick, the American woman who was convicted at Liverpool in 1889 on the charge of poisoning her husband, James Maybrick, at Aigburth by arsenic, and whose sentence of death was commuted to penal servitude for life, will be released in 1904.

The announcement comes from the home office, which now authorizes her Washington lawyers to use the fact of her release next year as a reason for securing the postponment of the trial of the lawsuits bearing on the prisoner's interest in land in Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia, until she is able to personally testify.

Those who are in a position to know say that Home Secretary Akers-Douglas has shown great courtesy in connection with the suits now pending in America, that the decision to release Mrs. Maybrick was due entirely to efforts on this side of the Atlantic and that Ambassador Herbert never has been called upon to act in this matter.

Flee for your life from canned goods of all kinds. Tomatoes in tin are rank poison—slow death, to be sure, for strong stomachs, but poison all the same. Fruits and vegetables that are put up in glass are not to be trusted either. They are all "doped" to make them keep. Catsup that threatens to ferment is given a dose of sugar of lead. Pickles are made with acid instead of vinegar and colored with—the Lord knows what.

Dried fruits are subjected to sulphur fumes for three to twelve hours—or a mixture of salt and sulphur, which is still more deadly. This treatment not only bleaches the fruit, but keeps it from getting wormy. The flies and moths know better than to lay eggs on it—or if they should, the grubs would die as soon as they hatch and began to eat the stuff. It goes into the sulphur box discolored and full of rotten spots and comes out a sickly, slimy white. After it dries it is beautiful to look at, but desperately bad stuff to put into one's stomach. Dates, figs, raisins and prunes are all right.

"'"Yes," she told him.

"'Then he sot and sot and sot.

"'"Why don't you say somethin'?" she finally ventured.

A MISTAKEN IDEA.

Thinks Canadian Militia is Controlled by Imperial Authorities and Himself.

It is understood that a difference of opinion has arisen between Sir F. Borden, minister of militia, and the major-general commanding in regard to militia organization, and the result may be that the term of Lord Dundonald in Canada will be cut short.

In the estimates there is an item for expenditure on capital account in connection with militia organizations. Lord Dundonald, it is said, desires ten times more money in this connection than the minister can give and as a consequence of this refusal the elaborate scheme of the major-general, involving, it is understood, the whole reorganization of the defences of Canada will not be carried out. This scheme would cost over $12,000,000. The scheme of the major-general is said to be confidential, and will not appear in the annual report.

It is also reported in official circles that Lord Dundonald has got the idea, which General Hutton held strongly, that it is the general commanding and the imperial authorities and not the minister and the Canadian government that controls the militia.

As a result of the differences of opinion on questions of this kind, it is said that one year will likely end Lord Dundonald's stay here.

In respect to the vote on capital expenditure, which will be put in the supplementary estimates, it will amount to over $1,000,000 this year. Lord Dundonald is said to have wanted it to be $10,000,000 or $12,000,000. Last year it amounted to about $600,000. When Lord Dundonald learned that his scheme, which called for this heavy expenditure, could not be entertained by the government he was very dissatisfied, and now comes the report of his early retirement.

The extensive scheme, which Lord Dundonald has been at work on, involves everything in equipment establishment, including a balloon corps. It is said that the scheme is all sight, but the cost is too great for the country to stand at the present time. That is said to be the only reason why Sir Frederick Borden asked the commanding officer to control his plans.

Rich Negroes in New York.

The purchase by a wealthy colored family of an expensive residence in an aristocratic white neighborhood in Brooklyn has been the means of bringing to light the interesting fact that there are at least 200 colored families in the metropolis able to live families in themetropolis able to live in fine houses and spend from $10,000 to $25,000 a year in the ordinary expenses. Many of these people are well educated and cultured, but they are rigidly shut up to their own society in New York in spite of their wealth. They maintain their own social and club life and are quite as exclusive as are white people in the same circumstances. In some of the establishments a full retinue of servants is employed. The master has his butler and the mistress her maid, who, strange to say, are invariably whites, generally Scandinavians, who are devoid of race prejudice. An investigation would probably bring to light a large number of well-to-do negroes in other cities besides New York. They are generally of a retiring disposition and can be found only by careful inquiry.

A VERY SAD FATE

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT TO AN AMERICAN VESSEL.

Second Cabin of the Steamer Plymouth Cut Away and Obliterated, While the Crew, Asleep in the Hold, Were Killed by Torrents of Water.

New London, Conn., March 20.—In the fog which descended upon the waters of the sound last night the big Fall River passenger steamer Plymouth, with 500 passengers and a crew of 200 men, was run down while passing through the race, by the freight steamer City of Tauton, of the same line. A full hundred feet of the starboard side of the vessel was smashed in as if it had been paper, the impact threatening death to the occupants of the staterooms of the second cabin, which was cut away and obliterated as if it had never been, while down in the hold members of the crew, who were asleep in the steerage, were killed by the torrent of water that poured in through the great gap made by the bow of the freighter.

There was terror and dismay on the stricken ship, but there was no panic. Men and women comforted themselves with wonderful self-control.

The collision occurred after the vessel had clawed her way up the Sound through a fog, until she reached a point close east of Gull Island. The westbound steamer drove up out of the fog, and when she was sighted by the officers of the Plymouth, was too close to avoid the collision. There was a quick exchange of whistles, though whether they were correctly given or not there is no statement yet available, and then the crash. The bow of the westbound steamer penetrated ten feet into the hull of the Plymouth, and then as she backed away she raked the upper works of the passenger vessel with terrible destructiveness, tearing out the second cabin and ripping the staterooms to pieces as if they had been built of cardboard. Water poured into the hold, and drowned the men in their bunks.

In the next cabin, Jonathan W. Thompson was asleep in his berth. He was instantly killed.

The Plymouth was immediately headed for this city. It was thought at one time that the ship's company would have to take to the boats, but the closing of the collision bulkheads prevented the water from gaining and the vessel made the harbor and wharf unassisted.

There was no way of telling immediately how many persons were killed.

Six are certainly dead, and in the mass of debris from the wrecked cabin and staterooms there may be several more bodies, while in the steerage, where the water poured in like a Niagara, there may be and probably are bodies of others drowned beside those reported.

As the Plymouth was being made fast to the Fishers' Island Navigation Co.'s wharf there was seen to be a hole ten feet square in her hull on the starboard side, about 35 feet from her bow, while for a hundred feet her joiner work had been carried away, including the entire second cabin and seven staterooms on the saloon deck.

New York, March 20.—The Plymouth left New York for Fall River at 6 o'clock last night, with about 500 passengers aboard. The City of Tauton left Fall River for New York last night, with cargo, but no passengers.

WONDERFUL ESCAPE.

New London, Conn., March 20.—A diver was employed during the morning in searching for bodies in the hold of the steamer. In one of the cabins M. H. Zack and wife, of Tauton, were asleep when the collision occurred. The cabin was wrecked, but they escaped unhurt.

SOMETHING MYSTERIOUS.

Odd Circumstances Surround the Absence of G. M. Mackay.

G. M. Mackay, superintendent of the Toronto Window Cleaning Company, is missing under peculiar circumstances. On Saturday he went up to the Working Boys' Home and bade good-bye to a number of friends there. In Saturday evening's Telegram appears this death notice; "Mackay—Suddenly in this city on Saturday, March 21, 1903, after a short illness, George H. Mackay, youngest and beloved son of Andrew Mackay, of Montreal. Funeral private."

Mackay lately has roomed at 44 Richmond street, and when the police went there they found the death notice cut from the paper and stuck on the door with the usual display of crape. They broke in the door, but Mackay was not there. So far the mystery has not been cleared up.

A TRIPLE TRAGEDY.

A. M. Beatty, Flour Mill Agent, His Wife and Son Found Dead.

A mysterious tragedy which occurred Saturday night was discovered when the bodies of A. M. Beatty, local representative of the Washburn-Crosby Mills, of Minneapolis, his wife and their son, twenty months' old, were found at their home an Gilbert avenue. A note written by Beatty was found. In it he accused his wife of killing the baby, and the police think the woman may have killed herself and the child on account of domestic troubles.

It is stated that divorce proceedings had been instituted, but were withdrawn before the birth of the child. As Beatty was known to have been playing cards near his home on Saturday night at midnight, it is thought that he found the dead bodies on his return home, and that he deliberately took his own life. Beatty lay down beside his wife's dead body to die from asphyxiation. In that position their bodies were found. There is nothing to indicate how any of the family came to their death, except the line left by Beatty and that the gas was on. There was evidence that Mrs. Beatty was dead hours before her husband came home. The baby possible may have died after he returned. Beatty was prominent in business circles. He came originally from Memphis.

George Young and Steven Hunter spent a day or two in Fernie this week.

William Ridley who resided in Morrissey for quite awhile has gone to Elkmouth where he has found employment with a lumber company.

William A. Evans and his son will leave Morrissey on Saturday morning for Nantikoke, Pa., out of the 56 men who came to this camp from Pennsylvania last summer there is but one dozen left.

B. Owen, Foss & McDonalds time keeper is making preparations to leave Morrissey within a few days with a force of men for Michel, where he will commence work.

John A. Ferguson, bookkeeper for Foss & McDonald received a letter yesterday informing him of the death of his father who died in his 84th year at Manchester, Ontario.

Messrs. Foss & McDonald will finish their contract getting out stone for the coke ovens within a week, they will go from here to Michel where they have a contract with the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company to get out stone sufficient to build 250 coke ovens.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Hamilton, Mr. T.H. Huber, Mr. Berridge, Mr. Spence and Mr. Richardson attended the ball at the Australian Hotel last Monday evening. We understand that this is the last ball of the season.

The following gentlemen are here from Fernie this week taking an inventory of the Company Store lately purchased by the Trites-Wood Co. Messrs. Brandow, Turney and Richards represent the Coal Co. and Messrs. Wood, Trites, Clode and McCuaig represent the Trites-Wood Co.

The miners held a meeting last Monday evening at the C.P.R. Camp, it was attended by about 130 men. The vote taken whether the Union would accept the settlement as effected by the canciliation committee and the executive board of the union. Ten men voted in favor of accepting the settlement and 113 voted in favor of continuing the strike.

We are called upon to cronicle the death of Mrs. Robinson who died last night. The facts surrounding this death make it a very sad one. Mrs. Robinson has been suffering from tuberculosis In the throat and lungs. Mrs Robinson came to Morrissey from Michel on the 1st of January, she was born at Tyldsley, Lancashire England where her parents live. Funeral services will be conducted on Sunday by the Rev. Connors of the Methodist church.

Too late for last week.

J. B. Turney, of Fernie, has been in Morrissey this week on business.

Charles Spence returned from a two weeks visit to Alta. on Monday.

Rev. Father McKinnon has left Morrissey to reside permanently at Rossland.

Allan McDonald and Gus Bloomquist returned this week from Cranbrook where they have been visiting.

Dick Kane, the inebriate whom the police of Fernie sent to the Cranbrook hospital has returned to Morrissey this week.

Tom Brazil, our tipple foreman, has been whiling away the time during the strike by trapping, he has some nice pelts.

W. Harris, our late boarding house man, has located in Montana on the Great Northern construction work at Haden, where he has a saloon.

Rev. Conors was a very busy man on Wednesday, he received from Cranbrook a car load of lumber for the new church at Morrissey himself attending to the unloading of same.

Mr. Cann, who has resided in Morris- for quite a while and worked for the Co. previous to the strike, moved to the junction on Tuesday where he is building a store house, he expects to do a mercantile business in the new town.

The following parties, members of the snow shoe club of Fernie, were in Morrissey last Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Trites, Messrs. Turney, Klauer and Brandow and the Misses Thompson, McDonald and Ryan.

Robert Gourley and family have arrived in Morrissey from Seattle, Wash. They will take charge of the large boarding house vacated by Harris. Mr. Gourley is giving the premises a thorough cleansing. He promises to keep a good house.

The ball at the Australian hotel on St Patrick's night is alleged to have been a success. It should have been judging by the length of time it took some of our neighbors to return, some of them were away two days and nights.

We regret that some of our people think so little of their town that they would leave it on an important occasion like St. Patrick's night to attend a ball at Elko when we had a ball at one of our hotels. Their mode of traveling was good, they had a speeder.

Mr. Brandow, pay master, is here with the cash, making glad the hearts of those who worked the first part of February and have some money coming to them. We had begun to think that there was nobody in Morrissey, but pay day brings them out, there are lots of people here yet.

Alfred Fox, boss carpenter for the Coal Co. here, and A. A. McDonald, of the carpenter force, leave Morrissey on Saturday the 21st, for Montana ; Jack Bucke, W. Herbe, R. Hughes, J. Kaminskie will also leave on Saturday for Montana.

The "Stork" still continues to hover over Morrissey, there is probably no immediate danger of the town becoming depopulated as the birth rate is very high. Born on the 16th, to Mr. and Mrs. Longstaff, a daughter. On St. Patrick's day lady Erin came to make her home with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Miller.

There will be a general exodus after pay day from Morrissey. A large percentage of the men who are leaving will go to the new railroad that was lately let by contract between the Crow's Nest Southern and the main line of the G. N. This new road leaves the Crow's Nest Southern about eight miles beyond the international boundary.

UNDER DOMINION CHARTER.

Fernie Board of Trade Meet—Annual Election of Officers—President's Address.

The Fernie Board of Trade held its annual meeting on Wednesday evening, March 25th and organized under its new Dominion charter.

The retiring president, Mr. W. R. Ross delivered the following address :

"Since the last annual meeting of the Fernie Board of Trade, at which I had the honor of being elected President, many things haye occurred in the community represented by the Board of Trade of a more or less startling nature much of which has been sadly detrimental to commercial prosperity.

The principal industry is that of coal production and coke manufacture and anything which retards the ordinary operation of the coal mines necessarily affects every other commercial pursuit carried on in the vicinity.

The disastrous explosion in the Coal Creek mines last May which carried grief and desolation to many happy households in the community, was a calamity from which the industry has not yet recovered and whose effects will be felt for some time to come.

This Board of Trade was mainly instrumental in the formation of the Miners Relief Fund which has been much appreciated by the relatives of miners who were killed in the explosion.

The above mentioned misfortune was followed by a strike lasting some 40 days ending on the 4th of August last, since which time industrial conditions were more or less unsettled until the present strike commenced on February 11th.

The Council of the Board of Trade realizing the disastrous effect of these strikes on local affairs as well as upon the whole community directly or indirectly dependent on the output of the coal mines, made overtures to the Associated Boards of Trade, with a view towards having them make an effort to intervene as mediators between the contending parties. This organization, although thoroughly representative and although such mediation would have been within the purview of its constitution, did not see fit to support our efforts. The action referred to was in connection with the strike which ended in August and there are members of the Board of Trade who still entertain the opinion that if such mediation had then been employed and matters had then been thereby settled on a more satisfactory and permanent basis, the present difficulty might not have occurred.

The Board of Trade has also taken action with regard to the establishment of proper Government offices for the conduct of the public business in the community, and the carrying out of public works, notably wagon roads, in all of which matters we have met with more or less success, but, as Rome was not built in a day, we must continue to persist along these lines.

I must also refer to another matter in which the merchants belonging to this Board of Trade have been deeply interested and that is the question of the discontinuance of the Company's stores as such. We hope that the Company's action in voluntarily discontinuing Company's stores in this matter will have the effect on the commercial community so earnestly desired.

Notwithstanding the disadvantages mentioned, the community can truthfully be said to be, on the whole, better off than at the corresponding period last year. At any rate there have been no business failures. The activity in the lumbering business which is felt in this district is cause for much congratulation.

On the whole we have reason to hope that when the present industrial trouble becomes settled, as it must sooner or later, the community may look hopefully forward to that era of prosperity which the resources of the district warrant us in expecting.

Since last year we have succeeded in obtaining a charter under the Dominion Act and we can now proceed to organize in proper shape as a regularly constituted Board of Trade, commencing with this meeting.

The Board of Trade had much pleasure in entertaining the Associated Board of Trade at their Fifth Annual Convention a few days ago and our effort in that direction appeared to be much appreciated.

I have served the Board of trade as its President during the last 12 months and although conscious of many shortcoming I much appreciate the honor which was done me and now resign that honored position conscious that I did my best under existing conditions. I wish the Board of Trade every success in its future operations."

Mr. H. W. Herchmer moved the adoption to the address and in doing so paid a tribute to the excellent manner in which Mr. Ross had fulfilled his duties as president.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows :

Pres.—J. A. Rennie
Vice Pres.—A. Joyce
Sec.-Treas.—J. S T. Alexander.
Executive Council—Messrs. H. Bentley, A. H. Cree, Fred Stork, J. D. Quail, J. H. Tonkin, A. W. Bleasdell, A. B. Trites and H. W. Herchmer.

The new constitution was adopted. The membership fee has been raised from $2 to $5 per year. Regular meetings will be held on the 2nd Monday of every month, and regular executive meetings will be held on the preceeding Wednesdays.

POLICE COURT.

The case of J. W. Morrison of being in the mob of last week was continued on Wednesday and finished on Thursday forenoon. The defence produced 18 witnesses whose evidence went to show that the accused was in Fernie from 9 p.m. till 3 a.m. of the night of the 19th Stipendiary Magistrate Forbes in summing up stated that the evidence of Mr. Drinnan for the prosecution and the witnesses for the defence were conflicting and that he would have to send the accused up for trial. Morrison was allowed out on reduced bail.

County Court was held by Judge Forin on Tuesday evening when Demsey alias Landon was tried for the theft of a watch from Ryan. Russell Evans gave damaging evidence in explaining that he had traded watches with Landon and on this account the stolen article was found in his possession. Other witnesses were examined and Landon was sentenced to 3 months imprisonment at Nelson.

THE BIG STRIKE IS OVER.

The Settlement Signed by Representatives of the Three Unions---The Men Return to Work.

The contract published in our last issue was signed on Monday evening in the Coal Company's office by G. F. Dougherty, President of District No. 6, W. F. of M.; P. Christopher, President of District No. 7, W. F. of M., and three members of the Executive of the District Union, on behalf of the employees, and by General Manager, J. H. Tonkin, on behalf of the company. The document was witnessed by the seven members of the conciliation committee. Later the same evening the Executive of District Union, No. 7, met and declared the strike off. Thus was brought to close one of the most important labor struggles in the history of the province.

On Monday afternoon the Gladstone Union met for the discussion of the of the strike situation which from the vote on Saturday at Michel and Morrissey was assuming new proportions. At this meeting the feeling seemed to be prevalent that the schedule for Coal Creek was unsatisfactory and they decided to stand out for better terms. But when the strike was declared off that evening by the representatives of the Western Federation of Miners the Gladstone Union took a sensible view of the matter and calling a general meeting for the next morning they passed a resolution instructing their representatives on the District Board to sign the contract and also sent messages to the two other representatives at Morrissey asking them to do likewise. On Thursday afternoon these five gentlemen signed the agreement. The names of the executive wno signed are as follows:

Fernie: T. Letcher, J. Howbrook, T. Davies.

Morrissey: P. Christopher, J. T. Davies, J. Ballusky.

Michel: W. H. Evans, J. E. Ryan, H. S. Bell.

Tuesday morning the Coal Company caused to be posted in conspicuous places notices stating that work would be resumed at Coal Creek mines on Wednesday morning and that the men desiring work were to apply personally to the mine superintendent. The regular train service was also posted as follows:—

Lv. Fernie 7	a.m.	Lv. mines 8:30	p.m.
" 2:30	p.m.	" 4	p.m.
" 5	p.m.	" 6	p.m.
" 11	p.m.	" 12:30	p.m.

SUNDAY

Lv. Fernie 7	a.m.	Lv. mines 8	a.m.
" 5	p.m.	" 5:40	p.m.

On Tuesday afternoon at 2:20 the joyful sound of the old-time warning whistle from the locomotive was heard —the pleasantest sound in our ears for the past seven weeks. The two coaches were crowded with men who went up to apply for work and on the following morning the first crew of about the same number of men went up to work.

Mr. John Keen was the first to break the joyful news to us at 10:30 on Monday evening. He had just returned from witnessing the signing of the agreement.

Mr. Keen is a man of action and of indomitable energy and will, and moreover he feels keenly the responsibility of any public trust imposed upon him. Mr. Keen, as president of the B.C. Mining Association, was particularly interested in bringing about, through the aid of the Conciliation Commission, an equitable and permanent settlement of the labor disputes of the Crow's Nest collieries, and on Monday evening he was well able to say, "It is finished" with the air of a man who had labored incessantly and faithfully and who was proud to hand his report to the executive at Victoria knowing that he and his colleagues had done what few men in the province could have done towards restoring peace and harmony where before had existed industrial war and discord. Mr. Keen expressed himself freely on the bright outlook ahead of Fernie and district. He felt certain that now under permanent conditions the great coal industry would develope with marvellous rapidity and that at the end of the three years Fernie would have at least a population of 5,000 people. He had sacrificed much personal loss by remaining here so long but he lost sight of this in the general satisfaction and rejoicing caused by such an amicable and fair settlement.

Mr. Flumerfelt congratulated everybody on the outcome. He congratulated the Coal Company and their employees, the B.C. Mining Association and the Province of British Columbia in general, on the satisfactory conclusion of a strike that threatened to paralyze the industries of a large part of the province. He said that the settlement proved the wisdom of the formation of the B. C. Mining Association and it raised the point as to whether a voluntary conciliation commission of this nature is not more useful than an arbitration commission appointed by the government. "I believe," he continued, "that the signing of this contract by company and union marks an era of unprecedented prosperity, not only in this valley but throughout the Kootenay and Boundary Country. It means that we will have a period of industrial peace unknown before and by the permanent way in which it guarantees a fairly certain fuel supply to the metalliferous industries it is one of the most important events in the current history of the province. The different industries of the province will advance hand in hand and I predict great things for the future of B.C." He expressed much satisfaction that his employees, many of whom had been with them for years, would not be required to sever their connection, as they had managed at an additional cost of $500 per day to keep their smelter going by securing other coke. He was perfectly contented with the settlement and he did not grudge the time and money he had spent in helping to bring it about.

Mr. Keffer stated that the Mother Lode would be opened up as soon as coal could be rushed through, and two furnaces would be blown in about ten days later. He was satisfied that the permanent settlement of the fuel supply would tend to strengthen the confidence of the outside capitalist who had of late looked askance at investments in the province. This would result in increase of production and the Kootenays and the Boundary Country would go ahead with marvellous rapidity.

Mr. W. G. Gaunce was glad to be able to return home in the conviction that every member of the committee had worked zealously and conscientiously for the earnest solution of a difficult problem and was delighted with the issue. The men had gained much and the company had granted quite graciously many of the contentions of the committee. The question was an involved one and merited the extreme patience showed it. This method of solving labor disputes must make headway as a consequence. The advantages accruing from the settlement of the question are many and far-reaching. Industrial prosperity in the metalliferous districts depends on reliable supplies of cheap fuel and if, as believed, harmony shall prevail in this fuel region for the next few years, the entire province must reap large returns. The province seems to have been rather unfortunate of late years, but let us hope that a new era has at last dawned.

The gentlemen of the Conciliation Commission met late on Monday evening and worked well on into the morning hours completing their report to the B. C. Mining Association This report was expressed to the executive at Victoria on the day following.

Four of the commission left on Tuesday's west bound train. They were Messrs. J. Keen, C. Foley, M. P. McAndrew and H. Seaman. These gentlemen left direct for their homes. Mr. Flumerfelt left on the east bound express for Montreal the same evening. He expects to be away for four or five weeks on business connected with his company. Messrs. Gaunce and Keffer although anxious to get away reasoned that they might as well remain in Fernie as at Kitchener where the train was blocked and they did not leave until Wednesday morning. The former of these gentlemen goes around by Spokane. Mr. G. F. Dougherty left on the same train for his home in Greenwood.

In publishing the contract form last week an addenda to article 2 was omitted. The object of this added clause being to secure each miner a minimum of $3 per day, if he earns it, in working in different places, the investigation committee of the miners and the Company officials to decide when a miner is earning that amount. There was also added a schedule for coke-oven workers. The daymen in all cases excepting watchmen work 10 hours per day. The rates are as follows:—

Locomotive engineers.....	$3.00	per day
Blacksmiths.....	3.00	" "
Watchmen.....	2.25	" "
Larrymen.....	2.00	" "
Plasterers.....	2.00	" "
Carters.....	2.00	" "
Yardmen.....	2.00	" "
Blacksmith helpers.....	2.00	" "
Laborers.....	1.80	" "

Oven drawers 75 cents per small oven of 5½ tons, 95 cents per large oven of 7½ tons.

Loaders 16 cents under 200 tons

Loaders 17 " over " "

Due notice to be given to drawers in changing from one size to the other.

POLICE COURT.

The trial of J.T. Davies, secretaay of the District Union, charged with being in the mob at Coal Caeek mines was commenced yesterday morning. The conrt room was cleared by order of Stipendiary Magistrate Forbes on the suggestion of the prosecuting lawyer, H. W. Herchmer. It was contended that good order and proper decorum was not maintained by those who attend these cases.

The first witness for the prosecution was R. Drinnan, who swore that he was awakened at 10:30 on the night of the 19th of March. He dressed and went down to the office. The accused was standing outside of the office in the rays of the electric lights and he clearly recognized him as he passed him. He wore a muffler about the lower part of the face. but was in no other way disguised. He wore a cap and a suit of dark clothes, which he thought were brown. He was not blackened and he was positive of the man. He had not changed his mind about Morrison and though he had not seen the accused so long as he had Morrison he was equally certain that he could not be mistaken. He also gave some evidence relating to Morrison and Patterson whom he recognized in the office.

Wm. McMillan Alexander swore that he was a mine foreman ot No. 1 Mine Coal Creek. At 11:30 on the night of Mar. 19th a mob came to his house at Coal Creek mines and pounded on the door. He hastily put on some clothing and went down stairs and found 8 or 10 men in the room. The men told him he was wanted at an important meeting down town, that he must go that night and at once. The accused was in the room with a cloth about his head and over his eyes. This cloth he had trouble in adjusting by slipping the edge under his cap. He asked for a few minutes to dress and the accused ordered him to be quick. He was then on the point of going back upstairs when he turned and saw the face of the accused plainly as he was busy adjusting the cloth which had become displaced. He looked at him for about a minute. He thought he had recognized the accused before and he was sure of it then. He then went up stairs and by making considerable noise with his shoes, he managed to open the window without being detected, dropped from the roof of the veranda into the snow and gained admittance into Mr. Drinnan's house.

Cross-examined by W. R. Ross, who is defending the accused, he said the accused wore dark clothes, they were not brown, but he thought they were dark grey or black, wore no muffler over chin but his throat was muffled up either by the collar being turned up or by a muffler he did not know which. The mob was in his house abont 20 minutes judging by the time the noise subsided. He had known the accused for some time. The accused had worked under him at one time and he once had occasion to correct him and report him for neglect of duty. He had been promoted from boss-driver to mine foreman on March 14th he been idle during the strike up till the 15th and then had started to work for the Company. He did not think he was scabbing.

Chief of Police McMullin was the first witness in the afternoon. He testified that he saw the accused in Fernie about 2 o'clock on the morning of tne 20th. The accused started to go with him to the mines but when about a mile up he turned back saying he didn't believe there was anything in the report. There was nothing in his manner at the time to arouse his suspicions.

John Hunt one of those who had been run out testified that he had not recognized the accused in the mob.

J. Ballusky swore that he had seen accused in Fernie from 10:30 to 3 o'clock in the morning with intervals of not greater than half an hour.

Wm. Ingram testified that he saw accused about 10 o'clock on the night of March 19th in the Royal Hotel Billiard room. He also remembered seeing him there within a few moments of 12 o'clock. He knew the accused by slght and did not think he could have been mistaken in the man. Mr. Ingram had been playing checkers in the interval and he did not know if the accused had left the room or not during that time.

The case was adjourned until Monday.

R. Madison who had been summoned to appear on the charge of being in the mob was arrested by the police last night.

Three men, named J. Burrows, M. McAuley and — Rolland, who were summoned to appear on a charge of being mixed up in the recent outrage at Coal Creek mines have disappeared. Two others against whom no summons had been served have also mysteriously left town. Frank Lewis and — Solosky got out immediately after it happened. It is thought that these two participated in the run-out.

A. Patterson who was arrested and who was allowed out on his own and two and two others' bonds for $100 each left the town at the first opportunity. Patterson, McAuley and Rolland were seen at Frank but Constable Kummer, who went down to investigate, could not find them. J. Burrows was followed as far as Jennings but there all traces of him were lost.

The police are working quietly on the matter and it is reported that information showing the origin of the plot has been unearthed. This information goes to show that the instigators and counsellors were not in the mob. It is probable that further arrests will be made.

Chief of Police McMullin is gradually lessening the special force of police that he had on during the strike. Constable Hoskins has gone back to his old job at Kimberley and Constable Dow is back to Wardner Special Constable Randall is on at the mines, Coal Creek. There is no sign of any trouble since the mines have opened.

ASK FOR GOVERNMENT AID.

Executive of Board of Trade take Action to Improve Roads and Secure Sewerage.

The executive of the Fernie Board of Trade met on Wednesday evening. There were present Messrs. Rennie, Joyce, Stork, Alexander, Tonkin, Cree Quail, Bleasdell and Herchmer.

The most important matter discussed was the great need of government assistance in this town and district. A committee consisting of Messrs. Stork, Cree, H. W. Herchmer, and Alexander, was appointed to draw up a resolution asking the government to make a requisition for the building of a road to Morrissey, for the widening of the road to Coal Creek mines, for the improvement of the streets in the town, and for the putting in of a sewerage system in the town.

Other business of a routine nature was gone through. Joyce's hall was rented for the purpose of holding regular and executive meetings. The former is to be held on the second Monday of every month and the executive on the first Wednesday of every month. The next regular meeting will not be held on Monday, the 13th, on account of it being Easter Monday and it is called for Tuesday evening.

The committee met the next evening and drew up the following resolutions, one copy of each being sent to E. C. Smith, M.P.P., and another to Chief Commissioner Wells of the Lands and Works Department:

Whereas the sanitary conditions at present existing in the town of Fernie are a menace to the public health and as the population is steadily increasing, the need for a proper method of sanitation is daily becoming more urgent:

Be it resolved that we, the Fernie Board of Trade, do humbly petition the government of British Columbia to enact such legislation as will permit the town of Fernie to construct sewers and discharge its sewerage into the Elk River.

Whereas the population of Fernie is steadily increasing and houses are being rapidly built up on the outskirts of the present occupied portion of the said town:

And whereas owing to the great amount of traffic constantly passing up and down, our streets and roads have been in a deplorable and dangerous state:

And whereas considerable expenditure is necessary to put said roads and streets into a safe condition:

Be it resolved that we, the Fernie Board of Trade, do hereby petition the government of British Columbia asking that a sum of $2,000 be appropriated for this purpose and that the proper officials be instructed to have the said roads and streets put in a safe condition with as little delay as possible.

Whereas the present road between Fernie and Coal Creek mines is inadequate to accommodate the amount of traffic passing over it:

And whereas it is of great importance to the people of Fernie and those residing at the said mines that goods may be transported from one point to the other:

Be it resolved that the government of British Columbia be memorialized to have the said road graded and widened so as to allow loads to be hauled upon it and teams and waggons to pass each other thereon.

Another resolution asked for $10,000 for the construction of a road from Fernie to Elko.

A resolution was also forwarded asking for the appointment of a number of commissioners ta look after the sanitation and fire protection of the town with power to levy taxes to pay for such improvements.

AN EXPERT'S OPINION.

Mr. J. L. Parker, the well-known superintendent of the North Star mine, in the course of a speech at the Jamieson banquet at Cranbrook said:

"Turning our attention to the coal fields of the Crows Nest Pass railway, and as a mining engineer who has been in the past associated as engineer and manager of collieries mining from 500 to 1,500 tons of coal per day, I may be allowed to speak with some knowledge of the subject, and to express my conviction that the Crows Nest Pass Coal field, whilst playing a most important part in the business line of this section is distinued from the valuable character and analysis and thickness of its coal seams to play a greater part in the industrial world in the future. Wherever coal has been found of similar quantity and thickness and spread over such large area, as this appears to do, manufacturing industries have been established. And when we are informed, although I have not yet seen them, that adjacent to this coal field discoveries of large bodies of bessemer iron ore have been made with limestone in abundance, I can see little reason to doubt that somewhere in East Kootenay we will see another Pittsburg, possibly a miniature one, but a town of similar industrial capabilities. Whilst waiting for a market for the iron or steel, the collieries will be worked to their fullest extent, since the north-west is opening up rapidly. But the south will, I am reasonably certain, take all the surplus coal, since there is no coal field west of Connelsville, Pa., that has coal of the quantity and quality of our coal fields. West at Wilkeson, Washington, there is a small bituminous coal field, but it has sufficient to do to supply its local necessities, and its distance, makes competition impossible. The same remark applies to the coal field on Vancouver Island, so that the Crows Nest Pass coal field can be looked upon as being essentially necessary to both Canada and the bordering American States. and I do not think it to be any exaggerated statement to make, that inside of ten years 10,000 tons of coal per day will be mined in these coal fields. This means a large number of miners, and a larger population, and with the great Northwest growing, cloth, dressgoods, shoes, and the hundred and one articles necessary for the population will be needed, so that I expect the falls at Bull river to be harnessed, and mills established Later on as we grow, and a market for pig iron and steel is found, possibly in the orient, I foresee blast furnaces, bessemer steel converters and rolling mills at work, and East Kootenay teeming with business life and activity."

AT THE MINES.

The condition of the Coal Creek mines is such that shipments are being made already in small quantities but it will be some time before the mines are in good shape.

The high line of No. 2 is the only place now workable. The lower levels of No. 2 was never fully repaired since the explosion and this work will be continued as rapidly as possible No. 1 is in good shape and will be shipping out coal by the middle of next week.

In No. 3 a long delay will follow before it is in good shape. The company were making successful efforts to keep it pumped during the strike but owing to the interference of the mob the pumps were stopped and became frozen up. It is estimated that it will take three to four weeks to pump it out and get it in working trim. This to the company means a loss from twenty to twenty five thousand dollars, and injures the men by cutting a large number off from employment. One of the first things to attend to at the mines was the clearing away of ice which had accumulated on the tracks. There is no difficulty in securing plenty of men. Up to Thursday evening 360 men had filed their applications.

Ten cars of coke were shipped on Thursday. This was old coke that had been lying beside the ovens. The ovens themselves are banked and as soon as slack can be got to charge them again they will be drawn.

The stock-taking at the Coal Creek store commenced on Tuesday and upon the completion of this work later in the week the store was taken over by the new firm. The store at Michel and Morrissey were similarly taken over last week and now the Trites-Wood Co. Ltd. is fully launched.

PATHETIC ENDING

SIR HECTOR MACDONALD SUICIDES IN PARIS.

Sad Ending of a Man Who Rose from the Ranks to be a Major-General—Could not face Charges of Immorality Laid Against Him.

A dispatch from Paris, dated March 26, says: Major-General Sir Hector Macdonald, commanding the British forces in Ceylon, and one of the foremost officers in the British army, against whom charges, based on immoral conduct, were filed some time ago, committed suicide at the Hotel Regina here. He shot himself in the right temple shortly after noon and expired a few minutes later. The general was alone in his small chamber at the hotel at the time of the tragedy. One of the female attendants heard the pistol shot, and opening the door saw the general's figure outstretched on the floor with the blood gushing from a bullet wound in the head. She ran screaming to the balcony overlooking the lobby of the hotel, where many guests, including a number of ladies, were assembled. The proprietor was the first to reach the expiring man. Medical help was immediately summoned, but was found to be useless, death ensuing quickly. The commissary of police was notified and, accompanied by a doctor, proceeded to a preliminary investigation. No money or papers of any kind were found in Sir Hector's baggage. Two notes written in English were found lying on a table in his room, and these were taken possession of by the authorities, but it is understood their contents have no bearing on the suicide. In the general's coat, lying on the bed, were found some photographs. The British ambassador and the consulate were notified later and Consul-General Englis visited the hotel and took charge of the body, which was placed on the bed. The door was then locked, the consul-general taking the key. The French officials took possession of the revolver.

Sir Hector Macdonald arrived in Paris on Friday evening, from London on his way back to Ceylon, where it was understood that an immediate court-martial would be held to clear up the charges made against him. On reaching the hotel at 11 o'clock at night he was told that only a small and indifferent room was available. He replied that that was quite sufficient. He was not accompanied by a valet. He said he intended only to stay a day or two in Paris. Little was seen of him since his arrival. He was, however, in the hotel lobby about noon to-day, and it is believed that a newspaper printed in English, containing a resume of the grave charges brought against him and embellished with the general's portrait in full uniform came under his attention. He left the lobby, going to his room, and the pistol shot followed soon after.

The tragic end of "Fighting Mac," who, the son of a Highland cotter, rose from the position of a draper's assistant to be a honored general in the British army, has caused great surprise and deep sorrow in London. The nature of the offences with which he was charged had not become generally known to the public, but has been common gossip in military circles, and although in the army and among his Highland comrades especially there is keen grief, their feeling is that it was "better to die thus than face dishonor." Sir Hector was separated from his wife many years ago, and before he got his commission. He has not lived with her since. He leaves a son who is being educated in an English public school.

Sir Hector's great chance came when as a sergeant during the Afghan campaign of 1879 to 1880 with a small force, he by a furious bayonet charge, cleared out a body of Afghans who were lying in ambush for Lord Roberts. For this feat Lord Roberts offered him the choice of the Victoria Cross or a commission. He chose the latter. His great military achievement was leading the Black Soudanese brigade in the Omdurman campaign against the Khalifa.

The official announcement made by the governor of Ceylon in the legislature, Monday, that Major-General Macdonald would be court-martialed, and the publicity given to the affair, were evidently the determining motives for the suicide. His friends attribute the unfortunate business to his broken health and shattered nerves, the outcome of two campaigns in the Soudan and South Africa. An attack of dysentery and a touch of sunstroke at Paardeberg during the South African campaign left serious effects and a wound he received in the leg healed badly. It is stated that he often complained of pains in the head, and in Ceylon his health and the depression from which he was suffering grew worse to such an extent that there was talk of invaliding him from the service.

A masked man entered the C. P.R. station at Tweed, Ont., on March 26 at about 4 o'clock in the morning while Operator Murphy was lying on the counter and ordered Murphy to throw up his hands. Murphy kicked the revolver out of the man's hands and jumped up clinched with him and called for help. Baggageman Thompson came to his assistance and the police being telephoned for the man was handcuffed and taken to the cells.

ANTARTCTIC RESEARCH.

British Explorers Reach a Far Southern Point.

Dispatches from Lyttleton, New Zealand, state that the British Antarctic exploration ship Discovery has been in winter quarters in Victoria Land since February of last year, and during that time valuable records were obtained by sleighing parties. Lieut. Shackleton and his party successfully established a record in their expedition to Mount Terror, travelling over the ice barrier under severe sleighing conditions with a temperature of 58 degrees below zero.

Commander Scott, Dr. Wilson, assistant surgeon, and Lieut. Shackleton travelled for 94 miles to the south, reaching land in latitude 80 degrees, 17 minutes longitude, 163 degrees west, and establishing the world's record for the farthest point south. The journey was accomplished under the most trying conditions. The dogs all died, and three men had to drag the sleighs back to the ship. Shackleton almost died from exposure, but is now quite recovered. The ice barrier is presumably afloat, it continues horizontal and is slowly fed from the land ice. Mountains ten to twelve thousand feet high were seen in latitude 82 degrees, south of the coast line, and continuing as far as 83 degrees 20 minutes nearly due south.

President Markham, of the Royal Geographical society, commenting on the achievements of British Antarctic ship Discovery, says it has been proved conclusively that the greater part of the Antarctic region is a vast continent. Captain Scott, R.N., the commander of the Discovery, penetrated one hundred miles further south than any previous explorer and discovered an extensive mountainous region hitherto absolutely unknown, extending to 83 degrees so minutes south. He thinks this indicates that the land stretches to the pole in a series of very lofty mountains, which is considered to be by far the most important g?ographical result ever achieved in Antarctic exploration. The Discovery wintered 400 miles further south than any other vessel.

Follows Canada's Advantages.

The London Morning Post and Times of March 26 both contain dispatches from Berlin correspondents to the effect that Germany has been disagreeably surprised by the news that the customs convention signed at Bloemfontein provides for preferential treatment of British goods imported into South African colonies. The Morning Post's correspondent says: "For two or three years the German press exulted in the belief that the example of the Canadian government would fail to find imitators in the other colonies. It was even anticipated that Canada, taught by retaliatory measures applied by Germany would reverse her policy. The German newspapers adopt the line that the South African colonies will speedily tire of according Great Britain advantages for which they can receive no compensation owing to the free trade principles of the mother country, and that their conversion will be aided by the retaliatory policy to be inaugurated by Germany. The preferential policy is attributed to Chamberlain, and as being one of the most significant results of his visit."

Important Announcement.

The following important letter from J. W. Leonard, general superintendent of the C. P. R. western division, was posted on the bulletin board of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange on March 26:—

"The company will this year construct side tracks on which elevator sites will be located between the following stations: Bagot and Burnside, Meadows and Rosser, Rosser and Bergen, Sewell and Douglas, Sewell and Carberry, Poplar Point and High Bluff, Alexander and Griswold, Hargrave and Elkhorn, Fleming and Moosomin, Red Jacket and Wapella, Percival and Broadview, Wolseley and Sintaluta, Sintaluta and Indian Head, Indian Head and Qu'Appelle, McLean and Balgonie, Regina and Grand Coulee, Belle Plain and Pasqua, and also a siding at Little Pembina."

Buildings in Danger.

New York's skyscrapers are in danger, and all on account of a big fiddle. Marcus Bellairs, seismographologist, scientist and musician, says so. According to Mr. Bellairs, every structure has a sympathetic note, which when struck will cause the structure to tremble, and if sounded long enough will cause it to tumble in ruins. He has been experimenting with this principle for a long time, and has constructed a fiddle 30 feet long, with a body you could drive a trolley car through. The strings are made of elephant gut, and it has a vibratory range of 11 kilometers. With this he can, he says, get the keynote of any building in New York and play it to the ground. So far the owners of the skyscrapers have not begun to look out for 'bull' fiddle' insurgnce.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

A Young Woman Shoots at a French Novelist in Paris.

Considerable stir was created in Paris on March 30 by the news of an attempt to shoot the well known novelist Marcel Prevost. It appears that as M. Prevost was entertaining the officers of the Society of Men of Letters in the Rue Rougemont, where the election of officers for the coming year was about to be held, a stylishly dressed young lady, whose name was afterwards given as Emma Touret, alighted quickly from a carriage and fired two shots at him, at the same time calling him by name. Both shots missed, and the lady was about to fire a third when M. Prevost disarmed her and endeavored to calm her.

She was taken temporarily into custody and explained that she had known M. Prevost in London some time ago. His avoidance of her at such a time had prompted her to seek to avenge herself, but she did not incend to kill the novelist. M. Prevost refused to follow up the matter and Mlle. Touret was set at liberty. It is stated that the lady's brother vainly tried to force a duel on M. Prevost.

Marcel Prevost was elected President of the Society of Men of Letters at the election which followed the shooting affair.

YOUNG MINRODS.

They Shoot a She Bear and Capture Four Cubs.

Mr. Fred. Wallingham, a Belgian, who lives at Darwin, 70 miles east of Winnipeg, and is engaged in the wood business, has two boys, aged 10 and 12 years respectively. Last Monday they went into the woods about a mile from their home, and in wandering around came to a bear den, where her ladyship was taking care of four young cubs. The boys went back to their home and secured a repeating rifle and marched out for the five bears. When they came within easy shooting distance of the lair they made a noise, which induced the old bear to come partly out of her den, and Master Willie planted a bullet in her shoulder. The old bear made a rush for the young boy and would have made a hearty meal off him had it not been for the cool head and steady and sure shot of Matter Willie, who planted another bullet in her head, and followed it with four more, which laid the bear out. The boys then went to the den and captured the four cubs alive, and marched home with them, where they are being tenderly cared for on milk. Mr. Wallingham went with his man and the boys and brought old bruin in on a sleigh.

She fell asleep, however, and the pipe set fire to the bed clothing.

Across Niagara, Otto Petersen, of Brooklyn, intends to go hanging by his teeth from a leather strap, connected with a three-quarter inch wire, while suspended from his body by a leather harness he carries a man of his own weight. The main falls at Niagara are about one thousand feet wide. A wire will be stretched directly across. Poles on which the wires will be strung are being got ready at the Danish club, as well as the harness for the man whom Petersen will carry across. A club member has volunteered to accompany him. With a slanting wire Petersen hopes to cross the falls in six minutes.

A Paris cable says: The cod fishing fleet which is starting from Fecamp and the ports of Normandy and Brittany for the Banks of Newfoundland and Nova Scotia is larger this season than ever before. Altogether there are sixty-three vessels, mostly of 500 tons and barkentine rigged. Each ship has a crew of about forty men and boys, with a dozen dories for each vessel. There is an astonishing demand in France this year for salt codfish, and the Brittany fishermen hope the cod will give them the prosperity taken from them by the sardine failure.

MARKETS.

(Compiled from The Commercial)

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

WHEAT—The past seven days have seen nothing better in the wheat market, than a dull dragging tendency toward lower prices. In the American speculative markets there has been a decline of from 7 to 10c since the high point at the end of January, and prices are now lower than when the advance started.

Manitoba wheat has been quiet and dull, very little offering and very little wanted. At the end of last week prices are ½ to ¾c lower than a week ago, and we quote 1 hard 72¾c, 1 Nor. 71¼c 2 northern 68¼c, 3 northern 66c, No. 4 wheat 62c, spot or March delivery, in store, Fort William, Port Arthur or Duluth. For May delivery prices are: 1 hard 73¾c, 1 northern 72¼c 2 northern 70c, 3 northern, 67c.

FLOUR—Demand is good and prices hold steady at last week's advance. We quote: Best Hungarian Patent, $2 per sack of 98 lbs. delivered to the trade; Glenora patent, $1.85; strong bakers, $1.65, and XXXX, $1.35. These prices are subject to usual trade discounts.

MILLDEED—There is a big demand for bran and shorts and mills have no trouble in disposing of all they produce. We quote: Bran, in bulk, per ton, $15.50; shorts, $17.50.

GROUND FEED—Oat chop is steady at $21 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley chop, $16.50; mixed barley and oats, $18; chop speltz, $16 per ton; chop, screenings, $12; oil cake, $25 per ton.

ROLLED OATS—Millers are asking $1.75 per sack of 80 lbs. carlots. Jobbing lots are worth $1.85 per sack. Standard and granulated oatmeal is worth $2.$0 per sack of 98 lbs.

OATS—No. 1 white in carlots on worth 31c. per bushel; No. 2 white, 29c., and feed grades, 27c. Farmers' loads on the street are bringing 28c., and at country points about 25c. Brokers are asking 25c. to 27c. for carlots in the country. Seed oats are worth 35c. per bushel.

BARLEY—There is a fair demand for barley for shipment and the market has firmed up. The demand is mostly from the east where there is some export enquiry. Dealers are offering 38c per bushel for May barley, delivery after the opening of navigation. About 36½c is the value for spot in carlots on track.

FLAXSEED—Market nominal.

SPELTZ—The market is steady at 32c. per bushel of 50 pounds, delivered here.

HAY—Stocks are ample for all requirements. Fresh baled in cars on track is worth $5 to $6 per ton and loose hay on the street $5 to $5.50.

VEGETABLES—Potatoes have advanced slightly during the week and are now worth full 45c. per bushel. Green onions are offering at 35c. per dozen bunches. We quote - Potatoes, 45c. per bushel; parsley, 40c.; cabbage, $20 per ton; imported celery, 90c. per dozen; carrots, 40c.; beets, 40c. per bushel; turnips, 25c. per bushel; lettuce, 40c. per dozen bunches; mint, 20c. per dozen bunches; dried onions, 60c. per bushel; green onions, 35c. per dozen bunches.

POULTRY—There are practically domestic stocks to be had. Chickens are being brought in from the south to meet the high-priced trade. Dealers are offering in a wholesale way 12½c. per pound for chickons, dressed; $ 9½c. to 10c. for ducks and geese, and 15c. for turkeys.

BUTTER—Creamery— Local creameries are selling their product at 23 to 24c per pound, put up in any form desired.

Dairy—Fresh made bricks and rolls are selling in a jobbing way at 18 to 20c. commission basis. Particularly fine bricks, separator made, would probably bring from 1 to 2c more, but they would have to be almost equal to creamery. For low grade dairy the demand is almost nominal and anything less than choice is hard to sell. For such butter the market rules at 12 to 15c pound commission basis.

CHEESE—The market is quiet. Jobbers are supplying the retail trade with Ontario September stock at 14c. per pound, and with Manitoba at 13½c'

EGGS—Eggs are now down to 14c per dozen, commission basis. Sales have been reported as low at 13 to 13½c.

DRESSED MEATS—We quote: beef, city dressed, 6c. to 7½c. per pound; country stock, ½c. under these figures; mutton, 8c. to 9c.; lamb, 11½c.; hogs, 7c. to 7½c, packers' price, for best weights; lights and heavies ½c. to 1c. less.

HIDES—There are not many hides coming at present and the market is quiet and steady. We quote: Frozen hides, 5½c. per lb., less 5 lbs. tare; city butchers, 6¼c. per lb. for No. 1's; 5¼c. for No. 2's, and 4¼c. for No. 3's. Sheepskins, 30c. to 50c. each.

SENECA ROOT—Market nominal.

WOOL—Market nominal.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—Receipts are light and there has not yet been any change in the market. There is still considerable cold storage beef on hand and the demand is being supplied with this. We quote: Best steers, 4¾c.; butchers' ordinary, 3½c. to 4r. Stockers, yearlings, $17; two-year-old, $22 each.

SHEEP—Market nominal.

IRISH LAND BILL.

Some Further Information Regarding This Subject.

The text of the Irish land purchase bill, which was introduced in the British House of Commons on Wednesday last, has been given out. It occupies thirty-nine pages of parliamentary paper and bristles with technicalities. The full wording reveals many important features, which were not mentioned in Mr. Wyndham's speech when the bill was introduced.

All arrears of rent due at the time of the purchase of land, are recoverable by the land commission, and not the arrears for a year only, as previously cabled. The land commissioners, however, are given power in special cases to remit part or all of the arrears.

The commissioners are not permitted to purchase estates which are not mainly agricultural or pastoral. Thus, Killarney is exempt under this clause. In cases of untenanted estates purchased by the commissioners, they are empowered to execute the necessary works of improvement, which tremendously enlarges the scope of the commission's expenditure.

Northwest School Lands to be Sold.

A dispatch from Ottawa says the minister of the interior recommends and an order has been adopted providing that in view of the great demand now existing for land in the Northwest Territories, and as the upset price placed upon the school lands are sufficiently high to prevent them being sacrificed in case the competition should not be as keen as expected, he is of opinion that it would be in the interests of the school lands endowment fund to offer the lands in question for sale in the months af May and June next, and he therefore recommends that he is authorized to offer for sale at public auction under the terms and provisions of the Dominion Lands act, the school lands included in the list prepared on the recommendation of the Northwest government at the points of sale and on the dates before indicated, with power, however, to the minister of the interior to make such changes in the point of sale and in the dates as may seem advisable. It is proposed that the auction sales shall be held at the following points: Regina, Moose Jaw, Qu'Qppelle, Wolseley, Grenfell Whitewood, Moosomin, Carlyle, Carnduff, Alameda and Yellow Grass on the 22nd June. The minimum price is placed at $7.

Forestry in Northwest.

Mr. Stewart, superintendent of forestry, told the agricultural committee of the House of Commons last week what the new branch of the department of the interior has accomplished in the way of protecting the forests of the west from fire and stimulating the planting of trees on the bare plains.

In the three years the latter work has been in progress there has been an enormous increase in the demand for young trees. The system adopted is one of co-operation, the government upon application sending inspectors around in the spring to advise farmers as to the trees best adapted to their land and the proper manner of planting. At the same time they have an eye to the progress of trees planted in former years.

A LARGE DAIRY

WINNIPEG COMPANY WILL OPERATE BIG FARM.

Six Hundred Cows Will Be Used and the Latest Improved Methods Employed—Farm Will Be Located at St. James'—Sixty Hands.

The Monroe Creamery of St. James and the Winnipeg Pure Milk company have been amalgamated under the name of "The Munroe Pure Milk company, limited," with a capital stock of $200,000, and the result is that Winnipeg is to have immediately at her door the largest dairy farm on the continent of America.

For some months past, very quietly this matter has been going forward, and the new company has been gradually getting hold of sufficient lands on the banks of the Assiniboine to fit their purpose, until now they own 1,750 acres on the south bank of the Assiniboine river just one half-mile from the city limits. The land is one solid block and admirably adapted for the purpose of a dairy farm.

The Munroe herd consists of 180 cows, including 75 pure bred Holsteins, and the strength will be increased to 400 as rapidly as the cows can be bought and tested. During the summer six barns, 265x40 and 38 feet high, will be erected, each to contain 100 cows. These barns will be metal-clad, inside and out, have abundance of window light and the King system of ventilation. they will also be supplied with an abundance of electric light from a large dynamo on the farm. Each barn will have an entirely independent well from which an abundant supply of pure water will be furnished the cattle. The pastures will also be supplied with driven wells, so that at no season of the year will a cow be allowed to touch slough or river water. The water supply is admirable as at a reasonable depth a bed of grave, seven feet deep has been struck and a seemingly inexhaustible supply of water. This will be pumped by means of windmills into tanks for the cattle.

Special attention will be given to the rations of the cows, and the basis will be corn and clover. Mr. Munroe has already experimented most successfully with growing fodder corn and 125 acres will be seeded to corn as soon as seeding opens. Among cows already purchased is the well known dairy herd of Mr. Harry Irwin, of Neepawa, a large proportion of which are Holstein grades. After careful inquiry and research the company has decided that for food purposes, and more especially for children the Holstein cow is the best, and gradually, but as rapidly as possible, it will be their policy to secure an entire herd of purebred Holstein cows; the nucleus of 75 cows is an exceptionally good start for a purebred herd.

The purifying plant of the company will be removed from the Portage avenue premises to the farm.

The management of the farm will be entirely under the control of Mr. David Munroe and his sons, and they will have about sixty men and women employed. When this milk farm is in complete operation it will be the largest in America, the next largest being the celebrated New Jersey farm, where 500 cows are kept.

Ink as an Earache Cure.

An amusing story is told of a man who was sudenly attacked in the night by a violent fit of earache. His wife told him that there was on the windowsill by the bed a bottle of chloroform, and recommended him to rub some on his face.

Without striking a light he reached out for the bottle, pulled out the stopper, and, pouring some of the contents into his hand, anointed his face from mouth to ear. Very soon he announced that the pain was better, lay down again and went to sleep. He was awakened in the morning by a cry of horror from his wife.

"What is the matter?" he inquired.

"Look at your face," was the reply.

A glance in the glass showed him that his face on one side was as black as a negroe's. The bottle The bottle which he had grasped in the dark had contained not chloroform, but ink.

In swinging the gun into position the boy accidentally discharged it, and the charge struck Miss Burns in the back. Altogether 27 shots entered her body some of which, it is feared, have pentrated the lungs. A doctor was hastily summoned. He was able to extract only four of the shot. The of the shot. The girl's condition is critical, but there is a slight chance of her recovery.

Where Ruth Got Her Information.

"How did Columbus get the money to equip his ships and pay other expenses of his expedition?" asked the teacher.

A little girl raised her hand, and the teacher, noting the eager, animated face, said, "Tell us, Ruth." And Ruth arose and answered in loud, clear tones:

"Queen Isabella of Spain hocked her jewels, and her husband, King Ferdinand, stopped smoking for a week!"

With twitching lips and a twinkle in her eye the teacher said:

"Where did you get your information, Ruth?" And the small maiden replied:

"From Bill Nye's 'History of the United States.'

The Growth of the Acorn.

The acorn is the fruit of the oak. The seed germ is a very small object at the pointed end of the acorn, with the future root uppermost. The acorn drops, and its contents doubtless undergo important molecular and chemical changes while it lies under winter covering of leaves or snow. In the mild warmth of spring the acorn swells, the little root elongates, emerges from the end of the shell and, no matter what the position of the acorn, turns downward. The root penetrates the soil two or three inches before the stalk begins to show itself and grow upward. The "meat" of the acorn nourishes both root and stalk, and two years may pass before its store of food is entirely exhausted.

At the end of a year the young oak has a root twelve to eighteen inches long, with numerous shorter rootlets, the stalk being from six to eight inches high. In this stage it differs from the tree. To watch these transformations under the lens is a fascinating occupation.

A Matter of Selection.

"I was carefully selected from a lot.
But only look at you; your father and your mother
Had to keep you if they wanted to or not!"

THE FERNIE FREE PRESS,
FERNIE BRITISH COLUMB

SATURDAY, APRIL 4, 1903.

STRIKE SETTLED.

It is our proud privilege this week to announce the final and permanent settlement of the strike in the Crow's Nest collieries, which lasted exactly seven weeks and which if continued longer would have seriously crippled the industrial and commercial interests of a large area of B.C.

The contract is now signed by the full executive of the District Union, consisting of nine members, and also by Mr. G. Dougherty for the men, while Manager J. H. Tonkin, and the seven members of of the commission added their names as witnesses.

We congratulate the Gladstone Union upon the wise course it has taken in backing up the action of its representatives on the District Executive Board. This we believe was its duty even though individuals of the union were opposed to some of the changes made. To these, if there are any still of this mind, we would say that they cannot paint the house "green" and call it a "compromise." They have gained some advantages and undoubtedly a few slight cuts have been added which appear as disadvantages, but in striking an accurate average of results it is necessary to wait until the new schedule has had a fair trial. There are advantages gained by the men which are difficult to reduce to a dollar and cent basis but which may result in very materially increasing their wages. The track-laying for instance does away with the monotonous necessity of the miner waiting for the track-layer to appear on the scene, the lumber question is settled to the satisfaction of the men and this will also do away with many delays, and the company is building four hundred new cars which will entirely remove the complaint often made of lack of cars.

The strikers asked for a uniform rate of wages, and the schedule now introduced is undoubtedly much more uniform than the old one, for it has made sweeping cuts in some yardage rates where the miners were making excessive wages and numerous increases have been added to tonnage and day work where the lowest wages were earned. It is impossible, of course, to satisfy every individual in the employ of the company and it is not surprising if there are a few discontented ones among those of the Coal Creek miners who did not think of this possibility when they asked for a uniform schedule. We believe a few months will demonstrate to all the fact that uniformity has been strictly followed in framing the present schedule and that there will be a less percentage of $3 and $8 men and a larger percentage of $5 men than before.

FERNIE'S FUTURE.

THE strike is settled, and settled in a manner that offers fair security against any further trouble between the Coal Company and its employees until April 1st, 1905. What this means to Fernie is difficult for any one to grasp who has been associated with the district only during the past twelve months. In that time two disastrous strikes have run their course, one quarter of the year was consumed in settling these strikes and the advantages acruing from the other part of the year counted for little when the balance sheet was complete. Besides these serious strikes there were smaller matters which threatened to result in serious strikes and which consequently had a disastrous effect upon trade. All this happened in less than one year, and now we are to have industrial peace for a period of two years, and by the expiration of that term we believe that the two parties to the contract will each be working in such perfect harmony with the other that the 60 days' notice clause will have no significence to them.

During this late strike the fact has been forced upon us that other districts throughout the Kootenays and the Boundary were suffering to as great, or even greater, extent than was this district. This we believe was true and as a result the immediate advantages from settlement experienced by these districts will fully equal those experienced in the coal regions, but as the other coal fields of the province are developed and other fuel supplies are obtainable for the metalliferous districts, now totally dependent upon the Crow's Nest, the advantages gained by this district will be all out of proportion with those of other parts.

We believe that Fernie has this week entered upon a new era in its history. The turned page closes a chapter of courageous struggling, punctuated freely with periods of disaster and strife, and it is with genuine pleasure, unconquerable faith and steadfast hope that we give our attention to the new chapter thus opened.

Fernie is now free from that feeling of instability and unrest always associated with labor troubles in new places and new industries, and it now takes its place among those towns which have been through the fiery furnace and have stood the test. There is no cloud on the bright horizon of Fernie's future and so far as human judgement can foretell it is entering upon an unprecedented era of prosperity.

The transferring of the company's stores, which by its simultaneous occurrence with the settlement of the strike may be taken as a good omen, not only puts the commercial interests of the town upon a more satisfactory basis but removes the suspicion prevalent before the sale took place that Morrissey and Michel would not be made open towns and that Coal Creek mines would be built up at the expense of Fernie.

Building operations will receive a decided impetus. None will fear to build a permanent residence in a town destined to become the centre of a populous valley. Deeds for lots will be taken out by many who have hitherto held back and this will pave the way to incorporation. There have been serious obstacles preventing this important step in the past but the time is soon to come when the town will take the reins of government into its own hands. Incorporation will mean the spending of many thousands of dollars annually in Fernie which now are sent to Victoria to build up other districts or line the pockets of conpiring politicians. We will then have decent side-walks, a thorough sewerage system and many other improvements not dreamed of by many who plod on under the present "government" system.

The Great Northern railway by building on to Fernie or through to the prairie will add much to the importance of the town and will bring new industries in its wake. The lumber business which is assuming such gigantic proportions in this district is adding very materially to the general prosperity. A large number of men are employed and the markets for the lumber products are unlimited. Capital will gain confidence and will not hesitate to invest where before it dare not. The new sash and door factory, an account of which will appear next week, is one of many industries that will spring up and flourish under the new order of things.

The town is to be congratulated upon its future prospects and it is fitting to say in conclusion that its citizens deserve all that is coming, for the perseverance and faith they exhibited under the trying ordeal from which we have passed. Workmen and business men, professional men and mine owners all deserve the success that is waiting them.

THE settlement of the strike lifts a heavy load off the people of eastern British Columbia. Every industry will now thrive and what looked like a dark year will be turned into one of glorious prosperity.—Cranbrook Herald.

* * *

MR. MCNICHOL is indignant over the excessive rates charged by the lumber trusts. Their prices may be excessive but surely Mr. McNichol, as a high official of the C.P.R. is joking when he poses as an advocate of anti-trusts and fair profits.

* * *

MR. A. K. Farquharson, Sanitary Inspector has served every house-holder with a "Health Notice" to the effect that all refuse etc in back yards or adjoining roads or lanes must be removed within ten days otherwise prosecution will follow. This is an important matter and every person occupying a house in town should act promptly as soon as the weather permits. By next spring it is reasonably certain that Fernie will have a sewerage system which will greatly improve the health conditions of the town and in the meantime it is hoped that our sanitary officers will have the cooperation of the townspeople in taking necessary steps towards safeguarding against epidemics, fevers etc.

* * *

THE Nelson News takes us to task for giving no account whatever last week of the investigation by the authorities into the recent outrage perpetrated at Coal Creek mines. The News is incorrect in its statement. A brief summary of the Morrison case was given. As there had been no other new developments it was not possible for the FREE PRESS to publish that which the News seemed much disappointed over not finding in our columns. When there are new developments the FREE PRESS may be depended upon publishing them, though with reluctance, we confess ; but we do not think it within our rights to take the matter in any way out of the hands of the police authorities or handicap those officers by publishing what may turn out to be only rumors. We could easily have made a very readable and sensational write-up by combining all that to our knowledge has been said on the matter but many of these idle yarns do not bear the stamp of truth upon them and it would be unjust to the town and to those implicated to pay much attention to them.

Infringement of a Trade Mark

In an action in the High Court of Justice for Ontario, recently tried before Chancellor Boyd, at Toronto, the Slater Shoe Co., and Chas. E. Slater, president of Montreal, makers of the famous Slater Shoe, obtained a judgment forever restraining F. C. Wilkinson, a boot and shoe dealer, of Owen Sound, from advertising, exposing, or offering for sale or selling boots or shoes not made by the Slater Shoe Co., as "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods" or the Slater Shoe." The Chancellor, also ordered Wilkinson to pay the heavy costs of the action. The Chancellor, after hearing the evidence, decided that no one except the Slater Shoe Co., had a right to use the name "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods," "The Slater Shoe," or any similar names in connection with boots and shoes, and that Wilkinson had no right to use any name or names in connection with boots and shoes which might enable him to pass of a shoe not of the company's make, as being of their make, nor in any way to reap the benefit of the reputation which the Slater Shoe has acquired throughout the Dominion of Canada.

The Genuine Slater
Is positively the best shoe value offered for sale in Canada. You may include the United States and that will pretty near cover the world for fine shoe making. There are shoes sold elsewhere at $4 50 and $6 a pair that carry no more style, are no better fitting and will not wear as well as the genuine Slater Shoe at $4. "Why is it?" you ask. "Just because they are branded with an American stamp."

Don't miss the greatest musical treat of the season. Miss Maclachlan is noted as one of the world's greatest singers. Thursday evening. Plan at Fernie Drug Store.

Agent Stephens, of the C.P.R. informs us that navigation is open on the lakes and he is accepting freight by that route. The first boat will sail on the 12th.

Some of our citizens are talking of building a raft in expectation of a flood in the near future. In 1894 part of the present townsite was covercd with two feet of water.

A novel show case is in use at Sheppard and Elliott's hardware store. The frame is made of galvanized iron with copper facings. Mr. Sheppard orginated and built it in every detail.

The London & Liverpool Co. wish to notify their customers that their store will be closed on Monday and Tuesday of next week for the purpose of stocktaking. Those wishing supplies will kindly call to-day.

The Fernie Lumber Co. commenced operations again on Tuesday. During the lay-off they have gathered together an immense pile of logs that would open the eyes of any person unacquainted with the importance of the lumber industry in this section.

The Services at Christ Church to-morrow will be as follow ; Matins and Litany, 11 a.m. ; Sunday School, 2:30 ; Evensong, 7·30. Strangers earnestly invited ; the Vicar will officiate. Collections in aid of Church expenses.

Friday next being Good Friday and the anniversary of the Crucifixion and death of our Saviour Jesus Christ, a service will be held in Christ Church at 11 a.m. with an address by the Vicar. The Story of the Cross will be sung. Collection in aid of the Jewish Mission.

The 7 months' old daughter of Mr. & Mrs. John F. Wilson of Michel died this week. The body was brought to Fernie for interment on Thursday morning. A number of friends and relatives were in present trom Michel. The funeral was conducted by Rev. C. W. Houghton.

The Cedar Valley Improvement Co. have been taking advantage of the excellent sleighing by storing up a large quantity of lumber near the C.P.R. track behind the Fernie Hotel. The Company is shipping two cars of lumber per day to the prairie, where a ready market awaits it.

It is understood the Company intend building another row of double houses to take the place of the original log buildings next to Michel Creek. If these old buildings are removed it will be the final obliteration of old Sparwood and will wonderfully improved the appearance of Michel. The town has steadily increased in population and we expect to see its present population of a good thousand increased at least fifty per cent. before 1904.

The Trites-Wood Co., Ltd., The London & Liverpool store will serve cocoa and cake each afternoon at their millin ery opening. x

A regular general meeting of the members of the Fernie Board of trade will be held on Tuesday evening, the 14th.

C. M. O'Brien returned from the West on Tuesday, Mr. O'Brien has been as far as Creston and has organized seven local unions while away.

The first number of the Raymond Chronicle is to hand. It has a neat appearance and promises many improvements in the near future. The Chronicle represents the towns of Raymond, Magrath and Sterling which have a present population of about three thousand. A large sugar-beet factory is to be commenced at once. This factory will have a capacity of 400 tons of beets per day yielding about 100,000 pounds.

A Runaway

P Burns & Co's grey team started to run away near the depot on Thursday morning. They had been left standing with a weight attached by a long rope to the bit of one of the horses and when they started the weight cut circles in the air and finally became attached to the horse's hind leg, the rope becoming coiled around it several times. This effectually prevented further mischief by bringing the fractions animals to a standstill.

Slides on the C.P.R.

A bad mud slide occurred at Kitchener on Sunday and the first through train arrived late Tuesday carrying three days mail and passengers. The East trains went as far as Cranbrook and doubled back. The slide was caused by the rain which softened the snow and dirt. Another slide, smaller, but yet sufficient to delay traffic for several hours, occurred five miles east of Fernie on Sunday. It was about 150 feet long and 12 ft. deep in places.

Jessie Maclachlan Coming

The advance agent of the Jessie Maclachlan company was in town on Thursday and speedily made arrangements for an entertainment in the town. Four prominent citizens : Messrs. W. B. Ganong, R. W. Coulthard, N. E. Suddaby and J. A. Rennie took the matter in hand and made the necessary guarantee. The entertainment will be given in Princess Hall next Thursday evening. The company consists of Miss Jessie Maclachlan, Scottish prima donna, the pet of royalty and the pride of Scotland ; Miss Alice Dean, violiniste and Mr. Robert Buchanan, pianist. Miss Maclachlan is so well known as to scarcely need any mention here. Wherever she has appeared unstinted praise has been showered upon her, even by the royalty of Europe. Miss Maclachlan possesses a voice of marvellous power and sweetness. Miss Dean and Mr. Buchanan are each experts in the musical departments to which they belong. The entertainment supplied at this concert will be of the highest order and none should fail to take it in.

Silver-Lead Deputation Back.

Messrs. Robertson and Bentley, who made a flying trip over the prairie in the interests of the proposed legislation for the silver lead industry in the Kootenays were very successful. Mr. Robertson arrived in Fernie yesterday and Mr. Bentley today, the latter having remained over a day at Lethbridge. These gentlemen carried convincing argument with them and the Boards of Trade in every town they visited unanimously passed resolution supporting their views. The following towns were called at : Macleod, Olds, Innisfail, Wetaskawin, Le Duc, Strathcona, Edmonton. Regina and Moose Jaw. Resolutions had already been sent in from Calgary and one or two other points. Mr. Robertson also took a run down to Winnipeg where he did some good missionary work in the silver-lead cause. They report times as being extra good throughout the district they travelled, the only serious drawback being the difficulty of getting the people together owing to their being so very busy. The resolutions were wired to Ottawa as they went along and afterwards mailed. Undoubtedly Messrs. Robertson and Bentley have done good work for the cause on which they were sent.

Chief of Police Bullock-Webster was in town on official business this week.

J. Breckenridge, the lumber man of Wardner, was in town this week.

W. J. Blundell of The J. Y. Griffin Co. returned from a trip to Medicine Hat on Wednesday.

Mr. Jas. Bryan has gone to Morrissey to take charge of the building of the new Methodist Chnrch.

The Trites-Wood Co., Ltd., millinery display at the London & Liverpool store will be the event of the season. x

Mr. J. S. Clute, New Westminister, Customs Inspector, was in town this week inspecting the local office.

The Trites-Wood Co., Ltd., have their millinery opening at the London & Liverpool Store, April 9, 10 and 11. x

D. Walmsley is down at Macleod this week on business connected with an Electrical Company of which he is agent.

Lost

Wednesday night a small gold locket set with pearls and turquoise in horseshoe design. Finder please leave at this office.

H. A. Kanouse was down to Pincher Creek this week. He bought a handsome team of horses while away which cost him only $300.

Mr. H. Leslie Staebler was down to Frank last week to secure a class of pupils in music. He was successful in forming a large class and will make weekly trips to that town going down on Friday evening and returning Sunday morning.

Customs collections made at the outport of Fernie for the month of April :

Value of imports dutiable.....	$4901 00
Free	82 00
Total.....	$4983 00
Duty collected.....	$1173 89

Inland revenue collections for month of April amounted to $2115.62.

On Friday evening a number of Baptist friends met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Rowell for the purpose of entertaining Miss Beck, who is leaving Fernie, and presenting her with a beautiful autograph cushion on behalf of the Ladies Aid. Miss Beck has been a member of the Baptist church for some time and was president of the B.Y.P.U. for one term and vice-president of the Ladies Aid.

Three Fingers Taken Off

Mr. C. J. Digby met with a very unfortunate accident yesterday a.m. He was working the jointer machine at Coward & Sons factory and in some unaccountable manner his right hand was caught in the narrow groove by the revolving knives. The thumb was cut off at the first joint and the first and third fingers at the second joint. The second finger was saved.

The C. P. C. Getting Ready

The C. P. C. at this point is getting back into its old-time form since Tuesday when the strike was declared off. The staff is being increased ; engine 344 is back from Frank and preparations are being made for moving coke and coal. The congested condition of the freight shed is also being relieved. The telegraph service at the Fernie office has been overworked during the latter part of the strike, but it is returning to its normal condition again.

Methodist Church

The subjects for Sunday are as follows: 11 a.m., "The Opening of the Worldwide Kingdom." 7:30 p. m., "Temptation through Ambition." Special music will be rendered at both services. In the morning Dr. Morrison will render a solo entitled "Homeland" by Herbert Johnson. In the evening a chorus entitled "Now the Day is Over," will be rendered by male voices.

The regular monthly Consecration meeting of the Epworth League will be held on Monday night at 8 o'clock. This will be followed by a week of prayer. Services will be conducted each evening in the church at 8 o'clock. Rev. S. J. Thompson, of Cranbrook, and Rev. D. L. Gordon will assist.

Athletic Clubs will Organize

The annual meeting of the Fernie Athletic Association is called for Monday evening in Joyce's hall. Everybody interested in sport should attend this meeting as important business dealing with the whole season will be discussed. The foot-ball club will reorganize immediately at the close of the association meeting. The club will also discuss the advisability of entering the league, etc. On the following evening, Tuesday, April 7th, the lacrosse club will re-organize. All interested in the game are requested to meet in the rear of Mr. Cuthbert's store at 8;30. Letters have been received from Lethbridge and Medicine Hat clubs on league business.

The application for an hotel license by N. Garreau was brought up before Commissioners Whimster and Burn this morning. The petition had over 600 names while the Chief License Inspector reported an estimate of only 500 householders in the town. Rev. R. F. Stillman asserted that 362 names on the applicant's petition were not householders and were not qualified to sign a petition. The commissioners were unable to decide the case owing to the conflicting information submitted and an adjournment until the 17th at Moyie was declared. Fernie has ten hotel licenses, and we think from now on our commissioners should consider carefully before granting more, especially to those who have not first-class accommodation for the public.

MY HEART'S DARLING

BY W. HEIMBURG.

"Yes, I really believe you do not love him," repeated Frau von Lowen.

"But, Hortense," asked the girl, breathlessly, "why do you think so? What makes you?"

"It does not look to me like love," said the young baroness, abruptly. "I was once so foolish—I know. I will tell you how it has happened with you," she continued, and remained standing before Lucie with the smelling salts in her hand. "They always kept telling you that marriage is the only way for a girl to be happy; own, now, is it not true?"

"But, Hortense, they are fight; it is our vocation."

"Now listen. You are twenty-three years old; you have been living with your brother-in-law as teacher to the children, and been assisting your sister; you were not useless; but still they could get along without you, and by degrees you found your life rather tiresome. Now speak the truth, Lucie!"

"Hortense! I— No— You do not understand how things were!"

"You had too often thought that perhaps you would never have the opportunity of fulfilling woman's highest vocation, as you had no one so far to make you a proposal. Of course I do not mean you had not had many admirers—you are too sweet a little thing for there to be any doubt of that—but you had no decided preference, for they were all only admirers. And then all at once this doctor stood before you with an actual offer of marriage. You had never thought about him, you scarcely knew him! And then they all fell upon your neck and congratulated you. What good fortune for a dowerless girl to get such a good husband! until you thought yourself that Heaven had poured a full horn of happiness over you, and that you loved him as much as any one ever loved."

Lucie sat stunned during this. She thought of the moment when her ten-year-old nephew had come dashing upstairs as if crazy and burst into her little room. "Aunt Lucie, you have had an offer of marriage! Come down stairs quickly!" And as she came down with trembling steps, Mathilda was waiting for her at the foot of the stairs, and with tears in her eyes had taken her in her arms and whispered: "Ah, Lucie, what good fortune!" She saw him standing before her, and heard his quiet, kindly words, and then they all came suddenly into the room, and her brother-in-law had patted her on the shoulder and said: "Oh, you little witch! for once you have done something sensible. Have you kissed each other yet? Well, then, now is the right time!" Then they had kissed each other, and both blushed, and the grown people laughed, and the children shouted, and the servants congratulated.

But no one ever asked her: "Do you love him? Do you want to marry him?" She had not even missed it. She had a quiet, restful feeling of security when near him, a shy consciousness of his worth and goodness. Was that love? She clasped her hands together and could not say a word.

"And now," continued the young baroness, after she had put the smelling-bottle to her delicate nose and inhaled the pungent aroma, "now you are here, and it begins to dawn upon you that perhaps a little more is needed for this life-compact than esteem, than—than—"

"Stop!" cried the girl.

"No!" exclaimed Hortense, and she began to walk up and down the half-darkened room. "No, I will not stop! Thousands of girls are married in this way, and thousands are quite contented with it; most of them do not observe till long after their marriage how horribly indifferent they are to each other; but you, you have too ideal a nature, Lucie. It will be hard for you to stand it, to stay in that little house to bear the brunt of the housekeeping, have half a dozen children to bring up, to have all the cares and responsibilities which life so unfairly brings to the wife; and all this for a man you do not love."

Lucie was silent; she held her hand over her eyes and groaned as one in physical pain; and her heart cried out full of pain that this was true.

She could not live beside him so unnoticed and so distant, so cold and debarred from all inner companionship.

Hortense kept on walking backward and forward. Then she came over and knelt down by the girl.

"Have I pained you? Forgive me! Ah, I knew well the weakness of men."

Two large tears rolled down over the girl's cheeks.

"Lucie, do not cry; I love you. You are the only one in the whole world that I do love. When you come to meet me it is like sunshine in my heart. And as an honest friend who has had experience, I must speak truly, must I not? See, you came here rosy as an apple blossom, and how do you look now? You have drawn lines about your mouth as if you were years older."

"I feel so dreadfully unhappy when I am with his mother," whispered the girl at last. "She has disliked me from the first moment I came; but it would be different if I—"

KESTREL LAUNCHED

NEW DOMINION FISHERIES CRUISER AT VANCOUVER, B.C.

A Distinctly Canadian Vessel, Manufactured With Materials Supplied by This Country—Her Measurements and Her Solid, Almost Pugnacious Bow—Appropriation of $80,000, Made by Parliament, May Have Been Exceeded.

At the early hour of 7 on the morning of Saturday, Feb. 14, the new Dominion fisheries protection cruiser Kestrel was launched at Vancouver in the presence of a crowd of many hundred people, who had braved the chill of the morning air to watch the interesting event.

Mrs. Wallace, wife of the builder, broke the time-honored bottle of champagne and pronounced the name that will henceforth adorn the first Government vessel built on the Pacific coast. Not a hitch occurred in the proceedings, and when the attendant tugs had hauled away the timbers of the cradle the Kestrel sat firmly on the water.

The work of construction was commenced about the middle of June, 1901, the unusual length of time consumed being the bursting of her first boilers under severe tests to which they were subjected by Lloyds before they were allowed to leave England. In every particular the new cruiser is a splendid example of the thoroughly modern work now being done in Canadian shipyards, for she is magnificently finished and is as tight a craft as can be found in the Pacific waters. Moreover, the Kestrel must ever appeal to the hearts of loyal Canadians on account of the fact that the materials used in her construction have been, wherever possible, obtained in this country. She is a distinctly Canadian vessel.

The cruiser's measurements are 145 feet in length over all, 24 feet beam, 13 feet load water line, 13 feet 6 inches in depth and 10 feet 3 inches draught. Strength and utility were carefully considered in her plans, hence the ram nose, the solid almost pugnacious bow, and the general bulldog appearance which is such a striking characteristic. Her whole hull is sheeted with Muntz metal, the cost of which is enormous.

The engines, which have 600 indicated horsepower and are 18x38 by 24 feet in dimension, were constructed by the Polson Iron Works of Toronto. They are fore and aft compounds, surface condensing, and are fitted with a boiler that will have a working pressure of 152 pounds of steam. All the machinery installed on the cruiser is of the latest and most improved pattern. Tyzack's triple grip anchors, Lord Kelvin's compass and barometers, two of Ritchies' patent compasses, Cahburns telltale self-illuminating indicators, electric lights both down below and at the masthead and a searchlight of intense powers are merely a few of the modern appliances that help to make the Kestrel a model of nautical completeness.

Twenty souls all told will man the cruiser, a crew of fifteen and five officers. The snug and comfortable quarters provided are trimmed with richly polished quartered oak, the numerous pilasters surmounted with Corinthian capitals finished in gold. Steam heated, electric lighted, carpeted with Brussels and furnished with everything that experience could suggest or ingenuity devise, the officers' quarters are calculated to satisfy even the most fastidious.

While native woods have been employed wherever possible, it was necessary to use teak in a number of cases, particularly for the heavy sliding door of the companionway leading to the after cabins. The appropriation made by the Dominion Government for the construction of the Kestrel was $80,000, but so complete and thorough has been the work that this figure will scarcely meet the total expense.

Joe—His Mark!

In the Visitor's Book at the De Beers Mine our Traveling Commissioner signed his name "J. Chamberlain, Birmingham."—Punch.

Kitchener Didn't Smile.

An Englishman tells this story illustrating, presumably, Lord Kitchener's lack of humor: "The writer had a narrow escape on the Nile, as his vessel was stranded on the mud and desperate exertions were needed to haul her off. I told part of the story to Kitchener on my return. 'And how did you get the anchor to the sand bank?' he asked. 'Oh,' I answered, 'one of the crew swam across with the anchor in his mouth.' 'Oh, really!' was all Kitchener said, as if it were the most natural thing in the world."

SENATOR WARK.

Canadian Who Is Probably the Oldest Legislator in Active Parliamentary Service in the World.

Hon. David Wark, member of the Senate of Canada, on Feb. 19, 1902, entered upon his hundredth year, and is probably the oldest active legislator in the world. Senator Wark, who is of Scotch descent, was born near Londonderry, Ireland, February 19, 1804, emigrated to New Brunswick in 1825, engaged in mercantile life, and in 1843 entered the New Brunswick Legislature. In 1851 he was appointed to the Legislative Council, and from 1858 to 1862 was a member of the New Brunswick Government. At Confederation, in 1867, he was called to the Senate of Canada by royal proclamation, and thus he has occupied a place in the upper Chamber during Canada's entire existence as a nation. During all these years he has actively promoted the closer union of the various Provinces of the Dominion, and of Canada to the motherland. Not alone as a legislator has the aged Senator promoted these principles, he has ably supported them with his pen, his latest publication being "The Future of Canada and its Relation to the British Empire," (1894). He has also written on reciprocity with the United States. In 1897 he moved a resolution in the Senate favoring the closer union of the colonies and the mother country.

Mr. Wark is still a man of keen intellect and sound judgment. He takes the greatest interest in the business of the Senate, and a couple of years ago delivered an address of some length, suggesting a better division of work between the Senate and the Commons, so that the Senators might have work enough to keep them busy through the entire session. The year before last he was a few weeks late in his arrival at Ottawa, and explained in the most matter of fact way that he was building a new house, and that it was not completed when the session opened. Everyone connected with the Canadian Parliament is proud of Senator Wark, and his birthday is a day of rejoicing in Ottawa. The Senator is a Liberal.

SENATOR WARK.

BRAIN AND STOMACH.

The Intimate Relations Between These Two Vital Organs.

There is a very intimate relation between the brain and the stomach. They must work harmoniously together if the best results of both are to be obtained. Brain exhaustion and continuous depressing emotions, such as worry and anxiety, almost always cause derangements of digestion by retarding the secretion of the fluids upon which digestion depends. On the other hand, food in insufficient or excessive quantities or the injudicious selection of indigestible food is frequently reflected upon the brain and shows itself by sluggishness of thought and diminution of mental vigor. The brain and the stomach cannot perform their functions to the best advantage at the same time.

During the process of digestion the stomach requires more blood than it does at other times, and a certain proportion of this extra supply is drawn from the brain. If, however, the brain is forced to work during the period of active digestion, the stomach will be deprived of a certain proportion of the blood it requires. Activity of the mind necessitates an increased flow of blood to the brain, and as the power of thought is to a certain extent controlled by the will, while the process of digestion is not, it naturally follows that when thought and digestion are carried on simultaneously the brain will always take the blood needed by the stomach. If this is a habitual occurrence, it soon leads to pronounced dyspepsia, and chronic dyspepsia in its turn, by irritation of the nervous system, incapacitates even an abnormally vigorous brain from accomplishing its best work.

The March of the Lemmings.

Few animals are more stupid than the lemmings, a species of rodent in Norway and Sweden like the common water rat of this country. They are exceedingly voracious and bite at anything and everything. It is said that if met by a cart the only idea of the lemming would be to bite the wheel. This insatiable appetite makes it a fearful pest. An army of lemmings will do as much damage as a swarm of locusts. They come down in enormous numbers from the northern districts, where the food supply has given out, and march through Scandinavia in two great armies separated by the Kiolens range.

Archbishop of Canterbury's Wit.

Many anecdotes are going the rounds about the new Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Davidson. Once as a party of clergy were streaming in to dinner one of the company piously exclaimed, "Now, put a bridle upon our appetites." Dr. Davidson replied with swift retort, "Now, to put a bit between my teeth."

GAVAN DUFFY'S LIFE

HISTORY OF MAN WHO WAS DOYEN OF IRISH AGITATORS.

Friend and Foe of O'Connell and Prime Minister of Victoria—Worked With D'Arcy McGee—End of the Young Irelanders—Goethe Was Duffy's Model—Glimpses of Great Men.

Death has removed the doyen of Irish agitators in the person of Sir Charles Gavan Duffy, at the age of eighty-seven years. The friend and foe of O'Connell, the intimate of Carlyle, the colleague of D'Arcy McGee, the young Irelander of Ulster, the Prime Minister of Victoria, this is the career brought to mind by the mention of Duffy's name. Though it cannot be said of him that he was as great as O'Connell, O'Leary, or Davis, he made up for the lack of pure genius by a streak of common sense which won for him fame and riches in a new country, while many of his friends, worn out in early middle age by their heroic struggles for the land of their birth, died in hopeless exile. Three young men working side by side in the dingy little office of The Dublin Nation; three strong-hearted Irishmen, a Canadian Minister of Agriculture, an American general, a Victorian Premier—here are McGee, Meagher, and Duffy, "the stones rejected by the builders." One of them died at the assassin's hand on the streets of Ottawa, cut off suddenly at the height of his career, the other, the inferior intellect of the three lives to receive a knighthood from his Sovereign, as a recognition of his service to the Empire.

Worked With McGee.

Charles Gavan Duffy was born of well-to-do Roman Catholic parents, in Monaghan, in the year 1816. The grim tragedy of '98 was fresh in the minds of Irishmen in those days, and as the boy grew, he drank in hatred of English rule with every breath. An early inclination to literature pointed out his path for him. While a mere stripling he took an active part in an election against a landlord, and as a result some of his father's property was confiscated. Gavan went to Dublin, and became sub-editor of a paper when 20 years old. Five years later he was in full charge, and his name was already prominent in the seething discontent of the time. Young Duffy was a worker, and though his newspaper duties might well have kept him busy, he read for the bar during his spare hours. In 1842 he took the step upon which depended the whole of his future career. With Davis, one of the brightest names in the history of Ireland, and Dillon, the father of the present Nationalist, Meagher, D'Arcy McGee, and Smith O'Brien, Duffy founded The Nation, a journal devoted heart and soul to the cause of Ireland. With O'Connell their leader and idol, they toiled at the time-honored Celtic profession of agitating. Surely the atmosphere of the little newspaper office must have been fairly electrical with genius. Then came the dark days, when O'Connell, suspected of timidity by his friends, and accused of treachery by his foes, stood undecided and dumb while all Ireland waited for his call to arms. But the far-famed meeting at Clontarf was never held, and the great Liberator's sun was set. The Nation turned on him, and so did the Young Irelanders, who cried, "We'll die for Ireland!" And the "mighty, magnificent, mean old man" answered with a jest: "You and I, boys, will live for Ireland."

End of Young Irelanders.

When the courts pursued the gallant young Irishmen, and McGee and Meagher fled the country, the former to glorify Canadian politics, the latter to lead a brigade of Confederate troops in the Civil War, Duffy alone escaped exile. He languished in jail for nine months, and on his release carried on the old campaign for six years, in Parliament and out of it. But failure, famine, and depopulation had taken the heart out of those who dully listened to him, and then Duffy decided to shake the dust of the Emerald Isle from his shoes forever. In "My Life in Two Hemispheres" he says of his leaving: "I determined to quit Ireland. . . . I could no longer promise the suffering people relief; and to witness injustice without curb and wrong without remedy would render life too painful. An Ireland where Mr. Keogh typified patriotism and Dr. Cullen the Church was an Ireland in which I could not live." So he went to Australia, and rose in Victoria as McGee rose in Canada. After having been Prime Minister, he accepted the position of Speaker in the Legislature, which office he held for some years, finally retiring to Nice, as Sir Charles Gavan Duffy, K.C.M.G.

Goethe Was Duffy's Model.

Goethe became his idol. He concluded that true philosophy was best displayed by the great German novelist when he shut his ears to the world-clamor of the French Revolution, locked himself in his study, and wrote books. So Sir Charles for the last twenty years of his life devoted himself to literature. Chief among his publications are "Young Ireland," "Four Years of Irish History," "League of the North and South," "My Life in Two Hemispheres." The best society in Europe was open to him; success in the new country had healed the wound of failure in the old. His declining years must have been the happiest in his life. Once he wrote to a friend that he was weary of new countries, and "longed for the green pastures where we wandered of old."

Glimpses of Great Men.

It has been said of him that he was utterly incapable of appreciating O'Connell's denunciation of slavery in the United States, that he was a niggard in his praise of the devoted men who took up his task when he laid it down, that he was, to paraphrase Orsini, "a prince in words, a beggar in action." But when Duffy found the Irish Tenant League, when he defeated the Chief Secretary for Ireland, when he initiated the present system of independent Opposition in the House of Commons, surely he was the man of action. His writings show him at his best. He has the polish of the literary man, the easy charm of the cosmopolitan. His pages abound in charming biographical tit-bits of the great men of the century. We are introduced to Bright, Browning, Carlyle, Disraeli, Gladstone, Peel, Mill, Macaulay, Forster, Newman, Manning, and Thackeray. Tom Moore went to see him one day, and is described as "A little middle-aged man, with pleasant smile and lively eyes, but of a countenance far from comely, and so elaborately dressed that the primrose gloves which he wore did not seem out of harmony with the splendor of his attire." The last of the Young Irelanders has passed away, a grey-haired old man, but his memory will long be kept green on two continents.

POE AND CHIVERS.

Specimen of the Argument Between Them on the Poets.

"A pure poem proper is one that is wholly destitute of a particule of passion."

"Then you admire Tennyson?" asked I.

"Yes, I consider him one of the greatest poets that ever lived," answered he.

"My God, Poe! how can you say that?" asked I, in surprise. "Why, his poems are as effeminate as a phlegmatic fat baby. He is the most perfectly Greek-statuesque, if you please, in his conceptions, of my man that has ever lived since the days of Pericles."

"This is just what constitutes him one of the greatest geniuses that ever lived," answered he. "Passion has nothing to do with pure poetry; for every drop of passion that you infuse into any poem just so far do you materialize, deteriorate and render it no poem. A pure poem is a rythmical creation of beauty, wholly destitute of everything but that which constitutes purity, namely, etheristity."

"Well, but this would not only bring you into conflict with the time-honored opinions of the world, but be the establishment of a new mode of criticism among the nations," said I.

"True; but that does not give me a moment's concern," answered he, with an imperial self-consciousness of his own importance, as well as the perfect knowledge of the purity of the truth that he had just spoken.

"If what you say be true then two-thirds of everything that Shakespeare ever wrote is absolutely good for nothing," said I.

"Certainly it is good for nothing. Nothing is good for anything except that which contains within itself the essence of its own vitality," answered he. "Otherwise it is mortal and ought to die."

"Then if this be the case—if all the poetical works in the world were pruned of their excresences — there would be very little poetry left," answered I.

"Very little, indeed; but just enough to show that what I say of poetry is true."

"Then Byron, Wordsworth, Coleridge, Montgomery, Southey and many other world-renowned sons of song would fare badly,"

"But no worse than they deserve," answered he, very peremptorily.

"What do you think of Keats?" asked I.

"He was the greatest of any of the English poets of the same age, if not of any age," answered he, with the air of a man who was not only conscious of his own consummate ability, but who had, long before, deliberately formed his opinions. "He was far in advance of the best of them, with the exception of Shelley, in the study of his themes. His principal fault is the grotesqueness of his abandon."

Probably during the present week the almoners of Christ's Hospital will carry into effect their intention to remove the human remains that are interred within the precincts of that ancient institution.

A strange crowd—four Queens, lords and ladies, knights and monks, and many persons of high and low degree—rest here, where once the Grey Friars placed their dead and many old Blues sleep beneath the cloisters, having been buried there, so was the custom, by torchlight.

Also here lies the body of Isabella of France, the wife of Edward II., with her murdered husband's heart upon her breast. Her ghost was always said to haunt the cloisters. Her paramour Mortimer, rests there too.

So also do two raparious favorites of Richard II. and Dame Alice Hungerford, who brutally murdered her spouse in the year 1523.—London Express.

The Last Lamp.

The famous lamp of Towneley Chapel, at Towneley Hall, in England, has recently been extinguished. This was probably the last of the so-called "ever-burning" lamps of England. It is claimed that the Towneley lamp had been burning constantly since the days of King Alfred—for more than one thousand years. At the beginning of the last century half a dozen were still alight, while at the dissolution by Henry VIII. many hundreds alight in the monasteries had been burning ever since the Norman Conquest. Doubtless these perpetual lamps were a remnant of that form of pagan worship known as everlasting fire, which was kept alight by guardians, who were punishable with death if they allowed the fire to go out.

History Elucidated.

"What did the Puritans come to this country for?" asked a Massachusetts teacher of a class in American history.

"To worship in their own way and make other people do the same," was the reply.

THE SECRET SERVICE.

How Britain's Compares With Similar Institutions Abroad—Germany's Elaborate System—What is Wanted.

All the great nations require information about other countries, which is not obtainable openly. For this reason the intelligence Department of the great military powers on the Continent are organized on a scale of cost and efficiency undreamed of in this country.

In Russia the secret police employ a considerable number of agents, both male and female, who are residents in England. Some of these paid agents, or spies, are people well known in society. Their duties vary from diplomatic work of the highest delicacy to the collection of newspaper cuttings.

One of the points attended to by the Russian Secret Service is the record of every English public man who speaks or writes about Russia. On one occasion the present writer had the opportunity of seeing the system followed by the Russian police. Every speech and every writing of Mr. Shaw-Lefevre—an innocent and not very formidable personage — with particulars of his birth, parentage, means, residence, habits, tastes, and position were all entered up in a great portfolio.

Mr. Shaw-Lefevre was, I believe, at one time associated with the Friends of Russian Freedom, and is therefore, like all the other members of that body, carefully watched by the agents of Russia.

Considerable sums are spent by Russia on secret service agents in Central Asia, Baluchistan, Persia, and in India itself. The object of these agents is to belittle Great Britain and belaud Holy Russia. Constant diplomatic duels take place between British Consular agents and the avowed representatives of Russia. This subterranean war of secret agents is going on all over the world.

Germany's Elaborate System.

The German system of secret service is conducted on much more scientific lines. German knowledge of the United Kingdom is more complete than that of most Englishmen. I was lately informed by a British diplomatist of the highest rank that the German general staff possesses a schedule of the contents of all the chief residences in the kingdom.

Every picture and work of art of any considerable value is known to the German general staff, while the study of British topography, the mastery of our ordnance maps, the knowledge of the fords, smithies, obstacles, population, and highroads form the subject of examination from German officers who are told off to the duty of acquiring full knowledge of the counties of the United Kingdom.

The German agents in England, who are occupied in surveying our country with a view to contingencies, are generally to be found in couples in the guise of tourists. They know to a head how many horses the Irish farmers can supply within a given time. They have made a careful study of the idiosyncrasies of our leading men. Their tastes, habits, health, friends, and means are carefully noted by the astute Teutons, who distill the honey of information from English fields for the German hive.

The principal feature in which German Secret Service differs from that of England is that the Germans coordinate the whole of their knowledge, and have it ready to hand in a concentrated form whenever it is required.

Useless English Methods.

The English system is different. There is a Secret Service Fund controlled by the Foreign Office. So many Foreign Office agents are hostile to England, and are unpaid, that the Foreign Office service is often found to be useless for naval or military purposes.

During the last two years the Admiralty has succeeded in wresting from the Foreign Office the control of the Secret Service, so far as it affects the navy. During the trouble with France over Fashoda agents of the Admiralty were busily watching French opinion in the great centres. The English military intelligence department is again a separate service.

What is required is to concentrate in one spot the whole of the knowledge obtainable. The Foreign Office should be the brain, the eyes, and the antennae of the nation. The German and Russian Foreign Offices fulfill these functions. The British Foreign Office not only does not know what is going to happen; it does not want to know, while the military and Foreign Office intelligence departments are separated administratively.

What Is Wanted.

After the heavy experience of the Boer war, it is inconceivable that the Government will not take steps forthwith to reorganize the whole of our intelligence system—naval, military, and diplomatic. Our ignorance of foreign countries contrasts unpleasantly with their knowledge about us.

France is rapidly becoming a peaceful power, and is losing that passion for military glory which has oppressed her for hundreds of years. Germany and Russia, however, require careful watching, and the pacific tendencies of the French Republic may be dissipated by the temptations of an alliance that Germany may yet have to offer.

What does the Admiralty know about the German fleet? Very little. How many times has the Naval Attache in Berlin visited Emden, or even Kiel? For what purpose are the miles of quays erected at Emden, a little village with a tenth-rate museum in it? If the Boer war taught us anything it was to enforce the lesson that knowledge is power. There is nothing so conducive to peace as a full knowledge of the intentions and tendencies of other nations. An enormous outlay may be saved by the reorganization and establishment of an efficient and up-to-date system of secret service.

HORRIBLY BURNT

AWFUL DEATH OF SEVERAL WORKMEN.

Accident in the Carnegie Steel Plant at Braddock, Pa., Results in Death of Six Men and Terrible Burns to a Dozen Others.

A despatch from Pittsburg says :—An accident at furnace 1, of the Edgar Thomson plant of the Carnegie Steel Company, at Braddock on Tuesday is expected to prove one of the worst in the history of the plant in the number of deaths resulting. Twenty men were injured, six of whom are dead and ten are in the hospital, and are not expected to recover. The other injured went to their homes and are suffering from painful burns.

The accident was caused by a "hang" in th furnace dropping and forcing a large quantity of white hot dust down a large pipe into a pit where the men were at work. The victims, caught like rats in a trap, were without means of escape, and all were burned and blistered over their face and bodies and large strips of flesh peeled off their bodies when they were pulled out of the pit by fellow workers. The cries of agony of the victims as they writhed in the lava-like stuff from which they were vainly trying to extricate themselves, could be heard for nearly a block away.

Hundreds of workmen from other portions of the plant rushed to the rescue of their fellows, and as quickly as possible pulled them from the pit, and carried them to the Emergency Hospital. Seven of the men were completely nude when their bodies reached the hospital, and then the others had but a few shreds of clothing on them.

The bodies of the fatally burned could scarcely be recognized as such. They were blackened or shredded in strips by the white hot "down comer" dust that burned into their flesh. Many of the men had large blotches burned through the flesh, caused by the large splashes of the molten iron that had struck them and burned through to the bone.

Furnace No. 1 is equipped with the famous electric "skids" that are now used on all United States Steel corporation furnaces.

An Ottawa despatch says:—The following is the text of the Redistribution bill introduced by the Premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in the Commons :

Whereas the result of the census of 1901 necessitated a readjustment of the representation in the house of commons, pursuant to the provisions of the British North America act, 1867, and the other statutes made in that behalf, and it is expected at the same time to provide for an increased representation in the said house and in the Northwest Territories ;

Therefore His Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the senate and commons of Canada, enacts as follows :

1. The house of commons shall consist of 214 members, of whom 86 shall be elected for Ontario, 65 for Quebec, 18 for Nova Scotia, 13 for New Brunswick, 10 for Manitoba, 7 for British Columbia, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 10 for the Northwest Territories, and 1 for the Yukon territory.

2. The said provinces and territories respectively shall, for the purpose of the election of members to serve in the said house of commons, be divided into electoral districts and be represented, as provided in the schedule to this act.

3. Every town, village and township, parish or place lying within the territorial limits of any electoral district, and not specially included in any other electoral district by the said schedule, shall be taken to be part of the electoral district in which it is locally situated.

4. Wherever in the said schedule any word or expression is used to denote the name of any territorial division such word or expression shall, unless the contex otherwise requires, be constructed as indicating such territorial division as it exists and is bounded at the date of the passing of this act.

5. This act to take effect only upon the dissolution of the present parliament. ...

THE NEW CHALLENGER.

Shamrock III in Her First Trial Shows Her Speed.

A despatch from Gourock, Scotland, of March 31, says :—The yachts Shamrock III. and the Shamrock I. went for a trial spin this morning. Sunshine and a light steady wind had succeeded the stormy weather of the past week, and no time was lost getting the boats off. Although the breeze was light, it was decided not to risk anything, and the cup challenger's working topsail was accordingly set. The Shamrock I. followed suit.

The challenger was the first to leave her moorings, and looked the picture of a racer as she headed off shore. Out in Gourock Bay the wind was so light that the motion was more drifting than sailing. Shamrock III. slipping through the water without leaving a ripple, and carrying her head well up.

The first time the challenger broke tack, it was apparent that, by shortening her fin, Designer Fife had produced a boat which was fast on her heel, even compared with cup racers. She carried her way right through turning, and was off on her new course while the older boats would have been still looking at it, thus showing herself free of the greatest weakness of the Shamrock II.

There was no attempt at a set race. The Shamrock I. went off even a mile ahead, and then the sheets were trimmed on both boats, and a course was laid down channel. The two yachts were close hauled while crossing the mouths af Holy Loch and Loch Long, and the wind was squally and uncertain. They both sailed faster as they got a better breeze, and the challenger showed herself to be a little tender in squalls, but she sailed with her lee rail just clear of the water.

OUTSAILS SHAMROCK I.

She travelled fast and closed steadily upon Shamrock I. Under the mountainous Cowal peninsula the land breeze came true and fairly fresh, and the yachts went fetching down channel on what looked like real racing tests, in which the Shamrock III.'s greater speed was demonstrated. Sailing in the same water and no better served by the wind, the challenger pulled on her rival like hauling in a rope, as the boats fetched down channel, until off Wemyss Bay, Shamrock III. lay better to the wind and sailed faster. During the eight miles she had closed on Shamrock I. by fully a mile, and, at the same time, had edged quite a quarter of a mile further to windward.

Experts consider this performance alone sufficient to stamp Shamrock III. as being, under the conditions prevailing to-day, by far the fastest racer built on this side of the Atlantic to compete for the America's cup.

Chinese Servant's Mistake.

When the Anderson's went to California they rented a small furnished house and engaged a Chinese man-of-all-work. The house was well situated and tastefully furnished and Wing Lee proved to be a good cook, clean and respectable.

As soon as the Andersons were settled the neighbors began to call and it was then that the fact was discovered that Wing was absolutely devoid of any ideas as to the ushering in or out of guests. So one morning the ladies determined to instruct him. Providing him with a tray, Miss Anderson went out, rang the bell, was shown into the parlor and waited till the calm Chinamen carried her card to Mrs. Anderson.

This was repeated several times, until the ladies were quite satisfied that Wing was perfect in his role. That evening at 8.30 the bell rang. Wing shuffled majestically to the door, while mother and daughter hung breathlessly over the banisters to watch the result of their teaching.

They heard a gentleman's voice ask if the ladies were at home. They saw Wing present his tray and receive a card with an air which made them mentally pat each other on the back and then they saw him draw a card from his sleeve.

'Mine!' gasped Miss Anderson. 'The one we used for the lessons!'

Wing compared the two carefully and, returning the one which the caller just handed him, he remarked blandly' 'Ticket no good. No can come.' and calmly shut the door in the face of the astonished guest.

The telegraph service of the Australian Commonwealth is the cheapest in the world, and is operated entirely by the government as part of the postal system. For city messages, which include a suburban area of a radius of ten miles beyond the city limits, the rate is 12 cents for messages for ten words, and the address ; for messages of the same length to any point within the same state—and the states are generally bery much larger than any American state—the charge is 18 cents, while for similar messages to any station within the Commonwealth— and from Rockhampton, in Queensland, to Perth, in West Australia, the distance of wire is more than 4,500 miles—the uniform charge is 24 cents. It is estimated that these rates will yield a net ptofit of fully $18,000,000 ; that is, after paying operating expenses, cost of maintenance, and interest on capital expended in construction.

GENERAL BOOTH

IMMENSE AUDIENCE WELCOMES HIM IN LONDON.

Distinguished People Attended a Reception to the Aged General on His Return from America—Nearly Ten Thousand Crowd Albert Hall.

London accorded General William Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army a great welcome at the Albert hall on March 30. The immense auditorium was packed from the floor to the roof. There was not a vacant seat in the building, which has a capacity of 9,600 persons, and in spite of the rainy night hundreds were turned away.

The audience included Sir Edward Clark, Sir George Newnes, Lady Pondor, Lady Murray, seven metropolitan mayors and mayoresses, H. H. Asquith, and a number of other members of the stock exchange.

Ambassador Choate and other guests of prominence who were unable to attend, sent messages of regret. General Booth's appearance on the platform was the signal for a remarkable demonstration. The white bearded veteran, accompanied by Mrs Booth, and the headquarters staff, stood bowing his acknowledgements until the uproar ceased.

Enquiries in London confirm the report that the British government is still endeavoring to trace the gold taken from the Transvaal in the early days of the war. It is known that before his departure for South Africa Mr. Chamberlain was hoping to trace two known sums : £250,000 or thereabouts commandeered from Pretoria the day before Mr. Kruger fled, and £750,000 brought to Europe in July, 1900, by Jonkeer Sandbergh, private secretary to Dr. Leyds. If there is any bullion in South Africa it is regarded as probably in the low country in the Transvaal.

RICH STRIKE AT DAWSON.

Some Big Pans at Bear Creek near the Metropolis.

A phenomenal strike has occurred on Bear Creek, six miles from Dawson. The pay dirt is from fourteen to twenty feet deep, and over one hundred feet. The smallest pan has been twenty-five cents. The pans on one streak ran $5. Mr. R. Cowan, of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and two others own the property. Four men with a horse are taking out over $400 daily. The ground is surrounded by the Threadgold concession. It is believed there is a large area there and very rich.

Samaritans and Jews.

For the first time in history, a Samaritan high priest, Israk ben Amram ben Shalma, has left the Holy Land ; for the first time, probably, in history the Samaritans have appealed to the Jews, and the appealant is in London asking aid for a school. It is remarkable that this event should not have aroused more interest. The Samaritans have dwindled to 250 souls, but they still have their synagogue at Nablous and their old and beautifully written books. Education will probably not save them, though the remnant is well worth preservation. Serizim (ancient capital of Samaria) is hiding its head before Zion. One-third of the population to-day is Jewish, but there is no fear of the old dispute being revived. Samaria and Judah have alike suffered from the ravages of time.

MAN WHO PICKED WEEDS.

How Prof. John Macoun Gathered Subjects for Investigation Throughout Western Ontario Last Year.

Last summer a man with a knapsack on his back walked over a large part of Western Ontario, arousing a great deal of curiosity and inspiring some fear by his peculiar conduct. He passed through the counties fronting on Lakes Erie, St. Clair, Huron, and the Georgian Bay. When seen he was generally carrying a bundle of weeds in his hands, and to these he appeared to attach some value. Farmers driving along the road would see him pause, peer into a pasture field, eagerly scale the fence, pull a thistle, put it in his knapsack, and return to the highway. Those driving past would whip up their horses, and keep looking back at him until they passed over the next hill. Perhaps, on getting their last glimpse of him, he might be entering a swamp or gathering mullein leaves. No doubt stories are told all along his line of travel of this strange man, occupying himself in pursuits seemingly quite idle and nonsensical.

Prof. John Macoun.

This man was Prof. John Macoun. He was carrying on investigations into the flora of Western Ontario in connection with the regular work of the Geological Survey of Canada, and the annual summary report of the department has been published. Prof. Macoun was on the way from May 8th until September 7th, and the economic aspect of his work was to look into the fruit-producing capabilities of the country through which he passed. Nothing better indicates the climatic conditions of a region than its wild plant life, and Prof. Macoun, after gathering 1,400 specimens between Niagara and Owen Sound, says he found nothing to indicate a lack of warmth, and everything proved the assertion that the whole district was suitable for the cultivation of fruit, ranging from small fruits to cherries, plums, apples, pears, peaches, and grapes. He not only found these fruits growing, but found nature endorsing by her own unguided efforts the claim of this whole region to be regarded as a fruit country.

What Weeds Teach.

The country bordering on Lake St. Clair, Lake Huron, and part of the Georgian Bay will, he thinks, play a large part in the production of apples for export. On this point he says:

"The soil in most places is of the right kind, being largely mixed with lime, and the climate being cooler than that on Lake Erie, the fruit will be later in ripening, and hence will keep better. . . . . Between Goderich and Southampton the forest everywhere proved the estimate I had formed of it on the lower part of Lake Huron held good. The same terms may be applied to the lower part of the Bruce peninsula, and the country between Southampton and Owen Sound. Indeed, the whole district, extending almost to Collingwood, may be included in the future apple-growing area of Western Ontario."

Violets of the Ottawa.

It was shown last fall that the country about Owen Sound and Meaford could produce a large apple crop, for when supplies failed elsewhere the orchards of that district came to the rescue. Persons severely practical in their work and sympathies may smile to learn that Prof. Macoun's assistant "spent some time during May in a further study of the violets of the region about Ottawa, several new species being added to those already known," but botanists must carry on such inquiries so that the whole line of knowledge will advance.

Jokes on Lovers.

The opinion has been expressed that one reason why there are so many old bachelors in Ontario is because of the derision that a man meets with when it is known that he is about to marry and the ordeal of going away in a shower of rice, perhaps with a "shivaree" as a welcome home. In the cities it is not so bad, for people can get married and few know it. In country places practical jokers are always getting in their fine work on young fellows who go courting. The following is from The Uxbridge Journal, and illustrates the point:

"The boys in this country dearly love a joke, especially if it happens to be on some young fellow from a distance who invades their neighborhood on a courting expedition. This was the case recently in the Pine Grove neighborhood, where a young man from town had the wheels of his buggy changed and his lines crossed. But a young man from the country (Glen Major district) fared worse in town on fair night, his horse and rig having been appropriated in toto. It was returned to the hotel shed before morning, but the young man and his girl were under the necessity of hunting up sleeping quarters with friends in town at a late hour. These practical jokes sometimes result unpleasantly for all parties concerned, and it would be well if the funny people would find some less annoying way of exhibiting their humor."

An Editor's Ambition.

We'd rather be a barefooted boy with a healthy appetite and a precarious way of satisfying it, and hunt squirrels and fish for chubs in the little creek, and have to chop the firewood and milk the cows and feed the stock and go to a bed of straw to sleep the sleep of security, exhaustion, and a clear conscience than be the Czar of Russia, feted and eorshiped by sycophants behind massed regiments of infantry, at every moment fearful that he may become the victim of a bullet or bomb, or that his august stomach may take in a dose of poison, or that the dagger of a Nihilist may tickle his ribs. Go it, Nicholas! Enjoy, if you can, those French cheers. Few healthy minded lads in this glorious free Canada envy you your lot.—Hamilton Times.

FACTS ABOUT CANADA.

The Dominion's Population at a Glance—Origins of the People—Urban and Suburban Statistics.

In the report of the Minister of Agriculture for the last fiscal year there is an interesting condensation of the census returns of population, says The Globe. This shows that in the decennial census period, 1881-1891, the population increased from 4,324,810 to 4,833,239, and in the ten years, 1891-1901, from 4,833,239 to 5,371,315, the increase in the former decade being 508,429 and in the latter 538,076. In Manitoba, the Northwest Territories and British Columbia the increase in the last decade was 275,330, or more than half the total gain, and the total population of those parts of the Dominion is shown to be 592,808.

Canada's Area.

The land and water area of Canada above tide level is 3,745,574 square miles, and the largest Province is British Columbia, which has an area of 372,630 square miles, or nearly one-tenth of the whole. Quebec stands second, with an area of 351,873 square miles, and Ontario third, with 260,862 square miles. The smallest Province is Prince Edward Island, which has an area of only 2,184 square miles. But in density of population the Island ranks first, having 47.28 per square mile; Nova Scotia is second, with 21.45; New Brunswick third, with 11.83; Ontario fourth, with 8.37; Quebec fifth, with 4.78, and Manitoba sixth, with 3.46 per square mile. In British Columbia and the Northwest Territories the population is less than one per square mile, and for the whole Dominion it is 1.43.

Origins of the People.

By origins 3,063,195, or 57.03 per cent. are British; 1,649,371, or 30.71 per cent. are French; 310,501, or 5.78 per cent. are German, and 348,248, or 6.48 per cent. are of various origins. By nativities 4,671,815, or 86.98 per cent. were born in Canada; 405,883, or 7.56 per cent. in the British Islands and possessions, and 293,617, or 5.46 per cent. in foreign countries, at sea, and not given. The total number of immigrants from foreign countries is 278,788, of whom 153,908 are naturalized citizens and 124,880 are aliens. But as 159,283 of the total immigrant population arrived during the five and one-quarter years preceding the date of the census, it is apparent that the immigrants are merging fast into citizenship. Immigrants born in the United States number 127,809, and of these 87,049 are naturalized. The only people who adhere to their own nationality are the Chinese, as less than 4 per cent. of the 17,043 born in China are Canadians.

Urban and Suburban.

The rural population of the country is 3,349,516, and the urban is 2,211,799, the latter embracing all incorporated cities, towns and villages. There are 62 cities and towns of over 5,000, whose total population is 1,321,109. In 1891 there were 45 cities and towns of this class, and their total population was 1,021,819. These returns, it has previously been remarked, do not show the growth that many Canadians expected during the last decade. The present decade has opened with an immigration that will, if continued, materially alter the next accounting. In population records quality is of more account than quantity, and the returns as to origin and nationality and also as to industrial and general conditions may be regarded with satisfaction.

Canada's Railway Business.

The railways of Canada carried twenty million passengers last year of which they killed 29 and injured 176. The dramatic interest of a railway accident concentrates public attention upon the comparatively few killed and injured, but we seldom think of the twenty millions carried in safety. The chances that a traveler runs of being hurt are shown by the above figures to be exceedingly slight. He is almost as safe on a train as in his bed—or, to take a fairer contrast on the street. Railway officials should be given due credit for this proportion of safety. They are handling immense masses of iron, hurled along a steel track at a rate of, at least, forty miles an hour, meeting and passing other similar masses, and stopping at hundreds of stations; and yet they kill only 29 people out of twenty millions. Still, in the United Kingdom, in the same time, they carried far more passengers at a greater speed without killing one. The safest place in the world appears to be on board an English express train. This is said to be particularly true in a thunder storm.

Canada's Grand Old Men.

Canada is the country of grand old men. Besides Senator Wark, who will be a centenarian a few days hence, there is Senator R. B. Dickey, K. C., who is ninety-two. He was called to the Bar in 1834—a date at which very few judges and barristers of to-day were born. Lord Strathcona, the Canadian High Commissioner in London, is such an active and energetic personality that we are apt to forget that he is eighty-three. His predecessor, Sir Charles Tupper, is a year older, but looked scarcely sixty when he was here six months ago participating in the Coronation festivities.—London Chronicle.

Keir Hardie Conservative.

When Keir Hardie, the Radical member of the British Parliament, was arrested in Brussels on suspicion that he had something to do with the attempt on King Leopold's life, he was asked to give some account of himself. The prisoner replied that he was a member of the House of Commons. "And what is that?" asked the excited commissary of police, "It's a sort of Parliament," was Mr. Hardie's reply, and this is believed to be the first conservative statement he ever made in his life.

MICHEL

From Our Own Correspondent.

Miss Polly Evans, of Cranbrook, is the guest of her sister, Miss A. K. W. Evans.

Mr. A. B. Trites, of the Trites-Wood Co., was in town on Sunday last.

Constable Henderson has been appointed sanitary inspector for Michel.

A few more sunny days will show the bare ground once more.

The mines resumed operations here Wednesday morning.

A new bridge is being erected in the place of the old one across Michel creek.

The work on the new hotel is being pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

The new stables are completed and the horses were transferred to their new quarters on Monday.

Two deer were seen on the hillside within a few rods of the town one day this week.

A mountain trout weighing two pounds and ten ounces takes the lead so far this season.

Hundreds of pounds of fish have been caught the past two weeks, mostly greyling.

Messrs. S. Peacock and J. R. McPherson attended the labor convention at Fernie this week.

The C.P.R. has three gangs of men at work in the Loop doing improvements on a large scale.

A cashier system has been installed in the store here. Mr. J. Turner, of Fernie, did the work of installing last week.

Owing to the changes being made in the hotel building, the Maple Leaf Dancing club did not hold its regular weekly dance on Saturday evening last.

Some hundreds of feet of breakwater is being built along the creek east of the town to prevent the high water from doing damage in case of flood. Mr. D. Corp has the contract.

On account of the train being very late on Sunday evening, the Rev. Mr. Stoney did not arrive to hold Episcopal church service and Mr. Brown, Methodist missionary, held Methodist church service.

McVittie Bros., of Cranbrook, have been up the Elk this week doing survey work for some of the ranchers. All the land on the west side of Elk river from the government bridge to a point eight miles north is now taken up.

The seating capacity of the Michel school was all taken up last week and it became necessary for the trustees to install four new seats, which leaves very little space for recitation purposes. It is hoped the government will build a new school this summer, otherwise the accommodation will not be sufficient.

MORRISSEY

From Our Own Correspondent.

Batching is getting out of date—no credit in the store.

The boarding houses are wondering if they will get their board bills collected in the future.

Miss Ella Nomeland, of Fernie, was visiting with her sister, Mrs. Tranter, the first of the week.

The miners are rather divided in their opinion as to whether the situation is better now than previous to the strike.

The genial Joe Gall has been let in for something in the neighborhood of three hundred dollars, if rumour be correct.

Mr. Turner, of Fernie, is here this week installing a cash carrier system for the Trites-Wood Co.

Among the improvements to be added to Morrissey is a large warehouse for the Trites-Wood Co.

Morrissey men are making themselves scarce at Haden since the strike was declared off. They do not take kindly to bush work.

Everybody seems pleased that the strike that has rested on Morrissey with a heavy hand for the past seven weeks is a thing of the past.

C. A. Armstrong who has been attending the springs at Frank has returned sufficiently improved in health to go to work. He is weighing coal for the company at this place.

Mr. F. Sample, of Michel, who has had charge of building the large fans that the company has been erecting here was in Morrissey on Thursday making preparation to finish No. 5 fan.

Work was resumed at the mines on Wednesday, the 1st, on the second day there were over 100 men at work in the mines and the company loaded and shipped 450 tons of coal.

New men are constantly coming in and asking for employment and many of the old employees who went away when the strike was declared have returned and taken their former positions.

Mr. Fritz Bachor, of Morrissey, and Miss Augusta Umnuhs, of Wausau, Wis., were united in marriage in that city at the home of her brother on the 23rd of March. They arrived in Morrissey on 29th, where they will make their future home. We wish them much happiness.

WHAT OTHERS SAY.

The Nelson News says of the strike settlement: "The strike just concluded has been a remarkable one in some respects. A noteworthy feature of this dispute has been the intervention of a conciliation committee, composed of representatives of labor and capital drawn from all parts of the province. The work accomplished by this committee undoubtedly assisted in the settlement. We believe it will be acknowledged sooner or later that the intervention of this conciliation committee came at a most opportune time when both parties directly concerned in the dispute were getting further apart and the prospect of settlement was daily growing less hopeful. The precedent set in this case will, we hope, be followed in the future until such time as by wise legislation the necessity of voluntary intervention of this kind will no longer exist.

"Another exceptional feature of this strike was the action of the local unions in turning down their district executive officers, a course persisted in to the last by one of the locals. It is to be feared that where action of this kind is possible the outlook for healthy and hopeful unionism is not of the brightest. However, in the long period of tranquility which it is to be hoped will now ensue time will be afforded to instil a truer appreciation of the duties and responsibilities of tradesunionism into those who must today be regarded as ignorant of the principles that should influence them in all transactions arising out of the relations of their unions with the employers. If fair and reasonable conduct of negotiations in times of industrial dispute are to be demanded of the employers the second party to the negotiations must evince a similar spirit.

"The depression that has been occasioned throughout the mining districts of southern Kootenay by reason of this strike should now speedily vanish. The metaliiferous mining outlook was never brighter. The only obstacle in the way of increased development and output at all of our mines and smelters has been the fuel shortage. A few days will see this obstacle removed and regular shipments of coal and coke once more in progress."

WILL EMPLOY 40 MEN

NEW INDUSTRY FOR FERNIE —SASH AND DOOR AND INTERIOR FINISHINGS

The Fernie Manufacturing Co., Ltd., will Erect a Large Factory — Will Operate by June 1st.

A new firm which has thrown in its lot with the other industries of Fernie is the Fernie Manufacturing Company, Limited. This company secured it charter in January and since that time plans have been perfected which assure the new company a marked degree of success.

The Fernie Manufacturing Co. is incorporated as a joint stock company with a capital of $25,000 with power to increase. The officers are: H. F. Martin, of Morrissey, president; Norman E. Broley, vice-president and manager; H. J. Johnson, sec.-treas.

The object of the company is to manufacture sash and door and interior finishings of buildings. The plant will be built on the most modern principles and fitted with up-to-date machinery ensuring first-class production in every line. Nothing but perfectly dry material, which will be treated artificially, will be used. The prairie which is rapidly filling up with a good class of settlers will furnish unlimited markets for all that the company can produce. The Crows Nest line, the main line to Moosejaw and the Souris line will receive the greater part of the export trade. The local trade of course will always receive first attention.

Five acres of land about half a mile north of the depot and west of the track have been secured, which will be used for building purposes and for lumber yards. The main factory will be 50 x 124 and will consist of two stories, the upper one for sash and the lower one for doors and house finishings. A large annex 20 x 100 will be erected where an up-to-date moist air drying system will be installed. This building will have a capacity of 64,000 feet every four days, in which time new green timber can be thoroughly dried. A glazing room 30 x 32 is also to be added. The company will have its own electric light system.

The work of building the factory will be rushed as soon as possible. This will be personally superintended by Mr. Broley. The engines and machines are purchased and are on the way. The former is of 160 h.p. having two boilers each of 80 h.p. All shavings and waste will be removed to the fuel bin by a blower system. The factory will contain 30 machines for the manufacture of its different productions and forty men will be employed by the company. It is expected that the Fernie Manufacturing Co. will be in full running form by June 1st.

REPUDIATES MOB VIOLENCE

Gladstone Union Passes a Resolution defining its Position with Respect to the recent Outrage.

We have received the following resolution from the Press Committee of the Galdstone Miners' Union No. 76 with a request for its publication.

Whereas certain deeds of violence were perpetrated at Coal Creek Mines on the 19th of March last and

Whereas an effort has been made to fix the responsibility for the said offences on Gladstone Miners Union No. 76 and the District Union No. 7 of the W. F. of M. by the arrests and prosecution of the officers and members of the said unions, and

Whereas a number of men who were charged with the offences in question were negligently allowed to depart from Fernie without trial. Therefore be it

Resolved that this union hereby declares itself to be not in sympathy with the said deeds of violence and strongly disapprove of the same and having endeavored to assist the authorities in suppressing the same will continue so to do and be it further

Resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the attorney General at Victoria and the various papers.

A. A. ASSOCIATION ORGANIZES.

A Large and Representative Executive—Football Already in Line.

The Fernie Amateur Athletic Association held its annual meeting on Monday evening in Joyce's Hall. A large number were present and much interest was shown in the proceedings. Mr. W. R. Ross, president, was in the chair. The secretary read last year's statement which showed that out of nearly $1,000 received by the association last year there was a balance of $82.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

Hon. Pres.—J. H. Tonkin (accl).
Pres.—H. Bentley, (accl.)
Vice Pres.—W. W. Tuttle, (accl.)
Sec.-Treas.—A. H. Cree, (accl.)

Out of fourteen nominated for the executive committee the following five were elected: Messrs. W. R. Ross, M. Kastner, T. Whalen, E. Rutledge and Dr. C. P. Higgins.

The subject of adding another hundred feet to the length of the new recreation grounds, thus making it 500 ft. x 400 ft and large enough for a race course was brought before the meeting but it was decided to leave it for the committee to decide. The meeting then adjourned.

The full executive of the association consists of the officers, the committee of five already mentioned, and two members to be added from each club.

The foot-ball meeting which followed immediately after the association meeting was well attended, and much enthusiasm was displayed.

S. Herchmer was appointed chairman and R. A. McMordie took the minutes of the meeting. R. Hackett was appointed captain of the club and Mr. McMordie secretary-treasurer. Messrs. Herchmer and Hackett were elected as representatives of the foot-ball club on the executive of the Fernie A. A. Association.

The subject of the Crows Nest league was discussed and it was the unanimous opinion that Fernie should enter the league. Macleod has been agitating a meeting of delegates for April 11th at that town to arrange a schedule and Mr. McMordie was appointed to represent Fernie at that meeting, and he was instructed to write four other towns, Cranbrook, Frank, Macleod and Lethbridge to make sure of there being a full meeting.

The lacrosse meeting called for Tuesday evening did not materialize. only half a dozen of the boys turned up. Another meeting will be called later on when signs of approaching spring are more prominent. The secretary has received a communication from the Nelson Lacrosse club asking for a game with the Fernie club at Nelson on May 24th. They offer to pay all expenses. The only chance for our locals to get any practice before that date is to get out on snow shoes.

The base ball club was organized at a meeting held at the Royal hotel last evening. The officers elected are: Pres., J. H. Tonkin; Manager, W. W. Tuttle; Captain, C. Whelan; Sec.-Treas., M. Kastner. Two delegates, C. Whelan and F. Cuthbert, were chosen to represent the base ball club on the A. A. A. executive. Suits were chosen and other executive business was transacted. The meeting was well attended and considerable enthusiasm was displayed. Much effort will be put forth to get a strong nine gathered together this year and there is no doubt that Fernie will hold its own in the base ball department of sport this year.

POLICE COURT.

Nikolo Mattai, an Italian employed by a fellow countryman at Crow's Nest was arrested in Fernie on the charge of theft. It appears he made away with some of his employer's provisions stored at Michel. He has also a reputation of buying goods on credit and selling them for cash. He was given two weeks.

C. Brown was arrested for carrying a gun. Brown has friends in a neighboring town whom he was desirous of joining and the magistrate gave him a chance to leave Fernie, which he gladly accepted.

The Davies case was resumed on Tuesday. — McLeod, tailor, was the first witness. He testified that on the night of March 19th, he saw the accused in the Club room of the Royal Hotel. He saw him about 10 o'clock and he again saw him about 11:40 in the same place. He knew the accused by sight.

T. Davies, the man who was arrested by mistake in the place of the accused, swore that he saw the latter on the street about 10:30. He again saw him in the Muskoka Hotel about 12:30 where they both remained until 1:30 a.m.

T. Whelan and several other witnesses were called in the afternoon to further prove the alibi, after which the case was adjourned until next week.

R. Madison was tried on Wednesday before L. R. Forbes S. M. for being implicated in the mob at Coal Creek Mines.

Mr. Drinnan swore that he saw accused inside the office door on the night in question. He knew him well. He had no mask on, but his face was streaked with black marks.

John Hunt testified that he saw the accused among the mob. He had no black on his face. The accused walked beside him for a mile or more and seemed to sympathize with him. Spencer and Evans were also called but they had not recognized the accused in the mob.

Mrs. Alders, aunt of accused testified that accused had come to her house early in the evening. He told her that he came to the mines to get his statement for pay-day and upon further remarking that he was not feeling well she prevailed upon him to remain over night. He went upstairs to bed early. The dogs made a disturbance and awakened her. She looked out and the accused called down and asked her what was the matter. A little later he came down stairs and went out.

The accused made a sworn statement which bore out the evidence of his Aunt. He further admitted that he went down to where the crowd was at Evans' house and joined them. Mr. Ross in summing up dwelt upon the fact that the accused was drawn into the crowd by mere curiosity: the evidence did not show that he took any active part, but on the other hand that he rendered assistance to Hunt. The prosecution asked for his committal on the grounds that he was in the mob and was also seen in the Company's office.

The accused was committed for trial without bail.

Fire Protection

"Lock the stable door before the horse is stolen," is the motto which ought to be adopted by Fernie in respect to its fire protection. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." A few hundred dollars wisely spent now in improving our system is much preferable to a dead loss of fifty times that amount through a disastrous fire which may be avoided by the said expenditure. A fire hall and improved fire-fighting appliances are assets worth having, and, as pointed out in a letter in these columns several weeks ago, improvements in this line would naturally be followed by a better organized brigade, for there would then be some incentive for practice, and the spirit of competition among the young men of the town would certainly result in a more efficient organization. Fernie has miraculously escaped a serious fire during the five years of its existence, but for this fortunate state of affairs no particular credit is due to its citizens and it is a mistake on their part to estimate their present security by their past good fortune. Now is the time to act, before the evil day cometh.

THE Fernie strike is really settled at last. People in the Boundary will heave a sigh of relief over the termination of the unfortunate conflict between the miners and the company. Stable economic conditions will soon bring buoyant prosperity to the Boundary and southern British Columbia generally. Of the richness and extent of our mineral wealth there is no question; the only uncertain factor in the equation in the future, is the co-operation of capital and labor.—Grand Forks News-Gazette.

The charter of the Crow's Nest line originally called for the completion of the road into Nelson by the end of 1902. Last year the time was extended until the end of 1903 and it is supposed that the party of railway engineers under Mr. Armstrong, whose arrival at Kootenay Landing was recorded last week, is engaged in making preparations to build the bridge over the Kootenay River and to extend the line along the lake to Proctor. They are engaged at present in making soundings at the point where presumably the Kootenay will be bridged but no definite information can be obtained of the exact work the party has in hand.—Nelson News.

GOVT. INTERVIEWED.

DEPUTATION OF E. KOOTENAY LUMBERMEN MAKE SOME SUGGESTIONS.

Vancouver Lumbermen Will also Take Action in the Matter and Make Further Suggestions.

Victoria, April 4.—A deputation consisting of James Ryan and W. T. Gurd, of Cranbrook; J. G. Billings, of Nelson; D. V. Mott, of Fernie and C. F. Mott, of Revelstoke, interviewed the government this afternoon, representing the East Kootenay lumber manufacturers, Messrs. Shannon and MacDougall, of Vancouver accompanying them and supporting the the suggestions the representatives made.

Suggested amendments respecting timber licenses was their subject and the following recommendations were made in behalf of the Mountain Lumber Manufacturer's Association.

1. That licenses be renewable at option of holders from year to year.

2. That license holders must cut one thousand feet R. M. daily for every license held for eight months in the year and that the licensees may take up any number of licenses.

3. Licenses, including existent licenses, to be transferable.

4. Whereas timber east of the Cascades is not as heavy as in the west no increase should be make in the fee for licenses issued over lands east of the Cascades.

5. We approve of the regulation requiring surveys but would suggest in view of the difficulty to be met in having surveys made, reasonable extensions be allowed before cancellation of licenses for failure to survey.

These points were verbally elaborated and the government promised consideration.

Monday morning a similar deputation from Vancouver will discuss the same subject.

Fernie Drainage

MANY of our readers were doubtless surprised when they read in our issue of last week that part of the townsite was under water in the spring of 1894, and that many were thinking of building rafts this year in anticipation of a similar flood. We must apologize to our readers and our Michel correspondent for having inadvertently mixed three Michel items with the Fernie locals. There is a small portion of the Fernie townsite, however, to which the statement might literally apply with perfect truth, and the urgent need of some system of drainage is seen in this lowlying part every Spring. The situation of Fernie is such that it is well adapted for a simple and economical drain system. The town skirts the steep bank of the Elk and the construction of a few short drains is the natural solution of a grievance which causes much inconvenience and discomfort. Under the existing laws of B. C. the town is prohibited from discharging its drains into the Elk river. Doubtless there are many good reasons for legislating in a general way against draining into rivers but no reason presents itself to us why an exception should not be allowed in this case by a special act of of the legislature. The laws of nature so adjust themselves to our needs that the purefying action of light and air upon any filth cast into such a swift flowing river is wrought very rapidly and no material injury is done to its finny inhabitants. The determined voice of the Liberal Association some time ago showed that a candidate of that body would require to pledge himself strongly on this question, and the Board of Trade last week expressed itself in no uncertain tones on the urgent necessity of a special act permitting drainage from the town of Fernie into the Elk River. Now is the time for the Government to Act. A bill of this nature could be rushed through without much loss of time and effective results could be experienced this spring. If, as it is generally expected, the town is incorporated this summer, and no action is taken by the present legislature, which will adjourn next month, the town council will be powerless to do anything towards putting in a sewer system until the following summer, after the matter is brought before the legislature next spring.

MILLINERY OPENINGS.

The millinery opening at the London & Liverpool store on Thursday afternoon was certainly the most successful affair of its kind ever held in Fernie. We called early in the afternoon, but the department was crowded with interested ladies and we beat a hasty retreat, but in the evening after the rush was over a more successful attempt was made to inspect the charming display of spring hats. To the masculine mind the styles of this year show a marked improvement over those of other years. They show a a general tendency towards flatness and symmetry, and the beauty and harmony of the trimmings together with the becoming shapes make a combination of beauty and rationality not often seen in previous years.

The description itself baffles our skill. Hats without number were on exhibition. Some of the prettiest picked at random were described to us. One was a lovely placque of turquoise blue and tuck straw with rolls of chiffon of the same delicate blue shade, pastel shade of crushed roses relieved the color, and bands of blue liberty satin ribbon with loops caught in cut steel bars completed this vision of New York loveliness.

Another was a black hat of Parisian origin; its crown was composed of loops of one flat bow, with facings and a flowing drape of black oriental lace, the former held in place by a black rosette of panne ribbon velvet. A beautiful ostrich trailer ornamented one side of this pretty hat.

Another new style is the shower hat, made in box turban with black cut spangled jet and facing of folded tulle, a large bunch of white ospreys in the centre of the crown is held in place by a jet ornament. This very neat hat is furnished with a white lace rosette made in poppy shape on the left side, and on the back with some other trimmings the names of which we cannot remember.

The shapes this year are flat and larger than last, with the exception of turbans which are very much in evidence. In trimmings, burnt orange predominates. Tuck straw and drapes of fancy nets and jets are also much used. In children's headwear a very pretty line of muslins and silks were admired by all. The window display at this store is very pretty and catches the eye of every passer-by.

Mrs. Todd's millinery opening, which took place on April 1st, was very successful. Many very pretty hats were on exhibition at this popular store. The sales since have been most satisfactory, proving that her stock is of the best.

Mrs. Goldstein has opened a milliney store in THE FREE PRESS block. She is holding her millinery opening today. She has a fine stock of new goods, which no doubt will be appreciated by the ladies.

Broken Wheel

Yesterday's 4 o'clock train from the Mines had an accident while coming from the mines. When about two miles from the town a wheel of one of the coaches broke into two halves. Fortunately it was going slow, and no one was hurt. The car was repaired and brought down by nine o'clock.

The Jessie Maclachlan Concert

Owing to the blockade on the C. P. R. at Morrissey on Thursday Miss Maclachlan and her companions were unable to reach Fernie in time to give their entertainment that evening and a matinee was arranged for the following day. Yesterday being a holiday the plan worked perfectly and the first matinee held in Fernie was one which will be remembered with pleasure by all who were fortunate enough to be present. The house was a good one, the sum of $150 being realized from it. Miss Maclachlan's voice has lost none of its old-time power. Its marvellous volume and strength filled to over-flowing every inch of space in Princess Hall and a much larger hall would be required to do her full justice. Her distinct articulation and her stage effect were also much appreciated. Her songs were all Scotch with the exception of "The Holy City," "Barney O'Hea" and "Rule Britannia." Her wide repertoire clearly showed the marvellous range possessed by this talented singer's voice. It was never any effort for her to reach the highest notes and she held them without a tremor. Never was the power and expression of Scotch music so well revealed in Fernie as by Miss Maclachlan. Her "Blue Bonnets over the Border" took the house by storm. Miss Dean captivated the audience from the start. Her clever execution on the violin denotes her an artist of no small merit. She puts expression into her music. Both she and Miss Maclachlan responded liberally to the hearty encores.

IRELAND IS HAPPY

KING AND QUEEN WILL VISIT EMERALD ISLE.

Lord Dunraven Speaks on Proposed Irish Land Scheme—Comment on Shamrock III.—Oldest Subject of King Edward Passes Away.

A London cable says: Official announcement of the King's intention to visit Ireland with the Queen has caused the greatest enthusiasm in that island, which quite recently has had more occasions for self-congratulation than in many years. At first it was fancied that their majesties proposed to witness the race for the International cup, but it is thought more likely that after the Cowes regatta the King and Queen will start on a cruise around the Irish coast. They will probably reach Dublin about the date of the horse show.

It is generally understood that the King had a considerable share in bringing about the recent satisfactory reversal of the government policy for Ireland, and that it is personally his sincere wish that every cause of friction between the two countries shall be removed.

The introduction of the Land bill, as was expected, aroused much speculation as to the developments of the government's Irish policy, but it remained for the Dublin correspondent of the Daily Chronicle to make the most sensational announcement. This was nothing less than that the government had resolved to go to the country on the question of an enormous extension of local government in Ireland.

The Chronicle's correspondent learned all this "on the authority of a member of the government," who seems to have hinted to him incidentally, that neither Mr. Gerald Balfour nor Mr. Brodrick will be found in another Unionist cabinet.

Lord Dunraven, as a representative Irish landlord, speaking recently of that part of the scheme which provides for the issue of loans for which Ireland will be the security, says:—"If the loans are issued at a premium, Ireland will get the benefit, if at par, she will get pound for pound, if at a discount she will have to make good the loss. If my voice could reach so far I should like to call the attention of the Irish race across the sea to this fact. The sentiments are in favor of a just, business-like settlement of the land question in Ireland. I have found strong expression of this sentiment on the part of the Irish race in America and elsewhere. A good opportunity will be offered to them when these loans are issued."

A well known Irish-American, speaking on the same subject, said that for years some of the wealthy Irish-Americans in the United States have declined to contribute to the Irish campaign funds, saying there was such a lack of harmony as to render unavailing any effort for Ireland's good. Now that all Ireland is in harmony these millionaires will have a chance to subscribe to a loan that cannot help but give the greatest possible benefit to Ireland. "Besides," he added, "the loan is not floated upon sentimental grounds, but upon a sound commercial basis. If the Irish-Americans subscribe for the loan as they should it will go to a big premium, and Ireland will reap the benefit."

SPEEDIEST YACHT AFLOAT.

Both the Shamrocks are now on their way to the channel, where the real racing trials will be held, first off Weymouth, and afterwards in the Solent. The spins on the Clyde have been fully described in dispatches, but the opinion of a gentleman who has had forty years' experience as a yachtsman, and who was closely identified with the trials of Shamrock II. is interesting. He says he has no doubt whatever that the new boat is by a long way the speediest challenger ever built. He bases his opinion on some careful watching of a bit of Wednesday's sailing, that bore a close resemblance to a well remembered bit between the Shamrock I. and Shamrock II. "On that occasion," he said, "the second Shamrock could not sail away a yard from the other boat, but the Shamrock 1, and then dropped her quite easily."

It is this careful watching of vital points of this character that is making men of sound experience, even in the face of many false hopes already raised begin to look on the new boat as the best ever turned out by Great Britain for a race for the America's cup.

The only point in which the new boat has not demonstrated her absolute superiority is running with her spinaker set before the wind. But it must be kept in view that this was the very strongest element in the old Shamrock.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S DENIAL

Colonial Secretary Chamberlain was asked if there was any truth in the statement made by a Dublin correspondent of the Daily Chronicle to the effect that the government intends to dissolve parliament at the end of the present session, and he replied: "The statements are absolutely untrue, both as they regard the government generally."

Mrs. Margaret Neve, King Edward's oldest subject, died on April 4 at her home in Guernsey. For 110 years she preserved her health, and was known throughout the United Kingdom. She was a wealthy woman, lived on a charming estate and gladly welcomed visitors who came to see this old friend of the late Queen Victoria.

Nearly 150 witnesses have been subpoenaed in the Gamey case.

The natives made an obstinate resistance and lost 27 men killed and many wounded before they retired. There were no casualties on the British side. During the "driving operations" recently the British killed 40 of the Mad Mullah's followers, and captured 1,400 camels.

British Elections in Autumn.

The correspondent of the London Daily Chronicle at Dublin claims to have the authority of a member of the present government for the statement that the government intends to dissolve parliament at the end of the present session, the general elections being held in the autumn.

The leading plank in the Conservative platform at the elections, affirms the correspondent, will be an enormous extension of local government Ireland, providing for the establishment of a legislative council at Dublin, which will have the control of the Irish police.

It is understood, further asserts the correspondent, that Colonial Secretary Chamberlain warmly supports the government's project, and that the economies that Secretary Wyndham promised in connection with the Irish land bill largely depends upon its realization. Neither Gerald Balfour, president of the board of trade, nor the present war secretary, Mr. Brodrick, would be included in the next cabinet.

According to the supposed plans of the government, the Dublin chamber will consist of representatives of the Irish county councils and will deal with local matters such as gas, water and railways.

A Miraculous Escape.

A dispatch from Seattle says: It was certainly a miracle that Miss Lou Storme was not instantly killed when, in an attempt to take her own life, she jumped from a rear balcony of the Spalding house on Yesler way, to the ground below, a distance of 60 feet.

Not a bone in her body was broken. She struck on her head and caved a hole three inches deep. She was severely bruised and shaken up but she will recover.

She alighted squarely on her head on a hard piece of ground. Three inches away was a pile of tin cans and rubbish, which she barely missed.

Miss Storme, who was immediately taken to the Wayside Mission hospital, insisted when the police picked her up that she was able to walk, but they sent for the ambulance just the same. She refuses to tell why she tried to kill herself.

The Irish Object.

A dispatch from Syracuse says: Jas. E. Dolan, president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, has issued the following official statement: 'The Ancient Order of Hibernians does not recommend or countenance any violence in doing away with the 'Baboon-faced stage Irishman,' but we are determined to wipe out the flagrant insult to our people, and Irishmen all over the country have joined in the movement, as have many leading newspapers, to which we owe a debt of gratitude. We recommend that our members withhold the patronage of themselves and their families from theatres and amusement halls where the outrageous and insulting attractions are permitted to be produced. He do not object to Irish wit, but in view of all we have contributed toward the advancement and development of this great nation, we ask all sincere citizens to join with us in stopping these insults to our race, and we condemn such ridiculous caricaturing, no matter of what people or nationality."

A Ghastly Find.

Mr. Fraser's party of C. N. R. surveyors made a ghastly find on the prairie a few days ago about forty miles west of Saskatoon. While running their survey line they came across a man and a team of horses attached to a sleigh. The man was was sitting huddled up among the furs on the seat, but the reins were trailing on the ground and the horses were walking in a dazed condition along the trail. On investigation the surveyors found that the man was dead. There was nothing in the way of papers on his person to show who he was, but it is believed he was a rancher and had been frolen to death.

B. C. PARLIAMENT OPENS.

Important Labor Legislation is Foreshadowed.

The fourth session of the ninth parliament of British Columbia was opened on April 2 with the usual formalities by the lieutenant-governor, Sir Henry Lotbiniere, who was attended by a guard of honor from the fifth regiment of the Canadian Artillery and a brilliantly uniformed staff, consisting of officers from the warships at Esquimalt, officers of the garrison at Work point and the commanding officers and militia officers.

The speech from the throne delived at the opening announced the intention of bringing in legislation to consolidate and amend the mining laws, to abolish the two per cent. tax on mines, and to re-enact the anti-oriental legislation which has been disallowed by the Dominion government.

Another feature was the announcement of intended legislation to provide machinery for the settlement of disputes between capital and labor. The scheme proposed provides that when a dispute arises, the employer will appoint an arbitrator, the men will appoint a representative, and these two will select a third. In the event of either side refusing to act after five days' notice being given, the other party may apply to the courts, and the judge will appoint an arbitrator for the side which declined to take action, and the two thus chosen will select the third. The committee will have power to examine witnesses under oath, send for documents, and to find on this evidence. If the parties to the dispute fail to accept the findings of the committee the latter will then publish all the evidence in the Provincial Gazette, and allow the public to make their own conclusions.

Lightning struck the barn of John Stewart, near Bothwell, on April 2. A large quantity of hay, grain and all his farm implements were burned, also seven head of cattle. Stewart, with great difficulty, saved his horses. His loss is about $1,500, with very little insurance.

The steamship Sardinian, which arrived at Halifax, on April 3, had a thrilling experience at midnight on Wednesday. While the lookout was keeping a watch on icebergs, a big monster loomed up a short distance ahead. The helm was put hard to port, and the vessel struck the berg a glancing blow. The passengers were frightened, but no harm was done. She had 600 Scotch immigrants on board.

Residents of Helena flats, five miles north of Helispell, Mont., were terrified on the night of April 2 by an earthquake. At a point on Whitefish river, where the disturbance occurred more than five acres of bluff land was carried a distance of 600 feet and deposited in the channel of the river. The dam is 300 feet long and no trace of the former channel can be seen.

A cablegram, from Berlin says: A non-commissioned officer named Weidemann was tried by court-martial at Magdeberg for twenty-two cases of cruelty to men under his command. Evidence was given that one of the soldiers habitually maltreated by Weidemann committed suicide to escape further suffering. The military procurator urged that the perpetrator should be imprisoned for six months and then degraded and expelled from the army, but the court-martial imposed the remarkably light sentence of five weeks' imprisonment, on the expiration of which Weidemann will go back to the regiment and continue to do duty as though nothing had happened.

A Startling Phenomenon.

A dispatch from Kingston, St. Vincent, says: The last eruption of the volcano Soufriere was the longest and, considered geologically the most interesting. It lasted from March 21 until the morning of March 30. The volcano became again active on the night of March 30, when a startling phenomenon was witnessed, the crater, appearing like an electric arc, being reflected upon the mountain of clouds.

The Soufriere continues to show signs of disturbance. The agricultural officer reports that the district to windward resembles the surrounding of a gas works. The young vegetation is again obliterated by cinders from the volcano. A dozen different kinds of ejecta Rere thrown out during this eruption.

CAMBRIDGE WINS.

THE ANNUAL UNIVERSITY BOAT RACE.

They Took the Lead at the Start and Maintained It Throughout, Winning by Six Boat Lengths—Oxford Rowed Pluckily.

Putney, Eng., April 1.—To-day's inter-university boat race, which was the Diamond Jubilee of the contest, was won easily by Cambridge by six lengths, in 19 minutes, 32½ seconds. Excepting the fact that rain was falling, the weather conditions were favorable. A light wind was blowing, but the water was smooth.

Oxford won the toss and chose the Surrey side of the river. The choice carried little advantage under the prevailing conditions. Cambridge was first afloat, quickly followed by Oxford. As the crews paddled down to the stakeboat, they were heartily cheered.

F. J. Pitman, the hero of the memorable race of 1886, effected a capital start. Cambridge was the quicker away, and the nose of the Cambridge boat promptly showed in front and remained there throughout the race. Rowing with immense power, the Cambridge men completely outclassed those of Oxford, and increased their lead with every stroke, with the exception of a brief moment at the Crabtree, when Monier-Williams, the Oxford stroke, spurted slightly and decreased the opening between the boats. Nelson, the Cambridge stroke, however, quickly responded, and everything in the nature of a race was over.

Oxford made one more effort after passing Thorneycrofts, but Nelson, quickening his stroke, again demonstrated the superior strength of his crew. The Oxonians maintained good form throughout, and finished the course gamely, but they were never able to hustle Cambridge in the least.

The procession failed to elicit any enthusiasm from the drenched thousands of spectators. All the Cambridge crew finished in good condition. Drinkwater and one or two others of the Oxford men were somewhat badly done up.

THE START.

The boats started at 3.33 o'clock. Cambridge immediately shot ahead, striking 38 at Oxford's 36. Cambridge was leading by a length at Craven Steps, and was still ahead at Harrods stores. By the time the scaharine works was reached Cambridge had increased her lead to two lengths. Cambridge was still two lengths ahead at Hammersmith Bridge, and rowing very steadily.

Passing the lead mills, Cambridge was still going ahead. Both crews were rowing 36 strokes to the minute. Four lengths separated the boats on passing Thorney Crofts. Oxford drew up and Cambridge was only ¾ of a length ahead at the Crabtree.

By the time the Devonshire Meadows were reached, Cambridge was three lengths ahead. The race, however, had become a procession.

Cambridge shot under Barnes Bridge three and one-half lengths in front, and won by about six lengths. Oxford, although hopelessly beaten, rowed out the course in good form.

Street Slides Down Hill.

A Rossland, B. C., despatch says—A serious landslide occurred Tuesday within one hundred yards of the business centre of the city. A section of Leroi avenue, west of the intersection of Washington street, and overlooking the Canadian Pacific track, slid some feet, blocking tracks and damaging the Washington street viaduct hopelessly. The first slip taok place at 3 o'clock in the morning, and a freight train passing soon after was derailed. At noon another slip took place and further trouble is expected. The viaduct will require rebuilding. No residences were injured. Excessive stoppage of suelace water caused the trouble.

An Unnatural Father.

The Severny Krai reports the following:—A man and his wife, who left their native village near Vitibsk, a few days ago, to have their baby baptized at the nearest church, were set upon by twelve wolves.

The man ordered his wife to throw the baby to the wolves. She refused, and he attempted to tear the baby from her arms. In the scuffle the mother fell out of the sleigh with the baby and they rolled, unnoticed by the wolves, into a ditch. The wolves kepy up the pursuit and overtook and devoured the man and his horse.

MISSISSIPPI ROUSTABOUTS

They Are Travelers, Nomads, Autocrats, Men of Leisure.

The black steamboat roustabout of the Mississippi is as much part and parcel of the river as is the water and quite as necessary. There is an impression that the roustabout is a much abused individual, an inclination to class him along with the slavelike circus hand. This is wholly wrong. The roustabout is traveler, nomad, autocrat, man of leisure. He is little seen on the upper river, but in St. Louis, Memphis and Orleans there are enough of him to man five times as many boats as touch at those ports. Yet lower river packets have trouble in shipping full crews of the blacks. They are compelled to ship for each trip separately, because it does not please the rouster to take more than one trip in a month. The balance of the time he plays gentleman of affluence. On the Memphis levee I listened to a group of the brawny fellows as they lolled within the shade of a freight pile. Not one was there who had not visited at some time every point in the Mississippi valley at which the steamboat calls. They were equally at home in Pittsburg or Orleans, Little Rock or Chattanooga.

In summer the rousters are fairly willing to work, though they exercise fine discrimination in the matter of boats, but in the fall, when steamers are plentiful and labor scarce, they become exceeding coy. They do not gather around the hiring mate then. He has to come to them. They regard coldly the average monthly wage, $40. They ask for $60 and even for $90, and they get it. If they hold a grudge against the mate of a boat, they demand his discharge and get that too.

But the moment, summer or winter, that the roustabout steps upon a steamer's forecastle his hours of ease are done. He works day and night, a sort of work no white man could stand for even twelve hours. He sleeps at odd minutes between landings sprawled on deck or cotton bale. He wears shirt—usually—trousers and shoes and finds them burdensome. He lays aside his powers of sight and reasoning, retains only ears and muscles and becomes a powerful machine, answering to the slightest inclination of a mate's will.—Willis Gibson in Scribner's.

A Struggle With English.

American tourists abroad often comment upon the literal translation into English of notices in foreign languages. The well meant efforts of landlords and others to convey in the language of the visitor the meaning of the native often produce laughable results.

A Washington citizen found this notice posted in his room in an Alpine hotel:

"Misters, the venerable voyagers are earnestly requested not to take clothes of the bed to see the sun rise for the color changes."

Our Paper Money.

The man who is ever ready to bet on anything said suddenly to a group of members of the club, "I'll bet a case of catchup to a bottle of curry powder that there isn't a man in the party that can name the denominations of United States paper money." All lost, and all were abashed when he mentioned $1, $2, $5, $10, $20, $50, $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000 and $10,000. Most men are unaccustomed to handling notes above $100 and few ever saw one of $10,000.

Food Alters Animals.

It is surprising how circumstances alter animals. The savages of the Amazon region feed the common green parrot for generations with the fat of certain fishes, thus causing it to become beautifully variegated with red and yellow feathers. In like manner the natives of the Malay archipelago, by a process of feeding, change the talkative lory into the gorgeous king lory.

MARKETS.

(Compiled from The Commercial)

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

Manitoba wheat has been quiet and steady most of tae week and ready to respond to the advances in outside markets. The figures at the close of Friday's business show an advance of 1c on the week and we quote 1 hard, 73⅝c; 1 northern, 72⅝; 2 northern, 70¼c; 3 northern, 67¼c, spot or delivery first half April, and for May delivery, 1 hard, 74⅝c, 1 northern, 73¼c; 2 northern, 71c; 3 northern, 68¼c, all in store Fort William, Port Arthur or Duluth.

FLOUR—Demand is good and prices hold steady at last week's advance. We quote: Best Hungarian Patent, $2 per sack of 98 lbs. delivered to the trade; Glenora patent, $1.85; strong bakers, $1.65, and XXXX, $1.35. These prices are subject to usual trade discounts.

MILLDEED—There is a big demand for bran and shorts and mills have no trouble in disposing of all they produce. We quote: Bran, in bulk, per ton, $15.50; shorts, $17.50.

GROUND FEED—Oat chop is steady at $21 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley chop, $16.50; mixed barley and oats, $18; chop speltz, $16 per ton; chop, screenings, $12; oil cake, $25 per ton.

ROLLED OATS—Millers are asking $1.75 per sack of 80 lbs. carlots. Jobbing lots are worth $1.85 per sack. Standard and granulated oatmeal is worth $2.$0 per sack of 98 lbs.

OATS—There is a steady demand for oats for shipment east, and most of the movement is in that direction. There is also a good general demand throughout the country consequent upon the large increase in the number of horses this spring. The new settlers are all buying oats for their stock. Prices are stiffer and about 1c above the level of a week ago. No. 1 white in carlots on track are worth 32c per bushel; No. 2 white, 30c, and feed grades, 28c. Farmers' loads on the street are bringing 28c, and at country points about 25c. Seed oats are worth 35c per bushel.

BARLEY—Movement is light and prices unchanged from a week ago. Sales have been made this week at 38c for cars of No. 3 barley, Fort William. Dealers are offering 38c per bushel for May barley, delivered after the opening of navigation.

FLAXSEED—Holders of seed flax are asking $1.25 per bushel.

SPELTZ—The market is steady at 32c. per bushel of 50 pounds, delivered here.

HAY—Stocks are ample for all requirements. Fresh baled in cars on track is worth $5 to $6 per ton and loose hay on the street $5 to $5.50.

POTATOES—Buyers are offering 35c per bushel for car lots at country points.

DRESSED POULTRY—Dealers are asking for chickens 12½ to 13c per pound, and for turkeys, 17c.

BUTTER—Creamery— Local creameries are selling their product at 23 to 24c per pound, put up in any form desired.

BUTTER—Dairy—The weather is getting rather warm for bricks and rolls, and dealers are asking shippers to use tubs in future. Choice butter in bricks and rolls, if strictly fresh and sweet, is worth 18 to 20c, on a commission basis. Tubs are worth about the same as bricks.

CHEESE—The market is quiet. Jobbers are supplying the retail trade with Ontario September stock at 14c. per pound, and with Manitoba at 13½c.

EGGS—Eggs are now down to 14c per dozen, commission basis. Sales have been reported as low at 13 to 13½c.

DRESSED MEATS—We quote: beef, city dressed, 6c. to 7½c. per pound; country stock, ½c. under these figures; mutton, 8c. to 9c.; lamb, 11½c.; hogs, 7c. to 7½c, packers' price, for best weights; lights and heavies ½c. to 1c. less.

HIDES—There are not many hides coming at present and the market is quiet and steady. We quote: Frozen hides, 5½c. per lb., less 5 lbs. tare; city butchers, 6½c. per lb. for No. 1's; 5½c. for No. 2's, and 4½c. for No. 3's. Sheepskins, 30c. to 50c. each.

SENECA ROOT—Market nominal.

WOOL—Market nominal.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—Receipts are light and there has not yet been any change in the market. Best steers, 4½c; butchers' cattle, 3½ to 4c. Stockers, yearlings, $17; two-year-olds, $22 each.

SHEEP—Market nominal.

HOGS—Packers are paying 6c per pound for best weights, ranging from 150 to 250 pounds and for heavy and light weights ½c less.

MILCH COWS—There is a good demand for cows at prices ranging from $30 to $45 each.

HORSES—Farmers are buying freely. Prices are high, good teams being worth all the way from $300 to $450, according to weight and quality.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

There never was and never will be a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in sound, unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grevious ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease and by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses through the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result, improved appetite. Northrup & Lyman, of Toronto, have given to the public their Superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, guaged by the opinions of scientists, this wine approaches nearest perfection of any on the market. All druggists sell it.

SAFETY FOR LITTLE ONES.

Mothers Should Exercise Great Care in Choosing Medicine for Children.

Every little one needs a medicine at some time, and mothers cannot be too careful in making a selection. The so-called "soothing" preparations, invariably contain opiates and other harmful drugs, which stupify the little one, and pave the way to a constant necessity for the use of narcotic drugs. Undoubtedly the very best and the very safest medicine for little ones is Baby's Own Tablets. They are mildly laxative and gentle in their action, and cure all stomach and bowel troubles, relieve simple fevers, break up colds, prevent croup, and allay the irritation accompanying the cutting of teeth. Where these Tablets are used, little ones sleep naturally, because the causes of irritation and sleeplessness are removed in a natural way. Experienced mothers all praise this medicine. Mrs. H. H. Fox, Orange Ridge, Man., says:—"Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine I have ever used for children of all ages. They are truly a blessing to baby and mother's friend."

These Tablets are guaranteed to contain no opiate, and can be given to a new-born babe. Sold by all druggists, or sent post paid, at 25c. a box, by writing direct to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

The Spring System Cleanser and Health Builder Makes Sick People Well.

There is nothing doubtful or uncertain about the working and effects of Paine's Celery Compound. It stands supreme as a spring system cleanser and health builder. It reaches without loss of precious time the cause of sickness and disease in a way that no other remedy can do. Its first and most important mission is the purification of the life stream, increasing its volume and quality. It then stirs all the organs that work sluggishly. It restores strength, renews vitality, regulates the kidneys, liver and bowels, and makes people well and strong. For these reasons Paine's Celery Compound as a spring medicine stands far above all other prescriptions and remedies that promise so much and accomplish so little. Mrs. E. Coleman, Burlington Ont., gives her experience with Paine's Celery Compound as follows:

"I am now sixty years of age, and have been ill for nearly twenty years. During my long illness doctors and patent medicines failed to cure me. At the hospital I was told that I was suffering from tumors; and often, no matter how I tried to cheer myself, I felt like putting an end to my life. I heard of your Paine's Celery Compound and commenced to use it, and it has done wonders for me I feel better than ever before in my life, and my friends are surprised at the wonderful change in my health. Paine's Celery Compound is a grand medicine, and I will always recommend it."

WOMEN'S ILLS.

Promptly Relieved and Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are woman's best friend. They enrich the blood, tone up the nerves, and strengthen the vital organs to perform their functions regularly. They bring the rosy cheeks and shapely forms that tell of good health and happiness. To the growing girl they are invaluable. To the mother they are a necessity. To the woman of forty-five they mean relief and ease. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine that science has devised for women at all periods of life. These pills succeed when all else fails. Thousands of grateful women endorse the truth of these statements. Mrs. John White, Sahanatien, Ont., says: "It gives me pleasure to bear testimony to the great value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a cure for the ailments that afflict so many women. I suffered greatly and the periods were very irregulas, but thanks to these pills I am now quite well and free from the pains that made my life almost a burden. I cheerfully give my experience for the benefit of suffering women."

Remember that substitutes cannot cure and see that the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" is on the wrapper around every box. If in doubt send direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be mailed, post paid, at 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

How He Knew.

It was a contested will case, and one of the witnesses in the course of giving his evidence described the testator minutely.

"Now, sir," said counsel for the defense, "I suppose we may take it, from the flattering description you have given of the testator, his good points and his personal appearance generally, that you were intimately acquainted with him?"

"Him!" exclaimed the witness. "He was no acquaintance of mine."

"Indeed! Well, then, you must have observed him very carefully whenever you saw him?" pursued the examining counsel.

"I never saw him in my life," was the reply.

"Now, now, don't trifle with the court, please. How, I ask you, could you, in the name of goodness, describe him so minutely if you never saw him and never knew him?"

"Well," replied the witness, and the smile which overspread his features eventually passed over the court, "you see, I married his widow."

Primitive Sleds.

From history we learn that the boys in the time of George III. coasted on sleds made of a small board, with beef bones as runners. But these dropped out of sight when an inventive genius built one out of a barrel stave, for his invention was extensively copied. The barrel staves were called "jumpers" and "skippers" and were made of a single barrel stave of moderate width, to which was nailed a twelve inch seat post about amidships. A piece of barrel head constituted the seat. To navigate this craft required no little skill, the revolutions performed by the rider while "gettin' the hang of the derned old thing" being akin to the antics of a tenderfoot on a bucking broncho. A more stable and docile jumper was made by fastening two or three staves side by side, but these were not considered as fast travelers as the single staves.—Outing.

When Umbrellas Were Heavy.

The great objection to umbrellas 100 years ago was their weight, and when it is stated as a matter of fact that the very smallest umbrella then weighed no less than three and a half pounds it will probably be admitted that the objection was a justifiable one.

Instead of the thin rainproof fabrics which now form the covering of umbrellas nothing better was known than leather or oilcloth. The ribs were of wood or whalebone, and such a thing as a steel rod was, of course, unknown. The stick was usually of heavy oak. In those days, too, many umbrellas had the additional incumbrance of feathers over the top, on the theory of "shedding water off a duck's back." But the oilcloth and leather umbrellas, notwithstanding the feathers, were apt to leak.

Bernard Shaw and the Minority.

A good story is told of Bernard Shaw. The occasion was the first production of "Arms and the Man" in London. The production was a success, and at the fall of the curtain there were clamorous calls for the author, to which Mr. Shaw was at length induced to respond. The audience was still cheering, but there was one dissentient in the gallery, who was "booing" with the full power of a pair of very strong lungs. Mr. Shaw looked up at this "glorious minority of one" and said very seriously, "Yes, sir, I quite agree with you, but what can we two do against a whole houseful?"

She Could Use Them.

An old lady on seeing the electric light in the town for the first time was struck with amazement. After gazing at it for a space she entered a grocer's shop and asked:

"I say, mister, how do you make that big light o' your'n? I'm tired of burnin' paraffin."

The shopman replied, "Oh, it is caused by a series of electric currents."

"Is it, now?" said the old lady. "Then weigh me a pound. If they won't do for lighting, I'll use 'em up for pudd'n's."

Dry and Moist Air.

A cubic foot of dry air weighs more than a cubic foot of moist air at the same temperature and pressure. The addition of vapor to a cubic foot of dry air enlarges the volume of the mixture if the air is free to expand, as in the atmosphere, and as the vapor has only about two-thirds the density of dry air at the same temperature and pressure the density of the mixture is less than that of dry air.

Cause For War.

A citizen walking past a butcher shop in a northern Kansas town saw the butcher and a customer rolling over the sawdust floor in a rough and tumble fashion. He pried them apart, and then learned that the customer had come to buy some dog meat and that the butcher had nonchalantly asked, "Do you wish to eat it here or shall I wrap it up?"

HOUSEY'S RAPIDS IS IN LINE

Geo. C. Chalker Tells What Dodd's Kidney Pills Did For Him.

Took Him From His Bed, Made Him a Well Man Able and Willing to do a Fair Day's Work.

Housey's Rapids, Ont., April 6—(Special)—As every city, town and village in Canada seems to be giving its evidence as to the wonderful cures resulting from Dodd's Kidney Pills, there is no reason Housey's Rapids should not be in line. People here have Kidney troubles just the same as elsewhere, and like others they have used Dodd's Kidney Pills and been cured.

One of the most remarkable cures was that of Geo. C. Chalker. He says: "I am cured of my Kidney Complaint. I have no doubt about it in the least. I weigh ten pounds more than I did fourteen months ago, can do a fair day's work every day and I am clear of my old enemy, lame back, heavy aching arms, dull, bloated eyes,—yes, it is all gone, purged out by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"No one can realize the relief except those who have been through it all. I was so bad I could not work hard, but was compelled to make a living. My head felt so bad that my eyes would seem to float. I felt tired all the time, my arms felt useless at times and so very heavy. At last I was laid up and could do no work.

"Then I was induced to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and you see the result. It only took six boxes to cure me completely."

And Mr Chalker is only one of many in this neighborhood who charge their good health up to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

ALL ACHES AND PAINS FROM A SUDDEN COLD.

When this difficulty gets a firm hold it is hard to shake it unless one acts promptly, and uses the right remedies, about which there is no uncertainty. Something that will quickly drive out the cold, restore the blood to its normal condition, banish the aches and pains, and relieve the burning, aching head. There are only two remedies that will do this, and they must be used in conjunction, namely, Dr. August Koeing's Hamburg Breast Tea and Hamburg Drops, both old, tried German remedies, discovered by that great specialist, whose name they bear, more than 60 years ago. The former should be taken hot before going to bed, and the latter according to directions. Follow up the treatment until the cold is fairly broken up, then continue to take Hamburg Drops for a considerable period, until the blood becomes cool and healthy. The two remedies cost only 75 cents, get them from your druggist at once have them in the house, and, when you are about it, get a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. It will always come handy in case of household accidents, sprains, bruises, cuts, burns, scalds, also for rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, toothache, stiffness of the joints, and all bodily aches and pains, where an outward application is usually applied.

AGITATORS AT WORK.

The following is a letter from the Gladstone Union which appeared this week in the Nelson News :

"Editor the Daily News: You are no doubt aware and also your readers, that the strike of the C. N. P. C. company's employees is at an end ; but we wish to state that it was not settled in accordance with the wishes of the men. The assent of the Fernie miners was not and never will be given. We were led into the trap so far that it was impossible to get out. Why should the ballot on the first offer of the management be re-considered again and again unless it was for the purpose of forcing the men back to work. Why should George Dougherty, the representative of the W. F. of M. in Fernie, allow the minority of the district union to rule the majority, and take upon himself the authority to call off the strike? Although the total vote of the camps make a majority of 56 in favor of accepting the terms of the management still, paradoxical though it may appear, it does not represent the feeling of the men, for not half of them was present at the meetings when the ballots were taken. Most of the men now recognized that the pill was pushed so far down their throat that there is nothing to do but swallow it. They are dissatisfied with the W. F. M. and believe it to exist only for quartz miners and not for coal diggers. It is quite true that our delegates to the district union were instructed to sign an agreement because the strike was already called off and the schedule would have been in force whether we signed it or not. Before we had been on strike seven weeks, before we had even been deprived of one meal or applied for any outside relief at all, the strike was settled by trickery. We were beaten but not in a fair fight and wish all throughout the west to know of this and also of the damnable conditions existing at Fernie.

"Most of the men here talk of affiliating with the United Mine Workers, believing no benefits are to be derived from a W. F. M. charter. It is no use trying to deceive ourselves at all. We have not gained the complete recognition of the union, we have lost 5 cents per ton on No. 1 and No 2 mines at Fernie, 10 cents per ton on No. 3, and where all received $2.50 per yard we now get $1. Besides this there are other substantial losses to the men on timber, tracklaying, etc., and all must go back to work with scabs. It is true that a few company men have secured a raise in their wages, Michel especially making a substantial gain, but on the whole the raise does not equal the deductions and we go back to work on the same old system, nine hours underground and worse off in pay because of the strike.

PRESS COMMITTEE
Gladstone Union, No 76."

From the tone of this letter we would judge that its writer does not dig coal himself and is not satisfied because others do. We would go so far as to venture a surmise that he is not a British subject and has no interests in this country. His chief stock-in-trade is wind, by which he attempts to inflate labor disturbances.

The writer should remember that there is no surer way of injuring the cause he represents than by mis-representing it. His letter is full of inaccurate statements, a few of which we will point out. No. 2 mine at Coal Creek was not cut 5 cents in the tonnage. The old rate was 60 cents and it remains the same. No. 3 mine was not cut 10 cents. The old rate was 60 cents and it remains at 60 cents. There was a consideration of 10 cents per ton allowed by the company where the digging was slow, and this consideration is now made up in a more satisfactory way and applies to all the mines. Where a miner is found by the investigation committee to be earning under $3 per day, the matter is brought before the company's officials and upon the claim being proven the deficit is made good to that amount. The yardage is not all reduced from $2.50 to $1 as stated. This is true of No. 1 mine, No 2 pays $1.50 and No. 3 pays $2.

It is not true that Mr. Dougherty favored minority rule on the part of the executive. That gentleman at all times stood out firmly for majority rule. He was present when Mr. Christopher announced that his executive had agreed to the terms, and if afterwards any members of that executive refused to sign, it was surely no fault of Mr. Dougherty's. We are not surprised to find that the writer of such a letter does not speak kindly of Mr. Dougherty. The latter came here to do all that fairness and reason could do to effect a settlement and naturally agitators of the writer's stamp would malign him.

We do not believe that outside of a few agitators there is a willingness among the miners to drop the bone for the shadow by throwing over the Western Federation of Miners and taking up the larger American Union. Much could be said to show that nothing would be gained and a great deal might be lost by such a transfer of allegiance. The local unions and the Western Federation have received complete recognition from the company. It is unfair on the part of the writer to spread these untruthful statements, but he will find that in the end they will come back at him with boomerangic effect and render him powerless as an agitator.

INCORPORATION.

Since the deed question was solved nearly a year ago, removing the condition that made incorporation a legal impossibility, public sentiment has been growing stronger and stronger in favor of self-governnent and it is more than probable that the present year will see this important step taken. The Act requires that the owners of half of the value of the land property in the town must favor incorporation before it can be granted and, of course, this in the case of Fernie means that without the consent of the Coal Co. incorporation cannot be realized, for many lots have been sold by the Company on a time plan and are still registered in the name of the Company.

The attitude of the Company on this question was explained by Mr. Tonkin at the last meeting of the Board of Trade Executive meeting. He said that the Company would have no objection to incorporation so long as the railway line was made the eastern boundary, the object being, no doubt to guard against high taxation on the coke oven plant. There is a serious objection to making the limits so small, which must occur to all. To escape the town's taxation, which however low can scarcely fall to the low rate charged by the Government, a strong inducement is held out for settlement outside the limits. The Coal Company is also justified in objecting to pay an increased rate on its costly coke oven plant but from these two positions a very fair compromise could be arrived at whereby both the town and the Company would receive advantage, viz. to include the land on the east side of the track and make suitable exemption from taxation on propeity in that part of the town.

While it is wise in these matters to make haste slowly there is not the slightest doubt that incorporation under any condition would be preferable to the negligent manner in which the town is now governed.

IN LOOKING over the report of the Lands and Works Department for the fiscal year endiug June 30th 1902 we discover that the magnificent sum of $717 was spent in and near Fernie for the improvement of roads and side walks. The description of the work done is given as follow :

Fernie streets—Heavy general traffic. Laid 300 lineal feet of sidewalk, property owners furnishing the material ; built 4 road crossings ; cleared streets of stumps and boulders ; graded a ramp to the Elk River.

Coal Creek Mills road—Medium lumbering and cattle traffic. Rebuilt bridge and culverts.

Coal Creek Mines road—Much general traffic.

North Fernie road—Very heavy lumbering and farming traffic. Built 1 mile of road.

West Fernie road—Very heavy lumbering traffic. Two saw-mills haul their output over this road. Road includes bridge over Elk river of 3 spans of 80 40 and 40 feet.

Crow's Nest trail—Light cattle traffic with the North-West Territories.

Elk River trail—Light cattle traffic and general traffic between Fernie and Morrissey.

Sand Creek trail—Light mining traffic. Improved the trail.

This makes interesting reading to Fernieites—$853 expended on roads in and around Fernie for a radius of several miles ! It is high time that such a farce was ended. Out of many thousands of dollars sent to Victoria we get a paltry sum back as pin money.

It is true that part of the cost of the town schools will fall upon the municipality, as will also the police protection, and other smaller expenses, but the taxation when regulated by municipal Government will create a revenue which can easily meet all such outlays. The subject is a matter for careful consideration, and we trust the Board of Trade will go fully into it at the meeting on Tuesday.

Another point bearing on the subject has this week been brought to our notice. The fire underwriters are becoming alarmed over the negligence shown in Fernie in the care of back yards and the gathering of refuse under the sidewalks, etc., and there is a danger that insurance rates may go even higher or that much insurance may be withdrawn altogether. Were the town incorporated this very legitimate grievance could be rectified without any trouble.

Jail Accommodation

One of the crying needs of the town, and one which should have been taken up by the Board of Trade when they drafted their requests to the government last week, is that of accommodation at the jail. There are only four cells and the returns from the jailor's books show the following daily average of prisoners for each month :

1902	January	7
	February	11.7
	March	13.2
	April	13.19
	May	9
	June	12.4
	July	7
	October	4.12
	November	6.1
	December	6
1903	January	6
	February	7
	March	7.12

These figures clearly show that the present accommodation is entirely inadequate to the demands. After the runout occurred information was laid against a dozen men but the police not having any place to put them could only serve summons to appear at a certain time thus giving ample opportunity for those to get out who felt so inclined. The manner in which these cells are laid out can easily be improved on. The centre room into which the four rooms open is practically useless. Very little light penetrates to it and it serves no purpose. This part of the building could be remodelled to give much more space by placing the cell in the centre and having the passage way on each side. There is certainly much room for improvement here, and the increasing demand has reached such a point as to make immediate action necessary on the part of the government.

MRS. E. TODD.

Infringement of a Trade Mark

In an action in the High Court of Justice for Ontario, recently tried before Chancellor Boyd, at Toronto, the Slater Shoe Co., and Chas. E. Slater, president of Montreal, makers of the famous Slater Shoe, obtained a judgment forever restraining F. C. Wilkinson, a boot and shoe dealer, of Owen Sound, from advertising, exposing, or offering for sale or selling boots or shoes not made by the Slater Shoe Co., as "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods" or the Slater Shoe." The Chancellor, also ordered Wilkinson to pay the heavy costs of the action. The Chancellor, after hearing the evidence, decided that no one except the Slater Shoe Co., had a right to use the name "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods," "The Slater Shoe," or any similar names in connection with boots and shoes, and that Wilkinson had no right to use any name or names in connection with boots and shoes which might enable him to pass of a shoe not of the company's make, as being of their make, nor in any way to reap the benefit of the reputation which the Slater Shoe has acquired throughout the Dominion of Canada.

The Genuine Slater

Is positively the best shoe value offered for sale in Canada. You may include the United States and that will pretty near cover the world for fine shoe making. There are shoes sold elsewhere at $4 50 and $6 a pair that carry no more style, are no better fitting and will not wear as well as the genuine Slater Shoe at $4. "Why is it?" you ask. "Just because they are branded with an American stamp."

The mines are being rapidly opened. In the three camps about seventy per cent of the men are at work, but at Coal Creek owing to the condition of No. 3 and the lower levels of No. 2 only about 50 per cent are yet employed. No. 3 is being pumped more rapidly than was expected a larger pump having been secured.

Henry Bloomhead, a young Englishman, was fatally burned in a mine explosion in Frank last week. A public meeting was held in the town of Grand Forks two weeks ago to discuss the coal strike and pass resolutions urging an early settlement. The Mayor occupied the chair and a large number of citizens were present. It was the general feeling of those present that since the Company and the executive had agreed upon a certain settlement which was also approved by the B.C. Mining Association, the miners ought to accept the terms offered. A resolution to this effect was adopted and forwarded to Fernie. The only dissenting voices were four union men, who while opposed to the resolution censured the coal miners for not all voting, thereby showing exactly where they stood.

Mrs. Todd has added a fashionable dressmaking department to her millinery business. Miss Rumohr, who comes highly recommended from a leading firm in the East, has been engaged to take charge, and is prepared to give special attention to this part of the business. Ladies who wish the latest styles and finish in reception, evening and tailor gowns will do well to leave their orders with her. Satisfaction guaranteed at popular prices.

Mr. W. J. Blundell who has represented the firm of J. Y. Griffin & Co. in this District for some time has received a responsible position with the Trites-Woods Co. He will be engaged in buying for the Company at outside points for a few months, after which he will take over the management of one of the stores. Mr. Blundell left Wednesday for Calgary and several intermediate points on business connected with his Company. Mr. Blundell has during his residence in this district, won many friends who are pleased to learn of his appointment, which his business ability eminently qualifies him to fill.

Address Wanted

We have received a communication from a Miss Florence McDonald, of Mount Clements, Michigan, enquiring for the whereabouts of her brother, Angus McDonald. No description is given of the man but the letter states he had written to her about a year ago from Fernie and enclosed the letter in a Royal Hotel envelope. The enquirer also states that his mother living at Seaforth, Ont., is ill and wishes him to return. Should this meet the eye of the said Angus McDonald or any one who knows his whereabouts we trust that steps will be taken to relieve the anxiety of his friends.

Delegates Meet Here

Construction of Coke Ovens

Messrs. Foss & McDonald have finished the rock work for the new coke ovens at Morrissey and have moved their outfit to Michel where they have commenced a similar contract. Of the 250 ovens to be built at the latter point E. Wriglesworth and F. D'Alexander will each construct 125 and Harry Oldland of Pittsburg has received the contract for the whole number at Morrissey. The brick for the ovens are on the way and are now overdue.

Appeals Granted.

The appeal of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company, Ltd., to the full court from the judgment of Justice Walkem in which the defendants sought an order for further particulars of the negligence alleged in the explosion suits has been allowed and the plaintiffs are ordered to give further particulars of the negligence alleged in their statement of claims. The appeal of plaintiffs to have the Leadbeater suit instituted as a test case in the explosion action has also been allowed.

Fire! Fire! Fire!

A public meeting will take place in Joyce's hall next Wednesday evening to consider ways and means of improving the present fire protection system of Fernie. This meeting is called by the committee appointed at the last Board of Trade meeting to investigate the matter and it is very important that it should be well attended by the citizens. Don't forget the date and place, Wednesday, 8 p.m. in Joyce's hall. The committee consists of Messrs. Cree, Watson and Tuttle.

C. Richards Resigns

Mr. Chas. Richards who has occupied the position as manager of the Company Store at the Coal Creek mines since it was opened has handed in his resignation to the Trites-Wood Co. W.W. Thomson of the London & Liverpool is at present managing the business at that point. He has been offered the position permanently and it is probable that he will accept it. Mr. Richards proposes starting a business in Fernie. He will open a full line of groceries, boots, and shoes, gents' furnishings.

W. F. of M. Convention

The annual convention of District Association No. 6, of the Western Federation of Miners commenced at Nelson on Tuesday Morning. District No. 6 includes all of B.C. except the territory covered by No. 7 in the Crow's Nest Coal regions, which is an off-shoot of the former. George F. Dougherty, President of the District Association, presided. Delegates from Sandon, New Denver, Silverton, Slocan City, Kamloops, Ymir, Nelson, Greenwood, Phoenix, Rossland and Kaslo were present. None were there from this district.

MY HEART'S DARLING

BY W. HEIMBURG.

Hortense stood up and look compassionately down upon her.

"No, Hortense, no!" cried Lucie, "do not ask me to do that! I dare not!"

"But, dear heart, I do not wish to tear you away from him." She drew nearer to her. "Only let me say one thing to you at this moment: Whatever you may decide, in any situation in your life, in any necessity, count on me; wherever I am, there will always be a place for you; do not forget this!"

She rose, went to the furthest window, drew the curtain, and sat down quietly with a book, leaving the girl to her own thoughts.

"Apropos," she said, after a pause, "what about the journey? Grandpapa was very much pleased with the idea."

"I—it can not be, Hortense."

"Then we shall stay here," was the cool but kindly answer.

"No, not on my account! Travel, travel, I beg you will."

"Without you it would be no pleasure to me."

Now it was Lucie who sprung up and came over to Hortense. "If I had not you," she sobbed, passionately. "If it were not for you—Do not leave me!"

The rest of the afternoon she sat by Hortense; the latter read aloud; but when she looked up, Lucie's eyes came back from some corner into which she had been staring vacantly.

"But Lucie!"

"Oh, I am listening, Hortense," she said, smiling at the young baroness, and taking her hand; "go on reading." In the middle of a sentence she sprung up. "Adieu, I must go!"

"Where?"

"To the new house. Farewell!"

She cast an anxious look at the black marble clock, and with trembling hands put on her hat.

"Ah, I quite forgot; he is waiting."

Hortense looked at her quietly.

"Well, child, what if he does wait a few minutes?"

But Lucie was already hurrying along the corridor; and as Hortense returned to her room the girl's graceful light summer dress was disappearing in the dark arch of the gate-way.

CHAPTER XI.

Dr. Adler in the meantime had gone at the appointed time to his new possession. It lay in the centre of the town behind a tolerably high wall which bordered on the street instead of the usual house-front, and was surrounded by a little garden, making it look like a little green oasis among the streets and houses.

Some conservative old burgher had, at the time when the railroad brought in a small excitement about building, been unable to bring himself to give up his garden in spite of the high prices offered for building sites; and he had lately died. The time for high prices had passed, as is so often the case in the world, and Dr. Adler found it would not be impossible for him to become the possessor of the little piece of land.

The narrow wooden door in the wall had been taken away and a neat little trellis gate allowed a look from the passers both at house and garden. He stood a moment and looked through the grating as if he were a stranger. Rubbish and stones, lime and mortar were still lying about from the building, but the walls of the little house shone out white and clear from behind the shrubbery, and the windows seemed to look at him in such a friendly way. He opened the gate slowly and went up the middle path, looking about him as if expecting some one, as if seeking something, and looking very happy.

The house door, which opened on the gable end, was shut. As he still kept looking around him he drew the key out of his pocket and stepped in; his footsteps resounded in the empty hall. Again he stood still, thinking, and a winning, kindly smile spread over his face; over there through the open door a white porcelain stove seemed to wink at him, and over yonder was the old proverb in Gothic letters, "One's own hearth is worth much gold." He went nearer, leaned against the frame of the kitchen door, and looked thoughtfully about him. Then he turned and went into a medium-sized room next the kitchen intended for a dining-room. In the middle stood a large round table. The two smaller rooms he had reserved for himself—an office and waiting-room. Again he stood and looked out of the corner window at the stone steps which led up to the front door. "One's own house is like a living thing. We now belong together, we live together, come what may," it seemed to say. And the man's thoughts flew into the future. Would happiness come with them over that threshold? Will contentment dwell with us here? Contentment, and God's sweet gift of peace? His heart felt very tender at that moment. Under the trees over there he saw in imagination a lovely fair-haired wife, rosy children, and quiet, peaceful happiness. He passed his hand over his eyes; there she stood in reality in a light summer dress, her eyes fixed on the house door, but not looking as he had just imagined her. The delicate features had a troubled, anxious expression. He did not notice it, but went out to meet her. "Welcome!" he said, simply; "this is now our home."

She gave him her hand hastily.

"Is your aunt here?" and as he said "No," she remained standing and hesitating.

"I thought as we two are to live here, we could best arrange about the rooms ourselves. I do not care about the interference of other people," said he, and stepped aside to let her go through the door. "You alone shall decide everything."

They both stepped into the house.

"See, the portals of your kingdom are open," said he, pointing to the kitchen. "Will you not go in?"

She had remained standing in the middle of the hall; now she gently shook her head.

"Well, then, we will begin with the upper story."

Obediently she went up the broad staircase and entered a perfectly empty room. The windows looked out toward the back; high trees before the windows made an almost uncanny twilight in the room. Through their branches one could look over a small grass-plot to the quiet, slow little river that was here the boundary of the garden and then meandered through the town. It seemed as if she should suffocate in the low little room. She could not find a word to say.

"Does it please you?" he asked.

"Yes," she said, in a faint voice.

He stepped up to her, and as he saw her standing so, with her head turned away from him, her little hand laid tremblingly on the window-sill, it seemed as if the man, generally so quiet, was stirred by passion here in this home-like, quiet little place, where the happy future seemed to smile at him out of every corner in the house and every leaf in the garden. He drew the girl into his arms and kissed her on the mouth in a passionate way he had never done before.

She pushed him back as if hurt by it.

"Lucie," he said, reproachfully, and bent down to look in her face. He drew back alarmed at her deathly paleness. "What is the matter with you? Are you ill?"

"No."

"Then you are suffering mentally. Why do you not speak out, Lucie? What is the matter? Tell me. You are frightfully changed the last few weeks," he continued. "I never hear you laugh any more. Are you unhappy?"

She looked over at him and shook her head. The loneliness of death seemed about her.

"I think it is best," he said, taking up the subject again, "that we should hurry and get our house ready; and then you can come to me. I—"

A deep blush spread over her face.

"Oh, no, no!" she stammered.

He looked up surprised. "What does that 'no' mean?"

She pressed her lips together and breathed heavily; in her eyes lay suddenly a dull look of determination.

"Why this 'no'?" he asked again. "Do you not like your future home any more?"

Even the most inexperienced person could not have mistaken this deep blush for maiden timidity.

"Answer," he cried warmly. "What do you mean by that 'no'? Do you regret your promise?"

For a moment a shiver ran through her veins, then she bowed her head silently.

A long uncomfortable silence ensued. On the window-panes a butterfly which had wandered in was flying up and down, and the only sound in the close, hot little room was the light buzz of his wings and the noise of his beating against the transparent barriers.

"So you have made a mistake? You would like to have your freedom?" came at last in a dull tone from his lips. With his right hand he leaned heavily against the window-sill.

"Yes, I made a mistake," she said, in a low voice.

Again a long pause.

"Well—what then?" he spoke with an effort. "And what then?"

"I do not know."

"Why? why?" he cried out, in a voice full of pain. And as she did not answer he asked again: "Because you do not love me?"

"Yes—not as—as—and you do not love me as—"

"I not love you, Lucie? I not love you?"

She bowed her head. "You wished that we should learn to know each other. It is well we have."

"It is well!" he repeated mechanically.

She kept her eyes lowered; she could not look at him; there must be an end to this at any price. He did not move for a long time; at last he turned, went to the window, and let out the butterfly.

"Come!" he said, almost roughly. They went down the stairs and out of the house. With a firm hand he turned the key.

"And what now?" he asked again.

"I am going to Hortense—and will write to my sister."

"To Frau von Lowen?"

She had, during the last few minutes, been twisting her engagement ring nervously.

"And that, too," he said, "give it to me!"

The two rings were exchanged in their trembling hands—the last hurried touch.

"Forgive me!" she begged, in a choking voice, with a hard, pale face.

He did not answer. They walked thus together to the street, and the little garden gate closed behind them; and just at this moment the clouds parted and the setting sun threw a rosy light over house and garden, so that it looked like a fairy home.

They both saw it. They stood there as if an angel had driven them out of Paradise. Perhaps at this moment—if she had but looked at him! She turned quickly away, and without a word went to the right, he to the left; she with trembling steps that became gradually firmer, he erect and with his head up.

CHAPTER XII.

Lucie drew a long breath as she reached the foot of the steps of the Meerfeldt house.

"The Frau Baronne is with her grandfather, and is playing chess with him, as mademoiselle has a headache," announced the old servant.

Lucie said they must not disturb her; that she would wait upstairs. So she sat down in one of the arm-chairs alone in the twilight, her aching head resting against the back, and a confusion of sad thoughts coursed through her brain. What had she done? Had she been crazy? Were he and she parted forever? She put her hand to her heart; it seemed as if it had stopped beating.

"I have done right!—right!"

A longing to see Hortense seized her, to say to her "Help me! I am so unprotected, so helpless!" She got up and seated herself at the writing-table. The blotting book lay open, and on it a sheet of letter-paper. She dipped her pen in the ink and wrote:

"Dear George,—Let me come back to you for awhile. I can not marry Doctor Adler. I will tell you everything when I come. Do not condemn me unheard.

"Your sister-in-law,
"Lucie."

She read these lines over and over; then she sat down and pictured to herself how it would be when the letter reached the forester's, and what a storm it would raise. She saw her brother-in-law at the breakfast table with the mail-bag by him. "Ah, here is another note from Lucie, but why the devil is it to me?"

She could see his veins swell as he read it, and his bushy eyebrows frown, and hear the blow of his fist on the table, as he threw the letter to her pale sister. "There it is. I will punish the little goose! Such craziness! such recklessness!"

And Mathilda would cry, while he scolded, without saying a word. She felt as if she could count the drops running down the pale cheeks. She knew these scenes; she had witnessed them often — a hundred times—and yet, a thousand times rather this than Frau Adler's malicious smile, or his cool, pedantic manner!

It was now almost dark; but still she sat alone. She felt as if she could not stand it any longer, when at last the door opened.

"Hortense!" cried the girl, and flew over to the slender figure that was entering.

"You?" asked the young baroness, surprised. And as she felt how she trembled: "What is the matter with you, child?"

"Let me stay with you to-day. I have told him that — I do not love him."

Hortense's arms closed tightly round her friend.

"You have done right! Stay with me!"

"Only now—only for the present, Hortense."

"No, always! always!"

"Here? That is impossible, Ah, Hortense, I feel so confused, my head is so heavy."

"Stay her! Now? No, Lucie. Now we will travel. Let me get a light. This darkness is depressing." As the light burned up, Hortense became aware of the girl's exhausted expression. "Poor little mouse," she said, "was it very hard?"

Rousseau.

Rousseau was a type of the melancholic temperament, assuming sometimes the symptoms of a veritable pathetic insanity. He sought to realize his phantoms in the least susceptible circumstances. He saw everywhere enemies and conspirators, frequent in the first stages of insanity. Once, coming to his sailing vessel in England, he interpreted the unfavorable winds as a conspiracy against him, then mounted an elevation and began to harangue the people, although they did not under stand a word he said. In addition to his fixed ideas and deliriant convictions Rousseau suffered from attacks of acute delirium, a sort of maniacal excitation. He died from apoplectic attack.

Ups and Downs.

She—Oh, you're all wrong about her. It takes a woman to size up another woman.

He—Yes, or to run her down.

Magnetizing a Witness.

Brougham, while practicing at the bar, once tried the experiment of magnetizing an adverse witness giving evidence and succeeded in a remarkable manner without speaking a word. Seating himself immediately before the witness, he fixed him with his eye till the poor man blushed, stammered and finally collapsed in nervous confusion, probably leaving his most important evidence unsaid.

Longfellow Yet Again.

The gray hair worn by some young dames
Was not attained by sudden fright,
But they, because it was the style,
Kept bleach dope on it day and night.

The Moons of Uranus.

Uranus has four little moons—Ariel, Umbriel, Tifania and Oberon—which, funnily enough, rise in the north and set in the south. A single diminutive one belonging to Neptune traverses the sky from the southwest to northeast. Neither Mercury nor Venus has any satellites.

Lost Knowledge.

There was a man who spent his time
In wide experimenting
Who had a turn for chemicals
And general inventing.
One day he made a wondrous find;
His brain with joy was reeling.
But, ah, he left no notes behind!
He's frescoed on the ceiling!

Or Anybody's.

She—I didn't know Mrs. Gaddle was interested in any business.

He—Oh, yes, she's interested in any business.

Getting a Cold.

I sat in a draft a
Few minutes, and, dash it!
The doctor soon after
Is likely to cash it.

An Optimist.

"Is he much of an architect?"

"Well, say, if I wanted to build a castle in the air I wouldn't go to anyone else."

Language.

The actor cries, "I am undone!"
"He is done up!" my neighbor says.
It's mighty hard to keep the run
Of language in these rapid days.

THE EVENING HYMN.

Last night I heard some children sing
A hymn beside their mother's knee,
And still I hear the echoes ring
Of their sweet melody.

I paused beside the gate to hear
Their song and watch them through the door,
And their fresh voices, sweet and clear,
Sang back my youth once more.

Again about my dear mother's knee,
We gathered at the close of day,
Clad all in gowns of white, that she Might teach us how to pray.

And when our little prayers were said,
We sang again our evening song—
The song that mother always led—
Unheard, ah me! so long!

I heard dear father's mellow bass,
And sister Mary's alto low,
And Will's sweet tenor, and the place
Was life's Old Long Ago!

"Oh, may the eve of life be sweet
And this fair ending of the day,
And may we in Heaven's morning meet,
No more 'Good night!' to say."

Long, long ago the song was sung,
For the last time at mother's knee,
And though we are no longer young,
'Tis fresh in memory.

Forget it? Never, while I live,
Can I that dear old song forget!
Of all the memories years can give,
It is the dearest yet!

BIBLE WORDS COUNTED.

Interesting Facts Compiled by a Prisoner—A Correct Copy of His Great Work—Bible Curiosities.

It is well known that the number of letters, words, verses, etc., contained in the Bible have been counted, but by whom, when or where, is not generally known. "Treat's publication, entitled "Curiosities of the Bible," speaks of the occurrence as being of Spanish origin, and that the Prince of Granada, fearing usurption, caused the arrest of the supposed would-be usurper, and by order of the Spanish crown he was thrown into an old prison called the place of Saulls, situated in Madrid, where he was confined for 33 years, with no other companion than the rats, mice and other vermin that frequented his dismal cell.

During his confinement he counted the letters, etc., contained in the Bible, and scratched the several numbers on the stone walls with a nail. When his work was discovered he was furnished with writing utensils and ordered to make a copy of the results of his long and tedious task, and, on its being completed, he finally received his liberty.

The following is a correct copy of his great work:

The Bible contains 3,566,480 letters, 773,746 words, 31,173 verses, 1,195 chapters and 66 books.

The word and occurs 10,684 times, the word Lord 1,853 times, the word Jehovah 6,855 lines, and the word reverend but once, which is in the ninth verse of the 111th Psalm.

The middle verse is the eighth verse of the 118th Psalm. The 21st verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra contains all the letters of the alphabet, except the letter j.

The finest chapter to read is the 26th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. The most beautiful chapter is the 23rd Psalm. The 19th chapter of II, Kings, and the 37th chapter of Isaiah are alike.

The four most inspiring promises are to be found in the sixth chapter of St. John, 37th verse, and 14th chapter, second verse; also 11th chapter of St. Matthew, 28th verse, and the 37th Psalm, fourth verse.

The longest verse is the ninth verse, eighth chapter of Esther. The shortest verse is the 35th verse, 11th chapter of St. John.

There are 10 chapters in the book of Esther, in which the words, Lord and God do not occur. The 8th, 15th, 21st and 31st verses of the 107th Psalm are alike. Each verse of the 136th Psalm ends alike. The 117th Psalm contains but two verses, the 119th Psalm contains 176 verses. There are no words or names of more than six syllables.

It has also been discovered by some person unknown that in Joel, third chapter, third verse, the word girl occurs, and in the eighth chapter of Zachariah, fifth verse, the word girl's is mentioned for the only time in the whole book.

The eighth chapter of Esther, ninth verse, contains 52 t's. The word snow appears 24 times, 21 times in the Old Testament and three times in the New.

Cost of England's Wars.

If we consider total expenditure, the South African war is the most expensive war that England has ever waged, with the single exception of the twenty-three years' war with France (1793-1815), the great cost of which was nearly four times that of the South African war. The Boer war, however, will have cost over twice as much as the war with the American colonies, two and a half times as much as the Seven Years' war, more than three times the cost of the Crimean war and from four to fifty times that of any of the other wars. Taking the duration of the wars into consideration, the South African war is by far the most costly war that Great Britain has ever been engaged in. The average annual cost of the Boer war is over $53,000,000. The war with France (1793-1815) cost £36,150,000 per year, or about 68 per cent. of the annual cost of the South African war; the Crimean war cost about £35,000,000, or 65 per cent.; the Seven Years' war and the war with the American colonies cost each less than 20 per cent., and no other war has come up to one-tenth of the average annual cost of the South African war.—"Annals of American Academy.

Lime and the Land.

Lime makes the father rich and the son poor is an old saying. Lime makes the nitrogen in the soil available, and if I have nitrogen there I am going to put the lime in and get it out, and if my boy wants more nitrogen he can put it in.—E. B. Voorhees, New Jersey.

DIZZY SPELLS AND ACHING HEAD.

Tell of Shrivelled Arteries and Exhausted Nerves—They Warn You of Approaching Paralysis or Collapse—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food the Most Potent Nerve Restorer.

The sufferer from nervous headache and dizzy spells never knows what minute he may fall helplessly a victim of vertigo or paralysis, for these symptoms tell of depleted nerve cells and a wasting of vigor and vitality.

Other indications of nervous exhaustion are troubles of sight, noises in the ears, sparks before the eyes, stomach troubles, sleeplessness, cold hands and feet, restlessness, irritability, weakened memory, lack of energy and enthusiasm, muscular weakness, fainting spells, bodily pains and aches, and tired, languid and despondent feelings.

Nervous diseases are most dreadful to contemplate, because of the frequency with which they end in paralysis, locomotor ataxia, epilepsy insanity. All movement of the body or its members is controlled by the nerves, and hence it follows that paralysis of some form is the natural consequence of exhausted and depleted nerves.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures dizzy spells, headaches and all symptoms of nervous exhaustion by actually increasing the quantity and quality of the blood and creating new nerve force.

Mrs. Hann, 8 Leonard avenue, Toronto, says:—"For a number of years I have been troubled with weakness and fainting spells, nervous, sick headaches, and in fact, my nervous system seemed to be in an exhausted condition. Languid, depressing feelings would come over me at times, and I would become discouraged and despondent. Since a course of treatment with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I do not hesitate to pronounce it a splendid medicine for weakness of all kinds. It has been of great benefit to me, for my nerves are much steadier, and dizziness and fainting spells no longer trouble me, and my system has been generally built up."

By noting your weight while using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you can prove that healthy, solid flesh and firm muscles are being added to the body. Gradually and certainly the system is built up, and symptoms of disease give way to health, strength and vigor. 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

The De Wett Clinton engine built in 1831 had a boiler pressure of 80 lbs. to the square inch. Now steamship boilers are made to stand a pressure of 225 lbs. to the square inch.

Neither Fear Nor Favor.

A tactful refusal is sometimes hard to compass; yet a "no" may contain a spicier savor than many an assent. There is a story of Archbishop Whately, who was walking in a London city park one day with a curate and Charles Lever, the novelist.

The archbishop was greatly interested in mushrooms, and he picked one and ate a piece of it, at the same time handing a bit to the curate.

"What do you think of that, Mr. A?" he asked.

The curate did not especially like it, and moreover he was not sure whether it could be safely eaten. Nevertheless, this was his superior in office, a man who must not be offended.

"I think, my lord," said he obsequiously,—if it had a little pepper and salt it would be delicious."

"Here, Lever," said the Archbishop, "you taste it and see what you think of it."

"Many thanks, your grace," said Lever, calmly, but I am not a clergyman. It is true that I have a brother in holy orders, but he is not in your grace's diocese."

The archbishop laughed, better pleased with this cleverness of evasion than by a dull acquiescence, and ate the mushroom himself.

A Story of Spurgeon.

In The Quiver the following anecdote of Spurgeon is one told in an article entitled "Preachers' Dilemmas":

The great orator was saying that, as he had to proclaim the gospel so often, he had moods in which he feared lest he might unconsciously grow indifferent to its choicest blessings. It was with peculiar satisfaction, therefore, that during a brief holiday, he once entered a country Baptist chapel, where he heard a sermon which refreshed his soul mightily.

At the close of the service he walked into the vestry, and politely thanked the minister for the edification he had received. "May I ask your name, brother?" purred the flattered country cousin. "My name? Oh, Spurgeon—you may possibly have heard it—I preach a bit in London myself." Let the humorist and saint finish the incident in, as nearly as we remember them, in his own words.

"My dear brother's face turned as red as this cloth (pointing to a bit of scarlet baize in front of him), "and he could only gasp out: 'Why, Mr. Spurgeon, that was one of your sermons! I learnt it off.' 'My dear brother, I knew it; I knew it from the beginning and all along; but I assure you that it did not do me any the less good on that account.'"

The negro pondered awhile and finally said, "Jedge, you've always been a good neighbor, an' I likes yuh, an' I wants to do right by yuh an' so accepts de offer yuh makes, but I wants yuh to know dat I'll lose meat by it."

TRANSPORTATION LABORERS GO OUT.

All Railroad and Steamship Lines Tied Up in Protest Against Proposed Anti-Strike Laws—One Workman Wounded by a Soldier.

A cable from Amsterdam, dated April 6, says: At midnight a meeting of the Workmen's Committee proclaimed a general strike throughout Holland of all labor engaged in transportation by land and water.

All the railroad lines, stations and wharves are guarded by troops. The administration of the railroads has taken steps to secure the running of the foreign expresses under military protection. A workman was wounded by a revolver shot fired by a soldier this morning. The man was walking on the railroad, was not aware that the strike had been proclaimed and failed to reply to the soldier's challenge.

The president of the Workmen's Committee of Defence, in an interview, said the strike proclamation involves the entire railroad system, and other land transports of Holland, and the water transportation of the important ports, Amsterdam, Rotterdam, Dordrecht and Zaandam. The strike, he added, was intended intended as a protest against the anti-strike laws as well as to support the demand of the railroad men for an increase of wages before the passage of the laws made an improvement impossible. He declares the strike will spread to other branches of industry.

The staffs of the shipping companies trading with London and Hull have stopped work in sympathy with the strikers. Only one train left Amsterdam this morning, and it was protected by troops.

The premier of the Netherlands, Dr. Kuyper, introduced in the second chamber of the states general, Feb. 25, three bills in connection with the recent railroad strike in Holland. He explained that the government considered it necessary to oppose any unreasonable attack on society, which would sacrifice the well being of the people to the desire of a certain class for influence and to political tyranny. The government, therefore, proposed to form a railroad brigade to ensure a regular service of trains in case of need. The just complaints of railroad employees would be adjusted by a royal commission, which would be entrusted later with the settlement of the situation from a legal standpoint as well as regarding the conditions of service of the employees on railroads. It also would have to decide what constituted criminal acts. The government did not desire to be reactionary. It only aimed at effecting social reforms.

One of the bills provides for a modification of the penal code with the object of affording a surer guarantee for the personal freedom of labor and of improving state officials or persons engaged in occupations affecting public interests from absenting themselves from their duties. The bill further provides that refusal to do duty on the part of employees of the feailroads or other public services may be punished by six months imprisonment. If two or more persons rise in rebellion, the penalty is increased to four years' imprisonment for the ringleaders or those guilty of criminal acts.

During the debate on the bill Saturday last, the premier, whose speech was received with cheers mingled with hisses from the socialists, dwelt on the danger of strikes to commerce or in the event of mobilization of troops, and maintained the necessity for securing uninterrupted communication with foreign countries and offering a firm front to the party of disorder, which was terrorizing the country. The debate was then adjourned until Tuesday.

OTHER CITIES AFFECTED.

The Hague, April 6.—A general strike of the railroad men was proclaimed this morning. The railroad stations are guarded by troops and police. The government is endeavoring to maintain the foreign mail service by troop protected trains. The service on the Netherlands railroads is restricted. All business here is at a standstill on the wharves and the mail boats which arrived today could not be unloaded.

Rotterdam, April 6.—The dock laborers, wagon drivers and all others engaged in industries connected with the port, have joined in the general strike. A formal declaration was issued by the strike leaders here to the effect that the strike was not connected with the question of wages, but was solely against the proposed anti-strike laws, whose withdrawal is demanded. The railroad station here is guarded by marines, and a sufficient number of employees have remained at work to enable the running of a few trains between Rotterdam and Amsterdam.

The C. P. R. has ordered fifty new bridges for the west.

The population of Portage la Prairie numbers 4,001.

Two feet of snow fell on April 7 in Dakota, delaying seeding.

George Keefe, of Calgary, was sentenced on April 7 to six years in the penitentiary for theft.

The situation in Spain, arising out of the recent riots is characterized as very grave.

The pope has ordered all sacred orders of the Catholic church to abstain from politics.

Charles Peddie was arrested in Winnipeg on April 7, charged with horse stealing.

PEOPLING THE EMPIRE.

A Colony Within a Colony—British Farming Men for Canada—The Land and the Men.

An interesting project is about to be carried into execution at the instance of the Canadian Government. Two thousand English farmers and agricultural laborers are to go to the Dominion within the next few weeks to settle in the District of Saskatoon, in the Northwest Territory. They are to pay their own passages, and the Canadian Government does the rest. Each family is to receive a free grant of 160 acres, and not only are they to be granted special facilities, but they are guaranteed protection by the Government, who will secure them from the encroachment of any other nationality. The effect will be an English colony, within a colony, upon whose preserves no foreigner will be permitted to settle save by special arrangement.

The Land and the Men.

The general arrangements for peopling our colonies need the stimulus of a periodical exodus of this character. The Old Country has the men and women to spare; our territories beyond the seas are badly needing them. In Canada is a territory three and three-quarter million square miles in area, rich in minerals, with soil of extraordinary richness, with mighty lakes and rivers abounding in fish. Writers with an eye to the picturesque have made a point of depicting this fair land as the home of snow and frost. As a fact there is no finer climate. And yet with all its advantages there are to-day fewer than five and a half million people. Of these 3,190,000 are British born or of British descent; 2,130,000 European other than English, with two millions of that number of French extraction; and 99,000 blacks, etc.

A Government's Matrimonial Agency.

Australia, with its 2,970,906 square miles, is 26 times the size of Great Britain and Ireland, yet it has a population of 3,818,728. Of these there are 200,000 blacks, Asiatics, etc., and the remainder are of British extraction. New Zealand, with its 104,471 square miles, has but 830,758 people. The United Kingdom, with its paltry 121,115 square miles, has 41,456,953 people crowded together, for the main part in the towns.

Many enterprising and ingenious attempts have been made to get Englishmen to go out to this part of the Empire. Sir Horace Tozer, Agent-General for Queensland, has conducted the biggest matrimonial agency on earth in order to get young women out to this state to settle down and marry. He has sent out thousands of young women who have found good homes and husbands there. It cost Queensland three million pounds to do it, but she is getting her reward in a numerous, settled and prosperous population.

Australia's "No Admission."

But many and vexatious restrictions are imposed, making difficult the task of peopling our colonies. The objection raised by the trades unions to the entry of additional craftsmen is most unfair. Only the other day we had what promises to become an historic instance of six hatters detained at the coast, unable to enter Australia until the courts had decided that their labor was of such a skilled character as to be obviously beneficial to the state. The colonies want healthy men and women, and for this party and that to deliberately place obstacles in the way of immigration, which the whole policy of the Empire is to encourage, is preposterous and inexcusable.

To what lengths prejudice and vexatious opposition may be carried is shown by the fact that when Prince Ranjitsinhji, the famous Cambridge and Sussex cricketer, visited Australia with the English cricket team, a special act had to be passed to enable him to be admitted. All whom he met during his tour impressed upon the Prince of Wales the dire need of the colonies for more flesh and blood from the Old Country, and the Prince handed on his message to the nation at home. Let the rest of the colonies prove themselves as ready to help and to receive as Canada is, in the case already cited, and the men and women will not be lacking.—London Black and White.

A Curio in the Wood.

Mr. Fred O. Loft, accountant at the Toronto Asylum, and formerly of the Six Nations, called at Premier Ross' office recently with some curios made from the wood of the first lilac tree planted in America. The lilac was planted in 1762 by Sir William Johnston, the founder of Johnston, N. Y. During last summer a resident of Johnston presented Mr. W. L. Loft of the Six Nations with a piece of the tree, and a portion of this his brother offered to the Government to be made into a gavel or something of the kind for use in the Legislature. In sawing the wood, Mr. Loft happened on a cross-section, the outlines of which bore a resemblance to the features of the former owner, Sir William Johnston, and by some artificial touching up a most striking likeness of the old baronet has been obtained.

Mr. Loft is an Indian, and his native name is Onandaga. When presented to the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, it was as Onandaga he persisted in being known, saying he would be presented as such, or not at all.

Home Is What You Make It.

The home is just exactly what you will make it. You cannot neglect it and pass unquestioned through the pearly gates. You must answer for your stewardship and for the souls you give to the earth, says a writer in American Homes. Your children should live to call you thrice blessed. Happy indeed are those who grow old with a knowledge of having done the best in their homes they could possibly do for each other's happiness.

THE LAMP.

Hast thou a lamp, a little lamp,
Put in that hand of thine?
And did he say, who gave it thee,
"The world hath need the light should be;
Now, therefore, let it shine?"

And dost thou say, with bated breath,
"It is a little flame;
I'll let the lamps of broader wick
Seek out the lest and cheer the sick,
While I seek wealth and fame?"

But on the shore where thy small house
Stands dark, stands dark, this night,
Full many a wanderer thither tossed
Is driven on the rock and lost,
Where thou hast hid thy light.

Though but a candle thou didst have,
Its trimmed and glorious ray
Is infinite. With God, no light
Is great or small, but only bright,
As is His perfect day.

The world hath sorrow, nothing more,
To give or keep for thee,
Duty is in that hidden flame,
And soaring joy; then rise, for shame
That thou so dark shouldst be.

Rise, trim thy lamp: the feeble past
Behind thee put and spurn.
With God it is not soon or late,
So that thy light now flaming great,
Doth ever fiercer burn.

Fierce with its love, and flaming great
In its humility;
Shunning no soul in sinful need,
Fearing no path where He may lead,
Glowing consumingly.

ONTARIO'S FISH CATCH.

Statistics From Report of Deputy Minister of Fisheries for Ontario.

Mr. S. T. Bastedo, Deputy Minister of Fisheries for Ontario, in his annual report, gives a comparative statement of the catch of the various fish of the Province. The total value of the catch for the year was $1,313,676.88, being a decrease of $114,401.70 from that of 1901. The various yields were in pounds as follows:

Whitefish, 2,860,670, a decrease of 100,770; salted whitefish, 48,500, a decrease of 206,700; herring, 5,225,651, a decrease of 2,567,784; salted herring, 864,400, an increase of 388,100; trout, 5,117,568, a decrease of 168,000; salted trout, 227,900, a decrease of 290,300; pickerel, 3,691,355, an increase of 637,300; pike, 1,720,830, a decrease of 135,425; sturgeon, 577,984, a decrease of 14,500; caviare, 47,296, an increase of 7,741; perch, 1,289,844, an increase of 223,777; catfish, 843,721, an increase of 115,900; coarse fish, 2,067,814, an increase of 326,800; eels, 73,238, a decrease of 1,952; tullible, 58,708, an increase of 26,861.

Revenue of the Department.

The revenue from the department was $40,140.70, an increase of $4,253; the total expenditure for all purposes was $33,514, an increase of $953. The estimated value of the plant was $816,392, an increase of $67,321. There were 124 tugs with 589 men, as compared with 101 tugs and 489 men in 1901 engaged in the industry.

The boats numbered 1,295, with 2,296 men, against 1,299, with 2,313 men in 1901. Licenses were issued for 2,538,673 yards of gill net, 98 seines, 479 pond nets, 379 hoop nets, 122 dip nets, and 24,455 hooks as compared with 2,410,627 yards of gill net, 102 seines, 432 pond nets, 484 hoop nets, 3 dip nets and 34,315 hooks in 1901. Each year licenses were issued for 3 machines for winding up nets on the Niagara River.

There were 69 people fined for breaches of the law, as compared with 121 in 1901, which the Deputy Minister considers as a favorable sign that the fishermen are recognizing that it is to their own interests to observe the law. The amount obtained from fines was $5.40, as compared with $1,527 in 1901. There were seized 111 gill nets, 28 seines, 82 traps, 4 hoop nets, 12 spears, 2 boats and 27 night lights.

Dominion Government's Work.

The Dominion Government during the year deposited 101,896,000 fry in Ontario waters.

The Dominion station in the Georgian Bay, on Island 121, in Gohome Bay, for studying the habits of fish, began work last summer. A complete hydrographic servey of the vicinity is being made, and a survey of the islands and reefs lying between Station Island and Red Rock was finished. The classification of the fish from specimens taken is being made a feature of the work, and a study of the habits of the fish of the district, with special reference to those of commercial value, will be made. A collection is also being made of the classes of land and marsh birds and the plants and animals of the surrounding country. A hatch pond for bass has been prepared and bass deposited therein. Their spawning will be carefully studied. Meteorological observations were also conducted and records kept.

There is a great variety of fish in the neighborhood of the station, and the members of it feel that if they were able to make thorough inquiry into the lives and habits of them all a vast quantity of valuable information could be obtained.

Canada Misunderstood.

Canada is the one colony which has been continually misunderstood in England. Just as the English people were awakening to its real character and were beginning to take an interest in its future Mr. Rudyard Kipling checked the movement with a phrase. Canada is My Lady of the Snows in the imagination of Englishmen. Any well informed Canadian will admit that, in his opinion, this phrase threatens to throw back the development of the colony by a decade. Canada has to live down this poetical liberty, behind which and supporting it is the prejudice of years. In the minds of nine out of ten persons in the old country Canada stands for the Siberia of the British Empire, a country in which residents suffer the most terrible hardships owing to the extreme cold, which is supposed to wrap the country around for seven or eight months together, bringing all industrial and social life to a standstill.—Fortnightly Review.

YOUR CHANCE OF SUCCESS.

Odds of Prosperity and Failure in Trade—The Statisticians Have Even Made Calculations on This Subject.

Assuming that you work for your living, and taking all trades and professions together, the odds against your earning £1,000 a year are just under 1,274 to one, says Answers. That income is the standard of ordinary success. But special success isi generally fixed at an income of over £50,000, and if you hope to "strike out" to that extent you will have to conquer odds of 1,750,000 to one.

There are about 14,000,000 in Britain who earn money, and of these 10,948 make over £1,000 a year. There are only sixteen, by the latest returns, who make over £50,000 out of their own businesses and professions. If you are a business—not a bank—clerk, you are one among about 300,000—an enormous class. Of these, sixty are promoted to partnerships or positions of trust worth £1,000 a year, or succeed to that extent, by some means or other, every year, taking a ten years' average. You have in this business a 5,000 to one chance.

Among these successes about half a clerk per annum (or five in ten years) reaches a position worth over £50,000 a year to him. This is pretty good, considering that salaries in this business run between £25 and £500 a year—very few of the latter—the average being £150 per annum. Bank clerks, of whom there are 22,000, have longer odds against them, and have only one chance in 700 apiece of getting even $1,000 a year.

Counting the officials, their ordinary incomes average £3 10s. per week, but only about three bank clerks in each year, among all the banks in the kingdom, are raised to partnerships or managerships worth over £1,000 a year. Railway clerks, a much bigger body, numbering 46,000, have still bigger odds against them—about 9,200 to one, and on an average five railway clerks (or former railway clerks), drop into incomes of £1,000 and over. On the other hand, they have a fair chance, 1,000 to one or thereabouts, of eventually getting the recognized comfortable income—£300 a year, and that is comparatively short odds in the battle of life.

Should you be a grocer, you have a 4,000 to one chance of success over the £1,000 a year, for there are nearly 200,000 more of you struggling for the same goal, and the race is a keen one. There is a pretty steady average of fifty successes per year in the grocery trade among that 200,000; though at the same time there are about 700 failures, for this is a trade that hits the "small man" very hard, and it comes second on the list of dangerous trades—dangerous to the pocket. Of these "wins," from seven to ten amount to over £7,000 a year each; but Sir Thomas Lipton is the only one who has passed the £50,000 a year limit of late years—one does not count co-operative companies, of course. The average, taking the big town grocer and the little village grocer, and leaving out the great "combines," comes to £200 per annum for each man that runs a grocer's business.

Ambitious people should leave the butcher's trade alone, for though it gives one of the best chances for a comfortable income—up to £500 a year—the real successes are few, and every small butcher has 10,000 to one against him if he hopes to reach or pass £1,000 per annum.

On the other hand, failures are few compared with other trades of about the same standing, and the number of butchers who retire yearly with incomes of from £200 to £500 to depend on during their declining years averages about 250.

As a coster, you have 60,000 rivals, and more successes among them then you would think. A good number every year turn into regular tradesmen in fixed shops, mostly corndealers and green-grocers, and do astonishingly well, being very good business men. About a hundred, on an annual average, do this; and something like ten per cent. of them build up really big business, many of the most successful fruiterers in London having stated as costers. The odds against the coster reaching £1,000 a year are 6,000 to one, which is better than the butcher's chance, and, in reality, the odds are less still, because hawkers and peddlers are included in the returns with the costers, but do not compete. In good times a coster will make as much as £4 and £5 a week, often more, much of which he can save. Though there are many hundreds of tradesmen who were costers, and though some 5,000 tradesmen fail every year, it is extremely rare for a tradesman who started as a coster to, figure among the failures.

The chances for an author look very good at first sight, but they are not; and if you hanker after wealth, choose some other line. Out of about 5,000 authors who write on various subjects, there are 300 novelists whose books have been accepted. The chance of success is about one in every twenty for these, fifteen novelists getting over $1,000 a year. But besides the 300, there are probably at least 1,000 more who try to be novelists. A good many of the 300 would answer the same description. The average number of novels in MSS. read by the publishers' "readers" is over 3,500, and not very long ago ninety were received in one morning by the London publishers. The average number accepted and published is about one per day—sometimes it runs to ten or fifteen—or twenty-seven per month. Of these twenty-seven, less than four, or about forty-five per year, are more or less successful, and of those forty-five not more than six or seven will enjoy really big sales. There are no very big prizes, Hall Caine and Marie Corelli leading with about £7,000 a year each; but there are fifteen novelists and magazine authors who make between £1,000 and £3,000 a year.

AGAINST THE GOWN.

Methodist Court Decides that the Garment is out of Place.

A dispatch from Toronto says: By the decision of the highest tribunal of the Methodist church, the court of appeal which sat in the board room at the Wesley buildings on April 2, the verdict of the recent church court which sat at Cornwall under the Rev. Dr. Manly Benson, president of the Montreal conference, was upheld. That court had condemned the action of the Rev. Dr. Rose of Ottawa, in appearing in his pulpit in a gown, and ordered him to give up the gown and make a public statement to his congregation.

Against this finding the Rev. Dr. Rose appealed. The higher court dismissed the appeal on the ground "that the wearing of the gown is contrary to general usage" in worship as set forth in the model deed of the Methodist church, which provides that all public worship shall be in harmony with the discipline, rules and usages of the church.

WOMEN AT COAL MINES.

Lasses That Work as Hard and Like Men in the Pits.

Pit-brow girls are among the most remarkable women workers in England. They work as hard as men and dress almost like men. Very few pit-brow girls are found in Britain outside Lancashire, and 5,000 of them find employment at the coal mines. Their work lies on the pit brow—at the surface and not below. Once women were employed in the coal seams, but in 1842, in the face of great opposition from colliery owners, an act was passed prohibiting women and children from being employed below the surface in coal mines.

At present the duties of the pit-brow lasses consist in dealing with the coal as it comes up the shaft to the pit-head. When the cage reaches the top the girls haul out the wagons, which contain several hundredweight of coal each, and run them on rails to a tipping machine, which shoots the coal down below to the screen or riddling machine. This is an iron slide, several yards long, with holes through which the coal drops at various stages into trucks waiting beneath. It is jerked about by steam power and the coal moves downward while the girls stationed alongside pick out the rubbish. It is dusty work.

The girls start work at 6 o'clock in the morning and finish at 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon. As may be judged, their work is arduous, and for its performance they receive 50 cents or less a day. Men who do the same work get $1. Taken altogether the pit-brow lasses are a strong, healthy lot, ranging in age from 18 to 25.

Their dress is distinctive and peculiar. The working costume consists of trousers, clogs and a coat which has at one time been worn by a brother or has come from a rummage stall. When going to and from work the girls wear petticoats, which they roll up round the waist while engaged on the pit-brow. At most pits nowadays the trousers are hidden in front by a short apron, but this is a comparatively recent departure in the way of dress. The headgear is also worthy of note. The hair is closely covered with a handkerchief, on the top of which is a soft bonnet.

A HORSE COASTS DOWN HILL.

Noble and Plucky Method of Overcoming a Difficulty.

The people along the St. Croix River are telling how John Brown of St. Stephen, Me., gave his horse a lightning ride down an icy hill the other day.

Brown lives on one of the ridges back of the town, and the other morning when he had urgent business in St. Stephen, he found to his surprise that the snow had vanished during the night. The business would not wait, and so Brown started with his smooth-shod nag, and dragged along in a lowbodied sled over alternate patches of bare ground and ice.

All went well until he reached the top of Weston's hill, a very steep incline three-quarters of a mile long. Glancing down the icy toboggan chute, Brown decided that it would be dangerous to attempt the descent with his smooth-shod horse, and he stood irresolute until suddenly a bright thought struck him.

By dint of a little coaxing and prodding he managed to get the horse on board the sled, and then before the amazed nag could back out, he gave the sled a push, jumped on behind, and away they went, like a comet, down the hill. The horse stood perfectly still, with his feet braced as if he understood what was going on.

People along the road rushed out to see the sight of a man and horse coasting down the steepest hill on the St. Croix, and they expected every minute to see the outfit go to smash. But Brown knew a thing or two about steering, the horse never once moved from his rigid position on the sled, and finally he reached the foot of the hill and went shooting along a quarter of a mile further on the level road, stopping at the door of a blacksmith's shop.

There the horse was sharp shod and the journey to St. Stephen was resumed with the horse in the shafts and Brown in the seat. To-day Brown is regarded as a man of nerve, while his nag has the distinction of being the only horse thereabout that ever got a sleighride down hill.

Bend Or Drops Dead.

Bend Or, the famous race horse, and winner of the Derby of 1880, dropped dead on the morning of the 10th of January, 1903.

Bend Or was not only a great race horse, but was also one of England's most famous sires. His progeny included the celebrated Ormonde, who won the English Derby in 1886, and was afterward sold to the Duke of Westminster for 17,000 guineas. Ormonde was the sire of Orme, who in turn produced Flying Fox, the winner of the Derby in 1899. Flying Fox, after capturing the Derby, the Two Thousand Guineas and the St. Leger in one season, was bought by M. Blanc, the noted French turfman, for 37,500 guineas. Bend Or, foaled in 1877, was by Doncaster, the winner of the Derby in 1873. When Bend Or took the Derby in 1880 he was ridden by the great Fred Archer, who also rode Ormonde to victory in the same event six years later.

"Little Drops of Water," Etc.

A tribute is proposed to Mrs. Julia A. Carney, who wrote "Little drops of water, little grains of sand." Mrs. Carney will be eighty years old in April, and it is proposed to give all school children the opportunity of contributing a penny each toward a memorial to be given her on her birthday. Mrs. Carney wrote the song fifty years ago. It has been translated into almost every language. She also wrote a number of children's poems almost as well known as "Little drops of water."

A NATURAL RESULT.

The Sad Tale of the Man With the Broken Nose.

"As to how it was done," said the man with the broken nose, "it comes about as a natural result. On the day that I had taken my fiftieth boxing lesson and the professor had observed that there were not twenty men in the United States who could stand before me I cocked my hat on my ear and took a stroll around town to find a fellow who'd dare knock the chip off my shoulder. "And put him to sleep, of course," remarked one of the listeners.

"Not a bit of it. He kicked and grabbed me by the body and threw me over his head, and when I came down he piled on to me and licked me into the hospital. I was battered almost to a pulp."

"But I thought you said you were a graduate in the manly art?"

MORRISSEY

From Our Own Correspondent.

The boarding houses are rapidly filling up.

Mr. Rockindorf of the Morrissey Miner was in camp on Thursday.

There are probably as many men in Morrissey now as there ever was.

Mr. Gourley the boarding house man was in Fernie this week on business.

Mr. Halpin of Coal Creek is moving his family here where he is now employed by the Coal Co.

The clerks of the Trites-Wood Co's store report business picking up since people have gone to work.

A number of miners have come to the camp from Vancouver Island since work was resumed. We have not yet learned their names.

Foss & McDonald are giving the finishing touches to their contract this week which is all complete except getting out a few cap stones for the ovens.

J. A. Manning has been a busy man this week installing a large hoist in No. 4 mine, which will greatly facilitate the handling of coal from this part of the mine.

Joe Gaul whom we reported last week to have lost considerable money by extending credit to the miners during the strike, informs us that his losses will be insignificant.

Mr. Joseph Walker has just arrived in Morrissey from Nottingham England. He has secured employment in the mines and will make his future home. He contemplates bringing his family here.

Francis Williams of Seattle, Wash., who has the contract to drive No. 2 tunnel for the coal company has returned from the coast since the strike was declared off and resumed work and is making good headway.

P. Christopher who played an important part in the late strike has sold out his furniture and moved away from Morrissey. We understand that J. Ballusky is making preparations to quit this community at once.

Mrs. J. Stevens, Mrs. H. Vand, Miss Beatrice Ronn and Mr. Ferrell visited Morrissey on Monday. Circumstances which Mr. Ferrell was unable to explain made it necessary for him to return to the Junction before having an opportunity of seeing all his friends.

Quite a number of gentlemen, who would be Hotel proprietors, have been in the camp this week shaking hand with the people and making acquaintances, and incidently asking them to sign petitions. They are expecting lots in the new townsite of Morrissey Mines to be put on the market in the near future, hence the petitions.

This has been a very dull week at the mines, there has been no coal cars and as a consequence there has been little work for the miners. The mines are in fine condition and there are plenty of men, if they had had the cars they would now be mining as much as before the strike. Next week they expect to load from 700 to 800 tons each day.

How to Ward off an Attack of Rheumatism

"For years when spring time came on and I went into gardening, I was sure to have an attack of rheumatism, and every attack was more severe than the preceding one," says Josie McDonald, of Man, Logan county, West Va. "I tried everything with no relief whatever, until I procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and the first application gave me ease, and before the first bottle was used I felt like a new person. Now I feel that I am cured, but I always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house and when I feel any symptoms of a return I soon drive it away with one or two applications of this liniment. For sale be all druggists and dealers.

INCREASING OUTPUT.

THE MINES AT THE THREE COLLIERIES MAKING GOOD PROGRESS.

Michel Forging Ahead—Coke Oven News —Construction Work at Coal Creek —New Power Plant

The mines at the three collieries are making good headway since the settlement. At Michel the output has reached a daily average of 1000 tons and in another week this amount will be increased to 1200 tons. The coke ovens are running their full capacity at that place.

At Coal Creek the daily average has reached between seven and eight hundred tons and this output is steadily increasing. No. 3 mine will be in condition to work in another week. Out of the 424 ovens at Fernie 277 are now in use, and more ovens are being started every day.

At Morrissey the output has reached 600 tons. A new narrow guage locomotive is now in use which by its larger capacity is a great acquisition to the camp.

The construction on the coke oven plants at Michel and Morrissey is being rapidly pushed. Harry Oldland is expected from Pennsylvania on Tuesday and will take charge of the construction at Morrissey. He has just completed a plant in Pennsylvania. At the Coal Creek mines considerable construction work is being done. A large force of Italians are now working on the motor road connecting the new tunnels, Nos. 4 and 5, with the tipple. These new miaes will be developed at once. Already, trial drifts have penetrated to the coal and permanent tunnels will now be built.

The power house for the new electric plant at Coal Creek mines is now complete. The engine which is of 250 horse power is on the ground and is being placed in position. The boilers in the old engine house are being utilized in connection with the plant and they are being covered with asbestos which will increase their power 25 per cent. The power line from the plant to Fernie will be built as soon as practicable.

THE EASTER BALL.

The Easter ball held in Princess hall on Monday evening was in some respects the leading society event of the season.

The hall decorations which were put up under the direction of W. Hawthorne have never been surpassed in the town. The music was supplied by four members of the Fernie Orchestra and was up to its usual high standard. The floor was good and the dancing was much enjoyed by all who participated. For those who did not care to dance tables for card-playing were arranged. A very dainty repast was served in the Royal hotel dining room.

Many of the gowns worn on this occasion were extremely pretty, and in this respect no other event of the season has equalled the Easter ball. Those present were :

POLICE COURT

Constable Henderson brought two Italians up for trial on Thursday charged with being in a drunken row. The timekeeper with whom they were having the good time drew a gun and fired at them to scare them and he was also up for carrying a gun. They each got $5 and costs, amounting to $12.50 each.

Another of the mob cases, that of an Italian named Cheoda, was disposed of on Wednesday. John Hunt testified that the accused joined the mob with a lot more men at the coke ovens. He afterwards had a conversation with the accused in which the latter expressed regret at having been in the mob, and added "What could you do if you were a Union man. You would have to do as the Union men wanted you." This statement was brought before the accused in cross examination and he made light of it by saying that he wanted a conversation with Hunt. The accused admitted being in mob after they reached the coke ovens. Several Italians were called to prove that the accused was not at the mines. Cheoda was sent up for trial.

ANNUAL CHURCH MEETING

The Annual Parishioners meeting of Christ Church was held on Wednesday evening last at 8 p.m. There was a good attendance of the members and the Vicar was in the chair.

The Financial Report was read by the people's Warden, Mr. Hutchison. Considering the events of the past year, a great mine explosion, and two strikes, with the attendant financial strain the report proved to be very interesting to the members. The church debt has been paid off, as well as sundry outstanding accounts. The expenses of the year have been met and the auditor showed that the assets were in excess of the liabilities by some few dollars. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the Wardens for this creditable showing.

The Vicar followed with his report on the Parish affairs in general. There had been 113 Sunday Services held, week day services 30, Public Celebrations of Holy Communion 28, private do. 1, acts of Com. 150, Baptisms 11 Confirmed 4, Marriages 1 Funerals 39. 21 families had left the parish during the year as well as 22 individual members.

The Vicar also read the financial statement of the Ladies Guilds. The Senior Guilds' total receipts amounted to $365.85 with a balance on hand of $284.25. Those of the Jr. Guild's were ; receipts $168.25 balance on hand $108.55. The membership of both Guilds were steadily increasing and their usefulness in furthering the work and welfare of the Parish was felt to be very great.

The Sunday School report was equally gratifying and taken altogether the affairs of the Parish were felt to be on a solid and prosperous basis. Hearty votes of thanks were accorded to the ladies for their work, as well as the retiring officers, choir and organist. The ladies have about the amount required for the payment of the new pews and Vicar stated that he had been promised the gift of a new Oak Eagle Lecterin as well as a Stone Baptismal font by Mr. Dobbin who is placing it in the church in memory of his mother.

The officers for the ensuing year were elected as follow:—Vicar's Warden, E.H. Bird ; People's Warden J. H. McMillen. Vestrymen : A. W. Bleasdall, T. Beck, J. S. T. Alexander, N. E. Suddaby, H. F. Brandow, P. Bean. Delegates to Synod E. H. Bird and A. W. Bleasdell.

Some eighteen men suspected of having had a hand in the mob disturbances at Coal Creek mines on the night of March 19th have left town. Of these there were several who had been served with summonses Thos. Craig secretary of Gladstone Union and Feeney one of the executive of the Union are among the missing. A man named Ruben is the last to go. He was out under bonds and since the latter were stolen he has not been seen.

AFFAIRS AT VICTORIA

S.E. KOOTENY LAND GRANT BROUGHT BEFORE THE HOUSE.

S. E. Kootenay gets $17,000 for Roads. Other Interesting items.

Victoria, April 13--The all-absorbing sensation of the present session of the local legislature has for its text the allottment by the government under premier Dunsmuir, on September 7th 1901, of something like 900,000 acres of incalculably valuable crown lands in southeast Kootenay—lands situated at the extreme southwesterly extremity of that district and known to be rich in coal, petroleum and minerals of various kinds—in satisfaction of the earned land subsidy of the Columbia & Western railway for section 1 and 3 of its line The act of the legislature for the assistance of the construction of the road in question provided for the making of the grant, but restricted the selection of the lands to alternate blocks along the line of railway, or when these were exhausted, to the country reasonably contiguous.

It has been held by those who have disputed the legitimacy of the grant made by the order-in-council, that 200 miles away from the nearest point on the railway could not, by any elastic interpretation of the grant statute, be accepted as "practicably contiguous," and during the past two sessions, John Oliver, Smith Curtis, E. C. Smith and others have been persistently seeking the full annulment of what has been described as a scandalous misappropriation of the heritage of the people. So insistent did the objection in the legislature become, that the government, on March 18th of last year, passed a second order-in-council, formally cancelling the grant as ordered and prepared, and this session a bill has been brought forward by the first minister to ratify the second council order and make absolutely certain the non-alienation of the lands in question. This is, in effect, what the objecting members have been seeking, and it must command their support for consistency's sake, and also for the preservation of the lands for the people.

They are, nevertheless, anxious to go further and ascertain what lies beneath the bold attempt to perpetrate, as they aver, one of the greatest steals on record. When it is mentioned that the lands allotted away from the railway line are said to have carried with them the rights in the oil and coal, in what is described as the richest section of the province in regard to these resources, the magnitude of the transaction may be appreciated. Naturally, the Canadian Pacific Railway company, which is so interested, is not disposed to surrender so immense a concession without a desperate struggle, and it is there fore likely that every possible leverage will be used to defeat the bill for the ratification of the cancellation, even if such a defeat should mean the passing of the Prior Government. On the other hand, the heroes of the land grant disclosures, John Oliver, et al., declare that they do not desire to overthrow the government by any such action as killing the very bill which they have forced the government to offer, to guarantee the interests of the people ; and, to make the situation even more complicated, even the cabinet is said to be divided as to negativing the legislation, one portion of the ministry, with its particular following, standing by the legitimate interpretation of the statute, under which the right of selection was given altogether away from the line of railway.

The estimated revenue for the forthcoming year is somewhat less than the estimate for 1903, the totals being $2,222,568.65 and $2,193,476.66 respectively. The estimate of expenditure, on the other hand, is slightly in excess of that provided for, being $2,475,467.31. The increases are found in the public debt, salaries, maintenance of public institutions, hospitals and charities, administration of justice, education, transport and miscellaneous. Public works show a reduction of almost $100,000. In the estimated revenue the land sales are shown at $160,000, as against $480,000 in 1903 ; land revenue at $50,000, compared with $37,000 ; timber royalties, etc. at $250,000, a gain of $170,000. Timber leases, miners' licences and mining receipts generally are declining, while the Chinese refund amount to $100,000 in place of last year's $40,000. Foreshore leases are the only new head of revenue calling for $5,000. The cost of the civil service is materially increased by additions in almost all the departments, such as clerks, stenographer, etc. The projected public works include a new court house at Nelson for which $40,000 has been provided, and the completion of the reformatory, with barns, school etc. in Vancouver for which $8,000 is appropriated. Among the votes of special interest to Kootenay are : Court House, Greenwood, total $5,000 ; fish hatcheries and ladders at River Inlet, Quesnelle Lake dam, and Seaton Lake, $24,500 ; protection works at Kicking Horse river, $3.5000 ; towards experiment of clearing bush lands, $40,000 ; roads in northeast Kootenay, $14,000 ; in southeast Kootenay, $17,000 ; West Kootenay, Revelstoke, $14,000 ; Slocan, $14,000 ; Nelson, $14,000 ; Rossland, $5,000; survey. $1,500 ; coal miners' examinations, $3,100 ; immigration, $4,000 revote to Lemon creek bridge and road, $2,250 ; $4,350 for coal miners' commission ; $2,100 for Mining Association mediation committee at Fernie, and $5,562 for the destruction of annimals bounties.

FOUND IN THE MINES

Bodies of Two Italian Brothers Recovered in Fair State of Preservation.

Two more bodies were found in the lower depths of No. 2 mine on Thursday night. They are two Italian brothers named Gaetano Frederico and Angelo Frederico.

They were discovered by one of the engineers, in a place where it was not known that men were working at the time of the explosion. It is thought that these men had been temporarily put to work in this room on the day of the explosion.

Inspector Dick and Gen. Supt. Stockett had explored on each side of this place after the explosion occurred.

The bodies were in a fair state of preservation, owing to the coolness of the mines. They were not crushed at all, and after-damp was the evident cause of their death.

The bodies were put in caskets and buried last evening in the cemetery.

There was no trouble in identifying the men by the numbers of their car checks which were found in their pockets, and also by the number of their lamps.

BEARDING THE LION.

A daring robbery took place last Saturday night at the police court. The thief or thieves gained admittance into the building by raising the lower sash of Stipendiary Magistrate s private office window which was sealed with a government seal. From this office easy admittance was gained to the outside office between the jail and the court-room where the magistrate's safe and desk are kept. The thief unlocked the desk, evidently with a key in his possession, and removed the magistrate's new book. Three other books that were in this room for the use of the police officers were also stolen. One was the new police record book, another was the jailor's record showing the time of the prisoners, and the third was a book for registering the personal effects of the prisoners.

The most serious loss sustained is the magistrate's record which contained the evidence of the unfinished case of J. T. Davies. The case will have to be tried from the beginning again. It will come up early next week.

A police record book was stolen from the court house about three weeks ago and no trace of it has yet been found. These books are frequently used by the officers and are kept for convenience on the table of the office. The police department does not possess a safe.

The marriage license book was also stolen and the bonds of two miners named Ruben and Cheoda were missing. These men were each under $1,000 bonds to appear on a charge of being in the mob at Coal Creek.

How to Ward off an Attack of Rheumatism

"For years when spring time came on and I went into gardening, I was sure to have an attack of rheumatism, and every attack was more severe than the preceding one," says Josie McDonald, of Man, Logan county, West Va. "I tried everything with no relief whatever, until I procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and the first application gave me ease, and before the first bottle was used I felt like a new person. Now I feel that I am cured, but I always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house and when I feel any symptoms of a return I soon drive it away with one or two applications of this liniment. IMPORTANT MEETING.

FERNIE BOARD OF TRADE DISCUSS INCORPORATION AND TAKE ACTION.

Ask C. P. R. for Special Cheap Rates and the Government for Jail Improvements.

The regular monthly meeting of the Fernie Board of Trade took place on Tuesday evening.

The first queston discussed was that of securing reduced rates on the C. P. R. for one day in the week on round trip between Michel and Elko. A resolution was passed that a committee be appointed by the president to wait on the C. P. R. to lay the matter before them. Messrs. Stork, Tuttle and Rennie were named to comprise this committee.

A request from the Kingston Board of Trade for assistance on a resolution effecting the shipping interests on the lakes and the St. Lawrence was laid on the table, as was another from the Montreal Board of Trade re the importance of more thorough book-keeping throughout the country.

The Montreal Board of Trade also asked for assistance in petitioning that Lord Strathcona be appointed next Governor General and a resolution co-operating with that Board was passed and a copy forwarded to Montreal.

The lack of jail accommodation was brought up. A. Joyce moved and A. W. Bleasdell seconded that the government be requested to make appropriations to increase the accommodation. The motion was passed without criticism.

Mr. Cree invited the members of the Board of Trade to attend the fire meeting on the following evening.

The last question, that of incorporation was discussed at some length.

J. D. Quail introduced the subject. He favored incorporation, but did not believe that the limit should by placed at the railway track. He was in favor of making suitable exemptions for taxation on the coal company's coking plant and its other industries.

J. H. Tonkin stated that he and Mr. Stockett were present as members of the Board of Trade and not as officials of the coal company. He had never gone into the question of incorporation with the coal company and he was therefore unable to give any definite information as to their attitude on the subject. He believed, however, that if incorporation meant the burdening of their industries with increased taxation they would oppose it. As to the subject of sewerage and drainage, which he believed to be an important one, the company might be induced to put in a system on its own account were the present restrictions against draining into the Elk abolished.

F. Stork strongly favored incorporation from a sanitary standpoint. The town needed a sewerage system. Incorporation was simply a business proposition. They should get down to figures and find out what the expenditure would be and what the taxation would be and then they would know where they were at. He believed that the industrial plants belonging to the company should be exempt from increased taxation.

W. W. Tuttle strongly urged that something be done to improve the sanitary conditions of the town, either by incorporating or by inducing the company to take the matter up. He did not believe that the interests of the town and the interests of the coal company were autagonistic to one another and he thought this was the opinion of every business man in the town. They could not expect Mr. Tonkin there and then to give the views of the coal company on incorporation and he moved that a committee of three be appointed by the president to wait on the coal company to discuss incorporation and to find out their views.

Messrs. H. A. Kanouse and A. Joyce spoke favoring municipal goxernment but opposing high taxation on the company's plants and the resolution was finally adopted without a dissenting voice. Messrs. W. W. Tuttle, W. R. Ross and H. Bentley were appointed for this committee by the president.

Four new names were proposed for membership, Messrs. F. Stephens, Rogers, Dr. Morrison and Dr. Barber.

A GRAND CANAL

IS PROPOSED FROM WINNIPEG TO NEW YORK.

Port Huron Times is Authority for the Story That a Canal Will be Cut From Ocean to Ocean--Large enough to Accommodate ocean steamers.

The Port Hope Times of April 9 contains an item of news of great interest to the people of the west. The article in question says it is proposed to construct a canal from New York to Winnipeg capable of accommodating 500 feet ocean steamers. The canal would be constructed via Port Hope or Cobourg. The scheme is before the city of New York and among those interested in it is the chief engineer of New York, one of the commissioners of the Nicaragua canal. The projectors of the scheme are confident of its feasibility and of being able to finance the scheme.

Harry Calcutt, of Peterboro, received a letter from Thomas Nicholls, a lormer resident of Peterboro, now of Eau Clair, Wis., in which the writer speaks of a gigantic canal scheme, the route of which will be via Port Hope and Peterboro to the Northwest. Some time ago Mr. Calcutt sent Mr. Nicholls some information and in expressing acknowledgement the latter goes on to say: "I have a large project now before the city of New York, in the shape of an enormous canal from that city to Winnipeg, Canada. Starting at New York it will go to Rochester or Sodus bay on Lake Ontario, thence to Cobourg, and thence to Georgian bay and Lake Superior, and from Thunder bay to Nepigon bay to Winnipeg, and ultimately on to the Pacific coast by way of the Saskatchewan valley. The first division to Winnipeg will take a great many millions of dollars, but millions are now as easy to market as thousands were fifteen years ago.

"Since I first mooted the project several others have advocated it, one even giving a lecture thereon before the chamber of commerce at Rochester. I have it in the hands of the chief engineer of New York city, who was one of the commissioners of the Nicaragua canal, Mr. Alfred Noble.

"As soon as the weather permits I will go to New York and spend a month or so; of course I shall go to Rochester and may cross over to Canada. I forgot to say that my proposition is to make my canal a ship waterway that will take ocean steamers of 500 feet in length.

A DOCTORS UNION.

Physicians and Surgeons Take Their Cue From Labor Organizations.

Waukegan, Ill., has become so absorbed in the union labor movement that the physicians and surgeons of the town have formed a union. The movement was started several days ago, when a meeting was called. Nearly all the medical men of the town attended. A scale of prices was afterwards published in the newspapers.

Dr. W. C. Bouton is president of the organization and Dr. E. Ford Gavin is secretary. The doctors do not admit that the organization is a union, and they likewise refuse to agree with some of the residents of the town, who insist that the association is nothing short of a trust or a close corporation at least.

The scale submitted by the Waukegan doctors is simply an ultimatum to the people after the fashion of wage scales which are adopted by the federation of musicians. If the residents do not wish to accept they cannot have the union doctors.

All night calls will be charged for at double rates. Night drives into the country will be made at the rate of $1 a mile, in addition to the charge for medical attendance. Day drives are cheaper, fifty cents a mile being the rate. Some of the provisions of the scale are: Amputation of fingers or toes, $10 to $25; amputation of hand or foot, $25 to $50; amputation of forearm or leg, $25 to $60; amputation of arm, $35 to $80; amputation of shoulder joint, $50 to $120; amputation of entire shoulder, $100 to $200; amputation of thigh, $60 to $200; amputation of hip joint, $125 to $200; for cortagious diseases $2 to $3 a visit; diphtheria, scarlet fever or smallpox, $2 to $10; visits between 10 p. m. and 6 a. m., $3 to $5; remaining all night, $10. Everything else, from 'slight indispositions' to the greater illnesses is on the list.

SUBSIDIES TO RAILWAYS.

What Canadian Companies Received in Grants.

In the House of Commons last Wednesday Mr. Davis (Saskatchewan), and Mr. Scott (West Assiniboia), secured some interesting figures from the minister of railways regarding the amount of public money spent on railways since confederation. The total cost of the Intercolonial (capital account) up to Feb. 28 last, was $69,418,275, and of the Prince Edward Island railway $5,112,455. The sums paid as subsidies to railways were as follows: Prince Edward Island, nil; Nova Scotia, $1,872,000; New Brunswick, $1,392,000; Quebec, $10,091,000; Ontario, $18,750,000; Manitoba, $3,259,000; British Columbia, $9,682,000, aod Northwest Territories, $7,547,000. The total sum paid as subsidies to aid railway construction between Lake Superior and the Rockies was $12,460,000. The amount paid by the Dominion since confederation to aid railway construction, including the Canadian Pacific railway, was $152,922,162.

In reply to Mr. Davis, Mr. Blair said that the total amount of lands granted to railways in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories to date is 56,087,072 acres, of which 29,986,826 acres had been earned. No lands whatever had been granted as subsidies to railways since 1896.

Mr. Bickerdike (Mantreal) introduced a bill which is designed to put a stop to the practice of obtaining charters simply for the purpose of speculation. He seeks to have it declared that incorporated companies shall not remain in existence unless they commence and continue actively in business, that failure to do either will cause the charter to lapse and became void.

Sir Wilfrid Lawson Elected.

A London cable of April 9 says:—The parliamentary vacancy in the Cambourne division of Cornwall, due to the death of W. S. Caine (Progressive Liberal), was filled to-day by the return of Sir Wilfrid Lawson with an increased Liberal majority.

The figures were: Sir Wilfrid Lawson, Liberal, 3.558; Arthur Strauss, Liberal-Unionist, 2,869.

Considerable rowdyism marked the canvassing. The students of a local mining college had frequent encounters with the villagers. Sir Wilfrid Lawson's increased majority was not expected, as he was bitterly assailed for his so-called 'Little England' attitude. Sir Wilfrid openly declared the government ought to give back the Transvaal and Orange Free State to the Boers, and he otherwise identified himself with the ardent pro-Boer party. Mr. Strauss, who already had represented Cambourne for five years, was considered to be a strong local candidate.

The Liberal success probably was due to the dissatisfaction of the nonconformist Cornishmen with the government's educational bill. Sir Wilfrid Lawson's election brings back to Westminster a picturesque figure, long known for his vehement enthusiasm in the cause of temperance.

Colonial Secretary Chamberlain sent a telegram to the electors, pointing out that throughout the war Sir Wilfrid had "invariably sympathized with the enemies of his country.

SCOTLAND.

An emigration boom is at present prevailing in the east of Scotland, the emigrants in most cases being bound for Canada. The methods adopted by the Canadian authorities to develop the country have had a curious effect on the districts around Dundee. Large numbers of young men are giving up their situations in order to emigrate to Canada, with a view to engage in the agricultural industry. The emigrants who make their centre at Dundee are drawn from Fifeshire, Forfarshire, and Perthshire, and large numbers of them have been engaged in farming pursuits in this country.

Some very fine specimens of new potatoes have been grown by the Hon. A. H. T. de Montmorency, of Carrickmines, of his variety, The Scout. They are very firm and mature, and have been grown in a remarkably simple way—under glass, with almost nothing else than the heat of the sun, as there was only sufficient pipe heat to keep out the frost, with the assistance of paper covering. As they were dug on March 12, it is about three months in advance of the earliest in this country. He has been cultivating this variety for over thirty years, and instead of deteriorating they seem to be getting stronger in constitution.

MARKETS.

(Compiled from The Commercial)

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

Manitoba wheat has been steady and firm all the week and has advanced about in line with the advance in outside markets. The most important change is the narrowing of the spread between spot and May delivery, which is now only ½c per bushel. It may also be noted that the higher grades have advanced more than the lower. There is a fair demand for 1 hard and 1 northern, but not nearly so good for 2 northern and lower grades. At the close of business last week we quote: No. 1 hard, 75½c; 1 northern, 74c; 2 northern, 71½c; 3 northern, 68½c; spot or delivery first half of April, and for May delivery, 1 hard, 76c; 1 northern, 74½c; 2 northern, 72c; 3 northern, 69c, all in store Fort William, Port Arthur or Duluth.

FLOUR—Best Hungarian Patent, $2 per sack of 98 lbs. delivered to the trade; Glenora patent, $1.85; strong bakers, $1.65, and XXXX, $1.35. These prices are subject to usual trade discounts.

MILLFEED—There is a big demand for bran and shorts and mills have no trouble in disposing of all they produce. We quote: Bran, in bulk, per ton, $15.50; shorts, $17.50.

GROUND FEED—Oat chop is steady at $21 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley chop, $16.50; mixed barley and oats, $18; chop speltz, $16 per ton; chop, screenings, $12; oil cake, $25 per ton.

ROLLED OATS—Millers are asking $1.75 per sack of 80 lbs. carlots. Jobbing lots are worth $1.85 per sack. Standard and granulated oatmeal is worth $2.40 per sack of 98 lbs.

OATS—There are plenty of oats offering for all the requirements of the moment, and market holds at about the same level as it did a week ago. No. 1 white in carlots on track are worth 32c per bushel; No. 2 white, 30c, and feed grades, 28c. Farmers' loads on the street are bringing 28c, and at country points about 25c. Seed oats are worth 35c per bushel.

BARLEY—Movement is light and prices unchanged from a week ago. Sales have been made this week at 38c for cars of No. 3 barley, Fort William. Dealers are offering 38c per bushel for May barley, delivered after the opening of navigation.

FLAXSEED—Holders of seed flax are asking $1.25 per bushel.

SPELTZ—The market is steady at 32c. per bushel of 50 pounds, delivered here.

HAY—Fresh baled is higher at $6 to $6.50 a ton in car lots on track.

POTATOES—Prices have risen to 45c per bushel for car lots at country points.

DRESSED POULTRY—Dealers are asking for chickens 12½ to 13c per pound, and for turkeys, 17c.

BUTTER—Creamery— Local creameries are selling their product at 23 to 24c per pound, put up in any form desired.

BUTTER — Dairy—The market is easier, and regular receipts of fresh, sweet butter are bringing 16 to 18c per pound on a commission basis, put up in bricks, rolls or tubs. The preference is for tubs. Second grades are slow sale at 12 to 15c per pound, commission basis.

CHEESE—The market is quiet. Jobbers are supplying the retail trade with Ontario September stock at 14c. per pound, and with Manitoba at 13½c'

EGGS—Eggs are now down to 14c per dozen, commission basis. Sales have been reported as low at 13 to 13½c.

DRESSED MEATS—We quote: beef, city dressed, 6c. to 7½c. per pound; country stock, ½c. under these figures: mutton, 8c. to 9c.; lamb, 11½c.; hogs, 7c. to 7½c, packers' price, for best weights; lights and heavies ½c. to 1c. less.

HIDES—There are not many hides coming at present and the market is quiet and steady. We quote: Frozen hides, 5½c. per lb., less 5 lbs. tare: city butchers, 6¼c. per lb. for No. 1's; 5¼c. for No. 2's, and 4¼c. for No. 3's. Sheepskins, 30c. to 50c. each.

SHEEP—Market nominal.

HOGS—The market has firmed up still further and is now on a basis of 6½c for choice weights of from 150 to 250 pounds. Demand is good and hogs are none too plentiful. The advances at Toronto are helping to strengthen this market.

MILCH COWS—There is a good demand for cows at prices ranging from $30 to $45 each.

HORSES — Farmers are buying freely. Prices are high, good teams being worth all the way from $300 to $450, according to weight and quality.

BARR COLONISTS ARRIVE.

Nearly Two Thousand Settlers in the Advance Party.

The Elder-Dempster steamer Lake Manitoba reached S. John, N.B., on April 11 with Rev. Mr. Barr's party of British immigrants on board for Saskatoon. The party were free from any disease.

Rev. George G. Lloyd, who is looking after the spiritual welfare of the immigrants, when spoken to, said they number 1,964. The passage out was fine except the first day. Then almost everybody was sick. The people are from all parts of the United Kingdom, England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales. "They have been drummed up since last September, said Mr. Lloyd, and this is only the advance party. The world is watching this very boatload of humanity. Next March there will be ten thousand more of us out here, and all England is being aroused to the possibilities in Canada. The greatest exodus in the history of the mother country is about commencing. The South Africa fever is a boom only; Canada's boom is a growth. The stay-at-home English people, Mr. Lloyd affirms, are not downcast at this outpouring of their people. The mother isle is overcrowded.

Quite a lot of dissatisfaction was expressed by many colonists regarding the accommodation and the treatment during the voyage, especially in the steerage, which was over crowded with 1,400 passengers.. Many of them were anxious to come out as cabin passengers, but were unable to procure berths. They assert freely that Mr. Barr and the steamboat people grossly misrepresented matters. They claimed that the accommodation and food there, though plainer, would be as good as second cabin. Instead, they were huddled together, and the women were without any chance of privacy at any time, and the sanitary arrangements were filthy and the food scarce and poor.

On the second day a delegation waited upon Captain Taylor and demanded him to put back to the nearest port and land them. Had he done so, the immigrants say, all the people in the steerage would have gone home. Several say now they will leave the party and strike out on their own account. Some have also written letters for publication in English papers.

Rev. Mr. Barr makes light of the complaints. He says he expected some. The fact was there were alot of people who were not used to steerage accommodations, and all would be well when they reached their destination. They intended to lay out three towns immediately, to be named Preston, Lloydtown and Barrview. A municipal government would be immediately formed. Men were with the party with a full pork-packing equipment. There are contractors also, ready to go on with the buildings, so that in a very short time all would be well.

COLLISION ON THE I. C. R.

Passenger and Freight Come Together--Four Killed.

A dispatch from Halifax, dated April 12, says: Four men were killed in a head-on collision on the Intercolonial railway near Windsor Junction on Saturday night. The belated Atlantic express from Montreal and a fast freight from Halifax, both running at 45 miles an hour speed, dashed together on a sharp curve two miles and a half beyond Windsor Junction.

Driver William Wall and Fireman John Oakley, of the express, and Fireman Ed. Hill, of the freight, were instantly killed. All three died at their posts, with scarcely a moment of warning.

Brakeman Albert Thorpe, of the freight was horribly and fatally injured. He lived 50 minutes after the accident, suffering terrible agonies.

Driver Melville Copeland, of the freight, was seriously injured, but it is believed will recover. He was found lying beside the track with his face badly cut and his hands and arms terribly scalded by the escape of steam and hot water from the demolished boiler.

None of the passengers were seriously injured.

The accident was one of the worst in the history of the company. Disregard of or misreading of the crossing order by the driver of the freight would appear to be the cause of the collision. Various rumors are afloat as to the conduct of Driver Copeland. Some say he was the worse for liquor. At any rate it was his mistake that caused the collision. Fortunately the cars of the express were strongly built of steel frames, otherwise they would have been telescoped by the impact, and the loss of life would have been much greater.

Lumbermen Strike.

There is a big strike on in the Hawkesbury Lumber company's mills at Hawkesbury, on the Ottawa river. and reports have reached Ottawa Ont., that the strikers are running things to suit themselves. The dispute is principally as to reorganization of the union. The men also oppose the letting out of the piling of lumber by job work. Because the company refused to recognize these demands a strike was ordered. The lumber mills are on the island, and the strikers are said to have taken possession of the ferry. Those who live on the mainland are not allowed to cross.

An amusing feature of the present controversy concerning the metric system, in which one party holds to the yard and pound as consecrated Anglo-Saxon standards, is that the United States fundamental legal standards of length and mass are the meter and the kilogram, respectively, and not the yard and pound. The yard is legally expressed as the 3,600-3,937th part of a meter.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

THE SECRET OF HEALTH

Is Pure, Rich, Red Blood and Strong Nerves.

You can always tell anaemic men and women. They are pale, weak and languid— the victims of headaches and backaches, easily tired and always averse to exertion. They can't eat, or they can't digest what they do eat. Their unstrung nerves kill sleep; their temper is irritable; their vitality vanishes. And it all comes from poor blood and unstrung nerbes. You can promptly banish anaemia by enrishing your blood and toning up your nerves with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They bring good appetite, sound sleep, bright spirits and perfect health. They are incomparably the greatest health-giving mehicine that science has yet discovered. All over the world, grateful people prove the truth of these statements. Miss A. M. Tuckey Oxdrift, Ont., says :—" I do not know what would have become of me had it not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. My blood seemed to have turned to water, and I was troubled with headaches, dizziness and general prostration. Eventually, I became so weak I could scarcely move about. I tried several medicines, but they did not help me. Then I was advised to try Dr. William's Pink Pills, and I soon began to find great benefit from them, and after taking them for a few weeks all my old strength and health returned."

Don't waste time and money experimenting with other medicines, when Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will surely make you well. You can get them from any dealer in medicine, or post paid, at 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50 by writing direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Early Rising Not Always a Virtue.

Thousands of people have no choice whatever about their hour of rising in the morning. Later or earlier, that hour is fixed for them by the requirements of the office, the shop or the classroom, by the time table of the railroad, by the arbitration of their employers or the necessities of their employees. But in the cases manifold where personal liberty is enjoyed it should not be thoughtlessly restricted simply because of the domestic tradition that early rising deserves praise and late rising blame.

Breakfast may often be a movable feast without materially disturbing the routine of an orderly housekeeping day. Invalids, mothers whose rest has been broken by teething babies and, above all, rapidly growing children, should have their sleep out. Nature demands this, and violence is done to her when sleepy people are rudely aroused from their beds. Early to bed is the single safe prescription to insure early to rise.

We need to repeat it over and over to our hurrying, anxious, toiling American men and women: Rest, rest and again rest. Do not think time ill spent that is spent in repairing the ravages of our well nigh incessant activity.

The First Pantomime.

Most pantomime characters were originally borrowed from the Italians. The first real English pantomime was produced at a theater in Lincoln's Inn Fields in 1720. It was called "Harlequin Executed," and its subtitle was "A New Italian Comic Scene Between a Scaramouche, a Harlequin, a Country Farmer, His Wife and Others." The performance was very successful. About the middle of the eighteenth century the character of pantomime performances was completely altered, chiefly because of the genius of the famous Grimaldi, who made the clown the first figure of the pantomime. Grimaldi first appeared at Sadler's Wells theater, where he played the part of a monkey. He was actively engaged on the stage for forty-nine years, and at the close of his stage career he took a benefit at Drury Lane theater, which realized nearly £600. He also received £100 from the Drury Lane fund. This was in June, 1828. He died in 1837 and was buried in the churchyard in St. James' chapel, Pentonville hill.—London Standard.

Animals and Poisons.

Certain substances which are deadly in their effects upon men can be taken by the brute creation with impunity. Horses can take large doses of antimony, dogs of mercury, goats of tobacco, mice of hemlock and rabbits of belladonna without injury. On the other hand, dogs and cats are much more susceptible to the influence of chloroform than man and are much sooner killed by it. If this invaluable anæsthetic had been first tried upon animals, we should probably have never enjoyed its blessings, as it would have been found to be so fatal that its discoverer would have been afraid to test its effects upon human beings. It is evident, then, that an experiment upon an animal can never be the means of any certain deductions so far as man is concerned.

Skyrockets Before Gunpowder.

It matters very little in the long run to the small boy when, how or where fireworks were first made and of what they are made now. But the fact remains that the despised heathen Chinese first made them and used them and that civilized communities did not know of them until the fourteenth century. The skyrocket was first invented toward the close of the ninth century and at that time was used, so it is said, in India and China in war. That was long before the invention of gunpowder.

Ornamental Jade.

The Chinese have cut jade for ages, but never ornamented it except by sculpture. When it was introduced into India, the native jewelers, with their quick eye for color, at once saw what a perfect ground it afforded for mounting precious stones, and they were the first to incrust them on jade. The India museum in London possesses the choicest specimens of this work known of the best mogul period.

They will smell a rain cloud 100 miles distant, or even further, and scud for it with almost inconceivable swiftness.

Thousands of prominent clergymen in Canada and other lands through the use of Paine's Celery Compound are happily pursuing their pastoral duties and ministering with success to their congregations. Heart trouble, sleeplessness, nervousness, sluggish and impure blood, weak digestion, constipation and headache are the troubles that drag clergymen down to deeper sufferings and perils. To-day Paine's Celery Compound is the chosen home medicine of all wise and prudent ministers and priests. A vast number of them owe their lives and present good health to Dr. Phelps' world renowned prescription that "makes sick people well." Rev. John S. Michaud, Bishop of Burlington, Vt., writes as follows :

"I have been asked why I recommenbed Paine's Celery Compound and I desire to put on record frankly my reasons for this endorsement, hoping that my words may inspire those readers who need health and strength with faith to try Paine's Celery Compound and prove to themselves its worth.

"At the Fanny Allen hospital, an institution in which I am deeply interested, Paine's Celery Compound has been used successfully. The Sisters of Mercy at Mount St. Mary's Academy on Mansfield Ave., rely upon Paine's Celery Compound as a tonic and strengthener. In my own household one of the domestics has taken Paine's Celery Compound for liver trouble of long standing, and says, 'It has done more good than any other medicine.' Several priests have spoken to me in praise of this remedy, and I believe it has the confidence of my associates. Even did I not know from personal observation of the worth of Paine's Celery Compound I should feel like praising it for the simple reason that it is prepared by the Wells & Richardson Co., a firm whose members I have known for nearly a quarter of a century, and in whom I have perfect confidence."

SILVER LEAD QUESTION.

We were shown this week by Mr. Bentley a copy of the different resolutions from the towns called at by himself and Mr. Robertson, while away on the prairie doing missionary work in the interests of the silver-lead question. These papers represent strongly-worded resolutions from the Boards of Trade of twelve different towns all of which heartily endorse the well-known resolution passed at Sandon. These gentlemen found that the question was not well understood by the prairie people and some opposition had to be met in most of the towns by those who were not in favor of increasing the tariff, but when the matter was put fairly before them, when they understood how vitally important it was to the whole of the Kootenays that this industry should receive governmental protection, not a voice was raised against the proposed legislation. The prairie people may have to pay a trifle more for the lead they buy but they are quite willing to make that little sacrifice, knowing that it will repay them manyfold in increased trade with British Columbia. These resolutions going to Ottawa from a farming community situated hundreds of miles distant from the district directly interested will no doubt have considerable weight with the government, by showing that the question is not one of mere local significance, but owing to the interdependence of the industries of the great west, it is one which vitally, though indirectly, affects the whole country. Messrs. Robertson and Bentley have done good work on their flying trip and they realize that more could have been accomplished had they had time to go farther.

Slow as are eastern legislators to acknowledge the needs of the west it is difficult for us to anticipate any reasonable objection that the Ottawa government can bring forward to oppose this suggested duty. It is not asking the Liberal party to violate it tariff principles. The present duty on lead was formulated at the time of Confederation when there was no lead produced in Canada. Since that time vast deposits of lead have been discovered and developed and it is found that the tariff of 1867 does not suit the present requirements. The proposed legislation is not a blow at the U. S. but it is a check on the monopoly of the big lead trust of that country. This trust with a capital of six hundred million dollars in 1901 found that the production of lead was too great. The Canadian importation was cut off and their own output reduced, while at the same time the selling price was raised to the consumer. The product from the American mines is manufactured at home and the trust gets $4.12 per hundred pounds for its crude lead. In Canada there is no lead refinery and smelter and all our production is sent to Belgium, Germany and other outside points for treatment and the producer realizes $1.30 per hundred pounds.

The qeestion naturally arises why are there no refineries in Canada? Simply because under existing tariff conditions capitalists are, with reason, afraid to invest money in an industry which the American trust could crush with a single blow. The price of lead products are cheap in Canada to-day because it is largely the product of cheap Mexican and Spanish labor or it is the surplus of the big American trust which can afford to sell that part of its product at a lower rate. This surplus can also be increased at any time to an almost unlimited extent. Then what chance would a young industry have in contending against a huge monopolist on one side and cheap labor on the other! But with a tariff of over two cents per pound on lead importation a Canadian lead manufacturing business would be a safe industry and lead mining would take its deserved place among the leading industries of the country.

The Canadian consumer pays a duty of 15 per cent. on the manufactured product shipped from the refining works in Germany or wherever the crude lead was sent. Thus we in Fernie are using articles made from lead mined within a hundred miles of the town, but which was first sent to a foreign country for treatment and upon which we paid 15 per cent duty for the privilege of getting it back.

In 1900 $2,700,000 was paid in lead-mining wages in the Slocan, while last year about $300,000 covered that part of the expenses. The cost of producing lead in Canada is about $2.70 so that at the present price of $1.30 it is clearly impossible to work our lead mines. The only lead produced in Canada to-day is from lead ore that carries silver in paying quantities. We have in the Kootenays untold quantities of lead ore awaiting the miner's shovel and it is up to the government of Canada to start the wheels of this great industry going and thereby cause this province to teem with activity and prosperity which in its turn will indirectly benefit our brother Canadians to the east of us. Let our policy be "Canada for the Canadians."

Supports the Government

Mr. E. C. Smith is doubtless sincere in opposing the resolution asking for dissolution after the present session is over. He believes in giving Col. Prior a fair chance and as the latter has promised to drop the Canadian Northern subsidy scheme, and has agreed to an investigation into the East Kootenay land scandal he is no longer "agin" the government. So far so good, but it must be admitted that where a government to secure a majority has to depend upon the support of floppers who are bribed with promises that government cannot well maintain its independence, and its legislation cannot be in the general interests of the province.

Waken UP, Fernieites!

As inferred by the wording of the bills calling the fire meeting last Wednesday evening, those who did not attend the meeting showed a lack of interest in the welfare of the town. We must waken up and take some action now, or we shall richly deserve the fate that may be ours through this selfsame neglect of duty. In the absense of municipal machinery to take hold of the fire protection system, it is up to the citizens to do what is within their power to protect their property against the fire demon, and if, after doing so, a fire should wipe out the town they will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that they had done all that could be reasonably expected of them to prevent such a disaster. The committee very naturally were keenly dissappointed at the failure of the last meeting, and their efforts in the interests of the town should on Monday evening be rewarded by a very large and enthusiastic meeting.

That Land Grant

The warm discussion in the legislature this week on the Columbia and Western land grant, introduced by John Oliver, brings before the public a matter of vital importance to Fernie. 625,000 of the 900,000 acres to be made up were to be obtained in block s4293 and 4594 and the latter is the block across the river from Fernie where many Fernie citizens have staked timber limits. That these lands, situated 200 miles from the Columbia and Western, were at one time considered by the government to be practically contiguous to the said railway, gives the public some idea of the wide interpretation that can be placed upon legal phraseology by the government when sufficient weight is brought to bear upon its members. The present bill supporting the order in council to rescind the reserve will doubtless safe-guard the interests of the people but it must be remembered that it does not exonerate the members of the Dunsmuir government who on Sept. 7th, 1901 set aside these rich lands for the Columbia and Western.

Since writing the above a despatch is to hand from Ottawa, intimating that the budget speech has announced no change in the existing tariff on lead, but in view of the importance and present condition of the industry the Government are prepared to consider the increasing of the existing bonus. This will doubtless be satisfactory to Smith Curtis, but those more directly connected with the industry are firmly convinced that this form of aid will not meet the requirements of the case, as it is protection against cheap importation that is most needed.

THE STREET MEETING

On Monday evening a street-corner socialistic-political harangue took place at the instigation of C. M. O'Brien who was aided in his project by a few socialistic friends The indefiniteness of the handwritten notices caused some little curiosity which drew a hundred people or more to the place, but when it was learned that the meeting was merely for the purpose of airing socialistic doctrines before people who would not attend the league meetings many left in disgust.

We believe in many of the principles underlying true Socialism but after listening to the extravagant, ultra radical views expressed by the speakers at this meeting we must confess to a weakening of that faith. It would appear from some of the remarks uttered at this meeting, (we were mercifully spared from hearing it all) that the chief object of socialism was to "kick". At the outset we were given to understand that the meeting was called for the purpose of expressing indignation at the course pursued by the Stipendiary Magistrate in trying the cases of those charged with being mixed up in the mob violence recently, but it soon became apparent that everything and everybody not socialistic was marked for abuse and ridicule.

We are not disposed to devote time and space for a report of what was said. Nine tenths of it was abuse of a most unjustifiable nature and the other tenth was culled from socialistic literature to which we all have free access; but in a few sentences we can give our readers a brief idea of what our socialistic friends would have. They oppose the manner in which justice is administered in this town, and compare the American system of electing judges. The comparison is intolerable to the Canadian people. They speak against the Christian religion and thereby slash themselves with what really is their keenest weapon of defence. They would abolish the merchants because they seek to make a living profit on their goods. The conciliation commission is heaped with ignominy because by reason of persistent application of common sense and fairness they were able to bring a disastrous strike to an end, thereby rendering futile the agitating efforts of the speakers. Mr. Foley, as an acknowledged champion of the labor party, is particularly selected for abuse because he did not hold out against his best judgement and according to their story the whole settlement is based on treachery. The terms of settlement is criticised either by men who are not affected directly by the settlement or by men discredited in the service. Extravagant ideas on the wage question are freely expressed. $6 per day is not good wages and $20 per day is not too much. Abuse is measured out in generous doses to the press of the country and two papers only in B.C. are worthy of an honest man's support. It is needless to be added that these papers are socialistic. The FREE PRESS incidentally is raked over the coals because it does not devote its entire columns to the advancement of their pet theory. The capitalist does not escape their contumely. In fact at every stage no opportunity is lost to heap abusive criticism upon these, who with their capital are developing our country and finding employment for all who want work. Fault is found because some squander their money and live in huts, while others by reason of industry live in better dwellings. The Athletic Association is censured for electing as its honorary president Fernie's most prominent citizen.

And thus we might go on and cite many more childish arguments put forth at that meeting. None but those who positively dislike work can listen with patience to such doctrines. It is hardly necessary to touch on the political aspect of the meeting, which, after all, was its real purpose. The public is ably qualified to discriminate between actions which have for their object the welfare of all, and those which are prompted by personal ambitions. Self ambition cannot so easily be mistaken for self sacrifice.

A Mother's Recommendation

I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a number of years and have no hesitancy in saying that it is the best remedy for coughs, colds and croup I have ever used in my family. Infringement of a Trade Mark

In an action in the High Court of Justice for Ontario, recently tried before Chancellor Boyd, at Toronto, the Slater Shoe Co., and Chas. E. Slater, president of Montreal, makers of the famous Slater Shoe, obtained a judgment forever restraining F. C. Wilkinson, a boot and shoe dealer, of Owen Sound, from advertising, exposing, or offering for sale or selling boots or shoes not made by the Slater Shoe Co., as "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods" or the Slater Shoe." The Chancellor, also ordered Wilkinson to pay the heavy costs of the action. The Chancellor, after hearing the evidence, decided that no one except the Slater Shoe Co., had a right to use the name "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods," "The Slater Shoe," or any similar names in connection with boots and shoes, and that Wilkinson had no right to use any name or names in connection with boots and shoes which might enable him to pass of a shoe not of the company's make, as being of their make, nor in any way to reap the benefit of the reputation which the Slater Shoe has acquired throughout the Dominion of Canada.

The Genuine Slater

Is positively the best shoe value offered for sale in Canada. You may include the United States and that will pretty near cover the world for fine shoe making. There are shoes sold elsewhere at $4 50 and $6 a pair that carry no more style, are no better fitting and will not wear as well as the genuine Slater Shoe at $4. "Why is it?" you ask. "Just because they are branded with an American stamp."

J. H. Scott, the popular despatcher at Cranbrook, has accepted a better position on the Canadian Northern. Mr. Scott is a general favorite along the Crow line.

The lumber shipments to the prairie over the Crow line are rapidly increasing. At the present time they average over 20 cars per day. Fernie is contributing its share.

E. Wriglesworth has the contract for 150 ovens at Michel, not 125 as stated last week. Mr. Alexander will build 100 and probably 50 more will be added to this number.

Workmen are being sent here by the C.P.R. in considerable numbers, recently a car load of Italians arrived to work on the track as extras. The will be employed between here and the Loop.

The B. C. Furniture Co. offers this week some special bargains in new second hand furniture and household goods in first-class condition equal to new which was bought during the strike at forced sale. x

The services at Christ Church will be held as follows on Sunday next: Matins and Holy Communion, 11 a.m.; Sunday School, 2:30 p.m.: Evensong, 7:30. All are earnestly invited. Collection in aid of Church expenses.

Fourteen Swedes direct from the old land arrived on Thursday. They came in charge of Peter Molander a special foreman of the C. P. R. These men start to work to-day for the railway company. There were 19 in the gang until they reached Moosomin and at that point five jumped their contract, and the party came on without them.

The banquet to be given on April 30th to the visiting members of the First District Meeting of the East Kootenai Methodist church promises to be a great success. A most interesting program of toasts to be given with musical numbers interspersed through them, has been prepared. A large number of tickets has been sold and a very enjoyable time is expected.

Mr. G. G. Henderson, the founder of the FERNIE FREE PRESS and for three years a citizen of the town, arrived from his home in Sarnia, Ont., on Tuesday evening and has since been renewing acquaintances and looking after his business interests here. He intends leaving this evening for Southern California, where he will spend some time with a brother resident there.

Mr. Geo. Martin returned from South Africa recently where he has been employed by W. R. Wilson. He brought with him two souvenir walking sticks of unique design made by the natives. These canes are covered with fine bead work of various colors as to almost hide the entire surface of the wood. Mr. Martin presented his old friend, W. W. Tuttle, with one of these novel canes. We understand Mr. Martin leaves shortly for Pennsylvania.

Lacrosse Meeting

Another attempt is to be made to have a lacrosse meeting next week. All interested in this popular sport are requested to attend a meeting in the rear of Mr. Cuthbert's store at 8:30 Tuesday evening. The other clubs are ready to arrange a schedule and it is necessary to appoint a Fernie delegate at once.

Chinaman Died

The Chinaman who had his leg crushed and horribly mangled while working at the Michel tipple died this week in the Fernie hospital. The Doctors could have saved his life had the chinaman and his friends allowed them to amputate the limb. Chinamen are very superstitious on this point and the laws of China prohibit the return of anyone so deformed. When it became apparent to the friends of the injured man that he could not live and retain his limb they consented to the operation, but it was too late and he died shortly after of blood poisoning.

Another Hotel License

N. Garreau has been granted a hotel license. This case was adjourned some time ago and it came up again before the Commission at a regular meeting at Moyie yesterday. Several went up from Fernie on the case, besides Commissioners Burn and Whimster there went up Messrs. S. Herchmer, Garreau, Chenette and Short, the latter to oppose the license being granted. As the train was late yesterday it was impossible to get the business through in time to catch the East bound express and the Fernie people had to stay over until to-day. Last evening a wire was sent stating that the license was granted.

Did Not Materialize

R. A. McMordie spent Easter in Macleod. He went down to attend a meeting of the foot-ball league delegates which was called for Saturday. Frank was the only other town represented and the meeting did not materialize. The Macleod foot-ball club has had a split and will not likely be in it this year. Since returning Mr. McMordie has received a communication from Frank suggesting a meeting at that town for the 20th, and this was immediately agreed upon by the local club. Pincher Creek is opposed to entering a league which include such distant towns as Macleod and Fernie.

Death of Miss Leitch

To the many Fernie friends of Miss Emma Leitch the news of her death came as a shock this week. The deceased was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Leitch, of Cranbrook, and she was well and favorably known in Fernie. Some time ago she was attacked with tuberculosis and on the advise of her physician she went to Lethbridge to live, but slowly and surely, despite the greatest care on the part of her friends, her young life wasted away and she died on Saturday morning at the age of 22 yrs. The funeral took place at Cranbrook on Monday, Rev. Fortune, of the Presbyterian church in charge.

The Passing of Winter

After a hard struggle grim winter has been forced to relax his firm hold upon us and his long six months' reign is at an end. Slowly but surely, inch by inch, the snow banks are disappearing and the ground is almost bare. As the ground was almost free from frost all winter owing to its heavy coating of snow, it has taken up the water as the snow melted and in consequence very little inconvenience has been experienc- from mud and slush. The robins, the harbingers of spring, are here, and judging from the beautiful weather and the date on the calendar they have not appeared prematurely this year.

Harold Nelson Show

The Harold Nelson Company arrived from the east on Wednesday and gave two performances. On Wednesday they played "The Merchant of Venice" to a good house and on Thursday evening "Ingomar" was presented to a somewhat smaller house. Herald Nelson is, as expected, the strongest actor in the company. As Shylock and as Ingomar he admirably held up the strong features of these plays but he was not well supported throughout by the other members of the show. The scenery was fair, for a travelling show, and in fact the whole performance, viewed in that light, was a moderate success.

☞See Mitchell's Boer's Blood pattern for your spring suitings.

Fire Meeting Adjourned

The fire meeting called for Wednesday evening did not materialize, only about twenty people turning out and few of these being merchants. The evening selected was an unfortunate one as many were attending other meetings. After waiting for some time for the crowd to come an adjournment until next Monday was adopted. The meeting would have been well attended had it not adjourned so early as many planned to go later in the evening. The meeting called for Monday evening should be better attended. Joyce's hall has been secured for the occasion and the hour of 8:00 has been set for the meeting. See posters.

Chief McMullin took a run down to Cranbrook yesterday.

A. J. Mott made a business trip to Wardner on Wednesday.

J. A. Arnold of Cranbrook made a business trip to town this week.

Miss Ross left on Tuesday for Macleod where she will visit friends.

Dr. and Mrs. McSorley were up from Michel this week to attend the Easter ball.

Mrs. Whitney, of Lethbridge, was visiting Mrs. Brown a couple of days this week.

Mrs. McPhail, Miss Rhynas and Mr. J. H. Farmer of Frank came to town on Monday.

H. Bentley came in from a trip to Macleod, Lethbridge and other prairie towns on Monday.

R. W. Macpherson of Toronto, accountant of the C. N. P. Coal Company is in town this week.

Rev. S. J. Thompson of Cranbrook came to Fernie to participate in church services in the Methodist church.

Mr. A. Colclough went down to Pincher Creek this week to work on his ranch at that place. He will remain there for the summer.

Mr. W. W. Tuttle recently learned of the marriage of his son, Earnest, in South Africa, where he has a remunerative position.

W. J. Blundell returned from his trip to the prairie on Sunday. He reports times at Calgary and other points as being very bright.

A new line of go-carts from $2.50 to $25 special values for spring trade is on exhibition in the show windows of the B. C. Furniture Co. x

We greatly regret mistake in our last issue in announcing the date of Miss Dunlop's marriage. It should have read, Wednesday April 22nd.

A. M. Grimes went up to Creston on Wednesday to look after the purchasing of some agricultural land at that place. Mr. Grimes is making preparations for going into the poultry business on a large scale.

D. J. Dewar of Nelson, District agent of the Great West Life Assurance Co. passed through town this week and spent a day in town. He says that everything is booming in West Kootenay now since the strike is off.

A. C. Liphardt has received a beautiful new set of show-cases for his jewellry store. His new line of cut glass is set off very nicely by it. He has introduced a process of sand-blowing letters on cut glass which is very rare and pretty.

The Oddfellows of Fernie will attend an Anniversary Ceremony at the Presbyterian church on Sunday April 26th at at 3:30 p.m. Members are requested to meet in Joyces Hall at 3 p.m. sharp. All members of the order are cordially invited to attend. 223-2 t

Notices have been posted about town announcing a meeting in the court house on May 8th for the purpose of electing three persons to be fire wardens for the town of Fernie. Should a poll be required it will be held from eleven o'clock till one o'clock.

The marriage of Mr. Stephen Hamilton Hoskins, of Kimberley, to Miss Margaret Hilda Ward, third daughter of the late Rev. P. G. Ward, vicar of Braughing, Herts, is announced to take place next Tuesday. Miss Ward arrived on Wednesday and is the guest of Mrs. L. R. Forbes.

Vote of Thanks

The Greenwood Board of Trade recently showed its appreciation of the work of the Conciliation Commission and Mr. Dougherty by unanimously adopting this resolution. That this board hereby places on record its earnest appreciation of the timely and valuable services rendered at Fernie, B. C., by Messrs. John Keen, A. C. Flumerfelt, Chris Foley, W. C. Gaunce, F. Keffer, M. P. McAndrew and H. G. Seaman, members of the conciliation committee of the Provincial Mining Association of British Columbia, and Mr. George F. Daugherty president of District No. 6 W. F. of M., in bringing about a settlement of the recent labor troubles at the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company's collieries and in arranging between the company and the miners' union an agreement that bids fair to ensure to the copper mines and smelters of the Boundary district over a comparatively long period the regular and sufficient supply of fuel necessary for their continuous operation. And this board hereby tenders its hearty congratulations and sincere thanks to those who, despite many discouragements worked patiently and persistently until eventually their arduous labors were crowned with success, to their own credit and the great and lasting advantage of the important mining and smelting industry of this the leading copper producing district in the Dominion of Canada.

The secretary was instructed to send a copy of the foregoing resolution to each member of the conciliation committee and to George F. Dougherty.

MY HEART'S DARLING

BY W. HEIMBURG.

"I am so frightened, so confused!" stammered Lucie.

"You have simply done what was right," interrupted Hortense, and pressed her gently down into an armchair. "Drink a glass of wine; you are weak. And now let us be good comrades. I vow to you that, come what may, if God will, we will never part again; we have both had enough of this so-called happiness—how is that?"

Lucie shook her head; her teeth chattered as if she had a chill.

"But, child, how did it happen? I beg of you do not disturb yourself so much. You can stretch out your little finger if you repent of what you have done, and you can have him again."

The girl put up her hand as if to decline, but drank the wine which Hortense held to her lips. A leaden weight of fatigue seemed to be in all her muscles. She heard as if in a dream, and noticed that a second bed was brought into Hortense's sleeping-room, and felt the silk cover spread over her. A soft white hand tucked her in, and a pair of soft lips pressed hers.

"Sleep well. We will be together all the time."

"All the time," repeated the girl, and fell asleep.

* * * * * *

Dr. Adler wrote that same evening to Lucie's sister. He begged her not to scold Lucie, and particularly to beg her husband to be gentle. He was conscious that he himself was somewhat to blame for the girl's changed feelings; he was afraid he was not enough of a lady's man, and Lucie had not known him well enough when she gave him her promise, and that again was partly his fault. Thirdly and lastly, he feared his mother had not received her with the affection and warmth that she should have done — because she had had other plans for him, and that had naturally wounded such a sensitive nature. He had felt sure, however, that with their marriage all these differences would have been smoothed. Now that it had turned out differently, he only begged that the girl should be taken back to her old home.

He said nothing in the letter of his own wounded feelings; he only excused her. When he had sealed the letter he took it himself to the post, and then walked as coolly as usual into his mother' sitting-room.

"Lucie wishes to be excused," he said, without any preamble. "She has gone to Frau von Lowen's."

"Oh, of course!" interrupted the old lady, who was still in her coffee-party splendor; she had just returned, and stood before the looking-glass taking off her lace cap.

"Where she will remain until she returns to her relatives," he added. And as a pair of astonished and speechless faces stared at him, he continued: "Rike can take the necessary things over to her." And as the same speechless silence reigned, he added impatiently as he went out of the door: "Lucie has taken back her promise to me."

"She!—to you?" cried his mother. "The other way, do you not mean?"

"No; I regret to say it is she. I had never thought of such a thing. Excuse me, I have some work to do."

He left the ladies alone with this news, bolted the door behind him, and sat a long time in the corner of the sofa in the dark. Suddenly he sprung up and lighted a lamp, and the lamp-light shone on some large tears on his eyelashes. He dried them awkwardly; they were the first tears he had shed since his childhood. He took out the little ring which she had worn and shut it up in a drawer in which he had mementoes of all kinds—his father's gold snuff-box, pipe-bowls from his happy student life, and his diaries. Then he drew the lamp nearer to an open magazine and tried to read. He sat a long time and stared at it without having any idea of what he had before him.

CHAPTER XIII.

Two days after this a couple of large traveling trunks stood in Frau von Lowen's bedroom, and her maid was taking the simple, elegant dresses of her mistress out of the wardrobe and laying them in the trunks; on every chair was something to be packed—gloves, books, papers, portfolios, opera-glasses. Lucie knelt before her basket trunk, which had been brought over the evening before by Rike with the help of the washerwoman, and looked listlessly at the things which had been hurriedly thrown into it, but did not touch them. She looked pale and worn.

"What shall I take with me?" she asked the young baroness.

"Not too much. You must allow me, on account of our friendship, to take you to my tailor in Berlin. It shall not be much; but you must have a traveling dress and one for the table d'hote. You could not travel in that light cotton dress."

"Ah, Hortense, leave me here; all this makes me feel badly!"

EFFECT OF THIRTY SIDES

By Richard Kann

Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company

Harrington had gone up spasmodically from small parts to leads. While he was playing in stock on the way up he had written a play. Of course the play was never produced. And about that time Harrington began to come down. His coming down had not been spasmodic. It had been certain and sure as fate. He seemed, however, able to hold a position as stage door keeper. He could be scared into coming around on time for successive weeks by the threat that he would be assigned to the billposter's forces.

And he was only thirty-five. Sometimes when he became very bad he would mumble something about "Eleanor." But mumblings about "Eleanor" didn't excuse his condition to Buscoe, who believed that there was no reason on earth good enough to keep a man away from the theater later than 7:30 and no trouble great enough to need an extended stay along a bar rail to drown it.

So Harrington, with all his brilliancy, all his artistic training and his wonderful mind that could absorb thirty sides in a night, got finally to be a back door keeper. It was only because he never attempted to excuse his conduct that Buscoe kept him at all. He was merely penitent after one of his periodical attacks.

And Harrington was the back door keeper when the company moved into New York for a run. He stood, book in hand, checking the company as it arrived for a rehearsal a day before the opening. Harrington got the note, with a doctor's certificate inclosed, telling that Temple, the leading man, had brain fever. He turned pale as he read it. He was that kind of a back door keeper.

Buscoe didn't turn pale, but every one who heard what he said a minute later did.

"Send a boy to the manager," he ordered. "Tell him Temple can't possibly go on tomorrow night. Tell him that unless he wants me to use a bad understudy we'll have to postpone the opening."

Harrington came over to him. "I haven't sent the boy yet," he said. "You know I can get up in that part by tomorrow night. Maybe they wouldn't know Temple wasn't playing it. If you'll let me"— He looked wistfully at Buscoe.

"You could, you know," said Buscoe kindly, "but it's too important. They've been banking on this New York opening. A set of good notices will carry them the rest of the season, and I'd rather postpone than take any chances."

Harrington went mechanically back to the door. Buscoe held the company until he heard from headquarters. "Use the understudy," said the note. "Can't possibly postpone."

Buscoe walked over to the call board. "Company called for all day rehearsal at 8 o'clock tomorrow," he wrote.

"Now, Harrington," he said kindly, "you take this part to my hotel and begin on it. If you're letter perfect by tomorrow morning, you go on in Temple's place. At 4 o'clock this afternoon I'll come over. We'll work on it all night."

* * * * * * *

The hotel people wondered next morning what had been going on in "42" during the night. Two men had left at 7:30 in the morning with a bar bill of $2 for black coffee. It had gone up regularly every thirty minutes since 4 o'clock. Around on the walls were pinned strips of paper with meaningless sentences written upon them. They took them down and read them curiously. They seemed to be passages chosen broadcast from a book.

They would have understood if they had known that the process of cramming thirty sides of typewritten manuscript into the brain of a man means that the brain must be stimulated with something and that strong coffee is the only harmless thing that will do it. They didn't know that a man's brain sometimes refuses to memorize past a certain amount, but that it will receive impressions of things seen. That was why some of the speeches Harrington couldn't get, although they were repeated to him endlessly, were written on strips of paper, pinned on the walls and stared at him through the night until they sank into his mind.

Buscoe had been cruelly insistent, but his methods had won out. Harrington, haggard and brain weary, went through the 8 o'clock rehearsal with but few hitches. Then Buscoe ran them through again and dismissed them at 12:30 with orders to report at 4 for a dress rehearsal. He dragged Harrington back to the hotel and again sent him over the part, this time with the business included.

He went on that night almost crazed. Forty-eight hours without sleep and not much nourishment but black coffee did it, but in his brain were the thirty sides.

He played the three acts without a break, and he played them as Harrington could when he wanted to. But his big scene didn't come until the fourth. It was strongly written and intensely emotional. It depicted a final parting from the woman he loved, in a set lighted by blue borders, with the foots low. The exit of the leading woman was the cue for the first speech.

Buscoe, all attention, stood in the side entrance as Harrington began. He was playing it low, but fiercely, acting it beautifully. He had the audience breathless. Suddenly Buscoe felt for the curtain signal.

"Heavens!" he said under his breath. "He's way off the text."

Out in the weird light of the blue borders Harrington raved on. Not a line he spoke had even been in the manuscript, but he talked of a parting from a woman. He was horribly earnest, and instead of cursing the woman he cursed himself. Buscoe jammed the signal. The big drop began to slide. Just then Harrington reeled across the stage and fell in a queer heap. The drop came down with a thud within a foot of his face.

Then from out in front came roar upon roar of applause. "They didn't know he was off," thought Buscoe.

"Harrington," he almost yelled, "get up! I'm going to give you a call alone!"

But Harrington was past curtain calls. They carried him to a dressing room and tucked him comfortably on a couch.

He was asleep when the woman asked for him. She was too well dressed to be asking for a man like Harrington, Buscoe thought. Still, he asked himself, how did she know that Harrington was on the bill? The programme said "Temple."

"Nobody here by that name," he told her.

"I know he is," she said quietly. "I was in the audience. I am Miss Burton. I have known Mr. Harrington a very long time."

"Are you 'Eleanor?'" asked Buscoe quickly.

"Yes," she said softly.

When he awakened, she was beside him. So was Buscoe. But Buscoe left at once. He only knew that when Harrington awakened and saw her beside him he seemed to take everything for granted.

She came out a little later and asked that some breakfast be sent in to him. "He will be able to act tonight, he says," she told Buscoe. "He'll tell you about us when you go in."

"I gather," said Buscoe, trying to be diplomatic, "that you are what ailed him."

"But I didn't know it," she replied, "until last night."

Breakfast For One.

That keen observer of nature, John Muir, tells in "Our National Parks" a pretty story of a woodchuck. In the spring of 1875 he was exploring the peaks and glaciers about the head of the middle fork of the San Joaquin and when passing round a frozen lake where the snow was ten feet deep was surprised to find the fresh track of a woodchuck.

What could the animal be thinking of to come out so early while all the ground was snow buried? The steady direction of his track showed he had a definite aim, and fortunately it was toward a mountain 13,000 feet high that I meant to climb. So I followed to see if I could find out what he was up to.

From the base of the mountain the track pointed straight up, and I knew by the melting snow that I was not far behind him. I lost the track on a crumbling ridge, partly projecting through the snow, but soon discovered it again.

Toward the summit of the mountain, in an open spot on the south side, nearly inclosed by disintegrating pinnacles among which the sun heat reverberated, making an isolated patch of warm climate, I found a fine garden full of rock cress, phlox, silene, draba and a few grasses, and in this garden I overtook the wanderer, enjoying a fine fresh meal, perhaps the first of the season.

How did he know the way to this one garden spot, so high and so far off, and what told him that it was in bloom while yet the snow was ten feet deep over his den? He must have had more botanical, topographical and climatological knowledge than most mountaineers possess.

He Went.

"I'm afraid I'll have to charge you full fare for that boy, madam," said the ticket agent as he issued a ticket to a sharp featured Boston woman of middle age and held out his hand for the additional fare.

"What for?" she asked.

"He is more than twelve years old."

"Ain't you Tom Sanders that used to live in Greenwich about eight years ago?" inquired the woman, eying him.

"Yes, but why?"

"Used to buy your tea and sugar of Widder Jones?"

"I believe I did."

"I'm the Widder Jones. Recollect the last lot of groceries you had of me—those you promised to pay for in ten days?"

"Why, Mrs. Jones, didn't I—didn't I"—

"Those groceries, Mr. Sanders, ain't been paid for yet, and this boy lacked about a month of being twelve years old when you got them. Does he go?"

"He goes, madam," said the agent as he gave her a half ticket, with a sickly smile. "The boy is probably large for his age."

An Article Balzac Didn't Write.

Balzac was once asked by a French publisher to write an article on the Rue Richelieu. He named his terms, which today would not seem excessive, but the publisher considered them outrageous, whereupon Balzac replied: "If I am to describe the Rue Richelieu in a way worthy of the street and of myself, I must know it thoroughly and must not upon any account fail to investigate all that specially characterizes it. I shall have to commence by lunching at the Cafe Cardinal; then I must buy a gun and a cravat pin at the two shops next door to each other. After that I must go to the tailor's at the corner of the Rue St. Marc"— "Oh, don't go any farther than that," interrupted the publisher in alarm. "You would come to the Indian shop next, and things there are a fabulous price!"

"Made in Canada"

Just because a shoe is "made in Canada" should I wear it.

Yes and no.

Not if foreign shoes are better and cost equal or less money.

Yes, if Canadian shoes are as good or better for equal money.

The Canadian Government extracts 25 per cent. of the value of all imported shoes—therefore United States made shoes are priced higher in Canada than in the States.

Now, it is admitted that Canadian-made "Slater Shoes" are equal to United States shoes at equal or higher prices.

Because they are made by the same rapid action, accurate process (the Goodyear welt) as the best United States shoes—in the only factory in Canada which has made for seven years an exclusive specialty of Goodyear welt shoes.

Product of specializing:—"British wear, United States style—made in Canada."

Price branded by the makers.

"The Slater Shoe"

Made in Canada 40 Years.
For Men, $4.00 and $5.50.
For Women, $3.50 and $5.00.
For Boys, $2.50 to $3.50.

MACHINATIONS OF BOBS

By LOUISE LAMPRAY

Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company

"Why, I don't know, Bobby. What would you like to name him?" From under her filmy gray parasol Fairfax Browne regarded her son with a look grave in its perplexity. Bobs adored his pretty mother because she never laughed at him; also because she had big blue eyes and a mass of fluffy red gold hair precisely like a princess in a fairy tale. Therefore, as a matter of course, the pepper and salt terrier was brought to her to be christened.

"Call him Rags," suggested Captain Frederick Lawton, the navy officer, who chanced that morning to be attendant. This had happened so often of late that dowagers were beginning to suggest in penetrating undertones that if dear Mrs. Browne were really thinking of marrying again she could not do better than to take Captain Lawton, suitable in age, good looking and quite independent of his profession. And every one knew that Mrs. Browne had but little besides that ramshackle old plantation in Louisiana, or was it Maryland?

Bobs had overheard one or two of these suggestions and, revolving them in his seven-year-old brain, had come to the conclusion that something portentous was impending. This or something else made him regard Captain Lawton's suggestion with vague disfavor.

"I don't like that," he said shortly. "It might seem disrespectful, you know."

He turned a sturdy blue back on them and trudged off, with the meek terrier under his arm. Presently came in sight a fresh faced young subaltern.

"Hello, Bobs! Where are you going with—what's his name?"

"He hasn't got any yet," said Bobby soberly. "That old Captain Lawton said to call him Rags, but I shan't. How would he feel if his father had named him Rags, I'd like to know?"

"That is a question which Captain Lawton has probably never considered," answered Charteris gravely. "But you might call this little beggar after General Kitchener."

"Is General Kitchener a great soldier?"

"The greatest next to Bobs," averred the lieutenant. And that settled it. Henceforth it was Bobs and Kitchener to all the American colony.

Meanwhile, as the gossips had surmised, Bobs' mother was pondering in the remote depths of her subconsciousness the question of accepting Captain Lawton. There were times when she felt a longing for the home and position which he could give her. It would be home for Bobby, too—Bobby, who looked at her with his big, honest, adoring gray eyes, so like his father's. But, curiously enough, as often as those eyes met hers she felt a strong distaste for Lawton, with his precise speech and immaculate uniform.

She had no idea that Bobby was also considering the merits of a prospective stepfather, but he was.

"Mr. Charteris," he said one day, "you aren't married, are you?"

Charteris blushed all over his boyish face. "Not yet," he said.

"Because," said Bobby with deliberation, "I've been thinkin' it over, and I believe I'd rather have you for a father than anybody that's here now."

Charteris gasped. "It's very good of you, I'm sure," he said, smothering an impulse to laugh, "but your mother might have something to say about that."

"Pooh! She wouldn't mind," said Bobby superbly. "She'd like you any amount better than that old navy captain. My father was a cav'lry off'cer, and his sword's hangin' up in the libr'y at home. I'm goin' to wear it when I grow up, but I won't be in the navy. A man's no good 'less he can ride."

Bobby's tone was that of long settled conviction, and in his heart Charteris, subaltern of hussars, with a medal won in Africa, may have agreed with him. At any rate, when he made a third that day in a group otherwise consisting of Mrs. Browne and Captain Lawton the latter inwardly cursed the inclination of the subaltern to talk of cross country hunts in England, rough riding on the plains and wild dashes over the African karroo. All the more violent was his emotion as he saw the rare color come into Fairfax Browne's face.

"He was the best rider I ever saw," Charteris said at the conclusion of one of his stories, "a big, gypsy looking chap—one of those men who don't seem to come from any place in particular, though I believe he was born in New York; chap that was always sure to do great things some day, by Jove!"

Charteris' eye had fallen on a paragraph in the paper on his knee.

"What is it?" inquired Mrs. Browne, interested.

"The very man. He's in Brighton—just back from South Africa."

Nobody noticed that as the group separated Bobby secured the newspaper and studied it carefully.

Arrived at the hotel, he begged the clerk for a sheet of paper, an envelope and a stamp and, producing a stubby pencil from his trousers pocket, composed a letter, sitting on the back veranda, while Kitchener made love to the cook. When the letter was done, he addressed it in a scrawly but distinct hand to "Mr. Edward Wharton, Brighton, England."

The letter ran as follows:

Dear Mr. Wharton—Mr. Chartris told about you and I like you my father was a cavlry officer to and I dont like the navy one bit and I dont want a navy man for my new father

I think Kickner and Id rather have you if youd like it Im sure Mama and you would be grate friends Yours with love

ROBERT FAIRFAX BROWNE.

"By Jove!" said Wharton, and he threw back his head and laughed—a splendid, ringing laugh that consorted well with the gleam of his white teeth in the dusk of his beard and the flash of his deepset dark eyes. "This is certainly uncommon. It must be Charteris of the hussars, and—let's see; that's a Scheveningen hotel. I'd like to see the boy again. I'll run over there after I've been to London."

Some days later Bobs and Kitchener took it into their heads to play in an empty boat. Kitchener found the boat, and Bobs led the way into it. Then it gently parted company with the land and drifted away. The place was almost deserted at that time of day, and Bobby, half frightened, half elate, held his peace, wondering if it would be manly to call for help. A sudden gust of wind struck the craft, and somehow or other the two went over the side just as Captain Lawton and Mrs. Browne came strolling along the pier.

Mrs. Browne gave a cry of terror. "It's Bobby!" she exclaimed.

A moment's hesitation was all that saved Captain Lawton's immaculate garb, and in that instant a huge, swift moving form went by them, dropped into the water with a tremendous splash and swam with strong, assured strokes toward the dots in the water.

It was all over in a minute, and Mrs. Browne, all regardless of soft silk draperies and floating laces, had Bobby in her arms, and Lieutenant Charteris, who had come running up, was saying:

"'Pon my word, Bobs, you and Kitchener"—

Then his eye fell upon the rescuer, and he broke his sentence off in the middle to grab the hand of the big, tall, very wet man who had dropped his traveling bag to take an impromptu swim. There were introductions and handshakings and tears. When Bobby heard the name of Wharton, he stared round eyed, and when Wharton heard the name of Bobby he, too, said, "Upon my word!" to himself.

Perhaps all this had something to do with the fact that when on the following evening Captain Lawton came for his final answer to his suit the pretty widow knew her own mind and answered him with a gentle but decided "No."

At about the same time Wharton was confessing frankly to his friend Charteris that he was bowled over for the first time in his life, and would there be any chance for him? That naval officer, you know—

Charteris grinned. "I don't think you need worry about him," said he. "Go in, old chap, and here's luck."

The rapidity of Wharton's courtship shocked the whole place. It was not more than six weeks after his first appearance that he was walking in the twilight with a charming, gay gowned dame, and she was saying in that delicious soft voice of hers:

"But it wasn't all what you did that first day, Edward, though I'd have been friends forever with any one who had saved Bobby's life. It was just that you were you, and—don't you think it was fate?"

"I think," said Wharton, with a twinkle in his eye, "that it was the machinations of Bobs."

And then he told her.

The Lucifer Match.

It is to Mr. Isaac Holden, member of parliament, that we owe the invention of the lucifer match. This discovery was, he himself has told us, the result of a happy thought. "In the morning I used to get up at 4 o'clock in order to pursue my studies, and I used at that time the flint and steel, the use of which I found a very great inconvenience. Of course I knew, as other chemists did, the explosive material that was necessary in order to produce instantaneous light, but it was very difficult to obtain a light on wood by that explosive material, and the idea occurred to me to put sulphur under the explosive mixture. I did that and showed it in my next lecture on chemistry, a course of which I was delivering at a large academy.

"There was," added Mr. Holden, "a young man in the room whose father was a chemist in London, and he immediately wrote to his father about it, and shortly afterward lucifer matches were issued to the world. I believe that was the first occasion that we had the present lucifer match. I was urged to go and take out a patent immediately, but I thought it was so small a matter and it cost me so little labor that I did not think it proper to go and get a patent; otherwise I have no doubt it would have been very profitable."

By One Arm.

"It is a matter of surprise to me," remarked a man who is a keen observer, recently, "that half the children of this country do not grow up minus an arm."

"But wherefore?" asked the person to whom he was speaking.

"Here is an illustration," continued the first speaker. "Do you see that woman walking with a little child? Now, notice her when she crosses the street."

At the crossing the woman lifted the child by one arm. It dangled in the air, and its feet did not touch the earth until it was across the street, when the mother dropped it on the sidewalk.

"Well, the arm held, didn't it?"

"But," continued the philosopher, "I was afraid at one time it would be wrenched from its socket. Now, that is a sight you can witness every hour in the day—mothers dragging children out of street cars, across the streets or up a flight of stairs by one arm. I wonder how the mothers would like it if a being four times as large as themselves should suddenly swoop down and lift them by one arm. I'd like to see it tried once, I just would."

Cats and the Weather.

Several weather forecasts may be drawn by the observant from the actions of a cat. When she is seen to clean herself behind the ears with her wet paw you may expect rain. Sailors, too, tell us the frolics of a cat on board ship portend a storm.

RIOTS IN ROME.

ITALIAN CITY OCCUPIED BY MILITARY.

Social Unrest is Felt in Europe, and Big Strikes are in Progress in Holland, Spain, Italy, and Russia—Thirty Killed in Russia.

A dispatch from Rome, dated April 9, says: The strikers have succeeded in gathering in threatening numbers on the Corso Vittorio Emanuelo, almost in the centre of the city. The troops charged, fired three times and dispersed the rioters. About a dozen men were wounded. Order has been re-established, but the city is still occupied by the military. The general strike continues and many arrests have been made.

The aspect of Rome was completely changed early today. The gay, crowded city of yesterday seemed dead. No cabs passed through the streets, and even the street cars, which ran at long intervals, were escorted by police and were almost empty, as the people feared to ride in them on account of threats of the strikers. The overcast sky added melancholy to the scene. The shops were open, but shutters were up as the proprietors intended to be ready for any eventuality. They were apprehensive of rioting and feared as on other occasions their windows would be smashed. The whole city was occupied by troops. Detachments of cavalry were posted on the squares and special details of soldiers and police were stationed about the Vatican, so as to prevent any attempt against the papal palace.

Foreigners continue to fly from Rome, but many of them cannot get away, as they are far from the railroad station, no cabs are available and the hotel omnibusses can carry only a limited number of passengers. If the strike continues and all the foreigners leave the city, it is said that the boarding house keepers will lose on an average $16,000 daily. Unimportant encounters between the strikers and troops took place during the morning, the former wishing to hold meetings, which were forbidden, or reach the centre of the eity, but the strikers were easily dispersed by cavalry charges, which were scarcely necessary.

THIRTY STRIKERS KILLED.

A dispatch from St. Petersburg says thirty persons have been killed and that one hundred were injured during labor disturbances near Nishni Novgored.

The disturbance occurred at a large factory. As the local civil authorities were unable to restore order, the troops were called out and artillery was brought up. The latter fired point blank into the midst of the rioters, killing thirty men and wounding a hundred.

MOBILIZING THE MARINES.

A dispatch from Amsterdam says the government of the Netherlands has ordered the mobilization of all the marines, and that three warships at Denhelder have been ordered to be in readiness for immediate service. About 10,000 men are idle in Amsterdam alone. No flour is being delivered there, and bread and other food wagons are escorted by mounted troops.

The workmen's defence committee has decided to proclaim a general strike of all the trades throughout the country.

Honored by the King.

A cable from Edinburgh, April 8, says: There was a curious scene at a meeting here today called to make preparations for the forthcoming visit of King Edward to Scotland. Several of the local Scottish officials refused to have anything to do with welcoming his majesty until he shall have dropped the title of Edward VII.

The objectors protested that the title is an insult to Scotland. They added that judging from the addresses he received at Lisbon, even the King himself seemed to realize that he was only king of England.

Considerable uproar prevailed, but the meeting ultimately refused to listen any further to the malcontents.

Novel Electrical Invention.

Mr. Alexander McMartin Stark, superintendent in Toronto for the Bell Telephone company, has patented a novel scheme by means of which a subscriber may be furnished with electric light, power and communication over the same circuit.

In carrying out the purpose of the invention Mr. Stark uses a power current transmitted over the main power circuit distributed at each subscriber's station to the subscriber's main circuit to furnish him continuously with power for lamps, motors and communication. Instruments maintain the power current at constant tension by a storage battery bridged across the main power circuit between the generator and the subscriber.

He has resigned from the telephone company in order to manufacture and sell his invention.

Object to King's Title.

Gibraltar, April 8.—King Edward arrived here today from Lisbon on board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert. The ships dressed, manned sides and saluted.

King Edward was present at a state banquet given by Sir George Stuart White, the governor of Gibraltar, and the defender of Ladysmith during the South African war. During the banquet the King announced that he had promoted Sir George White to the rank of field marshall.

AGAIN THE SEA SERPENT.

"Hardy Annual" Bobs up at Banfield Cable Station.

Officers of the cable station at Bamfield Creek are sponsors for a story that a sea serpent, from forty to sixty feet long feet long, and with a head like a horse, has been seen off the station. The cable operators say in letters to the local papers that Indians had been telling of the sea serpent, but the stories were not credited.

David Osborne, one of the officials, says that a week ago the animal was seen from the cable station to raise a big horse-like head and swim out from the mouth of Bamfield Creek into Barclay Sound. Mr. Godson, of the cable staff, says that when he first saw the animal it looked like a mass of seaweed, but presently he saw a head elevated and the big serpent moved off, its outline visible, towards the sea. Mr. Godson says it moved off with the speed of a torpedo boat. On April 10th an Indian saw the same thing and was so frightened that he ran his canoe into the breakers, left it and fled at once to the cable station. The Indian said the thing had a head shaped like a horse, and its body, ten feet of which was lifted, was the size of a barrel. The Indians in the neighborhood are terrified.

NEW ATLANTIC LINER

Kaiser Wilhelm II is a Magnificient Vessel.

A London cable, of April 14 says: Germany is not likely to lose her trans-Atlantic supremacy for some time to come. Contracts for new Cunard liners have not yet been placed, and the new North German Lloyd steamer Kaiser Wilhelm II., which will be able to steam twenty-three and a half knots an hour, left Bremen today on her maiden voyage across the Atlantic. It is confidently expected that she will wrest from the Kron Prince Wilhelm the honor of being the fastest trans-Atlantic liner afloat. She is over 706 feet long, the longest, but the White Star liner Cedric will still be the largest, for she has a gross tonnage of twenty-one thousand tons against twenty thousand gross tonnage of the Kaiser Wilhelm II. Some idea of the magnitude of the new steamer may be formed from the fact that she has eight decks and four sets of quadruple expansion engines with an aggragate of 40,000 horse power. There is accommodation for 775 first class, 343 second class, and 770 steerage passengers, and her crew will number over 600.

LABOR LEADER SHOT.

A C. P. R. Special Constable Charged With Shooting.

A dispatch from Vancouver says: Frank Rogers, labor agitator and head of the fishermen's strike for the last two years, is dying from revolver wounds in the abdomen. Alfred Allan, C. P. R. special policeman has been arrested for the shooting

Two freight handlers, who took the place of the strikers were attacked by unionists on the night of April 14 and beaten. Twenty minutes after, while Rogers and his two companions were standing on Abbot street facing Stimpson's wharf, ten revolver shots came out of the dark, one of them mortally wounding Rogers. In an ante-mortem examination Rogers said he had not had any fight previous to the shooting and did not know anything about the affair. The shooting is said to have grown out of the bitter feeling caused by C. P. R. strikers between strikers substitutes and the special police.

A Strange Case.

One of the most peculiar trials in the annals of court history was conducted before Judge Cumberland at Brandan last week. John Dickson, a man of good, intellectual appearance and modest demeanor that would suggest honesty and good breeding, appeared before his honor charged charged with stealing a team of horses, harness and sleighs belonging to John Pollock, a farmer near Napinka. At the preliminary hearing the week previous he pleaded not guilty, and his trial was fixed for Thursday, April 9, when he pleaded guilty to every charge. Dickson, while under the prosecuting examination, swore that he experienced a period of complete insensibility from March 27 to April 3, one day before the theft to four days after his imprisonment. The circumstances leading up to his arrest gave every indication that the man was wrapped in some peculiar stupor, as he was discovered wandering over the prairie and through back lanes of Souris and Hartney in a most bewildering fashion. The prisoner was unable to recollect what transpired between those dates, and held that he was not responsible for his actions. As his previous character was good and his evidence given in a most upright manner, his honor was inclined to believe that the man had been in a trance and the prisoner was therefore dismissed.

A farmer's hired man stole the collection of the West Prospect, Man., church.

BOOK SUPPRESSED

IT EXPOSED CRUELTY TO CONGO NATIVES.

Some Samples of Torture Used in Order to Make Money out of Natives--Both Women and Men Suffer the Most Inhuman Treatment.

Advices from London say: At the beginning of March there was published a book by Captain Guy Burrows and Edgar Canisius entitled "The Curse of Central Africa." The volume is another addition to the record of oppression and cruelty which have marked the administration of the Congo Free State, of which Leopold, king of the Belgians, is autocratic sovereign. The authors write with knowledge, for both of them were for some years in the service of the state, leaving it only a couple of years ago.

Before this volume was published the Free State company got hold of some of the proof sheets and applied in England for a legal injunction against its publication. After it had appeared there were immediate rumors that King Leopold had protested to the English government, while at the same time the Free State company took preliminary steps for a libel action.

Whether the publishers are afraid that the authors have told too much truth for safety, or whether pressure of some other kind has been brought upon them, is not at present known, but the fact remains that when an attempt was made to purchase the book at a leading bookseller's it was found to have been "withdrawn from sale."

On reading the book one soon sees why King Leopold should object so strenuously to its publication. In the introduction, written by J. G. Leigh, who has arranged the work of the two amateur authors for publication, we are told that much of their story has been omitted as being too horrible for publication. What has been printed is, however, quite enough to make the readers realize the cruelties practised day by day by the Belgian officials in administering a huge territory for the sole purpose of making money out of the wretched natives.

Capt. Burrows, the chief of the two authors, was an officer in the Seventh Fusiliers, who resigned his commission to take service with the Congo Free State company, to which he had been recommended by Henry M. Stanley. Leaving for the time that side of the book in which he sketches the history of the Congo State and describes the system of government pursued by its agents in direct violation of the solemn pledges given to Europe when the State was created, there will be given here two of the stories of cruelty which are to be found in nearly every chapter. It is such stories as these that appeal most forcibly to the public mind, and that may possibly lead to a stirring of public opinion that will result in reform.

Here is a story that comes in the first few pages of the book. At a post called Djabbir eleven women prisoners were made to work in chains, carrying sand and earth a distance of some 250 yards from a garden which the commandant was making to the river bank.

The women were not allowed to walk, but had to do everything running, native soldiers with sticks keeping them up to their work. One woman gave birth to a child, but she had to go on working just the same. Naturally, she and the other ten soon died.

The very next story tells how a young girl in the service of a Belgian sergeant was flogged by his orders in public at Verre. When her flesh had been cut to ribbons she was tied to a flagstaff in the centre of the station. The sergeant then smeared portions of her body with native honey, and she was left to the flies and the burning sun for the rest of the day.

Freed from her bonds on the following day the wretched girl died.

A Belgian doctor who had just arrived at the post, saw her when at the point of death and beyond all medical aid, but made no report to the authorities.

From what one reads elsewhere in the book it would seem that a report would have been useless. Such stories as these are given as examples of everyday cruelty to individuals.

One on the Agent.

A well known Valley River farmer paid a high tribute to the literary talent of one of the best known of Dauphin's real estate agents the other day. He decided to sell his place, he says, and got the real estate man to write a notice for him. When the agent read the notice to him he said: "Read that again." After the second reading he said: "I believe I'll not sell; I've been looking for a place of that kind all my life, and I didn't know I had it until you described it to me."—Dauphin Press.

A London cable says: The British courts by recent decisions have made strikes almost impossible by exposing labor unions to suits for damages for acts for which the measure imposes heavy fines and imprisonment. British labor unions cannot rebel against judges of the highest court, they can only seek to secure the passage of a measure for legalizing of peacefully conducted labor disputes and the sanctioning of picketing for the special purposes of obtaining or communicating information or persuading "blacklegs" to abstain from work. This is the object of Mr. Shackleton's bill, which is supported by Sir Charles Dilke and the labor members.

The governments of German cities were prior to the law of 1892, which Bismarck championed, notoriously corrupt through spoils of politics, but are today the models of efficiency and honesty. The prominent features of the law which caused their deliverance are home rule, compulsory service of the citizens in municipal affairs, long tenure of office and civil service.

Gambling in Ireland.

A subject on which great stress is laid by Cardinal Logue and Dr. Walsh is that of the extent to which gambling and betting have increased among the people. Dr. Walsh says that these ruinous practices are strengthening their hold upon vast numbers of the people, even upon many of the comparatively poor; while Cardinal Logue declares that the evil is spreading with fearful rapidity and lamentable consequences among all classes. He declares advisedly that it is an incentive to intemperance, and that it leads to 'ruin, moral and physical, often, too, irretrievable.' Now that this evil has spread among the poor it threatens, says his eminence, wholesale demoralization. Referring to the system of backing horses, he says it has become a moral plague, fatal and widespread in its ravages. 'Things have come to such a pass,' he adds, 'that even poor workers, male and female, who can hardly earn enough to keep body and soul together, deprive themselves of the most necessary nourishment in order to send their shillings to swell the profits of some English bookmaker. Fathers leave their children poorly clad, and more poorly nourished, in order to indulge their passion for gambling. There are two causes which, in the cardinal's opinion, tend to spread the system—the existence of betting agencies in most of the small towns, and the public press, which, he fears, is responsible for most of the evil.

'It is very discouraging,' writes Cardinal Logue, 'to find leading which have a high and holy mission of enlightening, elevating, and guiding public opinion in accordance with upright principles, devoting pages of their space to sporting news, and even providing the public with the service of professional tipsters.' His eminence draws a pitiful picture of the scenes that take place at the doors of the news agents' shops in the evenings, when crowds of half-starved children wait for the evening journals to tell their parents what has become of the shillings which should have brought food to nourish their poor emaciated bodies. 'This department of journalism,' he adds, 'may swell the dividends of their proprietors, but unfortunately it also tends to swell the miseries of the poor and to reduce the rich to poverty.—Dublin correspondence London Daily News.

Year by year the Northwest Mounted Police patrols are being extended, and this season it is expected they will reach beyond the arctic circle. Last year one patrol went as far north as Fort Resolution on Great Slave lake, 300 miles north of Edmonton. By the end of the present season a police post will have been established at Fort Macpherson at the mouth of the Mackenzie river, 1,900 miles north of Edmonton. Superintendent Constantin will have charge of this year's party which will leave Edmonton towards the end of May.

Phe Mackenzie is navigable from about June 10 to Oct. 20, so that if any of the party are to return in the autumn they will have to make quick time.

The establishment of a police post at the delta of the Mackenzie will be a benefit as it will put a stop to the debauchery of the natives by Americans engaged in the Arctic whale fisheries who have established a depot at Herschell island. Eventually the patrol will be extended up Peel river to the Yukon watershed, thence down the Porcupine to the Yukon, where communication will be made with the police force stationed at Yukon territory.

SOUR GRAPES.

The Chicago Journal's Comments on DeArmond's Annexation Proposal.

Nothing could be more ridiculous than Congressman DeArmond's proposal to annex Canada to the United States, or rather to empower the President to enter into negotiations looking to that end, says The Chicago Journal.

We do not believe that the people of the United States are crying for Canada, and we are sure that the people of Canada are not crying for the United States. We are good enough friends and might as well stay that way. Such propositions as Mr. DeArmond's do not tend to strengthen friendship.

We have never heard that there was the least sentiment in Canada favorable to annexation to the Union. There was none at the time of our war for independence, and we failed then as we failed in 1812 in conquering the Dominion. The Canadians have always had the reputation of being the most loyal of British subjects and they are very proud of it.

Besides, what have they to gain by union with us more than they possess already? They have a Government that differs but little from our own, for in the essentials Parliament is quite as independent as Congress. In fact it more nearly reflects the popular will than Congress, for it is modeled after the English Parliament, and, as in England, the Ministry is responsible.

On the other hand what have we to gain from annexation? The extension of our limits to the north pole or thereabouts and that is all. What do we care for all that frozen region under the Arctic circle, where there is nothing either interesting or amusing except the northern lights and the north pole.

We have enough of that and to spare in Alaska, and there is no need for further icy expansion.

Of course, the DeArmond resolution is merely academic, and will hardly meet with a responsive vote, but why can not the Missouri Congressman devote his powerful mind to subjects that will have some interest for his fellow-citizens? Canadian annexation has no attractions for the American people.

CLOSE-STICKING HABIT.

One of the Difficulties About Smoking—A Definition of Friendship.

The recent agitation against cigarettes has caused Canadian newspapers to recall many anecdotes about smokers and smoking. The Toronto News says, speaking of Parliamentarians who smoke, that it was down at Harvard, when Sir Hibbert Tupper was in his student days, that he learned to smoke. As at most colleges, almost every youngster soon picked up the habit, and once contracted, it stuck to him closer than a brother. That would seem to be the difficulty about smoking. Like every other habit, it is hard to abandon.

George Augustus Sala, who was a world-renowned connoisseur in tobaccos, was once asked for a definition of friendship.

"Well," he said, "I can only give an illustration. Suppose two smokers to be wrecked on a desert island, one of them having preserved a solitary cigar, while the other has none. If the man with the cigar should cut it in half and give one piece to his companion, I think he would give the finest exemplification of true friendship that could be presented."

Sala is pretty nearly correct, but the party of the first part is purely suppositious. It is not to be believed that he ever could exist. He is all right as an example, but he will never be met by anybody. And Kipling, in his somwhat coarse manner, has sung that

A woman is only a woman,
But a good cigar is a smoke.

The Efficiency of Jane.

Lady Aberdeen, whose interest in Canada has never flagged, lectured recently before the Society of Arts in London on "Women in Canada." In the course of her remarks, she said: The chief impression made by Canadian women, after a very close intercourse and friendship with them might be summed up in the word "emciency." In whatever situation or circumstance you found a Canadian woman, that was her hall-mark. Lady Aberdeen told an illustrative anecdote. "On one occasion, when the Governor-General and I were traveling across Canada, we were to dine one night at a house remarkable even among Canadian homes for its charm and beauty, presided over, as it is, by one of the most attractive of mistresses. We arrived and met with the warm welcome we knew awaited us. A recherche repast was laid out before us, and we were waited on by so trim a parlormaid, so deft in her movements, so irreproachable in her cap and apron, that Lord Aberdeen felt constrained to compliment our hostess on the result of her training. 'Oh,' said the lady, 'I am so glad you think Jane did well-- 'I would like you to tell her so presently.' And when that 'presently' came, what should we discover but 'Jane' arrayed in evening dress, and proving to be the daughter of the house, who, in consequence of the unexpected departure of the servant, had had not only to wait at table, but to cook the meal, with the assistance of her mother, an adept in such matters."

The Dominion Coal Production.

The total amount of coal produced in Canada last year was 6,685,654 tons. Canada imported in the same period, round and slack, 3,806,129 tons, and exported 20,902,068 tons to the United States, Europe, and Newfoundland. Adding to what remained in Canada after the exported coal was deducted, the amount of anthracite consumed, it would be found that the total coal consumption of the Dominion was 9,353,398 tons. The total number of men employed in coal mining in Nova Scotia was 8,500. Of these 6,000 are employed under ground and 2,500 on the surface.

THE ENGLISH OF OUR SIRES.

I love the English of our sires; it gives me cheer enough
To read its simple, virile words and try to spell the stough;
I love to view the lettery maze and wander there, although
How I will e'er emerge from it I hardly ever knough.
O'er verbal fields on mountain sides my weary way I plough,
And often reach surprising ends, although I scarce know hough;
Yet still the phrase and verbal maze I journey, journey through,
Although the spelling knocks me out, no matter what I dough.

I love the English of our sires; I give it hearty praise,
Although its spelling must at times the wanderer amaze.
I do not stand with those who mouth, and rant, and groan, and shriek,
And find no language strong enough their dire disdain to spiek,
The language that our fathers wrote is sweet as bells of sleighs,
And we should give the makers preighs, or give them ninety deighs:
And if we cannot spell with grace, there's yet comfort, eke,
To write the stuff the way it sounds, and spell it as we speke.

I love the English of our sires; I make the statement straight,
And I have loved it since the time I spelled it on my slaight.
Though some can spell, and some cannot the artful method seize,
Although they wrestle long and hard, nettlion on their kneeze,
Yet still I bear upon my way my queer, linguistic freight,
And, come the worst or come the best, I still am quite eleight,
For one glad orthographic rule I've seized by slow degrees;
If any word is hard to spell, why, spell it as you plees.

FALLACIES ABOUT FOODS.

Some Eminent British Advice on What to Eat and Why.

One hour was spent at the headquarters of the National Health Society by Dr. Robert Hutchison in ruthlessly destroying some cherished popular fallacies about food. Dr. Hutchison is demonstrator in physiology at the London Hospital Medical College.

"The poor should give their children less bread-and-jam and more dripping," he said. "The main fault in our national feeling is that we consume too much starch and sugar and too little fat. Many of the children grow up stunted and badly developed, largely because of the deficiencies in feeding. Butter as a food is of the highest value, and the use of margarine should be greatly increased. Margarine is a substance that does not deserve all the opprobrium poured upon it. It is made in a way that is open to no sort of objection. It is physiologically equal to butter, is easily digested, and is an excellent supplier of energy."

Lentils, peas, haricot beans, and oatmeal should be eaten, and meat in proper quantities. Oatmeal should be given to children, particularly in place of the bread-and-jam.

"I would not urge the town-dweller to be a vegetarian," continued Dr. Hutchison, "but I would advise the poor that they can get a much larger quantity of waste-repairing and energy and heat-forming food for a shilling in the form of pulse food than in meat or animal form. The homely bloater, too, is one of the cheapest sources of material for properly building up the human body. The economist would do well, too, to teach the wife of the workingman how to prepare cheese in various ways. Cheese is an extremely nourishing food, but taken en bloc it is somewhat difficult of digestion. If mixed up with other things in various ways it can be better dealt with by the stomach.

"Some things largely taken are of no use in keeping up the human fabric and supplying energy. Tea is one of these things, and the much-lauded meat extracts are certainly not of any use in replacing the wear and tear of the body."

The lecturer added that the superior energy of the American workmen had been attributed to their avoidance of some of the food fallacies of the English.—London Mail.

Lever's Rollicking Irishman.

Whence, says London Outlook, did Charles Lever get his rollicking Irishman? Professor Oman in his preface to the re-issue of William Grattan's "Adventures With the Connaught Rangers" discloses the secret. It was clearly, he avows, from the domestic annals of the old 88th Foot in Peninsular days that Lever drew the greater part of the good stories which made the fortune of "Charles O'Malley." Many of the characters in that romance appear in the flesh in Grattan's reminiscences. Notably:

"The eccentric surgeon, Maurice Quill, whose fame was so great throughout the British army that the novelist did not even take the trouble to change his name. His colleague, Dr. O'Reilly, was almost as great an original. Many of the humors of Micky Free seem to be drawn from the doings of Grattan's servant, Dan Carsons."

"Comparing the 'real thing,'" Mr. Oman goes on, "with the work of fiction, one is driven to conclude that much of what was regarded as rollicking invention on Lever's part was only a photographic reproduction of anecdotes that he had heard from old soldiers of the Connaught Rangers."

Crabs That Climb Trees.

In the Dutch East Indies lives a species of crabs which are accustomed to climb mangroves and palm trees for the purpose, it is believed, of feeding upon the fruit. Mr. C. P. Sluiter of Bantam, avers that he has seen these crabs climb to the top of trees fully 60 feet in height. Although he could not see plainly what they were about, he believes, from the behavior of captive specimens, that they opened young cocoanuts and devoured their contents. It is doubtful if they can break the shell of a ripe cocoanut.

Scotch Prisoners.

Lord Balfour of Burleigh states states that there are 1,400 prisoners per 100,000 of the population in Scotland, compared with 700 in Ireland, and 500 in England.

LABOR AND THE ANGEL.

By Duncan Campbell Scott.

"The wind plunges-then stops;
And a column of leaves in a whirl,
Like a dervish that spins—drops,
With a delicate rustle,
Falls into a circle that thins;
The leaves creep away one by one,
Hiding in hollows and ruts;
Silence comes down on the lane;
The light wheels slow from the sun,
And glints where the corn stood,
And strays over the plain,
Touching with patches of gold
The knolls and the hollows,
Crosses the lane,
And slips into the wood;
Then flashes a mile away on the farm,
A moment of brightness fine;
Then the gold glimmers and wanes,
And is swept by a clouding of grey,
For cheek by jowl, arm in arm,
The shadow's afoot with the shine,
The wind roars out from the elm,
Then leaps tiger-sudden—the leaves
Shudder up into heaps and are caught
High as the branch where they hung
Over the oriole's nest.

"Down in the sodden field,
A blind man is gathering his roots,
Guided and led by a girl;
Her gold hair blows in the wind,
Her garments with flutter and furl,
Leap like a flag in the sun;
And whenever she stoops, she stoops,
And they heap the dark-colored beets
In the barrow, row upon row,
When it is full to the brim,
He wheels it patiently, slow,
Something oppressive and grim
Clothing his figure, but she,
Beautifully light at his side,
Touches his arm with her hand,
Ready to help or to guide;
Power and comfort at need,
In the flex of her figure lurk,
The fire at the heart of the deed,
The angel that watches o'er work.

In the above lines we have, first, the background, shot with a riot of interest of the scene, a blind man digging roots in a field, gently guided by a girl. The poet then, by a process of imagination called analogy, which regards the similarity of shadow and sun, described a perfect picture of a Canadian autumn day, and, second, the human element and the "relations" of things, taking the component elements of real scenes or events and combining them anew in the mind, conceives of the girl as representing Love, lightening the task of Labor, represented by the blind man.

"This is her visible form,
Heartening the labor she loves,
Keeping the breath of it warm,
Warm as a nestling of doves.
Humble or high or sublime,
Hers no reward of degrees,
Ditching as precious as rhyme,
If only the spirit be true.
'Effort and effort,' she cries,
'This is the heart-beat of life. . . .'
. . . . . .
When labor is counselled by love
You may see her splendid, serene,
Bending and brooding above,
With the justice and power of her mien,
Where thought has its passionate birth,
Her smile is the sweetest renown,
For the stroke and the derring-do,
Her crown is the starriest crown."
. . . . . .

The poet then figures unfavorable conditions of work, where the senses are deadened by toil, and the part of Labor, "she the twin-sister of Love," is "wiser than wise" in offering no vision sublime and encouraging stoicism.

"So we have come with the breeze,
Up to the height of the hill,
Lost in the valley trees,
The old blind man and the girl;
But deep in the heart is the thrill
Of the image of counselling love;
The shape of the soul in the gloom,
And the power of the figure above,
Stand for the whole world's need;
For labor is always blind,
Unless as the light of the deed
The angel is smiling behind. . . . ."

Sketch of Duncan Campbell Scott.

Mr. Scott's poetry is distinguished by marked beauty of diction, elevated imagery and a rare tranquility of thought. But moral passion stirs strongly within him, as witness that fine effort, "The Harvest," and the lines of "The Dance Regnant." He is an idealist, and implicity acknowledges a transcendent source for the profound effect the contemplation of nature makes upon him. Mr. Scott is a native of Ottawa, where he first saw the light in 1862. He was educated at the public schools of the city and at Stanstead Wesleyan College. He entered the Canadian civil service in a minor capacity and has risen to the position of chief clerk and accountant in the Department of Indian Affairs, a position he still retains. He has long had a connection with American periodicals, and a recognized place among the younger poets of his time. In 1893 he published his first volume of verse, entitled "The Magic House and Other Poems." Five years later a second volume appeared from the press of Copeland & Day, Boston. The lines above are extracted from this collection, which is named from the initial poem, "Labor and the Angel."

When the Globe Was Young.

We confess that it is with some gratification that the circulation of The Globe has reached a point altogether unprecedented in the experience of Canadian journals. We are now circulating of the tri-weekly and weekly editions united, a little of six thousand, and are daily receiving large additions to our list. We believe that our number of subscribers is double that of any paper published in British North America. We can remember the time when the circulation of two thousand for a Canadian newspaper was considered very large then it was three thousand and four thousand which was to be reached; and now that The Globe has arrived at six, we see nothing difficult in attaining ten thousand and nothing impossible in twenty.—From The Globe of Sept. 9, 1852.

Poor Pa.

The Canadian boy is irrepressible: "I say pa," cried little Bobby, "is it right that there is only one man before whom the King must raise his hat?"

"Nonsense!" replied his father. "Who told you that rubbish? The King need not take off his hat to anybody. As a matter of courtesy, of course, he raises his hat to ladies, and returns the salutes of his subjects; but there is no man living to whom he is compelled to uncover."

"But," continued Bobby, who had now got near the door, "what about his hairdresser. He must uncover to him! Got yer, dad."

MORRISSEY

From Our Own Correspondent.

The output of coal has steadily increased this week.

Pay-day today, Friday. The pay-master was not overloaded.

The Coal Co. has been considerably delayed this week through the G. N. being unable to supply them with coal cars.

Mr. Dan Morrison of Kimberley, is visiting this week with his brother Malcolm our blacksmith.

Archibald Dick, of Cranbrook, B. C., mine inspector for this district was here on Thursday inspecting the mines.

Rev. Stony preached a very able sermon on Sunday, it being Easter Sunday the service was beautiful and very appropriate.

Mr. Mat Kelley, of Nelson, has taken the position as roadmaster on the Crow's Nest Southern, between the mines and the Junction.

Norman Broley, of Fernie was in camp this week on business. Mr. Broley expects to do much building in the new town this summer.

Mr. A. Berridge attended the Easter Ball and Reception given in Fernie on the 13th. He reports the affair as having been extremely successful.

Mr. W. J. Blundell manager for the Trites-Wood Co's. store at this place arrived the first of the week and assumed control. Mrs. Blundell arrived yesterday.

Mr. L. Manly chief engineer for the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., and his assistant Mr. Roaf, were busy on the new townsite marking out lots on the 15th.

Morrissey Mines is to have a baseball team this summer. There is now in the camp about twenty good players that have played in the amateur leagues of the States and on the coast in B. C. The boys will organize a baseball club, and proceed to perfect a nine. We would like to see a good team here, and hope the admirers of the diamond will give the boys encouragement and help them make it a success.

The New Town of Morrissey Mines, B.C.

Property of The Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., Situated at Their Morrissey Collieries.

ADVENT.

The doors of the Coal Company's townsite office will swing open on Friday, May 1st.

The discriminating public are invited to become our patrons on that day.

The new townsite is unique—nothing like it anywhere. Like Athena, it has sprung to life full grown. There was no uncertainty in the minds of the company as to what they meant to do. They planned to build here the best town in the district. They chose the location camly took into account its many advantages, and settled at the most central spot at the largest mine, in the most wonderful coal district in the world.

The town is backed by a great and growing industrial enterprise employing hundreds of hands and managby conservative business men, who are also owners and successful operators of the coal mines at Fernie and Michel. 250 new coke ovens are now being built, which will add another industry to those already established.

Remember the date, Friday, May 1st, 1903.

"MORRISSEY MINES."

THE NEW TOWN TO BE OPENED NEXT FRIDAY. T. CRAHAN, AGENT.

Description of Townsite. A Bright Future Ahead. Many Fernie Citizens Will Invest in Lots.

As announced in our advertising columns the Coal Company townsite at Morrissey will be thrown open to the public on Friday, May 1st. The Company had planned to put this property on the market last Fall but owing to the delays and unfavorable weather conditions i twas wisely decided to postpone the matter until spring.

Mr. T. Crahan who handled the townsite at Morrissey Junction for Messrs. Foss & McDonnell has secured the agency for the new town on the hill. He is well-known as a rustler and a business man, and, though such a sure proposition as the Morrissey Mines does not need much pushing, it will be none the worse for being in the hands of a live energetic man like Mr. Crahan.

The townsite will, as already intimated be called Morrissey Mines. The site consists of about 200 acres most of which is now clear, ready for building upon. The lots are in two sizes 40x150 and 50x150. The blocks are divided by streets and avenues and the lots are so arranged as to face on both. The blocks are 840 feet long and 320 feet wide, and run lengthwise with the avenues. Each block has eight 40 foot lots at each end facing the streets and ten fifty foot lots at each side fronting avenues; 20 foot lanes separate the end lots from the side lots and these are also connected by another lane separating the side lots. The streets run toward the railway track and the avenues are at right angles. Each will be named numerically, First Avenue, Second Avenue, etc., and the streets First Street, Second Street, etc. The blocks are symmetrical as to shape and size with the exception of those fringing Morrissey Creek and in the angle between the creek and railway track. Government Agent Armstrong according to the Act which allows the Crown one quarter of the townsite, has selected the following blocks, subject to the approval of the Government, blocks 28, 33, 23, 25, 11, 14, 16, 1 and 7.

The site is situated along the Morrissey Creek and in the angle formed by the latter and the Great Northern. The upper end is about half a mile below the large, new store, and one of the lower corners extend to within 1000 feet of the nearest point on the C. P. R. line.

The Great Northern is making preparations to build a spur at the town and to erect a suitable depot at once. This will be situated somewhere at the end of Third or Fourth Streets. The Coal Company are going to extend the excellent water works from the mines and 12 inch mains will be substituted for the present 6 inch size. This will give a magnificent pressure for fire fighting purposes. A stump-puller that has done good service in Michel is being moved to Morrissey where it will be used to remove the few remaining stumps. A regular daily passenger service will be put on between the new town, the C. P. R. depot and the Great Northern depot across the river, as arrangements are now being made to have a passenger coach attached to the mine train.

The new town is being opened under most auspicious circumstances and it is generally thought that the coming summer will see Morrissey Mines a well built up town. Already many business men and others in Fernie have decided to invest in lots and build upon them. Yesterday a number went down to look the ground over. Several business houses in Fernie will have branch houses in Morrissey and others will start independently there. Of outsiders who contemplate going to the new town we hear of the following. P. Burns & Co. will erect a brick block, with a cold storage plant, N. Hanson, of Wasa, will build a very fine $20,000 hotel, Col. Pellatt will erect a $5000 block and Messrs. Beattie and J. D. McBridge, of Cranbrook, will put in branches of their different lines of business. The lots will sell from $100 to $500 according to where they are situated; the best business corners will mostly be taken up for hotel purposes, inside business lots will sell from $300 to $450 while good residential lots not far from the business centre will range from $150 to $250. The terms are one third cash, one third in six months and balance in twelve months.

Morrissey will be the distributing south. The coal mines at this point will be point for the Flathead country to the pushed to their greatest capacity and development work will go steadily on to increase the output in order to supply as much as possible the inexhaustable markets opened up by the Great Northern railway Morrissey in its inception has an advantage which Fernie did not possess. It is in no sense an experiment but, profiting from the experience gained by its older sister town, it will spring up as a permanent and modern town. The site is excellent and well drained, it is laid out on the most up-to-date plan, it will be built up during the best building season of the year and by men who know that there is not the slightest uncertainty as to its future.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The Editor does not hold himself responsible for the opinions expressed in this column.

To the Editor.

Will you kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words in regard to the action of the License Commissioners in granting the petition of Napoleon Gareau for a license for the Queens Hotel, Fernie.

Rev. R. F. Stillman and myself spent several days in going over the petition and checking off the names of those who were householders and entitled to sign such a petition (according to the Liquor Act) and those who were not householders and we found that out of some 651 names on the petition only 267 were entitled to sign, the balance were boarders, trancient or new comers who had not resided in Fernie the required length of time viz.: 3 months. We had a list of householders of the whole town prepared as nearly correct as possible and found there were some 545 in all.

Out of these 545 we found 267 whose names did not appear on the petition so we made a separate list of these names and headed it "No. 1 Householders not on Gareau's list" and also made another list headed "No. 2 Undisputed householders on Gareau's list" comprising the first 267 names mentioned. We said also we would allow them the difference of 11 names, as there were some on their list we could not make out.

Now the Act says distinctly that an applicant must have his petition signed by at least two thirds of the householders within a radius of 3 miles of the proposed premises, and again that any person may object, but it does not say a person must object in order to stop the granting of a license. It places the responsibility upon the Commissioners who are appointed to protect the public and not foist everything of this kind upon them. It has been a settled fact for some time that no more licenses are to be granted in Cranbrook, why should not that also be said of Fernie? Why does the Cranbrook Commissioner throw in his influence for more licenses here?

I went down to Moyie to enter a protest on behalf of the Fernie Baptist church, (whose building is only 150 feet from the premises receiving the license) and Rev. Stillman, who was unable to go himself. After presenting and explaining the above lists to the Commissioners I proceeded to take exception to a number of names, 187 in all, as being false signatures, for instance 10 names one after another being signed in the same handwriting in several cases and 5 and 6 in other places I pointed out to them that in a great number of cases the men had also signed their wives names, which is illegal. During the explanation of the above, Commissioner Burn very impatiently remarked several times that this was "all rot" and they should'nt waste time listening to it but should shut me off. I continued however until I was through. He evidently had not considered his position of enough importance to familiarize himself with the Liquor Licence Act for until I pointed out to him the contrary in the Act he insisted that a boarder had a perfect right to sign a petition for a license. Another strange ruling of the Commission is that when a man signs a petition his wife is also to be considered as favoring it if her name does not appear at all. Are our wives to be considered as nonentities and have no say in these matters at all? Let them answer this for themselves in the future. The view taken by another of the Commissioners was to the effect that we were taking undue advantage of the applicant because we placed the names of the women on No. 1 list while their husbands names only were on No. 2. Was not this permissible think you when the act says the women are householders as well as the men and their names did not appear on the petition.

I think you will agree with me it was right and especially when one considers the statement made by Mr. S Herchmer who appeared on behalf of the petition, that his client had called at every house in town and tried to get every name on his petition, then why did he not get these women to sign? The only conclusion to be arrived at is that they were opposed to it as they generally are. Now another thing in reference to this matter which shows how a Government appointment causes the heads of some to swell. Commissioner Burn made a statement that it would only require a protest to stop the granting of this license. Upon his return to Fernie when asked, by the same party to whom the above statement was made, if a protest was not made, said "No" and when asked if Bert Short did not go down and protest it said "Yes he did but we're not going to allow a G—— D—— churchmember to dictate to us what we shall or shall not do." Wasn't that smart now, shouldn't we feel proud of such a citizen? Are we churchmembers to be considered as forfeiting our citizenship because we are such? Are we to remain silent and be cursed at, as I and others have been, by this little upstart because we are members of some church aud happen to displease his lordship? I would like to ask if the citizens of Fernie were aware that our present police force were placed in their respective positions through the direct influence of Mr. Fred Burn and that they hold such at his pleasure? Ye gods and little fishes! what a power to be invested in such a poor, frail specimen of humanity, yet such is the statement made by him to one of our citizens who is ready to make oath as to its utterance. He arrogates a great deal to himself and has let his egotism get the better of his brains (if he has any.)

Thanking you Mr. Editor for the above space, I am

Yours Truly,

B. H. Short.

LACROSSE IN LINE

The Club Successfully Organized—Enthusiastic Meeting—Bright Prospects

The Lacrosse meeting in Mr. Cuthbert's block on Tuesday evening was very successful. A good number turned out and the best of harmony prevailed.

The election of officers resulted as follows:—

Patrons, Messrs. J. R. Pollock, L. M. Proctor and A. Mutz.

Hon. President, Mr. Jas. McEvoy.

President, Mr. N. E. Broley.

1st Vice President, Mr. W. F. Cuthbert.

2nd Vice President, Mr. J. H. Bricker.

Secretary-Treasurer, A. C. Liphardt.

Executive Committee Messrs. James Miller, D. Walmsley and H. G. Watsen.

Delegates to the A. A. Association, Messrs. Bricker and Liphardt.

Delegate to Lethbridge to attend district Convention, Mr. M. A. Kastner.

The election of a Captain was postponed until a later day when this officer could be selected with better judgement.

The membership fee was placed at $1. Many details were discussed after which the meeting adjourned.

It is a matter for congratulation that several prominent business men in Fernie are interesting themselves in this popular game and this fact augurs well for the Fernie Lacrosse Club this season. The newly elected president is one of these and the boys feel that in Mr. Broley they have a president who can and will do much to promote the interests of the club.

WEDDING BELLS.

The marriage of Miss Margaret Ward, of Hertford, England, with Mr. Stephen H. Hoskins, of Kimberley, was solemnized at Christ Church, Fernie, on Tuesday last. The bride who was given away by Mr. L. R. Forbes, looked charming in a white silk dress and picture hat. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. Beecham, of Cranbrook, assisted by the Rev. C. W. Houghton, of Fernie. The service, thanks to the kindness of Mr. Staebler, was choral. After the ceremony the guests were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Forbes. In the course of the evening the Rev. W. Beecham delivered a happy speech welcoming the bride to the west. They left the following morning for their home at Kimberley followed by the good wishes of a large number of friends. This is the first wedding that has been solemnized at Christ Church, Fernie.

The marriage of Miss Jean Dunlop, of Fernie, to Mr. David Stafford, of Lethbridge was performed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Dunlop on Wednesday evening in the presence of a few intimate friends. Rev. D. L. Gordon performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Stafford left on Friday for Grand Forks where they will reside.

Mr. H. Bentley went to Lethbridge on Thursday evening. He intends to bring his family back to Fernie with him next week where they will in future reside. Mr. Bentley very kindly consented to represent the Fernie Lacrosse club at that place, as Mr. Kastner was unable to get away. The date of the meeting was postponed one day, to Friday, to oblige the Fernie club.

A ROUSING MEETING.

FIRE MEETING ON MONDAY EVENING AN UNQUALIFIED SUCCESS

Important Improvements—A Large Brigade and a Heavy Subscription—Meeting Censures Ottawa Government

The fire meeting called for Monday evening was one of the most successful business gatherings ever held in Fernie. The hall was well filled with men interested in the welfare of Fernie and the many important matters brought up were discussed harmoniously and with a view to the ultimate advantage of the town.

Mr. W. W. Tuttle took the chair and J. S. T. Alexander acted as Secretary. The first matter of business was the appointment of new officers for the Fernie volunteer brigade. Mr. Tuttle who has served as chief for the past year was unanimously re-elected to that position for another year and Mr. Chas. Stevens was similarly elected assistant chief and Mr. Alexander was appointed secretary-treasurer of the brigade.

The Chairman introduced the subject of needed reforms and showed that under the old conditions it was impossible to work up an efficient brigade. They had had absolutely no financial assistance from public subscription or otherwise and the little that had been done was often the result of individual sacrifice.

Mr. H. Bentley followed and in a very forceable manner expressed the views of all present. The town should have a lot and a building erected upon it at once. By affording sleeping accommodation for 10 men in the fire hall the fire underwriters would reduce the insurance rates in the town. It was not necessary to build a tower as a cheaper method of drying the hose was in use in many small towns, a slanting wall being built upon which the hose was laid. He thought that a brigade should be organzed with a membership of 500 persons, these at an annual fee of $5. each would bring a handsome revenue. The active members who would be chosen from the brigade to the number of 30 should be exempted from the $5. fee. A resolution embodying these ideas was passed and every man in the house at once signified his willingness to join the brigade under these conditions by signing his name on the form prepared by the Secretary. A committee of five consisting of Messrs. Bentley, Wilkes, Cree, Stork and Kanouse were appointed to make collections on behalf of the brigade and to interview the Coal Co. re assistance to the brigade as well as securing a lot. This Committee is to report to the brigade by May first.

Mr. Cree read letters from Mr. Gilbert, secretary of the Mainland Board of Fire Underwriters, in which, commenting on the regular 1902 Inspector's report of Fernie he stated that the inadequate water supply of the town as well as the general untidy condition of the lanes and backyards were causing serious alarm in the minds of Insurance Companies and that if a decided improvement was not made in the near future many of the companies might withdraw their business from the town. He then read the reports of the Inspector of the Mainland Board of Underwriters for each year as follows.

Date of report October, 21, 1899.

Date of this report Sept. 19, 1901.

The following changes since last report have taken place in the water supply and fire department of Fernie, B. C.

Water Supply— No change improvements contemplated next year.

Fire Department—200 feet 2½ inch Maltese hose, new. Apparatus in good condition. Department fairly well organized.

Condition of town, generally tidy.

Date of report October 23, 1902.

The following changes since last report have taken place in the water supply and fire department of Fernie, B. C.

Water Supply—No change. Water supply and pipe system is wholly inadequate. Town building up rapidly with frame and blocks becoming badly congested.

Condition of town prosperous, untidy.

Fire Department—No change.

Mr. H. Wilkes introduced the subject of securing a chemical engine for the town. His remarks showed that he had gone thoroughly into the subject. He had conversed and corresponded with a reliable firm in Winnipeg and had found that a suitable double cylinder engine could be laid down here for about $1000. The manufacturer was prepared to make easy terms with small towns, dividing the cost into three yearly payments. He stated that about 85 per cent of the fires in Winnipeg were extinguished by these engines and that they were used with great satisfaction throughout Manitoba and the Territories He believed that some time must necessarily elapse before a larger watermain could be put in and to double the line to the reservoir would be a big undertaking. Under these circumstances a chemical engine was just the thing to fill the bill.

Several others spoke favorably of the use of chemical engines. Mr. Letcher drew attention to the great loss to property entailed by the use of water at fires and showed that this was one of the most important advantages acruing from the use of chemicals. The insurance companies recognized the fact and favored the chemical engines. Mr. Bentley spoke enthusiastically of the double cylinder chemical engine from experiences at Lethbridge and he stated that fully 90 per cent of the fires there were put out by that means. A. Joyce favored immediate action and moved that the secretary correspond with the McCrobie Company with a view to purchasing a chemical engine at once. The resolution was carried unanimously. The advantages of hand chemical extinguishers were clearly shown by several speakers and the merchants and others centrally located were strongly advised to keep a couple of these always on hand.

A resolution was passed offering $5.00 reward to the first wagon tank of water at the scene of a fire.

Many details as to buckets, hooks and ladders, hose, etc., were discussed and turned over for the executive of the brigade to handle, after which the meeting adjourned.

SILVER-LEAD MEETING.

Immediately upon the adjournment of the fire-meeting J. A. Rennie, president of the Board of Trade, took the chair and asked that all remain to discuss in a mass meeting the recent action of the Ottawa Government in turning down the silver-lead proposition that has been agitated throughout the west. The meeting hed been called at the suggestion of the Nelson Board of Trade which had also passed a strong resolution censuring the Government.

Mr. Bentley gave a very interesting address which brought out the many strong reasons why foreign lead production should be taxed higher when brought into Canada. He reviewed the situation from Confederation down and showed that the changing conditions required an alteration in the duties. At the close of his remarks which were listened to with marked attention by the audience he moved the following resolution.

"That owing to the importance to British Columbia of the lead industry, We note with deep regret the action of the Dominion Government in refusing tariff relief to the silver-lead industry of this country,

And place ourselves on record in severely condemning such an action."

Mr. Kanouse seconded the motion and

BACK of THE BURNT CORK

By Epes W. Sargent

Copyright, 1901, by E. W. Sargent

"Sorry to disturb you, old chap, but I am to share this pen with you for the next two weeks." And Frank Hetherington regarded with unfeigned disgust the cubbyhole styled by courtesy a dressing room.

It was Hetherington's first season in vaudeville, and after a long run as leading man with one of the New York stock companies the facilities provided performers at the Apollo theater in San Francisco did not appeal to his somewhat fastidious tastes.

The person to whom he addressed his conversation was a fellow performer, evidently a minstrel monologist, since the white of his bare arm showed in glaring contrast to the reddish pigment which stopped half way down the neck, concealing his features as effectually as if he wore a mask. Hetherington had a winning manner with men and women alike, yet after a slight start at first sound of the voice the original occupant of the room gave no sign of recognition save a curt "All right" as he moved his makeup materials to give the other more space on the plain board shelf which ran along one side of the wall.

Hetherington lit a cigarette in direct defiance of the placard tacked above the electric light and was seated before the mirror, making up, before he attempted to renew the conversation. Silence irritated him, and it was more to break the monotony than to gain the friendship of his companion that he commenced to talk.

"As long as we're to share this box stall for the next two weeks we might as well know each other's name. Mine is Hetherington. I'm new to this end of the business, but have some small reputation in the east as an actor. I'm doing a sketch with Miss Phyllis Lancaster. Now that I've introduced myself may I ask"—

The monologist disregarded this invitation for a moment while he struggled with a pair of tight fitting green trousers. Finally, having adjusted the suspenders, he turned coldly with:

"I don't think there is much in a name. Mine is Brown—Phil Brown—if you want it for the programme. I fill in the stage in one while they're striking your set and getting ready for the acrobatic act to close with."

Hetherington carefully outlined his eyebrows with black crayon before he replied with a light laugh: "Brown seems rather funny for stage use when you can pick out a name to suit yourself. But it matches your makeup and is as good as any other to travel by. It seems to me that if you are going to follow me either I am beastly late or you are horribly early, and, by the way, I thought Glenroy followed our act."

"Glenroy was switched to Los Angeles, and they brought me down from the Chutes. Yes, I've been playing the Chutes and the free house, the Olympic, the past three weeks, yet—I think the manager remembers the time when my name was worth as much on an eastern programme as yours is now—but it wasn't Brown then."

By this time Hetherington was fully dressed, and with a careless remark that he trusted they'd get along well during the week he carefully stamped out the glowing end of his second cigarette and climbed the rickety stairs which led to the stage.

There was trouble with the setting for his turn, and in the excitement of straightening the matter out there was little time for conversation with his partner before the act opened. After taking their curtain call he went directly to his dressing room. He had promised to meet a party of friends at the Bohemian club, and Miss Lancaster, known in private life as Mrs. Hetherington, was going to the hotel alone. A brief kiss and a laughing promise to be home by morning had marked their parting in the wings. He had quite forgotten his curious roommate.

It was lonely enough in the dressing room now, for most of the performers who were quartered in that vicinity of the house were early on the bill, and no friendly lights shone from their rooms as he passed.

He had almost completed his toilet for the street when Brown came down from the stage, perspiration streaming from his face as the result of his exertions. Hetherington merely glanced round and promptly returned to the intricacies of a new tie. Suddenly his ear caught a sharp click, and he looked up in astonishment to see Brown locking the door and slipping the key in his pocket. Something in the tense pose of the monologist and the flash of his eye made Hetherington feel strangely nervous.

"I say, old chap, what's the matter?" he asked in carefully modulated tones.

Brown regarded him silently for a moment, then replied slowly:

"I thought that possibly you might like to watch me take off my makeup."

"Nonsense," returned the other sharply. "Washing up is no novelty to a performer of fourteen years' experience, and besides I'm in a hurry to meet some friends at the Bohemian club."

"Yes, so I heard you tell—your—your—wife."

Hetherington stood ready now, hat and gloves in hand. He was becoming impatient.

"Come, unlock that door."

Without replying Brown stripped off the gaudy shirt and placed it on the hook above the already discarded coat and vest. Below the short sleeves of his undershirt rose superb biceps, and there was something almost contemptuous in the glance he turned on the lighter and more elegant build of his companion.

"You will find, Hetherington," he said as he sat down in front of his glass and reached for the cold cream, "that even to the actor of fourteen years' experience there are times when the removal of a man's makeup is like tearing the veil from the long dead past."

Hetherington scowled and laid a determined hand on the doorknob. The other man, still calming rubbing cold cream on his face, spoke in cool, even tones:

"We are the only actors on this side of the house, the orchestra is making such a racket that nobody could hear you if you yelled, and I shall be under the painful necessity of smashing your head with a chair if you attempt to break that lock. Sit down, man! Sit down! I've been waiting five years for just this chance. I don't mean to lose it now."

Hetherington was trembling, though he made a strong bluff at self possession. Was this new roommate a drug fiend, or was it a case of temporary mental derangement? Perhaps Brown read the thought, for he smiled grimly and suddenly reached for the large Turkish towel. Under its vigorous treatment cold cream and pigment came off together. At the same instant he sprang to his feet. The two men stood face to face, but only for a few seconds. Then Hetherington, white to the lips, cowered against the wall and breathed heavily.

"Phil Henderson!"

"Right you are! I thought you'd remember—when the cork came off. No; don't touch that door." This as Hetherington made a feeble attempt to rattle the doorknob. "We're going to talk this over. Let's see; it was five years ago, wasn't it, that you stole my wife? Yes, stole; that's the word! She was happy enough with me till you came. I don't believe she's been as happy with you. I don't believe she ever loved you." The cords in his neck were swollen, and the words came thick and hard. "It was her professional pride you appealed to. The prospect of a New York opening turned her head and made her forget how—how—I loved her. You've had five long years of happiness that belonged to me, and—now you're going to pay for them."

A look of piteous appeal came into Hetherington's eyes, but no word passed his lips. Brown looked down upon the crouching, cringing form.

"I shall have to tell the doorkeeper you went out through the front of the house. As for your wife—your wife and mine—she will not look for you till morning, and by that time I'll be safe on the Pacific Mail steamer on my way to Australia. The world will never know, unless she tells, what caused your"—

Hetherington, crouching closer and closer to the wall, moaned just once; then the man he had wronged was upon him. There was a sudden grip on his throat, tighter and tighter. The sound of a woman's voice seemed to float to his ear. A dainty feminine form passed as in a dream before his fast closing eyes, and then—blackness.

A few minutes later Brown, with the calmness of madness, picked up coat and hat. There under the narrow shelf on which were scattered makeup materials was stretched that grim and awful thing, but Brown did not see it. He turned out the light, locked the door from the outside and, placing the key in his pocket, climbed the rickety stairway and passed out into the night.

San Francisco and the whole Pacific coast were searched for the murderer of the handsome and popular leading man, and then the mystery of the Henderson-Brown murder gave way to a more exciting scandal, a huge railroad steal. A few weeks later, however, it was revived by word from Australia that a passenger on board the Pacific Mail steamship Light of Asia had gone violently insane when two days out from San Francisco and had jumped overboard. The name under which he had taken passage was Philip Henderson, but investigation of his effects proved that he was known along the Pacific coast as Philip Brown, a monologist. And while the world wondered and talked afresh of this mystery one woman knew.

Why the English Fight.

In his book "Pictures of Many Wars" Frederick Villiers tells of one occasion when he and a French traveler were guests of the Russian general, Skobeleff. The host, speaking of the Turks, said, "I wonder why these men fight like fiends?" "It's possibly their fanaticism, just as your men fight for holy Russia and the great white czar," said Villiers. "I suppose so," said the general, "and why do your countrymen fight, monsieur?" The Frenchman replied enthusiastically, "For glory." "Bravo! And the Englishmen, Mr. Villiers?" "Oh, my countrymen have the greatest incentive of all." "A greater incentive than glory? Impossible," said the Frenchman. "Oh, yes," said Villiers easily; "British interests, you know."

His Original Idea.

"Hi, there, but you can't get on this car with that bundle!" called a Fulton avenue car conductor to a man with a bundle almost as large as a bale of hay.

"But it's raining," protested the man.

"I know that."

"And it's been raining for two days."

"Yes, and it'll probably rain all day tomorrow as well. But that's got nothing to do with that bundle."

"But it has, you see. I've got 300 dry sponges here, and I'll sop most of the wet as we go along!"

The conductor was struck by the original idea and helped the bundle aboard.—Brooklyn Citizen.

PROSPECTUS.

This Corporation has been formed for the purpose of dealing in lands in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories of Canada.

Up to a few months ago practically the whole profit from dealing in the lands in the Great Western portion of our country has been reaped by shrewd American investors, who realized the immense possibilities and the certain future of Western Canada before we Canadians realized the immense heritage which lay within the boundaries of our own country. In the last months of the year 1902, however, the promoters of this corporation, having, through the different financial institutions with which they are connected, been obliged to make a careful study of the western situation, became so thoroughly satisfied of the certain future of the Great West and of the practically assured profit from an investment in Western lands, that they decided to form a Company to deal in land in the Canadian West. With that end in view, a block of something over 125,000 acres was secured in the Big Quill Plains, in the District of Saskatchewan, and a Company known as The Eastern and Western Land Corporation, Limited, was formed for the purpose of acquiring and handling this block. The stock of the Eastern and Western Land Corporation, Limited, was placed upon the market and offered to the public for subscription in January of the present year, and so prompt was the response, that within one month it was necessary to close the stock books, and even then applications for a large quantity of stock was refused. But from a shareholder's standpoint, the best part remains to be told. Before the sales of stock were stopped, arrangements had been made with a large American Land Company for the sale of the whole of the Company's Lands at a price so largely in excess of the purchase price the stock of The Eastern and Western Land Corporation, Limited, is already a very profitable one, and is held very firmly by its present holders—and all this was done in less than one month. Can any better proof be given of the wisdom of an investment in Western lands?

At the time The Eastern and Western Land Corporation, Limited, was dealing with the Quill Plains lands, the Directors had in view several other available blocks of land, and were having the same carefully examined, but waited until the result of the one operation proved to the Canadian public the safety and profit of an investment of this kind. This has now been abundantly shown by the success of The Eastern and Western Land Corporation, Limited, and we have, therefore, no hesitation in placing before the public the stock of the Ontario and Saskatchewan Land Corporation, Limited.

It is only within the last year or two that Canadians have come to realize that Canada's future in a great measure lies in the West, a country immeasurably larger than the east, and capable of supporting in comfort millions of people. Few in Eastern Canada realize the great progress this Western country is now making, and that before many years the West will surpass the East in point of population. Immigrants are pouring in, and the people of the United States especially are investing immense sums in land and holding for the rise which they know is sure to come. Lands in the West are increasing rapidly in value. Investments in them now are bound to realize handsome profits. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company in 1902, sold 2,420,440 acres, as against 830,922 acres for the previous year; The Canada Northwest Land Company sold 516,000 acres, as against 120,000 acres for the previous year. The Saskatchewan Valley Land Company, of St. Paul, Minn., sold over 1,000,000 acres of land in 1902, at a profit of some millions of dollars. The Haslam Land and Investment Company, of St. Paul, Minn., sold 300,000 acres in one year. The Northwest Colonization Company, of St. Paul, disposed of over 500,000 acres, and if to these be added the lands sold by the Dominion and the Manitoba Governments, The Canadian Northern Railway and other Companies, Syndicates and individuals, an opinion may be formed of the immense advances this Western country has made in one year.

The Ontario and Saskatchewan Land Corporation, Limited, has purchased a large tract of land in what is known as the Vermillion River District, in Western Saskatchewan. It has been the tradition for years in the West that the most fertile belt of land in Canada, and therefore in the world, is situated in this district, which lies along and between the Battle River to the south, and the Saskatchewan to the north. In this fertile country we have the right to select 300,000 acres of specially chosen land, and our selectors are now in the district carefully examining the land, section by section. This land will lie along and between the Edmonton extension of The Canadian Pacific Railway, and the Trans-Continental line of The Canadian Northern Railway, thus assuring to settlers the immense advantage of two competing lines of railway, each within easy access to their farms and to markets. For soil, water, timber, fuel, grass and hay this land is unsurpassed in the world, and these points are what determine the settler in choosing land. Our land immediately adjoins the Barr Settlement of British settlers, and also Dr. Adams' colony of Nestorians, and the placing of over 20,000 settlers by these organizations in this district within the next year practically assures a rapid increase in the value of our lands.

No lands are purchased by this Corporation, except after a careful and capable report by the most experienced land selectors in the West, and thus practically every element of risk is eliminated from an investment in the shares of this Company.

This is an investment which should especially appeal to the Canadian public, as it gives a practical certainty of profitable returns, without the risk so often run in investing in companies doing business of a hazardous nature, and it is an investment which Canadians, believing in their own country and its future, feeling that in so doing they are helping to develop their own land.

The Union Trust Company, Limited, now offers $800,000 of the Capital Stock of this Corporation, divided into 8,000 Shares, of $100 each for subscription at par: 25 per cent. to be paid in on application, 10 per cent. in 30 days thereafter, and 10 per cent. further in 60 days and the balance as called for by the Directors if deemed necessary. Applications for stock will be accepted only in order of their receipt by the Trustees, and should be addressed to The Union Trust Company, Limited, Toronto. Applications and also the Prospectus of the Company, may be obtained from The Union Trust Company, Limited, Toronto, or from any branch of the Merchants Bank of Canada, or of THE UNION BANK OF CANADA, through whom also applications and payments may be forwarded.

MALABAR

By Frank H. Sweet

Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company

"Do you think Malabar will run?"

The girl did not reply, but her lips began to tremble. The face of the man bending toward her grew dark, but it was the darkness of despair, not of purpose.

"Perhaps if he knew what you have told me." He hesitated. "Malabar is brave and strong and noble. He would not stoop to a small deed."

"I promised him with the new year that he should run for me at the green corn dance. I—I did not know then," looking piteously into the gloomy, delicate face above her. "Malabar would not stoop to a small deed—no. But this is not small. He has let it be known that he will run for me. He would not turn from his purpose a hair's breadth—not if he saw something in front that would crush him. And—and it is right for a great warrior, Ankona, but it is hard."

"We will fly, White Egret, into the deepest fastnesses of the Everglades!" he cried hoarsely. "There are places where even Malabar's relentless arms would be powerless."

But White Egret only looked at him with sorrowful eyes.

"We are Seminoles, Ankona," she rebuked gently. "You know our laws. You would be the last one to break them."

His arm fell back impotent. Yes; he would be the last one to break them.

"Perhaps Malabar will not be proof against the black drink this time," he suggested. "He has killed, and it will be made strong. Others have died. But, no, no! Malabar is a great chief and a better man for the tribe than I. He has tasted the black drink before and will not die."

"You say well, Ankona," broke in a stern, powerful voice, and a figure, dark, towering and implacable, stepped from the gathering shadows. "I shall not fall before the black draft. It would not be a fit ending for a warrior."

White Egret threw back her head and regarded him steadily. Ankona bowed his head.

"You heard all?" he questioned in a strained voice.

"All," calmly. "It was childish prattle. I shall run for the White Egret, for have I not said it, and has she not made her promise? It is only when we forget our promises that we become weak and childish. Ankona is young yet and should be humored. I will let him run the race with me and will give him one-third the distance start as due to his weakness. Now go!"

They went, with a single despairing glance toward each other. Ankona's face was bloodless and set—bloodless with pride crushed, set with foreknowledge of utter inability to cope with this man of iron will and strength. Better be crushed than allowed to exist by sufferance.

Other forms were appearing from the forest—warriors in full headdress and leggings, carrying the guns they had purchased from white traders; squaws with camp equipage, medicine men stalking solemnly and mysteriously, with eyes bent upon the ground; children and dogs, some from the camp on White River bay, some from Okeechobee, some from the shifting camp among the keys—all coming for the great annual green corn dance, where tribal laws were to be made, marriages celebrated and criminals punished.

These criminals were now moving unwatched, unnoticed, in many cases unknown even among the others. Whatever crime they had committed during the year had gone unpunished at the time, but now tribal honor brought them here to expiate their misdeeds. On the morrow they would be placed in closely shut tents and almost suffocated with steam made by pouring water upon hot stones. After that they would drink of the black draft. If they died, they were guilty. On the other hand, if they were strong enough to survive, their innocence would be clearly established. Later the racing for wives would take place.

Malabar was known to every one—revered, feared, honored. All knew that he was to race for a wife and that before the race he was to drink the dreaded black draft. Ordinarily they would have scoffed at such absurdity. If a man drank and lived, it would be a notable proof of strength, but to drink and live and then race for a wife. As to his crime, it was only what any of them would have done if brave enough. He had killed a man! True, but he had been provoked. He must be punished, for that was the law, but they did not wish him harm.

And they all knew Ankona, the gentle one, the dreamer and story maker, and, though none of them revered or feared him, they all had a tender place for him in their hearts. If he could race with White Egret and win her, they would be glad. But Malabar came first, for White Egret herself had made it so.

Malabar was the first who presented himself for punishment. While he was in the closed tent the tribe stood about silent, with eyes furtively watching the point whence the condemned would walk forth innocent or be brought forth guilty.

At length the tent flap was raised, and he staggered out. For a moment he stood there in the sunlight, his hand to his head, swaying blindly. Then they saw him throw his shoulders back with a mighty effort, as one whose will was strong enough to cast off the weight of all things. Slowly he turned away from them and strode into the forest to be by himself. That, too, was Malabar's way.

Not until the maidens were brought forth did Malabar reappear.

"I will race for my squaw at once," he called in a voice that all could hear "before the White Egret grows weak through waiting, and I shall give her one-half the distance start because she is a woman. Ankona will also enter the race with me, and I will give him one-third the distance because he is but half a man. Let them be placed."

The spectators stared and gasped. Ankona, his rival, to enter the race and to be given one-third the distance, and White Egret, the fleet footed, to be given one-half! No one could win a race thus handicapped. And yet was it not Malabar?

He swept them with his glance.

"I shall win," he said confidently, "because I will have it so."

Ankona had been watching him with baleful eyes. For an instant he drew back as though to spurn the concession. Then, as he saw White Egret being led forward to her place, he hurried to his own position.

And for a brief space after the signal was given and they were speeding on with straining muscles he had a wild, insane belief that he would win.

But only for a brief space. Then came that steady, accelerating, implacable rush behind, drawing nearer and nearer, then opposite, then passing. When three-fourths of the distance had been covered, Malabar was four march paces ahead. Suddenly he turned. White Egret was almost within his reach.

"Stop, Ankona!" Malabar called. "Have I not won?"

Ankona did not answer.

"Have I not won?" sternly.

"Yes, Malabar, you have won," Ankona answered, and his voice was full of a great despair.

"It is well. Now you may go on and catch the girl. Malabar will have no squaw who does not come to him willingly."

And he turned proudly from the race and strode back into the forest.

Some Remarkable Guns.

At the siege of Rhodes the Turks constructed mortars by hollowing out cavities in the solid rock at the proper angle, and in the arsenal at Malta is a trophy of the long and glorious defense of Valetta, in a Turkish gun, about a six pounder, composed of a copper tube coiled over with strong rope and "jacketed" with rawhide. In the same collection are some antique "quick firers," breechloaders, with small bores and immensely long barrels, like punt guns. The Malay pirates put great trust in the long brass swivel guns called "lela," and in Borneo these lelas were used as a kind of currency, large sums being estimated in guns.

The Chinese cast excellent bronze guns (there is a fine specimen of them in Devonport dockyard), but so little did they understand gunnery that in the so called "opium war" the forts of the Bocca Tigris, defending the Canton river, had the guns built immovably into the walls. The Sikh gunners opposed to us in the two Punjab wars, though they loaded with amazing recklessness, shoveling in the powder from open boxes, stuck to their guns to the last. The blood of the first man killed was smeared on the gun, and the whole detachment died beside it sooner than retreat.—Chambers' Journal.

His Pet Superstition.

"Superstition seems to be connected in the minds of most people with women, ladders, rabbits' feet and horseshoes," said the young girl at the piano. "As a matter of fact, however, I know that men are fully as superstitious as the women of my acquaintance, and sometimes more so. One young man of my acquaintance, for instance, who has literary yearnings and who feels sure he could astonish the public with his brilliant stories if he could only get some editor to accept them, spends his summers in the country gathering inspiration, local color and—four leaf clovers. When winter comes he returns to his hallroom in the city, writes stories by the wholesale and dispatches with each consignment to the editors a four leaf clover. Sometimes the articles are accepted, and then the writer ascribes his success to the talisman. More often, however, they are returned, with the mascot in a more or less crumpled condition, and he spends what leisure hours he has in trying to figure out why it is those clovers don't work every time. Never for a moment does he ascribe failure to any faults in his manuscripts. Isn't that the limit in the way of superstition?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Dear Pins.

In the time of Henry VIII. parliament passed a law which declared that on and after that date pins should not be sold for more than 6 shillings 8 pence per 1,000.

Birdseye Maple.

"Birdseye maple," a term frequently employed by furniture makers and sellers, does not imply any special variety of the maple tree. Birdseye maple is merely a veneer cut from a piece of well grained maple timber and glued on the surface of some cheaper wood, just as any other veneer.

Charlotte Bronte.

Charlotte Bronte was nearly forty when she married, and died almost immediately after, so that she may be counted among literary spinsters.

A GREAT SCHEME

YANKEE CAPITALIST TO THE FRONT.

An American in a Fair Way to Break the Treasury of Havana, Cuba—Dead Dogs and High Explosives Do The Trick—Bonuty on Sharks is Big.

All Havana is talking of the novel "get-rich-quick" scheme inaugurated by John G. Neumeister, of Chicago, a financier and cheese manufacturer, who spent eight weeks in Cuba investigating the island's opportunities.

If developed to its fullest extent it would either bankrupt the city or force the municipal council to repeal what is considered one of the most beneficial ordinances ever adopted. The ordinance was only recently passed. It provides for the payment of bounties for the slaying of sharks. For every female shark killed in Havana waters $3 is to be paid, for every male, $2.

Mr. Neimeister was in Havana when the ordinance was first published He began immediately to "work the wires" between Havana and Chicago. He saw boundless possibilities in the shark killing business. He interested Chicago friends and in less than a week the Havana-American Shark Syndicate (unlimited) was prepared to begin operations.

The Chicago capitalist confided his plans to a few Havana acquaintances, who told the story. A large quantity of a peculiar high explosive was ordered shipped to Havana at once. At the same time fifty men were put to work capturing and corraling all the stray dogs to be found in the city and country adjacent. These men were given authority to buy dogs if they could not obtain them otherwise. A small farm was rented near the city for the accommodation of the canines.

And why dogs? Dog flesh is the daintiest epicurean morsel that could possibly be served to a hungry shark. Experience has shown that one dead dog afloat will attract every shark within a radius of ten miles. Man-eating sharks are, more correctly, dog-eating sharks. As peaches and cream to the average juvenile, as ripe, red watermelon to the Southern negro, so is floating dog to the well regulated shark.

Thus Mr. Neumeister and his associates figured, and thus they prepared to execute. They also knew that sharks could communicate with each other with wonderful facility. Given one dead dog in the waters af Havana harbor, the system of communication practised in sharkdom would soon summon every dog-loving shark reachable in the Gulf and the Atlantic.

The syndicate proposed first to feed a few unloaded dogs to the sharks, in order that the news might become generally circulated. A few days of this sort of baiting, then the high explosive was to get in its deadly work. The dogs were to be sent adrift with an explosive cartridge tied to each of them. A hundred or more hungry man-eaters would begin a combat for the prize, a man in a boat would press a button, and the cartridge would do the rest.

The supply of dogs in Cuba and the supply of sharks in the ocean being alike inexhaustible; the established fact that four pounds of the explosive attached to one dog would furnish the syndicate with at least a dozen sharks, averaging in municipal bounty $2.50 each; a "catch" from one boat not consuming more than thirty minutes; one hundred boats in operation, bringing in 2,400 sharks an hour, or $6,000 bounty every sixty minutes—why, it was a Klondike game that made the cheese industry and the stock market seem a waste of time!

The question that is affording the Havana-American Shark Syndicate the greatest concern is, Which will last longer, the dogs and sharks or Havana's treasury?

Sentenced to Death.

A cable from Pretoria, Transvaal, says: Five private soldiers belonging to the second battalion of the Leinster regiment were sentenced to death in the supreme court there on April 21. The conviction of the men followed their trial in connection with a riot which took place at the barracks, March 28. When the military police attempted to arrest a number of drunken soldiers, the latter, reinforced by some of their comrades, secured rifles and ammunition and opened fire on the military police. One of the latter, a member of the Leinster regiment, was killed and sixteen men were injured.

Quite a sensation was created at Swan Lake, Man., on April 21 when a searching party of half-breeds found the body of William Jordan, who has been missing since Christmas eve. Mr. Jordan was engaged with Mr. Laseier as a farm hand, and went to Swan Lake to make some Christmas purchases, which were found beside him. On his way home he got a ride from Mr. George Crawford who let him off his rig within two miles of Mr. Laseier's place. That was the last seen of him until found the other day, although searching parties have been out on several occasions. The coroner, Dr. Macklin, after examining the body and investigating the circumstances, decided it was not necessary to hold an inquest.

A party of English farmers have embarked on the steamship Saxonia at Liverpool. It is noteworthy that Irishmen alone fight shy of Canada. A large Irish exodus is now in progress, most of whom will go to Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania.

It would seem from the following excerpt from the Svenka Dagblabt, of Stockholm, that this country is being regarded as a fertile spot for the prison laborers of the old world: "On Tuesday evening last eight prisoners from Horsen's penitentiary left for Esbjerb, whence they are to be despatched, together with some more more prisoners from Vridslos, for Canada, where they have obtained work at railway building at on farms. It is intended to despatch other prisoners from the Copenhagen prisons.

Some time ago a beauty show was organized at Milan, which was well patronized, and eighty-three young ladies were judged to be the standard of beauty which entitled them to be prize-winners. But no prizes were forthcoming, until the other day, when the announcement was made by the promoters of the show that they had now opened a lottery for men only, the conditions being that the drawer of the winning number must marry one of the prize winners in the beauty show, who would in turn receive a proportionate share of the proceeds of the beauty show as a dowry. If there are no marriages the promoters are to have the proceeds of both shows.

A Wonderful Organ.

Mr. Drus, formerly a laundryman of Regina, has presented the new Roman Catholic church at Moose Jaw with a cabinet organ of his own make. The uniqueness of the gift lies in the fact that Mr. Drus patiently collected from the ground around the shooting targets outside of the town of Regina, the flattened lead of bullets fired at rifle practice, a sufficient quantity of which he moulded for metal pipes for the organ. The buffalo bones that had been bleaching on the wind-swept prairies were picked up. These bones were taken home and boiled and ground, and eventually reappeared in the shape of keys for the keyboard. There are four stops on the instrument, which are flute, hautboy, prinpal and bourdon. The tone of the organ is one which cannot fail to please the ear, being rich and full in volume, and a decided accuisition to the musical services of the church. This shows extraordinary patience and industry, if not genius, on the part of Mr. Drus, who is a German, and in his own country was an organ builder.

American vs English Boys.

A London cable says: R. C. Lehman, the famous rowing coach, draws a comparison between American and English boys, in the last number of the Pall Mall Magazine. Lehmann, an American boy, has taken over English sports ready-made, with all their traditions of manliness and honor formed by many years of slow growth, and has thrown himself into them with passionate, feverish intensity that passes an Englishman's comprehension. In the matter of education, Mr. Lehmann considers that the ordinary American beats the English boy out of sight. He writes there can be no comparison between the two. The English public school boy is one of the most profoundly frank creatures on the face of the earth. Of geography he knows only as much as he may have gathered by collecting postage stamps. With English literature he is not even on terms of distant politeness. The style and composition of his letters would make a housemaid smile, and modern history, whether of his own country or of the world in general, is a sealed book to him. Mr. Lehmann's article will be read with extreme interest in the English public schools and universities and it will be strange if some equally well known writer does not come to the defence of the English boy.

Portugal digs less coal than any other European country. Her total product of coal is only 22,000 tons a year. New South Wales digs yearly just twice as much coal as all Spain produces.

REV. MR. BARR SPEAKS.

Founder of the All-British Colony Interviewed in Winnipeg.

Rev. I. M. Barr, the originator of the all-British colony, and its manager, arrived in Winnipeg from Ottawa on April 17, where he had been arranging some details of the scheme with the department of the interior.

Asked by a reporter for a statement as to the reports current about the transportation of the colony being broken up and of many of the people being dissatisfied, Mr. Barr exclaimed:

"Well, bless my heart, my dear fellow, there is nothing in it! If I spent my time denying all the silly rumors afloat I would have very little for business. All this talk of people being dissatisfied is entirely false. The entire colony is in good spirits, and what better proof of satisfaction would you want. The trouble is, we had a few blatant socialists on board who had to talk, and naturally they stirred up some trouble, but outside of that everything is going first class. With a great movement like this there are always some people who cannot be pleased. We have a number of men who have very little money, and it is these who are doing the kicking and who want everything. I do not say there was not some cause for grumbling on the ship, but we did absolutely everything we could to alleviate it, and I think every sensible person was satisfied. The main trouble was the butter, which was not up to the mark, and was not very palatable, but the rest of the food was good, and there was plenty of it. A lot of the people have never travelled and have been used to luxuries, and it took them some time to understand the matter; but I can safely say that all were finally quite satisfied.

"As to the matter of transportation, no difficulty whatever will be experienced. Besides the force already there, I have 200 horses on the road from Toronto, and we have 100 teams with sets of harness, waggons, and complete outfits, and we are going to be quite capable of managing everything.

"I did not intend when I started leaving the party on the route, but after a conference with Mr. Smart, deputy minister of the interior, we thought it necessary to make some arrangements. We have arranged for three post offices, and for the carrying of all mails, express matter, baggage etc., to the colony, which will, of course, have to be done by horses, until the railway is built. I saw Mr. Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern, at Ottawa, and I have arranged with him for men to go through the colony to locate three towns, where good post offices will be placed. This will avoid the difficulty of having our town off the line of railway when it goes through, and will save confusion."

As to the matter of homesteads, Mr. Barr said they were all located by himself and officers of the government, which was the only fair way to do. Members of the party were still in England, and their interests here had to be safeguarded. It would not do to let their homesteads be selected, and the best of the land all taken by this party. If anyone, he claimed, was not satisfied with their location, they had the liberty of going elsewhere and settling where they chose. There was nothing binding whatever in the compact.

"Naturally," he said, "as the director of the work, I am the target at which all missles are aimed, but I don't pay any attention to them, for I havn't got the time, and I know all the best of the colony are quite satisfied. I have been working eighteen, twenty, and more, hours a day. In a gigantic enterprise like this the work is enormous. I have had to personally open 150 to twice that number of letters a day, and answer a perfect avalanche of questions, and the work is no child's play.

"I am satisfied we have the best tract of unoccupied land in the country. I know it all. I have been all over it and dug on every section to examine the soil, and it is firstclass. We had to go a long way from the railway to get a block of land as good as that, and you will find it is excellent land and the best to be had.

"This party is but the herald of the colony. After spending the summer in the country, I will return to England in the autumn, and will bring over 10,000 more next March, and I can assure you that if we are successful it will be only the beginning of the emigration of this class to Canada."

News comes from the west of a serious accident at the coal mines at Canmore, Alberta, a few days ago. Two men, named George and Alexander Pickering, were working in the mines when they struck a gas pocket, which blew out, and both were killed. A verdict of accidental death was returned.

FATAL ACCIDENT

TWO MEN LOSE LIVES AT SELKIRK.

Sudden Release of the Tug Sir Hector From its Winter Moorings Results in a Distressing Double Fatality—Narrow Escape of Six O hers.

At West Selkirk, on April 20, occurred a fatality such as perhaps seldom thrills men. The government tug Sir Hector, was being launched from the winter moorings at the slough. Everything was in readiness and the boat was slowly being let down, when the bow cable gave way and let the craft down suddenly. Eight men were in the water side of the boat and six had a narrow escape. These managed to escape by running into the deep water and swimming round, while one being near the helm, ran round to safety.

But John Davies, who was managing operations, and Ed. Ryder, a laborer, were not so fortunate. They were close up to the boat and were buried beneath it in an instant. The tug from the freezers was brought down, and after about two hours' work, succeeded in dragging the Sir Hector into deep water. Meanwhile, the Reid boys did noble work and stayed on the tug Sir Hector at the risk of their lives.

The men were working in sticking mud, and their movements were made with difficulty. This impeded the progress to safety of the two who lost their lives.

The men killed were John W. Davies, foreman, a resident of Selkirk, and Ed. Ryder, of the same town.

BRITAIN'S FOOD SUPPLY.

A Royal Commission Will Make Enquiries.

A London cable says: A royal commission has been appointed to consider the desirability of adopting measures in addition to the maintenance of a strong fleet by which Great Britain's supplies of food can be better secured. The movement, which has led to the appointment of this commission began in 1896, but it was not until the beginning of the present year that it became at all vigorous and influential. Two representative meetings were held in London recently with the object of drawing public attention to the fact that a war with a great power would endanger the nation's food supply. The deputation which was appointed to wait on the premier insisted that if war were to break out the people of this country would, to say the least, be driven to the direst straights, and Mr. Balfour, although he did not indulge in a pessimistic view of the matter, thought that a good reason had been shown for the holding of an official inquiry into the subject. The Prince of Wales takes as much interest in the question of the nation's food supply, as the King does in London's housing problems, and his inclusion in the list of commissioners gives every satisfaction, especially to those who have not forgotten his famous Guildhall speech on his return from his colonial tour and his warning that Great Britain must wake up.

A Real Old Timer.

The Fort Steel Prospector contains the following item concerning William Robinson, who is about to open out in business in Edmonton:

William Robinson, better known as "Monte Carlo," has gone to Edmonton. "Monte" has been at the 'front' since the days of the construction of the Central Pacific, and has been among the pioneers into every new mining camp of the west. He is well known, not only to the people of the west, but to many prominent state officials and eastern people. He attended Horace Greely upon his famous stage coach trip across the plains, and was one of the General Grant party on its western tour, while the general was president of the United States. His good humor and drollery attracted the attention of Mark Twain, who, in speaking of him as a cook, said: "He can take a piece of dog, cougar or coyote and make it a steak or a stew so fine that if you didn't know any better you could not tell the difference. And at pastry he can take a turnip, a piece of red flannel and a quart of vinegar and make a mince pie that would make an epicure's mouth water."

Monte came to Fort Steele in the early days, and has been doing a good business, but the coming railroad is disturbing his peace of mind. He will have none of it, but will go to the far Northwest. When life was young and knew not guile the witchery of the wilds laid him by the heels and dragged him into the hills, and it is dragging him still. The people of Edmonton will find in him qualities of wit and humor that are produced only in the land of rolling cotton, long evening twilights and mellow sundowns.

Between the ravages of an unusually severe winter and the breaking out of a malignant disease known as "big head" among their flocks within the past few weeks, the sheepmen of Utah, Southern Idaho and Eastern Nevada are believed to have sustained losses that will amount to about 50 per cent. Should this estimate be correct, the loss in Utah alone will amount to about one million head.

FOUGHT TO THE DEATH.

A California Outlaw Kills Two Officers Before Being Shot.

A dispatch from Bakersfield, Cal., dated April 20, says: James McKinney, the outlaw, was shot and killed here yesterday. Deputy Sheriff Tibbits was also killed and Constable Packard was fatally shot.

Sheriffs Kelley, of Kern, Collins of Tulare, and Leovin, of Arizona counties, with Officers Will and Burt Tibbets, Gus Tower and City Marshal Packard, surrounded McKinney yesterday in a Chinese house. Will Tibbets and Packard approached McKinney in the house and ordered him to surrender. McKinney answered by shooting

Will Tibbets was shot through the stomach and died soon after. Packard was shot through the neck and shoulders and dangerously wounded. Burt Tibbets, a brother of the dead deputy sheriff, shot McKinney in the mouth and neck, killing him.

McKinney had been in Bakerfield two days and was harbored by friends in a Chinese joss house. The house was a regular fort. In the place with McKinney was Hul Hulsee, a desperado. McKinney had a sawed-off shot-gun and Hulsee had a revolver. Hulsee would not obey the order to come out of the house, and the fire department was ordered to the scene. Hulsee then gave himself up and was taken to the county jail. An immense mob surrounded the jail and tried to take him from the officers. Another accomplice of McKinney was known to be in the house where the battle took place, but he would not surrender. The house was set on fire and the man was smoked out and taken to jail.

McKinney was accused of having committed several murders. He was a native of California, and was first sent to the penitentiary from Tulare county for assault to murder, and after his release went to Randburg, Cal., where he figured in some further shooting trouble. He escaped trial, coming to Bakersfield soon afterwards, where, in the latter part of 1900, he shot and killed Tom Sears, a gambler, as the result of a dispute over a game of cards. Eo one saw the fight, and McKinney was acquitted.

Last July in Potterville, he killed Billy Lynn, and wounded Constable John Willis and another man, in a drunken row. He made a sensational escape from capture, and for several months wandered practically unmolested about the country. A few weeks ago Sheriff Collins located him at Hermosillo, Mexico, and an application for his extradition was made. The Mexican authorities, however, had released him before the receipt of the papers and he disappeared again.

Nothing more was heard of him until April 5, when news came from Kingman, Arizona, that McKinney had murdered Charles Blakely, known as the "Cowboy Pianist," and Roy Winchester, a young miner. Nothing definite is known of the cause of the murders, but it is thought that McKinney took the men for officers and laid in wait for them on the trail. After the shooting he went to a ranch and compelled the rancher to shoe two horses for him and then rode away.

Posses started in pursuit of him, but he eluded them and succeeded in reaching Bakersfield, where his two brothers live.

Diamonds at Hudson's Bay.

William H. Hobbs, professor of mineralogy at the University of Wisconsin, has been examining into the origin of the several diamonds that have been found in various parts of Wisconsin. He soon discovered, says the American Exporter, that all these diamonds, besides a number of smaller ones, had been found along the ridges of land formed millions of years ago by the great glaciers that had moved down from the north. He at once concluded that the precious gems had been carried to the places where they were found by those moving ice fields that are known to have existed long before there was any life on this planet. When at last the glaciers stopped and melted, the diamonds which they had carried on their backs were dropped upon the ground to be discovered ages afterward by Wisconsin farmers. The important question, therefore, to be answered is: At what place did the glaciers pick up the diamonds? Professor Hobbs replies by tracing seven lines northward from the places where the stones were found, showing that they come almost to a point just south of Hudson's Bay. "The ancestral home of those diamonds," says Professor Hobbs, "must be in the wilderness of Canada between the points where the several tracks converge upon one another. It is by no means improbable that when the barren territory about Hudson's Bay is thoroughly explored a region for profitable diamond mining may be revealed."

Arthur Van Meter, a prominent merchant of Salt Lake City, has just broken a self-imposed fast, which began more than forty days ago, for the cure of dropsy. He suffered no distress after the first three days, and appeared to grow strong and healthy. The dropsical conditions have disappeared. When he began the remarkable fast he weighed 250 lbs. He now weighs 127.

MILLS SHUT DOWN.

Conditions of Milling in Western States has become Intolerable.

A dispatch from Minneapolis, dated April 16, says: All the Minneapolis mills, and practically all the Northwest mills, shut down indefinitely tonight. Milling conditions are intolerable because of the high freight rates, the high cost of cash wheat, the heavy shrinkage of feed and the abnormally low price of flour. Such a condition has not prevailed for a quarter of a century.

Minneapolis millers charge the railroads with giving wheat a better showing than flour in their rates, that is why every flour mill has been closed indefinitely, throwing 2,000 men out of employment. It is one of the greatest industrial sensations ever known in the Northwest.

The Northwestern Miller says:—"Every flour mill in Minneapolis and practically all of the merchant spring wheat mills in Minnesota and the Northwest, shut down to-night, and will cease turning out flour for an indefinite period.

"This act has been forced upon the millers by the conditions surrounding the manufacture and sale of flour. For some time, owing to the price of cash wheat, the high freight rate and the depressed state of the flour markets, mills have been operating at a loss, but the crowning disadvantage which has paralyzed the milling industry throughout the Northwest, was the act to-day of the line boats, operating between Duluth and Buffalo, in moving wheat on a basis of two cents per bushel, while the present proportionate rate on flour from Duluth to Buffalo is maintained at 9 cents per 100 lbs., equivalent to 54.10 a bushel."

A probably fatal burning accident occurred at Dunnville, Ont., on April 17. Mrs. Jacob Cramp was cooking dinner over a gas stove when her clothes caught fire. She rushed into the street a mass of flames. Her cries brought the neighbors to her assistance, and the flames were extinguished, but she was seriously burned and is not expected to live.

The London Board of Trade returns show that in the first quarter of the year 65,581 cattle were imported from the United States, 20,000 fewer than in the same period of 1902. From Canada came 18,690, double the imports of last year, while only 3,650 came from the Argentine Republic.

The minister of war has just discovered that only one man in a thousand in the Russian army possesses a pocket handkerchief. He has, in consequence, invited tenders for 500,000 handkerchiefs, which will be decorated with Russian flags and other patriotic devices.

Cut in Price of Shingles.

A dispatch from Vancouver says:—The price of shingles, instead of being raised ten cents as announced by the shingle manufacturers, is to be reduced ten cents. This change of 20 cents in price is the result of no duty being charged on shingles imported from the United States. Before the law prohibiting the export of logs went into force the Puget Sound mills were utilizing British Columbia logs to manufacture their shingles, following this advantage up by shipping them back to Canada duty free to compete with the shingles manufactured on this side. Now that this practice has been stopped, Puget Sound dealers have started 19 yards in the Canadian Northest, and are handling the shingles imported by them from the other side duty free, and selling on the spot in the Northwest markets. This is why the Canadian coast shingle mills had to make a cut instead of an advance in the price of shingles.

UP AND DOING.

It gives us great pleasure to publish in detail the business transacted at the big fire-meeting on Monday evening, as well as the results of the first day's canvass by the committee. The towns people were asleep for a long time but they are thoroughly awakened at last to a sense of their responsibility and the gravity of the fire protection question.

The business-like manner in which the discussion was conducted at the meeting, the harmony which prevailed throughout and the keen interest and enthusiasm displayed by all present, all went to show that the town is thoroughly alive to the constant and dread danger from fire.

We congratulate the citizens upon the success that attended the public meeting and upon the gratifying results of individual contributions which show public spiritedness and a desire to promote the general welfare at the expense of private sacrifice. We trust that these who have so liberally come to the assistance of the town in subscribing for the purchase of a chemical engine and the erection of a fire hall will not be forgotten by our first city fathers when Fernie is incorporated.

Now, while the iron is hot, is the time to strike. It has taken some time for the town to awaken to a realization of its danger and we trust that the interest now shown will not wane. Next week we hope to publish a large list of additional subscribers. With the aid of three or four thousand dollars a very fair fire fighting service ought to be established in Fernie. It is the aim of the Executive to have an active membership of thirty members who are to be chosen from the entire membership and who are to be exempt from the regular fee, to buy suitable clothing for use at fires, to purchase a lot, erect a suitable fire-hall, where all the appliances will be kept, where the hose can be dried conveniently and where at least 10 members can sleep and to secure more hose, buckets, ladders and hooks, etc With these improvements Fernie need not be ashamed of its fire brigade and their appliances.

THE LAW AND GAMBLERS.

Under this caption the Toronto Globe says editorially:

"The law is against the gamblers. The long delayed decision in the case referred to the Court of Appeal nearly two years ago clears away the chief obstacle said to bar effective action on the part of the Crown authorities. Where cards or dice are played for money and a rake-off is taken for any purpose whatsoever, that house is a "gaming-house," its owner is a "keeper" and the players are "frequenters." So the decision of the Court of Appeal is read and the Crown Attorney, the Chief of Police, and the Police Magistrate are gathering themselves together for systematic and thorough work in clearing the city of these pest-houses.

The citizens are given cause to expect that something worth while will be done in this crusade, and they will watch with steady intent, as will interested citizens of other cities where gambling is prevalent, to see the fulfillment of the promises now being made. It is expected that the long restrained energies of the Crown authorities, now that the way is open for action, will find sudden and even sensational vent in a general campaign against the gambling fraternity; and the public will appreciate such efforts all the more highly and morality will profit by them all the more largely if they are not only vigorous and spectacular, but also unremitting, sustained and efficient. It will not do to talk about obstacles. Despite "electrical bells and other devices and closely watched doors," the authorities must make a reputation for doing things. And if there are other mountains of difficulty, they, too, must be dug out of the way."

This decision may have an important bearing on the gambling question in Fernie, as a case was recently dismissed here on the same ground as was held in dispute in Toronto. It is certain that if this interpretation of the law were generally accepted the gambling evil could easily be kept in subjection.

RICH LANDS SAVED.

BLOCKS 4593 AND 4594 S. E. KOOTENAY STILL BELONG TO THE PROVINCE.

Legislature Unanimously Adopt the Bill Rescinding the Order-in-Council—The Government's Defence.

The adoption by unanimous vote on Monday of the government bill ratifying the cancellation of the grant of blocks 4,593 end 4,594, in lieu of earned lands for section 3 of the Columbia & Western railway, is accepted by parliamentarians as one of the most significant pieces of legislation the British Columbia parliament has ever approved.

Not only was the principle of the bill approved, but the measure would have gone through committee and third stages forthwith and been assented to in one evening but for the unexpected objection of Gilmour, who, while he voted affirmatively, desire to guarantee that there shall be no secondary alienation to any rival corporation as has been hinted at, and will in this direction move an additional claus on Tuesday, that "the lands herein referred to, save and except as to timber thereon, shall not be sold, leased or otherwise alienated except by act of the legislature."

The Government in defence of their previous action went over the history of the several orders-in-council relative to the land grant and pleaded that the previous government had undeniably overrun the transmitted direction of the legislature under the subsidy act, but had done so in the desire to make a better bargain for the country by reducing the area of the gift. They urged that an error having been committed it was plain duty to rectify it by the most direct and positive method at hand, no one being harmed thereby, since the Company had never received a title to them, since the crown grants, though issued, had not been delivered. The Government had taken advantage of the large discretionary powers given by the act and upon the advice of the best legal men they had varied the location of the allotted land. Commissioner Wells stated that they had hoped to get the strongest possible company to develop the resourceful new field and appreciably reduce the granted area in the interests of the country. Hence the proposal to give blocks 4,593 and 4,594, in lieu of a larger area. When the deeds were made out they had never left his possession although he had taken them to Montreal when he went to discuss the matter with Shaughnessy, in the hope of getting a better bargain for the country. As he could not he had declined to complete the transaction by delivery of the grants. Since then the Canadian Pacific had never been heard from in the matter, and the first intimation of the claim was the ejectment proceedings, taken,, no doubt, because the company had been refused a petition of rights to test their claim in the courts.

MORRISSEY

From Our Own Correspondent.

Foss & McDonald are grading a side track at the new town of Morrissey Mines.

H. F. Martin, superintendent for the Coal Company here, has gone to Spokane and Seattle for a two weeks' visit.

Thos. R. Stockett, jr., General Superintendent for the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., was here on Monday and Tuesday.

A. Hamilton and Hugh McDougall have been appointed by the commissioner of mines, on the board of examiners, for the Morrissey mines.

Some one saw a large bear on the trail just above Joe Gaul's store last Sunday. Winter must be about over when these animals make their appearance.

Building has commenced at the new town of Morrissey Mines. Mr. Sample is building a real estate office and a barn for Mr. Crahan, the town-site man.

Today (Friday) promises to be a record breaker in the output of coal from the Morrissey mines, they expect to get out pretty close to eight hundred tons.

Mr. Oldland, of Pa., who has the contract to build the coke ovens at this place arrived on Monday last ; he will commence work on the ovens the first of the week.

T. H. Huber, is laid np for repairs, was taken sick on Wednesday threatened with pneumonia. Dr. Willson thinks however that he will have him up and about soon.

Mr. W. J. Moore, informs us that he received from Ottawa his appointment and supplies as postmaster for the new town of Morrissey Mines. The office will be opened on May 1st.

The miners held a mass meeting last Sunday at the C. P. R. camp and elected a check weighman ; there is more or less dissatisfaction among the miners in regard to the weight of their coal.

The health officer has been around and notified the people to clean up their premises and it is gratifying to note how willingly the people have complied with the requirements of the law in this respect.

Mr. Bryan succeeded in placing the new locomotive on the track to the mines on Thursday. It was quite a task to take this engine up the hill by way of the steep wagon road, but this he did without any mishap.

Mr. Hanson, of Fort Steele, has the plans drawn for a twenty thousand dollar hotel. We are informed that he will ship from his mills a large amount of seasoned lumber to the new town to be used in the construction of his and other buildings.

Mr. Tranter, the policeman has received information to the effect that Mrs. Tranter, who is visiting her parents in Alta., is very ill. Mr. Tranter will be unable to join his wife for a few days owing to the meeting of the commissioners and his presence being required before them.

Cranbrook

From the Herald.

Al. Erickson attended a masonic meeting at Fernie last Friday evening.

Mrs. J. G. Taylor, has returned from a visit with Mrs. J. Fraser at Michel.

Dr. Corsan, of Fernie, passed through town Monday en-route to Nelson. As the doctor stood on the station platform drawing in the balmy air of the banana belt, he remarked to the Herald man, "You have a great climate here."

Devere Hunt, J. A. Corey and George Cameron, the committee representing the different railway organizations of this division, left Monday afternoon for Montreal to meet with committees from other divisions for a conference with C. P. R, officials as to an increase in the rate of wages paid.

A Mother's Recommendation

I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a number of years and have no hesitancy in saying that it is the best remedy for coughs, colds and croup I have ever used in my family. I have not words to express my confidence in this remedy. Mrs. J. A Moore, North Star, Mich. For sale by all druggists & dealers.

Infringement of a Trade Mark

In an action in the High Court of Justice for Ontario, recently tried before Chancellor Boyd, at Toronto, the Slater Shoe Co., and Chas. E. Slater, president of Montreal, makers of the famous Slater Shoe, obtained a judgment forever restraining F. C. Wilkinson, a boot and shoe dealer, of Owen Sound, from advertising, exposing, or offering for sale or selling boots or shoes not made by the Slater Shoe Co., as "Slater Shoes," "Slater Goods" or the Slater Shoe." The Chancellor, also ordered Wilkinson to pay the heavy costs of the action. The Chancellor, after hearing the evidence. decided that no one except the Slater Shoe Co., had a right to use the name "Slater Shoes," " Slater Goods," "The Slater Shoe," or any similar names in connection with boots and shoes, and that Wilkinson had no right to use any name or names in connection with boots and shoes which might enable him to pass of a shoe not of the company's make. as being of their make, nor in any way to reap the benefit of the reputation which the Slater Shoe has acquired throughout the Dominion of Canada.

The Genuine Slater.

Is positively the best shoe value offered for sale in Canada. You may include the United States and that will pretty near cover the world for fine shoe making. There are shoes sold elsewhere at $4 50 and $6 a pair that carry no more style, are no better fitting and will not wear as well as the genuine Slater Shoe at $4. "Why is it?" you ask. "Just because they are branded with an American stamp."

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

Miss Edmonds is suffering from an attack of sciatica.

Mr. George Joyce, of Marysville was in town this week.

F. E. Simpson, of the Cranbrook Herald, was in town last night.

J. W. Bengough, "the prince of cartoonists," opera house Tues. May 5th.

Several visitors were in town last night in connection with the license meeting.

Don't fail to hear Bengough in his original sketching entertainment, "fun with the pencil," May 5th.

Mr. N. Hansen, of Wasa, B. C. was in town this week. He contemplates erecting a $20,000 hotel at Morrissey Mines at once.

Harry Thompson who has been looked after for some time by the police authorities was yesterday sent to the Westminster Asylum for treatment.

The new Methodist Church at Morrissey Mines camp is nearing completion and reflects much credit upon the energy of its promotor Rev. C. F. Connor.

Mr. J. F. Armstrong, of Fort Steele, was down on business on Wednesday. He walked over the road to Morrissey in order to gain a thorough knowledge of what is required to make it a good highway.

The Snow Shoe Club was entertained by Mrs. R. W. Wood in her pretty home on Thursday evening. Music was furnished by Messrs. McCuaig and Staebler and the dancing was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Thos. Crahan, the Morrissey Mines townsite agent, is kept busy these days preparing for the big opening next Friday. He has been running up and down the line all week, and to-day he left for Spokane for the purpose of advertising the new town.

R. M. Hood, of the J. Y. Griffin Co., Nelson, was in town this week. Mr. Robertson who has managed this business at Nelson is being promoted to a higher position in the Company and leaves shortly for Winnipeg. Mr. Hood will succeed Mr. Robertson.

Mr. and Mrs. Henretta left on Wednesday evening for Calgary where they will make their home in future. Mr. Henretta will be employed at Anthracite opening up some coal properties there. They have hosts of friends in Fernie who regret their departure from our midst.

Rev. R. F. Stillman was at Michel last Sunday officiating at the Methodist services there. He will exchange pulpits with Rev. Connor to-morrow. Mr. Stillman is winding up the business of these stations preparatory to the district meeting which will take place in Fernie next week.

The Ladies of Christ Church Guild held a successful handkerchief bazaar in the corner store of the Henderson Block on Tuesday afternoon and evening. The event proved to be a very interesting one, especially to the ladies. Many very pretty handkerchiefs were sold at a good price and nearly $50 was realized. Refreshments, including ice-cream, were served.

Mr. T. H. Rafuse who has filled the position of yard master in Fernie yards for some time has been promoted to a higher position in the Company and left on Thursday evening for Calgary to report to General Superintendant Jamieson. Mr. J. Balengar of Cranbrook who formerly held a responsible position in the yards here has received the appointment of yard master.

Steve Manahan, of the Hotel Fernie, was down to Nelson this week and while getting off the boat at the landing he had the misfortune to step into the lake instead of onto to the wharf. He pluckily clung to his valise which he was carrying at the time and it was with some little difficulty that both were rescued. Mr. Manahan is spending a couple of weeks at the coast.

The services at Christ Church will be held as follows on Sunday next: Matins and Litany 11 a. m.; Sunday School, 2:30 p.m.; Evensong, 7:30. All are earnestly invited. Collection in aid of Church expenses. Rev. A. Stoney will officiate at the evening service. Rev. C. W. Houghton will take service at Michel. The above arrangement to exchange is subject to the punctuality of the train.

Judge Forin was up from Nelson on Thursday to hold county court. The only case tried was that of Russsel Evans for the theft of a watch from John Ryan. This case appears to be a very complicated one. Landon and Evans were both mixed up in it. The former was tried some time ago and got three months Evans was likewise convicted and given three months at Nelson, where he was taken yesterday.

Among the Fernie citizens who went to Morrissey Mines yesterday to look over the new townsite with a view to investing in lots were the following. Messrs. A. H. Cree, J. A. Rennie, A. C. Liphardt, F. Hurt in the Mine.

A miner named Robert Ramsay was injured while working in the Coal Creek mines on Thursday afternoon. It appears that Ramsay was engaged in firing a shot which was in some manner discharged prematurely. Ramsay got the full force of the explosion in the face. He was removed to the Fernie hospital where it was found the chief injury was done to the unfortunate man's eyes. His right eye is entirely destroyed but the doctors hope to save the other eye. Another workman in the same room felt the explosion severely but was not injured. Ramsay is well liked and much sympathy is felt for him.

Morrissey Mines Licenses.

The Board of License Commissioners met last night to consider nine applications for hotel licenses at the town of Morrissey Mines. Four applications were subsequently withdrawn because of insufficient signatures, and two of the remaining five were refused.

Jules Hurel, Morrissey Hotel, withdrawn.
Spence Lyon, Union Hotel, withdrawn.

Engine Ditched.

On Sunday traffic on the Crow line was delayed about eleven hours owing to the ditching of freight engine No. 501 about a mile beyond the Fernie Lumber Co.'s mill. The engine attached to a train of cars was making its way eastward when it struck a small slide at this point early in the morning. The mud was not deep enough to stop it entirely and it managed to get through but became derailed and narrowly escaped a roll down the embankment. A wrecking crew was sent down from Cranbrook and the mud was cleared and the heavy engine raised and put on the track again by 5 o'clock in the evening. The west-bound train which was almost on time that morning was detained at the wreck as was a freight train also.

The Time of Slides.

There is a cut about five miles east of Fernie that is giving a great deal of trouble this week. On Wednesday evening a bad mud slide occurred at this point which covered the track with mud 10 feet deep for a distance of 150 feet. The work of clearing it was begun when shortly after another slide came down on top of the first adding 150 feet to its length and 5 feet to its depth. The work of clearing was then abandoned and a temporary track was laid around the obstruction which was completed by 6 o'clock Thursday morning when the delayed east train pulled out of Fernie. During Thursday another slide came down and covered the temporary track which, however, after several hours work was cleared and the evening train was delayed only about three hours. The temporary track will be used until the work of digging out the slide is completed, which may require two weeks.

How to Ward off an Attack of Rheumatism

"For years when spring time came on and I went into gardening, I was sure to have an attack of rheumatism, and every attack was more severe than the preceding one," says Josie McDonald, of Man, Logan county, West Va. "I tried everything with no relief whatever, until I procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and the first application gave me ease, and before the first bottle was used I felt like a new person. Now I feel that I am cured, but I always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house and when I feel any symptoms of a return I soon drive it away with one or two applications of this liniment. For sale be all druggists and dealers.

Mr. P. McMurphy who formerly lived in Fernie was in town yesterday looking up friends. He is on his way from Frank to Rossland where he has been offered a promotion in the P. Burns & Co. business.

Carolus-Duran's Revenge on Sargent.

When John S. Sargent, the famous portrait painter, studied in the atelier of Carolus-Duran in Paris, his teacher showed his fondness for him by painting in his head in the great ceiling of the Luxembourg palace. Even after he branched out for himself his master often sent for him to come over to his studio and pose, his hands having especially won the admiration of Carolus-Duran. The time came, however, when Sargent could no longer answer the beck and call of his teacher, for he was getting work of his own to do, which would not allow him to leave his studio at a moment's notice. One day, it is related, Carolus-Duran sent a hurry call for him, and when he received a note saying that Sargent was compelled to decline his request owing to pressing work he was furious. A few days later a friend, to whom he had confided his anger at his recalcitrant pupil, asked him: "Well, how is it with Sargent? Have you made up? How is he?" "Ah, no," said the painter, and he looked sad and his shoulders went up. "How is it with Sargent? C'est fini!" Another shrug. "C'est fini! It's all over! I have been to the Luxembourg. I went and I got a ladder, and I painted out his head!"

A Ghost Test.

When you think you see a ghost, how can you tell whether it really is a ghost or not? A recent writer gives the following scientific method: "We assume that a person sees an apparition. It may be objective—i. e., having existence outside the observer's mind—or merely a creature of a disordered brain, subjective. The seer, while looking at the vision with both his eyes, gently depresses one eyeball with his forefinger from outside the top eyelid, so causing a squint. If objective, whether bogus or not, two outlines of the 'ghost' will be seen, but one, of course, if it be subjective. One may prove this by trial any time with any object, near or far. I mention this because of the many nervous and brain wearied people who see spooks and to whom it would be better that they should know that the trouble is within themselves and so seek a capable doctor than continue to be haunted, as they believe, by the supernatural."

The Rocking of Lake Erie.

The 250 mile trough of Lake Erie lies approximately in the direction of the west to southwest winds which prevail in that part of the country. Thus the lake offers an excellent opportunity for studying the effects of the wind upon a large body of inclosed water, and very interesting these effects sometimes prove. Rhythmic gusts produce a rocking motion and great blows from the west or southwest sweep the liquid body of the lake eastward and sometimes cause a rise of eight feet or more at Buffalo in the course of a few hours. As soon as the maximum force of the gale has passed the water swings back. Continued rockings are observed on days when the strength of the wind fluctuates.

Borrowing Trouble.

"I have heard a good deal about people who borrow trouble, but I think my wife is a champion in that line."

"Why, I thought she was always cheerful and contented with her lot."

"She was until our baby was born six weeks ago. Now she is worrying because he may marry some girl that we shall not like."

British Africa.

Excluding Egypt and the Sudan, Great Britain owns 2,585,000 square miles of Africa, an area equal to more than fifty Englands and inhabited by about 45,000,000 people.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Cucumbers and melons are "forbidden fruit" to many persons so constituted that the least indulgence is followed by attacks of cholera, dysentery, griping etc. These persons are not aware that they can indulge to their heart's content if they have on hand a bottle of Dr. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, a medicine that will give immediate relief, and is a sure cure for all summer complaints.

There is no rest for the wicked, and the righteous are not troubled with a surplus of it.

Valentine Fisher's Sciatica Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Could Hardly Put One Foot to the Ground Now he Can Walk all Day Without Trouble.

Collingwood, April 20.—(Special)—"Dodd's Kidney Pills made a new man of me," so speaks Valentine Fisher, well known in Collingwood and the surrounding country. "I was troubled with kidney disease for thirteen years. It developed into Sciatica and located in my side so that I was hardly able to walk, and could not do so without the aid of a cane. My back was also affected and altogether I was a cripple in the most painful sense of the word.

"And the worst of it was I could get no relief. Doctors and medicines failed to do me any good till I was fortunate enough to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. The benefit was almost miraculous. My health came back and the change in my appearance was so great that some of my neighbors did not know me.

"Whereas before I could hardly put one foot to the ground, and I had to use morphine to ease the pain, I was enabled to go to work selling fruit trees and walk all day without any trouble."

Sciatica and kindred diseases are caused by uric acid in the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills put the Kidneys in shape to take the uric acid out of the blood, and the Sciatica disappears.

HAMBURG DROPS.

Thousands of people have good cause to be thankful to the memory of that eminent German authority, Dr. August Koenig, who originally discovered Hamburg Drops (more than sixty years ago), which restores the wasted energies, creates an appetite, overcomes exhaustion, weariness languor and that tired feeling, makes pure blood, cures constipation, dyspepsia, hysteria, nervousness, fullness after meals, torpid liver, sluggish kidneys, ringing noises in the head, all skin diseases, and is a general restorative. It cures where all other remedies and pressriptions fail. A circular description of Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops will be found round each bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. Undo the wrapper carefully found round each bottle of St. Ja- and read the circular.

TRY IT.—It would be a gross injustice to confound that standard healing agent—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil with the ordinary unguents, lotions and salves. They are oftimes inflammatory and astringent. This oil is, on the contrary eminently cooling and soothing when applied externally to relieve pain, and powerfully remedial when swallowed.

Moon Worship Among Many Peoples.

Figures of the moon as religious emblems can be traced to a very high antiquity. The ancient Egyptians had two moon gods—Khons or Khonsu and Tel or Thoth. The latter wore the moon on his head, either as a full moon or as a crescent. The divine honors paid to the cat on the banks of the Nile were probably due to its supposed connection with the moon, as shown by the changeable pupil of the feline eyes. In Greece both Phœbus and Phœbe were moon gods, and by Isis the Greeks understood the same planet. The Romans had many gods. With them Luna was the moon, the daughter of Hyperion and sister of the sun. According to Livy, the temple of Luna stood on the Avertine.

The ancient Goths, Germans and Finns were all moon worshipers, and in ancient Britain the moon occupied a high position in the celestial hierarchy of the Druids, who were always represented as bearing crescents in their hands. It is possible, too, that Andraste, the goddess to whom Boadicea appealed with outstretched hands, was the moon.

Joking Friends In Old Days.

In a romantic and picturesque old hall in Derbyshire, England, is one of those curious relics of bygone times which carry the mind back to the habits and customs of our great-great-grandfathers. A handcuff looks a strange thing to be fixed to the screen of the banqueting hall of a baronial mansion, but one is there. When the banquet had advanced toward its zenith, if any gentleman among the guests refused to drink the full quantity that was deemed the proper thing at that time he was merrily carried to the oak screen and placed with his arm upraised and secured and locked in that position by the iron ring. His sleeve, then wide open, offered a tempting receptacle for the wine which he had refused to drink, and the contents of the goblet, with as much more as the roisterers thought fit, were poured down the unlucky victim's arm, and woe be to him if he did not take the joke in the spirit in which it was given.

Too Plebeian a Dish.

The pains of being a dignitary in an ancient country with a tradition of splendor is illustrated by this anecdote from India. It is related that the viceroy's eye lighted one day upon a dish at which he gazed for a moment with incredulity. "What is this?" he demanded at last. A trembling retainer gasped that it was rice pudding. No less a personage than the viceroy's consort had ordered the humble pudding which eminent statesmen may be seen eating at their clubs with undisguised enjoyment any day of the parliamentary session. But the viceroy frowned. "Take it away," he said. "Never let me see such a thing again." This is how the orient differs from the occident. Rice pudding might have ruined the dignity of the vice regal table in native opinion.

Chinese Transportation Methods.

The cheapest method of transportation in the world is that by Chinese junks that are dragged up and down their winding rivers by strings of sweating men, who are paid only 8 cents a day for their work and have to pay their board out of that small sum. Next in cheapness to transportation by junk is transportation by camel team. This method is used in distributing coal. Great numbers of Mongolian camels, led by a string through their pierced noses and tied one to the other, each carrying two baks of coal strung across their backs between the humps, are to be seen winding their way from the coal mines to the larger cities in northern China and covering with their swinging steps about twenty miles a day.

His Sad Story.

"Cleanliness can do you no harm," said the housewife.

"I don't know about dat, ma'am," replied the dusty wayfarer.

"Did you ever lose anything by it?"

"Yes, mum. I was 'tattooed man' in a circus one time, an' when dey made me take a bath all de figures came off, an' I lost my job."

NEWFOUNDLAND.

Mr. Tobin, of St. John, on Annexation to Canada.

Newfoundland may not be within the Canadian Federation, but its inhabitants do not regard themselves as strangers when they visit the Dominion. It was as a man thoroughly at home that Mr. John J. Tobin, of St. John's, Newfoundland, spoke while in Toronto recently.

Mr. Tobin, however, can hardly be said to be sympathetic towards Newfoundland uniting with Canada. "The colony where my home is," he said, "is better standing alone. She has resources that will enable her to maintain herself without the aid of the Dominion, and I do not see what is to be gained by confederation."

"Are there not, though, many in Newfoundland who would like to join with Canada?"

"Four years ago," remarked Mr. Tobin, "the feeling was almost entirely in favor of such a move; but not now. Newfoundland then got a rebuff from Canada she will not soon forget, and her experience at that time has destroyed all wish for union. And would Canada," Mr. Tobin went on, "take us in, even though we wanted to join with her? We have a debt of 15 million dollars and Canada would not be willing to take that on her shoulders. Thirty years ago, if a Government had a deficit in its budget of $1,000, the colony would have forced it to resign; but of late years some politicians think that the debt is good for a country, and hence the extent of our liabilities."

"Would Newfoundland then prefer to unite with the States?" "No, not in the least. We are British and have little liking for the States. The States afford us a good market for our products, that is all, but we stand by the Empire."

SPRING AILMENTS.

The Blood Needs Attention at this Season—Purgatives Should Be Avoided.

Spring is the season when your system needs toning up. In the spring you must have new blood, just as the trees must have new sap. With new blood you will feel sprightly, happy and healthy. Many people take purgatives in spring, but this is a serious mistake, as the tendency of all purgatives is to further weaken the system. The one and only sure way to get new blood and new strength is to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They actually make new, rich, red blood—they are the greatest spring tonic in the world. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily banish all spring ailments. Miss Belle Cohoon, White Rock Mills, N.S., says:—"I have found Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a splendid spring medicine. I was very much run down; the least exertion exhausted me, and I had a constant feeling of languor and sluggishness. My appetite failed me and my sleep at night was disturbed and restless. After I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills there was a speedy change for the better, and after taking a few boxes I felt stronger than I had done for years."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicine, or box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writ- by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a ing direct to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Do not let any dealer persuade you to take a substitute. Substitutes never cured anyone—the genuine pills have cured hundreds of thousands in all parts of the world.

A MOTHER'S RESPONSIBILITY.

Every mother is responsible to some extent for the health of her little ones, and the prudent mother will always keep at hand the means for protecting the health of her children. For this purpose there is absolutely no medicine can compare with Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets speedily relieve and promptly cure all stomach and bowel troubles, break up colds, check simple fevers, prevent croup, and allay the irritation accompanying the cutting of teeth. They are good for children of all ages from birth upwards, and are sold under a guarantee to contain no opiate or harmful drug. All mothers who have used Baby's Own Tablets praise them and keep them in the house. Mrs. John Weaver, Blissfield, N.B., says: "I have a family of six children and have used Baby's Own Tablets and know that they are the best medicine I have ever used for my little ones."

You can get Baby's Own Tablets from any druggist or they will be sent by mail post paid at 25 cents a box by writing to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y. writes: "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. I am now nearly well and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money."

COLD SETTLES ON THE KIDNEYS

Hence the Backaches, Rheumatic Pains and Lumbago—Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Prompt to Relieve and of Lasting Benefit.

It is not only the lungs that suffer during the cold, damp seasons. The kidneys are almost equally susceptible to sudden changes of temperature, and many a serious case of kidney disease has its beginning with a cold which settles on the kidneys.

Persons working out of doors are most likely to be victims of such troubles, and suffer from backaches, lumbago, rheumatism and crippled, aching limbs, but anyone is liable to sit in a draught or expose his back to a current of cold.

Cold settling on the kidneys causes congestion, a clogging of these filtering organs and consequent derangement of the whole digestive and excretory systems. The liver fails to work, the bowels become constipated and the stomach upset.

Because of their direct and combined action on these organs, Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills are of most prompt and most lasting benefit for such derangements. They are positive in their effects and are backed by the experience and integrity of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous Receipt Book author.

Mr. Wm. Boyne, of 19 McGee St., Toronto, says: "I was afflicted severely with kidney disease, stone in the bladder, incontinence, deposits in the urine, severe pains in the back, and strains over the loins. I was so bad that I had to get up two or three times in the night and could then only make water with great pain.

"Though long a sufferer and unable to work, I was confined to my bed for three weeks, and during that time thought I could not possibly endure greater misery. It was then that I began to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. It is with gratitude that I say that they have freed me of all these symptoms and made me a well man."

FRANK NEARLY WIPED OUT

Eighty-three Persons Swept into Eternity by a Terrible Rock Slide.---Half the Town Buried under Hundreds of Feet of Rock.---Nineteen Miners Entombed, but Seventeen Work Their Way Out.--List of Killed and Injured.

Early Wednesday morning wild rumors of a dreadful disaster at Frank went flying over Fernie. The little information of a reliable nature that could be gained was so often contradicted by other reports that speculation as to the cause and extent of the catastrophe had the widest possible scope. Some had it that the mines had blown up and scattered the top of the mountain for miles around. Others that an earthquake and volcanic eruption had caused wonderful upheavals and slides, and it was not until the afternoon that the more reasonable theory of a rock slide gained general approval Excitement was very high in Fernie all day. Many ex-Fernieites are living at Frank and many anxious fears were felt here for their safety. Several private wires were recieved telling of the individuals and these wires gave a few details of the disaster. A special train ran down early in the morning taking doctors and workmen, and later a relief train from Cranbrook with Supt. Taylor on board, went through. A large crowd of Fernie people were gathered at the depot to board the train, but as more helpers were not needed the train steamed right through. Later a proposition was made to the C. P. R. to run a special down in the afternoon, and the required number of subscribers were readily obtained, but the railway found it im possible to get an engine early enough and the project was abandoned. At nine o'clock in the evening the first train from Frank arrived and the Fernie people who were obliged to stay behind got their first authentic account of the disaster.

The top of Turtle mountain, for about the distance of a third of a mile, starting from a point straight above the tunnel and extending eastward, became loosened and with a tremendous roar and rush, it came tumbling and bounding with ever-increasing and awful speed down that 4000 feet or more of perpendicular height and with lightning rapidity it swept on its course through the town of Frank, on over the railway track and the river and up the mountain on the opposite side of the valley, carrying with it houses, railway track, and even the gravel from the river bed. This immense avalanche of rock as it rushed down the steep mountain side naturally spread and widened its course, until on the opposite side the rock was piled for a distance of over two miles. Fortunately the top of the mountain west of the mine mouth was not affected and the business portion of the town escaped injury. The track of the mighty slide took in all the buildings in the immediate vicinity of the mine and many of the cottages on Alberta avenue between the mines and business blocks, and it was in these houses where nearly all the destruction of life occurred. The distance across the valley is nearly 2 ½ miles and over all that space with a width gradually increasing to about 2 ½ miles the limestone rock is piled in rugged unwieldly masses to a depth varying from 10 to 75 feet. The railway track is torn away and its old site is buried beneath the fearful carnage for a distance of nearly a mile and a half. The Gold Creek spur to the French Mines also has about 1,500 yards of its track inside the limits of the slide.

Frank, Alta., April 29.—One of the most terrible rock slides known to civilization took place here this morning when almost half our peaceful mining town was buried under millions of tons of rock from the summit of Turtle Mountain. The first intimation that anything unusual was about to take place was a low rumble which increased to a roar and suddenly the whole face of the mountain seemed to be moving toward the valley. Those who witnessed the catastrophe say that it passed them like a flash and rushed away through the darkness.

The people of the town were stunned and horror striken. Many thought a volcanic eruption had taken place and expected every moment to be their last. As the first streaks of dawn made their appearance a terrible scene of devastation met the eyes of the survivors. The slide had started from the loftiest peak of the Turtle mountain and extended about three-quarters of a mile across the face. As it descended it spread out fan shape and extended over the valley for a distance of two miles sweeping everything in its track. Hour after hour the avalanche continued piling up mountains of rock. The force of the slide coming as it did from a height of over four thousand feet was terrific. Great rocks were carried right across the valley and up the opposite mountain for a distance of three or four hundred feet. The path of the slide fortunately did not include the main portion of the town although the citizens have been in terror all day lest that portion of the mountain overhanging that part of the town should give away and nearly all the residents are moving as rapidly as possible to Blairmore, a village two miles distant.

The mouth of the mine and the company buildings including the large tipple are buried completely out of sight. Nineteen miners were on shift at the time of the disaster and large rescue parties have been at work all day trying to effect an entrance, but owing to large rocks which still continue to come down the mountain little can be done.

Frank, April 29—At 4 p.m. a shout from the face of the mountain far above the main tunnel notified the inhabitants that something startling had happened and shortly afterwards seventeen of the imprisoned miners made their appearance almost exhausted from toil and lack of air. They had been completely shut off from the outer world and knew that unless they could work their way out in a few hours they would be doomed. Led by D. Mackenzie they commenced a tunnel and after twelve hours of uninterrupted toil they had tunnelled and timbered a passage fifty feet through the rock to the outer air. The two remaining men in the mine could not be found and it is thought that they had been caught in a cave-in.

The escaped miners report that the mine is practically as good as ever although the out side plant is completely destroyed.

Mr .Chambers, president of the Board of Trade, is doing everything in his power to recover the bodies of those who were buried under the slide, but the task is almost an impossible one. Fearing that there would be a rush of curiosity seekers from the towns along the Crow's Nest Branch, he has sent out the following telegram:—

Frank, April 29th

To the President of Board of Trade.
Fernie, B. C.

We suffered from a very large rock slide. There are very few injured. We can do nothing and want no help. Please discourage any one from coming in here for the persent.

S. W. Chambers
Pres. Frank Board of Trade

The C. P. R. track is blocked for a distance of two miles and a new piece of road will have to be constructed which will take two or three weeks, at least before the branch will be open again.

Many stories of narrow escapes are heard on all sides. The infant child of Alex Leitch escaped without injury while both parents sleeping in the same bed were instantly killed. Two daughters also were saved from death by the rooting arching in a peculiar manner over them.

Little Mary Watkins who was employed in a boarding house was the only one of eleven persons in the house who made her escape.

A train crew working near the tipple was almost in the path of destruction but managed to cut loose the engine and a couple of cars leaving some seventeen others completely buried.

Frank, April 30—(Special to THE FREE PRESS). Appended find list of killed and injured as far as known, many others. Front patrolled by special police, but most of population went to Blairmore. Mountain still rumbling and another avalanche possible any moment.

Sam Innes and family bruised.

The volcanic theory was at first strengthened by the general vertical formation of both coal and rock layers in this mountain. The strata stand on edge at an angle of 83 degrees and as coal is never formed in that position it is certain that its present shape is due to some upheaval of nature. Investigation proves beyond a doubt that the disaster was due to a slide caused by other than subterranean forces. One theory that appears reasonable is that the penetration of water into the limestone and the warmth of the sun acting at the same time generated expansive gases which loosened the mountain. At first it seemed incredible that the mighty masses of limestone piled up on the opposite side of the valley could have come from Turtle mountain but an examination showed that such was the case. Obstacles had been carried for long distances clearly proving the direction of the force. Moreover the formation of the rock on the other mountain is sandstone. No evidence of heat is discernable which fact clearly antagonizes the volcanic theory. The geologist exports at Victoria stated that if it were due to a volcanic action it is but the second in the whole history of Canada.

Provincial Mineralogist Robertson said that from the descriptive reports of the formation in that part of the country there was no indication of it being a volcanic centre. The meteorological office in Victoria discredits the report that the disaster was caused by volcanic eruption Their instruments have not recorded any seismic disturbance which would certainly have been registered had such occurred.

Eruptions and earthquakes in more remote parts of the continent than the scene of the present catastrophe are always recorded at the local office and the absence of any sign of this occurrence at Frank convinces the meteorogical officials that the terrible affair is due to some other cause.

The C.P.R. were making preparations to change the course of their track just where it is destroyed, by running it close to the mountain and thereby reducing the grade. Messrs. Breckenridge and Lund had been given the contract and it was only through some unlooked for delays that they were not at this work at the time of the slide, in which event their camp would have been swept away with the other buildings. The new course is much harder now to build as it is covered with a great depth of rock, but it will be pushed with every possible haste and in three weeks, according to the contractors, the new line will be built.

All day Wednesday rocks came tumbling down at intervals. Many of these did not reach the bottom as they often broke into small pieces which became lodged in crevices, and these phenomena have occurred, but at longer intervals since Wednesday. The following despatch was received yesterday, from our correspondent at Frank:—

"Change name of Rice on death list to T. R. Locke. Three more bodies recovered to-day. Detachment of Police from Macleod on patrol here. Slides still coming down, population again going to Blairmore for night, generous offers of aid from prominent men and surrounding towns. Town full of strangers and no accommodation."

EXODUS FROM FRANK

Yesterday was an important day at the ill-fated town. Premier Haultain was there as well as Inspector F. B. Smith and several C.P.P. experts. The rocks still continued to fall, but little fear of further damage was entertained until evening, when the C. P. R. experts who had, during the day, taken careful observations from the east side of the slide, announced that the remainder of the mountain top was shifting, and that another slide might occur at any moment which would destroy the remaining portion of the town. The Premier, who intended to go east on the morning train, when he heard this report, walked back to the town over the slide and had the Board of Trade call a general meeting. Premier Haultain gave the expert's opinion, and advised the townspeople to vacate the town. He assured them that the mounted police would protect their property as well as possible. A. W. Chambers, president of the Board of Trade, advised the citizens to leave the town for a time, as he considered their situation dangerous. Dan McKenzie also spoke, and stated that from careful observations he had made with a glass during the day he believed the town was not safe. The C.P.R. wired for the westbound train that was tied up by a slide near Cranbrook, and free transportation was offered to all who desired to leave the town. A large number took advantage of the offer, and the town was left practically deserted. The patients at the hospital were unable to be moved, and they will remain as well as the staff; and there are a few indifferent ones, whom the police are inducing to leave the town. Thirty mounted police are guarding the town and keeping all strangers out of the place. The stores are locked up and the place wears the air of "The Deserted Village."

Mr. F. B. Smith and two other experts are making the trip to the top of the mountain today. They will have assistants, and will institute a code of signals.

The assistants will remain at their posts probably for some days, and every change in the mountain top will be reported. Much depends on their investigations. If they find the mountain safe the people who have left the town will be advised to go back again.

MORRISSEY OPENED

LOTS SOLD FROM $400 TO $1,300

Third Street Chosen as the Business Section of the town

The Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company's new townsite at Morrissey Mines was thronged all day yesterday with intending purchasers. Business men from near and far were present to get in on the ground floor and consequently property brought a good figure.

It had been decided in order to give everyone a chance at the best locations to have the sale conducted by auction and Mr. Wm. Tuttle at the request of Mr. Tonkin officiated as auctioneer.

The sale which was probably the most successful ever conducted in British Columbia passed off without a hitch, the lots with very few exceptions bringing a much higher figure than the Coal Co. had set upon them. The first property put up was that situated at the corner of Second Avenue and Third St. and brought the handsome sum of $600. The lot which brought the highest figure was the corner of Third St. and Third Ave., Block 20. This was purchased by H. L. Stephens for the sum of $1,300. The next lot to the corner was also bought by Mr. Stephens for $600. Another corner which brought a good figure was that of Fourth Ave. and Third St., Block 15. This was purchased by W. B. Ganong for $800. The corners of Blocks 2) and 21 on Third St. also brought good prices Mr. F. Burn, of P. Burn & Co. securing one for $950 and Mr. H. Bentley the other for $800.

In all there were fifty-one lots sold nearly all on Third St., the prices ranging from $400 upwards.

The company are to be congratulated on the able manner in which the sale was conducted.

MORE BRIGADE FUNDS

In addition to the amounts subscribed towards a better fire protection system in Fernie, published last week the committee reported the following:

H. J. Johnson	$20 00
A. P. Walker	5 00
J. A. Broley	20 00
Mrs. E. Todd	15 00
S. Bonnell	20 00
A. K. Farquharson	25 00
Bean Bros	20 00
F. Clapp	25 00
Chas. Richards	10 00
L. R. Forbes	10 00
P. Lundy	10 00
J. B. Turney	5 00
A. Klauer	5 00
H. L. Manley	5 00
C. E. Estes	5 00
J. H McMullin	5 00
E. A. Kummer	5 00
John Hunter	5 00
Wm. Kummer	5 00

Three names have been added to the fire brigade, G. Reynolds, A. Maclean and John Barber.

The committee were out only one half day during the week but next week they expect to finish the town and a large sum is expected to be added.

A Farmer Cured of Rheumatism

"A man living on a farm near here came in a short time ago completely doubled up with rheumatism. I handed him a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and told him to use it freely and if not satisfied after using it he need not pay a cent for it," says C. P. Rayder, of Pattens Mills, N. Y. "A few days later he walked into the store as straight as a string and handed me a dollar saying, 'give me another bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I want it in house all the time for it cured me.'" For sale by all druggists and dealers.

MY HEART'S DARLING

BY W. EMMBURG.

"What do you think about that, Lucie? What would you do if you were in my place?"

Only once had there been a decided difference of opinion between them, and that had been the evening before, when Hortense had been proposing a journey to Vienna.

"But we are so comfortable here," Lucie had remonstrated, "let us stay a couple of weeks, or else rent a little house for the summer on the banks of the Elbe."

"Why?"

Lucie did not know what to say, except that she longed for rest. For rest — and to see her sister again; and suddenly she burst into tears.

Hortense was first anxious, then vexed. As if it would not be time enough two months hence to go to Bornroade, which would be but a little detour on their journey home.

"But if I long to see them?" had been the girl's answer.

"Do you long for them?" Hortense shrugged her shoulders and turned away. And so they parted, for the first time since they had been together, without a cordial "good-night."

But now Lucie knew that Hortense had been at her bedside with the bunch of flowers. She felt almost ashamed of herself, and thought she would go at once and thank her. As she was in the act of rising, the door-handle turned gently and Hortense entered in a white morning-dress; she came to the bed and knelt down and kissed Lucie as a mother would her child on its birthday.

"Thank you for everything," she said, simply.

"And I thank you, Hortense!"

"Be quiet; what is it to your love and goodness? If I have regained my confidence in mankind, and if I find any pleasure in life again, I have you to thank for it, and you alone."

Lucie held her mouth to hers. "Be still," she said, deeply moved.

"And now I will rent a little house for the summer, as you wish. I have already ordered a carriage; we will go out immediately after luncheon. You shall choose it yourself; and if you like Dresden so much, we will come back again for the winter."

"That is for you to say, Hortense."

"It will be very cozy if we keep house, will it not?" said the young baroness, seating herself on the edge of the bed.

Lucie nodded.

"We will unpack all your beautiful things that you got in Italy, and ornament our rooms with them."

Hortense stood up.

"And to make them still prettier," said she. "I will utilize the fine day and good light and go on with the pictures I am painting. You come for me to the gallery."

"I will be at the Sistine Madonna as usual at one o'clock," cried the girl to Frau von Lowen, who was just disappearing out of the door.

She dressed hastily; she had slept unusually long. As she went into the salon she found before her breakfast plate a little black leather case with her initials in gold letters upon it, and on opening it a ring with a wonderfully beautiful sapphire shot out rays of light. As she examined it with surprise and delight, she found the date of this very day engraved upon it. She put the ring back in its case, then took it out, and at last slipped it on the fourth finger of her left hand.

Then she sat down quietly before her tea-cup and gazed at the sparkling jewel.

It came into her mind how a year before a simple gold hoop had been on the same finger, and she shook her head, as if contradicting some one decidedly. "No," she whispered, "he did not love me — it is better as it is!"

She breakfasted slowly, and then seated herself at the writing-table. She wanted to write a few lines to Mathilda; for she had not had any news from her for several weeks. When she had written a page the broad gold setting of the ring hurt her; she tried to take it off, but it would not come, and when finally it did the inclination to write had passed. She put on her hat and went by a circuitous way to the appointed place. She stood awhile behind Hortense's easel, as she was copying a little Dutch boy, and looked at her, and as at that moment there was no one in the small room, she kissed Hortense on the cheek and thanked her for her beautiful present.

"Let me see, my dear," said Hortense, "does it fit?"

"I could not keep it on my finger, it was too tight," and to prove it held out the finger, red and swollen.

"I will have it altered," said the young baroness.

And as a number of English women now came in, their fashionable traveling-dresses and gigantic hats taking up more room than was agreeable to the artist, Lucie left her friend and went to the appointed meeting-place. In the little space before the Sistine Madonna it was for a wonder as still as a church today, and quite empty. Only one solitary gentleman sat on the red sofa, absorbed in gazing at what was before him. Lucie, without looking at him, took her seat and fastened her eyes upon the picture. She had greatly altered. The shy girl from the lonely forester's house had, under Hortense's influence, become an easy and graceful woman.

(To my continued.)

The Ubiquitous Union.

Young Wife (sobbing)—Oh, Clarice, I'm so unhappy! I'm going h-h-home to t-t-t-to my mother!

Clarice—Good gracious, dear! Surely George is not so unkind to you already!

Young Wife (sobbing)—N-n-no, no, no; it's not that. But Mr. Binks, the husband of one of our members, has refused to buy Mrs. Binks a new toque, and the Amalgamated Wives' union has ordered us all out on strike.

AFTER the STORM

By William Haven Ross

Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company

The hurricane had died out, and the only trace of the storm upon the waters was the heavy swell which tossed the ship's longboat.

The sun shone with tropical fervor upon the three occupants of the little craft. Not a sail was within the perspective, and no long wreath upon the horizon gave sign of the presence of a steamship.

At the bottom of the boat, his head resting upon the lap of a young woman, a man lay. His face was white and drawn, and the glitter of his eyes told of extreme physical weakness. The other man sat upon the stern thwart and watched sea and sky with anxious gaze. The woman's face had the apathy of prolonged suffering.

"Water! Water!" murmured the man at the bottom of the boat.

"Have patience, Tom," said the woman in a mechanical voice. "We are in the track of ships and must be rescued soon."

"No," said Tom faintly; "you will be saved—you and Dick—but not I."

Dick glanced at him in pity, but remained silent. The woman pushed back the matted hair from Tom's eyes with feeble fingers, but made no reply. The look of death was on the face pillowed upon her knee.

Three days had passed since Tom and Kate, passengers, and Dick, master mariner, had abandoned the sinking bark West Wind, bound from Rio to New York. Of the fate of their shipmates they had no knowledge. They had gone without food and without drink, and the weight of sheer exhaustion had begun to deaden their senses.

Finally Tom spoke again. He looked Dick in the face searchingly and said:

"Will you forgive me, Richard? I could die happier if you would. Kate will never forgive me, but you might."

"Forgive you!" exclaimed Dick wonderingly. "Why, what have you done?"

"You always loved Kate," said Tom.

"Yes," replied Dick very slowly and after a pause; "I always loved her."

"And she always loved you," said Tom.

Dick half started from the thwart, but checked himself.

The woman turned her face away.

"I came between you," said Tom. "I did you both a wrong. But, oh, how I have suffered! You can't realize, Dick—you will never realize—the agony of mock possession, the anguish of having a wife who in her heart loathes your slightest caress. She never loved me, Dick, and I have been kind and good to her always. But what are kindness and goodness to a woman when she does not love you? Nothing, Dick, worse than nothing!"

"I don't understand you at all," said Dick. "I know that you're out of your head. Speak to him, Kate; it may quiet him."

But Kate neither spoke nor turned her head.

"No; you will understand," said Tom, with more emphasis. "I'm going to tell you something. If I were not dying, perhaps you would kill me for it, but I would not care. I do not want to live unless I can have Kate."

"Have Kate!" repeated Dick. "Why, man, she's your wife!"

"No, no!" cried Tom weakly. "She never was my wife! It was only an empty ceremony that shackled her to me. She was always yours, Dick, and yours only. Soon she will be yours forever."

"Speak to him, Kate. He's raving," said Dick hoarsely, but she sat as if stone, watching the sky line.

"You see," said Tom, "she will not lie even to soothe, and she is right, for lies are useless. I knew she loved you, and I lied to keep you apart. You thought it was friendship and kindness that made you master of my West Wind, but that was the first syllable of my lie. I wanted to put half the world between you two, so I made you captain of my best bark and chartered her for China. Then the lie grew and grew. It was I who had published in New York and copied in the home newspapers the lying notice that you married a woman in New York the day before you sailed. After Kate had read the lie she thought the world was at an end for her, so she married me. Now you know it all except what I have suffered. You can never realize that."

There now was a deep flush upon Kate's cheek, and Dick was bending forward, speechless and glowering.

"You won't forgive me, then?" asked Tom pleadingly. "She will soon be yours, and—and—and I've left her everything."

"Blast you and your money!" cried Dick, now upon his unsteady feet, with a threatening gesture.

But Kate, who still sat with averted gaze, put her arm across Tom's face as if to protect him, and Dick sank back sullenly upon the thwart and turned his head away too. Thus they remained for many minutes. But when Dick again turned his eyes to the horizon he could scarcely restrain an exclamation.

Far away upon the edge of the waters was a sail.

It then was but a tiny blur, but the prescient eye of the sailor saw at a glance that the vessel was southbound and sailing toward them. If the wind held in the same direction, the ship would be apt to make a long reach before going about and must surely pass so near that they would be sighted.

Dick looked at Tom and then at Kate, while a battle raged in his soul. The excitement which had sustained the sick man during the morning had passed, and Dick could see plainly enough that the reaction was tugging hard upon the frail strand of life. Yet he understood that he had at command as potent a stimulant as was ever compounded by a pharmacist.

It was hope!

In an hour or two the approaching vessel would be within hailing distance. Another hour or two meant life or death to Tom. If he knew that rescue, food, drink and comfortable quarters were but a few dwindling miles away, existence would grow sweeter to the wealthy shipowner and importer, and the innate love of life might buoy him through the crisis.

"Shall I speak?" he asked of himself.

If Tom died—but he tried to put that out of his mind. How he loved and had longed for the woman he faced! A flickering spark was all that kept them apart. Should he fan it into a blaze or let it go out forever?

At last Tom again opened his eyes, and, looking him in the face with a pitiful, pleading expression, he feebly put forth his hand.

"Forgive me," he whispered in a voice of utter weakness. Kate bent over and kissed him—kissed him as a mother might her child.

Dick drew a long breath, and a tremor shook him like an ague spasm.

"A sail!" he cried hoarsely and rose unsteadily. For a moment he swayed with the rocking of the boat, pointing straight ahead, and then he sank upon his knees and took Tom's hand in his own.

"Tom," he said, "rouse up, man, and listen to me. There's a ship coming. She's not five miles away. Think of it, man—something to drink and plenty to eat. Don't weaken now after all you've been through. Let the past be bygones. Live it out and be happy."

"A ship in sight!" gasped Tom. "Oh, let me see her!"

It taxed Dick's failing strength to the utmost, but he lifted him to his knees and held him thus while he looked longingly at the distant sail. For a brief space the luster of hope rekindled the fire of failing vision, but it was only for a moment. A film beclouded his eye again, and he sank back to the bottom of the boat with a gasp.

"Too late," he murmured, "too late for me!"

When Dick looked up, he met Kate's gaze. It was a calm, steady look she gave him and the first since Tom began his story. Dick felt meaner and guiltier than he had ever felt before. He had to do something to distract her eyes.

"The sail!" he said, pointing over the waters. "Why don't you look?"

"I saw it," said she, "two hours ago."

"And you were waiting for me to tell Tom of it?"

"Yes," replied Kate, "and how I should have despised you if you had not."

The ship's crew answered Dick's faint hail with shouts of encouragement, and the vessel luffed up into the wind with flapping sails. A boat skippered by the mate was lowered and towed the castaways alongside the ship's quarter.

"How are they?" asked the captain as he leaned over the rail and looked down upon the recumbent figures in the boat, for Dick had collapsed.

"One man is gone, I think, sir," said the mate after holding his hand over Tom's heart.

"Yes," said Kate; "my husband is dead."

Uses of Turpentine.

Turpentine, either in resinous form or in spirits, has a household value. A child suffering with the croup or any throat or lung difficulty will be quickly relieved by inhaling the vapor and having the chest rubbed until the skin is red and then being wrapped about with flannel moistened with fiery spirits. Afterward sweet oil will save the skin from irritation. In the case of burns and scalds turpentine has no equal. It is the best dressing for patent leather; it will remove paint from artists' clothes and workmen's garments; it will drive away moths if a few drops are put into closets and chests; it will persuade mice to find other quarters if a little is poured into the mouse holes; one tablespoonful added to the water in which linens are boiled will make the goods wonderfully white; a few drops will prevent starch from sticking; mixed with beeswax it makes the best floor polish, and mixed with sweet oil it is unrivaled as a polish for fine furniture; the latter mixture should be two parts of sweet oil to one part of turpentine. Some physicians recommend spirits of turpentine, applied externally, for lumbago and rheumatism. It is also prescribed for neuralgia of the face.—Woman's Home Companion.

Dinners in the Old Days.

Dinner was a substantial affair in the reign of the maiden queen, who was by no means indifferent to the pleasures of the table. The first course on great occasions, says a contemporary, would probably be wheaten flummery, stewed broth, spinach broth, gruel or hotenpotch. The second consisted of fish, among which we may note lampreys, stockfish and sturgeon, with side dishes of porpoise. The third course comprised quaking puddings, bag puddings, black puddings, white puddings and narrow puddings. Then came veal, beef, capons, humble pie, mutton, marrow pasties, Scotch collops, wild fowl and game. In the fifth course all kinds of sweets, creams in all their varieties, custards, cheese, cakes, jellies, warden pies, junkets, syllabubs, and so on, to be followed perhaps by white cheese and tansy cake; for the drinks, ale and beer, wine, sack and numerous varieties of mead or metheglin, some of which were concocted out of as many as five and twenty herbs and were redolent of sweet country perfume.

Boys' Shoes

Does it pay to pay $2.50 or $3.00 for a pair of "Slater" boys' shoes?

Yes, because you get full wear value out of them—at least the boy does.

"Slater" boys' shoes are made of best selected leather in uppers and soles—soles are extra solid—being Goodyear welted they bend without breaking—also they do not injure the growing tender foot—no tacks, stitches or lumps to bring corns, bunions or callosities.

Yes, sir, the "Slater" boys' shoe is a good investment for the boy's dad. Try one pair and you will know it.

"The Slater Shoe"

Made in Canada 40 Years.

TWO ALTERNATIVES

"And now, Jack, what can I do? He follows me everywhere, and he stands around and ogles me with that detestable 'baby stare' of his, and—and—you're laughing, Jack! You are as mean as you can be to laugh when I come to you for advice."

Esther stamped her foot. Jack Ormsby leaned against the veranda railing and watched her with amused eyes.

"I can't help smiling, Esther, but I can appreciate the irritation poor Hallowell must cause you."

"Irritation!" A world of emphasis entered into the word. "And just because I was foolish enough to let him propose to me!" she wailed.

"Well, of course," Jack said slowly, "you must expect to have your scalps cost you a little something, Essie."

"He doesn't say anything," exclaimed the girl. "If he did, it would give me a chance to tell him what I think of his dogging my footsteps everywhere."

"It certainly is a case of 'the villain still pursued her,'" Ormsby said. "What do you want me to do, Essie—call him out and plug him full of holes?"

"Ugh! Don't be so vulgar! I don't want you to do anything but tell me what to do to get rid of him."

Jack was almost the only man she knew well who had not proposed to her. Men had fallen before her charms, had said their little piece (and some said it rather well, she had to admit to herself), and gone their way, and until now no man had really been able to trouble her serenity.

"Do think of something, Jack," she pleaded. "It's been three months now since he—he"—

"Since he said the momentous words which made him—not yours, eh?" And Ormsby laughed, but his hands trembled as he shifted the cane a little.

"Don't be absurd! He doesn't want me any more than other men do."

"Whew! Your serene conceit is certainly charming, Essie."

"Don't be unkind. You know it's true," she said calmly. "Any woman with fluffy hair and blue eyes can bring men to her feet. Only you don't get foolish and propose to me, Jack."

"No, I don't propose to you," he said quite calmly.

"And that's why I like you."

"Then I'll try not to make you dislike me. But what can I do to poor Hallowell? A cat may look at a king"— But Esther interrupted snappishly.

"That's no reason why a calf should look at me all the time!"

"Poor girl! You're finding it mighty hard getting away from the consequences of your own sin, eh?"
