ANTI-BILIOUS SOLUTION.

THIS Invaluable Medicine has only within a few years been offered to the Public, the Proprietor having used it in his private practice for many years, and has experienced the most wonderful success by its use in the undermentioned diseases.

In a few moments after taking it the patient is entirely relieved of the most painful heartburn, or pain occasioned by a superabundant quantity of bile in the stomach and bowels. Though the effects of the Anti-Bilious Solution are so instantaneous, they are not the less permanent; it strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite, removes all acidity and bile from the stomach and bowels, raises the spirits, and strengthens and invigorates the whole constitution.

The most delicate and feeble invalid labouring under Dyspepsia will by continuing the use of the Anti-Bilious Solution for a few weeks, experience its most happy effects in being restored to the enjoyment of perfect health.

Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Weakness, Languor, Coldness of the Extremities, Morbid Acidity in the stomach and bowels, headache, drowsiness, habitual costiveness, and general debility, bilious complaints of every description, diarrhœa, vomiting, sour stomach, wind and flatulency of the stomach and bowels, jaundice heartburn, eruptions of the skin, scrofula, and red gravel, Asthma and Coughs in old Persons.—For these and many other complaints the proprietor has experienced the greatest benefit in his general practice, and can confidently assert that others may experience the same result by merely attending to the directions in taking this Medicine.

AN EPISODE OF REAL LIFE.

[Concluded.]

"Strange I should meet you here, Leyden; but there is a fate in all things, and a cruel one has been mine! There are those, I know, who disbelieve this; but you shall hear. I need not ask if you remember her, or the anxiety with which I strove to win affections, that, at the very time, were comparatively worthless in my eyes. You seem astonished; but so it was. I was not half so eager to possess her as I was to rival you. You had boasted of your security; you had openly defied me; you had baffled me in more ways than one; you had preserved your temper, your equanimity in all our differences. In all essential things you were more than my superior; but the peculiar fact that can call forth all the fascinating bitterness of every-day existence, and mould them to the best advantage, was fatally awarded to me. To mortify you, and show forth my own power as best I might, I resolved to try my success with the innocent Cicely. At first I trifled in more but wicked wantonness, as I had done with others; but gradually I felt her acquiring a powerful ascendency. Her innocence, her purity, her full and perfect simplicity, and the celestial character of her beauty, which gained instead of losing by more intimate acquaintance, overpowered me. I might well be compared to a second Satan, tempting a second Eve, who dwelt in the paradise of pure and holy imaginings. I had little faith in women, whom I had long regarded only as the object of sensual pleasure; a compound of the affections, but destitute of the mental powers that elevate our higher natures. For a length of time the untaught girl of eighteen baffled the practised libertine of five-and twenty. But in the end a secret marriage, as I called it, gratified my passion, and gave me nothing more to wish for. The rifled flower withered at my touch. Cicely was too holy, too refined, to enchain a wandering profligate. Her silent but visible virtues rose up in judgment against me. Her voice—Leyden you remember her voice—its very tones gave me positive pain; her small white hand, when resting on my bosom, felt heavy and cold as lead: and all those little offices of kindness which women only can render, became absolutely disgusting to me. When, with blushes and many tears, she told me that she must in time become a mother, and begged me, for my infant's sake, to confess our marriage, I thrust her from me. When again we met, she did not curse, but blessed me! I urged my uncle to procure for me the situation in India I had once offended him by refusing to accept. He seemed pleased, as he expressed it, at my recovering my senses; and, much sooner than I anticipated, I was informed that my departure was immediately required. I sought out Cicely, whom, under various pretexts, I had declined to see from time to time, and whom I now sought most particularly to avoid; for, as I said to one of my companions in iniquity, 'I hated scenes.' I enclosed her a sum of money, scathed with the intelligence that she was not my wife; but (wretch that I was!) containing the cold assurance of my friendship and good wishes. This I sent from ship board, where we were under sailing orders, waiting only for a fair wind. While I was lounging the next evening on deck, and longing for the moment when the sails should fill and we should go rejoicing over the clear blue waves, a note was presented to me from Cicely, returning my money, containing no word of reproach, but adjuring me, in the most solemn manner, to meet her for five minutes, for the last time. The simple appeal concluded by naming a little creek, where, she said, she waited for me——My spirit revolted at seeing that the note was signed 'C. B.' I felt irritated that she should presume to use a name to which I had said she was unentitled. You cannot conceive how that small circumstance rankled in my bosom. I had caroused more than usual with my shipmates—my brain was fevered and confused—my resolves, bewildered and changing. I thought of Cicely, discern the trysting-place, and distinguish the fluttering of a white robe. I determined, at last, not to shrink from a meeting with a woman, and asked the captain if he would lend me a boat, adding, with a bravo's tone and a bravo's feeling, that an affair of gallantry called me on shore for about an hour. As I rowed towards the creek, the spire of Milton Church stood coldly, and I thought reproachfully, out against the sky; there was nothing else which indicated the proximity of human habitation; for the little town of Gravesend, then only a straggling village, was concealed by a sudden winding of the river. Amid this solitude the fiend was busy with me, and whispered devilish suggestions in my ear. Cicely seemed resolved to retain my name. I felt that she would be an everlasting barrier to my advancement, as I called it; and the affair, if bruited abroad was almost too serious to receive the applause of even my gayest friends. I believe I was coward enough to dread the resentment of her grey headed father. I trembled at my own imaginings, and passed my hands across my burning brow, as if to dissipate ideas, which, congregating there, become too strong for my enfeebled brain. My boat touched the strand, and Cicely sprang upon my bosom. Oh! how I hated her, even when her arms were clasped, with all the intensity of woman's love around my neck! when, unmindful of the injuries I had heaped upon her innocent head, she covered my hand with kisses, and, crouching at my feet, implored me not to desert her—not to leave her to shame and misery—to the scorn of the scorner—to the bitterness of self-reproach. Her long dark hair clustered over her figure, and her soft eyes were turned upon me—as the dove turns in its agony, its last gaze upon the vulture that destroys its most sweet life—yet, in that hour, Leyden, I hated with a deadly hatred——

The low choking of his voice, and the impeded utterance with which he pronounced the last words, made my blood run cold. He paused; but I could neither speak nor move—every power of vitality was paralysed; and when he recommenced, I listened with swollen veins and strained eye-balls:—

"I am sure she read my purpose; for she implored that, for the sake of the unborn, I would spare her life. I flung her from me with violence;—she shuddered, and, exhausted by exertion, fainted at my feet. I gazed upon her pale but beautiful features, which grief had touched, but not destroyed. 'Why,' whispered the ready demon that dwells within the bosom of the wicked, and impels him to destruction—'why should she awaken to the shame and disgrace that must await her? Why should she awaken to mar your fortunes? What is death but everlasting sleep? Leyden, I raised her in my arms, and, turning away my head, consigned her to the everlasting waters! O God! O God! that this had been all—that she had departed without the knowledge which, for a brief moment she acquired. The sudden plunge revived her paralysed senses; and, with a wild and fearful shriek, she sprang upwards. She would have grasped the boat, but—I—I—"

Cleveland, the blood rushed foaming and boiling through my brain. I was no longer master of myself. Cicely's murderer was there—there before me—her acknowledged murderer. His vile sentence remained unfinished, for my grasp was on his throat, and the wretched being, twisting like a reptile among the tombs, was at my mercy. Suddenly I remembered that your friend was but anticipating the hangman's office; and letting loose my hands and throwing myself upon the long grass which contained her mouldering tomb, I found relief in a violent burst of tears. One weight, one dreadful weight was removed from my mind. She had not the horrid guilt of self-destruction on her soul: for that I fervently blessed the Almighty. And, when I turned and beheld the creature "who was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day," crawling amid the receptacles of the tranquil dead, unable to arise like a man and erect before his Maker, but trembling with fear and sin, even in that hallowed solitude, I felt ashamed that I had degraded myself by yielding to the momentary impulse of revenge.

"I deserved it, Leyden," he exclaimed, "in a low and broken tone; "but justice shall not be deprived of her prey. I came to England with the intention of delivering myself as a murderer to the offended laws of my country; for I could no longer support the load of misery that each year brings more heavily upon my soul God of mercy! have I not been punished? I seem to have an eternity of remorse. Each night I see her at my bedside, with outstretched arms, and the same sad and unreproached face as when she sank into the pitiless waters. How could I reply to her father's letter? For years I wrestled with my feelings: I tried to believe there was no God; I drank the richest, the most intoxicating wines, they blistered my throat. The jest and song was as funeral music in mine ears. The young and the beautiful would have been mine—mine only; but I could not bring the earthly to meet the spirit bride. Honours poured upon me; gold cursed me, with its yellow and pestilential abundance. I was called brave—brave at the moment when I felt that I only rushed into the battle, courting death to be released from misery. How little does the world know of the motives that actuate men! How little does it care, provided its own comforts are not disturbed by the misfortunes of those who excite its curiosity! Cicely is never absent from me by day or night,—Is there now—now"—and he pointed his finger upward as he spake,—"there—pure, transparent, so transparent that I can count the stars through its shadowy form; and yet, with that ever before me, the world called me fortunate. O rare world! Oh wise-judging mortality! Fortunate! ay, as hell's own devils."

Loud and terrific laughter succeeded this horrid summary; and at the same instant, the bright moon discovered features riven, as it were, by madness.

I conducted him to the inn, where his valet assured me that his master was subject to such insane fits. "He says strange things, sir," said the old man in a compassionate tone, "but the wildness soon passes." I must hasten to conclude. The wretched man was dying. I will not harrow up your feelings by a detail of his last agonies: they are over. Oh! it was awful to hear him imploring the spirit of the departed Cicely to stand away from between him and heaven!"

Speech of the Rev. H. STOWELL, at the last Annual Meeting of the Protestant Association, held in Exeter Hall on the 11th of May. Lord KENYON in the Chair.

[Concluded.]

My Lord, let it not be said that we are wishing to create or promote discordancy in the Church; from our hearts we deplore it; but who has made this dissension in the Church? who has thrown into our peaceful camp differences of opinion and dissension? Differences in a circumstantial point of view will obtain amongst us; we are free-born citizens of the true Church of God; for God appeals to our reason, and appeals to our consciences; true faith is a rational faith. Therefore, while we think differently upon minor points, and are willing to merge them to a great extent, we yet would avoid the anomalous unity of Rome, which consists in the compromise of truth. We take our stand upon one common and central ground, the word of God, where we can meet together and shake hands, which we cannot when we come to man's authority. In this way the Church of England becomes the admiration of her friends and the terror of her enemies. The apple of discord was flung from one of our Universities; and because we stand up and say that we will not retract from the principles of the Reformation, because we do not view religion as it existed in the darkness of the middle centuries, because, third life, we have soared in the pure clear sky of truth; because we say, Peace, peace to the good old Church of England, but no peace with Rome, and no peace to the worshippers of Rome; because we say this we are denounced as accusers of the brethren. God knows we have often been accused, and been too silent in our vindication, from the insidious attacks of men who profess to hold with the forms of our Church, but have shown that they no longer wish to read our Liturgy, or to maintain our Protestant principles, and have led our youth step by step, from their Protestant Alma Mater; led them away, step by step, until they have seen there was nothing but one single narrow bridge between them and the Church of Rome, and wearied with uncertainty, and anxious for repose, they have stepped over the barrier, and found themselves asleep in the lap of Rome. (Hear.) It has been said, that Meetings like this produce more apostates from Protestants than anything else. I can from fact prove the reverse, and if any man choose to write to me I will give him facts and details to that effect. But can our enemies deny that their doctrines do not tend to Rome? Can they deny that one beloved man who used to stand among us has been led by those doctrines to apostatize from the truth? We do not exult over his fall. May God restore him! For we believe that his heart is in the right place; and when the delusion has passed away, he will find that the Catholic Church is not on the seven hills of Rome, but in the bosom of his own mother country; and we believe he will return to the Church that nursed him. It has been said, that he was affected with Latitudinarianism, but did that bring him to Popery? Surely it was Tractarianism that laid the foundation. What is this new system? The voice is that of Jacob, but the hand is the hand of Esau. It is held out in the attitude of peace and friendship; but when we grasp it we find it rough and hairy, and it reminds us of the beast, and we shrink back from the embrace. My Lord, we say we repudiate Popery, and shall we shake hands with her emissaries? We must not give the right hand to Popery, lest we be drawn over to the left. I am persuaded, my Lord, that in this great controversy we are maintaining most strictly the directions of our own blessed Church. Even these men do not disguise that they consider the Prayer-book too meagre, the Articles of our Church too Puritanical, her services too simple and too clear for them; they want to turn the beauty of the temple of the Lord into the magnificence of a theatre; and thus we should have Christianity dramatized and Christ crucified afresh. Their Catholic tradition is like the rainbow which, when we try to grasp, vanishes in air. As for Catholic traditions and Rome's boasted antiquity, those learned doctors have given us no substantial proof of their accuracy. They make tradition just what they please, anything and everything. My Lord, we are not going to leave the fixed star of the truth of our Church, but we shall continue to steer our bark, by its light and direction, to the haven where we desire to be; we are not going to follow a will-o'-the-wisp, a mere meteor of the marsh, which, the more you pursue, the deeper you get into the mire, till at last you sink into the quicksands of error, and find your delusion is your ruin. My Lord, we have Catholic tradition, as far as it is worth having, in the Confessions, Homilies, and Articles of our own Church. Were not Cranmer, Latimer, and Ridley, equally good divines with those of the modern University of Oxford? Were they not as likely to know the truth as those men who have done so much harm to our cause? Is the learning of our modern divines to be found in their misquotations from the Fathers? They have quarrelled with Mr. Good's book, and thrown it overboard, because it was too ponderous for them to move at all. My Lord, what would you think of a small body of Presbyters, none of them dignified men, setting up to tell our bishops what they ought to do and what they ought to say? Think God for the Archbishop of Canterbury!—thank God for the good Bishop of Chester!—thank God for that excellent man the Bishop of Winchester!—that God for Ripon, and Chichester, and Exeter, and for our other bishops! My Lord, how stands the case? We are on the bishops' side against a few false Presbyters;—they hold up their Romish traditions, and we adhere to our Protestant faith. Are we, then, traitors to our Church, or are they? We do not put on the garments of infallibility. Dr. Pusey says, "If you do not let us alone, we are such a powerful party, and your young men are so fat gone, that we cannot answer for the consequences." They are dissatisfied with England's Church;—we, my Lord, have been brought up under the fostering care of the glorious Reformation, and bless God for our redemption and for giving us the Articles of our Church in their tenor fide simplicity. These are, my Lord, those who would sign those Protestant Articles, and yet are of the Church of Rome in their hearts; they make use of Catholicism in the closet, and denounce it in the pulpit; they eat the bread of Protestantism, but help Rome to recover her ascendancy over our Church. I say this, not in anger, but I say it in coolness of judgment and decision of mind. It is due to Protestant parents of this great country, and to our university youth, who go up to their Alma Mater in all simplicity and confidence, whence our Church derives so many ministers; it is due to the University and to us who are ministers of integrity and honesty and truth, these men should tell us what they mean: and whether or not they are Popish traitors in a Protestant University, using their influence to poison the minds of the rising generation. (Cheers.) My Lord, some of them have had the honesty to go over to the Church of Rome, and I respect such men twenty times more than I do him who remains to betray us. (Cheers.) My Lord, I fear less the storm than I fear the insidious leak which would sink our vessel; I fear less the hurricane, than the secret earthquake which would shake the earth until its cities were scattered to the dust. If these men will not leave Roman Catholic superstition; if they will not join the Protestant faith; if they will not relinquish the breviary, it is far better they should say so. My Lord, I am taking no unadvised position, and, did time permit, I could bring forward ample quotations from a book I have here, which would bear me out in all I have advanced, and if any individual wishes to discuss them in private, I refer him to a little book entitled, The Case as it Is, by W. Good, of Trinity College, Cambridge; if, on reading it, it does not prove all I have said, then brand me as not worthy of credit. (Cheers.) I will give you a proof of Roman Catholic retractation. At one of our clerical Meetings we discussed some of their tracts: now, they tell us we have never read any of them; we have, and digested them, and hard of digestion we found them; at first we thought we were gathering some of the fruit of true Catholicism from them, but we soon found them to be nothing but the apples of Sodom: we soon found that the leaves were Protestant leaves, but the fruit was the fruit of Rome. We had one young clergyman, of High Church principles, who admitted that there was much of good truth in their tracts;—and if there were not some truth there would be no danger; they sweeten with truth their bitter draught, for they could not give it all in one large dose. But to return to this young clergyman; he had read the tracts for some time, and when we met, as was customary at times, because, third life, we have soared in the pure clear sky of truth; because we say, Peace, peace to the good old Church of England, but no peace with Rome, and no peace to the worshippers of Rome; because we say this we are denounced as accusers of the brethren. God knows we have often been accused, and been too silent in our vindication, from the insidious attacks of men who profess to hold with the forms of our Church, but have shown that they no longer wish to read our Liturgy, or to maintain our Protestant principles, and have led our youth step by step, from their Protestant Alma Mater; led them away, step by step, until they have seen there was nothing but one single narrow bridge between them and the Church of Rome, and wearied with uncertainty, and anxious for repose, they have stepped over the barrier, and found themselves asleep in the lap of Rome. (Hear.) It has been said, that Meetings like this produce more apostates from Protestants than anything else. I can from fact prove the reverse, and if any man choose to write to me I will give him facts and details to that effect. But can our enemies deny that their doctrines do not tend to Rome? Can they deny that one beloved man who used to stand among us has been led by those doctrines to apostatize from the truth? We do not exult over his fall. May God restore him! For we believe that his heart is in the right place; and when the delusion has passed away, he will find that the Catholic Church is not on the seven hills of Rome, but in the bosom of his own mother country; and we believe he will return to the Church that nursed him. It has been said, that he was affected with Latitudinarianism, but did that bring him to Popery? Surely it was Tractarianism that laid the foundation. What is this new system? The voice is that of Jacob, but the hand is the hand of Esau. It is held out in the attitude of peace and friendship; but when we grasp it we find it rough and hairy, and it reminds us of the beast, and we shrink back from the embrace. My Lord, we say we repudiate Popery, and shall we shake hands with her emissaries? We must not give the right hand to Popery, lest we be drawn over to the left. I am persuaded, my Lord, that in this great controversy we are maintaining most strictly the directions of our own blessed Church. Even these men do not disguise that they consider the Prayer-book too meagre, the Articles of our Church too Puritanical, her services too simple and too clear for them; they want to turn the beauty of the temple of the Lord into the magnificence of a theatre; and thus we should have Christianity dramatized and Christ crucified afresh. Their Catholic tradition is like the rainbow which, when we try to grasp, vanishes in air. As for Catholic traditions and Rome's boasted antiquity, those learned doctors have given us no substantial proof of their accuracy. They make tradition just what they please, anything and everything. My Lord, we are not going to leave the fixed star of the truth of our Church, but we shall continue to steer our bark, by its light and direction, to the haven where we desire to be; we are not going to follow a will-o'-the-wisp, a mere meteor of the marsh, which, the more you pursue, the deeper you get into the mire, till at last you sink into the quicksands of error, and find your delusion is your ruin. My Lord, we have Catholic tradition, as far as it is worth having, in the Confessions, Homilies, and Articles of our own Church. Were not Cranmer, Latimer, and Ridley, equally good divines with those of the modern University of Oxford? Were they not as likely to know the truth as those men who have done so much harm to our cause? Is the learning of our modern divines to be found in their misquotations from the Fathers? They have quarrelled with Mr. Good's book, and thrown it overboard, because it was too ponderous for them to move at all. My Lord, what would you think of a small body of Presbyters, none of them dignified men, setting up to tell our bishops what they ought to do and what they ought to say? Think God for the Archbishop of Canterbury!—thank God for the good Bishop of Chester!—thank God for that excellent man the Bishop of Winchester!—that God for Ripon, and Chichester, and Exeter, and for our other bishops! My Lord, how stands the case? We are on the bishops' side against a few false Presbyters;—they hold up their Romish traditions, and we adhere to our Protestant faith. Are we, then, traitors to our Church, or are they? We do not put on the garments of infallibility. Dr. Pusey says, "If you do not let us alone, we are such a powerful party, and your young men are so fat gone, that we cannot answer for the consequences." They are dissatisfied with England's Church;—we, my Lord, have been brought up under the fostering care of the glorious Reformation, and bless God for our redemption and for giving us the Articles of our Church in their tenor fide simplicity. These are, my Lord, those who would sign those Protestant Articles, and yet are of the Church of Rome in their hearts; they make use of Catholicism in the closet, and denounce it in the pulpit; they eat the bread of Protestantism, but help Rome to recover her ascendancy over our Church. I say this, not in anger, but I say it in coolness of judgment and decision of mind. It is due to Protestant parents of this great country, and to our university youth, who go up to their Alma Mater in all simplicity and confidence, whence our Church derives so many ministers; it is due to the University and to us who are ministers of integrity and honesty and truth, these men should tell us what they mean: and whether or not they are Popish traitors in a Protestant University, using their influence to poison the minds of the rising generation. (Cheers.) My Lord, some of them have had the honesty to go over to the Church of Rome, and I respect such men twenty times more than I do him who remains to betray us. (Cheers.) My Lord, I fear less the storm than I fear the insidious leak which would sink our vessel; I fear less the hurricane, than the secret earthquake which would shake the earth until its cities were scattered to the dust. If these men will not leave Roman Catholic superstition; if they will not join the Protestant faith; if they will not relinquish the breviary, it is far better they should say so. My Lord, I am taking no unadvised position, and, did time permit, I could bring forward ample quotations from a book I have here, which would bear me out in all I have advanced, and if any individual wishes to discuss them in private, I refer him to a little book entitled, The Case as it Is, by W. Good, of Trinity College, Cambridge; if, on reading it, it does not prove all I have said, then brand me as not worthy of credit. (Cheers.) I will give you a proof of Roman Catholic retractation. At one of our clerical Meetings we discussed some of their tracts: now, they tell us we have never read any of them; we have, and digested them, and hard of digestion we found them; at first we thought we were gathering some of the fruit of true Catholicism from them, but we soon found them to be nothing but the apples of Sodom: we soon found that the leaves were Protestant leaves, but the fruit was the fruit of Rome. We had one young clergyman, of High Church principles, who admitted that there was much of good truth in their tracts;—and if there were not some truth there would be no danger; they sweeten with truth their bitter draught, for they could not give it all in one large dose. But to return to this young clergyman; he had read the tracts for some time, and when we met, as was customary at times, it was my turn to read the tract, and I came to a passage which said that to the clergyman belongs the awful and mysterious power of making the body and blood of Christ. I said, "Could any Romish priest have spoken more strongly than this? Is it not blasphemy to speak of the creature creating his Creator?" "Oh, Sir," said the young man, "you must misrepresent the matter, for in my copy it is quite different." He showed me his copy of the tract, where the language was, "the awful mystery and power of dispensing the body and blood of Christ." We compared our tracts, and found that mine was the first edition, and his the second. I said, "Here is a retractation!" (Hear, hear.) My Lord, this young man flung down the book and said, "I have done with them, if they can be guilty of such deception. I will have no more to do with them." (Cheers.) I believe that the conspiracy at Oxford has not its origin there; I have no doubt there is some wise man in the back-ground, wise as a serpent, though not harmless as a dove. I believe that by him the train is laid, and that our Protestant brethren at Oxford are to throw in the match. My Lord, it is not, however, simply because our Church may be endangered,—it is not because certain outward circumstances may be affected, that we are engaged in this controversy, but because justification by faith alone is denied, and the "Tridentine imparted"—not imputed—righteousness is put on in its place; it is not because we are taught by our own Church to live and do; but because they say, as in the Church of Rome, "Do and live;" it is not because we are not taught that baptism is the sign and rite of the grace whereby we are engrafted into the Church of God, and made heirs of Christ's kingdom, but that it is declared by them to be a washing away of sin, and if a man sin afterwards, there is no free pardon, but he must go mourning all his days; no, but because they would change a burden which is light, and a yoke that is easy, into one more weighty than Jewish ordinances, from which Christ has set us free; because their system goes to the very root of the supremacy of Christ in his Church; because they would exalt the sacraments beyond their character as the simple channels of God's grace; because they would introduce manifold mediators between us and the one great Mediator; because they would introduce penance and purgatory, and all the monstrosities that go to transform God's truth into Romanized error; because they would take from our Church the pearl of great price given to her by God; because they would virtually make Christianity anti Christianity, and would rest the sinner's hope more upon man and himself than on his Saviour,—because of all this we say, "No peace, no peace, with Rome." (Cheers.) And if the cry is raised, "Unprotestantize the Church of England," we will raise the cry, "Unromanize the Church of Rome." (Renewed cheers.) Our conflict is not with the Church of Rome, but with Popery. My Lord, there is, thank God, in the great body of our clergy no disposition to go back to Romish principles; but I trust they would rather draw nearer to our own beloved Church. Thank God, our bishops have joined our common cause. (Loud cheers.) I am aware that our good Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of London were reprehended and censured by many for consecrating our Hebrew Bishop Alexander; but I cry shame upon them who would have deprived our Church of the laurels which she gained by that act. (Hear, hear.) My Lord, I thank God for our bishops, and let us not blame them because they have not proceeded more rapidly in what we might have desired, for we remember that we younger clergymen might be carried away more in our heat to decide too quickly upon matters which require consideration and experience and care than we might be able to give to them. Thank God, I do not believe that we have one bishop on the bench who wishes well to the movements at Oxford! (Hear, hear.) Thank God, we have an Administration at the junctore at the helm of power—an Administration which has not admitted one Papist into its power, and not one Tractarian on its bench. (Great cheering.) They have done more than this—they have singled out Dr. O'Brien for the bench in Ireland, the noblest defender of the doctrine of justification by faith since a Luther's day; and Dr. Gilbert, the Principal of Brazennose College, just after he had led on the battle against reserve and for the communication of truth. (Applause.) They Mechanics' Institute.

THE Directors of the Mechanics' Institute, with a view to the support and extension of the Schools, and other objects of a similar nature connected with the Institution, beg leave to announce their intention of opening an Exhibition at the Hall of the Institute, in the course of the month of August, of all such subjects of art, science, general utility, and the beautiful in nature as they can possibly collect, and may be thought novel or interesting to the Public: they therefore take this method of requiring the possessors of Philosophical Apparatus, Paintings, Engravings, Models, of all descriptions, or articles of Elegance, Curiosity, or Utility, to favour the Institute with the loan of them for a short period, for the above stated purpose.

It is hoped that, while the Exhibition will give the Public an opportunity of aiding a charitable fund, it may at the same time afford them a treat not often enjoyed in St. John; and give to men of genius and taste a fair field for the display of their various powers and endowments.

Persons disposed to forward the design are earnestly requested to send a general description, the number and probable dimensions of such specimens as they may be generously inclined to furnish for the occasion, to the undersigned, at as early a day as they conveniently can, in order that due preparation may be made for their reception and arrangement.

Should any articles sent in be designed for sale and so ticketed, with their price, orders from purchasers will be received at the Hall on account o the owners. By Order.

TO THE OLD AND YOUNG.

HO! YE RED HEADS AND GREY!

Phenomenon in Chemistry.—East India Hair Dye.—Colors the Hair, and will not the Skin!!!

The dye is in form of a powder which in plain matter of fact may be applied to the hair over night, the first night turning the lightest red or grey hair to a dark brown, and by repeating a second or third night, to a bright jet black. Any person may, therefore, with the least possible trouble, keep his hair any dark shade or a perfect black: with a positive assurance that the powder, if applied to the skin, will not color it. There is no trouble in removing it from the hair, as in all powders before made.—By an occasional application, a person turning grey will never be known to have a grey hair! Directions complete with the article. There is no coloring in this statement, as one can easily test.

☞These facts are warranted by the gentleman who manufactures it, who is the celebrated chemist Dr. Comstock, author of Comstock's Chemistry, Philosophy, and many other works well known and widely celebrated by the public.

This dye is sold only by COMSTOCK & CO., 71 Maiden Lane, New-York.

For Sale at nearly all Shops, and at Saint John by Messrs. PETERS & TILLEY, J. ELLIOTT, Messrs. T. WALKER & SON, and others.

Double the Quantity and Better Quality than any other for the same Price!!! Remember this.

Liver Complaints.

AND ALL SICKNESS AND DISEASES.

DR. LIN'S

TEMPERANCE LIFE BITTERS—

AND CHINESE BLOOD PILLS.

The Greatest Secret Discovered!

Purge—purge—purge—has been the cry for the last few years. This has been effectually tried, and yet sufferers have multiplied, and died: and why? Not because purging was not necessary, but too much has been done—without the tonic to follow, and sustain the system. Purge, you must! The sickly humours of the blood must be carried off—or the accumulation of them prevented. Prevent, then, the growth of such humours.

Why do the Chinese live to such immense ages, and still retain the powers of youth or middle age? Because they purify the blood. The Chinese BLOOD PILLS—so called because they work upon and cleanse the Blood—are the standard remedy. These pills will do it; and the Temperance Bitters, taken as directed, will strengthen the system and prevent the accumulation of the base humours which infest the blood, and which only increase by purges, unless the bitters are taken after. Buy, then, these pills and bitters. Take weekly the pills, and daily the bitters, and if you are or have been invalids for days, weeks, months, or years, you will find the sickly humours drawn off, and prevented from a return, and the sallow yellow hue of sickness change rapidly to the full blooming glow of health and youthful buoyancy.

There are cases so numerous of these brilliant effects, that time and space forbid an attempt to put them down. Buy and use those medicines, and use no other, and health and strength shall be yours. See wrapper and directions that come with them.

FRAUDULENT COUNTERFEITS.

will be attempted. Buy no remedy of the kind unless it have my name—O. C. LIN, M. D. on the wrapper, and also the notice as follows:

"Entered according to Act of Congress, A. D. 1841, by THOS. CONSET, in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the United states for the southern District of New-York."

Warranted the only genuine.

THE INDIAN'S PANACEA.—For the cure of Rheumatism, Scrotula or King's Evil, Sciation or Hip-Gout, Incipient Cancers, Salt Rheum, Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases, particularly Ulcers and painful affections of the bones; Ulcerated Throat and Nostrils, Ulcers of every description. Fever Sores, and Internal abscesses; Fistulas, Scald Head, Scurvy, Biles, Chronic Sore Blys; Erysipelas, Blotches, and every variety of Cutaneous affection; Chronic Catarrh, Headaches from particular causes; Pain in the stomach and Dyspepsia, proceeding from vitiation; Affections of the Liver, Chronic Inflammation of the Kidneys, and general debility, caused by a torpid action of the vessels of the skin. It is singularly efficacious in renovating those constitutions which have been broken down by injudicious treatment, or juvenile irregularities. In general terms, it is a sovereign Remedy in all those diseases which arise from the impurities of the blood, or vitiation of the humours, of whatever name or kind.

There is no other Panacea to compare with it, as the Indian's Panacea has cured about 563 cases that were incurable by a long use of other Panaces.

For sale at nearly all shops, and at st. John by Messrs. Peters & Tilley, J. Elliott, Messrs. Thos. Walker & son, and others.

$100 Reward.

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS REWARD—has been offered for months, to any one who will use a bottle of Hay's Liniment for the Piles without being cured. Of thousands sold, in no one instance has it failed of a cure. Proof overwhelming to be had where it is sold. It is also a certain cure in nearly every case.

(externally) in the following complaints.

LOOK OUT.

Some Swindlers have counterfeited this article and put it up with various devises. Do not be imposed upon. One thing only will protect you—it is the name of COMSTOCK & Co.: that name must be always on the wrapper, or you are cheated. Do not forget it. Take this direction with you, and test by that, or never buy it: for it is impossible for any other to be true or genuine. Sold by COMSTOCK and Co., 71 Maiden Lane, New-York.

For sale at nearly all shops, and at st. John by Messrs. Peters & Tilley, J. Elliott, Messrs. Thos. Walker & son, and others.

MYSTERIOUS.

A gentleman belonging to one of the most ancient and wealthy families of this city, who must be well known to numerous friends, having since the year 1818 up to recently, been bent nearly double, and for several years confined to his bed, has been restored to good health—has regained his natural erect position—and has quitted his carriage, and now walks with ease!! We believe this is the gentleman's own description as near as possible, and there is no exaggeration in it. We will give inquirers his address, and doubt not his humane feelings will excuse the liberty; so that any one doubting, may know these facts—though he requests his name may not appear in print. Among other similar instances, Mr. James G. Reynolds, 144 Christie st. has been restored, and will give personal assurances of the facts of his case. Both were rheumatism, and contracted cords and sinews. How has this been done?

Answer.—By Hewes' Nerve and Bone Liniment externally.—N. Y. Herald, Jan. 26, 1841.

For sale at nearly all shops, and at st. John by Messrs. Peters & Tilley, J. Elliott, Messrs. Thos. Walker & son, and others.

HAVE YOU A COUGH? Rev. Dr. Bartholemew's Expectorant Syrup, a safe medical prescription, containing no poisonous drugs, and used in an extensive practice of several years, will most positively afford relief.
