Both for distance and time the flight of Aviator Gardner from Chicago to New York has been many times exceeded. Air journeys of 2000 miles have been made this year, and in endurance contests fliers have held the air continuously for nine hours or more. But the trip from Chicago in a single day has hitherto baffled some of the nerviest of our birdmen, to say nothing of Miss Ruth Law. Gardner is the first to achieve it.

Time will tell whether a real service can be maintained. The difficulties are great and the cost is high. Even after he had reached New York the aviator was two hours in trying to find Belmont park. He finally landed in desperation in a field, narrowly escaping a serious accident. In the prevailing mist the signal fires could not be seen. That illustrates one of the problems involved. It is not an easy matter to put up sign posts several thousand feet in the sky, and yet some method must be found to enable pilots to sight landings.

Hardly less spectacular was the flight of a companion aviator, Max Miller covering the same route from Chicago in an actual flying time of seven hours 32 minutes. That is wonderful speed, and suggests that a cross-continent flight may not now be far distant.—New York Tribune.

DEATHS AND CASUALTIES

Britain's forces in the Crimea were 110,000 men. Out of this small army she lost 4000 killed in action and 21,000 by disease. The Northern army during the American civil war lost two men in hospital for one in the field. In the Spanish-American war the United States lost 161 men in action and 3,081 by disease. The French in Madagascar, however, set a new record, losing 5,600 by disease as against seven by bullets. The most dangerous foe of the soldier has always been the microbe.

But we have changed all that during the present war, for every ten men killed in action only one man has died through disease. Moreover, whereas in former wars a 50 per cent recovery of wounded was deemed a meritorious showing and one reflecting the greatest credit on the medical staff, the recoveries are now higher than 90 per cent, notwithstanding the nature of the wounds, which are in a great majority of cases caused by jagged splinters of shell, with the accompanying severe laceration and added chance of infection.

As man has developed the art of killing he has progressed equally in the art of healing and saving. The death rate has been reduced beyond all expectation, thought the clever little Japanese had shown a wondering world the mervels of rigorous sanitary regulations and of aseptic treatment of wounds. Even in the South African war we evidently had a lot to learn, for though our casualties in hospital generally averaged 10 per cent of the force then in the field, we also had to nurse germ-infected patients to the ratio of 20 per cent of our army.

The amazing results obtained by our medical officers during this war are through a tremendous advance in sanitation, hygiene and antiseptic treatment. The most acute brains of the age have worked out the problem, until the soldier really has some chance of falling on the field of honor; once upon a time he was chiefly in danger of rotting of disease and passing away amid the horrors of some typhus-reeking hospital.

CANADIANS FAITHFUL TO FOOD REGULATIONS

Do householders in Canada seek to evade the food regulations? Are the merchants of Canada conniving at the evasion of the food regulations? Let us see about that.

The main object of the Canada Food Board is to supply Great Britain and the Allies with vital foods. With this in view food regulations are made which if respected by the people of Canada will enable Canada to keep faith with the Allies on food.

Do the people of Canada want to keep faith with the Allies on food? They do. Are the people of Canada keeping faith with the Allies on food? They are.

To take any other position is to suggest that the people of Canada would rather keep their pre-war food habits than keep faith with the Allies on food. No true Canadian is breaking the regulations of the Canada Food Board for he knows those regulations are made in order that Great Britain and the Allies and the Canadian army at the front may be properly fed. Who of us will eat what should be conserved for the Canadian army at the front?

The hearts of the people of Canada are sound and in this war to a finish. Food is a fist class munition of war and Canadians so view it. It will be time enough to go in for rations in Canada when the people of Canada refuse to conform to national efforts to conserve food for Great Britain and the Allies, and the Canadian army at the front. When that time comes a policeman, not a food controller, will be needed.

The Plain Truth about Shoe Prices

LEATHER is scarce and is growing scarcer. A large part of the available supply must be used for soldiers' boots. Importations have practically ceased and we are forced to depend upon the limited quantity of materials produced in Canada.

The cost of everything which goes into a pair of shoes is high, and is going higher. Workmen by the thousands have joined the colors, and labor is increasingly hard to get. It is not merely a matter of high prices, but of producing enough good quality shoes to go around.

These conditions are beyond the control of any man, or any group of men. They fall on all alike. No one is exempt—neither the manufacturer, the dealer, nor the consumer.

You must pay more today for shoes of the same quality than you did a year ago. Next Spring, prices will be higher still.

These are hard facts. They will not yield to argument. They cannot be glossed over. We cannot change them, much as we would wish to do so.

But you, as a wearer of shoes, can help to relieve them if you will exercise prudence and good judgment in purchasing. See that you get real value for your money. Spend enough to get it, but spend nothing for "frills."

See that the manufacturer's trade-mark is stamped upon the shoes you buy. High prices are a temptation to reduce the quality in order to make the price seem low. But no manufacturer will stamp his trade-mark upon a product which he is ashamed to acknowledge. Remember this, and look for the trade-mark. It is your best assurance of real value for your money.

IN GERMAN JAILS

(Freje Zeitung, Bern, German Republican)

The German bourgeois press with few exceptions (such as the Berliner Tageblatt) unite in condemnation of Lichnowsky. The only point of disagreement is whether Lichnowsky should go to prison or an asylum. In Germany one is permitted to ascribe the war in a general way to imperialism. But one may not openly discuss the question of the central powers' share of guilt. Liebknecht is in prison. Rosa Luxemburg is in detention, and thousands with her. Prof. Nicolai is in prison. Capt. Paasche, son of the vice-president of the reichstag and nephew-in-law of Harden, is in prison. Old Baron Eckhardstein, who was formerly attached to the embassy in London, passes from detention into prison, and from prison to detention. The harmless Lilly Jannasche, secretary of the "New Fatherland League," has been imprisoned for months. That aristocratic leader of the political section of the general staff and knight of the Iron Cross who gave publicity to Lichnowsky's Memorial, has been put in a lunatic asylum. August Bebel once spoke a very true word: "Formerly, inconvenient people were put into a monastry, today they are put into a sanitarium."

TOMORROW AND TODAY

We hear a good deal about the world of tomorrow, about "a new social order," and a revolution that will level all distinctions and equalize all property rights.

Dreams, idle dreams, the same dreams that we have been having ever since the dawn of creation, and that we shall have as long as man continues to be a little lower than the angels.

The age of miracles has passed. Perfection does not exist outside of Paradise. Equality is impossible as long as man is born as he is—some strong in muscle and some with more gray matter than muscular tissue. The cream will rise to the top.

The world is round, but it is uneven. It has its hills and dales, its valleys and its mountains, its seas and its deserts. Man, with inequalities like the world he inhabits, is created only as far as his soul is concerned in God's image.

In all other respects, each man differs from another, according to heredity and environment. He is what his ambition, his will, and purpose make him. A beneficent Creator provided for variety in all things. Trees differ in height and foliage, flowers differ in color and perfume, and some men are born leaders and others born to be led.

This is the law of God. No law of man will change conditions created by the Infinite. The dreamers, faddists, the self-constituted reformers, and the up-lifters (chiefly concerned in uplifting themselves) will have plenty to do to attend to the world of today, and leave the world of tomorrow for future generations.

The world of today has its problems and its cares, its hopes and fears. They are all precisely like those men have had from the days when the greatest of all Teachers stood on the shores of Galilee and taught the gospel of respect for constituted authority and regard for the feelings of His fellow-men.

In a single instance, when it was sought to confound Him, He directed His disciples to "Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." A golden rule for the mischief-makers of today to bear in mind.

It is too bad that the dreamers who would reconstruct the world, recreate man and re-endow woman, do not pay a little more attention to the Great Teacher and the sublime wisdom He taught. When He climbed Gethsemane, he bore a cross not His own, but that of a suffering world.

The world will always suffer until it listens to His voice, heeds His counsel, and follows in His footsteps. —Leslie's.

HELP THE BOYS BY SAVING GASOLINE

The Allies need gasoline. Waste none of it on Sunday motoring for pleasure. He who uses it for this purpose stints those who are figthing our battles. It is the duty of all motor car owners to comply with the Fuel Controller's request to save "gas."

The safety of the State being the supreme law, personal enjoyment must give place to national necessity during war time. To save gasoline is to save money. It will also ensure a more adequate supply of "gas" for the needs of our war machine, which must lack no essential. To comply with the Fuel Controller's request will save $150,000 on a single Sunday. In gasoline it will also save hundreds of thousands of gallons. A word to the wise motor car owner is sufficient!

END STOMACH TROUBLE, GASES OR DYSPEPSIA

"Pape's Diapepsin" makes sick, sour, gassy stomachs surely feel fine in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach-headache, you can get relief in five minutes by neutralizing acidity. Put an end to such stomach distress now by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder caused by food fermentation due to excessive acid in stomach.

Neglect your kidneys now and the results will be fatal later. Heed Nature's warnings: headaches, dizziness, pain in the back, etc., are all symptoms. If you have them Gin Pills are necessary at once.

SYNOPSIS OF LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

POLITICS AND LABOR

The government's policy has led, as was inevitably foreseen, to an epidemic of strikes. Political labor leaders saw an opportunity and got busy. The more unions, the greater the power of the labor leaders and the greater their emoluments.

It is not unrest among workers that causes strikes, but political leaders who trade on the labor votes. They are bold and cunning, and some of them unscrupulous. For instance, the great mass meeting to protest against the traffic in munitions, held in Chicago in January, 1915, made up of workingmen and farmers, it is now disclosed, was part of the German propaganda. German money is behind the I.W.W. in every strike.

The adoption of socialistic ideas due to stress of war has stimulated the demands of labor politicians for more of the same sort and legislators weakliy yield. Congress passed a seaman's bill and an illiteracy bill at labor's demands. Both have had to be put in abeyance because their operation interfered with the prosecution of the war. Their glaring imperfections were distinctly pointed out while the bills were pending, but the political labor leaders cowed our legislators.

Now the labor agitators are demanding a new trial for Mooney, in spite of the final decision of the courts in California against him. They did the same thing with McNamara, the Los Angeles dynamiter, and contributed $200,000 for his defense. The best his counsel could do was to advise him to make a confession, which he promptly did. Gompers himself not so long ago defied the courts and was sentenced to jail for contempt, but never served a day of his sentence.

The Clayton law conceded everything to the political labor leaders, who no more control the labor vote than they do the votes of the farmer, school teacher, clergyman, or clerks in business houses.

Labor disputes are no longer settled by parties in interest, but are taken to the favorable atmosphere of Washington, and adjusted to satisfy the political labor leaders. A premium is put on strikes where labor conditions had been peaceful before. The most flagrant case was that of the Western Union.

Now we have a threat to unionize all the steel and iron works and all the ships and lumber mills. After the government's surrender to the Big Four nothing is too rash for the labor politicians to demand. A cowed Congress, with a few notable exceptions, is whipped into line. Yet independent members were not punished. The great mass of the workingmen sustained them at the polls and returned them to their seats at the last Congressional election.

Had a secret ballot been permitted, not one of the great strikes in the munition factories would have been ordered by the workers, but they had no recourse but to submit or be assailed as "scabs" or driven from the union.

In every strike three elements are involved: the employer, the employee, and the public. The last mentioned always foots the bill. If wages are advanced, prices rise and the ultimate consumer puts his hands deeper into his pockets while crying out against the higher cost of living.

The disregard of the rights of the public by strikers is most reprehensible. Waiters watch until a dining-room is full, and then march out to the discomfiture of guests against whom they hold no grivance. Trolley men wait for a holiday, and strike early in the morning to disconcert the traveler. The Big Four threatened to tie up the business of the country, which meant in 24 hours no milk for sick babies, no food for invalids, no coal for industries, in any large city. Yet the public, misled and misinformed by contemptible yellow sheets, never murmured.

We believe in the right of every worker to seek an open market for his brains and brawn. We believe in high wages and good living. We discountenance violence and distrust labor leaders who trade with politicians.

The American workingman is the best in the world, the most intelligent, the most efficient and the most independent. No political labor leader carries the workingman's vote in his pocket.—Leslie's.

SCHEIDEMANN'S GUILT

Two auxiliary weapons has Germany employed for the attainment of her diabolical aims—bribery and socialism. The first was too crude for enlightened nations, so she employed it with complete success in the Czar's Russia (anyone who has lived in Petrograd can testify to that). But the second one she employed very cautiously and very deftly in all European countries, in America, and in "free" Russia. She had to create the impression that the German Socialists were pacifists, internationalists, anti-Kaiserites; and never, never would they permit the Junkers to unsheathe the sword. It was necessary to foment — outside of Germany — a strong anti-war sentiment by preaching universal brotherhood and exposing the wickedness and uselessness of wars. And who could do this work better than a respectable German Socialist? Of course, Scheidemann was selected—a well-known educated leader of the German Socialists.

It was Scheidemann who for years was preaching resistance to Junkerism in all lands and while his country was secretly and feverishly preparing for war to the last button he was lulling his foreign comrades to sleep by asserting that Germany would never dare to declare war, that the first rattle of the sword would be the signal for a nation-wide strike in industrial Germany, that the Socialist party was too strong and so well drilled that the Kaiser would not even dream of antagonizing it, and that it was the duty of every Socialist and every radical to hinder as much as possible the warlike preparations in their respective countries. How well he succeeded is proved by the fact that not a single country, not even France, was fully prepared for war. How great his influence was over the American socialists is clearly indicated by their infamous St. Louis manifesto in which our entrance into the war on the side of the Allies is branded as "the greatest crime in history." Even now they are "unalterably opposed to it"— vide Berger's promise "to get the boys out of the trenches" if elected.

But Scheidemann's avtivity was not terminated by these trifles. There was more important work ahead. Free Russia was looming large on the horizon as a Socialist state. Who knows, they might perchance succeed — a condition more dangerous to the Kaiser's welfare than a western disaster. "Go forth, Scheidemann, unloose your oratorical bolts, employ all the cunning you have proved yourself to be such a master of, and thwart their designs!" And again Scheidemann obeyed. He was overcome with joy, he was full of enthusiasm for the "first Socialist republic." Most effusively did he embrace Comrades Lenine and Trotzky. He would go back to Germany and foment a series of industrial strikes; openly and covertly he and his adherents would preach to the soldiers the crime of fighting their own comrades; rather should they join hands with the Russians and make common cause. "Now, comrades, do the same in your country. Disband your armies and send them home to do useful work while I and my trusties are exerting ourselves to the same end." And the Russian armies were disbanded and sent home.

And Scheidemann? Well, he did inaugurate a few strikes—no doubt with the O.K. of his master. But somehow he did not succeed in "getting the boys out of the trenches." Instead, these "boys" swooped down upon Russia now that she was utterly defenseless, letting loose upon her their unbridled Schrecklichkeit. Of course Scheidemann cursed and swore at the perfidy of the Junkers, and with a frothy mouth he administered severe flagellations to the Imperial German government. It was so effective!

These are the achievements of Philip Scheidemann. Will anyone dispute his rightful claim to walk hand in hand with the Kaiser—to the blank wall?—By a correspondent of the New York Times.

"MY SOLDIER GIRL"

When the military musical spectacle, "My Soldier Girl," which was the supreme success of all last season's offerings, is presented at the Grand Theatre, Sept. 25, theatregoers will readily appreciate why this new play was a hit from the first performance. "My Soldier Girl" presents for its first act a glittering whirl of costume and scenery, measuring well up to the production of the "Follies" with a wonderful illumination of New York City in the distance. The second scene shows Colonel Stone's home at Miami, Florida, near an aviation field. A fete is arranged in honor of the arrival of the government instructors, Tom Lawson and Teddy Carter, former members of the Roof Garden production, who have served their time in the aviation corps and are assigned the Miami Post. The night is one of the gayest and many novelties are introduced by the ex-Roof Garden Company. The final act is in two scenes offering a surprise; as the curtain rises the scene presents a battlefield "Somewhere in France" pictured in all its terrible destruction —this scene dissolves to the Goddess of Liberty and the curtain falls on the entire company in a clever grouping, forming an American flag, while a musical score of National airs close this impressive scene. An exceptionally clever cast has been engaged and is ably supported by a bewitching chorus of beauty and grace.

A FRENCH OPINION

(From L'Illustration, Paris)

It remains true that, alone among the European powers in the great war, the British Empire allows one of its component provinces—for, after all Ireland is nothing more than a considerable province — to pursue its customary avocations in peace, to trade, to grow rich and to give only what it pleases to the common cause of the Allies. This condition of affairs, humiliating for the great majority of Englishmen and Scotsmen, grievous for the Allied governments, could not last forever. While on all hands the belligerents are, in a supreme effort, sacrificing all their resources in human lives, it is inadmissible that Ireland, for whom we are figthing as well as for ourselves, should owe her liberty to us without having earned it. The heroism of the Redmonds and their partisan was not enough to redeem the indifference of the majority of the Irish people, to say nothing of the black treason of the Sinn Feiners. The leader of the Nationalists knew this only too well, and this great Anglo-Saxon patriot, who was the best of the Irish, died heartbroken.

RIPPLING RHYMES

By Walt Mason

The lazy man has lots of trouble; he can't dodge labor worth a cent; no odds how he may twist and double, some job will track him to his tent. Where is the guy who used to mutter, "I can't get work, howe'er I try; I'd like to earn my bread and butter, but 'Nothing doing!' is the cry." He used to come, with gall immortal, and hand that kind of tale to you; you did not shoo him from your portal, because his story might be true. You handed him a pie or muffin, and said, "Poor man, your fate is dire," and watched him while he sat there stuffin' his innards, like a house afire. But now if someone comes a-spieling of lack of work, and fakes like those, you bump his head against the ceiling and flood him with the garden hose. You know at once that he is faking, you laugh to scorn his plaintive yelp; employers everywhere are breaking their wishbones rustling round for help. The lazy man has no excuses with which to fool the kindly guy; the stress of war has cooked his gooses, and he must go to work or die.

THE COMING VICTORY LOAN

Deposits in the savings banks of Canada have increased by a sum of $250,000,000 during the war, which would indicate the policy of thrift is making good headway. At the end of next month a new Victory Loan, probably for $250,000,000 will be launched, and judging at the rate at which wealth is being accumulated in the country there cannot be the shadow of doubt about its success. A debatable point that has arisen in connection with the loan is whether or not it should be free from income tax. If it is free it is certain many millions more than would otherwise be subscribed will be raised by the government. But it must be remembered the money has to be secured by revenue to pay the interest on war loans, and also provide a sinking fund to eventually pay off the indebtedness, and if the bulk of the country war debt is to go free from income tax, then there must be so much the greater burden of taxation on those who do not hold Victory bonds to make up the deficit.

For instance, should it be announced that the forthcoming Victory Loan, like the last, will be exempt from taxation, it is fair to presume many people will be tempted to withdraw their money from other investments and lend it to the government; that is those who are only drawing 6 per cent or less of profit. Withdrawals of this character, if they were to any extent wholesale, might have a deleterious effect on business. In the event of money being withdrawn from savings banks only, the effect would not be serious, but savings banks accounts, owing to the small interest paid, are not looked upon, except in rare instances, as sources of income upon which the owners are dependent. The experience of the past has shown, or seems to indicate, that buyers of war bonds have not very considerably infringed on their savings accounts, for if they had it is unlikely the aggregate total in the savings banks would now be $250,000,000 more than at the commencement of the war. It must be assumed that the bulk of the money raised, outside of that subscribed by banks and other large corporations, came out of individual funds, which might be described as the floating capital of the people as a whole. The policy of thrift which has been developed during the past four years has given our people a larger floating capital than ever in the past, despite the high cost of living. The rapidity with which this capital grows is shown by the increasing success attending each subsequent war loan.

Speaking in round figures Canada's war debt probably amounts by this time to $1,200,000,000, upon which the annual interest is approximately $65,000,000. The war loan to be launched at the end of October will be nominally for $250,000,000 or $300,000,000, but the government will undoubtedly secure $400,000,000, upon which interest charges will be over $20,000,000 per year. If Victory Loan dividends are free from taxation, the holders of bonds will not be contributing directly to interest charges. Thus the community as a whole will be more heavily taxed. Those who subscribe to the latest War Loan will hold their investment free from government interference; they will secure a good rate of interest from a gilt-edged security without any corresponding obligation in the matter of taxation. The proposal that the new Victory Loan should be free from taxation is advanced because it is felt there will in consequence be a more ready response, because investors will know what they are to get and that none of it will be taken away by taxation. This is quite true, but it is necessary, in considering our financial situation, to think of the future obligations the country as a whole is incurring. The money is needed, vitally needed for the conduct of the war, still at the same time it would not be the part of wisdom to offer unduly advantageous terms, which will mean inflicting unduly heavy burdens in the time to come. The people of Canada have the money to supply all the country's financial war needs. Our Victory Loans yield a good rate of interest, far better than can be secured in the country's savings banks, where holdings are increasing largely every year. Those who are prepared to invest so that victory may be secured should be prepared to do so with a patriotism that will not ask for the exemption of dividends from taxation.—Colonist.

COLONEL ROOSEVELT AND PEACE TERMS

Speaking in New Pork recently Col. Roosevelt said:

"Full reparation for the awful cost of life and treasure which Germany has inflicted on the world must be guaranteed by the peace the Allies win.

"Serbia and Rumania must have restored to them what Bulgaria has taken from them.

"The Austrian and Turkish empires must both be broken up, all the subject peoples liberated, and the Turk driven from Europe. We do not intend that German or Maygar should be oppressed by others but neither do we intend that they shall oppress and domineer others.

"France must receive back Alsace and Lorraine.

"Belgium must be restored and indemnified.

"Italian Austria must be restored to Italy, and Rumanian Hungary to Rumania.

,'The heroic Czecho-Slavoks must be made into an independent commonwealth.

"Poland as a genuinely independent commonwealth, must receive back Austrian and Prussian Poland, as well as Russian Poland, and have her coastline on the Baltic.

"The southern Slavs must be united in a great Jungo-Slav commonwealth.

"Lithuannia, Livonia and Finland must be guaranteed their freedom, and no part of the ancient empire of Russia left under German yoke.

"Northern Schleswig should go back to the Danes.

"Britain and Japan should keep the colonies they have conquered.

"Armenia must be freed. Palestine made a Jewish state and the Syrian Christians liberated.

Insisting that the United States must always be ready to defend themselves, Colonel Roosvelt said:

"Any league of nations would have to depend for its success upon the adhesion of the nine nations which are actually or potentially the most powerful military nations, and these nine nations include Germany, Austria, Turkey and Russia. The first three have recently and repeatedly violated and are now actively and continuously violating not only every treaty but every rule of civilized warfare and of international good faith. During the last year Russia, under the dominion of the Bolshevists has betrayed her allies, has become the tool of the German autocracy.

"What earthly use is it to pretend that the safety of the world would be secured by a league in which these four nations would be among the nine leading partners? Long years must pass before we can again trust any promises these four nations make. Any treaty of any kind or sort which we make with them will be worthless unless our own prepared strength renders it unsafe to break it."

In the South country, Mrs. Frank Adolph, Regent, and members of the I.O.D.E. handled Tag Day and the result at present is not known, but will be reported direct to Provincial Headquarters.

The following letter from Corbin is self-explanatory:

Hon. Sec. Fernie Branch of the Navy League:

Dear Sir—I take this opportunity of thanking you on behalf of the Corbin committee for your kindness in allowing our committee to use the caps, armlets and tags sent by you to Mrs. Reger, of Corbin. We collected approximately $170 and have decided to hold a whist drive and dance next week to augment the fund. After final results are known the total amount will be forwarded to the Hon. Pro. Secy. at Victoria.

Very respectfully yours,
Hon. Sec. Treas.

COMMUNICATED

Trail, Sept. 6, 1918.

The Secretary Great War Veterans' Association, Trail, B.C.

Dear Sir—I would like to bring to your notice an item appearing in the Trail News of August 30th, and reproduced from the Ledge, which refers to the 107th Regiment stationed at Morrissey, B.C., in the following terms:

"It is reported that a new regiment of returned soldiers will take charge of the internment camp at Morrissey. This is a move in the right direction, says the Ledge. It is time for the meal ticket officers and privates to hand their shell-proof jobs to the men who carried the flag through mud, blood and hell in France."

This article is one which cannot be allowed to pass without the person responsible being made aware of the true facts of the case. To begin with, it must be remembered that these officers and privates were mobilized at a time when there were no returned soldiers to take their places and that the two companies of the 107th Regiment consisted practically without exception of men who have done their utmost to get overseas, but have either been too young or too old—many of them having one or more sons at the front—to make it. A considerable number of these men are old soldiers, veterans of this and other wars. With regard to the officers, I can say from personal knowledge that nearly all of them have either gone overseas, returned from overseas, or are ineligible through age.

In conclusion I might add that if a man joined the 107th of whom it was thought he would be more use overseas it did not take him long to make up his mind to go. And I think that when the writer of the article to which I have taken exception considers these facts, he will realize that his reference to "meal-ticket officers and privates" is not only an insult to the men themselves who have done their bit to the best of their ability, but an insult to the uniform which they wear. Yours truly,

R. Vernon Venables,
Late Company Quartermaster Sergt.

URGE CLAIMS OF DEPENDENTS

Vancouver, Sept. 14.—At a meeting of the wives and dependents of soldiers and sailors and their friends held at the Cambie street grounds today the following resolution, moved by Sergt.-Major James Robinson and seconded by Alderman Hoskin was passed unanimously:

"Whereas the cost of living in the City of Vancouver in common with other parts of the Dominion of Canada has increased greatly during the past year, and

"Whereas the majority of the citizen soldiers of Vancouver and other places in B. C., have no other means of support for their wives and dependents than the allowance made by the Dominion government and the Canadian Patriotic Fund, and

"Whereas the Canadian Patriotic Fund officials have intimated in the public press that the allowances to the dependents of soldiers and sailors cannot be increased from that source, and

"Whereas the allowances now being paid to such dependents are insufficient for their needs;

"Be it therefore resolved by this mass meeting that the Honorable the Prime Minister, Sir Robt. Borden, be petitioned to introduce legislation which will increase the separation allowance to the wives and dependents of soldiers to $100 per month."

WAR MEMORIALS

How are the cities and towns of Canada fittingly to mark by memorials the services of their war heroes? This is a question that may be considered before the war ends if for no other reason than this, that consideration now will result in a clearer understanding when the time comes for action to be taken, says the Calgary Herald.

It has been the custom in the past to perpetuate the memories of departed war veterans by shafts of granite suitably inscribed or by tablets of figures in bronze and stone. Thus we have honored those of our people who fell in the South African war. But is there not some better way? A New York Magazine — the American City—comes forward with a suggestion.

The purpose of the European war, so far as the Allies are concerned, is the salvation of countless millions of people from the thraldom of bondage threatened by Prussian autocracy. As the great conflict is working out it will have done more than this. Not one of the Allied countries is there but will be a better place to live in as a result of the lessons being learned by the people as the world progresses. Human freedom will be something more than a term when the Huns are beaten; it will have a real and practical meaning to the common people everywhere. The age to be ushered in will be more humanitarian than has been heretofore and the state will have a new conception of its responsibilities to the individual.

And with this thought in mind the American city suggests that instead of the granite shaft of the heroic figure in bronze, we perpetuate the memory of our fallen heroes by the erection of what for a better name at the moment may be called neighborhood houses, in which will be found facilities for recreation, culture, fellowship and such other public service as practical idealism may suggest. One of these in the smaller places would be sufficient for the people's needs; in the larger centres of population several might be erected.

RUSSIAN REIGN OF TERROR

The shooting of Nikolai Lenine, like the shooting of Nikolia Romanoff, was a thing that was bound to come. If he is not dead of his wounds, as reported, it is probable that he will be shot again. "All anarchy," as Carlyle said of an earlier Reign of Terror, "is, by the nature of it, dragon's teeth; suicidal, and connot endure." Nature abhors anarchy, and has its own way of curing it: the way of letting the anarchy eat itself up. In March, 1873, when the French Reign of Terror was beginning, Vergniaud, the great Girondin orator, said to the National Convention:

"Citizens, it may be feared that the Revolution, like Saturn, successively devouring all its children, will at last engender despotism, with its accompanying caamities."

Kerensky escaped this fate by flight, Savinkov by taking up arms, There is hardly any question that their lives would have been forfeited if they had stayed as long as Lenine has. The Revolution has been "devouring its own children" at a rapid rate. The murders and massacres that have been going on incessantly in Russia are no longer those of Royalists, or even of Constitutionalists. They are murders of Socialists of all kinds, but chiefly of Social Revolutionists. The two hundred so-called "counter-revolutionists" who were massacred under the pretense that they were concerned in the killing of Count Mirback were Social Revolutionists, just as socialistic and just as anti-royalist as Lenine himself. It is quite likely that as many human beings have been slaughtered already in the Russian Reign of Terror as in the whole French Reign of Terror, and of late they have been mostly Social Revolutionists.

There is no republic and no domocracy in Russia and the Social Revolutionists, recognizing that fact, have taken up the arms of terrorism against the new despotism as they so long used those arms against the old. Mirbach and Eichorn were the first victims we heard of, though there may have been many others less important; and now comes the shooting, perhaps the death, of Lenine. Terror fights with terror; the underground terror which so long acted as rude justice over the Czar's satraps is now turned against the new tyranny. That tyranny is not even a tryanny of the working classes; men of the working classes are slain as impartially as noblemen; the extremest Socialists have no more chance of life than the Czar's Generals, unless they subscribe to that particular kind of Socialism which Lenine invented himself.—New York Times.

ONLY MEDICINE MADE FROM FRUIT

Extraordinary Success which "Fruit-a-tives" Has Achieved

One reason why "Fruit-a-tives" is so extraordinarily successful in giving relief to those suffering with Constipation, Torpid Liver, Indigestion, Chronic Headaches, Neuralgia, Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Rheumatism, Pain in the Back, Eczema and other Skin Affections, is, because it is the only medicine in the world made from fruit juices.

WONDERFUL STUFF! LIFT OUT YOUR CORNS

Apply a few drops then lift corns or calluses off with fingers—no pain.

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without a particle of pain or soreness.

This drug is called freezone and is a compound of ether discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

This drug freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards. If your druggist don't have freezone have him order it for you.

The Church of England Harvest Festival, which was advertised for Sept. 29, has been postponed until Oct. 5th.

Boris Hamburg, the great violinist, gave a performance in the Grand Theatre on Wednesday evening to a small audience.

The Fernie High School has opened with an attendance of 54 pupils. There are four classes covering the four year course.

The United Church Ladies Aid tea will be given by Mrs. A. I. Fisher at her residence, Tuesday next, 24th, from 3.30 to 6 p.m.

A meeting of the Sports Committee will be held in the council chamber on Monday, Sept. 23, at 8 o'clock. All who assisted on Labor Day are invited to attend.

Capt. David Kennedy, of Edmonton, who recently returned from overseas, visited old Fernie friends on Saturday. Dave was a city employee here for several years.

A. J. Moffatt, city clerk, left on Sunday for Penticton to attend the Convention of Municipalities, which meets there this week. He will spend a few days at the coast before he returns.

The local corps of the Salvation Army will celebrate their Harvest Festival Sale on Monday next, Sept. 23, at 8 p.m. Special music and songs have been arranged and an interesting time is expected.

Esther Rebekah Lodge will attend divine service in Christ church on Sunday evening, Sept. 29. All Odd Fellows and Rebekahs are requested to be at the lodge room in the K. P. hall at 7 p.m. on that date to attend this service.

James Wallace, of West Fernie, has received a letter from his son, who is in Holland. He wishes to be remembered to all friends and to thank everyone one who has endeavored to make the lives of prisoners of war a little easier.

During the strike of the engineers at Coventry and Birmingham a London doctor in a letter to the press asked this pointed question: "May I ask the strikers how would you look upon a strike of medical men during the prevalence of a devastating epidemic in your midst?"

The first golf match to be played on the Fernie links took place on Wednesday, when Alex. Watson and R. M. Young defeated Alan Graham and S. Herchmer by a score of four holes in an 18 hole game. The course is in good shape and there will be something doing as long as the fine weather lasts.

Esther Rebekah Lodge will give their 11th annual ball in Victoria hall on Oct. 10th. This annual affair of the Rebekahs has always been appreciated by the public and inasmuch as half the proceeds on the present occasion will be turned over to the Red Cross it is expected that it will be an unqualified success in every way. A meeting of the committe in charge will be held in the K.P. hall next Thursday evening.

In the line of the promotion of thrift, the government's appeal to automobile owners to save gasoline showed a remarkable assent on the part of the loyal population of British Columbia last Sunday. There is no doubt but that this will be greatly augmented in the Sundays to come. There was a saving in this province alone of 25,000 gallons, which may be regarded as a satisfactory saving owing to the short time given to put out proper notices. There was not a gallon of gasoline sold anywhere in Canada. Dealers everywhere co-operated splendidly with the government's request.

Jas. Graves has been on the sick list.

Frank Newnham, of Calgary, is in the city for a few days.

For Rent — Four room modern house; storm windows, etc. 197 Pellatt Avenue.

Ald. Hunter, T. Biggs, H. Beard and W. Potter are in Vancouver on business in connection with the strike.

Mrs. H. Ireland and son will leave for the coast on Tuesday next, to join Mr. Ireland, who has decided to make his home at the coast.

The appointment of J. Puckey to the position of mine rescue work by the local member does not meet with the approval of Gladstone Local.

Alex. Bunch, a well known Fernie man, is the last Fernie hero to make the great sacrifice. He was a member of the Army Medical, being an expert at first aid work. He leaves a widow to mourn his death.

"Printed by Union Labor" may look "right" to the unadulterated miner, but it certainly would be interesting to know how many men are contributing to a labor organization in the miners' paper plant today. And yet their constitution calls for union conditions and a label. Truth is stranger than fiction but the attitude of some labor organizations to others is stranger than both.—Communicated.

SAYS LEMON JUICE WILL REMOVE FRECKLES

Girls! Make this cheap beauty lotion to clear and whiten your skin.

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

SUNDAY MOTORING

There is a nation-wide campaign afoot for economy in the use of gasoline, which the Fuel Controller has decided must be conserved in every possible way. Ontario has prohibited the Sunday sale of gasoline as a definite move towards the conservation of a war-time necessity, and in the United States the steps taken and in prospect show a realization there must be a drastic restriction of motor travel. Towards putting an end to all unnecessary and unreasonable use of gasoline, the first move can be made next Sunday by the elimination of motoring for pleasure. It is a difficult matter to ask people in these times, when so many have motor cars, to forego the use of them on the one day when it is possible to take their families for outings, but this sacrifice has become necessary for gasoline is wanted for war purposes. It is estimated that if motoring in Canada were reduced to the amount absolutely essential on Sundays, it would mean a saving of $1,500,000 a week to the people, and thus so much more money would be available for the war. There is another aspect of the policy of thrift, and it is well to think of it in connection with the appeal to save gasoline, and that is, by saving the latter motor car owners will also be avoiding the wear and tear on their cars.

It may be some steps beyond an appeal will be desirable to bring about the conservation that is essential. Ontario has not stopped Sunday motoring, but that province has restricted it to the extent that no gasoline can be sold on that day. This will not prevent people buying their supply previously, but it will prevent the waste of fuel, for the restriction will lead people to realize the need for conversation. In this city there are many motor cars; perhaps more in proportion to the population than in any other community in the Dominion, so that the appeal for conservation is all the more necessary. This is a matter that should be taken up by the Automobile Club, and, if necessary, by the City Council. The conservation of gasoline has become a vital question and a vigorous campaign to bring it about is being launched in every community in the Dominion.—Colonist.

THE MAIN OBJECT ACHIEVED

Hon. N. W. Rowell, in his speech before the Winnipeg Canadian Club declared that the Canadian army was considered by the British and French military authorities to be the most effective single fighting force on the whole west front. This statement has been made before by war correspondents and in the British press. The fact that it is repeated by Mr. Rowell, who has just been in close association with military and civilian leaders in Britain and France, adds force to it, if that were necessary. Mr. Rowell pointed out why the Canadian army was the most effective unit fighting in Europe. It was because it was up to strength. French, British and German units were below strength owing to the heavy drain that has been made on the man power of the European countries. Having a battalion up to strength meant much more, Mr. Rowell said, than the mere increase of its numbers. It raised the morale of the whole corps, gave the men new confidence and fighting spirit. Knowing that every battalion and every branch of the service was on the job in full force and that there was plenty of reserves to fill the gaps, the Canadian army went into their recent battles with a spirit that could not but result in victory. The confidence placed in the Canadian corps by the High Command was indicated by the fact that it was put in to lead the advance at Amiens, and a few days later transferred north to form the centre of the drive against Cambria.

The Canadian army is, it can be said without boasting, playing a part out of proportion to its numbers in the fight for world freedom going on in France. It is able to do this because the Canadian Military Service Act has provided the reinforcements that have made General Currie's force the most effective on the long line from the English Channel to Switzerland. The Canadian people elected the Union government because it furnished the channel through which support might flow to the Canadian army overseas. No one can deny that the Union government has achieved that object.—Winnipeg Free Press.

AFTER FIVE YEARS IN NORTH STEFANSSON TALKS

Stefansson arrived in Vancouver as though he had but returned from a summer holiday. His smile was ever present, but to the discerning observer there lay mirrored in his eyes memories of an existence known to few, which seemed to mark him as a man from a strange land. Not that Stefansson is eccentric. He is the exact opposite, and when asked for his impression of a city again he said that it seemed quite natural to him.

"I have only one regret," was his remark, "and that is that sickness struck me down so that I have been unable to continue the 'drift' on the ice from Northern Alaska to the Siberian coast, which, under Storkersen may be characterized as the most important bit of Arctic exploration ever undertaken."

Stefansson explained the difficulty he had in securing volunteers for this hazardous undertaking. He said that the Eskimos were afraid of the drifting ice but that finally three white men agreed to accompany them. He then returned to the Mackenzie delta in order to secure dogs and other needed equipment and it was here that misfortune overtook them. Had it not been for some typhoid germs which he swallowed at Herschel Island he would now be with his chosen men.

For three months he lay at Herschel Island, suffering first from typhoid, then pneumonia and finally pleurisy. When he left for the west he was unable to walk and it was not until he reached Fort Yukon on April 27 that he was able to set foot on the ground. He had a high fever for over two weeks and had it not been for a splendid constitution he never could have survived. While speaking of his illness he laughingly produced a cheque which he had made out and which was entirely illegible. He said he was keeping it as a souvenir to show how near he had come to passing out.

Dealing with the importance of the work achieved by the expedition Stefansson stated that everything had been accomplished according to the plans made before leaving Ottawa, but owing to the loss of the Karluk with all the splendid equipment which she had on board it had required two years longer than originally expected.

Land had been discovered that had never been seen before, and the only reason that more land had not been discovered was because there was no more there. The ocean had been thoroughly explored for three summers, the entire field of exploration as originally mapped out being carefully mapped.

Another important result was the discovery of unknown currents which, from a scientific point of view, he claimed to be as important as the discovery of land. Next in importance he said was the discovery of new coal fields upon the new islands claimed for Canada and which had originally been called a new continent. This, of course, had been an exaggeration, the isands being two in number, with a total area of approximately 30,000 square miles. However, the coal deposits gave great promise, and as they were almost as accessible as the famous Spitzbergen coal fields they were destined to become valuable properties. There woud be fully 100 days each year when the coal could be transported. The coal was a high grade of bituminous. In addition to the coal there were extensive copper deposits.

Mr. Stefansson seemed justifiably proud that he had proven the ability of white men to "live off the ice." He had made the longest trips ever made in the Arctic of a like nature. Explorer Peary held the record for trips made, with full supplies of provisions, he having carried supplies sufficient for three months, which meant that it was not necessary to resort to a meat diet. On the other hand, Stefansson made one trip lasting 150 days and provisions were carried for only one-third of that time. For 100 days there was nothing to eat but meat secured by the way.

The question of scurvy was explained. He stated that the only time he had to combat this disease to any extent was during the summer of 1917 when, with one Eskimo and two whites he set out for a summer's exploring. Prior to that time an old cache left by a former Canadian explorer had been discovered and the provisions used. Unknown to Stefansson two of his men had eaten very freely of the "civilized grub," and shortly after departing on the long journey the men were stricken with scurvy. He experienced great difficulty in getting them back to shore, one being unable to walk and the other just partially. He immediately killed fourteen reindeer and fed the sick men on raw meat. At the end of three days their pain had all left, they appeared happy, and in two weeks they were ready to travel. This, said the explorer, should settle for all time the question of the effect of a meat diet upon human beings.

Stefansson stated that he could say nothing regarding his plans for the future, other than that he would proceed immediately to the naval station as Esquimalt, where he would report and await orders from the Canadian government. He expected to leave for Ottawa, where he would make his report to the government and on October 31 in Carnegie Hall, New York City, his Red Cross lecture tour would commence. He said that no addresses would be made until the tour was commenced, although it was possible that his first address might be given in Ottawa. The Canadian government was permitting his public appearances only because the net proceeds would be devoted to the Red Cross.

Value of the Cent Unit.

The action of the New York federal food board in bringing about a reduction in the price of milk in a chain of popular priced restaurants operated in that city is regarded as significant of other changes to come, not only in New York, but elsewhere. Three months ago the restaurants served notice that the price of milk to thteir patrons would be doubled, that a glass would henceforth cost 10 cents in stead of five. Now that is changed, and an eight-ounce cup of milk costs 5 cents and a 12-ounce glass 10 cents. This disregard of the cent as a measure of value is typical of the attitude of a number of lines of business serving the public. The proprietors have pleaded the advance of the prices of commodities to them by the wholesalers, together with the advance of wages they have had to pay their help and have used these as an excuse to advance the prices of articles 100 per cent. Because the advance was from 5 cents to 10 the public stood it rather than object. In other days, before the cent returned as a unit of value, the raise would have been taken without objection. Yet in few cases was the advance of 100 per cent justified.—New Haven (Conn.) Register.

COURTEOUS WILD BEASTS

Just as one dog will respect another's dog bone, so even the fiercest wild beasts have their unwritten laws and their little conventions.

One common idea which has found its way into thousands of books of adventure is that the lion and tiger take advantage of the insistent call of thirst to get a supper. That is to say, they go down to the water-pool the only one for miles around, take a good drink thmeslves, and then lie in wait for some gazelle or giraffe or ibex coming there for a like purpose, in order to spring upon the poor creature whilst in the act of drinking and making a meal of it.

Yet this is a libelous estimate of wild beast character. The fact is that there is a sort of truce at the waterhole in jungle and forest. As far as killing is concerned, the drinking place is out of bounds. There is an invisible notice board which says: "Live and Let Live," and is implicitly obeyed.

There is an order of precedence. The rhinocerous gets first drink. He is the king of the forest jungle. Then comes the elephant. When he has lowered the tide-mark and made the water more like coffee than anything else, the big pussy-cats stroll down to quench their ardent tongues —the lions, the leopards, the tigers, the jaguars and pumas.

Meanwhile the shy animals, the giraffes, deer, springboks and even the buffaloes, although they are a match for the lion, stand in the background and wait till the carnivora have done. But the latter never prevent their approach to the water or waylay them on their retirement. And that is better manners—aye, and better morals—than many men show.

GERMAN ORGANIZATION HAS BEEN OVERRATED

One hears much expansive admiration of the German genius for organizing, but it comes for the most part from those who have never had actual experience of German organization. Perhaps it is because there is so much of it; because it is so colossal. It is in many ways efficient, no doubt; they get certain things done, but then, so do the French, who seem to have so little organization and are so clever at improvisation. But the vast, elephantine deliberation of German organization would drive an American captain of industry mad in a fortnight. It is heavy, cumbersome; its complicated machinery rumbles on and on, remorselessly, and once set in motion there is no way of stopping it, of turning it aside, of adapting it to sudden exigencies. It is blindly impersonal, inhuman, taking no account of persons or of the personal equation. Wherever it touches human beings it consists of a multitude of regulations, of "Verbotens." Instead of a few simple guideposts to point the way through a wilderness the Germans would put up myriad signboards telling the traveller where not to go; instead of barking a few trees to blaze the trail they would hack all the trees in the forest except those along the way they wished to indicate.—Brand Whitlock in Everybody's Magazine.

NOTICE!

To United States Citizens in Canada

By the United States Military Service Convention Regulations, approved by the Governor-in-Council on 20th August, 1918, Male Citizens of the United States in Canada, within the ages for the time being specified by the Laws of the United States prescribing compulsory military service, except those who have diplomatic exemption, are made subject and liable to Military Service in Canada, and become entitled to exemption or discharge therefrom, under the Canadian Laws and Regulations. The regulations governing this liability are published in the Canada Gazette (Extra) of 21st Aug., 1918; copy whereof may be obtained upon application through the post to the Director of the Military Service Branch of the Department of Justice at Ottawa.

United States Citizens of the description aforesaid who were in Canada on 30th July, 1918, have sixty days from that date within which to exercise an option to enlist or enroll in the forces of the United States, or to return to the United States; and those who for any reason subsequently become liable to Military Service in Canada have thirty days from the date of the accruing of such liability within which to exercise the like option. It is stipulated by the Convention also that certificates of diplomatic exemption may be granted within the optional periods aforesaid. Every citizen of the United States to whom the regulations apply is required to report to the Registrar under the Military Service Act, 1917, for the province or district within which he is, in the manner by the regulations prescribed, within ten days after the expiry of his optional period, and will be subject to penalties if without reasonable excuse he fail so to report. For the information of those whom it may concern, Sections 3 and 4 defining the requirements of registration, with which it will be necessary strictly to comply, are set out substantially as follows:

REQUIREMENTS

3. Every male citizen of the United States within the ages for the time being specified in the laws of the United States prescribing compulsory military service, not including those who have diplomatic exemption, within ten days after the expiry of the time limited by the Convention within which the Government of the United States may issue him a certificate of diplomatic exemption, shall truly report to the Registrar by registered post, and in writing which is plainly legible, his name in full, his occupation and the date of his birth; stating also whether he is single, married or a widower; and if the latter, whether he has a child living, also if married, the date of his marriage; and stating, moreover his place of residence and usual post-office address in Canada; and, if he reside within a city or place where the streets and dwellings are named and numbered, the name and number of his street and dwelling; or if he reside in another place, the lot and concession number, section, township, range, and meridian, or other definite description whereby his place of residence may be located, having regard to the custom of the locality in which he lives; and if without reasonable excuse he neglect or fail to report in the manner and with the particulars aforesaid, within the time limited as aforesaid, he shall be guilty of an offence, and shall be liable upon summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding Five Hundred Dollars, and to imprisonment for any term not exceeding six months, and moreover, he shall incur a penalty of $10.00 for each day after the time when or within which he should have registered during which he shall continue to be unregistered.

4. Every United States citizen who has diplomatic exemption, although not otherwise subject to these regulations, shall within ten days after the granting of the same truly report to the registrar, in like manner and with the same particulars as required by the last preceding section; and in addition he shall embody in his report a true and complete statement of the particulars of his certificate of diplomatic exemption. Neglect or failure without reasonable excuse to comply with the requirements of this section shall constitute an offence punishable in the manner and by the penalties provided in the last preceding section.

Issued by the Department of Justice, Military Service Branch.

HIGH TRIBUTE TO BRAVE MEN

Canada combed her offices, her factories, her farms, for men who had never thought to fight. They had to be taught the rudiments of drill, how to load a rifle, what army discipline is for. Yet in April, 1915, only six months after their arrival in England, they plugged the gap at Ypres for four days after the first poison gas attack and saved the channel ports. Military authorities have repeatedly said that by this act of superb courage they saved as well the whole allied cause. They have further said that it is very doubtful whether any but "raw troops" would have stood firm under such impossible conditions. They were no more than a handful of country boys—a mere screen of riflemen. They could have been wiped out any time in an hour by the German masses that pressed upon them. By all the rules of the game, they ought to have fallen back. But —as one German officer put it—these "glorious damn fools" did not know that they were beaten.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

THE PLAIN TRUTH

Strike! Has the grocer struck? Has the miller, the butcher, the newspaper—all of whom suffer hardships from the war? Has big business struck against the proposal to tax its profits even up to 80 per cent? Have big incomes struck? Who are the strikers? Who are the fighters? Think it over.—Leslie's.

Those discovered documents between the German government on the one hand and Lenine and Trotzky on the other read as if they were the posthumously published correspondence of Judas Iscariot and the Jewish hierarchy in regard to the betrayal of Jesus. If Dante were writing his "Inferno" today he would put Trotzky and Lenine beside Brutus and Judas in the Jaws of Satan.

GOVERNMENT REPORT ON REGISTRATION

Ottawa—The report of manpower registration states that as a result of the registration the board should in the national interest mobilize labor quickly toward any form of production.

"Were the unexpected to happen," says the report, "and were the United States to serve notice on us that in ten days all exports of soft coal to Canada would be absolutely cut off, in less than three days we could furnish the government with the names and present addresses of every man in the country experienced in coal mining but not now employed thereat, provided always he had declared to that experience on his registration card."

The following table of unrevised figures gives the total registration by provinces but not including the registration which has been effected through postoffices:

	Male	Female	Total
N. Scotia	150,075	158,514	308,589
N. Bruns.	109,836	113,153	222,989
P. E. I.	25,395	28,294	53,689
Quebec	611,933	615,589	1,227,424
Ontario	908,594	955,148	1,863,742
Manitoba	162,086	155,341	317,447
Sask.	239,512	177,822	417,334
Alberta	180,885	136,517	317,402
B. C.	184,527	130,892	315,218
Totals	2,572,754	2,471,280	5,044,034

It will be observed that while the number of females registered exceeds the males in the east the reverse is the case in west.

The report contains a table showing the extent to which the law was complied with on June 22. The estimated population of the Dominion for persons 16 years and over is 5,426,336, of whom 5,044,034, or 92.9 per cent registered. In Alberta the registration equalled the estimated population while in Saskatchewan the estimate was exceeded. By provinces the percentage of registration is given as follows:

Nova Scotia, 86.7; New Brunswick, 90.6; Prince Edward Island, 88; Quebec, 89.1; Ontario, 95.6; Manitoba, 92.5; Saskatchewan, 105.8; Alberta, 1000; British Columbia 81.6.

Substantial registration has been effected through postoffices since registration day. Up to August 15 the cards actually received number 85,294. Since then further cards have come in which are not yet counted, but which will easily bring the postoffice registration to 150,000. This says the report "added to the figures reported for June 22, enables us to report a total registration of 5,159,000, or 94.4 per cent of the estimated maximum to say nothing of the probability that this would be scaled up still further in view of the fact that, for the first half of August the postoffice returns averaged 3500 cards a day."

The report states that up to August 15 the number of lost certificates was 9329 and observes, "that the law as regards notification of marriage and change of address is probably not being observed as well as it should be, due no doubt to ignorance.

Dealing with the matter of opposition to registration, the report says:

Dealing with the matter of opposition to registration, the report says:

"Such trouble as the board experienced with foreigners in the west was partly due to ignorance as to the purpose of registration and partly to the belief that a whole community acting together could defy the law with impunity. In the case of the Mennonites, the reluctance to register was explained by a desire to avoid an act which might in any way be construed as a surrender of their treaty rights. Once the board let it be known, however, that its policy would be one of rigorous enforcement, the opposition in most cases began to melt away."

CANADA FOOD BOARD SUGAR ORDER

Notwithstanding anything contained in any other orders of the Canada Food Board:

1. (a) No public eating place (except Soda Fountains or Ice Cream Parlors) shall use more than two pounds of sugar for every ninety meals served.

(b) No proprietor of a Soda Fountain or Ice Cream Parlor shall after September 30, 1918, use more than 25 per centum of the average monthly amount of sugar used during the year 1917.

2. No person shall use in the manufacture of:

(a) Biscuits, or fruit, pound, layer, wine, sponge cake or any like product more than 40 pounds of sugar to 100 pounds of flour.

(b) Sweet dough products and pastry more than 8 pounds of sugar to 100 pounds of flour.

(c) Cocoa-nut macaroons or fancy almond macaroons more than 40 per centum of sugar.

(d) Marshmallow more than 10 pounds of sugar to 60 pounds of marshmallow.

(e) Bread and bread rolls one-half pound sugar to 100 pounds of flour.

Fifty per centum of the sugar used in the manufacture of products (a), (b) and 100 per centum of (e) shall be yellow or brown sugar.

3. No person shall use in the manufacture of:

(a) Candy, chocolate, solid chocolate products, cocoa products, chewing gum, dessiated cocoanut or tobacco more than 50 per centum of the monthly consumption of sugar for the year 1917.

(b) Table syrup, compound honey, maple buttter and maple syrup compounds, or such like products, more than 50 per centum of the average monthly consumption of sugar for the year 1917, one-half of such sugar to be yellow or brown sugar.

(c) Pharmaceutical syrups and medicinal preparations more than 75 per centum of the average monthly consumption of sugar in 1917.

(d) Beers, ales, soft drinks, fountain fruits, fruit juices or syrups, dessert or jelly powders or marshmallow powders, after Sept. 30, 1918, more than 50 per centum of the average monthly amount of sugar used during the year 1917.

4. No person shall use in the manufacture of ice cream more than 5½ pounds of cane sugar to 8 gallons of icecream.

5. The use of sugar in the manufacture of soap is prohibited.

6. Certificate for the purchase of sugar in the manufacture of products mentioned in this order will be issued on the basis of the percentage allowed under this order.

Supplementary certificates will be issued for the manufacture of products mentioned in Clause 2, Sections a, b, c, d and e, on proof of increased output.

Public eating places must keep record of all meals served and if the allotment does not equal two pounds per ninety meals served, the licensee may make written application for a further allotment. Record must also be kept of quantity of fruit preserved and amount of sugar used.

WORK OR FIGHT

By Walt Mason

I see the slackers every day; I always find them in my way. And most of them, with lungs endowed, of loyalty are talking loud. They gave two bits to win the fight; they eat corn bread instead of white; they walked a mile in some parade, and helped to buy pink lemonade. They talk and talk of what they've done to can the turgid, tiresome Hun, but never pause an hour to view the many things they do not do.

In America, in order to help along the war in favor of the Allies, many women are wearing socks, instead of long stockings, but few of them as yet have discarded corsets. This is second-hand information furnished us but we have no reason to doubt the veracity of the statement.—Ledge.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a small bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

ELKO NOTES

(By Fred Roo)

Jim Thistlebeak says that in another week there will not be enough left of the Hindenburg line to make a halter shank.

Mrs. A. S. Parnell, Compton Ranch, Roosville valley, received a wire from the Director of Records stating that her son George Henry Parnell, well known along the Crow line, had been admitted to hospital, gunshot wound, left foot. This is the third son wounded, and son-in-law killed.

Pat Murphy, Mike Maloney and Terrance O'Shane, three Swede prospectors, are registered at the Elk hotel this week from Spokane.

Jim Thistlebeak says there are some people so selfish that if they had a ten gallon keg of ice cream and a strawberry short cake as big as a box car they wouldn't ask you to sit in with them.

Miss Ruth Klingensmith, of Creston, is visiting with Mayor and Mrs. Klingensmith at the Mining Exchange this week.

Jim Thistlebeak says that trying to live a married life without loving and trying to do business without advertising is like the young man throwing kisses at a girl in the dark. He may know what he is doing but no one else does.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam McDonald and family, of Roosville valley, left for Coleman last Saturday, and on Friday were guests at a farewel dance at the Roosville school house, tendered to them by the residents of the valley. Mr. McDonald went overseas with the gallant 54th and was recently discharged from the military hospital at Victoria, B.C.

Advance notices say that Jim Black from the Orkney-Corkney Islands and Vancouver is around Nelson working east with a full line of Pride of the West Overalls, Mackinaw Shirts, fine lingerie from the Blue Grass Mountains of Donegal. His twin brother Jack Colvin is with him. J. M. Cassidy has just passed through the old historic burg with a full line of fleetfoot rubbers, said that he wore them for five years between Pouce-Coupe and Grand Prairie and never raised a corn and had a trunk full of unsolicteted testimonials to prove that every time it rained up in that country it was wet, and that Elko was the first place he had visited where he had to produce his registration card before he could get quail on toast or his baggage checked.

Dr. S. Bonnell, M.P., Mr. Wakefield, U.S. Consul, both of Fernie, with W. H. Bernard of Montana, one of the best big game hunters this side the Mexican border, were in Elko last week fraternizing with Jim Thistlebeak.

If, says Jim Thistlebeak, it distresses you to hear a man wailing and grouching about hard times, don't for heaven's sake talk to a merchant or banker who doesn't advertise.

The Burton mine, just west of the town, is to start operations again bigger and stronger than ever, under the able management of C. C. Thompson, the well known Calgary hustler. Several Calgary financiers and mining experts were looking over the property last week.

Jim Thistltebeak says you can love, you can be loved, no matter where you are, who you are, how you are, or what you are, love awaits you and women who can't get it have tea instead.

C. Ferguson, the well known Roosville rancher, was in Elko this week.

Carter and Roberts, both of Elko, and well known, are putting in a big camp near the Burton mine for the winter, cutting ties and mine timber.

Jim Thistlebeak says there's a whole lot of things going to happen to the international trouble makers of the world, also to Austria-Hungary before Thanksgiving Day, but if you mind your own business you need not worry. The sinking of the Galway Castle will help the dirty Huns' peace move. Go to it you Allied heroes.

THE MURDER REGIME

It is impossible to conceive the depths of degradation to which public opinion among certain sections of the Russians has sunk when Maximalist newspapers are openly advocating the murder of British and French nationals in Petrograd. Even in the saturnalia of the French Revolution the lives of foreign subjects were held sacred by the authorities of the day. The Bolsheviki themselves have always been bad enough, but now that they have thrown all disguise to the winds and openly avow themselves the servants of Prussian militarism they have opened the floodgates of anarchy and are sweeping away all who presume to check their blood stained course. From the inception of their rule it has been a reign of murder, a myriad times worse than that of the last of the Romanoffs. The attack on the British embassy at Petrograd appears to have been as cold blooded a proceeding as could well be imagined. From events such as are now degrading Russian history there is bound to be a reaction, and already the doom of Bolshevism is at hand.

Germany's impending defeat in the West has forced her rulers to demand the payment in full from the Bolsheviki for having placed them in power in Russia. This explains the open and undisguised hostility developing towards French and British nationals, and the brutal policy of murdering all who are in any way inimical to the Lenine regime. Britain and France, and the United States too, have no course open save to consider the fiends in power in Russia as their enemies. Since the Bolsheviki government has never been recognized by the Allied powers a declaration of war is impossible; but, instead, Lenine and Trotzky and their followers must simply be regarded as criminals and outlaws of civilization. The murder of Capt. Cromie alone warrants Britain taking every step within her power to bring his slayers to justice. The Russian anarchists will yet learn her arm can reach to the uttermost ends of the earth when her sense of justice is insulted.—Colonist.

DR. GARFIELD WARNS STRIKING COAL MINERS

Spokesman-Review: Striking miners in the Shamokin (Pa.) coal fields will find that public opinion will stoutly support Fuel Administrator Garfield's warning that they must return to work before the government will consider their claims. Dr. Garfield adds the further warning that strikers who refuse to resume production will be held personally and strictly responsible.

That is not an idle threat. The government has two just methods of dealing with industrial slackers. It can put those between the ages of 18 and 45 into the army, and it has the power, and President Wilson has declared the purpose to deprive slackers it cannot reach by the draft of opportunity for further employment during the war. It is one thing to strike or to work off and on as the mood may direct. It is quite another situation to face total deprivation of pay for a long period.

This is drastic treatment, but the nation's obligations to its soldiers justify it. Whether they like it or not, millions of men are being conscripted and made to work long hours for small army pay. They will be sent into battle and many of them will never return.

With these facts before the nation men who strike in vital war industries and refuse to submit their demands to fair and liberal governmental arbitration are getting in wrong with the government and the public.

A BUNCH OF REDS AND I. W. W.'S.

Quebec, Sept. 17.—The Trades and Labor Congress this morning decided to authorize the executive council to draft a manifesto with a declaration of principles for a program of reconstruction after the war as an instruction to the workers of Canada governing their actions in their future efforts to establish better social and economic conditions. The debate on the question was at times heated, the radical element in the congress appearing to feel that its wishes would not be respected by the council, while the officers considered that if they were not authorized to outline the policy of the congress it would be equivalent to a vote of censure.

A motion was submitted by J. M. Bruce of Toronto, which asked that a committee of five be appointed to prepare the document. He pointed out that summary action had been taken in the United States, Britain and France.

Secretary-Treasurer Draper moved in an amendment that the matter be left in the hands of the incoming council.

The speakers for the factions in the congress which did not favor leaving the matter entirely in the hands of the council were Michael Buhay, Montreal, and Joseph Taylor, Victoria. The latter moved for a referendum on the manifesto before it was accepted as a policy of the congress.

The congress gave Mr. Draper's amendment a large majority. After the vote had been taken Delegate Wheatley, Bankhead, Alta., asked that the unions be represented at the framing of the manifesto.

Hugh Stevenson, Toronto, contended the council would be elected by the trade unionists in the convention and not by "a bunch of reds and I.W.W.'s." Mr. Wheatley replied indignantly: "I am the representative here of 9000 union men."

P. M. Draper presented his annual report as secretary-treasurer of the congress. It showed the receipts to have been $25,804, expenditures $14,442, and the balance in bank $21,000. The membership is now 117,498, an increase of 35,811. The report also indicated the steady growth of unionism among police forces in Canada as well as municipal employees.

LEMONS WHITEN AND BEAUTIFY THE SKIN

Make this beauty lotion cheaply for your face, neck, arms and hands.

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, whitener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any drug store and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It is marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE

Aug, 18, 1918.

Dear Mrs. Clarke—I am writing you at my very first opportunity to express my deepest sympathy in your bereavement. I know that nothing can console you in your great loss, nevertheless it may help you a little to know that your husband died a man, fighting with his face to the enemy. He was corporal in my platoon and I came to depend upon him a great deal as he was a good leader, cool and fearless under fire and always cheerful. Your husband was hit on the morning of August 10. He was leading his section forward to the attack when shot by a sniper. My sergeant and I managed to get him back into a trench and dressed his wounds, and although suffering considerable pain did not complain. His last words were of his wife in Canada.

Myself and platoon will miss Corpl. Clarke very much and my one hope is that if my turn comes to give up my life for my country, I may do so as bravely as he did.

Yours very sincerely,
Lieut. H. H. Whitmore,
A Co., 2nd C.M.R.

HAD A RIGHT TO STOP UKARANIAN PERFORMANCE

Now that the government has suppressed that patriotic Ukaranian society which has been stumping the country for propaganda funds, perhaps the Ledger will climb down off its high horse and apologize for being somewhat of a goat.

Ottawa, Sept. 26.—The government has taken strong steps to suppress the activities of aliens through foreign associations and foreign papers, and to deal with organizations of a Bolsheviki tendency. Thirteen organizations have been declared to be unlawful. They must be disbanded and it is declared unlawful to attend any of their meetings.

The list is headed by the I. W. W. The others are the Russian Social Democrats, the Russian Revolutionary Group, the Russian Social Revolutionists, the Russian Workers' Union, the Ukaranian Socialist Democratic Party, the Ukaranian Socialist Labor party and several others. These organizations have been carefully investigated by the government which has copies of their literature. It is all of a revolutionary and Bolsheviki character. Penalties of 5 years in prison or $5000 fine can be imposed for belonging to these organizations.

PRODUCTION MUST INCREASE

There has been no call for slackening efforts. The impression seems to prevail that Canada has done well enough in growing grains, and the future is assured, so far as food is concerned. Such is not the case, has not been the case nor will it be for some time to come. The call is for more and yet more production, and the cry for food is still loud in the ears of Canadians.

The hard work and self-sacrifice of Canadians has borne fruit. Great Britain cannot be starved. There is enough to provide for the armies and the civilians until the next crop, but no more. There are no food reserves, as there should be.

Indeed, Canada must double its production in 1919. Let that soak in. The continent of America has promised, and must deliver 15,000,000 tons of foodstuffs this coming year. In 1917-18, 10,000,000 tons were promised and will be delivered. America must produce 50 per cent more for the Allies. That's the job before the farmers and citizens of this country. The great crops of grain in the United States in 1918 may not be duplicated next year, and Canada will have to deliver a still greater share.

There are but two ways of securing this total—production and conservation. And the greater of these is production.

The manifest duty of the hour is to prepare the land for the coming of banner crops in 1919.

EXPLICIT STATEMENT OF PRESENT TROUBLE IN COAL MINES IS MADE BY CROW'S NEST PASS COAL CO'Y

History of the Trouble and a Statement of Propositions Made by Minister of Mines Sloan, Which the Company Has Accepted—Matter Now Up to Ottawa — Light Thrown on Negotiations to Date.

In respect to the labor troubles at Fernie and Michel, and in view of the many contradictory statements that have appeared in the public press, the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company submits the following statement of facts:

During the early months of this year, or about the 2nd day of May, some of the drivers and other haulage hands working at Coal Creek mines commenced an agitation for single shift work, which agitation was at that time checked by the more thoughtful influence of local union officials, without reaching the company.

On June 28 the same form of agitation sprung up again and a mass meeting was called by the local union to consider single shift work and the curtailment of the working day of eight hours to six hours.

On June 30, at a Fernie local mass meeting, a resolution was passed by the union that all men engaged in the production of coal report for work on Tuesday morning, July 2. This meant the elimination of the afternoon or second shift. Copy of this resolution was posted in a public place by the local union secretary, and a copy of the same was sent to the general manager of the company for his information. Up to this date the union officials had never brought these claims for single shift work to the officials of the company authorized by the agreement with the men to deal with such questions.

On July 11, after about $20,000 in wages had been lost to the employees of Coal Creek mines through this irregular method of procedure, the union members attending the mass meeting decided to resume work on two shifts.

On July 18 Michel miners also started an agitation for single shift work, under pressure from certain local union officials at Fernie.

On August 15 a telephonic message from the director of mines in Calgary asked Mr. Wilson, general manager of the company, to appear in the director's office the next day to meet a committee of union executive officials, and jointly discuss with him the administration of mines and the possibility of establishing the single shift of contract working on all the mines of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal company. The possibility of doing this was fully discussed in its many phases, keeping in mind the future fulfilment of the union officials' promises to the Dominion government at Ottawa, that they and the miners of District No. 18 of the U.M.W. of America would do everything in their power to uphold and increase the coal production this year, together with the possibility of keeping the mines in a safe working condition, and with the possibility of working increased mine working places or mine areas.

Mr. Wilson on behalf of the company, submitted the following proposition: "That if the contract miners working at Fernie and Michel mines would agree to work three men in a room on single shift, instead of two men on double shift, as they are now doing, and continue to work the main development places, the two shifts that are necessary to keep mine development work ahead, he would submit the proposition to his directors for acceptance. Mr. Armstrong, director of mines, approved of this suggestion, and advised the union leaders present to accept the plan, or at least give it a fair trial. Had this plan beeen accepted by the men, about 80 per cent of the contract miners would have obtained all the advantages they desire to have, and would have continued to work at the same contract tonnage prices that are now being paid for the two and in some instances, three shift contract work. There would, of course, be some disadvantage in connection with three men working in a 15-foot wide room instead of two men, but taking the change of method as a whole the many advantages that contract men would gain from working a place or places entirely with their own ideas of caring for all details of face working, timbering, etc., as against working a place alternately with the two men on the second shift, they would, I believe, have been more than compensated for such loss, as they might incur by the extra man working in the 15-foot place, in addition to the greater comfort of going to work in the morning and returning in the afternoon, as compared with the middle of the night when on the afternoon shift."

On August 25th the men, by vote at both Michel and Fernie mines rejected the proposition.

On the 25th August, Mr. Biggs and Mr. Browne, respectively the properly consituted president and secretary of District No. 18 of the United Mine Workers of America, wrote Mr. Wilson, as follows:

"Re Single Shift at Fernie and Michel.

"With regard to the above, same has been submitted to the men of both places and thoroughly discussed. Your proposition to them to work three men in a place has been turned down .

"The proposition that we are instructed to place before you at this time is that time be given to place the aforesaid mines on single shift, on or before October 1 next, believing that the time intervening will be sufficient to give to bring this about without inconvenience and without retarding the output of the mines. We expect to see you bring this about without necessary trouble and wish you to understand that it is our intention, as far as it is possible, to avoid any delay in the upkeep of the production of coal, hence these lines.

"We would be pleased to hear from you at your earliest convenience as to your intentions in this matter.

"Awaiting reply, we remain,
"Edward Browne, Secretary,
"Thomas Biggs, President."

Mr. Wilson, who was in Vancouver on his way to a mining camp in Northern British Columbia when this was received was communicated with, the contents of the letter being wired to him, and he replied as follows:

"Edward Browne,
"Secretary, District 18,
"U.M.W. of A., Calgary.

"Intercepted your letter here. Precluded from deciding on single shift question at present but will take subject up with you again on my return to Fernie about the middle of this month. In the meantime, hope to see agreement that exists between the government, your organization, and our company, in all its fundamentals, respectfully continued and good faith thereby maintained.

(Signed) "W. R. Wison."

Mr. Wilson then left for the north, knowing that he would be back well within the time proposed by Messrs. Biggs and Browne, to take the matter up further.

At this point it is of interest to relate the clauses of the agreement between the government, the company, and the men, which dealt with the handling of disputes:

"Section (c)—In the event of the failure of the pit committee and the mine superintendent or mine manager to settle any dispute so referred to them, as well as in the event of other disputes arising, the matters in dispute shall be referred, in writing, to the commissioner of the Western Coal Operators' association and the president of District 18, United Mine Workers of America, who shall meet as soon as practicable, and not in any event later than (14) fourteen days, with a joint committee of six (6), composed of the commissioner of the Western Coal Operators' Association, the general manager or the general superintendent of the mine where the dispute arose and another appointed by him, the president of District No. 18 of the United Mine Workers of America, the president or secretary of the local district where the dispute arise, and one other district officer. If they agree their decision shall be binding upon both parties. In the event of their failure to agree, Mr. W. H. Armstrong, director of coal operations, shall act as or may appoint an independent chairman."

INQUEST INTO ALLEN'S DEATH

The inquest into the death of Wm. Allen was resumed in the council chamber of the city hall on Friday evening last.

The first witness called was Wm. Caufield, who stated that he had been intimately acquainted with Allen for the past four or five years. He had been in his company the evening before the tragedy. He had also been with him from morning till evening the day of the tragedy till about 7.00 when he left him at the Imperial bank corner. He had walked up with Allen from the deceased's residence, and Allen had been in the best of spirits, in fact in better spirits than usual. On the evening before the tragedy he had been in Allen's house and had seen a revolver and asked the deceased what he was going to do with it. The reply was, "Nothing, nothing at all." He also stated that a year or more ago the deceased had said to him: "You need not be surprised, Bill, if you hear anything going wrong with me."

By the Coroner—Mr. Caufield, being intimately acquainted with Allen, my duty as coroner demands that I have to ask several pointed questions. In all your acquaintance with him do you know of any relations between Allen and the mistress of the house where he was found, which should not exist between the man and the woman?

Witness—No, sir, I know nothing whatever.

Mrs. Jenkins was the next witness. She lived almost opposite the Lock residence. She noticed Allen going to the Lock residence about 7.05 p.m. Mrs. Lock was sitting on the verandah and he stopped to hand her a roll of paper, a music roll or something of the kind, and she went to take it and didn't. When he looked again he had the roll in his hand and walked into the house. Mrs. Lock then followed him in. He didn't come out again when it came time to go to the Orpheum. She heard something which sounded like a shot and then one that was very plain. The shot or shots were fired between 7.20 and 7.25. There wasn't anything for about two minutes; then Mrs. Lock rushed out with her big coat just wrapped around her. She came down the steps, then walked slowly down to the front gate and across towards the Orpheum. She had locked the door before leaving. She came back in ten or fifteen minutes and went into the house. Before she went to the house she met a couple of ladies at the gate and was speaking to them. Then the newsboy came along and she met him half way down and took the paper from the boy and then went and sat on the verandah for an instant. Then went into the house and left the door open and came right out again and sat down as if to read the paper. She went into the house again, left the paper, came out and locked the door and walked off in the direction of the park. She saw Mr. Lock unlock the door and enter the house between 8 and 8.10. When he entered he looked in the corner as if there was something on the carpet; he took another look and went in and closed the door and turned on the light. She saw his shadow on the curtain and saw him throw up his hands as if he had received an awful shock. Then he flung the door open and shouted out: "There is a dead man in the house." Mr. Lock asked where Mrs. Lock was. He came across the street and asked me if she was in at the time the shots were fired and where she went and some other questions. She then phoned central for the police.

Dr. Asselstine, sworn, said: I am a qualified practitioner in B.C. I examined the body of deceased before it was washed. There was no sign of burning or singing around the wound which one would expect to find. I do not know how far it would be necessary to hold the gun away without leaving powder marks. I found the bullet hole about half way between the right eye and the right ear and the exit about two inches above. Death would be instantaneous. I should judge that Allen was standing when he received the wound. I examined the room. There was blood on the wall and on a rocking chair. It appeared to me when he had fallen he had struck his head on the arm of the chair where it left a mark and spattered from there over the chair and the wall. Deceased had a black eye but it is my opinion that this mark came on after death by the settling of the blood from the way the body lay. I have had very little experience with firearms and could not give positive evidence of the result of a shot fired at different distances so far as powder marks are concerned. The gun could be tried on a piece of paper and the results would be the same as on a human body. I think it possible that the wound was self-inflicted.

Mrs. John Biggs, the next witness, stated that she lived opposite the Lock home. She had noticed Allen go to the Lock home on the evening of the tragedy. This was not unusual as she had often noticed him there before. On the evening in question Mrs. Lock was sitting on the verandah and he had what appeared a roll of sheet music with him. He gave it to her and then opened the door and went inside. She followed him into the house a moment later. I then left for the station and on returning Mrs. Jenkins told me she thad heard a shot from the Lock house and she wanted Mr. Biggs to call the police and investigate. Mrs. Lock at the time was sitting on the verandah and Mr. Biggs thought it would be foolish to bother as everything appeared to be all right or Mrs. Lock would not be sitting there. It appeared to me later that Mrs. Lock looked frightened and pale. She came down to the gate and talked to two ladies at the gate and then returned to the house. She went in and closed the door after her. Then she came out and sat down again and began to look at a newspaper. She soon got up and walked up the street. She walked just the same as usual but appeared to be frightened. We went away in the car and when I came back saw Mr. Lock standing at the corner talking to Mrs. Cody. I think he had started to look for Mrs. Lock. I was not there when Mr. Lock came home.

Herbert Atherton examined by the Coroner said: I had a slight acquaintance with deceased. He came to my place on Monday and asked to borrow my gun. I gave it to him with about 25 cartridges. He said he wanted it to have some fun out in the country. It was a 38 calibre revolver and the one produced in court. Three or four weeks ago Allen was in my company and made the remark that when he thought life wasn't worth living he would get rid of himself. He tried three or four times previously to borrow the gun but I did not want to lend it. I did not think anything of Allen's remarks about committing suicide when I let him have the weapon. He seemed to be a very sensible chap. He asked me on two occasions to go down and sleep with him. He acted like a normal person but appeared to be slightly nervous. The gun had not what you call a hair trigger but took a good pull to make it explode.

THINGS WE'D LIKE TO KNOW

Why Corbett has not washed his face since Wednesday evening. Surely it was not the first time he was ever kissed by a chorus girl.

Why Peter Lundie did not take in the girl show on Wednesday evening with the rest of the United Church crowd.

If Frank Brindley is really a prophet. He says that Potter will be the next member of parliament for this district and that Dave Reese will be the next District President. Where does Jock Smith get off. Was all that literary talent wasted?

If it isn't time for a change of time. In Fernie we have C.P.R. time, government time and Potter's time, not to speak of strike time.

If it would not be a brilliant idea when the police intend holding a general execution at the pound to get a man who could shoot a dog at a couple of feet without alarming the whole neighborhood with the howls of wounded animals. The idea at present seems to be to shoot each animal as often as possible without killing them. A little prussic acid would be a lot quicker and less torture to the dogs.

Why strikes are always epidemic in Fernie.

If the Union government will not in the course of time become utterly sick of this ceaseless strike business and put through a compulsory arbitration law.

Stop the reckless spending.

Those who do not fight must save.

Don't administer your finances on the come-easy, go-easy plan. Save.

A dollar saved over here helps the boys "over there."

Saving brings its own reward compounded.

Patches in war-time are often an evidence of patriotism.

WORK FOR COAL MINERS BACK FROM THE FRONT

The last copy of "Reconstruction," the government's organ to re-establish the soldiers in civilian life, has the following article on coal miners returning from the front:

Each province has its characteristic problem. That of Nova Scotia is in many respects different from the others. Over three thousand men from the coal mines of Cape Breton enlisted early in the war and many of these are already back. There was the usual proportion of the men from the cities and towns who worked in offices and factories, there was a good representation from the extensive agricultural industry of the Annapolis Valley, and there were not a few from the fishing villages along the coast.

The coal miner presents a real problem. He is usually a hard-headed, hard-fisted man of small education, used to high pay and one who has worked at a dangerous, semi-skilled occupation using some kind of machine. Any disability which disqualifies him as a soldier is almost certain to disqualify him as a miner. Fortunately, however, a coal mine has a big staff of officials—shot firers, fire bosses, underground managers, managers of collieries, et al. For all of these occupations the government requires the passing of an examination, and without a certificate of having passed this examination a man cannot hold any such position. If a disabled miner has the personal characteristics which go into the making of a responsible official a course of training qualifying him to obtain the certificate for one of these positions is the most suitable re-education that he can be given. A school for that purpose has been established at Glace Bay under the supervision of a man who has been through the whole mill. He has been a miner and an instructor in coal mining school of the Provincial Department of Education for ten years. His pupils sometimes have to begin with multiplication and division, taking arithmetic, English, surveying, geology and methods of work in order to pass the government examination and obtain certificates.

Another direction in which ex-miners can be assisted is into the jobs on the surface. Badly disabled men can act as gate tenders, watchmen and relighters. There is also a position in the lamp cabin inspecting and repairing the lamps for the miners. Another very good position yielding big pay and requiring very slight effort is that of check weighman. There are, however, not very many jobs of this type. Other ex-miners take training at the Technical College, or in the shops of the mining companies themselves, to become machinists, pattern makers, pneumatic tool repairers, electrical machine repair men, et al. Others learn harness repairing, as horses are used a great deal about the mines. Five returned coal miners have learned shoe repairing with a view to setting up in business in the mining towns.

Lung disease or partial deafness are disabilities preventing men from going below in just the same way as wounds do. So far the Vocational Branch has been fairly successful in handling coal miners. In many instances where the wages are greatly reduced there has been a pension making up the difference to some extent. As many of these miners are married men with several children even a small disability pension may mean a fairly large monthly allowance, sufficient to augment a reduced wage into a decent living income.

REFLECTIONS ON THE I. W. W. VERDICT

After nearly four months' trial a jury took a shade over an hour to find the 101 accused members of the International Workers of the World guilty of obstructing our Government's war program. This started some of the sociologists to theorizing about the tremendous "effort of will" by which, as they saw it, the country had roused itself unitedly to meet the issue framed by the I. W. W. group. But the indictment was drawn and the verdict rendered in the ordinary course of administering American justice. A lot of people cannot see the force of a free State simply because it is not dressed up in gold braid. Convicted persons usually think that the community as a whole had to take a day off just to deal with them; some criminals grow very self-important over it, and their sympathizers invariably agree with them. But both are wrong. The great body of average American citizens goes on its way and quite incidentally steps on or over any obstructive elements. If it took an "effort of will" to suppress the I. W. W., that effort has been continuous since July 4, 1776.—Colliers

STRIKE AT STURGEON OVER

The strike of the miners at the Sturgeon mine at Edmonton is over. Under the new arrangement which will come into effect in the mines the miners will be paid a wage of fifty-five cents per car of 1300 pounds. A previous request had been for sixty cents, but the men have now agreed to the lower rate, with a compensating reduction in the amount of timbering work they will be required to do each day. The rate for one timbering set per day will be fifty cents. It is a condition of the new agreement that should the price of coal advance on the local market the wages of the miners will be increased.

WHAT CHINESE LIKED ABOUT THE ENGLISHMEN

"If one were to ask a native of Wei-hai-wei what were the characteristics of British rule that he most appreciated, one would perhaps expect him to emphasize the comparative freedom from petty extortion and tyranny, the obvious endeavor (not always successful) to dispense even-handed justice, the facilities for trade, the improvement of means of communication. It was not an answer of this kind, that I received from an intelligent and plain-spoken resident, to whom I put this question," R. F. Johnston says in "Lion and Dragon in Northern China."

"What is it we like best in our British rulers? I will tell you," he said. Our native roads are narrow pathways and very often there is no room for two persons to pass unless one yields the road to the other. When our last rulers — the Japanese — met our small-footed women . . . . along such a path they never stepped aside to let the women pass by . . . An Englishman, on the contrary, whether mounted or on foot, always leaves the road to the woman. He will walk deliberately into a deep snowdrift rather than let a Chinese woman step off the dry path. We have come to understand that the men of your honorable country all act in the same way and that is what we like about Englishmen."

Parsimony to promote your country's welfare is now a virtue; indeed, it is expected of you.

Solving the Nation's Shoe Problem

A LARGE section of the Canadian public depends upon this company for shoes. Our financial resources and buying power are greater by far than those of any other Canadian manufacturer of shoes; our volume of output is more than twice that of any other. Our sales organization covers the nation from coast to coast, not merely a small section at a time.

Our six branches maintain adequate stocks within the reach of every dealer in Canada, and are now serving more than 5,000 dealers, enabling them to fill orders quickly and to cut down the amount of idle stock on their shelves.

We are making every effort to use this power to help solve the big problem of providing enough good quality shoes to go around. In the face of an actual scarcity of leather, it is difficult; but it can be done if you will co-operate with us. Buy wisely, for service rather than merely for style, and see that the shoes you buy are stamped with the manufacturer's trade-mark.

SOUR, ACID STOMACHS, GASES OR INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" neutralizes excessive acid in stomach, relieving dyspepsia, heartburn and distress at once.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress, due to acidity, will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest stomach sweetener in the whole world, and besides it is harmless. Put an end to stomach distress at once by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder caused by fermentation due to excessive acids in stomach.

AS AGE CREEPS ON

As age creeps on, vital force gradually decreases, until, when a man or woman is around 50, the kidneys and bladder need assistance to keep them in perfect working order.

Rheumatism, neuralgia and backache are common complaints of those getting on in years. It seems to be the custom to expect these afflictions—conclude they are simply the inevitable results of old age, and that there is no remedy for them.

There is a remedy—Gin Pills—and there are hundreds of people who can prove that the remedy is good.

Mr. Frank Lalonde, a well-known farmer of St. Raphael, Ont., was enabled to return to work at the age of 61 by the help of Gin Pills. Mr. Lalonde writes that he had suffered for years with pains in his back and sides, until finally he was forced to quit work. Gin Pills relieved him to such an extent that he now states he feels as strong at 61 as he did at 30 years.

Mrs. Hugh McLeod, of Lewis Cove Road, had a similar experience with Gin Pills. In her letter to us she says:

"I am 51 years and the mother of 8 children. Five years ago I was troubled with backache and dull pains across the abdomen. I used a box of Gin Pills, and feel so much better that I will continue to use Gin Pills."

Testimonials such as these cannot be disregarded, for the aged speak the truth.

It is foolish to suffer when you don't have to. Use Gin Pills and enjoy your latter years. 50c a box. Sold by all dealers. Sample free upon request to

SYNOPSIS OF LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

For information apply to any Provincial Government Agent or to

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

INQUEST INTO ALLEN'S DEATH

Mrs. A. F. Lock, being sworn, stated: Mr. Allen came to our house shortly after 7 p.m. on Wednesday evening. He brought me a magazine which I had asked him for. I was sitting on the verandah at the time. He gave me the magazine and I asked him if he would tune my violin. He went into the house and tuned the violin and I followed him in a minute or so later. The church bell was ringing at the time and he said he would have to wait until it stopped as he could not tune the instrument while it was ringing. I sat down on the chair which stands in front of the writing desk and he was sitting on the davenport with the violin lying by his left side. When the bell ceased ringing he proceeded to tune the violin. I went to the bath room and when I came back Mr. Allen was standing near the window and I sat down on the davenport. He had his back to the window. He asked me if he shouldn't come to the house again and I told him he should not. He said he couldn't live without seeing me. I did not reply to that and he asked me if I would ever be anything more to him than I was. I told him no. He said: "I will shoot myself then." By this time he had moved from the window over to the table. I said "No" and he said "Yes," and he shot himself. I think he only fired one shot. He drew the gun from his right hip pocket and put it to the right side of his head. I think he held it close to his head but his left side was toward me and I could not tell exactly how close it was. I couldn't say whether he fell down without touching the furniture or not. After the shot I did not know what I did, but I think I went into the cothes closet and got my coat, because my coat was in there.

Q—Did you give the alarm at once?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—What was the reason you did not raise the alarm, because it is a most unusual happening? Why did you not do that?

A.—I didn't—I didn't think of it.

Q—After getting your coat out of the clothes closet what then did you do?

A.—I went down to the West Fernie bridge.

Q.—At once?

A.—I think so.

Q.—Did you lock the door when you went away?

A.—I took the key.

Q.—Did you lock the door?

A.—Well, I pulled the door to; it locks itself when the night latch is on.

Q.—You left the house; when next did you return?

A.—I should say about five minutes; ten minutes perhaps.

Q.—Why did you go to the West Fernie bridge?

A.—I was looking for my husband.

Q.—Where was your husband?

A.—He was on a fishing trip.

Q.—On arriving at the bridge did you remain there any time?

A.—A little while.

Q.—Did you return to the house from the West Fernie bridge?

A.—Yes.

Q.—You entered the house, how long did you remain in when you came back that time?

A.—I walked around the table and looked at his foot, then I went to the bath room and came right out again.

Q.—And then what did you do?

A.—I went down towards the park.

Q.—Did you notice the position of the revolver on the floor?

A.—I noticed it lying on the floor but I couldn't say where it was.

Q.—You can't remember that part?

A.—No.

Q.—Was this matter never mentioned before, Mrs. Lock, by Mr. Allan?

A.—Which matter.

Q.—The matter which he mentioned which eventually, from your evidence, caused him to commit suicide?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—It was mentioned. Had he ever threatened violence to himself or anyone else?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—To whom did he threaten violence?

A.—To himself.

Q.—Any others?

A.—Mr. Allen, one time he made the remark he would like to shoot us both.

Q.—Did he attempt to do so Wednesday night? Did he attempt to harm you?

A.—I don't think so.

Q.—Mrs. Lock, had you any good reason for not giving the alarm at once?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—Do you know why you did not?

A.—I never thought.

Q.—Had he ever talked of violence to himself or anyone before?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Well, you stated that he did on one occasion; did he on many occasions or more than the one occasion?

A.—I just remember twice.

Q.—He threatened violence to himself, did he?

A. — He didn't—he didn't exactly threaten, no.

Q.—Well, what did he allude to or what did he say?

A.—One evening, I think it was about two months ago, Mr. Scarpino and Mr. Allan asked Mr. Lock and I to go to Michel with them. We went down and coming back a conversation got turned towards suicide.. He said his favorite means of suicide was to shoot himself but he couldn't get a gun.

By Juror Wood:

Q.—Had Mr. Lock objected at any time to him coming around?

A.—Yes, sir.

By Juror Orner:

Q.—Did he say so to Mr. Allen or to you alone?

A.—He told me.

Q.—Not to Mr. Allen?

A.—No, sir; not that I know.

By Foreman Beck:

Q.—Why did Mr. Lock object?

A.—He said he thought he was acting queerly.

By the Coroner:

Q.—How long ago is that?

A.—I should say about two or three weeks.

Q.—Mr. Allen gave you music lessons?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Has he given them right up till this tragedy happened?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—When did he cease to give you lessons?

A.—About two or three weeks ago.

Q.—Was there any particular reason why you stopped taking lessons?

A.—My husband asked me to.

Q.—Did he have any particular reason for asking you to stop that you know?

A.—He said he was acting queerly.

Q.—Did you think he was acting queerly?

A.—I didn't notice him.

Q.—Did you notice anything peculiar about him when he came for the last time; anything different or unusual in his manner?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What did you notice?

A.—Well, Mr. Allen had always been very pale when I saw him any time before. And this evening he had a red spot on either cheek.

Q.—You noticed his cheeks. Did his actions appear unusual?

A.—No, sir.

By Chief Welsby:

Q.—Did you notice if Mr. Allen was a right-handed man or a left-handed man?

A.—I don't know.

Q.—When he used to give you music lessons what hand did he use, in holding the bow?

A.—The right hand.

Q.—What hand did he have the gun in that night?

A.—The right hand.

Q.—At any time previous did you discontinue taking music lessons?

A.—You mean before this last time.

Q.—Yes?

A.—No; only when I was in Spokane.

Q.—Is that your handwriting? (Paper handed to witness). When did you write that?

A.—That is my handwriting.

(Envelope produced and marked exhibit No. 4.)

Q.—When did you write that?

A.—I should say about three months ago.

Q.—Would that be on your return from Spokane?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you ever hear of any family trouble between him and his wife at all?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you ever give him any encouragement?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—Ever correspond with him at all?

A.—When I was in Spokane I wrote about my metronome, and I think I wrote him about two times.

Q.—Ever send him any presents?

A.—Christmas time I sent him a box of cigarettes.

Q.—About what time did you first see Mr. Lock on Wednesday night?

A.—Some time about nine o'clock.

Q.—Where did you meet him?

A.—It was the other side of Wood's garage.

Q.—What was your idea in going to the park; to look for your husband?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you know from what direction he would come?

A.—No.

Q.—What did you say to him when you met him?

A.—Didn't say anything.

Q.—What did he say to you first?

A.—I think he said, "Is it all right, honey?"

Q.—What did he mean?

A.—No, he said. "Are you all right, honey?"

Q.—Did you know to what he referred?

A.—Yes.

Q.—When did he leave to go fishing, about what time?

A.—About half past three.

Q.—Did he ask you what happened when he first met you after he asked if you were all right?

A.—No.

Q.—Are you quite sure of that?

A.—I am not sure.

Q.—Now have you any other information that we haven't asked for?

. . . It is a serious matter and anythink you know you should certainly divulge it.

A.—The note which I wrote there.

Q.—To Mr. Allen?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Have you some explanation to make about that?

A.—He asked me if I had stopped taking lessons at any time before. When I wrote that note I hadn't taken lessons since coming from Spokane.

Q.—You wrote when you came from Spokane when you wished to start taking lessons again?

A.—I hadn't been taking lessons and my husband wanted me to take lessons from Mr. Allen and I wanted to take from Miss White.

Q.—What was his reason?

A.—He said Mr. Allen perhaps would be the better teacher.

Q.—Those two ladies who called on you, what was their conversation the first time?

A.—About renting our house.

Q.—And what was the conversation the second time with the same ladies?

A.—She asked something about heating the house.

John Henry Lock, sworn, said:

I don't remember my movements all day. I remember from about one or half past one o'clock. I went fishing; I left the house it might have been a little after one o'clock and went up as far as the back of——— followed the river on the other side as far as McDougall's. I crossed the river and came back on this side and I got back to the house about eight or a little after. I think it was a little after eight because I met Mr. Owen, manager of the Imperial Bank, down this side of the G. N. station and he said it was about eight o'clock, so I imagine it would take about fifteen minutes to walk up here. I returned to the house; I was hungry and expected to find Mrs. Lock. Instead of that the house was dark and I switched on the light. I opened the door and the light switch is there inside the door. The first thing I saw was a man stretched out on the floor and I was shocked of course, but I walked over and took a look at him and saw it was Allen. The next thing I looked for Mrs. Lock; looked around the house in the kitchen and in the bathroom. I didn't see anything of Mrs. Lock and so I went outside and across the street; there I saw some women, Mrs. Jenkins and one or two others, and told them there was a dead man in our house. I asked these ladies and they had seen Mrs. Lock going towards the park and I told some one to go and phone for the police. I think it was Mr. Huntington. He came by at that time. Mr. Mills came along with his automobile and he took me to the Park and we found Mrs. Lock there.

Q.—On meeting Mrs. Lock what was said, can you recall?

A.—I think I asked Mrs. Lock if she was all right but I don't remember any conversation.

Q. Later on in the evening when you got control can you recall any conversation between you and she?

A.—We didn't have much conversation. She was very bad. I can't recall.

Q.—Did you ask her to explain why such a tragedy had occurred; did you ask her?

A.—Well, I did later on.

Q.—What explanation did you get?

A.—All she told was he told her he couldn't live without her, something to that effect, and he just said he would shoot himself and pulled the gun out and shot himself. That is about all.

Q.—That is all the explanation you got from Mrs. Lock?

A.—Yes.

The inquest was adjourned till Monday evening in the court house, but a further adjournment was taken until Thursday evening.

When the inquest was resumed on Thursday evening, the court room was packed to the doors and the corridors full and hundreds were turned away. The audience was composed of at least 60 per cent of the female sex.

Sherwood Herchmer, representing Mrs. Allen, asked to be allowed to examine the witnesses who had given evidence at the previous sitting and the request was granted.

Dr. Asselstine was the first witness examined. He had examined the body of deceased the forenoon after the tragedy. The trousers of the deceased were produced and the doctor stated that in his opinion a piece of bone which was sticking to the same on the inside of the left leg, was a piece of the skull of the deceased. He could not say positively how it would reach that position. A number of pieces of paper and a board at which shots had been fired at close range were produced and the effect noted. The same effect had not been shown around the fatal wound.

Mrs. Jenkins was next called, but nothing new was adduced except that she had offered some consolation to Mrs. Lock a couple of weeks previous to the tragedy, when she had been in some small trouble. Also that Mr. Lock had asked her when he came across the street if there had been two or three shots fired.

John Lock on being called was given a gruelling examination by Mr. Herchmer. He described in detail his actions during his fishing trip in the afternoon. He did not agree with Mrs. Jenkins that he entered the house and closed the door before turning on the light. He admitted he thought it peculiar that his wife did not give the alarm after the tragedy occurred. He could not remember if he had spoken to Mrs. Lock about the tragedy the evening after it had happened or at any particular time the next day. When asked pointedly if it was true that two named parties had seen him in the vicinity of his own house about seven o'clock the evening of the tragedy he emphatically denied the statement. He said that he had read in one of the papers that Allen had been shot while sitting in a chair, and after that had asked his wife again the particulars of the tragedy.

Mrs. Lock was the next witness. Her answers to the different questions were much the same as at the previous sitting. Her only explanation of why she did not give the alarm was that she wanted to tell her husband first. She did not remember when she had first spoken to her husband of the tragedy. She had cleaned the blood stains off her shoes although she had been asked by the coroner not to do so.

REAL FUR BARGAINS "FROM TRAPPER TO WEARER"

why we can sell at such low prices

Because in the first place, we secure the Raw Furs direct from the Trapper for cash—in fact, we buy more raw furs direct from the Trapper for cash than any other firm in Canada—then we select the best and most suitable skins and make them up into the famous Hallam Guaranteed Fur Garments—which we sell to you directly by mail "From Trapper to Wearer" for cash. This does away with all middlemen's profits and you receive the benefit.

THIS STUNNING SET OF BLACK WOLF is remarkable value. Large scarf in fashionable two-skin design, finished with heads and tails. MUFF is roomy warm pillow shape trimmed as shown. The fur is of a rich jet black glossy appearance and is exceedingly serviceable.

Smuggle Gold Coins Into Germany

Smugglers have done a big trade for some time past in sending into Germany gold coins of all nations. The coins are eagerly bought up by dealers of indeterminate nationality, mostly at Amsterdam, Rotterdam and the Hague at a premium which has reached 70 per cent of the face value.

In Germany they fetch double that sum. Thousands of smugglers have been dealt with in the courts in the past four years and seven thousand cases are still awaiting trial.

YES! LIFT A CORN OFF WITHOUT PAIN!

Cincinnati authority tells how to dry up a corn or callus so it lifts off with fingers.

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killed you before, says this Cincinnati authority, because a few drops of freezone applied directly on a tender, aching corn or callus, stops soreness at once and soon the corn or hardened callus loosens so it can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

A small bottle of freezone cost very little at any drug store, but will positively take off every hard or soft corn or callus. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to irritate the surrounding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house. It is fine stuff and acts like a charm every time.

SOME EQUIPMENT

It had not been our intention to say anything about that "tax sale deal" which A. I. put through with the District Ledger (anything is liable to happen on the other man's deal) but when that propaganda organ of bolshevism crawls from under the dung heap of Socialism, where it has been buried in silence for three years, and states that it received the advertising simply because it was the only paper in the district suitably quipped to get it out, we feel that in justice to ourselves we ought to say something about equipment. Either the Cranbrook Herald or the Free Press could have published this statement, as they have on previous occasions, without any extra staff or equipment, but it was necessary for the Ledger to bring Frank Newnham from Calgary, a machinist operator from Seattle and borrow a pressman from this office several times in order to handle this wonderful job. The Cranbrook Herald was quite right in its reason why the Ledger got the advertising. A. I. sees breakers ahead.

PROVINCIAL TAX SALE OF FARM LANDS

(Cranbrook Herald)

The British Columbia government are about to hold a sale of provincial lands in arrears for taxes. But marvellous to relate the notice advertising the lands in arrears in this district is to be published in a paper that does not circulate in the district. In fact the publication selected is not a newspaper at all, but a society periodical, published at Fernie by the Miners' Union for circulation among the miners to advocate the interests of the miners only and whose circulation is principally in Alberta. The money to be paid for the advertisement might as well be thrown into the Fernie coke ovens and burnt up.

It is a political job, a deliberate robbery, a looting of the treasury of the people and it is believed to have been done for the sole purpose of saving, if possible, the Fernie seat for the government.

A. I. Fisher, who was returned at the last election as an Independent, but who sold himself body and soul to the government, has been accused of putting over this foul deal for the purpose of obtaining the influence of the miners' organ for the next campaign. It has been put up to him in this way: Mr. Fisher, the man who would give $2500 of the public funds to an organ whose chief business it is to carry on a Bolsheviki propaganda is a damn traitor, and thou art the man. The language is strong, but not too strong to designate the crime committed against the public. It would not be too strong if a little word of three letters that has been popularized by frequent use in every pulpit in Christendom were placed before the word "damn."

What does it men? Nothing less than that the government have decided to sell out the farmers in this district without even giving them an opportunity of knowing that their property is up for sale. It means that the unfortunate farmer is to be put to sleep with a billy and when he wakes up find that he has been robbed of his property. The least that the government could do would be to notify him in the same way that the government insists that a city corporation shall notify all the property holders within its jurisdiction shall be notified that their property is to be put up for sale, by advertising the fact in a paper published and circulating within the limits of the corporation. But in this instance nothing of the kind is being done. Not one farmer in a hundred in this district will ever see the advertisement.

This is a gross injustice to the farmers of this community. The sale in the first place should never have been held at this time. It is the hardest time in the history of the British Columbia farmer to make his living and raise money to pay his taxes. But the government must have the money even if it has to kill the goose that lays the golden egg in order to get it. Why does the government need the money? Because of its extravagance. There was to be a curtailment of expenditure in order to equalize the revenue and expenditure of the provincial administration, but the late administration was only a kindergarten in the art of spending the public money when compared with the present aggregation of spendthrifts.

The Liberals were horrified because Bowser had lent the Pacific Great Eastern $6,000,000 out of the provincial treasury in order to complete their undertaking. But when the Liberals got into power they appointed a commission to investigate the affairs of the company and when they discovered that their own friends were involved and stood to profit they cancelled that great debt on payment by the company of one million dollars instead of six. If they needed the money so badly, why go after the farmer and sell him out of house and home for a paltry tax account and give millions to a bunch of grafters who were already gorged with the people's money.

They were going to reduce expenditure by cutting out special officers and commissions, removing all the unnecessary officials. Had they reduced the staffs as they promised to do and cut off all useless and expensive commissions, there would have been no need to take such drastic measures with the farmer. There would have been no need for a surtax that increased the farmer's burdens beyond his ability to carry them, to be followed by confiscation, as this tax sale is in reality.

Patronage, the bane of British Columbia public life, was to have been abolished. Destroyed root and branch, but it has flourished under the present administration like a green bay tree and the farmer is to be destroyed instead. They are going after him, bag and baggage, lock, stock and barrel, horns, hoofs and tail, and it was the intention of the government that they should not know a thing about it until they were scotched.

Many of Hon. Dr. King's friends say that surely the genial doctor would not lend himself to such a gross injustice and he may have fought against it. But he is travelling in a vicious circle and his better judgment may have been overcome by his unscrupulous colleagues, or an unholy ambition may have turned his head. Whatever has been the reason he certainly has consented to the handing out of a very raw deal to his constituents.

It is bad enough to rob a man of his property but why not do it in a gentlemanly way.

COUNCIL MEETING

The regular meeting of the city council took place last evening with the following present: Aldermen Hunter, Dicken, Rutledge and Dudley. Ald. Dicken occupied the chair.

T. Uphill appeared before the board asking that work done in the park for Labor Day be paid for by the city.

The matter was laid over until the next meeting.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

On motion of Ald. Rutledge and Hunter, Elmer McDougall was appointed fire team driver for 60 days on trial at the present salary.

Moved by Dudley and Rutledge that Mayor Thomson and Aldermen Dicken and Beck be appointed a committee to meet the Minister of Lands re settlement board.

A number of accounts were passed and the meeting adjourned.

Dominic Citra was fined $150 the other day for running a gambling house.

Supt. Barney Caufield and Robt. Wilson returned from Vancouver on Sunday.

Our old college chum Jack Volume is reported wounded in today's casualty list

A B. C. government auditor was in town this week checking up the local office.

Mr. Verkirk will conduct gospel services in the Baptist church next Sunday night at 7.30.

The returned soldiers will give Harold Kennedy a send off at their club rooms this evening.

Word was received this week that Jack Hewat, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Hewat, had been wounded in the arm.

Commissioner Sowton, who visited Fernie a couple of weeks ago, had a son gassed at the front the other day.

The local coal supply is exhausted and unless the strike trouble is fixed up shortly some people will begin to suffer.

The fine weather is interfering with good hunting. We have not heard of a deer being shot in this locality this season yet.

Mr. and Mrs. Rasmussen left this week for Moncton, N.B., where Mr. Rasmussen will take over the United States consular office in that city.

The next regular meeting of the Navy League, Fernie District Branch, will be held Wednesday next, Oct. 2, in the council chamber. All members are urged to attend.

Rev. F. L. Carpenter, of Kaslo, will preach in the United Church both morning and evening, Sunday, Sept. 29th. Children's Rally Day will be held on Sunday at 2.30 p.m.

Esther Rebekah Lodge will attend divine service at Christ church next Sunday evening. All Rebekahs and Odd Fellows are requested to be at the K. P. hall at 7 p.m. on that occasion.

A meeting of the Board of Trade was called for Tuesday night but only four members turned up. Really, Fernie business men seem to take a great interest in the welfare of this burg.

A. A. McBean is in the city. He is moving his family to Lethbridge. Mr. and Mrs McBean have been citizens of Fernie for nearly 19 years and their departure will be deeply regretted by a host of friends.

A Hosmer hunter caused some excitement the other day in that burg when he failed to return from a jaunt into the hills A search party went after him and he was located the next day after being lost for 24 hours.

Harry Martin thinks the Free Press does not know very much about labor troubles. Harry is right. We have never had any. Printers are not in the habit of going on strike because the sun is shining and the fishing is good.

The fire brigade was called out early Tuesday morning to a fire at the residence of Steve Wakulchik. The dwelling was a total loss before the brigade arrived. The building was covered by a $1000 insurance policy.

On Tuesday evening of this week about twenty-five young people gathered at Christ Church Rectory for a farewell party to the two little Foster girls, the pretty little "leaders" of Christ church choir, who are leaving to join their father on Vancouver Island. Supper was served at 6.30 and games of all kinds were indulged in during the evening up to a late hour, when the young people went home tired but happy. The Foster family have been faithful members of Christ church and will be much missed. We wish them happiness and success in their new home.

Mrs. Geo. Crossman, of Edmonton is the guest of her sister, Miss Maud Hogan.

R. Hewat this week received a German Iron Cross from his boy in France, which he had taken from the body of a dead Hun. This is the second German Cross which has arrived in Fernie from the battlefield.

The weapon which killed Wm. Allen is said to have been the same one which killed Chief McClennan of Vancouver two years ago. It belonged to a man named Atherton, who loaned it to the negro, Tait, who did the shooting.

The first real apples grown in Fernie were produced this year by A. B. Trites. He has a fine sample of the Early Transparent, the Wealthy and a fine line of crab apples. This shows what can be grown in Fernie if one only tries.

The funeral of the late Wm. Allen will take place on Sunday next under the auspices of the local Socialist order. The body will be taken from the undertaking parlors at 2 p.m. to the Grand theatre, where the service will be held.

Archie Prentice, who is leaving with his family on Monday for the coast, will be the guest of the Curling Club at a banquet at the Northern Hotel tonight. On Wednesday evening he was the guest of the Amateur Dramatic Club at a corn supper in the park.

A. C. Brown, who has been visiting at the coast, arrived in the city on Sunday morning. Mr. Brown has decided to locate permanently in Calgary and has moved his furniture to that city. Mrs. Brown and the children are at present holidaying at Victoria.

James Fuller was today sentenced to two months in jail for attempting to evade the American military registration. He arrived from the States on Sept. 11. Over 150 Americans have registered in Fernie up to date and it is expected that there are as many more who have not yet registered. The police are busy rounding them up.

In last week's issue the sum of $417.15 was shown as from those who tagged in this district. This amount includes $51.35 from Coal Creek, which was unintentionally omitted. The names of the Coal Creek taggers were Miss Lettie Cook, Miss Violet Coughlan, Miss Emily Young, Miss Janet Fowler; Mrs. (Dr.) Workman, convenor.

"MINER'S WIFE" WRITES AGAIN

Editor Free Press:

Dear Sir—After reading in the District Ledger the letter of Another Miner's Wife, I was pleased to see my letter in the Free Press had caused sufficient interest as to evoke a reply. Now it is not my intention to carry on a controversy in the local newspapers, as I fully realize that nothing I, a mere woman, could say, would have any influence on 735 members of the Union, but there are one or two remarks made by Another Miner's Wife which I could not pass by. In the first place she did not point out to me my mis-statments; on the contrary she only verified what I stated; and if Another Miner's Wife had kept to the point I should not have taken the trouble to reply.

Now re the grievance committees, Another Miner's Wife says "When the miners do think for themselves it will not be necessary to employ any committees." Exactly my own sentiments, my dear, and a verification of my first statement. If Another Miner's Wife will kindly read my first letter again she will find I did not even suggest that this grievance committee did dig all the coal. I should be sorry for the coal output.

I, too, have a Minister of Mines Report, but I fail to find where it says the single shift will ensure perfect safety for the men.. Now as far as the single shift goes, and we will naturally conclude it means day shift steady, I would gladly welcome it as the cheapest and most convenient for myself. I do not persume to answer for others, but why not have tried to get it by diplomacy and not such drastic measures as cessation of work?

There is no man living today (I do not require any data or statistics to tell me; common sense is sufficient) who can say these mines can be brought to a condition of perfect safety. The miners are just as liable to be killed (God forbid it should be so) in the single shift as on the treble shift. Would that they could only be brought to a condition of perfect safety—our anxiety would then be nil.

Another Miner's Wife says there is no one can say that the single shift will eliminate bumps at Coal Creek. Exactly my own statements expressed again. Then she goes on to say, Nobody can say the single shift will not help some. There Another Miner's Wife contradicts her own statement. Now Another Miner's Wife surely did not infer from my letter that a man couldn't be a gentleman without money. We all know it is not the coat or the pocket that makes a gentleman. I was speaking of the man who lives not on his hard earned savings but on a goodly income.

Again, I should be more than sorry to put a price on any man's life. I simply made a statement of the average wage of a digger. I am not in a position to state the scale of wages of any other class of workmen, and as to the majority being the rule, I know only too well, and it is the minority that has to suffer with the majority. I am out to fight neither system nor individuals, but for the daily bread of my little kiddies.

As I have already trespassed too much on the Editor's kindness, this letter is final. In the meantime, whatever the decisions of the men may be, I can smile with the rest. I have tried to do my bit and if it has been useless, well, we cannot all win.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your courtesy, I remain as before,

A Miner's Wife.

PRESS COMMENT

Schools exist in Western Canada dominated by alien enemies where the textbooks used are imported from Austria and Germany and where English is not accorded the dignity and attention ordinarily granted a dead language. Not long ago, in one of these communities, a returned soldier, a highly-educated professional man, was beaten for school trustee by an alien enemy candidate of low qualification, whose backers openly boasted that they would punish the English-speaking candidate for fighting against their Fatherlands in Europe.—Montreal Daily Star.

MAKE CREEK KIDDIES HAPPY

On Tuesday a member of the Free Press staff was up at Coal Creek. Meeting the genial Superintendent, Mr. Caufield, he volunteered to show the reporter over the new park which the Coal Company is constructing there. A large acreage along both sides of the creek is included in the plan. Paths are being constructed in every direction; seats are to be placed in shady spots; some small bridges are to be constructed; and a stairway built leading down to the ball grounds. The work is only partially done as yet but when completed will be a most pleasant spot very convenient to the town.

In this park, at a large expense and for the special benefit of the children a number of amusements have already been installed. These consist of a merry-go-round, on ball bearings; six see-saws; a giant's stride and six swings. All of these are of a permanent character, being constructed mostly of steel and other metals and placed on concrete foundations. Any day after school hours a merry crowd of children gather around these amusements and enjoy themselves thoroughly.

General Manager Wilson has always had the welfare of the children at heart and the making of this park and the installation of these amusements is only another instance of his practical interest.

The entire cost of this undertaking is being borne by the Company and not one cent has gone into it from the "dockage" fund as has been stated in some quarters.

We understand that similar amusements are being put in for the children at Michel.

SAYS LEMON JUICE WILL REMOVE FRECKLES

Girls! Make this cheap beauty lotion to clear and whiten your skin.

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

MANUFACTURE OF CARS IS DISCONTINUED

The Ford Motor Co., is discontinuing the manufacture of passenger cars for the period of the war. This is due to preparations for big production of the new one-man tank. It is stated that one which has been delivered to France has proved highly satisfactory, and big-scale production will be started.

Ford war work now consists of submarine chasers known as Eagles, Liberty engines, small tanks and other munitions.

It is expected that before long all the Ford assembly plants will be taken over by the government. Some of them already have been taken over.

The board of directors of the Hudson Motor Car Co. has adopted the following war-time resolution:

"Be it resolved, that it is our plan to produce only those automobiles during the period of the war as are necessary to clear out the stock on hand and contracted for, which we estimate will be accomplished not later than Jan. 1, 1919, and that thereafter our plant resources and our entire manufacturing energy are to be devoted to war work."

The Hudson company had hoped that such a radical step would not be necessary and had thought that by converting part of the plant to war work, the percentage of which gradually has been increasing for the last year, they could meet the government requirements and still partially supply the demand for Super-Sixes. However, in view of the increasing war needs, the company feels it a patriotic duty to apply its entire plant to war work.

Not later than and probably before Jan. 1, all Super-Sixes made during the war will be out of dealer's hands. The Hudson factory and Hudson dealers now have on hand a sufficient supply of replacement parts to meet all needs over a prolonged period of time.

The entire resources of the Packard Motor Car company, plant and man power are to be devoted to war work from now on. This announcement of a 100 per cent. war factory was made to dealers and the public a few days ago by Alvin Macauley, president and general manager of the company. War essentials to which Packard now devotes itself exclusively are airplane engines, motor trucks, airplanes and war tractors. The resources dedicated to the government's win-the-war programme include the entire Packard plant of 61 factory buildings covering 56 acres of ground, unsurpassed shop facilities, a rapidly growing force of employees now numbering 12,000 men and women—all with a production capacity mounting toward $100,000,000 a year.

MUNICIPAL FINANCES

The Union of B. C. Municipalities has approved the desirability of the creation of a Local Government Board to act as a check on extravagant expenditure. The proposal is a sane, business-like proceeding, rendered necessary by bitter experience. The Lieutenant-Governor in Council has the power to act as such a check, but there is not a single municipality expert in the Provincial cabinet, and it would be exceedingly difficult for the government to take any action in the direction of dictating to municipalities without being accused of doing so for political motives. Obviously the real solution is the appointment of a non-partisan board composed of those with expert municipal knowledge and financial training. With very rare exceptions those elected on our councils, while highly estimable citizens, know little or nothing about finance, yet they control the expenditure of millions of dollars. Our system of municipal government with its spendthrift policy succeeded in escaping criticism in the days of real estate booms, when expenditure was only limited by the desire of the people to increase the value of their holdings. The slump, and on top of it the warf, with the stern lesson of retrenchment it has taught, has brought the people to a full realization that the quality of statesmanship which can look ahead and safeguard the financial future is necessary to guide aright the destinies of municipalities.

Had we had a Local Government Board in the past there would never have been a tax deliquency problem and the municipal debt of the province would be small compared with what it is today. Does any one suppose for an instant that fully qualified municipal experts would ever permit the administration of this city to cost anywhere from $40 to $50 per head of the population? Would they have allowed a situation to arise whereby only 40 to 50 per cent of the taxes can be collected yearly? We cannot believe they would; and yet our own municipal administration not only permitted such conditions to arise, but saw them growing worse and worse while only in a prefunctory way seeking the solution of the problem, which, if left unsolved, would have caused us to drift into bankruptcy.

The future has many problems ahead, financial and otherwise, and the experience of cities all over this continent—with a few exceptions—is our warrant for creating a check on municipal extravagance. The proposal of a Local Government Board contains the principle of the solution sought, though the actual constitution and powers of such a body leave ample room for discussion. In effect the people of every municipality are heartily tired of the incompetency which has been injected into the administration of our affairs. It is true it is their own fault, for those whom they have elected have been largely responsible in not long ago seeking better safeguards through Provincial legislation. The Provincial government must also bear its share of this responsibility in not having passed laws which would have prevented, or in not having exercised its power to supervise municipal expenditure. The government of the day realizes the need for action, and hence the proposal for a non-partisan body to act as a check on the extent of civic undertakings. There are very few who will deny that this power must not only exist but be exercised, and it is in the highest interests of every community that it should be in the hands of those who are thoroughly versed in municipal problems.—Colonist.

THE CHURCHES AND THE WAR

Guesses at the effect of war experience on the post-bellum standing of the organized forces of religion are among the commonest exercises of war-time speculation. Speaking generally these prophetic efforts take their direction for the most part from the wishes of those who undertake them. The conditions from which hints may be gathered are so complex and reveal so many contradictory tendencies that the inclination to gather and emphasize considerations which confirm preconceived views is hardly to be resisted. So the religious devotee is apt to argue that an experience so deeply stirring and evoking so much sacrifice of self cannot fail to encourage a seriousness of mind from which the churches will make rich gains. The hostile critic of the churches, on the other hand, sees in the initial tragedy of the war and in the play of baser forces which it has unloosed, provocation to an active and widespread scepticism before whose assault the churches will rock on their foundations. An interesting case could be made out for either view, but calmer minds will detect in this very fact the assurance that the effect of the war will be seen, not in any astounding change in the attitude of men's minds toward organized religion, but in gradual and scarcely perceptible modifications not greatly different from those by which such institutions accommodate themselves to normal needs in normal times. It is probably true that in this field as in others the average mind is too much overawed by that which is spectacular in war experience; the struggle is staged on so vast a scale that we are tempted to exaggerate the effect which it must have in the individual mind. We do not allow enough for the forces which tend, through the most disturbing experience to swing thought back into its normal channels. An essential consideration which is ordinarily overlooked in these woods of speculation is that, disturbing as this experience must be, the time is not so very far distant when a new generation will think of it as an event of the past, to be recreated only through books; and even we will know it soon as an experience of yesterday. To appreciate these facts is to reach the conclusion that, speaking generally, the effect of the war on existing institutions will perhaps be a little less profound whether for good or ill, than most people are now inclined to suppose. — Winnipeg Free Press.

GERMANY SHORT ON SOAP

The Deutsche Tageszeitung states that in examining samples of bread the Chemical Institute of Research of the City of Leipzig found the following foreign bodies present: Feathers, thread, wadding, lysol, paper, wood, straw, gypsum, chalk, splinters and sand. The bread of one large bakery unaccountably contained about 13 per cent of copper in the form of verdigris.

Considering that the Teutons actually introduced the use of soap among the Romans and thus bestowed the gift on Europe generally it is hard on their German descendants that they should be the first nation in the war to be left almost soapless. But their situation in 1914 with regard to soap was very weak, as, indeed, it was with regard to all industries needing fats. Four-fifths of the oils and fats used to make German soap came from abroad, so that directly war broke out the supply of these raw materials became a pressing problem.

Before the war the best toilet soap was more of a luxury there than it was in England, and cost about twice as much. A war committee for the distribution of oils and fats was formed early in 1915; it found it had to face the necessity of cutting down the use of industrial fats to less than one-tenth the usual supply. It was then decided that only 7 1-2 per cent of the ordinary supply of fatty materials for soap could be allowed; rather, an appalling restriction on the cleanliness of a nation.

However, fillings and additions were to be used to a larger extent than formerly, so that the actual issue of soap and soap powders would not be so much curtailed in amount as the restrictions implied. The consequence of so limited an output, however, was very serious for the manufacturers, and compulsory syndication was necessary to control the limited amount of business.

The production of glycerine in the manufacture of soap had also become an important matter for munitions. During the year 1915 the kinds of fatty material permitted to soap boilers were more and more restricted, until they had only palm oil and train oil, with some amount of oil residues and inferior oil. Among fillings, potato starch was entirely forbidden but fine clay, kaolin, talc and other materials were permitted. Vaseline has proved also a useful addition, and Iceland moss is permitted. The soap powders were to contain as much as 50 per cent of soda.

Soap began to be rationed to the community individually in April, 1916; it was at first distributed locally on the bread ticket. But in August of that year an Imperial Soap Ticket was issued, and this remains in force to the present day, being accepted patiently by the German people, even when at the beginning of 1918 the washing soap ration was halved for the second time. When one remembers that the average consumption of fat as food in Germany was as much as 70 gr. per day (about 2 1-2 oz., or as much as they now get in a week), one sees that the soap restrictions had to be accepted as part of the general situation with regard to fats.

BRITAIN AND PEACE

The record of German rule in Southwest Africa, made public as a result of Commissioner Gorges' investigations on the subject, make it impossible that territory should be returned to Germany after the war. The people of South Africa would never permit its retrocession, nor do we think there is any disposition on the part of Britain to allow the country to revert to Teutonic rule. Two statements have already been made by British cabinet ministers which imply there is no intention of yielding up any of Germany's colonies. The ministers responsible for these are A. J. Balfour and Walter Long, and it must be presumed both spoke with authority. But, at the same time, it is inevitable the question will be one to be decided at the peace conference. Britain's attitude, as the greatest of colonial rulers, will naturally exercise tremendous sway on this particular point.

The time has not yet come to speak of the conditions of peace except so far as they constitute war aims, but there is one aspect of these should be constantly kept in mind. What guarantee is Britain to have against naval aggression? If there is one point upon which this Empire must insist it is upon safeguards in the North Sea. The British Navy, by the superlative services it has rendered in the war has won the right to demand for its country that Heligoland shall no longer remain in Germany's possession. The "riddle of the sands" must be solved as a result of this war, and Great Britain is entitled to demand, as one of the terms of peace, that the Kiel canal shall be internationalized, and Schleswig Holstein returned to Denmark. For the past twelve years Britain's pre-occupation in the North Sea has grown greater and greater. She has been forced to concentrate practically all her strength there, and the least she can ask for in the peace terms is that such pre-occupation shall be unnecessary hereafter. Germany's coast line should be restricted to the Baltic, for she has shown too plainly how her purpose in this war has been to mass her strength against the heart of this Empire.

At the peace conference there will be representatives of the Overseas Dominions, who will have a say in the deliberations. It will be their duty to see to it that German naval power is curtailed unless ample guarantees are forthcoming it will hereafter never be used for aggressive purposes. From the standpoint of this Empire this is the greatest of all questions to come before the peace conference, far more important than the future of what was once German colonial empire. It is worthy of far more consideration than has been given it up to the present. We hear always of reparation, restitution and guarantees, and the security that different countries will enjoy when the war is over, but rarely, if ever, of the necessity for the removal of the menace to the British Empire by direct restrictions of Germany's naval power. The guerdon of the Grand Fleet's watch in the North Sea, which has made an Allied victory in this war possible, must be ample and final assurance that such a vigil will be unnecessary ever again. —Colonist.

Fry's Cocoa

The best way to get the most work out of the "human engine" is to give it the food that has the most energy in it. Of all foods, certainly this means FRY'S COCOA —the great food beverage that is all delicious nourishment. If you have to work harder these days, try a regular course of FRY'S. You will need less of other and more expensive foods. There is concentrated strength for muscle and brain in every single cup.

MA ON THE JOB

"Pa," said little Willie, "what's an echo?"

"An echo, my son," answered Pa, casting a mean side glance at little Willie's Ma, "is the only thing on earth that can cheat a woman out of the last word."

"Another definition of an echo Willie," observed Ma, "is a man who goes to old patent medicine almanacs for his alleged wit."

And then nobody said any more words but Will, whose infant mind was naturally confused by all this persiflage.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

At the Orpheum—Friday and Saturday

Kitchener was right

when he said—

"Either the Civilian population must go short of many things to which it is accustomed in times of peace or our armies must go short of munitions and other things indispensable to them."

NOW, the only way we can possibly live up to that obligation is by going without in order that our soldiers may have. For the money we waste is not money at all—it is equipment, clothing, shot and shell that are urgently needed in France.

By denying ourselves, therefore, we enable Canada to procure to the fullest extent the materials and labor which she and our Allies need for the successful prosecution of the war.

What happens when we fail to save?

A pull on labor by the Government in one direction and a pull on labor by the people in the opposite direction. Hundreds of millions of dollars are of no use to the country if goods and services can be secured only to the extent of eighty millions of dollars. So we must do everything in our power to release both goods and labor for the purposes for which Canada needs them.

WHETHER it be food, coal, wool, steel, leather, labor or transportation, the result in all cases is the same. Whoever competes with the nation by freely satisfying his own desires, selfishly appropriates to his own use that which is so urgently required for our fighting men in France.

For the sake of your country and the boys "over there," spend cautiously. Think of what Lord Kitchener has said, and ask yourself first, "Is this something I really need or can I do without it?"

WAR RATIONS OF TWIGS

Owing to the scarcity of oats and hay in Germany, a substitute for fodder for horses has been found in foliage and twigs. All through the empire the edict has gone forth to gather the leaves from such trees as oak, maple, linden, poplar, chestnut and elm, and to forward them to a central depot, where they will be gathered and sent to the front to feed army horses. Soft twigs are also to be used and ground into small pieces to be mixed with the foliage.

Farmers are requested to conserve on oats and hay, and to feed their own horses and cattle as much as possible on foliage. Experiments have been made by government experts and they found that foliage, while not as nutritious as oats and hay, nevertheless is of considerable value as a substitute.

PRESS COMMENT

No one, save the German Intelligence Department, has known or ever will know half of what Britain has done. When it comes to self-laudation the British are the poorest advertisers the world has ever seen.—Public Ledger, Philadelphia.

In the development of Siberia Canada, and especially Western Canada, can have its share. There will be tremendous openings for our manufacturers, opportunities for our shipping released from carrying food and munitions to the Allies, and unheard-of development in our Pacific ports—Vancouver, Victoria and Prince Rupert. The new Siberia is the last great territory in the temperate zone which remains to be developed and colonized. If we in Canada do not take advantage of the opportunity such a situation will present it will be our own fault.—Calgary, Alberta, Herald.

Strictly speaking, Canada has no divorce law. Each application for relief from domestic thraldom is disposed of by a separate act of Parliament that goes through just the same stages as a bill to build a railway branch line. There are no such things as statutory grounds; there is neither legal nor constitutional obstacle to John Jones getting rid of a wife who is unkind to the cat so long as the Senate, the House of Commons and the Governor-General take pity on his plight. It is only in practice, and not in theory, that the Canadian divorce system is arguably superior to that of the most polygamous of the United States. And the real bulwark of morality is nothing more exalted than the price—which is very exalted.—Evening Telegram, Toronto.

MUST BE DISCIPLINED

He had just asked for the honor of becoming her second husband, and was awaiting her reply. She looked at him in what, poor fool, he took to be a favorable manner, so he once more broke into speech.

"I think I can make you happy," he said. "I am well off, and have sole control of a flourishing business. I am certain we should get on famously together. I—"

"Have you ever been in the army?" interrupted the widow.

"Why, no! I have devoted my life to governing and increasing my business."

"Nor the volunteers?"

"No, of course not! That doesn't matter, does it?"

"Yes, I am sorry to say it does. I have quite decided that if ever I marry again my husband must have had a military training."

"But why?"

"So that he will understand how to do what he's told without any back talk; that's why!"

The Passing Hotel

(Toronto News)

Small restaurants are becoming common in many of the towns of Ontario. The result is that some hotel proprietors find it difficult to "carry on." There is no profit in maintaining a mere lodging house at such rates as may be secured. The European plan, however admirable, is based on a fair return for room privileges. If a traveller pays only 50c for his bed and then buys all his meals at the Greek's or the Chinaman's the hotelkeeper will be forced to consider doubling his rate. The province is dry. Hotel keeping has become a business free from suspicion or stigma. Unless it continues to be a profitable business ,the casual traveler will soon have no place to sleep.

There are many people who praise God from whom all blessings flow and then proceed to waste them.

CANADIAN NEWSPAPERS WILL PRACTICE WHAT THEY PREACH

The Canadian press is well to the fore in the campaign to promote the saving both of materials and money. Mr. John M. Imrie, manager of the Canadian Press Association, mentions it as an interesting coincidence that on the very day that the Thrift Campaign was launched in the newspapers of Canada the news print paper committee of the Canadian Press Association sent out to all papers a long list of suggestions by which paper may be saved, and a resulting saving effected in labor, materials and transportation.

Canada uses a large quantity of news print, but much less per capita than does the United States. In this country the consumption is 12,000 tons per year per million of the population; whereas in the United States the consumption is 18,000 tons per million people. In the United States the War Industries Board recently issued an order reducing the consumption of news print in that country. No such action has been taken in Canada as yet; but the news print paper committee felt that every economy possible in the use of paper should be effected, notwithstanding the fact that, even after the new regulations have gone into effect in the United States, the per capita consumption of paper in that country will be much higher than it is in Canada.

The ideas for economy suggested to publisers are of two kinds. First, the discontinuance of wasteful practices in building up circulation that have manifested themselves through the keen competition of certain dailies to get circulation at any cost. Along this line many suggestions have been made with a view to eliminating wasteful circulation, without crippling the newspaper.

Another line of policy relates to the size of newspapers. Recommendations have been made for reductions in size ranging from five per cent in the case of small papers to 60 per cent in the case of large Sunday editions using over 350 columns of reading matter, comic features, etc. This would mean the eliminating, or reducing of many comic and other features and the condensing of news reports into shorter form. In other words, the competition between papers would then be one of quality rather than of quantity of matter printed.

The Canadian press in adopting these suggestions is following up its campaign to promote saving by practising it.

HE THOUGHT SO

Robinson was a traveller, but how he managed ever to secure such a position it is impossible to say, since he was afflicted with a most distressing stutter.

One hot afternoon he called on a very crusty business man with a view to getting some orders, but, unfortunately, there were none to be had, the business man giving Robinson an emphatic answer in the negative. The traveller therefore locked up his sample case and prepared to take his departure, when the merchant called out to him:

"I say, you must find that impediment in your speech a great handicap."

"Oh, n-no I don't," stuttered the traveler. "Everyone has his p-p-peculiarity. St-sta-stammering is m-mine Wh-what's yours,"

"So far as I'm aware, I haven't got one," replied the other.

"W-what! D-do-don't you st-st-stir your coffee with your r-r-r-right hand?"

"Yes, of course I do," came the retort.

"Th-thought so," said the traveller. M-m-most people, you kno-kno-know, use a t-t-teaspoon."

"GOD HELP US!"

Falling back before the slow-moving but ceaselessly advancing hosts of British, French, Americans, the German foe prays to God for help, says the Baltimore Sun.

"God help us!" screams the frightened Baron von Ardenne, Hun general They stand deep in the blood of slaughtered babies, non-combatant men, women, nurses, wounded, and beg God to help them.

They stand convicted of crimes unmentionable and pray for God's help. They wallow in scenes of their horrible depravity and cruelty and plead with God for help. They bring to the world the most awful of all wars and hope that God will help them. They violate their most sacred pledges and call upon God for help. They tear down altars and demolish church and expect God to help them. They kill clergymen and violate the sisterhood of the church and pray to God for help. They steal the graven images from cathedrals and cast them into cannon, yet pray to God for help. They enslave a captive people and beg God's help. They torture prisoners and innocent women and children, but pray to God for help. They are not willing to end their riot of barbarian lawlessness, but pray for God to help them. And they are not repentent, yet pray for God's help.

The God we have come to know and worship is not the accomplice of the murderer, the robber, the ravisher, the Hun.

The God we know is not the God of whom Moses gave the command. "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain, for He will not hold him guiltless who taketh His name in vain."

THE SHIELD OF THE NAVY

After this war there will be only three—four at the most—possibly only two—first class military powers in the world. America will be one of them. . . . We shall have a great army; we shall be a Goliath industrially; we shall cover the seven seas with our commerce carriers. But we shall not sagger in our might. We shall ever remember that we grew great because Britannia threw over us the shield of her invincible navy during the months while we considered and judged and doubted, and then slowly awakened to indignation and righteous wrath. We shall not forget the "Old Invincibles" or "Kitchener's Mob," or the gallant Colonial contingents who held the line while we were learning that a Berlin bid for the dictatorship of the world included us.—Public Ledger, Philadelphia.

JEERED AT FOR MOTORING ON SUNDAY

Returning by motor from New York last Sunday, a party of Ottawa insurance men had an experience with "gasless" Sunday which they would not go through again for any consideration. The party were in New York attending the International Underwriters' convention and left for home on Saturday in the endeavor to reach Ottawa by Sunday night. The adventures which the party met with on Sunday, the jeers and abuse they encountered because they were using an auto on Sunday, scarcely could be described, according to members of the party. They were hooted by residents of United States towns and villages through which they were compelled to pass, old women, fired with patriotism, shook umbrellas at them in unconcealed anger, they had difficulty in obtaining gasoline sufficient to keep them going, while waitresses in restaurants along the road served them disdainfully. Not a motor car was seen anywhere on the roads on the American side of the border.

EXTRAVAGANT MUNICIPALITIES

Municipal finance in British Columbia has still far to go before it is out of the woods.

Figures given the convention of the B.C. Union of Municipalities show that last year the municipalities of the province in the aggregate secured a revenue of $10,,700,000, and out of this set aside more than $9,000,000 for sinking funds and bond interest, so that the amount available to "carry on" for the twelvemonth was only $1,500,000. Notwithstanding this condition, they spent far more than their income.

At present arrears of taxes exceed in the aggregate $14,000,000, or more than twice what they were in 1914.

Figures such as these reveal a grave situation. They point inevitably to the adoption of a new policy, even if that policy should inflict hardship on individuals. Obviously the time has come for the municipalities to set their debt-laden houses in order. There will be a period of financial readjustment after the war, and our municipalities must prepare to meet it.—Vancouver World.

ATTITUDE OF VETERANS AFTER THE WAR

In answer to those who prophesy a sort of mob rule by returned soldiers after the war, the Toronto News recently published the following editorial under the heading "No Cause for Apprehension":

"There is no danger. The men who respect Canada overseas are not the sort that degenerate into a 'brutal and rapacious soldiery,' so often mentioned by the old historians. They are for the most part young men of intelligence and good breeding, the products of Canadian homes and Canadian schools. Soldiers who have learned discipline without unlearning their natural initiative are of too high a mental type to take pattern from the Russian Moujik and tear civilization to rags.

"Consider the soldiers who have already returned. The proportion of them of 'strong-arm men' who demonstrate with stones and staves is almost negligible. There are thousands in civil life. Their bearing is as courteous, their manner as quiet as that of any man who never saw a battlefield. They wear the service badge with pride. Of right they count it as a distinction. They are impatient at the few noisy comrades who think a whoop is an argument and a crutch-head the end of discussion. They are the backbone of the Veterans' Association, the strength of the army and the cream of Canadian manhood. Of them the country has great expectations which will not be disappointed. Canada will owe its future pre-eminence to these men, who have seen great things and learned the meaning of duty."

GIVE YOUR COUNTRY A LEG UP—SAVE!

Canadian patriotism demands the practice of thrift by all her sons. The men who are holding the lines at home are they who are making it easy for the business of the country to go on with little jar to its mechanism. The steady pull together of all citizens in the production of goods and in the conservation of all field crops marks the thrifty nation. Saving on the part of our citizens is going to be the greatest insurance we will have in Canada against a period of depression after the war. The combined capital of the individuals who make the country will form a fund of sufficient power to drive business along in a most satisfying way in spite of the prevailing hard times of such a period.

The saving man is therefore a real patriot. He has Canada's interests fundamentally at heart. May his tribe increase in these days when wealth is piling up under the spur of wartime effort. Save because it hits both ways. It is a high form of patriotism. And it gives one's country a leg up in a critical time. Put by that extra dollar now. The long procession of thrifty dollars will make a line that will not waver — Hindenburg or no Hindenburg.

CRITICISM IN WRONG PLACE

In the supply of criticism from Great Britain to this continent there are some things that give false impressions. One is the continual carping of the Repingtons and others against the British government.

Criticism of the British government by the people of the British Isles is, no doubt, salutary and necessary. But such criticism, as a witty Frenchman said of British diplomats, is "not an article of export."

The British War Cabinet, to those who know it, is seen to be at least as capable and efficient a body as that of any of the other Allies. A few facts show this beyond question. When the Germans in March last attacked at Cambria they had far greater forces than the British. The German army was rested and fresh; the British tired out with a heavy offensive. The result of that attack is known.

But what is not so well known is that in a fortnight the British threw across the Channel into France 268,000 men equipped and ready for the field. In another fortnight the War Office had increased the number to 355,000 men—the most remarkable feat of its kind in the history of war.

Not only were the men supplied, but every worn-out or lost gun was replaced and more machine guns were furnished than ever before. In six weeks the German advance was broken. The enemy was defeated in three of the most sanguinary battles of the whole war—battles in which he had everything in his favor. This defeat was inflicted in part by British lads of 18½ years — lads who left English camps and died next day in France without their relatives knowing even that they had gone there.

As Mr. Lloyd George said, this achievement was truly one of the more astonishing successes of British shipping and transport, and of the efficient organization of the much-maligned War Office. — Vancouver World.

BATTLED AROUND THE WORLD

Where have not the British fought? The Suez was in danger. It was the British who protected it. There were German naval stations in the Pacific. The British "mopped them up." Russia asked help by way of the Dardanelles. The British tried to give it. Intervention was needed on the Tigris. The British supplied it. The British were at Salonika. British ships were in the Adriatic. The British colonial troops freed Africa from the Germans. British diplomacy steadied the Moslem world when the Turkish Sultan and his Sheik-ul-Islam proclaimed a holy war. The British today are moving south from Archangel and are at Vladivostock. Britain financed the Allied nations till we came in to share the titanic task. Her industries have clothed, munitioned and supplied them in various vital ways. The Germans say that she has "prolonged the war." By that they mean that she has kept up the fighting spirit of the Allies and supported their morale. The Briton is a dour fighter, and knows no end to a struggle save victory or death. He never fights a limited liability war—he goes in with his whole soul. The day that British khaki appeared upon the battlefields of France it was decreed that there could be but one of two ends to this conflict—the collapse of the British Empire or the final failure of Germany's dream of world conquest. — Public Ledger, Philadelphia.

FRIENDS THOUGHT HE WOULD DIE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Conquered Dyspepsia and Restored His Health.

MR. ROBERT NEWTON.

Little Bras d'Or, C. B.

"I was a terrible sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation for years. I had pain after eating, belching gas, constant headaches, and did not sleep well at night. I lost so much weight — going from 185 pounds to 146 pounds—that I became alarmed and saw several doctors who, however, did me no good. Finally, a friend told me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'.

In a week, there was improvement. The constipation was corrected; and soon I was free of pain, headaches and that miserable feeling that accompanies Dyspepsia. I continued to take this splendid fruit medicine and now I am well, strong and vigorous". ROBERT NEWTON.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a small bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

AUGUST AND SEPTEMBER DELINEATORS FOR DISTRIBUTION

EXPLICIT STATEMENT OF PRESENT TROUBLE IN COAL MINES MADE BY CROW'S NEST PASS COAL COMPANY

Section (d).—In the meantime and in all cases while disputes are being investigated and settled, the miners, mine laborers and all other parties involved must continue to work pending investigation and until a final decision has been reached."

Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of the agreement, and ignoring the arrangement made by their own executive, of which they were fully informed, the local secretaries at Fernie and Michel called on the company four days later and stated that they wanted an immediate decision on the question The arrangement made was pointed out to them and the impossibility of getting in touch with Mr. Wilson, who by then was in the interior of Northern British Columbia, and they were asked to respect this understanding, but the following day the Fernie secretary wrote the company as follows:

"I regret to inform you that your proposition re putting the matter off until the return of Mr. W. R. Wilson re the single shift was turned down by the joint conference, and will again be considered by a mass meeting of the locals, which will be held on Thursday. — Signed, Harry Martin."

The joint conference referred to was a meeting of Fernie and Michel local executives. No further notification was given the company, but on Thursday, Sept. 5, a notice was posted on the bulletin board reading as follows:

"At a special meeting held today, Sept. 5, it was decided not to work any more until we had obtained the single shift. All members at Fernie and Coal Creek are requested to stay away from the mines. Due notice will be given of any change in the situation

"(Signed) H. Martin, Secretary."

This was followed on Sept. 6 by the following notice:

"It has come to our knowledge that certain members of our organization are still working in the mines. The mass meeting decided that all members under the jurisdiction of the U.M.W. of A. except those covered by the agreement, shall cease work until the single shift is obtained Below are the occupations covered by the agreement:

"Engineers, fanmen and pumpmen, and firemen.

"Any other person working at any other occupation is hereby asked to stop work as per request of the mass meeting. This will be considered sufficient warning.

"(Signed) H. Martin, Secretary."

On the same date the following letter was received from the secretary of Michel local:

"At a mass meeting of the above local union, held September 5, 1918, to discuss the single shift question, I was instructed to inform you that the miners at Michel intend to remain idle until your company concedes to their demand for a single shift in the mines at Michel.

"Trusting you will use your influence to obtain this demand so that the mines may resume work,

"On behalf of the above local, I beg to remain,

"Yours truly,

" H. Beard, Secy."

The attitude taken by the local officials was not only a direct contravention of the agreement but a violation of the arrangement made with their district officers, the more unjustifiable as it was done at a time when the responsible officer of the company, with whom the district officers had made the arrangement, was absent and could not be reached. All negotiations or temporary arrangements were set at defiance, and any possibility of a continuance of such negotiations was made a practical impossibility, through the position taken by these local officers, which left nothing to be discussed, and in effect intimated, "When you are ready to comply with our demands we may again do business with you."

Mr. Armstrong, director of coal operations, took the matter in hand, and arranged a conference in Vancouver for the 18th of September between the Hon. William Sloan, minister of mines for British Columbia, Mr. Armstrong himself and the miners' representatives. Mr. Wilson was requested to attend, and in view of the action taken by the local officers and the ultimatum issued by them, declined to do so if the mines were idle. The terms of the agreement and of the negotiations with the district officers constitute the right and protection to the company to decline negotiations of an unofficial and unauthorized nature. Mr. Wilson, however, advised Mr. Armstrong that he was quite willing to meet Mr. Sloan and Mr. Armstrong, which he did, and after explaining his position to them and the conditions which led thereto, it seemed quite agreeable to both Mr. Sloan and Mr. Armstrong to regard the situation as Mr. Wilson had been forced to through the violation of the agreement by the men, who, through their drastic action, have caused a loss of at least $200,000 in wages to the men already.

Following the investigation made into the matter by the Hon. Mr. Sloan, he made three propositions; the first at Vancouver, the last two at Calgary. They are as follows:

First Proposition—"The immediate appointment under the authority contained in section 73 of the Coal Mines Regulation act of a commission composed of three members; one chosen by the miners, one by the operators and a third appointed by the lieutenant governor in council on the recommendation of the minister of mines. This commission will immediately proceed to take evidence on the question involved, insofar as it affects any or all mines in Coal Creek and Michel, and shall be prepared to report within 30 days of their appointment to the lieutenant governor in council whether in their opinion the single shift system would be advisable in any or all of the mines in said area. The recommendations of this commission, if any, to be binding on both operators and men until the conclusion of the war.

"If the abve proposal is satisfactory, I will be prepared, as minister of mines, to introduce at the next session of the legislature an amendment to the Coal Mines Regulation Act, calling for one shift in every 24 hours for the production of coal throughout the province of British Columbia, except in a case or cases of national emergency. This amendment to become effective within one year after the conclusion of the war."

2nd Proposition—"In an earnest desire to arrive at a basis of understanding in regard to the above matter, I would suggest the following as an addition to my memorandum as quoted above—namely, that pending a report of the proposed commission:

(a) That No. 1 eact mine, Coal Creek, be shut down.

(b) Or that No 1 east mine, Coal Creek, be operated on the single shift.

I would ask you to be prepared to give this proposal your very earnest consideration in view of the very serious conditions which have developed over the present controversy.

(Signed) William Sloan."

The three propositions are those set out above, the alternative one marked "b" being the third, and Mr. Wilson, on behalf of the company, intimated to Mr. Sloan and to Mr. Armstrong that any one of these propositions would be acceptable to the company.

They represent eminently fair and reasonable bases for finding which will be just to all parties, and the company believes that their acceptance by the men would indicate an honest desire to see the operation of the industry re-established and the output of coal resumed, with the consequent resumption of income to those who are dependent upon the mines for their livelihood.

NOTICE TO U.S. MALE SUBJECTS IN CANADA

The following important telegram was received by American Consul E. A. Wakefield from the Consul General at Ottawa, which vitally affects those eligible to American military registration in Canada. The instructions read:

All American male citizens in Canada between 21 and 30 inclusive, may register before American Consul or his deputy on or before September 28. American citizens who on Sept. 12 were between ages 18 and 20 inclusive and between 31 and 45 inclusive may register any time within 30 days after September 12. Those so registered will thus become subject to the United States Selective Service Act, and classified by local boards in the United States. They will be exempted from Canadian Military service but will be requested by the Canadian government to report to registrar in accordance with public notice in newspaper or press. In reporting they should state whether they have registered under the United States Selective Service Act. Americans who have not registered before Sept. 29 or October 13, according to the above will be considered subject to the Canadian Military Service Act and will be classified by Canadian tribunals the same as Canadian citizens though without loss of nationality. Very limited cases of so-called diplomatic exemption may be granted by the Consul General at Ottawa under special regulations.

The measure of your love of freedom is your willingness to deny yourself so that the strength of the nation for war effort will be increased.

"CASCARETS" WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—Take Cascarets tonight.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

THINGS WE'D LIKE TO KNOW

How long the heads of the International U. M. W. of A. are going to permit Gladstone Union to defy their District Officers before they kick them out of the organization.

If it isn't about time that the Union government stopped talking and developed a little bit of sand. The people of this country elected them by an overwhelming majority thinking they would run the nation with a strong hand, but they are beginning to look like a bunch of pikers.

Why when the miners at Michel on Monday voted by a large majority to accept the last proposition and go to work that their officers suppressed the ballot. How long are they going to stand being run by a small minority? Is this not a case for the Dominion police?

Why Commissioner Armstrong avoids Fernie as he would the devil.

Why the government didn't send a man in here to poll the vote of the miners on the single shift by secret ballot.

If the Ledger noticed that the Ukarininan organ in Winnipeg had been suppressed by the government. It was only two weeks ago that the Ledger was calling everybody down for endeavoring to protect this community from a bunch of these Bolsheviki propagandaists. Harry Martin also went out of his way to praise the patriotism of this nest of traitors.

How long the miners of this town are going to permit their organization to be run by a bunch of ambitious office seekers whose whole idea seems to be to make themselves notorious at the expense of the men.

How many men in Gladstone Local think that Potter and his crowd really give a damn for them.

Why Harry Martin speaks of the unanimous spirit that exists in the Miners Union. Why it was only this morning that Potter and Tom Biggs went to the mat in a fist fight in executive session. They are about as unanimous as Ald. Bill is generally with the city council.

If A. I. didn't shudder when he pulled off that patriotic dope at the banquet the other evening.

If it is not about time for the local Victory Loan Committee to organize. It is a bad time with a strike on, but Fernie must do its share.

Why some of those outsiders are continually harping about the Austrians stirring up strike trouble at Fernie. The alien enemies who are employed here are almost as tame as any old cow. The real troublemakers are about six old country Englishmen, who, if they created the same amount of trouble in the U. S., would be serving about 20 years in the pen.

The local branch of the Navy League will hold a dance in Victoria Hall on Trafalgar Day, Oct. 21st.

SPANISH INFLUENZA

To the Citizens of Fernie:

This disease is also called La Grippe, Russian Influenza, Epidemic Influenza. This name of Influenza is unfortunate as people are apt to confuse it with ordinary influenzal catarrh or cold. There is no disease which spreads with such rapidity and which affects such numbers during an epidemic. Within a few days this disease has swept across the continent and tens of thousands of people have been afflicted, in many of whom the results have been disastrous or fatal. This disease is liable at any time to make its appearance in Fernie and for this reason the citizens are asked to be on their guard and take necessary precautions.

Dr. Price, of Victoria, has clearly and concisely stated the symptoms

A VERDICT OF SUICIDE

The adjourned inquest into the death of Wm. Allen resumed its sittings on Friday evening, Leslie Mills being the first witness called. He said that about twenty minutes after eight he was coming along in a car and was attracted by a crowd in front of the Lock residence. I stopped and a few minutes later John Lock came out and told me a man had been shot in his house. I suggested getting the Chief of Poice and he said that had aready been arranged. The police arrived about five minutes later and we all went into the house. The Chief asked me to get the coroner and I did so. Lock said that his wife had been seen going toward the park and asked me to take him down there. We met Mrs. Lock in front of the Irvine residence. We took her in the car and drove to the Waldorf hotel. Mr. Lock appeared very cool during the trip but Mrs. Lock was very excited. She was crying. The only conversation that I overheard between them was when Lock said, Deary, get into the car. Nothing further was said that I could hear. After they got into the hotel he tried to persuade her not to feel so badly about the affair. I was in their room late on in the evening and heard Mrs. Lock being told not to remove the stains from her boots.

Edith DeBou, a school teacher, was the next witness. She stated that she had had two conversations with Mrs. Lock on the evening of the tragedy, one a few minutes after seven and the other about fifteen minutes later. I was talking about renting a house. Mrs. Lock appeared the same on both occasions. The first time we were speaking about the house and I said I would let her know and we came around for a walk and as I was coming back I met her coming from the opposite direction. She had been up the street. I stopped her and said that the house would be too expensive. We only spoke for a minute or two. On the first occasion I was talking with her she had on a dark gown; the second time she had her coat on.

Miss McLaughlin being sworn said: I am a school teacher. I was with Miss DeBou when she had the two conversations with Mrs. Lock. I did not notice any difference in the manner of Mrs. Lock on these occasions.

Mrs. Elizabeth Johnston was the next witness.

Q.—Mrs. Johnston, on the night of the tragedy on which Mr. Allen met his death, would you just tell the jurors what you know of it, either from personal observation or telephone message or messengers?

A.—Well at seven, about seven o'clock; I don't think it was before, although it might have been a few minutes before seven — I believe it was—I went over to the theatre and about seven went to the door to turn the door light on, and I saw Mr. Allen coming, and he walked into the theatre and down to the orchestra pit and possibly he left some music, I didn't notice; or possibly he got some music. Of course he spoke as he came by me and I went into the box office and then he went out. I didn't see him go out but I knew he went and know his walk across the street; crossing the sidewalk and I came to the inside door and looked, the office door, and saw him pass on the street right over to Mrs. Lock's gate. He went in and she was sitting on the piazza. I saw him pass the music to her, or whatever it was. She took the music and held it a minute and Mr. Allen took it back, opened it at a certain place and after he had done that he didn't give it back to her, and whether he took the music with him I don't know although he actually opened the book and seemed to show her a place; then he walked into the house and she followed. She turned with him and she followed him in and that is all that I saw. People began coming in and I was selling tickets until perhaps between twenty-five and half past when Mrs. Jenkins phoned and asked if Mr. Allen was in and I said no; he was across the street; and she said she was afraid something had happened because she said, "I have heard two shots and Mrs. Lock has gone down the street in a hurry." I phoned up to Mr. Johnston—there is a phone in the operating room—then I called Dorothy Nelson and asked her to tell Isadore to play alone in case Mr. Allen didn't come.

It was sharp half past seven when the girl went to speak to the pianist, because the pictures came on and this is how I remember for certain, and I asked Mr. Johnson if he started on time and he said he did.

Q.—Was it customary for him to get there about seven?

A.—Not always, but I would be safe in saying ever since he worked he was always on time. The night before this he was right on time; this Wednesday night he was a little early.

Q.—The nights he came at seven or shortly afterwards did he remain in the theatre in most cases until seven-thirty?

A.—No; generally when he came at seven sharp he would leave his violin or music and go out and come back in twenty or twenty-five minutes.

Q.—Did you notice on previous occasions where he went?

A.—No; sometimes down the street and sometimes to Lock's.

Q.—Did he go often to Lock's?

A.—Not so often from the theatre at seven o'clock.

Joseph Scarpino, sworn, stated that he had been an intimate friend of Allen for the past four or five years. He had never heard him mention suicide at any time. As far as he knew Allan's family relations were O. K.

Harry Martin testified: I am Secretary of Gladstone Local Union. On the evening of the tragedy I left home to come to the Grand theatre. We had a show on that night. I got to the theatre about 7.10, getting the change for the booking clerk ready, and came down and stood outside because it was too early. I looked at my watch and it was 7.15 and I went in the pool room. But prior to that time I saw Mr. Lock across the street, come to the Gemmil street crossing going over towards his home. The only interest I had in Mr. Lock was that he had been fishing and I was wondering if he had caught any fish. That is all I troubled.

Mr. Martin was severely cross-examined but stuck to his first story, stating that he was absolutely confident that he had seen Lock at the time stated.

Keith Colton, a lad of 15, testified that he was a newsboy and that on the night of Mr. Allen's death he arrived at the Lock home with his paper at about 25 minutes to eight. He met Mrs. Lock about half way down to the gate and gave her the paper. She took the paper without saying anything. She usually thanked him but on this occasion did not. She did not look different from any other time.

A. M. Owen, sworn, stated: On the night of the death of Wm. Allen I met Mr. Lock opposite the residence of Mr. Willingham on McPherson avenue, about five minutes past eight. I called him across the street and asked him if he had any fish. I also asked him to start work on my house in the morning. I am positive about the time for I had just looked at my watch before we met. When we parted Mr. Lock started towards town. He looked just the same as usual.

PRESENTATION TO H. KENNEDY

A most enjoyable evening was spent at the Returned Soliders Club Rooms on Friday, Sept. 27. The occasion was a farewell smoker and presentation to the late Secretary, Comrade H. Kennedy, on his departure for Vancouver, having been granted a course in Motor Mechanics at the Vocational School. A. B. Trites presided and in the course of his remarks called upon Mr. Kennedy and presented him, on behalf of the Comrades of the G. W. V. A., with a gold watch for his services rendered whilst Secretary of this Local. Comrade Kennedy, who was somewhat taken by surprise, in responding wished to thank all members for the beautiful gift, which, he said, in looking at the time, he would always be reminded of his sojourn in Fernie, and the small part he had been able to perform in organizing the Fernie Local of the G. W. V. A., and wished it every success in the future. The rest of the evening was spent in song and speeches. Short addresses were made by A. I. Fisher, Major Anderson, Major Moffatt, Chief McDougall and Mr. Wilkes. Those who helped the musical part were Comrades McNally, Joinson and Dawson, G. Wilson, Ed. Symonds, J. Puckey, Mr. Hewitt and Mr. Barr. Light refreshments were served during the evening. The affair closed about 11.30 p.m. by the singing of the National Anthem.

The Fernie Local, G.W.V.A., wishes to tender their best thanks to all who so kindly donated gifts which helped to make the smoker so enjoyable.

Coal Creek Methodist Church

The regular Harvest Festival services will be held on Sunday and Monday, Oct. 6 and 7. Rev. B. Black will preach at 7.30 p.m. Monday concert and sale at 8 p.m. Special singing at both services. Fruits, vegetables and flowers thankfully received at the church.

THE STRIKE SITUATION

The strike situation during the past week passed through one or two phases with occasional glimmers of a settlement but eventually it reverted and followed the course of an endless circle. The reported "generous offer" by the miners in their official organ last week, which was alleged to have been a proposal to return to work on sixty days' trial and upon failure to produce an equal quantity of coal during this trial period they would revert to the old system of double shift, was met by Order No. 86 from Director of Coal Operations W. H. Armstrong instructing the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. to re-open their mines on single shift system and the appointment of a royal commission to investigate the allegations of the opposing parties and determine the question at issue, the commission so appointed to report promptly when dispute would again be reviewed. A meeting of Gladstone Local was called for Saturday last but upon notification being received from Calgary that the above mentioned order had been issued by the Director, this meeting was postponed until Monday morning pending its presentation by President Biggs.

The meeting accordingly opened at 11 a.m. on Monday and in considering the business placed before it, it required a space of three hours. The net result was that after haranguing for that length of time the announcement was made that the members of Gladstone Local would "accept single shift or nothing." No counter proposal was offered; just a flat refusal; nor was the "generous offer" reiterated. This was apparently conveniently forgotten and one significant event which transpired at this meeting has now leaked out and from this it would appear that the "generous offer" never was advanced by the members of Gladstone Local with a sincere desire to settle the controversy. The significant event is that a vote of censure was passed upon the District Officials in connection with their endeavors relative to settlement of present strike. Not that a vote of censure upon the District Officials is such an alarming matter; past experience has repeatedly shown that Gladstone Local plays this card frequently whenever it finds that it cannot coerce the District Officials into carrying out its wishes and desires to the letter regardless of the ultimate effect upon the district organization or anything else so long as the greed of a paltry few is satisfied. But one thing the vote of censure does demonstrate, that even within all is not unanimity on the question at issue. Another development with regard to the "safety first slogan"; President Biggs attended and addressed a mass meeting of the Michel Local Union last Sunday and arrangements were made for taking a secret ballot on the proposed settlement Order No. 86. This was carried out but in Fernie the vote was taken by show of hands or similar method when not a solitary vote was recorded in favor of accepting the suggested settlement. Swiftly this result was transmitted to Michel and immediately upon its receipt by the Michel officials the tellers in that place suppressed the result of the secret vote taken there. The few in charge of the ballot decided among themselves to "indefinitely table the result" and not to make it public or at least acquaint the members of the local union what their majority decision had been. What the decision of the majority at Michel was cannot be stated with official confirmation but the only possible inference left when it was suppressed was that the miners there were content to accept the order of Director Armstrong and stand by the decision of an impartial commission, which if the element of safety is so pronounced there can be no shadow of a doubt but that their contention will be sustained. For reasons best known to the members of Michel Local Union they have apparently been exceedingly docile and have not openly voiced any protest at the arbitrary action in annulling their majority decision, and while no figures as to what percentage voted in favor, those who reside at Michel and should be in a position to judge with reasonable accuracy what was expected, claim that it carried by two to one.

Upon the openly flat rejection at Fernie and the mute co-operation in this decision by Michel, F. E. Harrison, assistant director of coal operations, visited the city on Tuesday, and together with President Biggs and District Secretary Browne collaborated the entire day with the Gladstone Local Executive. The outcome of these negotiations were that the objections to the Order for resumption of work were presented to Mr. Harrison, who agreed to place them before the Director and if he consents to embody them or rather amend Order 86 in conformity thereto, the executive of Gladstone Local has given assurance they will recommend acceptance and resumption of work. So far nothing has been heard from Calgary in this connection but it is understood Mr. Armstrong is considering same, and that early developments should transpire, but whether it will be an unconditional surrender to the dictates of Gladstone Local Executive is only a matter of conjecture.

LETTER FROM HAROLD MINTON

France, Sept. 4, 1918.

Dear Parents—We are still busy getting familiar with our new machine. Yesterday being a very clear day, I took a trip to see how I really could get along up high. The other day I went to 21,000 feet and yesterday to a little over 23,000 feet. It was rather cold on the fingers but outside of that I was fairly comfortable. I could see the coast of England quite clearly. Am getting a couple of more pair of silk gloves. I had on three pair yesterday besides the fur lined leather gloves. Will have to conclude now. Robert is improving in the hospital in England but is likely to be there for some months.—Harold.

LOCAL MAN IS HONORED

Archie Prentice was the guest of honor at a magnificent spread at the Northern Hotel on Friday evening last. Over one hundred curlers and immediate friends were present to give this popular young man a big send-off. The evening was taken up with speeches and music and a delightful time spent. Before the affair closed Archie was presented with a beautiful club bag as a token of appreciation, S. Herchmer making the presentation. Following is a list of those who gave the banquet:

Jos. Austin, J. G. Billings, Harvey Brown, Thos. Beck, Percy Bean, M. A. Berigan, A. C. Brown, J. T. Gell, C. W. Barrett, Jas. lack, Thos. Cole, John Carmichael, L. Carosella, J. Corbett, A. Corrie, R. Dudley, E. G. Daniels, H. E. Douglas, R. Duthie, A. I. Fisher, J. Falconer, Dr. Garner, A. Graham, F. Greenwood, H. Gould, F. Gilbert, A. E. Gordon, J. Graves, C. Glover, John Gates, S. Herchmer, D. G. Harvie, J. J. Harrington, J. Irvine, H. J. Johnson, Jas. Johnston, G. F. Johnson, Guy Johnston, R. Kerr, M. A. Kastner, C. Kirkpatrick, A. Klauer, Gus Kossoff, J. Kinnear, Nels Krohn, F. C. Lawe, Wm. Lancaster, Mr. Mentrum, A. Macneil, H. J. Morris, Jas. Mitchell, Chief McDougall, J. McLaren, Joe McDougall, R. McVannell, R. S. McGraw, Jas. McCool, J. L. McIntyre, F. G. Perry, Thos. Prentice, A. Prentice, J. D. Quail, J. B. Rhodes, Chas. Spence, B. Smith, N. E. Suddaby, E. K. Stewart, Geo. Thomson, J. Lowe, Thos. Uphill, A. Watson, F. Warwick, Geo. Winters, Mr. Wakefield, J. R. Wallace, T. Wilson, W. R. Wilson.

Michel Harvest Festival Services

On Sunday, Sept. 29, the Methodist church held their annual Festival services. The church was nicely decorated for the occasion, a large quantity of vegetables, fuits and flowers, given by the ladies of the congregation, assisted in the decorating. Special harvest hymns were sung by the choir under the superintendence of J. Dawe, Mr. Holcroft accompanying at the organ. The service was conducted by Rev. B. Black.

DOGS' WOOL

The spinning of dogs' wool has proved a success, and several offices have been opened in London to receive and prepare the combings. The Ladies' Kennel Association, Belfast Chambers, Beak street, Regent street, W. receive the wool, sterilize it and clean it, after which it is sent to the central work rooms for spinning. The wool from Pekinese and collies is especially beautiful; the old grey sheep dog is also responsible for delightful knitted jackets that stand no end of wear and launder beautifully. All soft-haired dogs yield lovely wool, and the hair from wire-haired dogs is used to stuff pillows for the wounded. The Countess of Gosford, Royal Academy, Picadilly, W., has charge of this industry.

KITCHENER MEMORIAL HOME

A big house on a hill, a fine garden of an acre with trees and a drill ground in London's healthiest suburb, Hornsey, fine airy rooms for study and home life—these make the Kitchener Home which was opened recently with fitting ceremonies and great rejoicing on the part of those who have carried the idea to completion. The home is a memorial to Lord Kitchener and planned in a modest way along lines in which he was always intensely interested, the care of British boys whose fathers have fallen in battle. The Bishop of London dedicated the home, and H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught made a charming address, in which he referred to his friendship with Lord Kitchener, whom he knew in the days of the "Shop. Lord Kitchener's only sister, Mrs. Parker, was an interested guest. There is already installed a happy family of forty-six boys, twenty of whom acted as a guard of honour when their home was dedicated. There are still dormitories to be fitted up and various ways of helping with this good work. No doubt the same idea will eventually take root in Canada, and it is interesting to note the amounts listed: A whole dormitory can be named and furnished for from £50 to £100 according to size; a bed can be named and maintained for three years for £18; one boy can be maintained for one year for £10 in adition to the government grant, and £5 provides clothing for one boy for one year.

AN ELECTORATE OF EIGHTEEN MILLIONS

Few people overseas realize the revolutionary change that has been effected in the electorate of the British Isles by the new franchise measure.

From time to time in the last fifty years electorates have been increased at a time by half a million or perhaps a million voters. The general election of 1910 in Britain was fought upon a voters' list numbering 7,500,000. But the latest reform act increases that number to 18,000,000, and of the 10,500,000 new electors, no fewer than 6,000,000 are women.

That is to say, that there will be almost as many women in the British Isles exercising the franchise at the coming election as there were men voting eight years ago.

It is an astonishing advance in the democratization of the government of the motherland. A few years before the war a politician who suggested it would have been locked up for unsoundness of mind. Now it is taken as a matter of course.

What experiments in government this huge democracy will make; what the influence upon it of the returned soldier will be; how it will regard the ritish Commonwealth of Nations; how it will look on the future of labor—these as well as the host of urgent problems that the end of the war will bring forward for solution are questions it is futile to attempt to answer. But they make quite clear why Mr. Lloyd George hesitates to call a general election this winter.—Vancouver World.

A COMEDY OF ERRORS

He looked for a gas leak with a match and found it.

He lighted a match to see if his gasoline tank was empty. It was not.

He smoked while filling his auto tank, but will do so no more.

He smoked in bed; so did the bed clothes.

He threw the matches into the waste paper basket. He is wiser now.

He threw a cigarette stub into some rubbish.

He saved his oily waste and oily rags and they burned the shop.

He washed his hands in gasoline near the stove. The doctor washes them now.

He did not worry about fires as he had "plenty of insurance," and forgot the safety of his wife and children upstairs.

He stuffed up the chimney holes with paper and rags.

She cleaned her gloves with gasoline and saved fifteen cents, but paid the doctor and druggists $15.

She poured kerosene into the lamp while the wick was burning.

She put gasoline into the wash boiler on the stove to make washing easier.

She dried clothes too near the stove.

She used the wrong oil can.

She burned sulphur all over the house to fumigate.

She used the wood box back of the range as a waste paper receptacle.

She gave matches to her children to go out to burn leaves in the yard. The cotton dresses burned easier than the leaves.

She was "coming right back," so she left the electric current on in her iron.

She fixed up a fine tissue paper shade for the lamp.

She filled the tank of her gasoline stove while one burner was going.

The comedies have turned to tragedies; many of the scenes of action were in ashes and too many of the actors are maimed or dead, more will follow, no doubt, as they are prone to ignore the advice and experience of others instead of profiting by their errors and sufferings.

Correct style worn by well dressed young men in all localities. Lace boot—medium narrow recede toe, low heel—made in black, tan or patent calf. Price, $7.00 to $10.00.

Good Value and How to Get it

YOUR interest, as a member of the consuming public, and ours as Canada's largest manufacturers of shoes, are really identical. They may be summed up in a single phrase: "Quality Shoes at Fair Prices."

A fair price today is a higher price than usual, because the cost of every item of material and labor which goes into a pair of shoes has increased greatly and is still increasing.

In order that you may continue to get quality at fair prices, we shall feature in advertisements certain specific shoes which we know will give you good value. From our knowledge and experience, we will suggest to you the best methods of buying, whether you select shoes of our manufacture or not.

We ask you to buy for service rather than merely for style; to go to a reliable dealer, and to look for the manufacturer's trade-mark on the shoes. By so doing you may be assured of good value for your money.

GIRL AMBULANCE DRIVERS

There are about 300 girl ambulance drivers in the Red Cross service in France. The only other women ambulance drivers in France belong to the First Aid Nursing Yeomanry Corps. There is a friendly rivalry among the Red Cross girls in the matter of keeping their "bus" spick and span. Whenever a trainload of wounded arrives, the Red Cross girls must be on hand, and this means constant duty, day and night. Exceptionally good driving is a characteristic of each girl, and before undertaking ths dangerous and arduous work a girl is required to pass a severe test at Devonshire House. Among other things she must know how to attain speed without jolting the wounded, as a bit of rough driving might prove fatal to the poor lad Tenderness linked with courage of the finest and highest kind is always found in the girl ambulance driver. Ten shillings a week with expenses is the pay. Those who have time to think of uniforms consider that of the ambulance girl the smartest and the most becoming of any war uniform for women—provided it is well cut and made.

EVERYONE MUST HELP TO WIN THE WAR

The Canada Food Board says:—

Your job is to grub stake this world. That is what you are up against, and it is quite a job. You can do it. You have done it for four years, and what was done then can be duplicated.

There is no such a thing as a food surplus in this world. The universe is living from hand to mouth as probably never before in its history.

The stocks of food have been wiped out, and the producers have been taken from the land in large numbers. The call to those remaining is much louder than ever before. It is more insistent, and its demands must be heeded.

The full dinner pail is but a memory for millions on this earth. It can be filled sufficiently to keep life going but it can only be filled by you. It can't be done in Europe. It must be done here.

Not until the Hun is hammered into submission, not until peace is declared, and commerce resumes its wonted way can we let up for a minute.

LIFT YOUR CORNS OFF WITH FINGERS

Tells how to loosen a tender corn or callus so it lifts out without pain.

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn or callus the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn or callus, root and all, lifts off with the fingers.

Freezone dries the moment it is applied, and simply shrivels the corn or callus without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but will positively rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or hardened callus. If your druggist hasn't any freezone he can get it at any wholesale drug house for you.

SYNOPSIS OF LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 31st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

For information apply to any Provincial Government Agent or to

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

THERE'S A WARNING IN TRADE FIGURES

For those who understand Canada's financial conditions there is a significant lesson in the trade figures recently issued from Ottawa.

For the first five months of the present fiscal year there was a decrease in Canada's foreign trade of $270,000,000, or about 20 per cent. There was a great falling off alike in manufactures and agricultural products exported. The trade was $875,000,000, compared with $1,146,000,000 a year ago.

These figures tell in potent terms of the instability of present conditions. Our trade, though still large and healthy, is on an insecure and unenduroing foundation. War conditions have created a fictitious prosperity. There may be no reason for alarm but there is reason for caution. The government must watch and prepare, so should individuals. Few Canadians but are affected in some way by the present conditions. The wise ones will prepare by practising thrift now.

The Nation can be no stronger than its individual citizens.

PEG PAPERS SUPPRESSED

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—The secretary of state has issued warrants under the consolidated orders respecting censorship forbidding the possession in Canada of copies of two largely circulated and important foreign language publications of an extremely revolutionary and Socialistic type published in Winnipeg. Both of these newspapers are printed in the same office. One, a newspaper of many years' standing, is entitled the "Robotchynarod," and is published in the Ukrainian language. The other, which is under distinct control, although printed on the same presses as this paper, is in the Russian language, and entitled the "Rabotchyjnarod." These papers have been publishing matter advocating the doctrines and practices of the Russian Bolsheviki, and have published considerable matter in criticism of the action of the allied powers in intervening in Siberia.

DOING IT RIGHT

There is danger of missing much of the zest of the brilliant achievements that characterize this war through not understanding the marvellous skill upon which the success of those undertakings depend. In the Zeebrugge glory, for instance, most people think only of the valour needed by those who manned the ships—a valour requiring them to face a vigorous and fairly disastrous bombardment. The sailors, according to the usual idea of victory, did the same thing which our soldiers do every time they go "over the top" and clean out dug-outs.

The fault is not to be laid at the door of the public, however; for they would cheer all the more lustily if they knew more of the cost of the victories in the way of preparation, the skilful laying of plans beforehand, and, above everything else, the years of technical training which were necessary before Zeebrugge or the bottling up of the Koningsberg or any other great victory was possible.

The "placing of the ship the way he wished it to lie" was considered epitaph enough by his commander when speaking of the gallant captain of the Vindictive. It was indeed the placing of the ship that was the real achievement. Landsmen have no way of knowing that unless a ship sinks on an even keel one end will be carried down stream and the other will stick up in the air. The ship will finally settle in the line of the channel—and will not obstruct navigation. German submarines and other vessels would still be going in and out of Zeebrugge had the captain of the Vindictive not known how to do this masterly thing of sinking his ship to lie across the channel instead of lying parallel. Two other captains knew the same thing, and there the three vessels lie today with mathematical precision, as is known from a photograph taken by a German officer in a low-flying aeroplane. How the photo came into British hands is another story.

This is not the first time that German vessels have been bottled up during this war by British ships that blocked the harbour completely because their captains knew how to sink a ship the way it should lie. An old collier, the Newbridge, was given that honorable work to do when the German cruiser Koningsberg was penned up in 1914 in the Rufigi river. The Newbridge had to be anchored head and stern, and there was a heavy fire from the shore. The rest of the story reads like the account of a crew's picnic ashore. After she was anchored into position the crew pulled the inlet valve, and while the ship was settling down the crew stepped into the boat that was waiting, fired the fuse that would blow out some of the bottom plates, and then left her to do what she was meant to do.

It gives one a pleased feeling to know that in this war both the Germans and the Turks have attempted to block the harbour in which British ships were lying, and that both have failed completely and clumisily.

MUST HAVE LICENSE TO DEAL IN FRUIT AND VEGETABLES

The attention of the Canada Food Board has been called to the practice frequently adopted by licensed dealers in apples, turnips, potatoes and other fruits and vegetables, of having men living in different parts of the country acting as their agents, buying or contracting such produce, superintending the loading of same on cars ready for shipment, and receiving a commission from said dealers for such work.

All such agents operating in the manner mentioned without first having secured a license from the board are doing so contrary to the order dated the 13th day of December, 1917, wherein it states:

"That on and after the 1st day of February, 1918, no person shall deal wholesale in fresh fruits or fresh vegetables, without first having obtained a license from the Food Controller," and in violating such order are guilty of an offence, and subject to a penalty not to exceed $1,000.00, and not less than $100.00

THE LLOYD GEORGE TYPE

The one thing we all admire in Lloyd-George is that we know where to find him. He acts definitely. He is no luke-warm weakling. He fights on like our splendid boys are doing despite the 25,000 casualties since August 6th.

Are you doing your part as well? Have you taken your stand on the thrift question? Have you definitely decided that out of your good returns this year, you will lay by such-and-such amount for a Victory savings account?

If you have done nothing in the matter, you are not of this Lloyd-George type. You have heard the call to bring your dollars into the service of the country when she calls. And having heard, you have not acted. Make the decisive move now. Start the fund at once!

Men Exempted As Farmers

Having in view the importance of leaving a sufficient number of men on those farms which are actually contributing to the national food supply, notice is hereby given as follows:

1. ALL MEMBERS OF CLASS 1 POSSESSING EXEMPTION AS FARMERS, which is expiring, and WHO WISH TO REMAIN EXEMPT, SHOULD communicate with the registrars under the Military Service Act OF THEIR RESPECTIVE DISTRICTS, REQUESTING AN EXTENSION IN TIME OF SUCH EXEMPTION. Questionaires will thereupon be issued to these men by the registrar and they will receive further exemption upon furnishing satisfactory proof that they are contributing sufficiently to the national food supply.

2. In order to facilitate productive employment during the winter months ,MEN EXEMPTED AS FARMERS SHOULD APPLY TO THE REGISTRARS FOR PERMITS TO ENGAGE FOR THE WINTER IN SOME OCCUPATION OF NATIONAL INTEREST, SUCH AS LUMBERING, MUNITION WORK, ETC. Such permits will serve to enable exempted farmers to pursue other useful occupations for the months during which farming operations cannot be carried on.

and the means to be taken to prevent the spread of this disease.

"The spread of influenza can be checked by attention to ordinary precautions. In the first place everyone should be acquainted with the earliest symptoms and know how to act properly. The onset of the disease is very sudden, the patient may be enjoying his usual health when he is more or less suddenly seized with severe frontal headaches and pains in the back and limbs, with a feeling of cold in the head, soreness of threoat and chills, accompanied by rise of temperature, perhaps a cough and a feeling of weakness.

"When such symptoms occur, the person afflicted should go to bed at once and remain there warm and at rest and send for the doctor. If there is neglect or postponement or other cause, the disease may probably attack in its worst form. Heart failure in the aged and pneumonia in both old and young are the most common results of neglect and are the principal cause of deaths during influenza epidemic. Influenza has a low mortality rate, but the sequelae of neglected influenza are very fatal."

Isolation Necessary

"The spread of the disease may be checked by using precautions. It is an infectious disease, infectious from its earilest stages like measles, from the breath or by contact. Therefore to prevent the spread of such a disease, isolation is necessary from the appearance of the first symptoms.

"Children commencing too suffer from an attack of influenza should not only for their own sakes but for the sake of others, be kept from school or any other gatherings. Adults affected should immediately isolate themselves as far as possible in their homes and do all they can to keep from contact with others.

"Further prevention measures are the attention to general health during an epidemic, sufficient sleep, sufficient fresh air, sufficient food and exercise, avoiding of chills, fatigue and over crowded assemblies, the regular use of baths and frequent cleaning of the teeth and nostrils. All these tend to prevent the disease and check its spread."

The Surgeon-General of the United States army has issued these directions on how to strengthen the country's defence against the scourge.

1. Avoid needless crowding; influenza is a crowd disease.

2. Smother your coughs and your sneezes; others do not want the germs which you throw away.

3. Your nose, not your mouth, was made to breathe through; get the habit.

4. Remember the three "C's," a clean mouth, clean skin and clean clothes.

1. Try to keep cool when you walk and warm when you ride and sleep.

6. Open the windows always at home at night; at the office when practicable.

7. Food will win the war if you give it a chance; help by choosing and chewing your food well.

8. Your fate may be in your own hands; wash you hands before eating.

9. Don't let the waste product of digestion accumulate; drink a glass of water on getting up.

10. Don't use a napkin, towel, spoon, fork, glass or cup which has been used by another person and not washed.

11. Avoid tight clothes, tight shoes, tight gloves; seek to make nature your ally, not your prisoner.

12. When the air is pure breathe all of it you can; breathe deeply.

MINER WRITES FROM MILITARY HOSPITAL

To the Editor Fernie Free Press:

Dear Sir—I hope you will excuse me for writing and asking you to put this letter in your paper. I am not much of a letter writer but I think it is my duty to say a few words to the miners of the Crow's Nest Pass. I am much surprised at the way they have gone on there for the past four years, and now to cap it all they are voting on the single shift. I wonder if they realize where the coal is going to. Do they know that every ton they mine is a ton more to beat the Hun. When the war broke out they said, they would fight to a finish but are they doing that now? I say no. Do they remember when they said they would look after the soldiers' dependents. Are they still in the same mood yet? If so let the soldiers see that they still keep to their word. Can they not see that the less coal they mine that it means harder work for the soldiers' dependents to get coal?. We have seen all this through your paper, which is passed from one Fernie boy to another. Have we not seen all the advance in wages they have had through the advanced cost of living, and how much have the soldiers dependents had to balance that. Well I tell them a paltry $5 a month. I think it is the working people who are reaping the fruits of what we are fighting for. I say let the miners come over and send us back in their places. We would only be too glad to do it. Just fancy, six hours a day. That may be all right in peace times but not in these days. What would they say if they had to work 24 hours and the next day the same for perhaps three or four days at a stretch for $1.10 a day, and bully beef and hard tack and lucky to get that sometimes. Do we kick about it? Yes we do when we see what they strike for. But we cannot stike and a lucky job for them we cannot. If the soldiers laid down their arms for one hour do they know what would happen. well, we do. We might see another hour but that is doubtful in these days. In concluding my letter, let me say this to the miners: Carry on and be men the same as you were before the war. Let us have no slackening up until the damn business is finished. The less coal you mine the longer it will last and the longer we shall be away from home. When you get a raise in pay see that the sodiers' dependents get one too. Do not leave them in the cold all the time. I was a miner myself before the war and I hope to be one again if lucky enough to get back. If you want a little experience just get a suit of khaki on and come over. You will get all you want. So I still carry on. Carry on is the slogan of the Canadian boys. Hoping you will do the same and stop all this trash about strikes.

Yours truly,
A Fernie Boy in Hospital.

TO every home there comes a time when every thought, every hope, every prayer for the future centres on the recovery of one loved one. In that hour of anguish, every means to recovery is sought—the highest medical skill, trained nurses, costly treatment. Does the price matter ?

★ ★ ★ ★

It may be so great as to stagger the imagination—a sum beyond the possible.

But does anyone ask, "Can we do it ?"

Money or no money, they do it. And somehow they pay.

It may mean doing without things they think they need. It may mean privations, sacrifices, hardships. They make unbelievable savings, they achieve the impossible, but they get the money to pay.

★ ★ ★ ★

To-day in this critical period of our nationhood, there is imperative need for MONEY—vast sums of money.

Only one way now remains to obtain it.

The nation must save, every community, every family, every individual Canadian must save.

If anyone says "I cannot save" let him consider to what extent he would pinch himself to relieve the sufferings of a loved one at home; and surely he would not pinch less for our fighting brothers in France.

Without suffering actual privations, nearly every family in Canada can reduce its standard of living, can practice reasonable thrift, can make cheerful sacrifice to enrich the life-blood of the nation.

You who read this, get out pencil and paper NOW. Set down the items of your living expense. Surely you will find some items there you can do without.

Determine to do without them.

Start TO-DAY. Save your money so that you may be in a position to lend it to your country in its time of need.

NIGHT SCHOOL OPENS OCT. 7

Owing to a number of circumstances which interfered with the enrollment of pupils for the night school on Sept. 30, the time fixed has been postponed until Oct. 7. Following is a list of the subjects:

(1) First year course for Miners and Artisans: 1 Arithmetic and Mensuration, Wednesday; 2, Geometry and English, Monday.

(2) Second year course for students who have completed a training similar to first year.

(3) A. For Miners. 1 Practical Mathematics, Monday; 2, Coal mining practice, Tuesday and Thursday; 3, Elementary science, Friday.

(4) B. For engineers. 1, Practical Mathematics, Monday; 2, Mechanics and machine drawing, Wednesday; 3, Elementary science, Friday.

(5) English for foreigners, Friday.

A Saturday morning class will be arranged to meet the requirements of those engaged on the afternoon shift.

A fee of $3 will be charged for the First Year course, and a fee of $5.00 will be charged for the courses numbered 2, 3, 4, and 5.

The sum of $3.00 will be refunded to each student who makes 85 per cent of attendance and the balance of $2 will be spent on new equipment.

The above classes will be conducted if a sufficient number of students express a desire to take up each subject.

All who wish to take a course will kindly attend at the High School at 7.30 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 7, when Thos. Prescott will receive the fees and give any information required.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a small bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

A VERDICT OF SUICIDE

Marion Corsan, sworn, stated that she had seen John Lock and Mrs. Lock on the street near the Presbyterian church about 7 o'clock or a few minutes before on the evening of the tragedy, but admitted upon cross-examination that there was a little doubt in her mind about it being Tuesday or Wednesday evening.

Elsie Parsons, sworn, stated: Our house is on the corner going down to Fairy Creek bridge, the corner of Chipman avenue. I saw John Lock on the evening of the 18th about 7.30. He was passing our house with a fishing basket. He was going toward town. She was positive as to the time.

Pete Styck, lumberjack, testified that he lived down on Chipman avenue and that he had seen John Lock go by his place with a basket and pole between the hours of seven and eight o'clock.

Kate Telenko, who also lives in the Annex near the bridge, swore that she saw John Lock pass her home after seven o'clock on the night of the tragedy.

Wm. Hawthorne swore that he met John Lock on the evening of Wednesday, the 18th, in front of his hall on Pellatt avenue. It was about 8 o'clock. I looked in his fishing basket and he had two fish. He appeared to be the same as usual to me.

Edwin Rutledge also testified that he met John Lock on the night in question at the corner of Wood and Pellatt streets. He had some conversation with Lock, who showed him his fish. This was about eight o'clock or shortly after.

Thomas Allen swore that on the night of the tragedy that he saw Lock on Victoria avenue coming up towards Victoria avenue from the Henderson block, but on being cross-examined became confused as to it being Tuesday or Wednesday night.

Guy Johnston testified that he saw John Lock from his home about a quarter to eight on the night in question. His residence is on McPherson avenue. Mr. Lock was evidently returning from a fishing trip.

Chief Welsby, being sworn, was asked to relate what he knew about the tragedy, and said:

At seven p.m. on the night of the 18th, I left my house and walked down Victoria avenue. At the corner of the Imperial Bank I saw Mr. Allen and Mr. Caufield; they were walking in the direction of the Orpheum theatre. I wished Mr. Caufield "good evening" and went on to the station. I left the station at eight o'clock and went to Victoria avenue with Mr. Perry. I walked slowly up and opposite the Imperial Bank on the corner where the vacant lot is, I met Constable Clarkston. He in formed me he had a call to Mr. Mott's house and we went there together and we found that the names had been mixed over the telephone. I telephoned central from there and she told me that Mr. Allen, the musician at the Orpheum, had been shot at Mr. Lock's house and I was to go there at once.

I went up there and arrived as nearly as I can judge at about a quarter past eight. Outside I saw Mr. Lock and Leslie Mills and Tom Prentice. Mr. Lock said, "There is a dead man in my house lying in the front room." I walked up to the house, to the front door. On the way up Mr. Lock said, "My wife was seen running down this way," pointing to the south end of Victoria avenue. He said he wanted someone to look for her and I said if he would wait a minute we would attend to finding his wife. I went inside and Constable Clarkston, Leslie Mills and Tom Prentice followed me in. On the floor in the corner of the room as I turned around going in the front door, there was a man lying on the floor, his left arm was doubled underneath; right arm extended slightly down to the elbow but more from the elbow. The hand rested on the floor. The body was limp. The head was lying in a pool of blood.

I noticed a revolver about six inches from the hand, pointing away from the body. I picked it up and examined it. I noticed one cartridge had been discharged and that one was the third one from the hammer. I unloaded the gun and took charge of it. I then left Constable Clarkston in charge of the premises and went to look for the Coroner. But prior to that Mr. Lock walked around the table and he bent down and said, "Is that Allen?" Constable Clarkston then said, "Yes, that is Allen all right."

The room seemed in a very good condition; nothing seemed disturbed. There was a davenport and on the centre of that a violin in a case; case open. There was a cushion on each end of the davenport which evidently had not been disturbed. The body was lying on the left side, the legs bent from the hips at an angle. The left arm was doubled under. I noticed a round hole on the right temple. There was no sign of powder marks on the face; no sign of burning.

Constable Clarkston, sworn, told a story much the same as the Chief, and continued: When the Chief went out of the house, Mr. Lock said to me: "Is he dead? Are you frightened to touch him?" I answered, "No, I am not frightened to touch him. He is dead all right." After that Lock went out of the house and stayed four or five minutes, then came back in and he used the expression "Haven't you shifted that thing yet?" I said no; nothing was to be moved until the Coroner had seen the house. I stayed until the coroner same and saw the body picked up and put in the basket; then I went to the morgue and saw the personal effects taken off Allen noting them in my note book, and brought them to the police station.

Q.—What was found on the body, Mr. Clarkston?

A. — Spectacles and miselll-aneous papers, one bank book, thirteen bullets in brown sack, two handkerchiefs, watch, fob, one lead pencil, one toothpick case, one violin bridge, $160 in one pocket, two one dollar bills in another, one pair cuff links, one stud and $100 in another pocket.

The witness stated that he had had much experience with bodies which went to death from gunshot wounds. The bodies always fell in the direction from which the bullet came, that is, against the bullet.

Mrs. Louise Allen, wife of the deceased, was next examined. She said that she and her husband had gone to Saskatchewan for a holiday in the month of April. He had stayed for a a few days and then returned. There had been no estrangement between herself and husband..

The inquest was resumed on Monday evening in the counril chamber at 7.30.

Dr. Asselstine was recalled and stated that he had performed an autopsy on the head of Wm. Allen. The course of the bullet was perfectly straight. He did not see any burning at the time he made the autopsy.

By Chief Welsby:

Q.—Doctor, look at exhibit 5. Is it possible that a body falling against an object, a chair or anything, would cause such splash of blood with a wound such as you found?

A.—If there was quantity enough of blood where it struck there would be a large quantity fly away.

Q.—You saw the room where the tragedy happened; you saw the quantity of blood on the wall there? And on the chair?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Is it possible for that blood to splash on the inside of the leg as it appears there?

A.—Well—that is the right leg?

Q.—That is the left leg?

A.—Judging by the room I don't see how it very well could.

Wm. Caufield, recalled, and cautioned that he was under oath, stated that on the evening previous to the tragedy he had been with Allen after the Orpheum had closed. He went down with him to the house. I sat down and he went into the bedroom. He came out with a gun. I asked him what he was goiny to do and he said "Nothing." That is all he said and he immediately put the gun up like that and he said, I will shoot you—just joking. I took it for a joke, for he immediately took it down. I don't think it was any more than a second up and he then immediately stated that he wouldn't shoot. "I wouldn't shoot you, Bill." I said, "No, you were fooling." He said, "Of course I was." He then said, "My philosophy is that a man that intends to shoot a man will never let him know." Caufield when asked why he did not give this evidence on the previous occasion stated that he looked on the matter as a joke and had forgotten it.

Cross-examined by Chief Welsby, he said that about a year ago Allen had made the statement, "Do not be surprised if I am missing," and that on the night previous to the tragedy he had said that he did not fear death.

Eder Harper being sworn stated that he remembered Harry Martin coming into the pool room six minutes past seven and going out 15 minutes past seven. He came in to get change. He came in again about 25 minutes to eight and got another $10 worth of change. He then played pool with John Robertson and they gave me thirty cents. Martin gave me 30c.

Q.—How long did it take them to play a game?

A.—Those two take a very long time to play. Now then, before this game was up the three come in the store and wanted Harry Martin and Harry Martin went out of the store and I believe the show was on then, Lock, if he did see Lock, that is when and my opinion when he said he seen he saw him, just about eight o'clock, and he admitted to me this morning or last night when he came to me to know what I had said. He asked me if I had said anything and I said ,yes, and I said, I think it isn't right to swear a man's life away if he wasn't sure, and he said then if it wasn't then it was some other time, and I ask you if it is fair to come here; for a man to come and say that and then say if it wasn't then it was some other time.

Q.—He said that either last night or this morning?

A.—He said that last night—not last night in the morning when he heard what I told and he said he would make me prove it, and I said I would be willing to prove it any time and I told the Chief about it and and I said to the Chief, if you wanted me down here I will come and tell exactly what I know, and that is what I am here for. I don't think it is at all right for no man without being sure to say that and to have a man to get through life and have that on his back with the public. That is what I am here for now. I have both for my friends in a way; Lock is my friend and so is Harry Martin, but I think it only right to speak the truth as I know it.

Percy Rawson testified that he saw Harry Martin several times outside of the union hall from 7.05 until 20 minutes to eight. He saw nothing of Mr. Lock during the time he was with Harry Martin.

James Parsons, a resident of the Annex, also testified that he saw John Lock pass his residence on the way up from the river about 7.30.

Frank Brindley testified that Harry Martin arrived at the theatre about seven minutes past seven.

Isabella Swineburne, a resident of the Annex, swore she saw Lock coming up from the river after sundown on Wednesday night.

Fred Gillett and Isabella Pennington, both residents of the Annex, also gave similar testimony.

Mrs. Allen was again recalled and testified re insurance. Mr. Allen had an accident policy in favor of his wife for $5000, which was taken out last month.

The court was then cleared and Mrs. Lock again put on the stand. In reply to the coroner as to whether she had any further explanations to make she stated:

About this conversation coming back in the car from Michel the night Mr. Allen and Mr. Scarpino took Mr. Lock and Mr. Moore and I down, coming back I think Mr. Allen—Mr. Scarpino asked Mr. Allen who should drive and Mr. Allen told him he thought he should drive.

Q.—Who. Scarpino?

A.—Yes, and he said you better sit in the back seat with Mrs. Lock. I was already in the back seat and Mr. Allen got in. I suppose we had ridden two or three miles when Mr. Allen suggested I would be warmer if in front by the engine, so I rode in the front and coming along I suppose Mr. Allen thought Mr. Scarpino was driving too fast for the time of night. It was after ten o'clock when we left Michel, and he said I don't want you to put me in the ditch, and the conversation drifted and he said: "I have a razor and a rope, which will you have?"

Q.—Who said that?

A.—Mr. Allen, and from that the conversation drifted to suicide. We all stated our way of committing suicide if we had any intention of committing suicide and I remember I thought I would jump in the falls or something of that sort, just joking, you understand, but Mr. Allen said he thought he would shoot himself but he couldn't get a gun. Mr. Scarpino said he wouldn't lend his gun because it had his initials on it and they might think if his gun was found beside him that he had committed it.

Q.—Did Mr. Scarpino have a gun on him that night?

A.—I don't think so; not that I know of.

Q.—All right. Proceed. Anything further? Was that all along those lines that night? Did that end the conversation when Scarpino said he wouldn't lend him his gun?

A.—Yes, Ithink it did. I think the conversation then drifted to music.

Q.—When Allen said he had a razor and a rope did I understand that was with him?

A.—Yes, sir. They borrowed a rope on the way down. We met some people who were in the ditch and we borrowed the rope from a truck or something like that that was passing to get them out and he showed me the razor.

Q.—He showed you the razor?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Had it on his person?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You saw it that night?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Have you ever seen it on any other occasion?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—Anything further, Mrs. Lock?

A.—When my husband spoke about meeting him on Tuesday he forgot to say the dress I had on, the one which I have on, the second time I have worn it, that I wasn't sure it was even around the bottom and he told me to walk a little ways ahead of him so he could see. I walked that little ways, then I walked back to meet him. Did I say Wednesday?

Q.—Tuesday, I think, you said.

A.—That was Tuesday.

Q.—Anything else Mrs. Lock? The court was cleared for your benefit, Mrs. Lock. A coroner's inquest can either be held publicly or privately and for your benefit I thought this evening we could have your last evidence privately?

A.—On the first time, I think it was a week ago Friday that the inquest began?

Q.—A week ago, on the 20th.

A.—I was very nervous that evening and there was one question you asked I misunderstood.

Q.—What question was that?

A.—You asked me I think this question. Was this matter ever mentioned before and I asked you "which matter."

Q.—Question 499? Yes, Mrs. Lock you asked which matter. My question was: "Was this matter never mentioned before Mrs. Lock by Mr. Allen?" You answered "Which matter." Question 500, "The matter which he mentioned which eventually from his evidence caused him to commit suicide?"

A.—I didn't pay very much attention to the question, it was my first time in court and I was rather nervous and I—the way I understood the question was that did he ever speak of suicide before, that evidently was not your meaning.

Q.—Well, yes, that was according to the evidence here, Mrs. Lock. I said the matter which he mentioned which evidently from your evidence caused him to commit suicide. From your evidence therefore he must have referred to the matter leading up to this matter, the conversation leading up. Question 499, "Was this matter never mentioned before, Mrs. Lock, by Mr. Allen?" I presume I referred to the matter he couldn't live without seeing or could he come again to see you.

A.—Well, the way I answered was did he ever speak of suicide, you evidently meant speaking of any affection of any—

Q.—The matter which you mentioned?

A.—I didn't mean that. He never mentioned that before.

Q.—He never mentioned it before that night?

A.—No, sir. I think it was only fair to every one concerned. I am sure Mrs. Allen would be glad to hear that Mr. Allen was always a gentleman in my presence.

Mr. Herchmer then addressed the jury for a considerable time.

The jury then retired and about 1.30 a.m. brought in the following verdict:

We, your jury empannelled to inquire into the death of Wm. Allen find that the said Wm. Allen came to his death by a bullet wound through the brain from a revolver fired by his own hand, on the evening of September 18, 1918, about 7.30 o'clock, at the residence of J. H. Lock, situate on Victoria avenue, Lot 8, Block 3, in the City of Fernie.

ELKO NOTES

(By Fred Roo)

Count Von Hoffenheimer and Baron Weiner Snicklefritz registered in Elko last week taking views of the mountain scenery. If our old college chum R. F. Green, M.P., had his way men with names like that would be working on the government road under guard.

Fred Roo was down in Roosville Valley and Flagstone all last week buying up Irish apples, two handled pumpkns and double yolked eggs, besides doing a little hunting and bringing home the tenderloins, and under those conditions if you can't be cheerful be absent.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Sawyer and two daughtrs, of Kingsgate, B.C., passed through Elko for Alberta.

Billy McKay, the well known host of the Waldo hotel, famous for its chicken dinners, had a very narrow escape from being killed by going over a fifty foot bank on the Mott grade two miles from Elko. Mr. McKay was bringing up his car to the Elko automobile works for repairs. Some of his kiddies wanted to come with him but he was not sure that he would be able to make the trip so refused their request. The car went fairly well until he got to the cribbing up the grade, when the spark plugs got in the diddler and the steering gear got tangled up with the doodle-em-cumfunkey and Billy lost control of the car and it took a header over the embankment. Bill in telling of the accident in Elko said that his hard boiled hat saved his granite upper stope from being smashed and saved his life, which proves that it is better to be born lucky than rich.

Jim Thistlebeak says: "If you are so sad that you cannot laugh at something then laugh at nothing. "Laugh and the world," you know the rest. An ounce of smiles will give you more real life than seven tons of melancholy. Cheerfulness and prosperity go hand in hand. Make fun; don't always buy it. You can cure disease and kill the Huns with laughter. Practice telling a good funny story. Good cheer attracts good luck, but for God's sake don't stop advertising. Good advertising is like a bank, pays big interest to depositors.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray G. Hirtz are visiting Flagstone and the Roosville valley for a few weeks before leaving for the coast, where they will reside in future.

Jim Thistlebeak says "the splendor of Elko 's scenery charms the senses with melody," and Fred Roo says that he sells the finest groceries in town.

We don't know Mabel, whether the chairman of the Canada Food Board is a baker by trade or not or whether he ever cooked in a logging camp but we do know that he is a good mixer.

Mr. and Mrs. Saunders (Mrs. E. B. Holbrook) of Travis, Alta., moved to Elko this week and will take up their residence in the post office block.

G. A. Bonnallie, manager of the Bank of Commerce, and wife, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Stewart, of Fernie, to a motor trip to Roosville, Flagstone and Elko last week.

Jim Thistlebeak says he don't give a hang whether Casey or some other fellow is at the bat. His attention is focused upon the strikes the Allies are making towards Berlin, the capital of the Great Unwashed.

Jang Yang, proprietor of the Rapid Fire Restaurant, Elko, was hauled up before the beak and fined $100 for having 10 bottles of submarine purple whiffs and coffin paint in his possession, last week. A. Dryden (The Hawkshaw) of Waldo, assisted the human ferret in making the seizure.

Alexander Sharp, mining engineer, of Vancouver, was here looking over the Burton Copper Mine and the result is that the work starts up again. The goods are there and they will begin shipping them to the Trail smelter at an early date. O. C. Thompson, of Calgary, will have charge of the work.

Like the contemptible little army, the American doughboys are opening the eyes of the Crazy Kaiser and keeping General Von Bunk busy at home hoodwinking the poor ignorant people. War is an ugly thing but a German peace would be uglier. We will now sing the Merseillaise.

Mr. and Mrs. Wellington (no relation of the Duke of that name) Lethbridge, motored to Elko this week and have rented rooms at the Cumberland Mansions, Riverside Park.

SMOKER AND PRESENTATION

A very enjoyable smoker was held on Tuesday, Sept. 25, in the Catholic church hall, when the firebosses and other officials of the C. N. P. Coal Co. employed at Coal Creek met to present Fireboss Heanny with some small token to show the esteem in which he was held by his fellow workers, on his leaving for the Nicola Valley field on account of ill health. The presentation consisted of a 400 day clock and a gold chain. R. Phillips was the chairman and spoke in glowing terms of the high esteem in which Mr. Heanny is held by all. Mr. McNay, pit boss, was called upon to make the presentation and said he had known Mr. Heanny quite a long time and had always found him one of the best and it gave him great pleasure to hand over to him these small tokens and hoped that he would prize them not for their value but for the esteem in which he was held and that in the future he would be able to remember when he saw them the many friends he had in Fernie and Coal Creek. Mr. Heanny responded and thanked them for the gifts and the hearty reception they had given him and said he would never forget the many happy times he had spent amongst them and would always be able to look back with pleasure at the time spent at Coal Creek and Fernie.

Songs were sung by Messrs. Lancaster, Morgan, Duncan and others, and a recitation given by Mr. Hynds. Selections were given on the flute by Mr. Shenfield and on the concertina by Mr. Brown. Refreshments were served during the evening, and it was a delight to see some of the older men indulging in the light fantastic till nearly the wee small hours.

WILSON'S PEACE PRINCIPLES

In laying down the principles of peace as he sees them, President Wilson has done a service to the Allied cause. He has stated clearly enough the general position and the basis on which a concert of nations in future must operate.

But in some respects he will hardly carry with him the Allied nations. For example, in the matter of an economic boycott.

The Allies at the Paris Economic Conference agreed on economic preference between themselves for the purpose of excluding German trade from their borders. That agreement still stands. The Imperial War Cabinet also has agreed on the denial to Germany of the raw products of the British Empire. This is a highly effective economic boycott.

France, we may be sure, and Belgium will be anxious to reserve the right to themselves to exclude German trade from their borders and to deny to Germany the mineral wealth under their control—France, particularly that of a recovered and re-established Alsace-Lorraine.

Here again it would seem that the action of the Allies conflicts with the principles the President seeks to have established.

The matter of the formation of a League of Nations at the Peace Conference, and not after, is also a thorny one. Premier Clemenceau, it is no secret, does not think a League of Nations can be formed for a long time to come, and while the principle is approved in Britain even Mr. Asquith holds it must be a growth rather than an immediately possible achievement.—Vancouver World.

FRENCH WAR DOGS

Not every one realizes the important place which dogs are taking in this war. Of course, the Germans began training dogs for war uses many years ago, but the French did nothing in that line for two years after war had begun. They now have 18,000 dogs trained or in training. These are cared for by the Blue Cross, which, at the request of the French Government, has attached a dog hospital to all the Blue Cross base hospitals in France where war horses are treated. All dogs named by the French army are received at these bases, disinfected and quarantined. They are then assigned for duty or training.

Terriers are used to free the trenches of rats, and the larger dogs are used for patrol work, to police prisoners, as first aids to ambulances to carry appliances and water, to seek out wounded men in shell holes and out-of-the-way places. It is said that Samoyede dogs have actually saved the guns to which they were harnessed; they carry shell, and even draw sleighs and light transport. Perhaps most important of all are the messenger dogs, which can travel where men cannot go, and exceed any other messenger except the pigeon in speed. They travel through the barrage, making 23 or 24 miles an hour, and are, literally, "faithful unto death," striving even when wounded to perform their allotted task. No one would question for an instant the fine appreciation which has caused the French Government to "mention" its dogs in despatches.

So far, over 1,000 French dogs have been treated at the hospitals. All operations on dogs and horses are performed under anaesthetics by trained veterinarians. The town of Mossley lately presented to Lady Smith-Dorrien, president of the Blue Cross fund, a cheque for £1,050, which is the first instalment of its subscription towards the fine work. Mossley is a town of only 8,000 inhabitants.

LAND SETTLEMENT BOARD PAY VISIT TO FERNIE

A committee of Gladstone Local has asked us to publish the following:

The government scheme of land settlement has at last made itself manifest in this district and the town was favored with a visit from Chas. R. Ward, formerly of Cranbrook, and Mr. DeHardt, of Kelowna, both members of the land settlement board, with a view to the establishment of a land settlement area in this district. A. I. Fisher has favorably expressed himself as being in favor of such a scheme and owing to his efforts this district has been chosen for the position of the first settlement area in the upper country.

On arrival in town Mr. Fisher at once appraised Gladstone local and asked Secretary Martin if the local would care to send a delegation to give the miners' views with regard to land settlement, which later on was done so that on Wednesday evening at 9 o'clock a strong delegation from the local met the members of the board at the office of Lawe & Fisher.

Mr. Ward, who is a very careful and deliberate talker, outlined the government scheme. He said that the board to facilitate production of food stuffs, will seek to approach the present holders of the land "who we presume are at present holding it out of use," and ask them to place the same area under the board of administration, if the price can be agreed upon. If the holder of the land will not negotiate with the board then the owner is liable to be taxed to the value he places on the land so that in this district when lands have been held by them for speculation purposes at prices sometimes as high as $100 per acre the taxation would ultimately amount to 100 per cent of its value, the estimated effect would be that the owner would be forced to disgorge.

The board at present have a strip of land amounting to 2500 acres in sight and on completion of negotiations will place it for settlement in parcels to suit.

There was a prolonged discussion on what the price should be for such land so that it would meet conditions and for the first time the board got an idea of values, the land under discussion being valued at $10 per acre.

On Thursday morning a delegation accompanied Mr. DeHardt and Mr. Ward to view the bench land east of the coke ovens and the big stretch of land in the Coal Creek bottom, extending from the road at the brewery to benches above, when a plan was outlined for the attainment of said land with a view to settlement, such land to be cut up into parcels of five acres.

The miners on being asked what price should be paid for such land gave a price of $10, which, on the price of clearing, would make the land eventually cost from $100 per acre up. Mr. DeHardt marvelled at the possibilities of the Coal Creek land and the prospect of using the whole of the section, cut up into small holdings, seems very alluring.

The miners thought it would add considerably to the reduction of the high cost of living and besides being so close to the train service, would itself soon secure enough applicants for the proposed holdings.

The Secretary of Gladstone Local union wishes anyone who would wish to locate on such land, on conditions outlined above, to at once communicate with the local, when the entire list will be forwarded to the land settlement board.

CITY FATHERS HOLD SESSION

On the occasion of the regular council meeting last night a full attendance was recored with the exception of Ald. Jackson, who is absent from the city.

The minutes of the previous meeting were O.K.'d and then a delegation from the Fernie Poultry and Pet Stock Association comprised of F. Brindley and Robt. Jones, made an appeal for a grant to the association for the forthcoming District Poultry Show, to be held in December. They were granted $100, which was the same amount as the former donation of two years ago.

The Provincial Secretary advised the civic authorities regarding the recent order in council which gives authority to close schools, theatres, etc., in case of an outbreak of Spanish influenza, and requested information as to whether any cases had been reported here. So far none have developed and the department was advised accordingly. However, should the disease become prevalent here, immediate steps to suppress the same will be taken.

Regarding the Hesketh children, they will be formally committed by the magistrate to the provincial home which step it is expected will result in the children being removed from the city's custody more promptly than under the present arrangement.

The Controller of the Water Rights Branch advised the city regarding its status with respect to the rights for power purposes on Lizard Creek. In this connection the city clerk announced that while in Vancouver recently he had called upon the officer in charge of the Dominion Hydrographic Survey Branch relative to the capabilities of power development from Fairy Creek and Lizard Creek with the result that that branch had had installed yesterday on the respective creeks, meters from which can be ascertained the amount these creeks might be expected to develop. The installation of the meters is without any charge to the city, and all they are requested to do is to take the readings from which the conditions at different periods of the year will be definitely ascertained.

The Union of Canadian Municipalities submitted an account for $15 to cover the city's membership fee to that organization. It was filed.

An antiquated account and contra account with the provincial government relative to certain men committed to the provincial home, which has been a source of annoyance for nearly five years, was at last cleared up by the city accepting a compromise settlement of $41.18 as its share due from the government.

A communication from the Provincial Chairman of the Victory Loan campaign was received and will be dealt with further at the next meeting when the local organization has been perfected.

Fred G. Perry submitted an application, approved by the police commission, to be appointed as official court stenographer for the corporation. The council unanimously sanctioned the appointment and in future Mr. Perry will report all inquiries, inquests, preliminary hearings and other work of the city wherein the services of a court reporter are required. No retaining fee is paid but the services performed will be paid for at the regular provincial tariff rates.

The Canadian Pacific Railway made claim for refund for water consumption which formerly had been computed on the basis of American or wine measure gallons, contending this should have been charged on the basis of imperial gallons. They were allowed a refund of $48.56, but the meter which measures the quantity of water used has recently been installed with imperial gallon dials so that this will not occur again.

The quarterly report of the auditor was received and everything was found in order with the exception of a receipt for $5 for dog tax, issued by the late chief of police, and for which the city treasurer had received no cash. The matter has been in dispute for some little time but the council felt that it should be cleared up and as the ex-chief was responsible he must pay the amount owing. He will be notified to this effect.

With regard to water rates for garages, public and private, after some discussion it was decided to charge the public garages on the basis of floor space, but it was not deemed justifiable to charge private car owners for water unless they had a fixture in their garages, so the bylaw will not be amended to cover such cases.

The city electrician made application for an increase in salary. This was referred to the water and light committee to bring in a report at the next council meeting.

The resignation of H. Clift, power house engineer, was received and accepted. Nine applications were received in response to advertisements. They were: D. Smith, Vancouver, salarry $150 and transportation to this city; Chas. Sayle, Coal Creek, $150; Geo. Findlay, James Island, $200; Edwin Robson, Cranbrook, no salary stated; A. G. Palmer, Vancouver, $250; F. R. Lawes, Fernie, $215; W. Neil Bee, Kerrisdale, no salary stated. After scrutinizing the applications and qualifications of the applicants carefully, on motion of Hunter and Dicken the appointment was given to D. Smith, of Vancouver, at a salary of $150 per month and his transportation from Vancouver to Fernie. A telegram was dispatched to him requesting that he immediately report for duty, as Mr. Clift will sever his connection with the city on Oct. 17.

The city engineer's report was received and accepted.

The question of certain accounts in connection with labor and material supplied at the Park for the Labor Day celebration was considered and after some little discussion it was decided to pay an account of J. Andre amounting to $19 for poles supplied and also pay any other accounts up to an amount not exceeding $100.00. By the payment of these accounts the ownership of the material supplied is vested in the city.

Provincial Electrical Inspector Muirhead directed a long report to the city recommending several changes and the installation of safety appliances at the power house and along certain power lines in the city. Ald. Dicken estimated that these changes would cost approximately $200. He also brought to the attention of the council the question of the damaged condition of one of the power house walls on account of the boiler expansion. This will be immediately repaired and with regard to the suggested alterations by the provincial inspector this is left with the committee to perform the necessary work when it is deemed advisable.

An application through the city electrician from the Elk Lumber Co. for power supply to operate the planing mill was gone into at some length. The cost of extending the line and cost of supplying this power consumed was tentatively fixed. However, the water and light committee will confer with the management of the Elk and endeavor to conclude the matter to the mutual satisfaction of both parties.

A concession with regard to water rates charged the property of Chas. Walde, known as the Smith Boarding House, when depressed conditions prevailed after the outbreak of the war, by which the householder had been permitted to pay $2.25 per month instead of the regular rate of $4.25, was mentioned to the council. Mr. Walde claims that even at present the $2.25 rate is all that can reasonably be afforded to be paid, but the $4.25 was re-established so fast the air fairly sizzled, and the caustic remarks regarding granting such a concession regardless of a bylaw to the contrary were accepted as appropriate.

The owner of Lot 1, Block 57 it was announced had never complied with the water bylaw and was using water from a well. He will be notified to connect up forthwith, failing which a prosecution will follow.

A request from P. Distefano asking to be relieved of the balance of claim due for transportation of his wife to New Westminster was disallowed and the city will insist upon full settlement but will be lenient with regard to terms.

The city clerk submitted a report giving a resume of the work transacted at the B.C. Municipalities Association convention held in Penticton recently, at which he was representative. The report will appear in our next issue.

Sufficient Butter In Canada

The Canada Food Board has commandered all the creamery butter made during October and up to Nov. 9th, to be shipped to Great Britain and her Allies.

While Canadians are accustomed to two pounds of creamery butter per person per month, or 8 ounces per week per person, the people of Great Britain at the present time are confined to 2 ounces per week per person, and 2ounces of butter over there includes a large proportion of oleomargarine.

BUSY ON VICTORY LOAN

The local Victory Loan campaign is under way. J. D. Kearns, of Vancouver, Provincial Organizer, and R. D. Mitchell, of Rossland, organizer for the mining district of the interior, addressed a meeting of business men in the city hall on Tuesday evening. The meeting was opened by the Mayor, who called upon Mr. Kearns to explain the details of the coming campaign. He spoke at some length explaining that the government was asking for five hundred million and that Fernie would be expected to raise $500,000 of this amount. Fernie had excelled herself in the first loan, but he believed she could do still better. He then asked the meeting to appoint a good live chairman and committee to take charge of the campaign.

E. K. Stewart was selected by the meeting for the important position of chairman of the committee and Mr. A. Klauer as vice-chairman. Mr. Stewart was also authorized to pick the entire committee, his first selection for Secretary being Alan Graham, who did such good work in the last campaign. The balance of the committee has not yet been completed, although the following gentlemen have been named as convenors of different committees:

Publicity—M. A. Kastner.

Tabulating and Indexing — R. M. Young.

News and Press—J. R. Wallace.

Canvassing—Mayor Thomson.

Special Canvassing Committee—T. Uphill.

Revising and Checking—F. C. Lawe

The balance of the committees will be chosen in a few days and when the literature for the big drive arrives they will start the campaign with a rush. We understand the committee will go after this money on the same lines as they canvas across the line. No man or woman who has money will be overlooked and no excuses will be taken for refusal. The country needs the money and the people are expected to produce it.

C.S.E.T. SPORTS

The annual C.S.E.T. sports will be held on Saturday, Oct. 19, at the Park. C.S.E.T. boys will include those who are already members of the organization and those who intend to become members.

The boys will be divided into three classes and the basis will be weight as follows:

Senior—125 lbs. and over.

Intermediates—100 to 124 lbs. inclusive.

Junior—Under 100 lbs.

Boys who intend entering for the sports must produce a dated certificate of weight, signed by the person who weighed them and it should be their weight in running outfit. Entries for the sports will be received up to the time of the starting of the various races and the fees will be: For Seniors, 15c each entry; Intermediates and Juniors, 10c each entry.

The Junior class races will take place in the morning and will commence at 10 a.m. Intermediate and Senior will commence at 2 p.m. There will be a church championship which will be decided by the highest aggregate of points made in all classes.

Subjoined is the program of events for all classes:

Standing Broad Jump.
100 Yards Race.
220 Yards Race.
440 Yards Race.
One-half Mile Race.
Standing Hop, Step and Jump.
Running High Jump.

In the Senior Class there will be a pole vault instead of the 440 yards race.

For any further information apply to Rev. F. Yolland or Harold Wilson.

THINGS WE'D LIKE TO KNOW

Why Joe Jordan packs a full sized kitchen range with him when he goes on a hunting expedition.

Why Harry Martin and his friends did not pick out the Coal Co. lawn when they were selecting land for settlement at ten plunks per acre, and why that arbitrary price of ten per when they are allowed to set the amount—ten cents an acre would be so much easier to pay.

If Major G. G. Moffatt will be the soldiers' candidate at the next election.

Why no local effort was made to keep the internment camp at Morrissey.

Why Potter had not a word to say on Sunday when the International Representative told him and his followers where they were heading.

If the trial of the single shift could not have been secured at a less cost than $200 per man, and a dead loss to the country of many thousands of tons of coal. It might have taken longer but the same result could have been secured without the loss of a dollar.

Why Harry Martin and his half dozen noisy boys are always trying to hide behind the skirts of alleged alien enemies.

Archie Leitch, driving a seven passenger car, collided with a Swift-Canadian Ford on the Elko hill last evening. The Ford was put out of business and the big car badly damaged.

UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER

Bulgaria has surrendered to the allies unconditionally, in signing an armistice. With typical impudence her rulers intimated their willingness to accept President Wilson's conditions of peace. But we are not at war with Bulgaria and she has nothing to do with those conditions at present or prospectively, except as affecting the disposal of small nations at the general peace conference. The proposal was intended to divide American opinion but was altogether too transparent.

Bulgaria, therefore, surrendered not to us, but to those powers to whom she threw down the gage of battle when she accepted German bribes. It is characteristic of the kaiser that his inducements are always something in the possession of another. Bulgaria's bribe was no exception. To quote a well known phrase of Lord Salisbury's about the British relations with Turkey in 1878, Bulgaria put her money on the wrong horse.

What does she secure by surrender? Well, the allies will protect her, her cities, villages and her people, against the vengeance of the outraged Serbians. Her country will be occupied and all railroad communication will be seized. But the occupation will be peaceful, unless Germany chooses to place Bulgaria in the category of her enemies. This would mean, in addition to the grave condition on the western front, a German campaign of conquest in the desperate effort to prevent the inevitable isolation of the Turk.

But this isolation is assured. Occupation of Bulgaria by the allies not only cuts off German reinforcements destined for Mesopotamia and Palestine. It prevents the retreat of those Germans who have not been captured by General Allenby and the other commanders in Asia Minor. It is difficult to see how the Turk can do anything but surrender, and the occupation of Constantinople by the allied forces would set an end once and for all to the German dreams of conquest in the east. It is almost amusing to remember how they included Egypt, the canal, the Persian gulf and even India itself.

Czar Ferdinand is a shifty scoundrel, prepared to betray anybody if he is not watched. But the allies have no illusions about him, and he in turn has no illusions about his German master. He comes out of the war with the record of having betrayed both sides. He will not be allowed to do so again.—Wall Street Journal.

TANKS' GREAT PART IN SOMME FIGHTING

Writing of the recent fighting on the Somme the London Times' correspondent says that one tank attacked a train on the railway and set it on fire and wrecked it. Another found a certain village unwakened to the presence of danger and went through the streets shooting through the windows at one house and finding an officer's mess at a meal. Yet another, near Framerville, found itself among hutments, which it discovered to be a corps headquarters. It shot down some corps staff officers and others, and poured bullets into the huts. Then it heard that some part of the staff had escaped along the road toward Peronne, so started after them and hunted them along the road, scattering them into the woods. How many of the corps staff were killed, or what happened to the corps commander, is not known.

On the right of the British army liaison with the French has been perfect throughout, and in the advance the two forces have co-operated in every movement. At one point the French had a difficulty with a village which was heavily defended by machine guns, so they sent to borrow some tanks. Five tanks went down, and on arrival they found machine guns firing from the upper storeys of the houses. Ordinary houses in French villages are not solid in construction, but are built chiefly of timber and plaster, and when the tanks came up and saw the fire coming from the upper windows they simply put their noses down and butted into the houses. They took ten houses in succession this way, tumbling walls and roof, machine guns and gunners all together about their own ears, and coming out after each disappearance as white as millers and with their bodies wreathed in joists and other architectural details. Then the French infantry went in and finished the job. One tank going along saw a train moving on the railway and made good shooting at the engine and stalling the train. The train was hauling one of the large calibre high velocity guns and was loaded with ammunition.

In the fighting north of the Somme a tank which had lost its direction came into our lines near Treux, and was asked by our men there to perform a certain errand to an advanced post, which it did. When it arrived there the officer commanding pointed out a German trench some distance ahead and asked the tank commander if he could help them take it, as the garrison post was very small for the attempt alone. The tank commander agreed, if he could have 12 infantrymen to go with him. A dozen men were furnished and out they went, and when they reached the trench and ran over the first machine gun the rest of the German garrison all poured out with their hands in the air, and the tank and the 12 men, all unwounded, escorted back seven officers and more than 200 prisoners.

In a wood south-east of Marcelcave cavalry early in the battle were held up by machine guns, so some of our light tanks hurried off making a detour round the wood and closing in from the farther side. The Germans in the wood tried to escape by running across the open, when the cavalry got their chance and charged into them with sabres until hands began to go up and 700 prisoners were taken. Tanks and airplanes have co-operated in attacking columns of transport on roads far ahead of the infantry and at many places the arrival of tanks or armored cars was the first intimation the enemy had of the extent of the British advance. Most useful of all, however, has been the use of tanks with innumerable small defensive positions scattered all over the battlefields. Here, again and again, you can seek the track of a tank encircling a position, with probably one machine gun crushed by it and the bodies of the crew close by.

The saving in man power effected by the tanks in circumventing or crushing these pests before the infrantry came on cannot be estimated. All troops who co-operate with tanks are enthusiastic in their praise. Altogether the tanks have had a tremendous time, and the strain of the long-continued work on the crews has been very great. Nonetheless, the tanks are still co-operating in the advance, and took part in the recent fighting, when the French and British troops together won the high ground spoken of by Damery and Goyencourt.

WHAT THE GERMAN WORKERS WANT

At this time when the German Socialists are trying to humbug the world by putting forth a policy of peace through the renunciation of the greedy plans of the Pan-Germans, it is highly opportune to make this quotation from Vorwaerts, date March 3, 1918: "These are wishes and hopes which extend very far; Germany absolutely triumphant over a world irreparably conquered, dictating terms of peace in the west as she has dictated them in the east. The German working class has not only desired for its Fatherland its present military triumph, but has materially assisted in securing it."—Manitoba Free Press.

Correct style worn by well dressed young men in all localities. Lace boot—medium narrow recede toe, low heel—made in black, tan or patent calf. Price, $7.00 to $10.00.

Style—Plus Service at a Fair Price

THE style illustrated above is one that is largely preferred by Canadian business men—especially young men. It has the medium long vamp and narrow, somewhat pointed toe which gives the foot a slim and "dressy" appearance, without being extreme in style. Those who like this type of shoe will find it thoroughly satisfactory in fitting qualities and a comfortable easy shoe to walk in.

This style can be obtained in several grades of black and tan. The price range—$7 to $10—considering the present leather market, is extremely moderate.

Next spring a shoe of the same wearing qualities will cost from ten to twenty per cent more. It would cost more now except for the fact that the resources of this company enable us to cover our needs well in advance.

What Will Relieve Kidney or Bladder Troubles

This is a question that thousands of people have asked; and a question that has been answered for them by the practical demonstrations of Gin Pills.

Read these testimonials and realize the satisfaction that thousands of people have derived and from the relief they have been given by taking the same, and expressing their gratitude for Gin Pills.

Mrs. B. Walters, of Savona, B.C., writes:—

"I advise people who have not used Gin Pills to try them, as Gin Pills are within the means of rich and poor. I have been troubled for years with weak kidneys, and one box of Gin Pills cured me. I recommend them as an absolute and reliable cure."

Mrs. Butler, of Vancouver, sends this message:—

"I think it my duty to write and tell you that I think Gin Pills a sure cure for kidney trouble. I suffered much with my kidneys until I took Gin Pills; now I would not be without them in my home."

Can you have any doubt that Gin Pills have accomplished such wonderful results? If you have—you need not spend a cent on them until you have tried a sample box free. THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a small bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

SYNOPSIS OF LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

MOUNTED POLICE WERE MIRACLE MEN

The following eulogy of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police appeared recently in the New York Sun:

"Canada's scarlet riders are off to the war. With them is lost one of the few remaining links with the romantic past of the Canadian west. The Royal Northwest Mounted Police have been permitted to enlist as a body to "get the kaiser," and it is unlikely that the old organization will be revived after the war. For "the old order changeth, giving place to new," and there is no longer the old imperative need for the services of this wonderful capable body of men. The Canadian west has grown up.

"They always get their man." For more than forty years this has been said in the Canadian west of the Canadian "Mounties." Not by the men themselves, for they have the proverbial modesty of the really brave. Not in the dry and laconic official reports which give scarcely a hint of the stirring romantic stories of which they are the uninteresting graveyard. But it has been said by the early settlers who owed to the mounted police their immunity from raids by Indians and bad men.

It has been the unwilling tribute of the Indians and the law-breaking element among the whites. If not literally true, it has for so long been so nearly true that the saying many years ago became a proverb among Canadians. "They always get their man." Therefore if their be any truth in proverbs let the kaiser beware! The "Mounties" are on his trail!

It was not until the Spring of this year that permission was given the "Mounties" to enlist for service. The Canadian government was loth to lose their services at home; and, moreover, there was little demand for cavalry in France. But many a scarlet rider deserted that he might join an infantry battalion, and in many instances the authorities winked at the offense.

Officers and men felt that the historic force had passed its years of usefulness in Canada, that nothing needed now, and constant pressure more than the provincial police was extended at Ottawa to secure permission for the riders of the plains to enlist as a body for service in the great adventure overseas. In April that permission was given.

As there was less than six hundred men on the roll of the force, permission was also given to recruit to the full strength of the battalion. So the call went forth for men who could shoot and ride, and within a few days applications had to be refused. Such is the glamor of connection with this famous force that a cavalry brigade of "Mountain" could be recruited in the Canadian West in a month. And this may yet be done.

No adequate history of this famous force will ever be written. The material for such history has passed away with the men who won for the mounted police their merited fame thirty to forty years ago. But some day will surely arise a writer who can give life to the dry bones of the annual official reports and will find there the romantic material for stories whose life and popularity will not be fleeting.

In the early seventies the newly-formed Canadian federation became ambitious to surpass in area its big and expanding neighbor to the south. The Northwestern prairies and British Columbia were added to the new Dominion. A new territory of nearly 2,000,000 square miles had to be governed and policed.

It was at that time that Uncle Sam was engaged in a prolonged and rather acriminonious dispute with a citizen rejoicing in the picturesque name of Sitting Bull. That gentleman's Sioux relatives and retainers knew little of international boundary lines and cared less. When things became too hot for them south of the 49th parallel of latitude, they had an annoying habit of traveling north.

Their visits were not welcome; but what could be done about them? The white settlers were alarmed and Ottawa feared that 70,000 well behaved Canadian Indians might learn bad habits. There was also danger from the visits of enterprising American traders engaged in the smuggling of fire water.

So it was that Sir John A. Macdonald, the founder of the Canadian Confederation, established the Northwest Mounted Police. That life and property were safe in the pioneer days of the Canadian west, that serious crime was of infrequent occurrence, that Canadian Indians made little trouble for the settlers, that law was respected in those early days of the country, was due to the work of the little band of redcoats.

At first they were only 150 strong; for a short period they had slightly more than 1000 men; but for the greater part of their history they numbered less than 600 men. The state of Montana is immeasurably smaller than the territory under the care of the "Mounties." It has about the same number of Indians, belonging to the same tribes, as in the Canadian northwest. Yet, the smallest number of troops that the American government thought it safe to keep in that state in those days was 3500. Small wonder that the fame of the "Mounties" has gone round the world.

There is space for but one story to illustrate the methods by which the scarlet-coated riders of the plains ruled the turbulent red men.

Chiefs Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge objected to the building of the Canadian Pacific railway. At the head of a band of several hundred Crees they left their reservations and went on the warpath, determined to upset the plans of the railway builders.

Canada's first transcontinental had laid its steel more than half way across the prairies when these warlike chiefs encamped on the line of survey. Fire water and firearms they had in sufficient supply to make them dangerous. Construction stopped. Word was sent eastward.

Mounted Police headquarters at Regina telegraphed to the post at Maple Creek that the Indians must be made to move on. Two men, a sergeant and a constable, undertook the task.

They found Chief Pie-a-Pot and his braves belligerent and stubborn. The braves backed their ponies against the police horses, fired their guns in the air and refused to obey the order to move.

The sergeant pulled out his watch. "I'll give you fifteen minutes. If you don't go then, I shall force you to go."

Pie-a-Pot grunted and smoked his pipe. The fifteen minutes passed and nothing happened.

Five minutes later several things had happened. The sergeant and constable had advanced on the chief's tepee and kicked out the key pole. They did the same for the other tepees. They made a thorough job of it.

"Now move on and save us the trouble of moving you."

They moved on. The prestige of the force was such that very rarely did an Indian persist in open defiance. Behind these two "Mounties" was a band of scarlet-coated riders of whom it was said, "They always get their man."

There is some doubt whether the mounted police will be permitted when they go overseas, to retain their identity. It is said that they are to be broken up and used as reinforced drafts for other bodies of Canadian cavalry now on the western front. Such a fate would be a sad anti-climax to their long and gloriously romantic career.

The force has a history all its own. It has a reputation as a band of wonderful horsemen unsurpassed in any part of the world. If the military authorities have a spark of sentiment or imagination, they will permit these men to remain together, that they may add in France and Flanders to the laurels of their romantic and glorious force.

The whole North American continent knows something of the reputation and the history of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. On both sides of the international boundary line there are many who will follow with a special interest their exploits of the great war.

"They always get their man." Here's hoping they may get Kaiser Bill!

MUTUAL INTEREST OF LABOR AND CAPITAL

Labor and capital have a mutual interest, not an identical interest but at least a mutual interest, in securing the largest possible production with a given amount of labor. The more there is produced the more is to divide between capital and labor.

One great reason why the American wage worker has been able to maintain a higher standard of living than the standard of living of wage workers anywhere else in the world has been because of the fact that the American wage worker produces more than any other wage worker in the world, notwithstanding the much advertised efficiency of the German workmen.

If these people had succeeded in impressing upon the workers of the country that philosophhy of sabotage and striking upon the job, reducing production—if they had reduced production to the point that existed prior to the introduction of machinery — the only thing that would have resulted would have been a lowering of the standard of living of those who were doing the actual physical labor. In the old days, before the rebirth of the inventive genius, when everything was produced by hand, when there was a lower standard of production than could possibly come from any system of sabotage they could now introduce, there were still profits for the employer, but the workers had a very much lower standard of living.

TO CONTROL THE SALE OF GASOLINE

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—Fuel Controller Magrath announces that regulations have been approved by the governor general in order to control the wholesale and retail sale of gasoline in Canada. The regulations provide for the licensing of all persons who deal in gasoline in Canada and certain fees are prescribed based on the volume of gasoline sold during the previous year.

In cases where dealers fail to obey the provisions of the law the fuel controller has absolute power to cancel or suspend licenses without notice.

All persons who continue to deal in gasoline without making application for a permit to do so will be subject to a penalty of $50 for each day such business is conducted in contravention of the regulations.

Provision is also made for the keeping of certain sales records and retailers of gasoline are called upon to post in their places of business the wholesale as well as the retail cost of gasoline handled by them. One important provision of the regulations is that for the duration of the war the sale of gasoline on Sunday is absolutely prohibited. Profits are based on 10 per cent over the wholesale cost delivered. These regulations mark the first step toward bringing the control of the sale of gasoline under the same provision that is extended to the sale of coal and other fuels.

The fuel controller reports that inquiry at Washington elicits the information that "gasless" Sundays will be continued in the United States for another two or three weeks. The same policy will be followed in Canada.

CANADA HAS EXCEEDED OBJECTIVE

Canada has exceeded her objective! Some time ago, on the occasion of the late Lord Rhondda's last visit to America, a conference was held between the three modern Josephs — Rhondda, Hoover and Thomson. The wonderful Welshman, who has since laid down his life in the service, pointed out that the Allies in Europe would need a certain quantity of food from this side of the Atlantic in order to "carry on." The situation was carefully considered and a schedule was drawn up of what would be needed from Canada and the United States — so much wheat, so much beef, so much bacon, etc.

And Canada has passed her objective. She has supplied more than was asked of every kind of essential food; and is going to go on supplying more.

This satisfactory showing is due primarily to the spirit with which the great public of Canada has accepted the food restrictions. Directly, however, it can be credited to a hard-working branch of the hastily constructed machinery of war government which is known as the Canada Food Board.

Canada's first experience in a food controllership was not a particularly happy one and this was not in any sense the fault of the brilliant man who accepted the onerous post and struggled manfully with it. Hon. W. J. Hanna had no chance to make a success of the controllership for two reasons. The first was that he had no power; the second was that the people of Canada were in no mood to be controlled. The second was the real obstacle. The public, in fact, had the most perverse idea of what a food controller was for. They thought that he was appointed to make it easier for them, to keep down prices and insure a regular supply of everything and to generally add to the sleek comfort of the civilian population.

As a matter of fact the duty of the food controller was, and is, quite different. It was summed up with characteristic terseness by Mr. Thomson in the course of a conversation with the writer the other day.

"We're supposed to keep the Canadian people out of the trough," he said.

And that is what it amounts to. The Canada Food Board strives to save enough food here to meet the deficiency in the allied countries in Europe. If that is accomplished nothing else matters. Make things easier for the housewife by fixing the prices of foodstuffs? It would be nice—but what counts after all is sending forward a uniform supply to our needy allies overseas. As a plain matter of fact it is not the duty of the food board to make things easier for the people, but to make things harder—to educate, to inspire, to insist on the production and conservation of food. The Canada food board is the buckle on the belt that Jack Canuck has voluntarily strapped around him.

The Canada food board has succeeded in its objective largely because the public has gradually come to see things in the proper light. The older clamor about prices has died down. The newspapers have stopped printing tables of figures to show that liver costs 2 1-2 cents a pound less in Talla hassee than it does in Toronto, and what is Mr. Food Controller going to do about it? The people of Canada have learned that the Food Controller is not a servant to minister to their wants, but a taskmaster, with powers to enforce a systematic patriotic abstinence.

BRITISH LIQUOR REFORMS

The transformation in the British liquor situation as a consequence of the war conditions is giving rise to hopes that the old evils of "heavy drinking" are gone forever. Lord D'Abernon, the chairman of the Control Board, declares: "It is recognized that the present system affords a basis for a permanent settlement of the drink question acceptable to all." If the question is being settled acceptably to all, including the United Kingdom Alliance, and the brewing interests, and the wage-earning masses, what is the system? It seems to be something like taking fangs out of a snake.

Before the war the British people's drink bill was $800,000,000 a year. It is now $1,200,000,000—twice as much as for bread, and as much as for meat. This does not look, on the surface, like good progress. But while $1,200,000,000 a year is spent now, the government gets in taxes about $750,000,000 of the amount. About 15,000,000 barrels a year of beer are made, instead of nearly 40,000,000, and the $450,000,000 going to "the trade" for the reduced quantity gives good profit, because so much water is allowed in the beer. The alcoholic content of the beer is now only a third of what it was. Two years ago the manufacture of whiskey was stopped. Under the regulations the strength of spirits now is weakened to 40 under proof, instead of the old standard of 22 degrees under proof. This dilution has abolished drunkenness among a large percentage of the drinkers. Excessive drinking has declined about 80 per cent. In fact, the Board has received direct complaints that "it costs an enormous sum now to get drunk."

This effort to put the British people, who have refused to accept prohibition, upon what is practically a light beer and wine basis, has accomplished wonderful industrial reforms. The workingmen would almost have rebelled if deprived of their beer, but their taste is being educated into the "2 per cent" class. If the system is continued after the war, as it must be if Britain is to retain its industrial position, we may see a real ending of the evils making "the trade" so notorious. — Mail and Empire.

A PIOUS TRIBUTE

The assertion that there is no more honorable or indispensable calling than that of the teacher is so thoroughly respectable that it will command the pious attention of any audience at any time. Just now, when men's minds are much occupied with thoughts of the tasks to be fulfilled after the war, it is being repeated more often, with more unction and with greater certainty of applause than ever before. Where two or three teachers are gathered together with a politician to address them the presentation of this rhetorical bouquet is among the inevitable things, as also is the fatuous approval with which it is re-echoed by the press and received by the general public.

Of all public bodies there is probably none which is better able than the school board to see and appreciate the work done by the teacher. School board generally command the services of citizens who are more capable and disinterested than those to be found in any other elective municipal body. The school board of the City of Victoria is doubtless no exception to this rule, and there is probably not one member of that body who would not give public expression in terms of most unexceptional orthodoxy, to his sense of the value and importance of the teacher's work. In view of this fact, then, it is both interesting and significant to note that the Victoria school bard, which in 1914 made a cut of 10 per cent in the salaries of its teaching staff, at a recent meeting debated a proposal to increase the salaries to the figure from which they were reduced soon after the outbreak of war. Last year, having regard to the increasing cost of living, the board restored one-half of the amount of the reduction made in 1914.

If the directorate of any private corporation, operated in the interest of "grasping capitalists," should reveal a like attitude in its relation with employees, it is probable that much public indignation would be excited; but the Victoria school board is not the directorate of a private corporation and there is no more honorable or indispensable calling than that of the teacher.—Winnipeg Free Press.

WALL STREET IN THE WAR

In the first three years of the war it was repeatedly and truthfully pointed out that the scions of families of wealth and nobility in Britain were doing their part to the full. The same can be said of young America. The sons of most of the wealthhy and of our leading families are either in the thick of the fray or getting there as rapidly as possible.

Gold stars already appear in Wall Street's flags. Moses Taylor of Kean Taylor & Co., lost his son, Moses Taylor, Jr., as has Rudolph Kissel, whose son, Gustav Kissel, was killed in France. Lieutenant Worthington Hine, son of President Hine of the First National Bank, was gassed at Verdun. Shepard Krech, son of President Krech of the Equitable Trust, now wears two service stripes. J. N. Wallace, president of the Central Union Trust Co., has one son in France and another in training. Percy R. Pyne is another capitalist who has two sons in service. W. F. Whitehouse, a member of the New York Stock Exchange, has been awarded the croix de guerre, while Alexander Dallas Bache Pratt, son of Dallas Bache Pratt, has been cited and is now a captain. Junius N. Morgan, son of J. P. Morgan, has been abroad in naval service since we entered the war, while R. Thornton Wilson of R. T. Wilson & Co., who is a nephew of the late John Jacob Astor, is in the army.

The list is a long one and these are only a few. But they show that the hearts of the capitalists are in this war. With their sons in the trenches or on the seas, their dread of the blue-coated messenger boys who deliver telegrams from the war and navy departments is as poignant as it is with the best or poorest paid laborer in the land.—Boston News Bureau.

DRUG ADDICTS

Judged by the report of a special investigating committee of the treasury department, headed by Representative Rainey of Illinois, the Harrison anti-narcotic act is a failure. The number of drug addicts in the United States is increasing. The sale of illicit drugs, such as morphine, cocaine and heroin, is increasing. Pedlers everywhere ply their nefarious trade, preying upon the unfortunates who have contracted the drug using habit. In New York city alone 8000 addicts have been reported as under treatment by physicians.

It is estimated that 1,500,000 persons in the United States are drug users, 1,000,000 of them known as such in their communities. This is a national disgrace and when it is realized that thousands of men in the military camps have been dismissed from the service for being drug victims, it is becoming a national peril. —New York Tribune.

Leon Trotzky's order to have the women of Kazan handed over to the tender mercies of the Bolsheviki Red Guard is sufficient to stamp the Bolsheviki government of Russia as a base and intolerable thing, and something which all civilized and enlightened peoples must unite in suppressing.—Calgary Herald.

DANGER LURKS IN EVERY ONE OF US

We Are As Full of Deadly Poisons As A Germ Laboratory.

AUTO-INTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Absolutely Prevents This Dangerous Condition.

The chief cause of poor health is our neglect of the bowels. Waste matter, instead of passing from the lower intestine regularly every day, is allowed to remain there, generating poisons which are absorbed by the blood.

In other words, a person who is habitually constipated, is poisoning himself. We know now that Auto-intoxication, due to non-action of the bowels, is directly responsible for serious Kidney and Bladder Troubles; that it upsets the Stomach, causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Sleeplessness; that chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Pain In The Back, are relieved as soon as the bowels become regular; and that Pimples, Rashes, Eczema and other Skin Affections disappear when "Fruit-a-tives" are taken to correct Constipation.

"Fruit-a-tives" will protect you against Auto-intoxication because this wonderful fruit medicine acts directly on all the eliminating organs.

GIRLS! LEMON JUICE IS A SKIN WHITENER

How to make a creamy beauty lotion for a few cents.

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, whitener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any drug store and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands.

WHAT THE VICTORY LOAN 1918 MEANS TO CANADA

The following paragraphs are taken from a pamphlet issued by the Dominion Publicity Committee Victory Loan, 1918, and are from the pen of E. R. Wood, brother of R. W. Wood, of this city:

The 1917 Victory Loan gave another lease of life to Canada.

One year has elapsed since we prepared to subscribe the first Victory Loan (our fourth war loan) issued in November, 1917. We then realized clearly, and for the first time, that Great Britain had reached the point at which she was compelled to borrow funds in the countries in which she is making her war purchases. This was, and is, an extremely important consideration for Canada, because our activities, prosperity and assistance in the war, depend almost entirely on our ability to market our factory and farm products in the United Kingdom.

When we were asked to subscribe the Victory Loan, we were enjoying what we may term the prosperity of war, due to the vast volume of orders placed in Canada by the United Kingdom. These war orders were, and are, the backbone of our general position.

We were faced also with certain results of the entry of the United States into the war. The most serious was the closing of that money market to our financial requirements. During 1915 and 1916 Canada was able to subscribe the greater part of its war loans, leaving a portion of them for subscription in the United States, which also financed a large part of our ordinary requirements. The new situation created the necessity not only of making Canada's 1917 Victory Loan an unqualified success but also of financing the provincial governments, municipal and corporation requirements, in addition to taking up maturing obligations in the United States. Those obligations in ordinary times would have been renewed in that country.

When the United States entered the war, in April, 1917, we were therefore faced with two important factors, namely, that Great Britain could not pay cash for her purchases in this country and that the United States could no longer help to finance Canada. That was the delicate and dangerous situation. The success of the Victory Loan met that situation completely.

The great business activity resulting from the issue, created additional funds for investment. In due course, it afforded sufficient surplus funds in our own country to finance, not only the requirements of war, but also credits for the United Kingdom and loans to our provincial governments and municipalities. During the first six months of 1918, Canadian investors, having taken the large Victory Loan of last fall, have also been able to finance our provinces and municipalities to the extent of $61,005,000, as mentioned above. In addition $50,000,000 of the 1917 Victory Bonds have changed ownership, being bought by bona fide investors from holders who found it necessary or desirable to lessen their holdings. This wide and continued interest in the Victory Bonds is no doubt due to some extent to the fact that the Canadian people have been educated by the Victory Loan campaign to invest their savings in Dominion Government Bonds.

It ought to be clearly understood that in approaching our next Victory Loan, we are faced with an equally serious situation. Only by the complete success of our 1918 Victory Loan can we continue to finance our requirements and carry on generally in the way we have during the past seven months.

The remarkable over-subscription of the 1917 Victory Loan completely changed the uncertain outlook which prevailed when the Loan was offered to the public. It gave a new impetus to agriculture, commerce and prosperity. It invigorated our effort in the war. It allowed, as already stated, our provincial governments, municipal, and other borrowers to finance their requirements at home. In short, it gave another lease of life to the activities of the Dominion.

As a collateral advantage to Canada, by reason of the development of capacity to manufacture in a large way, the United States have found it to their advantage to place orders for the production of munitions in Canada to an important extent; the United States supplied all the raw materials, Canada supplying the labor and experience. The benefit of this to the United States, as well as to Canada, will be understood from the fact that the 75 millimetre shell, which is the size for which the largest number of orders have been placed, both in the United States and Canada,were produced in Canada last month in a quantity in excess of the total production in the United States. The production of this size of shell in Canada now on account of the United States government is 255,000 per week and is steadily increasing.

There is not a legitimate reason why on this occasion, we cannot better the results of the previous Loan. We have done well in the past, both in the aggregate and per capita. At the same time, we realize that our position in Canada is a fortunate one, compared with that in European countries which are in the immediate zone of the war. No one can reasonably contend that we have yet achieved the best possible results in regard to the raising of War Loans. The evidence of better latent efforts are apparent on every hand. It remains only to organize and give effect to them.

Great Britain having borne a tremendous burden of war for four years, cannot be expected to finance her war purchases in this country. The United States is perfecting a vast war machine. Her financial resources are required for that purpose and to place credits at the disposal of the Allies. It is necessary, therefore, that Canada should raise the funds required, not only to carry on our normal and war activities, but also to advance substantial sums to Great Britain for her purchases here.

If satisfactory results are achieved with Canada's 1918 Victory Loan, the funds raised thereby will supply our needs for another year. This is an additional reason why every effort should be made to make the Loan an unqualified success.

REFUSAL TO REVERT IS A BAR TO LAND

The Soldiers' Settlement Board at Ottawa has sent a definition of the terms "honorable record," and "honorable discharge" and "on active service," the terms under which the eligibility of the returned men is determined to partaking in the soldiers' settlement.

Not all soldiers who have enlisted are entitled to the benefits under the act. This has been a stumbling block to the men, but the board has made its position plain in this respect and explains the terms, also the eligibility for benefits.

For instance an officer who went to England, which is considered an actual theatre of war, and who refused to revert in rank to go to France is not eligible.

The chief qualification is for the men to have seen service in France. Unless he has been dishonorably discharged this settles the question of his eligibility.

In the case of the officers several have made application for the benefits under the act but it was pointed out to them that unless they could show service in France either in rank or by reversion in rank their plea would not be entertained.

Where a man enlisted and was discharged in Canada, without contracting any disability while on service, that man is not entitled to the benefits under the act.

WILL OTTAWA SURRENDER?

Will Ottawa surrender unconditionally to the Bolsheviki element which has secured control of the miners' organization in the Crow's Nest coal field, and which defies the officers of the United Mine Workers, the authority of the British Columbia Department of Mines, and the express orders of the Director of Mines, who controls operations of this essential war industry on behalf of the Dominion government?

The miners in striking are breaking an agreement signed by their own duly appointed representatives. At a time when the coke produced in the Crow's Nest region is absolutely necessary to keep the smelters of the Granby and the Consolidated Mining & Smelting companies going and provide copper for the manufacture of munitions in hundreds of factories throughout Canada, the miners—who have heretofore worked a double shift, half of them being in the mines during the morning hours and half in the afternoon and early evening—desire that there shall be but one shift, and that all men employed shall work uniform hours. The change involves a most extensive rearrangement of the system of operating, but in view of the urgent need to secure a resumption of work the authorities offered to introduce the single shift system if a Board of Arbitration, which must give its decision within thirty days of the date of appointment, favored the change. The men refused this. Then it was proposed by the government representatives, the company consenting, that the single shift should be put into force at once, but that its continuance in operation should depend upon the decision of a Board of Arbitration. The representatives of the United Mine Workers' Union favored this solution, but again the men have rejected it.

It begins to look as if the purpose of this strike is not to secure better working conditions in the mines, but to cut off the supply of copper required by the munition factories of Canada. Does the government intend to leave the strikers in absolute control of the situation? Are the resources of the law exhausted? If they are the law will be held in contempt for a long time in the mountains of British Columbia. — Toronto Globe.

An Advertisement by Charles Dickens

CHARLES DICKENS is one of the world's great teachers. Here is what he has to say in one of his books:

"My other piece of advice, Copperfield," said Mr. Micawber, "you know. Annual income £20, annual expenditure £19.19.6—result, happiness. Annual income £20, annual expenditure £20.0.6—result, misery. The blossom is blighted, the leaf is withered, the God of Day goes down upon the dreary scene, and—and in short, you are forever floored. As I am."

The saving of a part of one's income was always a good policy.

Prudent men and women have always maintained a margin of saving.

But to-day we must go farther in our efforts to save than ever before.

To-day it is a matter of the gravest importance that each Canadian seek ways and means to economize by cutting down expenditures for unnecessary things, saving the money he spends on things he could do without, so that when the Nation needs to borrow money he will be in a position to do his full duty.

There is war-shortening work waiting for every dollar that can be saved.

IF Charles Dickens were writing to Canadians to-day he would probably give us advice to this effect.

"My other piece of advice, Canadians, you know. No matter what percentage of your annual income you have previously saved, your efforts to-day should be to save more. The advantage of so doing is threefold. By the practice of economy you conserve the material and labor which must be devoted to the grim task before us; you cultivate the priceless habit of thrift; you gather more and more money to lend to the Nation for the prosecution of the war to a quick and certain Victory."

"CASCARETS" WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—Take Cascarets tonight.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

SOUR, ACID STOMACHS, GASES OR INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" neutralizes excessive acid in stomach, relieving dyspepsia, heartburn and distress at once.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress, due to acidity, will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest stomach sweetener in the whole world, and besides it is harmless. Put an end to stomach distress at once by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder caused by fermentation due to excessive acids in stomach.

AN APPEAL

SOLDIERS XMAS SOCKS

Money donations towards the soldiers Xmas socks are earnestly solicited by the I.O.D.E. As the socks can be more uniformly filled by having the contents of each the same, it would be more convenient for the I. O. D. E. to receive the money to buy what they know to be the most acceptable to the men in the trenches. The money should be sent to either Mrs. G. G. Moffatt, Regent, or Mrs. A. B. Trites, Secretary.

Already received—Miss B. Winnett, $5.00.

Small spice, mustard, cocoa or baking powder tins are urgently needed for packing candy, gum, etc., to be left in the Red Cross rooms; also names and addresses of men overseas.

SOUVENIRS FROM FRANCE

Mrs. Knowles brought to this office a number of souvenirs which she has received from France— a smoking stand and aeroplane made by her husband, Jos. Knowles, and a helmet made by her son, Bugler Sheridan. These are exceptionally well executed and are made entirely from shells, large and small. Mrs. Knowles has two sons still in France, and another son was killed, as the following clipping from an old country paper will show:

Mrs. Sheridan, of 5 Albert-place, off Dunkinfield-st., Leigh, has received an official intimation that her husband, Cpl. J. Wm. Sheridan, of the York and Lancashire regiment, who was reported wounded and missing on Oct. 11, 1917, is now presumed to have been killed in France on that date. Corpl. Sheridan, who enlisted in the Northumberland Fusiliers at the outbreak of the war, had been wounded five times previously. He has a wife and one child, and was formerly employed as a collier. He is a cousin to the well-known Leigh footballer, Paddy O'Neil, who also lost his life fighting for his country.

ARE YOU EATING YOUR SHARE OF FISH?

Canada is one of the largest fish producers of the world, but Canadians are not eating their share even yet. The catch in 1917 was 856,000,000 pounds or an equivalent of 94 pounds per head of population, while our consumption has been only about 29 pounds per head of population of recent years. The Canada Food Board is providing greater facilities for the marketing of Atlantic and Pacific fish in the interior of Canada and Canadian cosumption of fish is increasing.

THE FALL OF DAMASCUS

Damascus, a city sanctified by storied memories of the early days of Christendom, has fallen in the path of the British advance through Syria and with its fall 7000 Turks surrendered. To the Mohammedans Damascus is a Holy City and its capture will create no less profound an impression on the adherents of the faith than the fall of Baghdad and Jerusalem. From many standpoints the capture of the Syrian capital is more important than the taking of Jerusalem. Damascus, in a variety of ways, is essentially modernized. It has up to date suburbs and modern conveniences in the way of water supply and drainage, and the former, derived from the Abana, is extensively used for irrigation purposes, making fertile an area of upwards of 300 square miles. The city proper still retains its old time mosques, rendered conspicuous by their tapering minarets and swelling domes. Many of these are large and beautiful. Damascus also has many richly decorated chapels, connected with the tombs of Saladin, Bilbars and other great princes. It is a city of traditional holy places, among which are the sanctuary of Abraham, at Burzeh; the house of Naaman, now a leper hospital; the scene of St. Paul's conversion; the house of Ananias and the spot where the apostle was let down from the wall. In the city and its immediate neighborhood there are 208 places of resort by pilgrims.

Damascus has figured largely in history during the past 2000 years. In 634 it fell into the hands of the Mohammedans and a little later became the capital of the Mohammedan Empire. The next four centuries were stormy ones and then the Crusaders, under Baldwin, made an unsuccessful attempt to capture the city. The reigns of Noureddin and Saladin were periods of prosperity in Damascus, but two centuries later came Tamerlane, nicknamed "The Wild Beast" by Arab writers. He conquered the city, levied redemption money on every male inhabitant and then urged his soldiers to an indiscriminate slaughter. The city experienced a horrible example of conquest. Its wealth was seized, its inhabitants slain, its palaces and libraries pillaged, and either razed to the ground or burned. Another century passed and Damascus fell into the hands of the Turks. It remained in their possession until 1832, when it was captured by the Egyptians. This marked a turning point in the city's career. For the first time representatives of foreign powers were admitted and the first effectual check was given to Moslem fanaticism. In 1841 the English drove out the Egyptians and Damascus reverted to Turkish control, in which it remained until last Monday.

Damascus, despite the misgovernment of the Turks, has prospered. Its streets have been widened; schools have been established; sanitary regulations are enforced; its trade has been increased, principally via the new road opened up by a French company over Lebanon to Beyrout. Its loss is a heavy blow to the Turks and may prove a potent means in hastening their desire for peace. General Allenby's troops are advancing beyond the city, which may indicate his objective is Aleppo and an ultimate junction with General Marshall's forces. If he accomplishes this he will have freed all Syria, as well as Palestine, from the Turks' control, insured the Arabs from any further molestation, sealed Britain's possession of Mesopotamia and placed his army in a position where it can go to the aid of the persecuted Armenians, whose future must be secured as an outcome of this war. Long before that time we may anticipate Turkey will sue for peace, for events in the Balkans will exercise an increasing pressure on her course. As it is, by the capture of Damascus, General Allenby adds to the character of a victory that was brilliantly conceived and swiftly and unerringly executed.

"THE FAIR PRETENDER" HAS VERVE AND CHARM

Madge Kennedy as a stage-struck typist who does not achieve her ambition but finds herself in a maze of high society complications instead — this is the crux of the newest Goldwyn production, "The Fair Pretender," which comes to the Orpheum theatre next Wednesday and Thursday.

The star is Sylvia Maynard, working in the office of a play producer, In her enthusiasm to prove her ability to act, the girl shows the manager what she would do if given the star part in a play then being put on. It is a passionate love scene, and while Sylvia uses her employer as her imaginary lover, his wife enters the office. She is discharged to keep peace in the family.

In new lodgings Sylvia discovers the manuscript of a play. She recognizes it as having been rejected by her former employer. She remembers, too, the engaging young man who wrote it. The play details the adventures of a poor girl who "put it over" to the extent of being taken up by the smart set. Sylvia determines to do this very thing.

The erstwhile typist blossoms out as a dashing widow. She is taken up by society after inventing and telling a romantic story of her husband's death in the service of his country. There she meets Don Meredith, author of the play, though he is ignorant of her knowledge of his affairs.

Matters take a dramatic turn when her fictitious husband turns out to be a real man and not dead at all. Don, who has fallen in love with the supposed widow, is heartbroken to find that she is not free. The ensuing complications and the manner in which they are circumvented make a film play at once absorbing and thrilling.

THE KAISER TALKS

The Kaiser called the devil up
On the telephone one day,
The girl at Central listened
To all they had to say.

"Hello!" she heard the Kaiser say,
"Is Old Man Satan home?
Just tell him it is Kaiser Bill
That wants him on the 'phone."

The Devil said, "Hello!" to Bill,
And said, "How are you?"
"I'm running a Hell here on earth
Now tell me what to do."

"My dear old Kaiser Bill,
"What can I do?" the Devil said,
If there's a thing that I can do,
To help you sure I will."

The Kaiser said, "Now listen,
And I will try to tell
The way that I am running
On earth a modern Hell.

"I've saved for this for many years
And I've started out to kill.
That it will be a modern job
You leave to Kaiser Bill.

"My Army went through Belgium,
Shooting women and children down,
We tore up all her country
And blowed up every town.

My Zepps dropped bombs on cities,
Killing both old and young,
And those the Zeppelins didn't get
Were taken out and hung."

"I started out for Paris,
With the aid of poisonous gas;
The Belgians, darn them, stopped us,
And wouldn't let us pass.

"My submarines are devils,
Why you should see them fight;
They go sneaking through the sea
And will sink a ship on sight.

"I was running things to suit me,
'Till a year or so ago,
When a man called Woodrow Wilson
Wrote me to go slow.

"He says to me, 'Dear William,
We don't want to make you sore,
So be sure to tell your U-boats
To sink our boats no more.'

" 'We have told you for the last time,
So dear Bill, it's up to you,
And if you do not stop it,
You'll have to fight us too.

"I did not listen to him,
And he's coming after me
With a million Yankee soldiers
From their home across the sea.

"Now, that's why I called you, Satan,
For I want advice from you,
I know that you will tell me,
Just what Iought to do."

"My dear old Kaiser William,
There's not much for me to tell,
For the Yanks will make it hotter
Than I ever could in Hell.

"I've been a mean old devil,
But not half as mean as you,
And the minute that you get here,
I will give the job to you.

"I'll be ready for your coming,
And I'll keep the fires all bright,
And I'll make your room all ready,
When the Yankees start to fight.

"For the boys in tan will get you,
I have nothing more to tell;
Hang up the phone and get your hat,
And meet me here in Hell."

SAINT EDITH CAVELL

Readers everywhere will thank the American Minister to Belgium for his painstaking account in Everybody's Magazine of the execution of Nurse Cavell, of the circumstances and evasions leading to that assassination, of the efforts made to prevent it, and of the clumsy, lying artifices in extenuation of a crime whose echoes will not die while history is read, or art remains, or healing science advances, or high tradition continues. The moral order of the world is relentless in its workings, and Nemesis knows no comparison.

Yet this woman would not have had it so. She stands out in the glorious company of martyrs and saints as a sweet but austerely beautiful soul, incapable of comprehending the nature and reason of the hate which burst upon her, and absolutely unafraid. And her sainthood will increase. She will become a star to men forever.

There was unbearable pathos in her gratitude for the rest and quiet of the prison after long voluntary, hurrying toil and pain. Life had been too hurried, she said. There had not been leisure enough for the daily privacy which every thinking human creature needs. And those ten weeks of prison with "no hurry in her hands, no hurry in her feet," she turned into consolation. All unknowing, she lit a candle in the world that will not burn out. Edith Cavell is already canonized in the minds of men and women in many lands.

LUKE McLUKE SAYS

Nobody loves a kicker. But, on the other hand, the fellow who is satisfied with things hasn't much of a future.

Every husband hears so much from his wife about what wonderful husbands all other women have that he wonders why he never meets any of these model birds because all the married men he knows are just common ornery mutts like himself.

We hate to hear a healthy man complaining about his luck. Any man who has good health has all the good luck in the world.

When a gabby guy qualifies a statement by saying that somebody else said so, the betting is that the statement is a plain damli.

We have always promised our wife that we would buy her a ford as soon as they began selling fords in the 10-cent stores. And now that they have quit making fords we figure with a sigh of relief that we are a dime to the good.

Keep your advice to yourself. People always find fault with the things that they get for nothing.

A man may be able to make the rest of the world believe that he is a genius or hero. But he can't fool his wife that easily.

Where one man is hustling to keep out of debt, one hundred others are hustling to get out of debt.

Why is it that a woman can look stylish in a $4 suit when a man will make a $40 suit look like a hand-me-down when he wears it?

The world spends half its time advising the rich man how to spend his money and the other half advising a poor man how he can save his money.

A porch climber may have his faults but you'll have to admit that he is ambitious to rise in the world.

CANADA HAS GOOD SUPPLY OF BUTTER

Great Britain and her Allies have been short of butter for several months, and the Canada Food Board have been asked to take steps to relieve the condition which has borne heavily upon the people of Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium. The pressure upon cargo space has been heavier than ever, since the United States has entered the war and began moving her troops across the Atlantic. Ships are needed for soldiers and munitions of war, as well as for food stuffs. The main staple food stuffs naturally receive the first consideration.

Today in Great Britain one-half pound of butter or margarine per month per person is all that the supply allows, as compared to the creamery butter consumption of two pounds per person per month in Canada.

The Canadian government on the recommendation of the Minister of Agriculture and the Canada Food Board, at the request of the British Ministry of Food for increased shipments, has commandered all the creamery butter made between Sept. 30 and Nov. 9 inclusive, in the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec for export to Great Britain and Allies.

This does not mean, however, that Canadians need be panic-stricken, nor does it mean that there is the least justification for hoarding or profiteering. There are in store unaffected by this commandering order, 20,000,000 pounds of creamery butter made before Sept. 30. Dairy butter is not affected by the order. The average cost to cold storage companies for butter now in store is about 44c a pound. The profits of storage companies selling to wholesalers are limited by the Canada Food Board to 4 per cent and of wholesalers to retailers to 10 per cent over cost delivered to warehouse.

The present supply of creamery butter in storage together with dairy butter produced during the next six weeks will be quite sufficient to fill the ordinary needs of the Canadian publbic.

APPRECIATE Y.M.C.A.

The well known correspondent, W. Beach Thomas, in wiring his descriptive dispatches of the recent engagement of the Canadian Corps in France to the Continental Edition of the London Daily Mail, writes as follows:

"One village under considerable shelling and still within reach of machine gun bullets, contained a dressing station, and of all things an incinerator, to which large notices directed you. Not far from them was a German notice board. I heard from an officer who visited the spot again a day later that another notice, "This way to the Y.M.C.A., was added. A dashing cavalry officer, very much of the old school, possessing a voice that would carry about two miles, begged me with great earnestness to do him one service. Would I mention the Y. M. C.A.? It had provided his men with hot coffee before riding out."

It has since been authoritatively determined that Mr. Thomas in this dispatch was referring to the Canadian Y.M.C.A.

CRAMMING IN THE SCHOOLS

There could be no complaint of our education system if every school pupil were made to understand what he read or what his teacher told him. When the teacher fails to convey his meaning to the pupil the fault is not the pupil's. For fear of ridicule or for fear of bringing upon themselves extra tasks, children will sometimes pretend to understand. The most successful teachers will not permit the pupil's pretence of understanding a thing to deceive them, and will with the utmost patience, and without holding up the pupil to ridicule, dwell on the meaning of the lesson until it is finally lodged in the mind. We believe, too, that the quality of a child's memory or, for that matter, that of an adult, is greatly determined by the manner in which a thing is learned. What is thoroughly learned and understood is likely to be perfectly remembered.—Mail and Empire.

"SOMETHING AKIN TO REVERENCE"

Some idea of what the British are doing today may be derived from a comparison of the second battle of the Somme with the first one. In the first long drawn out and bloody campaign the English won back 44 square miles of land in the period between July 1 and October 31, 1916. Soldiers under the same flag reclaimed 116 square miles this year between Aug. 21 and Aug. 25. Before such almost superhuman valor and skill the attitude of a new ally might well be something akin to reverence. — The Ledger, Philadelphia.

NOT FIT TO HAVE COLONIES

When the natives of Africa are called upon to express their choice of future rulers, it is not to be expected that any of them will choose Germany, whatever other choice they may make. As against their wishes, Germany's need of raw materials and her fear of economic isolation should count for nothing. Germany is not fit to have colonies, both because of her brutal treatment of the natives and because she had used them to stir up rebellion against her neighbors. As freedom of commerce and the open door will doubtless be established by the peace treaty, no nation will gain by being entrusted with the government of colonies except in the shape of added security against their use for hostile purposes.

The "Allied Loaf" for Canada

As cereal substitute flour are now becoming available from the new crop, their use in the Canadian standard loaf will be increased shortly, so that Canadian bread will conform to the "Allied Loaf" policy, as decided upon by the Food Controllers of the respective countries.

The best way to get the most work out of the "human engine" is to give it the food that has the most energy in it. Of all foods, certainly this means FRY'S COCOA —the great food beverage that is all delicious nourishment. If you have to work harder these days, try a regular course of FRY'S. You will need less of other and more expensive foods. There is concentrated strength for muscle and brain in every single cup.

CLIP THIS AND PIN ON WIFE'S DRESSER

Cincinnati man tells how to shrivel up corns or calluses so they lift off with fingers.

Ouch ! ? ! ? ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn or hardened callus stops soreness at once, and soon the corn or callus dries up and lifts right off without pain.

He says freezone dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding skin. A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels. If your druggist doesn't have freezone, tell him to order a small bottle for you.

OCTOBER AND NOVEMBER DELINEATORS FOR DISTRIBUTION

ELKO NONTES

(By Fred Roo)

Are we downhearted? No-o-o-. Sell your little hammer and buy a horn.

R. J. Smith, G. N. Passenger Agent, Spokane, and Mr. Holms, of the G.N., Kalispell, Montana, called on the writer this week.

Yes, Mabel, Marshal Foch must be an expert golfer by the drives he is making on all the Allied fronts.

Grandpa Ed. Clay was in Elko this week and missed getting a shave to get the train, but it might have been worse, Ed, old boy. Jack Berrington was in from Victoria picking up lost business for his firm and getting lots of it. Wilcox of the Pacific Milk Co., whose patronize home industry talks would make a Vancouver soap box orator get down and saw wood, wearing a nice white pepper colored suit, a cream colored vest and a peachy complexion. Charlie Walker of Nelson, the Man With a Smile, between trains. Smith, no relation to George Smith, with Braid's teas, coffees and cocaos.

Jim Thistlebeak says: If you want to have more fun in living resign from the Crepe Hangers Union and the Knockers' Club and sign up with the Joy Riders league.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Graham and daughter, Fred Roo, Miss E. May Roo, motored to Flagstone on Sunday and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ray G. Hirtz, who later joined the party and motored to Roosville and were the guests of Mrs. Roo at the Ranch, returning to Elko via Flagstone.

Jim Thistlebeak says: Speaking of peace moves by the Rheinsche Westfaelische Zeitung of Essen, the Cologne Volks Zeitung and other Hun Bladders, Marshal Foch is signing every day the only peace move satisfactory to the Allies. What was it that old codger said, An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, and the Allies are saying a town for a town. That's the dope. Foch will give the Huns their own medicine and lots of it. If we don't thrash the Germans now we must go on paying heavy taxes and maintaining huge armies for years to keep Germany from thrashing us later.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Worthington and family of Cranbrook are the guests of Mrs. John Todhunter, Cumberland House, Riverside Park, this month.

Jim Thistlebeak says that it often happens that the woman who is a chronic bargain hunter has a husband who looks like she got him at the 19-cent counter.

WILL NOT TOLERATE BOLSHEVISM IN CANADA

Toronto—Considered by the court as an "extremely dangerous man on account of his intelligence," Constantino Goshunk, secretary of the "Social Revolutionary party of the Bolsheviki," was convicted by Magistrate Kingsford under order-in-council, fined $1000 and sent to the penitentiary for three years.

Kissing through a handkerchief has been recommended by the New York board of health, and is a favorite pastime in Macleod. It may be all right, but sounds as if it might be something like washing your hands with your gloves on. Up here in the Crow's Nest Pass some folks have got into the filthy habit of kissing through the telephone or plate glass. —Blairmore Enterprise.

LESLIE GROSSMITH TO APPEAR AT FERNIE

An entertainment which is out of the ordinary is promised at the Isis Theatre on Friday, Oct. 18, the management having secured Leslie Grossmith, the famous English society entertainer, who is now making his 1918 tour of Canada under the management of Capt. George J. Dyte. Mr. Grossmith is a member of the illustrious Grossmith family, known throughout the English speaking world as entertainers. Mr. Grossmith has already toured Australia, New Zealand, India, Egypt and the Maritime provinces of the Dominion and is meeting with great success on the coast. Mr. Grossmith gives a varied program, which is never tiring and thoroughly enjoyable in every part. The entertainer recognizes the value of humor, and his one hour and a half simply sparkles with a plentiful supply of clean wit and mirthful laughter. His program consists of what has become to be known as "pianologues," musical sketches, songs, piano classic and piano burlesque. His numbers include Mendelsshon's "Andante and Rondo Capriccioso," Chopin's "Polonaise in A. Flat," and some of his own compositions. His monologues include character sketches "The Country Curate," "The London Coster" and "The Employment Bureau."

The Vancouver World says: "Mr. Leslie Grossmith had reason to be pleased with the reception accorded him last evening. From start to finish the large audience expressed their enthusiasm and approval with laughter and applause. In fact Mr. Grossmith made a great hit."

The Vancouver Sun says: "Leslie Grossmith has more than made good as an entertainer. Last evening he sprung some new ones, including some local skits, which the audience recognized at once as well worth repeating."

As the entertainment is of such unique character it will be an evening of great enjoyment, besides being instructive and Fernie will do well to turn out to give Mr. Grossmith a hearty reception.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

IN MEMORIAM

The following is taken from The Free Lance, New Glasgow, N.S.:

The late Capt. J. J. Martin was a son of Mr. Michael Martin, Lourdes, Stellarton, and was 35 years of age at the time of his death.

He was from his earliest years a successful student. He got his first papers from the Parochial School at Lourdes. Then he continued his studies at the New Glasgow High School and at Pictou Academy. The next step was to St. Francis Xavier College at Antigonish, where he spent three years and graduated with honors. He then entered Dalhousie Law School and in due course he was admitted to the bar in Nova Scotia. He entered into partnership with A. D. Gunn, Sydney, where he remained for some time. Then he went west and became a partner in the law firm of Herchmer & Martin at Fernie, B. C. He enjoyed a splendid legal practice but when the call of King and Country resounded throughout Canada "Jack" Martin did not shirk his duty. He had whilst in Nova Scotia been connected with the 17th Field Battery and he hastened to place his services at the disposal of the military authorities. He joined the Canadian Expeditionary Forces at Victoria, B.C., despite the claims of his family, and despite the fact that he was making good in his chosen profession. At Victoria he took a course of study and qualified for the rank of captain. He went to England with his battalion in 1916, and reverted in rank in order to get to France without delay. There he gave a good account of himself. At Passchendale, where so many Canadians laid down their lives he was numbered amongst the missing. His body was not recovered but from that day up to the present time he has not been heard from. In due season the military authorities classed him with the dead.

Such is, in brief, the life story of "Jack" Martin, who held a high place in the public esteem in his native County of Pictou. Reference might be made to his illustrious record as an athlete. In football, baseball and in cricket he excelled. He took a keen interest in politics, was a staunch Conservative and helped his party greatly in the campaign of 1908 when he spoke and canvassed in the interest of his party's candidate.

He was an honorable man, a fervent Christian and a true patriot. He was broad in his religious views and always accorded to others the consideration for their views and beliefs which he demanded for himself as his birthright.

He was a devout Catholic but was just as popular amongst the Protestants as he was amongst his own people. He was a "mixer"; he was a man; he was tolerant; he made friends; he held them by the power of his personality; and he had a bright future before him in the ordinary course of affairs. Providence decided otherwise "Jack" Martin has passed from time to eternity but his memory will be cherished as long as time lasts, and his name is now enshrined amongst the glorious galaxy of heroes from the good old County of Pictou, who are not dead yet but "have gone before." And now that the anniversary of his death is drawing near we pay this simple tribute to his memory. May his soul rest in peace.

NOTICE

A dramatic entertainment will be given in Churst church basement on Friday, Oct. 25. The program will consist of two plays, one entitled "Releasing a Man." The scene is laid in London, England, in war time and depicts a titled lady's attempt to release a man for the front by taking the place of a window cleaner. It's a scream from beginning to end. The other play is called "My Turn Next" and is full of funny situations. There will also be some musical items and recitations. Commence 8.30. Adults 50c. Children 25c.

Freemen buy bonds. Slaves wear them.

MORRISSEY CAMP CLOSED

The demobilization of the Morrissey Internment Camp was actually begun last Sunday, when two carloads containing sixty odd internes under strong armed guard passed through the city attached to the east bound passenger, bound for northern points, where they will be put to work on the railroads. On Tuesday evening a special train carrying the remaining two hundred passed through here eastward bound, the destination being an isolated camp in the wilds of Northern Ontario.

The camp at Morrissey was established over three years ago and during that time for certain periods there were confined as many as 400 aliens, including several first class German prisoners. These latter, however, did not remain long, they being transferredto the camp at Vernon, where the opportunities for escaping from custody were not so numerous. The average number of inmates at Morrissey has been constantly between 250 and 300. The demobilization will be quite a financial loss to this city, as practically all the supplies were furnished by local merchants, and in addition, the pay of the guards averaged between $4000 and $4,500 per month. The final dismantling and evacuation of the camp will probably take place in about two weeks, after the return of the guards who escorted the interns east have returned.

EAST KOOTENAY I. O. D. E.

The East Kootenay chapter of the I. O. D. E. met in Adolph's Hall, Baynes Lake, Thursday, Sept. 25th, and some important business was discussed.

The secretary's report showed a balance of $82.41 for the chapter, and a balance of $122.90 for the Red Cross.

On the occasion of Dr. and Mrs. Saunders' return from overseas, a special reception for returned soldiers was held in Ross' Hall, Waldo, Sept. 19th. A very pleasant evening was spent. Cakes to the value of $12.00 were auctioned off at the close of the evening. The chapter decided to give the money to the Canadian Red Cross.

An afternoon at Mrs. Frank Adolph's house was devoted to sewing Red Cross supplies. Much enthusiasm was shown by those present, and a considerable amount of work accomplished. There was a collection of $3.50, which was given to the Red Cross.

SOLDIERS' XMAS SOCKS

A Shower Tea will be given in the I.O.D.E. rooms on Saturday, Oct. 19, from 2 to 6 o'clock, to help fill the personal Xmas sock parcels the I.O.D.E. hope to send to every man who has gone from this district. In order to fill these socks uniformly, will the public kindly donate either money or cigarettes.

All names and addresses of soldiers overseas, either in England or France, are most urgently asked for. These addresses are changed so often that lists at hand from last year are useless. Would the friends and relatives of soldiers kindly remember this and send in names immediately to Mrs. G. G. Moffatt, Regent.

IS FINED $1,000.00

For contravention of Section 28a of the Prohibition Act—to which George A. Spencer, manager of the Flathead Hotel at Corbin, pleaded guilty last Friday—a fine of one thousand dollars was imposed upon the Flathead Hotel Co., by Magistrate Hewat, before whom the case was heard. Earlier in the week Constable Shipman, stationed at Corbin, made a search of the hotel premises and found five bottles labelled Scotch Whiskey in the bar room. These were seized and the prosecution followed, same being conducted by Inspector Owen of this city with the above result.

John Reid, postmaster at Corbin, and Samuel Colville, a resident also, appeared before Magistrate Hewat on similar charges, but pleas of not guilty were entered. After hearing the evidence, however, they were found guilty and each assessed $50 and costs.

In the case of the Flathead Hotel Co. an appeal from the conviction by the magistrate has been entered and this will be heard before His Honor Judge Thompson at the next regular session of the County Judge's Criminal Court, probably early next month.

SPANISH FLU AT EUREKA

Eureka, Oct. 12.—Fourteen cases of Spanish influenza have been reported here. It has been decided to close all schools, churches, shows and all public meetings.

"MY IRISH CINDERELLA"

At the Grand Theatre next Friday, Oct. 25, will be presented for the first time here a new four act comedy drama "My Irish Cinderella." It contains a plot that unfolds a beautiful love story, interspersed with clean wholesome comedy.

Miss Daisy Carleton will be seen as Peggy McNeil, the little Irish girl who has never know her father or mother, and who is taken from a poor house in New York to London, where she has been placed as the granddaughter to the Earl of Lonsdale. But why tell of something which is much more dramatic in the play and must be seen to be appreciated.

REPORT ON CONVENTION

The following is the City Clerk's report of the Convention of B. C. Municipalities at Penticton, which was crowded out last week:

The principal business of the convention was the consideration of the proposed new Municipal Act, prepared by solicitor F. A. McDairmid and Robert Baird, Inspector of Municipalities, and from statements of delegates and articles in financial papers it is very evident that if adopted by the legislature, this province will have a model Municipal Act.

Several drastic changes in Municipal government were endorsed by the convention, and the legislature will be relieved of much petty legislation, and the necessity for special Acts passed to legalize things already done, will be abolished, as a municipality will be able in the future to do anything it is not prohibited from doing, either by Dominion or Provincial law; instead of only being able to do what it is expressly given permission to do under the present system.

As this drastic change might result in some freak legislation and as it will be very necessary to closely examine the law as it stands before putting in force any legislation which might be ultra vires, a fly wheel is provided in the form of a Local Government Board which will scrutinize all bylaws which will have to be filed with that body. The board will have the oversight and control of all municipalities in matters of finance, and will have power to return bylaws if it appears that the sum to be raised is either insufficient or is more than is necessary.

The voters' list is to be compiled from the receipt book of the municipality without regard to the assessment roll. Every person paying $5 or more on account of a tax levied being entitled to have his or her name placed on the list. On the other hand the voters' list for the purpose of creating a debt remains as before, and is made up of all owners of real property; the owner being the person whose name appears on the Land Registry Office records as the registered owner. Therefore it is up to everyone who wishes to vote, to have the registration formalities carried through promptly, as even though they had paid every cent due, they would not be entitled to vote unless their name appeared on the Land Registry office records.

The affect would be to allow only those who have paid taxes in whole or part, to vote for council, while in the case of money bylaws, no property owner would be kept from the polls.

The Court of Revision would be appointed for a period of five years, and would be entirely separate and independent of the council. The court would sit on December 1st to revise the annual assessment, and would complete its work by February 1st of each year. As soon as the court had completed the revision of the assessment roll, the tax notices could be issued without waiting the decision of any appeals which might be made to the local Government Board. At present no tax notices can be issued until all appeals to the higher courts have been decided.

Estimates have to be ready not later than December 20th, so that the new council can deal with the estimates for its year of office immediately it sits.

Tax sales will be compulsory and in order to do away with the expensive advertising, the only notice that a property will be sold will be stamped on the tax notice stating that the property will be sold on a certain date which would be the same for all municipalities.

On the expiration of the year allowed for redemption an indefensible title will be granted for a fee of $5.

The basis of revenue will be broadened and the draft favors the granting to municipalities all the personal property, income, poll, amusement, and motor taxes, in addition to those now collected.

No change would be made in present system of contracting debts or in the form of bonds etc., which may be issued.

In regard to sinking funds, I cannot do better than quote from the report, which was laid before the convention: "We are of the opinion that when the municipality borrows money on a bylaw which provides for sinking funds being accumulated year by year, when the municipal credit is pledged to foreign bondholders that any tampering with the sinking funds whether by way of utilizing them for current revenue, or by the non-investment of them or by way of holding them as against arrears of taxation, is a distinctly immoral procedure and one which should not be allowed to continue."

The report suggests that misuse of sinking funds should be punishable by fine upon the officers and parties responsible, including the auditor who passes, and also by disqualification from holding office on the part of the aldermen who authorize it.

It is suggested that the mayor be elected for one year and the aldermen for two years, half to retire each year.

Now as to finances generally; the inspector, Mr. Baird, sounded a grave note of warning, which applies to practically every municipality in the province.

The figures quoted by him show that the taxes actually collected by the municipalities of the province, during 1917 were $9,500,000.00; other revenues such as government grants to schools, traders' licenses, dog taxes, road taxes, fines and costs amounted to about $1,000,000.00, making a total of $10,500,000.00 actually collected in cash. Out of that sum the following uncontrollable expenditures were made

Yearly levy for debt (Sinking Fund and Interest on Debentures)	$6,630,000.00
Schools	$1,853,000.00
Administration of Justice	562,000.00
Total	$9,045,000.00

or roughly nine millions. Ten and a half millions collected and out of that nine millions were spent over which there is no control at all, leaving only one and one half millions to be spent on various matters of municipal administration, fire protection, public works, health, safety, etc.

The expenditures which are controllable were roughly three and a half millions; the actual receipts being over-expended by about two millions. This over-expenditure has been going on for four or five years, and is of course mostly represented by arrears of taxes, which totalled at the end of:

1914	$6,000,000.00
1915	9,333,333.00
1916	11,750,000.00
1917	13,666,666.00

The point to be made here is plainly, "How long is the province to go on with a municipal deficit of two or three millions a year?"

The pressing nature of the problem was recognized by the delegates when they endorsed the proposal to hold compulsory annual tax sales, and to establish a Local Government Board, having supervision over municipal administration of finances.

SCHOOL REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER

The following will show the percentage of attendance for the month of September in the different divisions of Fernie Public School with the names of all pupils who had "perfect attendance."

Division I., with 99.38 per cent shows the most regular attendance and Division IV. is a close second with 98.40 per cent. It will be noted also that Divisions III., VII., XVIII. and XXI. all show more than 97 per cent of attendance.

Division I.—E. G. Daniels, Teacher. Percentage 99.38. Pupils having perfect attendance: Katie Bean, Hugh Brown, James Campbell, Frank Carlson, Everett Covert, Agnes Cullerton, Fred Elley, Rose Frey, Frank Gigliotti, Joe Hamer, Ada Harper, Molly Henderson, Frank Hovan, Catherine Hughes, Edna Johnston, Maud Jones, Minnie Kenedy, Robert Kerr, Clarice Littley, Alfred Lyne, Ivy Mercer, Annie McDonald, Charles Orner, Gordon Owen, Annie Podbielancik, Ernest Quail, Annie Reynolds, Dora Rizzuto, Paul Rushcall, Divina Small, Cecilia Taback.—Total possible 651; total actual 647.

Division II.—Miss E. M. Hogan, Teacher. Percentage 91.50. Pupils having perfect attendance: Mary Balok, Helen Booth, Marie Coppe, Albert Davies, Helen Forbes, Lily Graham, Leonard Hesketh, George Ihas, John Kasmar, Paul Kasmar, Humphrey Madden, Willie Marsham, Willie McLennan, Gordon Parker, Doris Reid, Susie Ross, Francis Robishaud, Leon Rushcall, Reta Sherwood, Annie Wallace.—Total possible 606; total actual 554.5.

Division III.—Miss Edith S. DeBou, Teacher. Percentage 97.43. Pupils having perfect attendance: Gertrude Bailey, Steve Bernot, Minnie Cairns, Paul Caravetta, Letty Cooke, Tony Carosella, David Clowers, Harry Crawford, Lilian Dicken, Edna Edgar, Nettie Ingram, James Jennings, Lavinia Marcer, Felix Miscisco, Evangeline Parker, Thomas Paton, Victoria

WHAT 1918 VICTORY LOAN MEANS TO CANADA

What the 1918 Victory Loan means to Canada can best be realized by a knowledge of what the 1917 Loan made possible. The subscribing of over $400,000,000 by the people of Canada last year enabled the Dominion Government not only to take care of the needs of the army, but also to make substantial advances to various industries, which has resulted in unprecedented prosperity.

Since the beginning of the present year Canada's war expenditure has been averaging over $30,000,000 a month. It has grown heavier as the army overseas has increased in numbers, and especially since the beginning of the great Allied offensive early in August. To date about 590,000 men have been enrolled in the Expeditionary Forces, the number that has gone overseas being fully 415,000. Today there are 60,000 more Canadians overseas than there were at the end of 1917. All this means heavier war bills, and the greater need for the new Victory Loan.

Canadians hardly realize what a strong impetus their large subscription to the last Victory Loan imparted to business It enabled the Government to make advances to industries which, without the $400,000,000 subscribed, would have been impossible. Great Britain wanted beef, bacon, cheese, wheat, hay, oats and munitions; but she could not pay cash for them. Canada could not borrow abroad the money she wanted, so if she were to sell her surplus products, she had to give credits to Britain and advance the money for the purchases.

During the present year the Imperial Munitions Board has received from the Dominion Government advances amounting to $25,000,000 a month. Through an advance of $10,000,000 made by the Government the Board was able to give orders for the building of 44 wooden ships. Another advance of $1,000,000 enabled the Board to begin the manufacturing of airplanes, of which 3,000 have been produced in one of the Board's great plants.

The 1917 Victory Loan made possible the advancing of $100,000,000 to finance the 1917 wheat crop. Another $100,000,000 was similarly advanced to finance the sale of our exportable surplus of beef and pork products to Great Britain. Nearly $40,000,000 went to finance the sale of cheese to Britain. In addition large sales of hay and oats were also provided for.

A larger war loan is needed this year than last, because the 1918 war expenditure will probably be from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 larger than in 1917. The Imperial Munitions Board will, if anything, require larger advances during the coming year than it has had, for its operations have been greatly extended. It has business amounting to $500,000,000 in sight for next year.

TOO TAME FOR REVOLUTION?

The German people and the German army are one. It is well to keep the fact in mind when Germany is striving to make it appear that the putting of a few Socialists and Centrists in posts of apparent responsibility means the end of military domination of the country.

Count von Bulow, himself an exchancellor, knew better. In his book, "Imperial Germany," published since the war began, he points out that foreign hopes that any political party would take a stand against the army once hostilities began was the veriest nonsense.

"In contradistinction to the French army," he writes, "the German army has never once come under the influence of prevailing political tendencies, either as regards its views or its organization. It has remained as unaffected by revolutionary as by reactionary ideas. In Germany, the consequences (in the past) would have been immeasurably serious if political and religious quarrels had spread to the army."

And so far as is known there is no revolutionary feeling of any importance in the German army today. It is sick of war, naturally. It has an occasional mutiny. But its discontents do not spring from a desire to overthrow the present system of government or get rid of those who brought about the war. It merely wants peace because it does not any longer see hope of victory.

German soil is poor soil for a revolution. The German people are too tame a breed. Besides they do not yet know what it is the Allies require of them before they can be granted peace.

BELGIANS AND FRENCH MUST BE FED

The world is apt to forget that there are 10,000,000 people, Belgians and French, who have to be fed and clothed by the sheer spirit of what we call humanity in the rest of the white peoples. Improving war news has not altered the position of most of them. There are children who have known nothing but the state of absolute slavery. Over 200,000 tons of shipping, secured by arrangement from the Swedish Government for use in non-war zones, have been devoted to carrying in the coming year the food and clothing which we must send from this side of the Atlantic to this trampled-on but unconquerable people. The following foodstuffs will have to be transported across the Atlantic in the next twelve months.

Wheat, Barley, Rye and Corn for Bread purposes	42,500,000 bus.
Beans	2,200,000 bus.
Rice	3,300,000 bus.
Corned Beef	26,400,000 bus.
Pork Products	277,200,000 bus.
Soap	66,000,000 bus.
Coffee	26,000,000 bus.
Food for the Children	(No estimate)
Cocoa	18,000,000 bus.
Condensed Milk	55,000,000 bus.
Sugar	40,000,000 bus.

At best, the cost will be nearly $280,000,000. The Dutch and Spanish governments, through their agents in Belgium, will see that these supplies are not misused by the German army.

BOYS AND GIRLS CAN HELP

"Every boy and girl can do a noble part. The Boy Scouts and the Girl Scouts of this country have been doing splendid work. Let everyone be animated by the thought that every penny you save that you would otherwise spend upon pleasure of any kind—pleasures of dress or of appetite—everything that you save of that character and put away for the purpose of investing in these bonds of your Government is a direct help to every soldier and sailor who is risking his health and all that is dearest to him in this conflict. You can all do that much."—Hon. W. G. McAdoo, U. S. Secretary of the Treasury.

THE UNRETURNING

In the corner of the back porch an industrious spider once built her a prize web patterned beautifully of tiniest glistening strands, fragile to view as some dream of air, but anchored strongly against storms of wind and rain. So also the human heart spins its fabric of affection to hold fast through any stress of time and change. How frail, seemingly, are its materials—the little things of homely use and wont, half-noted ways that habit has made pleasant, old jokes and stories giving rise to endless difference, all those dimly seen riches of the soul on which the heart builds. A dry, shrewd lawyer in a Western city moved his office to get away from the endless strain of expecting to see his late partner (instanly killed by a fall from a horse) come briskly through the swinging door between their rooms. A hard-headed merchant up North would never stay at the shop until closing time on Friday night because for twenty years he had been used to hear the old head of the firm say pleasantly: "And tomorrow will be the Sabbath of the faithful." One feels sure that many a man in France wakes up these mornings hoping to hear his father pounding the fire alive downstairs. A mother can stand having her son away for a while; but never to see him hitch his chair closer to the table when the buckwheat cakes are exactly right—that hurts. Time has a cure for grief, but what of the things that are without time? The heart that endures will find its answer.—Collier's.

You Can Buy Quality Shoes at Fair Prices

EVEN today—when the cost of every item in the make-up of a shoe is far above the normal—you can get satisfactory shoes at fair prices if you will buy prudently. The service you get for your money will largely depend upon your own wisdom and foresight when buying.

As Canada's largest manufacturers of shoes, we ask you to buy prudently, to practise true economy, to avoid extravagance.

There are three things you should do:

First: Buy for service rather than merely for appearance.
Second: Go to a reputable dealer and benefit by his knowledge and experience.
Third: Look for the manufacturer's trade-mark on the shoes you buy.

If you will do these things, we can assure you of the best possible value for your money.

A. H. M. War-Time Selections offer special value for men, women and children. Ask your dealer for them.

SYNOPSIS OF LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

Why Canada must borrow money to carry on

Because Canada has put her hand to the plow and will not turn back:—

—our country is in the war on the side of liberty and justice and will stay in it till complete victory is won and the unspeakable Hun is smashed and beaten to the ground;

—a nation at war must make tremendous expenditures in cash to keep up her armies and supply them with munitions, food and clothing;

—Canada must finance many millions of dollars of export trade in food, munitions and supplies which Britain and our allies must have on credit;

—for these purposes Canada must borrow hundreds of millions of dollars—

And, this money must be borrowed from the people of Canada:—

Therefore, Canada will presently come to her people for a new Victory Loan to carry on.

✦ ✦ ✦

Canadians will loan the money by again buying Victory Bonds.

The national safety, the national honor and the national well-being require that each and every Canadian shall do his duty by lending to the nation every cent he can spare for this purpose.

Be ready when the call comes to see your country through in its great war work

HUNGER IS HASTENING BOLSHEVIKI DOWNFALL

Stockholm—Hunger is hastening the downfall of the Bolsheviki regime in Russia far more than the feeble and disorganized efforts of the opposing political parties. The political strife in the isolated soviet republic is bread, in which all political theories now becoming a pitched battle for and theorists are lost,, and Moscow and Petrograd are regarded as monsters trying to steal the meagre food supplies of the rural district.

On the eve of its first anniversay the Bolsheviki dictatorship of the proletariat faces the most terrible famine in modern history, and the final test has come of the ability of sovie arms to maintain what Nikolai Lenine, the Bolsheviki premier, calls "organized hunger."

An American who has just arrived from Russia and who for three months was engaged in an effort to provide bread for workmen in the industrial centres of Soviet Russia told the correspondent today of a widespread military organization of the peasants against soviet authority which is non-political and based purely on self-preservation. In three districts of the Vyataka government alone, the peasants have organized and armed 15,000 men, chiefly returned soldiers, to resist soviet attempts to take their grain. The peasants pay the soldiers 500 rubles each month.

Similar conditions exist in all the grain producing government nominally under soviet authority. The soviet grain crusaders were able to obtain limilted quantities of rye this year, which was harvested before the peasants had perfected their organization of returned soldiers but the loss of this rye forced them to action.

In many instances the wheat and oats crop are in the hands of peasant organizations which are guarding them against the Bolsheviki. Where the districts are not well organized the farmers are cutting the grain only as they can sell it and will burn it or let it rot in the fields rather than risk its confiscation by armed bands of Bolsheviki.

The food crusaders sent from Moscow and Petrograd meet with such resistance that many who escape death join the anti-Bolsheviki forces and assist in tightening the noose of starvation about the two soviet strongholds, which are undergoing a hunger siege far more death-dealing than the spasmodic outbreaks dirrected against them by the Social Revolutinonists and the Social Democrats.

WESTERN COAL BRIQUETTES TO SOLVE FUEL PROBLEMS

With fifty thousand million tons of lignite known to exist in the three prairie provinces, Manitobans who have been shivering at the thought of what will happen when the Pennsylvania anthracite beds become exhausted, may cheer up, as the briquetting of western lignite will supply them with a fuel declared to be equal to the best anthracite ever shipped into this province.

Inside of two years the best and most economical method of carbonizing and briquetting this lignite will have been determined, is the opinion of J. M. Leamy, of Winnipeg, who returned from a meeting of the Lignite Utilization Board, which has just concluded a session at its headquarters in Montreal. Mr. Leamy is provincial electrical engineer.

Mr. Leamy said that the most exhaustive enquiries and searching tests would be necessary if mistakes were subsequently to be avoided.

While the briquetting plant to be erected at Estevan will only provide for an annual output of 30,000 tons, the minimum output by which the commercial success of such a plan may be determined, the results if successful will be very great.

Within the boundaries of the three prairie provinces, Mr. Leamy says, a conservative estimate places the extent of lignite beds at 100,000 square miles and actual demonstration may prove them to be much more extensive than this. These are practically virgin beds untouched by pick or shovel.

The members of the board have not the slightest doubt that the prairie lignites will be shortly available in briquettes at a price which will show an immense reduction on that of anthracite, while its value as a fuel would be equally as good as the best Pennsylvania hard coal, Mr. Leamy says.

In order that the fullest investigation may be given to the whole subject an organization has been formed under the direction of the board with headquarters at Montreal, to prepare the plans for the Estevan plant, gather the fullest data available and keep the board in touch with the latest developments. Within a few months it is expected that the headquarters of the board will be removed to either Winnipeg or Regina.

GERMAN EXCHANGE IS FUTURE PERIL

German exchange in neutral countries adjoining is now at a discount of about 50 per cent. This is not unbearable at present, because Germany's purchases in these countries are very limited. The Scandinavian people and the Dutch have had to make economic agreements with the Allies to get supplies for themselves, and Germany has been effectually cut off from their stocks of materials except when produced from home industry entirely. But when Germany has to begin buying raw materials for industry after the war, this adverse exchange rate—which then will probably be even more adverse—will cause it much difficulty and loss. It will have to pay double prices for the goods it must have to regain its industrial footing.

From many German sources come admissions that Germany is in dire need of wool, cotton, rubber, tin, jute, oils, copper, and many tropical products. Most of these must be procured from countries Germany is now fighting and a large part of them from the British Empire. In the Frankfort Zeitung, the great organ of the commercial classes, Arthur Feiler writes that the war in any event willl be lost to Germany unless economic war after the war is excluded, and Germany can have full opportunity to sell and buy in world markets on the most-favored nation basis. If full freedom of Entente markets is granted, the exchange and transportation difficulties can be overcome in time, especially by putting out large quantities of German manufactures to pay for necessary raw materials. Like other German economic writers, Feiler sees Germany's need. But the question is, How far will the entente nations go toward granting relief along the desired lines? As the Allied peoples know full well, if the Germans do not, Germany has no outlook for Allied trade. She will find few purchasers of her manufactures among Anglo-Saxon and Latin peoples, and in the British Empire, French and Italian territories at least, she will face a system of priority in the sale of raw materials giving home and allied purchasers first call on all materials for industry.

Thus, if Germany has to go hunting in the world's markets for whatever scrape are left her exchange difficulties will be augmented by higher prices she will have to pay for such materials as she can get. The outlook is dismal enough to depress the boldest German optimist, but the German General Staff will not permit open discussion in Germany of the probabilities of the future. The industrial leaders, however, must know what they face, and they must think painfully of the mess into which the war lords have got them, and all Germany.

WAR CRITICS

War critics write their daily screeds reviewing all the mighty deeds which change the map o'er there, where all the armies scrap. The allied armies chase the Teuts until the latter split their boots, make prisoners of countless Huns and capture 40,000 guns. "Let us beware," the critic says, "of getting too almighty gay. 'Tis true we've made a killing now—that, even Wilhelm must allow—but when arrives tomorrow's dawn, the ground we've gained may all be gone. Except the worst, that is the plan that's followed by the prudent man." These critics are the cautious boys; when I would make a joyful noise and shoot off fireworks, tons and tons, because we've spoiled a lot of Huns, they say, "That is no way to act; you ought to show more sense and tact. You ought to shake your head and sigh, when optimists go whooping by, and tell them how we've had to tread the weary road that lies ahead. Instead of which, you old fat clown, you take your brush and paint the town. It is a time to weep and wail, and ride gay people on a rail. Just wait until the news is bad, and then cavort around, my lad. Then you may whoop and maks things whiz, and fill yourself with bottled fizz."

WONDERFUL STUFF!
LIFT OUT YOUR CORNS

Apply a few drops then lift corns or calluses off with fingers—no pain.

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without a particle of pain or soreness.

This drug is called freezone and is a compound of ether discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

This drug freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards. If your druggist don't have freezone have him order it for you.

TRAFALGAR DAY

Monday, October 21, is Trafalgar Day. On this day Lord Nelson practically won the present war in Europe. It is a most remarkable thing that the average citizen of the British Empire does not realize this truth and it was left to Admiral Mahan of the U.S.N. to bring this fact to the notice of the world, with the result that Germany for the last fifteen years has been aiming to possess herself of a fleet that in the event of war would give her command of the seas. How she has fallen in this respect is evident from the manner in which the High Seas Fleet has so carefully secluded itself in the safety of the Kiel canal since their first and only effort to obtain this command of the seas, which resulted in the Battle of Jutland. Since that date the idea of the Hohenzollerns of obtaining a place in the sun has been doomed to failure. Winter and summer the British fleet has been quietly "carrying on." From the Shetlands to Iceland and down to the south coast of France they have maintained an unbroken front in spite of the ravages of the U boat commanders. During all this, Jack of the merchant service and the Royal Navy has been playing the game of bringing about the downfall of "Kaiserism," and today we can see a hopeful result of this great and triumphant work. Many, however, are the lives that have been sacrificed in this work and the mothers and "little things" that have been left behind must be cared for. This latter is being undertaken partly by the Navy League of Canada, and by becoming a member you take a share of the responsibility which all loyal Canadians should be only too pleased to do.

Next Monday, Trafalgar Day, is being observed in Fernie by the first annual dance of the Local Branch of the Navy League of Canada. Show your respect for the British and Allied navies by attending. Keep Lord Nelson's memory fresh. We in Canada view things differently to those in the old lands. Over there today there is a revised version of the Lord's Prayer, which reads, "Give us this day our Navy bread." They realize over there that it is due to the British Navy that they are still able to obtain food.

An important meeting of the G. W. V. A. will be held in the Club rooms at 3 p.m. on Sunday next. All members are earnestly requested to attend.

At a meeting held at Calgary on August 19th, President F. Adolph, of the Adolph Lumber Co., Baynes Lake, said he had spent some time recently in the East and was amazed at the possibilities existing for the introduction of B. C. lumber products. Dealers there buy in millions of feet. The great complaint voiced by Eastern buyers is that B.C. millmen do not maintain stable prices. Wholesalers do the great bulk of the buying and financing. In the United States he had noted a good demand for box material, which was likely to increase rather than diminish.—Western Lumberman.

OSTEND IS TAKEN

London, Oct. 17.—Admiral Keyes, of the British navy, landed at Ostend this afternoon, says an official announcement from the admiralty. The admiral was preceded by members of the Royal Air Force, who landed at Ostend this morning.

London, Oct. 17.—Ostend is reported clear of the enemy, says a statement from the British admiralty today. French cavalry patrols, says the Evening News, reached Ostend today and returned with the report that no Germans were to be seen there.

LILLE NOT FIRED

British Headquarters in Flanders, Oct. 16.—The Germans, on leaving Lille, which was captured today by British forces, did not set fire to the buildings in the city or cause any explosions.

WHAT KIND OF IMMIGRATION?

Not a few of the recent cabinet visitors to British Columbia have spoken of plans for increasing Canada's and British Columbia's population by means of immigration after the war.

Whence this immigration will come is not stated. Yet if any immigration policy is to be a success former mistakes must be avoided.

This Dominion had two classes of settlers in the past. One the class that desired to make a permanent home in the country; the other, the class that desired to make as much money as possible and then clear out. A large section of the non-British immigration belonged to the latter class.

When bad times came, just before the war, this class quitted Canada as rapidly as the railways could convey it over the border. Is it proposed that the new immigration policy will invite it to return? Or will every care be taken to see that only the genuine settler, ready and willing to discharge the duties as well as receive the rights and privileges of Canadian citizenship is brought into our country?—Vancouver World.

WEALTH THAT IS TWICE BLESSED

Whatever may be the matter with British Columbia nothing is the matter with Canada. Sir Thomas White's revelations of our financial powers and resources prove this if they prove anything.

Canada is immensely prosperous just now. She has money in the savings banks in great amount than ever before. She has war industries which are bringing in money to her coffers literally by the million.

That money is now wanted. It is wanted to increase Canada's prosperity as well as to help to make final victory certain. If the wealth that is Canada's is placed at the disposal of Canada's government to be used to form credits for the Allies Canada's prosperity will continue.

As a business proposition this Victory Loan is as good as anyone wants. It brings returns not merely to the individual but to the nation. In truth it is quite twice blessed. It blesses him that gives and the government that takes.Vancouver World.

CLEAR THE DECKS

Get ready for action!
Forget each attraction
That leads you away from your part!
What part'll you have shown
In this VICTORY LOAN?
Will you back it with all of your heart?

Canadians fighting
Are daily delighting
Their Allies with proof of their skill!
The foe they're pursuing
How much are YOU doing
To give the mad Kaiser his fill?

You know of a way
You can help win the fray—
Quite clearly this way has been shown.
Canadians all!
Arise at the call
AND CARRY THIS VICTORY LOAN!

—William F. Kirk.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN

The manner in which American papers give unqualified recognition to the outstanding ability and worth of Sir Robert Borden is well instanced by the following tribute in a recent issue of the Boston Monitor, which says:

"Few statesmen of the present day possess to a greater degree the ability to say the right thing, at the right time, in the right way, than Sir Robert Borden, the Prime Minister of Canada. This ability has, indeed, been uniformly characteristic of his career, but especially during that momentuous part of it comprised in the last four years. It has its cause, simply enough, in the fact that Sir Robert, subordinating all considerations of party, determined from the first to have before him no standard of action but the simple though remorseless one, of the highest good, not only to his own country, but of all humanity. The man who, in the face of the most bitter opposition, even from his own friends, strove untiringly to achieve union government at home; who was never discouraged in the effort, but, as soon as those he would serve blocked one channel, sought for another; the man who saw the justice of conscription and the imperious necessity for prohibition, and placed them both on the statute book, in spite of the storm these proposals roused in many quarters; the man who has thus thought what was right and done what was right finds no difficulty in recognizing the right time to say the right thing, or to say it in the right way."

A SOCIALIST KAISERITE

Little interest outside of Germany will be taken in the appointment of the socialist leader, Scheidemann, to a place in the German ministry, for two quite distinct reasons. In the first place it is still to be proved that the ministry, from the chancellor down, has any authority and in the second place the name Scheidemann has ceased to command confidence. This is not because he has invariably supported the government at critical times for patriotism excuses much; it is because he lent himself to the German government's scheme for the tricking of international socialists. In foreign countries it was long believed that he was honestly working for a clean peace; his behavior in regard to Russia showed that while opposed to the annexationist programme in theory he was ready to accept it in practice, and to use his influence in foreign countries to promote a German peace.—Springfield Republican.

A POINTED QUESTION

I want to ask you a question, a question personal to me and not to you: If I know a young man who has given up his home, friends, life plans, and a salary of $1,000 a year, given up his all to go to that hell of shot and poisonous gases on a $30 a month job, if that young man is willing to fight my battles for me, how many Victory Bonds must I buy to keep my self-respect.—Anon.

NO EXCUSE FOR POVERTY

The real greatness of a nation consists, not in billions of dollars of trade and industrial capital, but in justice to producers and consumers, and in a high standard of living for the workers. Money accumulated by overcharging the consumer or sweating the worker is an evidence of national weakness, not of national strength. On this continent, with its rich resources and sparse population there is no excuse for such grinding poverty as is found in old and overcrowded countries. If we can obtain security from invasion that security should be used for the purpose of building up communities in which the highest ideals of social justice will be realized. —Daily Star, Toronto.

The Sun's Viewpoint

Grand Forks Sun: The charge has been made by a number of papers in the Kootenays and in other sections of the province that the provincial government is "farming out" the printing of the delinquent tax sale lists for political support.

Will Be Forthcoming.

Victoria Colonist: The government has every reason to expect $500,000,000 will be forthcoming. As far as this district is concerned there is no doubt its quota will be realized. The people were never more determined than they are today that victory must be won.

WANTS ANTWERP HARBOR

Under the title: The Antwerp Question, the Keolnische Volks-Zeitung (No. of July 11, 1918, 539) deals with the various solutions considered in a German point of view, as to the future state of Antwerp. There remains but one, according to the German paper, that fulfills the imperialist plan: To let Belgium's eastern frontier open so that Germany may secure the harbor of Antwerp. Except this, the Koelnishche Volks-Zeitung sees no way for the Germans to preserve the least influence in Antwerp. We must admit logically, says the writer, that the odium we have brought upon ourselves during the war, will subsist a long time after and that hate will disgust us with the idea of using the beautiful harbor of the Scheldt.

FOR FRANCE TO SAY

It is for France to say. More than England, even more than haunted Belgium, many times more than America, France has the right by every title that suffering can confer to stand in absolute judgment upon the evil thing that has assailed human society. It was France that was felled by its treacherous spring less than half a century ago, France that was so long poisoned by a fear no laughter could hide that the beast would rear in a secret moment and leap again. And when that terrible hour came it was France who gave, gave without stint and without count, and has been giving sternly and gloriously for the world's sake since.

And it is for France to say—for France, bloody but unbowed, to say—how much the mad beast must pay.

How otherwise can the world go on believing?—N.Y. Tribune.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a small bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

MY MESSAGE TO LABOR

By Ben Tillett, M.P.

Gorged with murder-blood and treasure, the Kaiser, Ludendorff and the whole gang of Junkers—their maddest ambition more than satisfied by the crushing of small nations, the corruption of other nations and the anarchy of Russia—started out on a new and still more arrogant offensive.

They are flinging away millions more of lives of the industrial people of the European nations,, including their own, to gratify their insensate ambitions. They are bleeding remorselessly the working people of the world to gorge themselves with territory, military glory and wealth. It all makes the position terribly clear to us who carry the industrial burden. The characteristic of the bully-German is simply rapacity. And now he has to face the cost of his own supreme mistake.

His mistake in thus defying the world has brought him today face to face with the moral antagonism of the world organized into an iron military resistance, and behind that resistance is the psychology of a great spiritual courage backing the organized fight that the free nations are putting up. All nations can now see that to be at the mercy of Germany, as the peoples of Eastern Europe, is to receive not mercy but tyranny, and to experience the gringing heel of unrelenting oppression.

The German is now adding to the unspeakable barbarism of the war such wicked implements as the new gas that strips men's bodies of clothes and skin alike and murders them where they stand in the trench or dugout. But the Germans are beginning to regret their own malignancy by reason of our effective reprisals, and I hope that everything will be done to quicken transport, to expedite sending out to our men at the Front the power that will relieve them and throw the enemy into confusion and press them back. Every ton of shells, every consignment of guns, every crate of gas-masks, every cargo of rails and sleepers that reaches the Front without hitch, every ship that leaves the slips and sets out on its voyage, is a dircet blow to the German menace.

The docker and the riveter, the shell-maker and the chemical worker, the worker in the factories and in the fields, who put through with all speed the supplies of food and munitionment —are all helping our men at the front to break the power of the bullies over the peoples.

So inflated with pride have the Kaiesr and his Junkers become, such ascendency have the military authorities secured, that they have been able to repress all the elements of social power in their own country. Their workers are taken by the ten thousand, exposed ruthlessly to the most galling fire of musketry and artillery alike. The military autocracy of Prussia is dragooning its slaves and driving them on to death in order to gratify their own ambitions and enfeeble the internal powers of their own social democracy. And through these slaves of their they are perpetrating upon otr men every atrocity conceivable.

If such tyrants became triumphant on the Western Front what a Hell would lie before us! Even with victory attending us, the industrial workers will be faced by years of economic strain. But if we had to add to the expenses of the war the addition of an indemnity to be paid to an enemy the burden upon labor would amount to an overwhelming slavery. Taxes for indemnity payments and for enormous armaments would be chained to our backs and to the backs of our children and their children. With food still at high prices our whole position would become intolerable. The greater part of that whole burden would necessarily be assumed by industry and industrialism.

What it would mean to have our own debts with those of the enemy superimposed upon them baffles the imagination. But that is what would come upon us if we allowed our army and navy to be crushed by any slackness or apathy on our part. We must back up our men with every effort and give to their dependents every succor. There is not a man among them who is not ready to lay down his life for us, and we must do our level best for them.

FINANCING THE WAR FROM OUR OWN POCKETS

During the first year of the war Canada was content to secure needed money elsewhere but as the conflict lengthened and other nations felt the financial pinch the dictates of necessity, as well as self-respect, demanded the flotation of loans at home. The business of raising war loans since then has been of increasing importance. The first domestic war loan, issued in November, 1915, was immediately successful, resulting in bank subscriptions of $25,000,000 and public subscriptions of $78,729,500 or a total of $113,729,500. This in the face of an objective of but $50,000,000 was most gratifying.

By the following summer another domestic loan was needed, and a call for $100,000,000 brought in $201,444,800 of which $50,000,000 was from the banks and $151,444,80 from the public. In March 1917, the third Canadian war loan was floated. The call was for $15,000,000 and $260,768,000 was realized, of which $60,000,000 was from the banks and the balance from the public. It will thus be seen that the part played by the public greatly increased in every new issue.

The greatest success was in November, 1917, when the fourth loan was triumphantly floated. The request again was $150,000,000 and all from the public, but the subscriptions amounted to $419,000,000. The interest of the public was demonstrated in remarkable degree for while there were 24,862 subscribers to the first loan, 34,526 to the second and 40,800 to the third. In the fourth no fewer than 820,035 subscribers were registered, or one in every 9.62 of the population of the Dominion.

Speeding 'em up on

Fry's Cocoa

The best way to get the most work out of the "human engine" is to give it the food that has the most energy in it. Of all foods, certainly this means FRY'S COCOA —the great food beverage that is all delicious nourishment. If you have to work harder these days, try a regular course of FRY'S. You will need less of other and more expensive foods. There is concentrated strength for muscle and brain in every single cup.

Truest economy—use FRY'S

SLAVE AND EMPEROR

"Our cavalry have rescued Nazareth from the enemy whose supermen described Christianity as a creed for slaves."

The Emperor mocked at Nazareth
In his almighty hour.
The Slave, that bowed himself to death
And walked with slaves in Nazareth,
What were His words but wasted breath
Before that "will to power."

Yet, in the darkest hour of all,
When black defeat began,
The Emperor heard the mountains quake,
He felt the gaves beneath him shake,
He watched his legions rally and break,
And he whimpered as they ran.

"I heard a shout that moves the earth,
A cry that wakes the dead!
Will no one tell me whence they come,
For all my messengers are dumb?
What power is this that comes to birth
And breaks my power?" he said.

Then, all around his foundering guns,
Though dawn was not now far,
The darkness filled with a living fear
That whispered at the Emperor's ear,
"The armies of the dead draw near Beneath an eastern star."

The trumpet blows in Nazareth,
The Slave is risen again!
Across the bitter wastes of death,
And the Power we mocked as wasted
The horsemen ride from Nazareth, breath
Returns, in power, to reign;
Rides on, in white, through Nazareth,
To save the world again.

—Alfred Noyes in N. Y. Times.

It is said that low neck dresses and high skirts tend to increase the contagion of influenza. If that is the case there will be a bunch of women in the country who will have to buy some clothes.

THE KAISER'S VIEW OF MR. WILSON

The Kaiser's dislike of President Wilson and his anxiety to retain Belgium are revealed by Mr. Arthur N. Davis, his American dentist, whose reminiscences are appearing in the London Times. Mr. Davis writes:

When I was preparing to leave the Kaiser, after attending him,. he stepped towards me and said:

"Davis, Wilson is a real scoundrel!"

My face flushed, I suppose, at the insult to our President, and my resentment was so apparent that the Kaiser immediately apologized. "I beg your pardon, Davis," he declared; "I know you're an American and I beg your pardon for hurting your feelings but If you only knew you would realize what a scoundrel your President is. When it comes to throat-cutting, Wilson should have his cut first!"

On one occasion I told the Kaiser that it had been suggested that if Mr. Ford wanted to end the war he could pay Germany $100,000,000 and buy Belgium back.

"One hundred million dollars!" the Kaiser repeated. "No, Davis, it will cost much more than that to get Belgium back!"

He was always particularly bitter against Lloyd George. "Lloyd George is ruining England," he declared. "He is virtually a Socialist, and is the agent and spokesman of Lord Northcliffe, who is the real ruler of England today. How can the King of England sit there and allow this sort of thing to go on without asserting himself? Lloyd George makes a new speech every week. One would think he would run out of words. He thinks he's a second Cromwell!"

LEMONS WHITEN AND BEAUTIFY THE SKIN

Make this beauty lotion cheaply for your face, neck, arms and hands.

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, whitener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any drug store and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It is marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.

NOTHING ELSE LIKE IT IN FERNIE

There has never been anything in Fernie with the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. ONE SPOONFUL flushes the ENTIRE bowel tract so completely it relieves ANY CASE sour stomach, gas or constipation and prevents appendicitis. The INSTANT, pleasant action of Adler-i-ka surprises both doctors and patients. A. W. Bleasdell, Druggist.

THE DOMINION'S NATURAL RESOURCES

At a recent meeting of the Royal Geographical society, the Hon. Arthur Meighan read a paper on The Natural Resources of Canada. His audience comprised most of those public men who take a lively interest in the greater Britain overseas, and the close attention with which the speaker was followed seemed to promise gratifying results later on. Any man who is privileged to address the members of England's premier body of geographers is certain of a distinguished and influential audience.

While little that the Minister of the Interior said would strike any Canadian possessed of average information as new, it may have been quite otherwise under the circumstances of its delivery. If so it served an excellent purpose. Our natural resources are great; this we know; the next step is to see that those who may help develop these resources also realize their importance.

He spoke of the tremendous mountain ranges, not forgetting to mention that Mount Logan, in the St. Elias range of the Yukon, towers to 19,539 feet; of the great waterways; the lakes, almost seas, and of the 600,000,000 acres of forest. Our coal reserve is placed by Mr. Meighan at 1,234,000,000,000, tons, or equal to seven-tenths of all the known coal deposits under the British flag, of which Canadian reserve in Alberta is thought to hold four-fifths. Happy Alberta.

It appears we have, according to the latest census, enough caribou roaming the so-called barren lands to feed the allied nations for years.

Dr. W. Miller, Provincial Geologist for Ontario, spoke at some length on the mineral resources of the Dominion, but unfortunately, his remarks, owing to an oversight, could not be reproduced with those of Mr. Meighen. The latter, seeing that a better authority was to deal with them, did little more than touch upon our nickle, copper, lead, gold, silver and other stores.

Many realize that, hitherto, settlement has made far greater strides in an east and west line than from south to north. In fact, Canada, so far as settlement is concerned, resembles somewhat a long, straggling street. From Halifax to Vancouver, and from Vancouver to Halifax the traveller faces the setting or the rising sun—never the pole star. Yet, as Mr. Meighen intimated, our aim should be to add depth to our occupation, and to enter into and fully possess the wonderful heritage this Dominion was intended to be. It has always been a tradition that the "up north" was practically uninhabitable, but those who have tried it, who know it best, do not say so; spring comes almost as soon on the Peace as on the St. Lawrence, and earlier, perhaps, in northern British Columbia than in Manitoba. Remoteness can be overcome; severity of climate was never much more than a bogy conjured up by the timid.—Manitoba Free Press.

BUY CONTINUED PROSPERITY

Before our last Victory Loan financial experts were dubious as to the outlook for Canada. She could not borrow abroad. It was necessary that she have a large available capital to finance credits for British and foreign war orders. Canada was thrown on her own resources and appealed to her citizens.

The remarkable over-subscription of the 1917 Victory Loan completely changed the uncertain outlook which prevailed. It gave a new impetus to agriculture, commerce and prosperity. It invigorated our efforts in the war. It allowed our provincial Goverments, municipal and other borrowers to finance their requirements at home. In short, it gave another lease of life to the activities of the Dominion.

The Victory Loan of 1918 will accomplish the same purposes. Upon the ready response of the large and and small investor, depends the immediate economic future of Canada. Everyone's prosperity is involved.

Prepare to buy continued Prosperity in Victory Bonds.

SIGN IT IN BERLIN!

The place in which to sign the treaty of peace is Berlin. It should be signed there in the presence of a representative army of at least 100,000 Allied troops.

The war should end where it began. And when that day comes the Hohenzollern capital should be in the full possession of the armies of the allies. It would not be practicable to have all the victorious troops "in at the death"; they are scattered too widely for that; but it would be possible to have representatives of all the armies there—from Serbia, and Belgium and France, the first victims of German rapacity; from Great Britain and her colonies, the first to go to the aid of invaded Belgium and France and assaulted Serbia; from resuscitated Russia, again loyal to France; from Italy and Roumania; from Japan faithful to her alliance with Britain; from America slow to understand and realize her duty to humanity and her obligations to those who had borne the heat of the battle — her battle as well as theirs — for nearly three terrible years, but at last the deciding factor on the side of right and justice. They ought to be there. They have earned the right to enjoy such a triumph in person or by proper, proportionate representation—all these armies who have fought so valiantly for the victory of right over might.—Minneapolis Tribune.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPLY CLEAR

Some of the American papers express dissatisfaction or at least misgiving in their comments on the President's answer to the peace proposals. Probably they are thinking of the tone rather than the matter of the reply. Official communications are couched in language somewhat different from editorials and speeches. But President Wilson, though he talks in the official tone, is quite clear and decided. There can be no armistice unless the German armies remove from all invaded territory. It might be added that if they do consent to retire there must be no destruction of property by the retreating armies.

The President will not let the Germans get away with the vague declaration that they agree to the "basis" of his deliverances. Do they accept the terms or not?

The President also wants to know with whom he is dealing. Is the Chancellor speaking "merely for the constituted authorities of the Empire who have so far conducted the war"? In other words, does the proposal come from men who can be trusted? To name such men would be a hard thing to do. And their word will not be enough. There must be physical guarantees. The allied armies must be placed in such positions that treachery will be impossible. Not only must France and Belgium, Russia, Serbia, and Montenegro be evacuated, but the Balkan peninsula must be occupied by the allied armies in such manner that any attempt at German re-occupation will be impossible. On that point the allied military commanders must speak the decisive word.

VERSATILITY OF STAR SHOWN IN DANCES

Nazimova, the great star of the Metro pictures, "Revelation," which will be presented at the Orpheum theatre on Friday and Saturday, shows her ability as an artistic interpreter of classic dancing in this photodrama.

Dressed as a bacchante, a priestess of Bacchus, god of wine and revelry, with leaves in her hair, a garland of grapes across her shoulders, with a goblet in one hand and a cluster of grapes in the other, she performs "La Danse Bacchanal," typifying the exhuberant spirit of revelry of a Parisian cafe.

The great Nazimova executed this dance with true artistry and poetry of motion in graceful movements which were ideal for registration by the motion picture camera. On the screen, this dance is a revelation in accurate presentation of dance movements in motion pictures.

"IN FLANDERS' FIELD"

Answering once more Col. John D. McRae's beautiful poem, "In Flanders' Field," written after the second battle of Ypres, R. W. Lillard in the New York Evening Post gave America's answer to Canada's appeal for the cause of democracy in the following lines:

Rest ye in peace, ye Flanders dead.
The fight that ye so bravely led
We've taken up. And we will keep
True faith with you who be asleep
With each a cross to mark his bed
And poppies blowing overhead,
Where once his own life blood ran red,
So let your rest be sweet and deep
In Flanders Field.
Fear not that ye have died for naught,
The torch ye threw to us we caught.
Ten million hands will hold it high,
And Freedom's light shall never die.
We've learned the lesson that ye taught.
In Flanders Field.

NOTES AND COMMENT

Let no one run away with the idea that the Teutonic "statesmen" have accepted the terms laid down by President Wilson as essential to peace. They have only accepted them "as a basis for negotiations," which, of course, means nothing at all.

Belgium continues to be the test of German sincerity. When a German chancellor offers to evacuate the country, to rehabilitate it out of the German treasury, to pay an indemnity and to turn over to an international court the murderers and rapists who held high carnival in that unhappy land it will be time enough to believe in the sincerity of protestations of a change in the German heart.

Prince Maximilian, the new German chancellor, says that the new government is responsible to the reichstag and that he is quite sure that after the war this will continue to be the rule in Germany. No doubt he could get the Kaiser to underwrite this. Over a hundred years ago, during the Napoleonic wars, a Prussian king promised a free constitution to the people "after the war"; but the pledge still awaits fulfilment.

When Gen. Simon Buckner of the Confederacy in command of Fort Donelson in February, 1862, wrote to Gen. Grant, commanding the army of investment, asking for commissioners to agree upon terms of surrender, he got this reply from Ulysses S.: "No terms except an unconditional and immediate surrender can be accepted. I propose to move immediately upon your works." That was an admirable letter which might well serve as a model in these times to the great men of the Allied world. It was also an effective letter since, upon its receipt, Gen. Buckner surrendered without further parley.

CALLS FOR BIG INCREASE IN U. S. COAL OUTPUT

An increased production campaign has been launched by United States Fuel Administrator Garfield, calling for an increase of 16 1-2 per cent in the bituminous output and an increase of 6 1-3 per cent in the anthracite output in the next six months. The supplies are to meet the American military program and assure supplies for domestic needs.

The bituminous fields are asked for an average production of 12,234,000 tons weekly, an increase of 1,731,000 tons over production during the same period last year, and the anthracite mines are asked to average 2,030,000 tons weekly, an increase as compared with the winter months of last year of 121,000. Maintenance of these quotas, Fuel Administrator Garfield has said, "will give us all the coal needed this winter."

FAIR FOOD PRICES

How will the fair price food project work? In essence it is briefly told. Each municipal area having appointed its committee, will take evidence exactly as in a public inquiry. From this it will learn the average price at which merchants buy. Taking all local factors into consideration, the committee will then decide on a fair price which the consumer should pay. This must give the retailer a reasonable profit. If the findings do not conform to the notion of the majority of consumers in the district, they have the means either of verifying the committee's decision, or of having it immediately revised in the light of local knowledge. Is not this the essence of local self-government, carried out a step farther than has ever yet been done in Canada?

Consumers will be made acquainted with fair prices by means of statements usually, in table form, published in the local newspapers.

"RECIPROCAL FISCAL CONCESSIONS"

Co-operative action and mutual loyalty between capital and labor, reinforced by adequate tariff schedules, will be required to safeguard the urban and rural populations against the evils of unemployment and hard times. In saying this we do not mean that customs duties must be raised. We admit that reciprocal fiscal concessions may be necessary in Eastern and Western Canada. It is nevertheless certain that the national policy of moderate protection upon which Canada's material progress has long been based must be maintained in the interests of a united nation. — Toronto Daily News.

THE SAMS KAISER

Prince Maximilian now appeals directly to President Wilson and to President Wilson alone to inaugurate peace negotiations. Back of the new chancellor is the kaiser, who made him. It is the same kaiser we now know so well—the kaiser who permitted the Lusitania to be sunk; who had his foreign ministers hedge, lie and falsely promise to the same Wilson during a year and a half so called restricted submarine warfare; who arrogantly declared an unrestricted submarine campaign in violation of international law and flouted America's rights at sea because he held the American government, and particularly Wilson in such contempt that he thought America would be unable to strike back while the war lasted. It is also the kaiser who went to Brest-Litovsk to make a peace with the Bolsheviki "without annexations nor indemnities," and came away with half of European Russia in his possession. Even Mr. Wilson is not as simple-minded as the kaiser may once have thought him to be.—Springfield Republican.

The latest rumor as to who will be the next possessor of a senatorial toga names none other than Hon. W. Sloan, minister of mines for British Columbia. As the story comes straight from Ottawa there must be something in it. Meantime, the rumors that R. F. Green and Hon. Martin Burrell, both from this province, are slated for similar honors, are not doing duty. A little later we may know more about it, while the stories lose nothing in the telling. — Trail News.

Influenza, according to the doctors, is nothing more than an intensified and virulent form of the grip, and far more contagious. One of the best prescriptions given, when the symptoms seem strong enough to warrant it, is to hurry home and get to bed and then send for your doctor. But it is foolish and criminal to make the epidemic a fad and fashion. The would-be invalids will grab at this disease as a new cause for spreading their troubles. The doctors will reap a harvest and a lot of people will be miserable listening to these would-be invalids tell how it first affected them. It has always been thus.—Kamloops Sentinel.

The successful flotation by the Grand Trunk Pacific in London of a loan of three million pounds sterling, by the Grand Trunk Railway Company in London, causes the Toronto Globe to remark that British investors do not appear to take seriously the lamentations of the opponents of public ownership who have been accusing the Canadian government of confiscatory designs. The Toronto newspaper does not find in the apparent improving of the Grand Trunk credit any reason why Canada should not go on with the complete nationalization of the railways of Canada, especially including the Grand Trunk with its profitable branch lines in populous Ontario sections, and which would make a state-owned system a paying concern, it asserts.

Are you missing any of the new uses for Gold Dust?

Fresh, sweet dish towels

After one or two dishwashing sessions your towels refuse to respond—no matter how careful you are of them, no matter how clean you wash your dishes. What is the matter? Grease. You can't feel it or see it, but it is there in the towel. A gentle effective grease dissolvent like Gold Dust takes hold of this trouble. A tablespoonful to a dishpan of water, a moment's swishing up and down, and out come your towels spotless and greaseless.

Save your rugs and carpets

You will find that the brush in your carpet sweeper picks up more than threads and dust. If you run your hand over it, it feels actually greasy. Gold Dust will quickly free it from dust and grease. Dissolve a tablespoonful of Gold Dust in half a pail of hot water. Whisk the brush in the water, rinse in clear water and dry quickly. Your rugs and carpets will then keep their fresh, new look.

A modern idea in dishwashing

If you want to get rid of drying your dishes with a towel, try this: Use a tablespoonful of Gold Dust to a dishpan of water, wash all dishes of one kind together, scald with boiling water in a wire dish drainer. It is because Gold Dust so thoroughly dissolves the grease that the dishes come out so clean and sparkling.

How to clean your meat chopper

If you've had trouble cleaning this useful kitchen helper, try a tablespoonful of Gold Dust in a dishpan of hot water. See how quickly and thoroughly Gold Dust dissolves the grease—how fresh and sweet it leaves your chopper. On baking day, too, Gold Dust makes a quick "clean-up" of bread mixer, pans, rolling pin, spoons and all cooking utensils.

LETTER FROM THE FRONT

Miss Florence White has received the following letter from her brother at the front:

I can only tell you about the war just at present as we have been seeing quite a lot of it lately. We were in the show on Aug. 8 and had a perfectly roaring time, and then again on the 26th and a still more interesting time it was. You will have read in the papers just where the Canadians were engaged. We've been on the go for the last six or eight weeks—real moving warfare. The Bosche is getting it in the neck all right now. He is getting fed up and is not the scrapper he once was although even now he puts up ticklish jobs to handle. Our first show was a wonderful surprise. He hadn't the foggiest notion of anything coming. We moved into position during the night previous to the kick-off and at 4.20 to the dot the howling row started. We moved off and had to cross a river to get to Bosche land. He was doing his best to prevent anyone getting over and the shells dropped thick and plentiful around the place. We pushed on and eventually got to our objective. I started off as supply officer, but had not got far before I became adjutant and remained so for the day until the adjutant came back. He was only slightly wounded. We established our headquarters in a Bosche artillery position with his field guns and 8 in. howitzers all around us. Quite a lot of dead Bosches and horses were lying around. It was a valley and he had quite a number of guns located there which we captured complete with plenty of prisoners. Our people pushed on and before night were miles ahead. We had a long march the next day to catch up to our front line. The enemy had been driven back about 10 or 11 miles to some of the trenches he used to occupy in the beginning of 1916. We scrapped with him there for two days, bombing, rifle and machine gun—real attacks all the time and after knocking him silly took his trenches. He was sick. Then this last show I had quite a time. Started off in command of a company in support. Went over and started scrapping with his first line. Took that and incidentally a bunch of prisoners and went on and ran into a lot of machine guns which caused quite a scrap. I got out of touch with my fellows so looked around to see what I could do. Found a couple of tanks with nothing to do so shooed them after this Bosche machine gun nest. Our right company had lost all its officers so went up and took that lot over and collected the men together. The Bosche was in a strong position on the left so bombed and shelled him till he beat it. Then after him, through a big wood ,taking a pill box on the other side. He fought rather hard but we gave him no rest. As soon as we had gone ahead and got to our position the artillery would bang away somewhere else and that part went ahead. He straffed us pretty heavily some times. Didn't think I was worth a cent. Machine gun bullets cut chunks of grass around your feet and took bits of your clothing and equipment away. I don't know how it is that I am still alive for I am one of two officers out of a dozen who tackled the job on the right. I picked up a number of souvenirs in odd minutes, a good Hun revolver, a dispatch case, some caps with their badges, belts with "Gott-Mitt-Uns" buckles.

KILLED ON AUGUST 10 WHILE FIGHTING

Captain Frank Whitlow, whose death was mentioned in these columns recently, met his death on the 10th of August while fighting in the cavalry with the 2nd C.M.R., and now lies in a 2nd C.M.R. cemetery, beside the Roye Road about a mile from the village of Bouchier.

Born at Fern Bank, St. John, Wakefield, Yorkshire, Capt. Whitlow was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Whitlow. He was educated at Silcoates Hall and finished his education in Germany, where he studied music for some time. He came to Canada in 1899, served throughout the Boer war with the Royal Canadian Dragoons, and was offered a commission at its close. He volunteered for the present war in 1915, finally going overseas with the 225th Battalion in January, 1917, meantime having done good recruiting work in the Kitsilas district, where he was well known. He reverted to the ranks in order to go over to France, and took part in the battle of Vimy Ridge and other large Canadian engagements. He was promoted to the command of "A" Co. when Major Foord, M.C., was killed in the Paschendaelle fight, Whitlow himself having been gassed in the same engagement.

He was a lovable and courageous man, a statement which is borne out by letters received since his death from his superior officers and men in all ranks, and could ill be spared.

THE THUNDERBOLT OF MACEDONIA

The most extraordinary campaign of the war, one of the most extraordinary campaigns in all the history of the war, has been the Allied drive in Macedonia. The test is a simple one. The battle of the Cerna-Vardar began on September 14. Twelve days after the Bulgars sued for peace. Tradition will enshrine Franchet D'Esperey as the Thunderbolt of Macedonia. The Six Weeks' war of 1866 is thrown in the shade. To the four years and more of drama may yet be added the supreme dramatic touch, that a war of weary deadlock, a war which at one time seemed to be destined to wear itself out in a dreary exhaustion, should be hastened to its end by a lightning stroke. Other features of the dramatic are not wanting; that it should be the Serbs, the most sorely tried of all the Allies, the men at one time without a foot of the national soil to stand on, driven upon a pitiful pilgrimage through trackless wastes and across the sea, catching their breath under the shield of the Allies, and returning indomitably to the fight—that this small remnant of a people, and the original target of Teuton ambition and hatred, should be the one to strike a blow that shakes the Kaiser-power to its foundations.—New York Post.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Cure Sick Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath—Candy Cathartic.

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels—you always get relief with Cascarets. They immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet and head clear for months. They work while you sleep.

The reply of the president is a remarkable document and it is made remarkable by its very inconclusiveness. He abandons the academic questioning of his first note, which sent a thrill of uneasy uncertainty throughout the country. The unanimous outcry of his countrymen forces him to reassure them of the military situation. But he still fails to make the utmost of his opportunity, to present the issue in short and forceful fashion, and to hearten the forces of the world for the task ahead.—Boston Herald.

THE VICTORY BOND CAMPAIGN

The 1918 Victory Bond Campaign is in full swing, The District Committee has received from headquarters the advertising matter and full information as to the nature of the Bonds, and the Committee are energetically engaged in its distribution. The allotment to this district is $500,000.00 and it is obvious that this amount makes obligatory the most agressive campaign. Sub-committees for Canvassing, Advertising and Tabulating have been formed, and the General Committee ask and expect from the general public not only its loyal and generous subscriptions after October 28th, but its active participation in the preparation of the campaign before that date. The Committee's rooms are already open at the Napanee Hotel, and all who are willing to assist in making the District Loan an outstanding success are invited to attend a meeting there on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p.m. The Committee cannot emphasize too strongly the fact that only the co-operation of all will bring about the result which alone can justify those at home to the men at the front.

THIS MEANS YOU

City of Fernie

FERNIE, BRITISH COLUMBIA.

NOTICE

Until further notice all gatherings as described in the regulations issued by the Provincial Board of Health and published below are prohibited within the city of Fernie. This order will be Strictly Enforced and will remain in effect until due notice is given.

Meetings essential to successful carrying on of the war are exempt. Chairmen of such are asked to make them as brief as possible.

G. B. Thomson,
Fernie, Oct. 23, 1918. Mayor.

Spanish Influenza Regulations

Regulations issued by the Provincial Board of Health, pursuant to the provisions of the "Health Act," being chapter 98 of the "Revised Statutes of British Columbia, 1911," for the prevention, treatment, mitigation, and suppression of the infectious disease known as Spanish Influenza.

1. In these regulations the expression "place of assembly" means any cathedral, church, chapel, mission, or place used for the holding of any religious or devotional meeting, school class, or service; any public or private school, college, or university; any class-room, lecture-room, or assembly room; any public library; any theatre, within the meaning of the interpretation section of the "Health Act"; any moving-picture theatre, dance-hall, pool-room, gymnasium, swimming-pool, or skating-rink; any public fair or exhibition; any public auction; any lodge or society meeting of any fraternal, benevolent, or trades order, society or union; any literary or social club; any place where any public or private dance is held; and such buildings, rooms, and places as the Provincial Board of Health may be ordered from time to time to add to those enumerated in this section.

2. Within any part of the Province of British Columbia in which these regulations are in force, and during the time these are in force:—

(a) No person, firm, association, company or corporation, whether as owner, proprietor, lessee, manager, board of management, agent, trustee, employee, or otherwise, shall keep or permit to be kept open any building, room or tent for use by the public or by any persons as a place of assembly as defined in these regulations; or permit any person to enter or attend therein, or use the same as a place of assembly;

(b) No person shall enter or attend in any building, room, or tent in use as a place of assembly, or use or join with other persons in using any building, room, or tent as a place of assembly.

3. These regulations shall come into force and remain in force during such times and in such parts of the Province of British Columbia as the Provincial Board of Health may from time to time by order declare.

4. These regulations may be cited in all rules, orders, and regulations of the Provincial Board of Health as the "Spanish Influenza Regulations."

SPECIAL NOTICE TO PARENTS

Children must not be alowed to congregate in numbers. They have been doing so in the Post Office, stores, and other public buildings in sections of the city. The schools have been closed to prevent this, and it will be the parents' duty to see that it is not allowed. Children must be kept at home, either within the limits of your own lots or in close proximity to the same. If necessary to send children up town on errands, send note with them as the police have been instructed to demand same from them. If note is not produced, action will be taken against the parents. Children accompanied by parents will not be accosted.

The earnest co-operation of every citizen is necessary in order to successfully combat the prevailing epidemic.

By Order,
Geo. B. Thomson, Mayor
Fernie, B. C., Oct. 25th, 1918.

THE SUPREME COURT DOCKET

The Supreme Court fall assizes will open here on October 31st This will be purely a civil assize as there is but one criminal case, that of Rex vs. A. Arden, charged with bribery and extortion, but who was not committed for trial until after the dates were fixed for holding assizes, and consequently this will have to wait over for a special criminal session or possibly not be heard until the Spring Assize next May. On the civil docket there are five actions viz: Wyatt vs. Beck, for judgment and title to property by way of mortgage, Mansfield vs. Zwick a seduction action, in which the plaintiff sues for $15,000 damages for the seduction of his daughter; Baskin & Stedman vs. The Elk Lumber Co., for $2,500 damages on account of loss by fire which originated on the property of the defendant company. A. Macneil vs. District No. 6, Mine and Smeltermen's Union for account for services as solicitor, $3,000, and Scarpino vs. Rizzuto, $2,500 damages for wrongful assault. The defendant was found guilty of this offense in the criminal court some weeks ago and fined $35.00.

ONE HUNDRED DOLLAR VICTORY BOND WILL:

Pay 80 men for 1 day, or,
Buy 3 rifles and their bayonets, or,
110 bushels of oats, or,
8 75 mm. field gun shell, or,
200 hand grenades, or,
T.N.T. for bursting charge of a 14 inch shell, or,
5 incendiary airplane bombs, or,
Provide 25 lbs. of ether for anaesthesia, or,
Pay Canada's war bill for 9 seconds.

SPANISH 'FLU' IS HERE

The first cases of Spanish "Flu" made their appearance in Fernie on Tuesday, when a number of lumberjacks were brought in from Jaffray with the disease. Since then about twenty cases have developed in the city, mostly among the foreign element. A number of commercial travellers are also in the hospital suffering from pneumonia as a result of the disease.

Only one death has been reported so far, that of a lumberjack from Barnstead's camp near Jaffray. He died from pneumonia about 24 hours after he had been brought to town.

On Wednesday, Mayor Thomson issued a proclamation closing all the schools and all places of amusement and public gatherings, and it is hoped that the epidemic will be held in check by these measures.

Natal and Michel are both under strict quarantine although they only have about a dozen cases.

With the exception of the Elk Lumber Co. camps (where no employees are allowed to leave the camp or no new men are being taken on,) nearly every camp in the district is suffering from the epidemic.

The local medical authorities report that all cases under treatment are doing well and that there is little danger of the epidemic spreading if the public use ordinary precautions.

TERMS OF VICTORY LOAN 1918

Sir Thomas White in his speech at Winnipeg on October 8th announced the terms of the Victory Loan 1918 as follows:

Through the prospectus of the fifth Canadian war loan—the Victory Loan of 1918—the Dominion of Canada will ask for a minimum amount of $300,000,000, with the right to accept all or any part of subscriptions in excess of that sum, to be used for war purpases only, and to be spent wholly in Canada. The rate of interest will be 5½ per cent per annum, payable May 1 and November 1, and the denominations $50, $100, $500 and$1000. The loan will be offered in two maturities —five year bonds, due November 1, 1923, and 15-year bonds, due November 1, 1933.

The issue price will be 100 and accrued interest for both maturities, making the income return 5½ per cent per annum. Provision is made for payment in five instalments as follows: 10 per cent on application; 20 per cent December 6, 1918; 20 per cent January 6, 1919; 20 per cent February 6, 1919; 31.16 per cent March 6, 1919. The last payment of 31.16 per cent covers 30 per cent balance of principal and 1.16 per cent representing accrued interest at 5½ per cent from November 1 to due dates of the respective instalments. As a full half year's interest will be paid on May 1, 1919, the cost of the bonds will be 100 and interest. Payment may be made in full at the time of application at 100 without interest, or any instalment due date thereafter with interest accrued at 5½ per cent per annum. Bearer bonds will be available for delivery at the time of application to subscribers desirous of making payment in full. Bonds registered as to principal only, or as to both principal and interest in authorized denominations, will be delivered to subscribers making payment in full as soon as the required registration can be made.

Bonds of this issue will be free from taxation—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada, and will carry the privilege of conversion into any future domestic issues of like maturity or longer, issued by the government, during the remaining period of the war.

Subscription lists will be open on October 28, 1918, and close on or before November 16, 1918.

DEATH OF MRS. H. B. FULLER

Last Saturday Hamilton B. Fuller, cost accountant for the Consolidated company, started for Calgary on account of the serious illness of Mrs. Fuller. At Fernie he received a wire telling him of her sudden death Sunday morning. Mrs. Fuller had gone to Calgary some time before for treatment for bronchial trouble by Dr. Niblett, a friend of Mr. Fuller, and was steadily improving up to last Saturday, when a turn came for the worse.

The remains were brought to Trail and a private funeral was held at the Fuller home on Smelter flat Wednesday afternoon, Rev. H. R. Ragg, of the Anglican church, officiating. Interment was in Trail cemetery, the pall bearers being T. W. Bingay, J. L. Maclachlan, B. R. Warden, R. W. Diamond, B. B. Mills, Dr. J. Nay.

Mrs. Fuller was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Marlatt, of Trail, being but 26 at the time of her death. They were married at Hosmer in July, 1911. settling in Trail in 1914. Mr. and Mrs. Marlatt lost a son some time ago in the war, and the sympathy of the community goes out to the family and to Mr. Fuller.—Trail News.

AMERICANS LOAN $10,000

In the fourth Liberty Loan campaign just closed, Mr. E. A. Wakefield, American Consul, reports that in this district there were some fifty subscribers to the American Loan, the aggregate of which was over $10,000. Over half of these subscriptions were fully paid up, the balance being on the instalment system. The Americans in this district apparently have taken a much keener interest in the loan just closed than at the time of the Third Liberty Loan some months ago when only $2,000 was subscribed, or less than one-fifth of the amount obtained on this occasion.

NATIONAL FISH DAY

October 31st is National Fish Day. It is the new national day which for benefits ought to be as well known as Thanksgiving. The intention is to make known the tremendous wealth of our Canadian seas and lakes, now largely going to waste because peoples' tastes have run toward meat. At present the annual value of Canadian fisheries is $52,000,000 or only about one-eighth of a dollar a week for each person. Forty-three years ago it was $35,000,000. The fish industry and fish consumption have not kept pace with the general progress of the country. A revival is long overdue. The average price of fish is about one-half that of meat, so that the housewife who insists upon getting fish from her local dealer combats the high cost of living. National Fish Day was established to give a right direction to the thought of the people respecting fish in the ordinary home diet. Eat fish October 31st.

The president's reply to the German government lacks two words that have an important place in American history and are at present very much in the vocabulary of the American people. The absence of these two words means, in all probability, further correspondence, which will be ended only when the president bluntly and curtly says, "Our terms are 'unconditional surrender,.'"—Springfield Union.

MORE DETAILS ON STRIKE ORDER

Ottawa, Oct. 21,—To correct misunderstandings and misinterpretations of the recent order-in-council, prohibiting strikes and lockouts for the period of the war the following official statement is given out:

"The government's action in passing the order referred to does not in any way restrain labor beyond the point its representatives voluntarily agreed to, namely, that there should be no strikes or lockouts during the period of the war. Moreover the regulation applies to the employer as well as the employee. Its prohibition of strikes is not more stringent than its prohibition of lockouts. The penalties are the same in each case. Employers and employees are alike required to comply with the principle enunciated in the war policy to which labor, both in Canada and the United States, have subscribed.

The order in council applies only to industries which come under the operation of the Industrial Disputes Investigation act and amendments thereto. No others are in any way affected or concerned. The order does not prohibit any individual worker from changing his employment or his employer. His liberty in this respect has not been limited or curtailed in any way.

In January and February last, two conferences were held in Ottawa and attended by large delegations of labor men on the government's invitation.

At these conferences labor's cooperation in carrying on Canada's war effort was asked and given.

Labor requested in return that it be consulted on important matters of public policy relating to labor and the war and to be given representation on various committees and boards which might be created.

That this request has been carried out in good faith is evidenced by the fact that labor has since been given representation as follows:

1. On war trade board, one representative.
2. On the Canada registration board, one representative.
3. Superintendents of registration, three.
4. Labor subcommittees of the reconstruction and development committee, two.
5. Soldiers' vocational training, one.
6. Advisor to the fuel controller, one.
7. Labor appeal board, two.
8. Canadian railay adjustment board six.

In July last, after full discussion, and with the approval of representatives of the Canadian Manufacturers' association and the trades and labor board of Canada, the government declared its war labor policy by order in council of July 11, in which was outlined the principles to govern relations between capital and labor during the war. Among those principles were the following:

1. That there shall be no lockouts or strikes during the war.
2. That workmen should have perfect freedom in the matter of organizing and bargaining.
3. That recognition of union should not be made the subject of dispute.
4. That disputes should be referred to boards of conciliation.
5. The appeal board to be chosen jointly by the manufacturers' association and the Dominion trades and labor congress, each selecting two members and the four so chosen to have the right to select a chairman.
6. The decision of the appeal board to be final.
7. The decision of the appeal board to be effective not later than the date of application for the board of conciliation.

This appeal board was duly appointed, composed of Gustav Franq, J. W. Bruce, appointed by the executive of the Dominion trades and labor congress; T. H. Dugan, R. S. Parsons, appointed by the manufacturers' association and Judge McLellan.

"Six of the large railway brotherhoods, representing 54,000 men, entered into an agreement with the Canadian Railway Board that all disputes arising should be settled by an adjustment board upon which the railways and employees, parties to the agreement, would have actual representation. It was further agreed that any other railway organization having disputes could, if they desired, refer their grievances to this board of adjustment.

"Numerous cases have been dealt with by the board of appeal and the railway adjustment board, and in every case a unanimous finding has been reached.

"It is, therefor, clearly apparent that by agreement between the government and labor's duly authorized representatives, understandings were reached and proper machinery provided for fairly settling all disputes coming under the operation of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act and amendments thereto. It was the avowed desire of all concerned to avoid interruption of war industry or transportation during the war period.

"With both of the above avenues to justice within its reach, an organization of railway employes (national in character, thereby distinguishing it from international organizations) issued a circular on Oct. 3 to its members on all lines of railways in Canada calling them to go on strike at 4 p. m. Monday, Oct. 14, Thanksgiving day.

"Had this strike occurred it would have seriously affected five railways and three express companies, and caused tremendous loss and inconvenience. It is essential in the national interest that there should be no interruption in transportation services at this time.

"The president of the organization, in his circular of Oct. 3, stated that 'the president and secretary of the Trades and Labor Congress have pledged me their support.,

"This being distinctly contrary to the policy of the congress, the president and secretary were consulted at once and they stated clearly they had not given any assurances of support contrary to former declared policy.

"It was, therefore, necessary, on Oct. 10, when the government first became aware of the pending strike, to take such action as was necessary to carry into effect its declared war labor policy, to which labor had given its consent, namely, that there should be no lockouts or strikes during the continuation of the war.

"It cannot be too strongly emphasized that the recent order-in-council only carries into effect the war labor policy already approved of and accepted by representatives of organized labor and of employers in Canada.

"The government appreciates the splendid co-operation which the great mass of the workers in Canada have given ever since the war broke out, and believes that while the best and noblest of Canada's sons are giving their lives on the fields of France and Flanders, and while thousands of wives at home are making untold sacrifices, that labor generally will perform its part in assisting the government to maintain with justice industrial peace and to carry on at home until victory shall be achieved."

WHAT THE UNITED STATES ARMY THINKS

"Let the weak hearted who are dreaming of a compromise; let the pacifists who are talking a peace by agreement; let the sideliners who have had enough of war; let the secretly inclined pro-Germans who think this war should end without a decision—let them one and all know once and for all that for the American expeditionary force there is no such word as 'Peace' with the Huns unbeaten. The man who talks of peace today except through victory is a traitor." — From the Stars and Stripes, published by the U. S. Army in the field.

Two Model Lasts for Women who prefer a long vamp with narrow or medium narrow toe Made in all leathers 8 inch or 9 inch height, Louis or Cuban heels, $6 to $12.

True Economy in Stylish Shoes

THE woman who likes shoes with a long vamp and a slender toe, will be well pleased with the two A. H. M. models shown above. You can obtain smart boots on either last with Louis or Cuban heels in black or tan calf or kid at prices ranging from $6 to $12.

The quality of the material in these shoes is better than you might expect at the price, due to our being able to cover our needs well in advance. We doubt if it will be possible to offer equal value again so long as the war lasts.

The model on the left is conservatively narrow in the toe with the popular Louis heel. The other model is more extreme in style effect having a somewhat narrow toe and a higher and more tapering heel.

You may be certain of getting style value and practising true economy when you ask your dealer for these A.H.M. models.

A.H.M. War-Time Selections offer special Service Value for Men, Women and Children. Ask your dealer for them.

Sample Box Brings Great Results

Chronic Sufferers Find Relief

Chronic sufferers from Backache, Gravel, Stone in the Bladder or any other form of Kidney trouble are generally willing to try any remedy once. The excruciating pain caused by Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Inflammation of the Bladder or some other form of Kidney trouble, is so great, that persons afflicted are often driven to spending large sums of money in an endeavor to find relief at any cost.

This is proven by the testimony of hundreds of people who have written us letters stating "that having failed to find relief after years of trying, they turned to Gin Pills as a last resort—and a sample box of these pills soon convinced them that Gin Pills was the remedy they needed."

That is all we ask you to do. Try a box of Gin Pills at our expense, and if they fail to bring you the relief they have brought to hundreds of others with similar Kidney derangements, it costs you nothing.

Mrs. Dechene writes:

"I received your sample box of Gin Pills, and they have done me a lot of good. I can congratulate myself on having them, and I will never be without them in my home."

This testimony from a woman who was skeptical about buying Gin Pills should convince you that a sample box is well worth writing for. Do it today. Address:

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

SYNOPSIS OF LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

SAYS LEMON JUICE WILL REMOVE FRECKLES

Girls! Make this cheap beauty lotion to clear and whiten your skin.

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

GERMANY'S CHANCE

(By Prof. Chester W. New, of Brandon College).

History affords many examples of a nation beaten on the field winning a brilliant victory in the negotiations which developed at the end of the war. The opportunities provided by the complexity and delicacy of the problems involved and the peculiar psychology of negotiations are such that in some cases the victorious military powers have failed to realize what has happened until it has been too late. When an outstanding power has been defeated in the field by an alliance of a number of states the opportunities are materially increased. Talleyrand won for France terms more favorable than could have been anticipated after Napoleon's abdication by the clever way in which he played one state against another in the discussion of the detailed points in the settlement of the new map of Europe. It is true that Talleyrand was the representative not of Napoleon but of Louis XVIII, who himself was an ally of Napoleon's enemies and had been restored to the French throne by them. But France was looked at askance none the less, she had been conquering and was then the defeated nation, and Talleyrand's victories in the negotiations were hardly less brilliant than if they had been won for Napoleon himself. Nor was the game of dividing a successful enemy new in the history of France. Louis XIV had negotiated a much more favorable peace at Utrecht after his ambition to dominate Europe had ended in the crushing defeats of the war of the Spanish succession.

Now we are approaching the end of another war and the chance which was seized so skilfully by France a hundred years ago and by Louis XIV is Germany's chance. She has begun her game already. Germany pretends to accept President Wilson's fourteen points. She wants to start a general discussion of their detailed application. The entente allies agree on the general principles expressed in these fourteen points. But when it comes to interpreting them and making particular applications, Germany knows that they will differ on nearly every one of them.

The discussion of "absolute freedom of navigation upon the seas," may open up all the old acrid controversies between Great Britain and the United States, controversies which have an interesting history dating back years before the outbreak of this war. What is the "removal of all economic barriers and the establishment of an equity of trade conditions" to mean? One could make at least one safe bet—that it will not mean the same thing to President Wilson and to Bonar Law.

And then comes the German colonies. It is easy to say that "in determining all such questions the interests of the population concerned must have equal weight with the claims of the government whose title is to be determined." But serious difficulties attend the solution of the practical question whether all or any of the African colonies shall be governed by the British government in South Africa or pass under some form of international control.

President Wilson did not say that the whole of Alsace-Lorraine should be given to France. He said that "the wrong done to France by Prussia in 1871 should be righted." What was "the wrong done to France"? Germany will say one thing, France quite another, and many Britishers and Americans something different from either. Serbia is to be "accorded free and secure access to the sea," but that can hardly be done without a conflict with Italian ambitions. Again, the principles laid down by President Wilson for the partition of the Ottoman empire and the settlement of the Balkans are correct enough, but their application would involve a clash of most of the old rival claims in the Balkans. Austria and Germany may still be left the opportunity of pursuing their old policy of dividing the Balkan states. The President insist on a league of nations, but there exists no unanimity as to a league of nations among entente statesmen or even the British cabinet. Two policies are represented among British statesmen, one of which would make for a real league of nations and the other would make a league of nations in President Wilson's sense impossible.

The questions referred to above are extremely important ones and unless they and others can be settled along the lines of an idealism, a discernment and a regard for absolute justice toward all such as cannot be recognized in any peace settlement of the past the hope of a settlement which shall be anything like permanent is no better than a passing dream.

But they must not be discussed with Germany — no matter how her form of government may be changed —while she enjoys an armistice behind her strong frontier defences. There is and always has been one primary issue in this war. That is the punishment and placing in a position where she cannot repeat her crimes of the nation which attempted to bully Europe, violated the rights of little nations, and perpetrated the atrocities which have aroused a world conscience. That is the first task and it must not be confused with any of the above issues.

That task is not yet accomplished. Until it shall be it will be too early to celebrate, to negotiate, or to arrange an armistice of any sort. The cry "unconditional surrender" must become a slogan that shall drown out all other voices.

THE KAISER'S LAMENT

It is the royal Teuton, and wearily he speaks: "I started all this shootin'; hence the tears upon my cheeks; oh, visions great and splendid my dreaming soul attended; I thought war would be ended, with triumph, in six weeks. I thought my mighty legions would have a walk-away, and conquer all the regions that in their pathway lay; I thought 'twould be an outing, a time of glee and shouting, and I could do some spouting to big crowds every day. I saw myself in glory, upon a milk-white steed, while monarchs whipped and gory, knelt in the dust to plead; four years I have been fighting, four years of war affrighting, and I find, at this writing, my dreams all gone to seed. The truth comes to me slowly—I have no chance to win; the truth is most unholy— your Wilhelm is all in. And all around this planet wherever I may scan it, men's hearts are hard as granite, from hating me like sin. I have to take a whipping, the truth I plainly see; my hands are red and dripping; and none will pity me; oh, none will sigh in sorrow, if I am licked tomorrow, but some will want to borrow a long rope and a tree. Was ever monarch hated as I am hated now? The crown is leaden weighted that rests upon my brow; the throne that once I treasured, the robes in which I pleasured, now bring me grief unmeasured—I'd trade them for a cow. For I am lone and friendless, a king without a chum; my loneliness is endless, for never friend will come; for all the world will hate me, detest me and berate me, until morticians crate me, when I am dead and dumb.—Walt Mason.

SPRUCE NEEDED FOR PLANES

Disloyal! If one thing more than another is needed just now it is an abundance of spruce wood to make airplanes. These have become indispensable in modern warfare. It is believed by military experts that if our army in France only had several thousand flying machines the Allies could win the war in sixty days. Whatever, therefore, checks production of spruce lumber, tends to prolong the world war. The Seattle,Wash., Central Labor Council lately adopted a resolution asking President Wilson to remove from office Colonel Disque, Federal spruce director in the Pacific Northwest. This action was calculated to give encouragement to the Hun cause. Colonel Disque's removal would be a deadly blow to the lumbering operations. He founded the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen, which has been speeding production of spruce supplies. He has incurred the opposition of organized labor because he favors open-shop conditions in the forests until the war ends. Were he to go, his splendid organization would be disrupted, the morale of the workers impaired, and no matter who succeeded him the spruce output would necessarily be lessened. No such result can be tolerated. The resolution demanded something which would be of distinct benefit to Germany and injurious to this country. It savors strongly of disloyalty. The council threatens to carry the fight against Colonel Disque up to the American Federation of Labor. Let it do so, and let the Federation decide whether its members shall line up unmistakably with loyal or disloyal Americans. There is no better time to make the issue. Truly patriotic labor organizations will waive all technicalities and minor grievances and refrain from petty tactics until after the close of the great war.—Leslies'.

INDIAN PLOTS AND INDIAN PATRIOTISM

There have been many German plots intended to create disaffection in India. Some were hatched in Berlin, some on this Pacific coast. They all failed though they left behind in some parts of India a trail of murder and bloodshed.

To suggest from these revolutionary activities that any percentage of the natives of India seeks to get rid of British rule would be wholly false. The best proof is to be found in the response of the fighting races of India to the demand for men to fight in Egypt, the Dardanelles, Salonika, East Africa, France, Mesopotamia, Palestine and Central Asia.

India has contributed no fewer than 1,115,000 men to the British army since the war began. She continues to raise recruits for another army of half a million. Financially India has also done her bit. Her first Victory Loan totalled $200,000,000, and her second greatly exceeded this.

Figures such as these are eloquent of loyalty, not of disloyalty. And on the same point it is well to recall that, unlike the German government's treatment of its overseas possessions, the British government does not make one cent of profit out of India. Every rupee of revenue raised in the country is spent for the promotion of the welfare of the Indian races.

Besides which, it is British money which finances all the great canals and railways and development that have proved such an economic blessing.

YES! LIFT A CORN OFF WITHOUT PAIN!

Cincinnati authority tells how to dry up a corn or callus so it lifts off with fingers.

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killed you before, says this Cincinnati authority, because a few drops of freezone applied directly on a tender, aching corn or callus, stops soreness at once and soon the corn or hardened callus loosens so it can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

A small bottle of freezone cost very little at any drug store, but will positively take off every hard or soft corn or callus. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to irritate the surrounding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house. It is fine stuff and acts like a charm every time.

Without Music You Cannot Live a Full Life

Music is now recognized as a necessity in the home. Music feeds the soul, as food feeds the body and literature feeds the brain. Next to religion, it is humanity's greatest comforter.

The New Edison opens the doors to the world of music. It brings the supreme art of the greatest singers, instrumentalists and musical organizations to you with such unerring fidelity that the artists themselves could give you no more.

The NEW EDISON
"The Phonograph with a Soul"

does not merely imitate; it actually re-creates.

Before audiences totalling more than two millions, thirty great artists have conducted tone tests which proved that no shade of difference could be detected between the artist and the instrument. They have sung in direct comparison with the New Edison, then suddenly ceased, permitting the instrument to continue alone. The only way the listeners could tell when the artist stopped was by watching his lips. And with the lights lowered, they were unable to say when it was the living voice they heard and when the New Edison.

Could a more convincing test than this be devised? Doesn't it prove the truth of our assertion that ownership of this instrument is equivalent to having all the great artists of the world literally at one's command?

Come in and hear the New Edison here, or allow us to send one to your home, where you can hear it at your leisure. 174

A BRITISHER'S WORD

The judgment of the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice of England, given in a recent case which was concerned with the binding character of an Englishman's word, is worthy of note as exhibiting the spirit which governs British courts. An Englishman named King it appears, visited Hamburg late in July, 1914. Finding that mobilization was in progress, he boarded the City of Bradford, intending to return to England, but the vessel was detained by the German authorities and the passengers put ashore. Mr. King, who was accompanied by his wife and daughters, took a flat in Hamburg. In September, 1914, after he had given his parole not to serve against Germany, he was allowed to return to England. When the second Military Service Act of 1917 was before Parliament, he received a letter from the War Office saying that he would not be called upon to do anything in violation of his parole, and when, later, he received notice to report he was told by the the military authorities that he was exempt. Eventually he received a calling-up notice which he ignored. Proceedings were instituted and the magistrate convicted him, holding that although probably "a prisoner of war" he had not been "captured or interned" within the meaning of section 8 of the Military Service Act. The case was appealed and came before the King's Bench Division.

Mr. Justice Darling, whose judgment was concurred in by Mr. Justice Bray and Mr. Justice Bailhache, expressed surprise that the Crown should have pressed the case and refused to give any consideration to the suggestion that the appellant might be put in a labor battalion and enabled to serve in England. It seemed to him, he said, that in dealing with a people like the Germans, on whose word no reliance whatever could be placed, particular care should be exercised not to do anything which would suggest that British authorities were capable of encouraging British soldiers to break their word, even when given to Germans. The report of the judgment, as given in The Law Times, sets forth at some length the considerations which determined the court in its decision that, although the appellant was allowed to be at large during his brief enforced stay in Hamburg, he must be regarded as "a prisoner of war, captured or detained." Mr. Justice Darling, however, intimated that the judgment of the Court in this matter might be somewhat colored by the consideration first stated, namely, that it was before all things necessary that German suspicion of British honor should find no justification.

U. S. PRESS OPINION

The men who brought on the war cannot sign the terms of peace. They must be cast down from the high places they have disgraced, and it is for the German people to cast them down.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The president has seen a new light. There is something more to be considered than the fourteen peace points that the German government so quickly accepted. We can now believe at any rate that the allied armies are not going to be halted in their advance to the Rhine and the danger of a premature peace without a victory is happily averted..—Philadelphia Press.

Why in our growing correspondence with Germany is the word surrender taboo? Why is it that we cannot talk as we fight?—New York Tribune.

Germany will have to come to it. She must accede to the president's ultimatum sooner or later—and the sooner the better for Germany. Autocracy is doomed. — Los Angeles Times.

BRITAIN'S PART

Chautauqua reading in 1918-19 will be devoted to the British Empire. If the subject for each year's reading were fixed by choice and not as it is by rotation, doubtless Great Britain would have a majority vote. Our lot is bound up with hers. With France and Italy and all free-loving people we have more in common than we ever knew till the war of ideals revealed it; but with Britain, for good or ill, whether we wish it or not, we have a still closer bond. To the great English-speaking family we belong.

England's part in the war is subject to breathless interest. The phenomenon of a numerically small nation, inhabiting a little island as its country, yet commanding the loyalty and leading the conduct of vast dominions in far corners of the earth, is a cause of wonder to thinking men everywhere. This island people and its scattered dependencies challenging on land and sea the power of the most highly organized, most compact and homogeneous, most formidable great nation the world has ever seen, and holding the central position among all those allied peoples who have sworn that beyond their line Kulture "shall not pass"—this is almost beyond comprehension and belief. Yet it is a consistent part of the history of England.

The problems of the Empire, in Ireland, in India, in the labor and woman movements at home, are of profound significance for the political organization of the world.

Canada in particular, as our near neighbor and because of the glory she has won in the war, claims the attention of Americans as never before.—American Exchange.

MAD DREAM OF THE BRUTE OF POTSDAM

The great war has already claimed more than 40,000 American soldiers as casualties. The list will constantly grew larger.

England has lost more than 900,000 troops in killed alone. The German loss in killed has been more than 2,000,000. The French losses have been almost as great.

Statisticians who have made a study of war casualties declare that in killed alone the casualties of all nations—Russians, Serbs, Roumanians, Turks, Austrians, Bulgars and those before mentioned—have been more than 10,000,000.

The majority of these were young. They were the men who would have tilled the fields, worked in the shops and raised the families of tomorrow.

They were the promises, unfulfilled, by the mad dream of the brute at Potsdam.

Ten million lives cut off at a time when they were broadening into usefulness to civilization.

Civilization is paying the price and must continue to pay.

But this orgie of bloodshed, of murder and rapine must never be repeated.

Mr. Balfour says Germany is sincere and the late overtures come from people who have given up. They are war-weary, hungry and ragged in Germany. The day has dawned on the German people when they realize that only their war lords have stood between them and an honorable peace, and there is going to be a brilliant pyrotechnic display.

How soon or how distant that time may be is only a matter of pure speculation. The Allies fired an awful bomb at Potsdam, and sooner or later it will explode.

The thing for the Allies to do while the fuze is sizzling is to forget all and to push the war.

"Berlin crowds cry for peace!" It's a mere whisper beside the noise they will make when they begin to dodge bombs.

FESTINA LENTE

Of the number of books descriptive of the great war, how many will live? As Clausewitz points out, the fog of war is dense; also many things known to the authorities must not be made public while the conflict continues. Any writer who shall attempt to give a true, detailed account of the struggle is as yet under a crushing handicap; a trustworthy history will not see the light until some time after the war has ended, and the full truth (which indeed may possibly never be told) cannot be expected during this generation.

One of the sternest lessons a military commander—and the same may be said of a naval chief—will have learned is to keep his mouth shut no matter what the provocation, and it must be hard enough oftentimes for a man who has done his best to sit still under the lash of some writer who judges by false or imperfect information.

Just before the United States entered the war, an American naval officer undertook to discuss the achievements of the British navy and his conclusions were not by any menas too favorable. One of his criticisms related to the battle of the Falkland Isles, wherein Admiral Sturdee destroyed the German cruiser fleet commanded by von Spee. He pointed out that had the English commander sent the Glasgow after the German collier, instead of telling off the swifter Bristol for that duty, the Dresden would have been brought into action. On paper this seemed a valid criticism, but it has since been made public, that when the fight took place the Bristol had a boiler or two out of service and was actually our slowest ship. Thus she could not have caught the flying Dutchman in a week of Sundays.

Either the arm-chair strategist or the cigar-store warrior is able to show the mistakes made by our military and naval commanders, and his opinion may carry for a little while, but did he know what our silent fighting men could tell he would not be so ready to cast blame where none was deserved. Armies are composed of men and the human element is one that must be taken into consideration. It is all very well to talk of a swift pursuit, or a brisk counter-attack, but a general knows that men who have been fighting without sleep or rest, perhaps for days, must have an opportunity to pull themselves together, otherwise disaster lies ahead. Again, sometimes ammunition or transport shows signs of giving out—in fact there are dozens of factors which must be considered by a commander in the field, but of which the quick-fire "historian" knows nothing. Festina lente should be a good motto for these gentlemen.

"PRO BELGICA"

"Pro Belgica," a periodical published for Belgian propaganda, has just issued a remarkable special number. On the cover framed with the now well known Belgian national colors is represented a genealogical tree of the Royal family on the foot of which is the Kingdom's coat of arms. Nineteen portraits figure on that tree.

Statesmen, professors, writers have contributed to this number so that it may contain interesting articles. Among the French ones are the following: The Belgian Mission in America by Mr. H. Carton de Wiart; Reconstruction in Belgium by Mrs. des Ombiaux; Epics of Yser by Rev. Father de Mangeleere; a striking letter addressed to the Governor of Belgium reproduced from "La Libre Belgique"; Belgian army's share in the War; Professional training for maimed soldiers by Senator Thiebault, etc.

Among the English articles let us mention: A fine letter from Mr. Herbert Hoover; Fighting Starvation in Belgium by Professor Vernon Kellogg; Belgian War Cartoons by Mr. R. Arrowsmith; Belgium's Gratitude towards U. S. by Mr. des Ombiaux; Reply to the German White Book; the Belgian Dynasty, etc.

This number also contains an illustrated notice on Queen Elizabeth and the entire list of subscribers to Queen Elizabeth's purse.

Numerous illustrations increase the interest of this publication. Apart from photographs of the front and of the Belgian Relief Work, there are fine photographs of the front and of the Belgian Premier, Mr. Cooreman, of the Minister of Justice, Mr. Carton de Wiart, of Cardinal Mercier, of Mr. Herbert Hoover, together with Ministers taken at St. Adresse.

This number may be obtained by sending 25c in stamps to the editor of "Pro Belgica," 32 Sussex Avenue, Montreal.

SPANISH INFLUENZA RAGES IN CANADA

Thousands of Cases Reported With Many Deaths.

THOSE WHO ARE MOST SUSCEPTIBLE TO IT

"FRUIT-A-TIVES"—The Wonderful Fruit Medicine—Gives the Power To Resist This Disease.

The epidemic of Spanish Influenza which played such havoc in Europe, has reached this continent. Thousands of cases of the strange malady have appeared and many deaths are already reported; Surgeon-General Blue of the United States Public Health Service having stated that "Spanish Influenza will probably spread all over the country in six weeks".

Practically every ship which touches our shores from abroad, brings those infected with the disease.

Surgeon-General Blue urges that "the individual take all the precautions he can against contracting the disease by care and personal hygiene". Plenty of exercise should be taken; the diet should be regulated, etc.

Spanish Influenza affects most severely elderly persons and others whose powers of resistance are weakened by illness, work or worry, especially those who are "run-down" or "not feeling up to the mark."

The really great danger from the disease is not so much in the disease itself, as that it often develops into pneumonia.

What everyone needs now is a general tonic like "Fruit-a-tives". This wonderful fruit medicine is not a germ-killer. It is a body-builder; a strength-maker; a blood-purifier; a power in protecting against the ravages of disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" regulates the kidneys and bowels, causing these organs to eliminate waste regularly and naturally as nature intended. "Fruit-a-tives" keeps the skin active, and purifies and enriches the blood. "Fruit-a-tives" tones up and strengthens the organs of digestion, insuring food being properly digested and assimilated.

Everyone can take ordinary precautions, avoid crowded places, and use "Fruit-a-tives" regularly to insure sound digestion, to keep the bowels and kidneys regular and the whole system in the best possible condition. Then we are safe from disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by dealers everywhere at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

SOUR, ACID STOMACHS, GASES OR INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" neutralizes excessive acid in stomach, relieving dyspepsia, heartburn and distress at once.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress, due to acidity, will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest stomach sweetener in the whole world, and besides it is harmless. Put an end to stomach distress at once by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder caused by fermentation due to excessive acids in stomach.

The show billed for the Grand Theatre on Saturday was a frost. Only about a dozen persons attending. It pays to advertise.

Mrs. Billings and Mrs. S. Herchmer returned on Saturday from Vancouver, where they had been visiting for several weeks.

The Hallowe'en Dinner advertised by the Ladies of the United Church of Fernie for Oct. 31, has been postponed until further notice.

All indications point to a severe winter. Now is the time to get ready and order your storm windows and doors from Kennedy & Mangan. Phone 23.

Quite a number of golfers have been patronizing the new course during the past couple of weeks and it looks as though golf would become a very popular sport here next summer.

About two weeks ago the Elk Lumber Co's big black stallion died at their camp near Hosmer and was duly buried beneath three feet of earth. The other day a big grizzly unearthed the dead horse and pulled it completely out of the hole, dragging it about twenty feet. Judging by the size of the stallion, bruin must have been some bear.

The regular council meeting which was to have been held last evening did not materialize on account of there not being a quorum in attendance. Authority to hold this meeting at this time when all others are precluded, was under special license received by telegraph from the Provincial Secretary's office yesterday. In the course of a week or ten days a special meeting will be held, when the regular business will be transacted.

Dorothy Quinney, daughter of our old time Fernie neighbors, J. W. and Mrs. Quinney, was one of the two successful contestants for the Bronze Medals presented by His Excellency, the Duke of Devonshire, Governor General of Canada at the examinations at Edmonton lately of pupils from the Calgary Inspectorate District. Dorothy received her earliest schooling in the Fernie schools, and her many little school friends will be pleased to know of her success.

Gladstone Local Union have passed a resolution condemning the recent order-in-council forbidding strikes in essential industries until after the war. Perhaps Gladstone Local has had more to do with the promulgation of this drastic order than any other union in Canada. By continual turmoil and strikes these men have so alienated public sympathy, that the Government feel they are bound to protect the nation against this sort of thing, at least while the war lasts.

Four members of the Ukrainian society were gathered in by the local police this week on a charge of having in their possession seditious literature. Gladstone Local officials are much interested in this case and are doing all in their power to protect the accused. The documents in the case have been sent to Ottawa and if these men are guilty they will be dealt with severely. The government of this country does not propose to stand for much of this Bolshevik propaganda and the quicker the District Ledger realizes this the better.

British Columbians who intend sending parcels to members of the Canadian expiditionary forces in France are reminded that they should be mailed in time to be dispatched from Canadian ports not later than the middle of November. Transportation is congested during the Christmas season and it is the desire of the postal officials that parcels for France be posted as soon as possible and not later than the first week in November so that they can be sent to the Atlantic seaboard to leave there by the middle of November. Last year many parcels were mailed too late to reach the boys in the trenches by Christmas. The advice of the postal department is "Post your parcels now to ensure delivery by Christmas." The earlier the parcels are posted the less danger is there of any parcel missing the mail through congestion. Quite a large number of Christmas parcels have already left B. C. for France.

Mr. Warwick, of the Custom staff, is on the sick list.

R. W. Wood returned yesterday from a business trip to Toronto.

Mr. and Mrrs. J. R. Nolan, of Newgate, are registered at the Fernie.

Mrs. Alex. Watson returned on Tuesday from Vancouver, where she spent a week's holidays.

Protect your children against Spanish Influenza. Gargle your throat with Suddaby's Antiseptic Solution.

H. R. Huntington has been appointed Vice-American Consul at the port of Fernie.

The Navy League dance booked for Monday night was called off on account of the "Flu."

Miss Isa Duncan is suffering from an attack of typhoid fever. Her sister, Margaret, is just recovering from an attack of the same disease.

Major G. G. Moffatt has returned from a trip east. He was in charge of the shipment of German prisoners from Morrissey Internment camp.

The Grossmith show advertised for the Isis tonight has been called off. Mr. Grossmith will remain in Nelson till after the "Flu" has passed over.

Order them today. Buy storm windows and doors for more comfort and less fuel, from Kennedy & Mangan, Telephone 23.

One of the prisoners being conveyed east from Morrissey Internment camp, jumped from the train near Regina and made his escape.

Mrs. Murphy received a wire this morning stating that her son Martin was listed among the missing. Martin, better known as "Spud", was a popular Fernie boy and his many friends sincerely hope he turns up all right.

Chas. Sidney O'Rourke, a well known character around Fernie, was up before Magistrate Hewat yesterday charged with bringing in a 10 gallon keg of hooch from Montana. Said keg was discovered in a trunk and accused is endeavoring to prove that the trunk does not belong to him. S. Herchmer is acting for the defendent. The case was adjourned until this afternoon.

Lucius B. Swift, seventy-odd years young, a fighting exponent of all that's best in Hoosierdom, has blown up a main pacifist dugout with this one sentence: "The German socialist leaders are the shock sneaks of this war." Just keep that handy for reference on the next occasion when Scheidemann and the rest are turned loose to quack for time while Ludendorff is drumming up his battered infantry for one more "decisive fine!" blow. A wooden duck is no friend to the live members of the species, no matter how realistically modern improvements may enable it to squawk.

Robber-Bully in Defeat

Montreal Journal of Commerce: When a robber-bully, with a band of cut-throats under his command, has for a long period been committing every form of crime, and suddenly in the midst of his iniquity professes a desire to be honest and decent, it is a fair guess that he see the hand of justice closing upon him and that the fear of punishment is what moves him.

GARDEN PRIZES AT MICHEL AND NATAL

The W. R. Wilson donation of $100 for garden prizes for employees of The C. N. P. Coal Co. at Michel and Natal were distributed as follows:

Above tipple for vegetables: T. Shields 1st prize; D. Cassarinni 2nd prize; P. Bell 3rd prize; J. Mangles 4th prize. Below tipple for vegetables: S. Hampton 1st prize; J. Newman 2nd prize; A. Hampton 3rd prize; J. Guest and A. Causey divided the 4th prize.

Below tipple for flowers: A. Causey 1st prize; J. Guest 2nd prize; J. Newman 3rd prize; S. Hampton 4th prize.

The committee on behalf of competitors wish to thank Mr. W. R. Wilson for his donation of prizes and his appreciation for helping that important work along. We expect to see a much larger competition next year as quite a few people are making gardens now out of what were practically ash heaps. Quoting the judge's words, "The garden products were ranking among the best he had judged this year and the potato crops were exceptionally good."

CANADIAN VALOR

The following was clipped from a Chicago paper:

"Canada will always have a place in the affectionate regard of all the people of the world—for when the mother land was in trouble Jack Canunck unasked and unafraid sprang to the very front lines of her defense.

"The soil of Flanders is drenched in Canadian blood. At Langemark, St. Julien, Festubert, Givenchy and Sanctuary Wood the mettle of our neighbors was tested and there was no false ring to it.

"The way to Calais was blocked by a handful of Canadians, who beat back the flower of the German army. On the Somme, Canadian boys went unflinchingly to death and to glory. At Vimy ridge they disregarded all orders and charged the enemy with an abandon that drove them from the suburbs of hell.

" 'Kamerad' is not in the Canadian lexicon and the Germans know it, and, knowing it, fear them as they now do the brave boys of our own country.

"Only yesterday we read that five Canadians captured 100 Germans and that a boy from Manitoba rode a tank's top through an engagement and came through unscathed.

"Canada has every reason to be proud of the valor of her sons and we are proud to be neighbors of such a valient people."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

FACTOR THAT HELPS VICTORY

Since the outbreak of the war Canada's bank deposits have increased by over $500,000,000. In addition, the public has subscribed from its savings over $700,000,000 and $100,000,000 for provincial, municipal and other securities.

The figures are given by Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, as proof that Canada can easily raise the Victory Loan of $500,000,000 now asked from her.

How far this accumulated wealth has been aided by the suppression of the liquor traffic in Canada is not raidily calculable. But prohibition has done its share in making Victory Loans successful.

On liquor before the war the Canadian people spent $80,000,000 a year. They lost through unemployment caused by the drink evil at least $65,000,000 more. And in addition there was the extra cost of gaols and the administration of justice.

While due allowance must, of course, be made for the prosperity of the Dominion through war orders, there is no doubt the suppression of the liquor traffic which, in essence, is nothing but an economic waste, has had a large influence. Millions which would have gone to satisfy a selfish indulgence now goes to the Victory Loan.

THREE WAYS OF SAYING IT

To Asquith's "We shall not sheathe the sword until Prussian military domination is crushed" and Wilson's "Force without limit," Clemenceau adds: "We shall make war to the very end." All three ring with the will to absolute victory.—From the Halifax Chronicle.

MUCH TIME LOST DUE TO STRIKES

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—The time lost on account of industrial disputes during September was greater than during the preceding month and much greater than during September, 1917, says the Labor Gazette. There were in existence during the month 30 strikes, affecting 7511 persons and involving a time loss of 103,233 working days.

The average cost of the weekly budget of staple foods decreased slightly in the last month, according to figures compiled by the labor department. The September figure was $13.31, as compared with $13.41 in August, 1918, and $7.83 in September 1914. In prices there were decreases in several groups, the most important decline being in grains — barley, oats, corn and flax all showing decreases.

Fruits and vegetables also showed a decline. Advances in prices were shown in dairy products, textiles, hides and leather, implements, fuel and lighting, paints and oils and furs.

Meat and house furnishings remained steady during the month.

Feels At Home

Vancouver Province: It is announced that the British loss of life has reached a million. The Canadian sacrifice of 50,000 is a heavy and noble share in the price, but the British Islands, with a population of five times that of Canada, have lost 20 times as many men.

"SPANISH INFLUENZA" "THEREE-DAY FEVER"

(Rupert Blue, Surgeon General, U.S.)

The disease now occurring in this country and called "Spanish Influenza" resembles a very contagious kind of "cold" accompanied by fever, severe frontal headaches and pains in other parts of the body, and a feeling of severe sickness. In most of the cases the symptoms disappear after three or four days, the patient then rapidly recovering; some of the patients, however, develop pneumonia, or inflammation of the ear, or meningitis, and many of these complicated pains in the head, eyes, ears, back or cases die. Whether this so-called "Spanish" influenza is identical with the epidemics of influenza of earlier years is not yet known.

Epidemics of influenza have visited this country since 1647. It is interesting to know that the first epidemic was brought here from Valencia, Spain. Since that time there have been numerous epidemics of the disease. In 1889 and 1890 an epidemic of influenza, starting somewhere in the Orient, spread first to Russia and thence practically over the entire civilized world. Three years later there was another flare-up of the disease. Both times the epidemic spread widely over the United States.

There is as yet no certain way in which a single case of "Spanish influenza" can be recognized; on the other hand, recognition is easy where there is a group of cases. In contrast to the outbreaks of ordinary coughs and colds, which usually occur in the cold months, epidemics of influenza may occur at any season of the year, thus the present epidemic raged most intensely in Europe in May, June and July. Moreover, in the case of ordinard colds, the general symptoms (fever, pain, depression) are by no means as severe or as sudden in their onset as they are in influenza. Finally, ordinary colds do not spread through the community so rapidly or so extensively as does influenza.

In most cases a person taken sick with influenza feels sick rather suddenly. He feels weak, has pains in the eyes, ears, head or back, and may be sore all over. Many patients feel dizzy, some vomit. Most of the patients complain of feeling chilly, and with this comes a fever in which the temperature rises to 100 to 104. In most cases the pulse remains relatively slow.

In appearance one is struck by the fact that the patient looks sick. His eyes and the inner side of his eyelids may be slightly "bloodshot," or "congested," as the doctors say. There may be running from the nose, or there may be some cough. These signs of a cold may not be marked; nevertheless the patient looks and feels very sick.

In addition to the appearance and the symptoms as already described, examination of the patient's blood may aid the physician in recognizing "Spanish influenza," for it has been found that in this disease the number of white corpuscles shows little or no increase above the normal. It is possible that the laboratory investigations now being made through the National Research Council and the United States Hygienic Laboratory will furnish a more certain way in which individual cases of this disease can be recognized.

Ordinarily the fever lasts from three to four days and the patient recovers. But while the proportion of deaths in the present epidemic has generally been low, in some places the outbreak has been severe and deaths have been numerous. When death occurs it is usually the result of a complication.

Bacteriologists who have studied influenza epidemics in the past have found in many of the cases a very small rod-shaped germ called after its discoverer, Pfeiffer's bacillus. In other cases of apparently the same kind of disease there were found pneumococci, the germs of lobar pneumonia. Still others have been caused by streptococci, and by other germs with long names.

No matter what particular kind of germ causes the epidemic,, it is now believed that influenza is always spread from person to person, the germs being carried with the air along with very small droplets of mucus, expelled by coughing or sneezing, forceful talking, and the like by one who already has the germs of the disease. They may also be carried about in the air in the form of dust coming from dried mucus, from coughing and sneezing, or from careless people who spit on the floor and on the sidewalk. As in most other catching diseases, a person who has only a mild attack of the disease himself may give a very severe attack to others.

It is very important that every person who becomes sick with influenza should go home at once and go to bed. This will help keep away dangerous complications and will, at the same time, keep the patient from scattering the disease far and wide. It is highly desirable that no one be allowed to sleep in the same room with the patient. In fact, no one but the nurse should be allowed in the room.

If there is a cough and sputum or running of the eyes and nose, care should be taken that all such discharges are collected and burned. If the patient complains of fever and headache, he should be given water to drink, a cold compress to the forehead and a light sponge. Only such medicine should be given as is prescribed by the doctor. It is foolish to ask the druggist to prescribe and may be dangerous to take the so-called "safe, sure and harmless" remedies advertised by patent medicine manufacturers.

If the patient is so situated that he can be attended only by some one who must also look after others in the family, it is advisable that such attendant wear a wrapper, apron, or gown over the ordinary house clothes while in the sick room and slip this off when leaving to look after the others.

Nurses and attendants will do well to guard against breathing in dangerous disease germs by wearing a simple fold of gauze or mask while near the patient.

In guarding against disease of all kinds, it is important that the body be kept strong and able to fight off disease germs. This can be done by having a proper proportion of work, play, and rest, by keeping the body well clothed, and by eating sufficient, wholesome and properly selected food. In connection with diet, it is well to remember that milk is one of the best all-round foods obtainable for adults as well as children. So far as a disease like influenza is concerned health authorities everywhere recognize the very close relation between its spread and overcrowded homes. While it is not always possible, especially in times like the present, to avoid such overcrowding, people should consider the health danger and make every effort to reduce the home overcrowding to a minimum. The value of fresh air through open windows can not be over emphasized.

Where crowding is inavoidable, as in street cars, care should be taken to keep the face so turned as not to inhale directly the air breathed out by another person.

It is especially important to beware of the person who coughs or sneezes without covering his mouth and nose. It also follows that one should keep out of crowds and stuffy places as much as possible, keep homes, offices, and workshops well aired, spend some time out of doors each day, walk to work if at all practicable—in short make every possible effort to breathe as much pure air as possible.

"Cover up each cough and sneeze,
If you don't you'll spread disease."

TILL MAD DOG IS DESTROYED

Toronto, Oct. 15. — E. R. Wood, chairman of the Dominion Victory Loan, issued a statement last evening, emphasizing the necessity of concentrating attention on the coming loan and combatting the feeling that it may not be necessary if peace comes soon. It is quite evident that this is one of the most dangerous phases we will have to combat in the next few weeks, and for that reason there will be a general disposition to fall in with Mr. Bone's suggestion. Mr. Wood's statement is as follows:

"The effect should be to make the nation redouble its efforts, not only to achieve the objectives of the Minister of Finance, but to greatly exceed it.

"What we are witnessing now is Germany's peace offensive. She is waging peace as she waged war, unscrupulously, but with tremendous vigor and force and skill. Having withstood her military onslaughts for four years, are we to succumb to her first hypocritical peace onslaught? For forty years Germany deceived us with fair words. For four years she has stood unmasked, brazen, brutal, and unashamed. A short week ago, faced with disaster, she returned to fair words. It is unthinkable that we can immediately accept them.

"The answer of the leaders of the Allied nations and of Canada to Germany must be: You have let loose a mad dog on civilization. The war must go on until that mad dog is destroyed, that is to say, until your military power is destroyed or you have surrendered unconditionally.

"Without minimizing the wrongs of Belgium, or of France or of any other nation, Canada is not in the war solely or even chiefly to restore Belgium or to liberate Alsace-Lorraine. That is where the fallacy of so-called peace terms appears. Canada is in the war to destroy the evil thing that has come upon the earth. Until this is done there can be no permanent peace.

"It is possible that Germany's peace offensive may cause wavering, not among our gallant armies but among our civilian poulation. Who can tell what the effect on the world would be of a great over-subscription in the approaching Victory Loan campaign for Canada? That would be a magnificent answer for Canada to make to the enemy's new campaign of whining insincerity.

"When the Hun first used his poison gas on the battlefield, it was a lone Canadian division that saved the situation. It may be possible for Canadians at home to render a similar service now.

"The watchword, therefore, for the Victory Loan organization and for the Canadian people until unconditional surrender by the foe is accomplished is not to relax but to redouble every effort.

"There is this further consideration, that supposing peace could be declared tomorrow, on terms satisfactory to the Allies, Canada's war expenditure would continue for at least another twelve months, and consequently the necessity for raising the full amount of the loan would be none the less urgent."

BOLSHEVIKI—WHO AND WHY?

What the Bolsheviks are is easy to answer; but why they are is difficult. Not even the Russian people themselves know why.

In Russia when Czarism ruled and to be a Socialist was to be a revolutionary, there was founded the Russian Social Democratic party. Plehanov, who died the other day in exile in Finland, was the founder. He, the son of a land owner, believed thoroughly in the brand of Socialism taught by the German Karl Marx and after his university career ended, he sought to propagate his opinion among the Russian working classes. The police soon pursued him and he became an exile in Switzerland for 37 years. While there he was the leader of the Russian Revolutionary Socialists. He was a keen student, widely read and capable.

In Switzerland at the same time was Lenine— or Uljanov, to give him his real name—a bitter opponent of Plehanov, but belonging to the same party. In 1902 a dispute began between them as to the details of party organization. Lenine wanted to have the central governing committee of the party al-powerful, Plehanov wanted to have the local party committees autonomous. Lenine won. His section got the majority, whence the word "Bolsheviki"; Plehanov led the minority, or "Mensheviks."

Thenceforward the party split into two bodies. Lenine stood for revolutionary Socialism and terrorism; Plehanov for evolutionary Socialism by the ordinary means and methods of political and social development.

Plehanov's party was fairly powerful in Russia after the overthrow of the czar. It stood for fighting Germany on the basis of a defensive war. But the Lenine element, averse to fighting Germany, fought the Mensheviks and finally ousted them from power. Plehanov, who was welcomed in the ex-czar's palace in April, 1917 as one of the leaders of Russian freedom, a few months later through the machinations of the Bolsheviki, was an outcast. He went to Finland and died there—probably broken hearted.

And the Bolsheviki, having abandoned all pretense at democracy, now rule Russia with a tyranny as great or greater than czarism.

VICTORY LOAN APPEAL TO REACH EVERYBODY

It will be an occasion well worthy of the dignity attached to it when on October 17 His Excellency the Governor General of Canada raises the great honor flag at 12.30 noon, in Ottawa, to commemorate the beginning of the second Victory Loan campaign. While the bands are playing "O Canada" and the military officers are standing at the salute and all other men with bared heads, the Duke of Devonshire will thus inaugurate a campaign second only in importance to that conducted on the fields of France and Flanders by Canada's other half overseas.

This is but one of the many arrangements made by the Dominion Publicity Committee, of the 1918 Victory Loan, to bring home forcibly the importance of the campaign into which the Dominion is about to enter.

From the top floor of the Ryrie Building, Yonge and Shuter streets, Toronto, there has gone a magnificent inspiration backed over by a hundred tons of printed publicity matter. That means a total of 35,000,000 pieces, and in addition, a record of every piece. The task was collossal, but it means that in every store window in Canada posters will be displayed, that on every motor car wind shield, stickers will be affixed, that on every bill board in Canada large posters measuring 24 feet by 10 will be pasted in five different designs.

It means that every city or town that exceeds its quota will be given an honor flag by the governor general, that honor buttons will be given to every man, woman and child who buys a bond. It means that an appeal will be made from coast to coast in behalf of the men who offered more than money in the campaign across the waters.

Motion pictures bearing directly upon the subject and explaining it, have been arranged for and the greatest movie stars in the world are taking part.

Harry Gardner, the human fly, has been engaged and will climb the outside wall of some tall office or factory building without using other than his own hands to help him. Phonograph records containing an appeal by Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, will be distributed to the smaller centres so that outlying districts may have the benefit of a talk from him.

So vast and so far reaching is the work done and being done by this ever busy committee that it would require a page to tell it all. R. A. Stephenson, Chairman, says he will be satisfied if none of it is told so long as Canada measures up to her financial responsibility.

The best way to get the most work out of the "human engine" is to give it the food that has the most energy in it. Of all foods, certainly this means FRY'S COCOA —the great food beverage that is all delicious nourishment. If you have to work harder these days, try a regular course of FRY'S. You will need less of other and more expensive foods. There is concentrated strength for muscle and brain in every single cup.

Truest economy—use FRY'S

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a small bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

Most Heat from Fuel

One reason why the Kootenay Range gives the most use of the heat generated from the fuel, is that the grates have ample vents to make perfect combustion in the firebox, which is properly and scientifically proportioned according to the needs of the range.

OCTOBER AND NOVEMBER DELINEATORS FOR DISTRIBUTION

ELKO NOTES

(By Fred Roo)

The International Trouble Makers of the World is now singing on the west front. "It's oh, I'm longing for my aisne folk," and the Clown Prince "I'm moving further back"; and the Big Hindenburg Bloater, "I'm dropping you a line." Jim Thistlebeak is setting the above songs to music.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Klingensmith, of Creston, who have been visiting eastern Canada, stopped off on their return at Elko, visiting the Mayor and Mrs. Klingensmith at the Mining Exchange.

The Harvest Home held in Elko last week was one of the best events ever held in the Old Historic Burg. The Assembly rooms at the post office were kindly lent for the occasion, being beautifully decorated throughout and great interest was centered in the affair as the proceeds are for soldiers comforts overseas. The ladies of the town formed a committee and only had two weeks but in that two weeks did wonders and the display of fancy goods and vegetables was a surprise to the people themselves, and the greatest thanks from the whole town is due to Mr. and Mrs. Birnie, of the Aberdeen Livery Sanitarium and the Blue Line Auto Garage. They worked harder and gave more than anyone, and the committee were so pleased with the success they made that they were both presented with a gold star and we venture to say that the star will be in a parcel that's going overseas for Wee Jimmie, who was known to every traveller on the road, and who is now a prisoner of war in Germany, commonly called Hell. The day was wet and no outsiders were present except Mr. and Mrs. Ingham from Sheep Mountain, and the two Drs. Saunders from Baynes. The town people turned out enmasse and at 3 o'clock the town band struck up that well known melody entitled "Come all ye that are heavy laden with the root of all evil and we will clean you up." The bazaar opened for business at 3 o'clock and by 6 o'clock they had sold out and $164.25 in a soldier's sock to buy comforts with. In the evening the ladies gave a whist drive which was well attended and greatly enjoyed by all present. Mrs. Morgan Edumunds won the first prize and Contractor Edmunds the booby. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Sanders, of Travers, Alberta, who were here visiting for the use of the rooms. Mr. Sanders bought all the vegetables and shipped them to Travers, Alberta. The school children supplied all the articles for the two fish ponds, and they were the best 5c and 10c prizes ever offered.

Jim Thistlebeak says the head officials of the C.P.R. have been getting a great shaking up at Montreal and other points, but he is pleased that Bill Swope still holds his job.

Elbert Hubbard said that one great strong, unselfish soul in every community would actually redeem the world and Charlie Kingensmith says he is the most popular man in Elko, as the Fernie District Ledger printed his name no less than 97 times in one issue, which skins Jim Thistlebeak over 90 odd.

The great piscatorial artist in Elko at the present time is Teddy Worthington, of Cranbrook, who is visiting his grandmother, Mrs. J. Todhunter, of Cumberland House, Riverside Park, along with his mother and sisters. Teddy can catch trout any old time, fog or shine, and is in great demand by tourists. Last week he caught several weighing three and four pounds and it wasn't much of a week for fishing either.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Ellwood, of Flagstone, B.C., returned from a month's visit to Alberta points and were the guests of Miss E. May Roo while in Elko on Sunday, leaving Elko via auto.

Jim Thistlebeak says there is more fun at an Irish funeral than at an English wedding. Pat met his friend Mike after three years. "Do you know Mike I've been married two years and have a boy they say is the picture of meself." "Well," says Mike, "don't be after feeling bad, Pat, so long as the boy is healthy."

Mr. and Mrs. Rudy, who have been spending two weeks at Elko the guests of the C.P.R., left for Creston this week, where Mr. Rudy will have charge of the C.P.R. transportation department, and Mrs. Rudy the chief stenog.

Downhearted? No. With the good news from the western front and the beautiful weather we are having in Elko who is going to cry kamerad. Not Jim Thistlebeak.

Bill Dicken, the government assessor, is down in the Roosville valley this week and will no doubt take in the threshing bee of two handled pumpkins the valley is noted for. He had a fine sample of Lima beans with him.

Newspapers and the Public

Evidence in a case in the Practise court of Montreal proves that the two English evening newspapers of the city, the Star and The Herald, are under the same ownership. The Herald, with a long history as a Liberal paper, was acquired a few years ago by Lord Atholstan, of the staunchly Conservative Star. The union ended in a bitter quarrel between the Star and the Herald over issues not unrelated to Lord Atholston's interest in certain municipal franchises. Since then they have been in serene and perfect agreement on civic questions, but they maintain their party differences. That he has been able to present his patrons of either party with the views and opinions they demand on political subjects says much for Lord Atholstan's versatility and freedom from prejudice, but many citizens will not regard it as an ideal condition that the control of the English press in the evening field of a great city like Montreal should be in one man's hands.—The Globe, Toronto.

Seventy-nine and a half bushels of wheat to the acre is the record of J. D. Rowley, who farms 220 acres of land one and a half miles east of West Selkirk, near Winnipeg, and who has just completed the threshing of 316½ bushels panning out at this rate. The ground was seeded on April 16 and cut on August 23, having been in potatoes and other roots for several years previous.

"CASCARETS" WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—Take Cascarets tonight.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

GERMAN HAS SINISTER SOUND

Good Germans who love their mother tongue, wonder that it should have a sinister sound in American ears, and that we should have no mind to place this weapon in the hands of another generation. If their affection for the fatherland be deeper than their affection for the land of liberty, they can, when the war is over, take their children back to Germany and train them in "kultur." But if they stay here it must be as unhyphenated Americans, with one language, one law, one allegiance, one flag to serve in peace and war.—Agnes Reppeher in Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The civilized world is practically a unit in condemnation of the Bolsheviki and the reign of terror in that part of Russia under their control. Replies have been received by the State Department from most of the countries of the world heartily endorsing the recent note addressed to them by Secretary Lansing, calling for an expression of condemnation of the lawless element in Russia.

VICTORY BONDS

THIS SPACE IS DONATED BY Crow's Nest Trading Co., Ltd.

Flight-Lieut. Harold E. Minton, according to information received by his father, Sergt. Major Minton of the Bonnington Detail, 107th E. K. R., now convalescing in Nelson hospital from severe illness, has been injured by a fall with his machine while flying behind his own lines. Harold whose most recent likeness we reproduce above left this city on August 29, 1914, with the first contingent of 93 boys, and during more four years service this is his first disablement. He has from the very first been in the vortex of the fray with the Canadian Expiditionary forces. Upon arrival at Valcartier he became attached to the 13th Highlanders, with which he went to England. Being an expert motor cyclist he was promptly transferred to the dispatch riders corps, from which he advanced to the mechanical transport, and followed this in its various phases until he received his commission and then entered the Royal Aviation Corps. In this as in all other branches of the service, Harold has made good, and his speedy recovery from his present incapacity is desired by all his Fernie friends.

Chief provincial constable A. McNeill, has been confined to his bed at the Waldorf Hotel this week, suffering from a mild attack of influenza.

J. L. Jamieson, at one time an employee of the M. F. & M. Ry., has been appointed Superintendent of the Kenora Division of the CP.R.

CAN'T USE POOR WHISKEY

Considerable comment has been prevalent from various quarters relative to the matter of increasing the local supply of alcoholic stimulants for use in administering to those affected with the "Flu." Confiscated stocks at the court house were thought desirable by some and in view of the requirements, Mayor Thomson communicated with the Attorney General's department suggesting that something along this line be done to relieve the situation. On Tuesday the following reply was received from the Deputy Attorney General: "The Government has consistently refused to allow confiscated liquor to be put on the market owing to the fact that we have no knowledge of the character of this liquor and will not take any chances in allowing same to be sold. As there are a hospital and two drug stores and medical practitioners in Fernie, their requirements will be promptly filled from the Vancouver liquor vendor's store." (Signed) A. M. Johnson.

The local authorities therefore have done all that could be reasonably expected of them in this connection, and the precautionary measures followed by the government when the quality of such "bootleg" commodity is always questionable, is to say the least quite sound.

POLITICAL UNITY

Austria-Hungary is ready to accept President Wilson's peace principles; in fact, willing to negotiate for peace on the basis of the American proposals irrespective of what her allies may do. There are Italian representatives attending the Allied War Council in France whose views will be heard on the subject of a negotiated peace with the Dual Monarchy, for it will be discussed at the same time as the American-German correspondence that has been submitted to the Entente Powers. Italy, France, Britain and Serbia are the Powers most directly interested in any settlement reached with Austria-Hungary, and as Italy has borne the brunt of the war against that country, her view will carry considerable weight in the Allied Council. There will be a disposition to treat Austria with greater latitude than will be allowed Germany. The Czecho-Slovak and Jugo-Slovak movements have aroused the Dual Monarchy to the danger of disintegration. It is possible, owing to internal conditions, she would be perfectly willing to allow the Allies to effect a settlement even if it involves a new delimitation of boundaries through which the territory of Austria-Hungary would suffer a considerable shrinkage.

The logical Power to which Vienna should have made peace overtures is Italy. President Wilson can do nothing with the latest Note save to pass it on for the consideration of the Allies and the United States as a whole. This matter of peace negotiations and the principles upon which they can be brought about is not a question for any one nation but for all. It is of supreme importance at this time the uncertainty that exists should be swept away. An Allied leader on the home front is needed just as much as a generalissimo was necessary at the time Marshall Foch was appointed to the command of all the armies of the nations at war with Germany. Subject to ratification by the Governments concerned, the present Allied Council in France should nominate one of its number to act as the spokesman for all in anything relating to peace negotiations. Unity of decision, both in the matter of an armistice and regarding any basis for further negotiations, is required. The peace principles enunciated by statesmen in different countries do not always harmonize, and thus the peoples of the various nations are left in doubt. The time has come when there should be a single control on the political front; doubtless a very difficult task to achieve, but equally as important as the unity of direction that was the main factor in leading to this year's Allied victories in France and Belgium.

NOT ENTITLED TO FRANCHISE

Hon. Mr. Oliver, premier of British Columbia, has declared that the electoral laws of that province will be revised before the next provincial election in such a way that only full-fledged citizens will have a voice in the government. "No one," he says, "who has been exempted from war service through his religious belief or any other reason of that kind, will have a right to say how British Columbia should be governed. I do not believe that anyone who has failed to bear his or her share in the sacrifice of this war should be given the franchise after peace has come."

This is a sensible view. Certainly no man who is unwilling to assume all the obligations of citizenship should be permitted to use the franchise which is the outstanding recognition of citizenship. Every conscientious objector, no matter his ilk, should be debarred from the franchise. A man who won't take up his arms to defend his country ought not to be allowed to mark a ballot. —Lethbridge Herald.

THE PROBLEM OF LAND GRABBING

The central problem of all Canada's problems of national reconstruction after the war is the problem presented by the vast total acreage of fertile land held vacant under private ownership. This is the problem around which, in any true view of the matter, all the other national problems revolve. The right solution of this problem will be the key to the solving of all other problems in the manner most truly and justly to the national advantage and welfare. In the long run, industries in Canada can succeed only as they assume their proper relationship with the country's natural sources of wealth, of which the chief are these: Fertile soil, forests, mines, fisheries and water powers. The industry which is Canada's greatest producer of wealth is agriculture. Production from the fertile lands and the rich, natural feeding grounds of Canada is the natural means of providing the principal sources of income for Canada after the war. —The Grain Growers' Guide, Winnipeg.

INFLUENZA STILL RAGES

Practically without exception at present in the city everything has been temporarily set aside in a combined effort to combat the serious influenza epidemic which has "gripped" hundreds of citizens, and has reached a stage on the verge of being extremely critical. The first cases of the malady to appear in the city were reported the middle of last week, when several employees from Barnstead's camp were admitted to the local hospital. From then the influx of patients from nearby points rapidly increased, and by the end of the week the number of cases increased daily by the scores, and has continued until today it is reported that fully 700 cases have developed.

With the approaching crisis plain to everyone from experience gained by what has occurred in places elsewhere, everyone who was able with determined accord enrolled themselves to fight the epidemic. The city hospital in no time became too congested to care for the afflicted ones and the Napanee was chosen as the first emergency hospital and "soup kitchen." The decision to convert the Napanee was reached Wednesday afternoon and by last night at six o'clock it had been constituted as a first class equipped institution and had sixty patients comfortably housed therein. The feat of transforming the vacant hotel into what it now is has been remarkable and the credit to the committee and volunteers cannot be expressed in too complimentary terms. Among those who have assisted are Sherwood Herchmer, J. G. Billings, E. K. Stewart, Harvey Brown, Neil McCallum, R. M. Young, A. Klauer, Mrs. H. J. Johnson, Mrs. E. K. Stewart, Mrs. F. C. Lawe, Mrs. Dr. Garner, Mrs. R. M. Young, Mrs. N. E. Suddaby, Mrs. R. W. Wood, Mrs. J. S. Irvine, Miss West. Thos. Beck, A. Macneil, H. R. Huntington, A. B. Trites, L. E. McDonald, R. Dudley, Jas. Forbes, and numbers of others, but still there is plenty to be done and additional volunteers are urgently required.

The first death, the immediate cause of which was pneumonia superinduced by Spanish Influenza occurred in the city last Thursday when Edward Parsons, from Barnstead's camp succumbed. However the first local death occurred yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Pietro Agnoletta, aged thirty years, died in Fernie hospital from the same cause. In addition to the above the following also will be interred here: S. E. Washburn, died at Olson, October 27, Mrs. G. H. Welsby, and Harry Warren, Fernie, B. C., M. C. Jerome, Bull River.

SUCCUMBS TO INFLUENZA

Died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Terriss, this morning, Rina B. Welsby, beloved wife of George H. Welsby, chief of police of this city. This visitation from the dreaded epidemic has shocked our midst with sickening numbness. Stricken three days ago in the very blossom of youth and health with a mild attack of influenza, complications developed and the demise followed this morning. Deceased was born in Scotland, and came to this city eight years ago when her parents took up their residence here. She is survived by her husband and infant son, her father and mother, and maiden sister, all of whom reside in this city. A brother also, is at present located at Nordegg, Alta., and one married brother serving at the front. On behalf of the citizens of Fernie and the residents of East Kootenay we undertake to extend to Mr. Welsby, and the bereaved ones our sincere sympathy.

BANKS WILL HELP SMALL INVESTORS

It is announced that, in order to encourage investors to participate in the 1918 Victory Loan, the banks will lend subscribers on the probable certainty of repayment within a year, up to 90 per cent of the amount of the investment in the Loan. The rate of interest charged by the banks is 5½ per cent.

This should have the effect of greatly stimulating the flow of money. Many people who were anxious to do their bit towards supporting the boys at the front were unfortunately restricted as to the amount they had available for investment, having immediate or future obligations which called for their ready capital. It is such as these that the banks are ready to help. On reasonable security these intending investors may receive the cash from the bank at the same rate of interest the Dominion government pays for the entire 1918 Victory Loan. They may reduce their obligations to the banks monthly or quarterly.

The banks will also accept from small investors for safe keeping without charge the interim securities and later the bonds themselves up to a reasonable amount, for the term of one year.

IN THE MOTHER OF PARLIAMENTS

The British House of Commons has adopted a resolution in favor of giving women seats in Parliament. This means nothing. Former houses used to make a practice of adopting resolutions favoring women's right to vote. But somehow the government of the day never took any further steps.

However, the present agitation for seats for women in Parliament is likely to come to a head quickly. British women have votes now—about six millions of them. And they will demand from every male candidate at the coming election whether he will undertake to vote for a bill opening parliament to women.

And being a candidate he naturally will. And later on he must. Or six million women voters will know the reason why.—World.

INDIA

There are certain name places in this vast war which focus the story of the unmatched heroism of one or other of the Dominions of the Empire. Each has her own Verdun.

In this count must not be forgotten the glory and name of India. Up to August, 1918, 1,115,189 men from this British Empire of the East have followed the flag thousands of miles from their own homeland and there lived for it, and fought for it and died for it. Indian troops have borne their share in France, Mesopotamia, Egypt and the Dardanelles, Salonika, East Africa, and Central Asia. It is somewhat of an anomaly that it is upon Indian bones that the Union Jack should be chiefly stayed that has brought liberty to Jerusalem after age-long captivity. Allenby's men who are matching in the east the deliverance being effected daily, hourly on the west front, mainly are those who brought with them from the brooding east the turban and gown of their custom, the flash and verve of their cavalry skill, and the love of new liberty, that gains for them an unquestioned place in the brotherhood of good men.

Only by an effort of the imagination can it be fully comprehended what India's loyalty to the Empire has meant to the Empire and to the world at this crisis—not only for the aid which she has supplied, and that is great, but as a preparation for the solving of the meeting of the east and the west which each revolution of the earth of diminishing distances, brings nearer.

The colossal complexity of India with its three hundred millions of peoples of diverse races, languages, customs and religions would have made understandable the passivity of this country during the war. Add to this the unscrupulous efforts of the German agents of which we have reason to know the power, witth their direct appeal to the ever smoldering religious fanaticism of the east, and still more appreciation of what passivity would have meant is gained.

But the Indians, Mohammedans and Hindoos, Buddists and Parsees, alike with a clearness of vision which we might well envy for sections of our population both highly and lowly placed, elected to stand by the Flag that had secured to them freedom and justice and held in every fold a promise of future well being. The vindication of Britain in India is a mighty vindication.

India also has given of her treasure. In the financial statement of 1917 published in March, it was revealed that India's direct war contribution was one hundred million pounds sterling. This is only a part of the war burden cheerfully assumed by the Dominion. Since the war began the net outlay in India has been one hundred and twenty-eight million pounds sterling, and she has lent to the Home government sixty-seven million pounds sterling. As well there have been contributions of supplies, including 1500 miles of railroad track, 250 engines and 4500 cars.

This is the record of the government and does not include the gifts of the Princes of India, of whom there are 700, all loyal to the cause. When east meets west over a cleansed Europe the star of India will take its place among the flags of humanity.—Winnipeg Free Press.

A CHANCE FOR CANADIAN CONSUMERS

Consumers of Canada have now an opportunity of ascertaining whether the prices they pay for foodstuffs are reasonable and fair or possible extortions by alleged profiteers. All they have to do in each municipality in Canada is to ask their municipal council to appoint a Fair Price Committee to investigate the prices asked by retailers and to draw conclusions as to whether these prices are fair and reasonable. These Fair Price Committees will then publish their findings in the form of lists.

In this way the consumers will make sure whether they are paying prices which are unreasonable and unfair or not. It may be that the prices which the Committee considers to be fair and reasonable will not be any lower than the present prices charged by retailers. In some cases they may be higher. But that need not bother the consumer so long as he is satisfied through the investigation of the impartial Fair Price Committee within his own municipality that the prices published indicate a fair and reasonable standard to guide both consumer and retailer, having in mind war conditions and the unsettling of pre-war prices.

If there is a desire on the part of the consumuers to find out just where they stand in regard to prices which they have to pay for foodstuffs they now have a golden opportunity to have the matter dealt with once and for all under the provisions of the recent Order-in-Council, fathered by the Department of Labor, relative to the appointment of Municipal Fair Price Committees.

The virtue of this Order-inCouncil, giving authority to municipalities to appoint Fair Price Committees to investigate the prices consumers have to pay, lies in the publicity that will be given to the findings. In this way public opinion will be informed, and enlightened public opinion may be trusted to co-operate in all national food efforts if it knows the facts. You can always give anything a thorough trial once.

The High Cost of Whims

THE United States Government has found it necessary to issue strict orders regulating the styles of shoes. Why? Because the high cost of fads imposes a burden all along the line—upon manufacturer, dealer and consumer, and upon the Government itself.

Such action may be avoided in Canada, if you—the consumer—will co-operate with the manufacturer in reducing the demand for extravagant styles—if you will buy prudently, for service rather than for effect.

To do this will be a direct benefit to you. You will get better and longer service, more comfort, and your shoes will be quite as neat and attractive. You will need fewer pairs of shoes in the course of a year.

More than that: you will help to cut down needless extravagance, to reduce superfluous stocks on the dealers' shelves, to keep prices down, and to release essential supplies of leather for our forces overseas.

THE SMILE OF VICTORY

At a luncheon in Vancouver the other day nearly a thousand British Columbia business men picked up from the orchestra the lilt of a chorus from the trenches. Over and over they sang it in increasing volume, the spirit of the song reflecting their own.

The Minister of Finance speaking a few minutes later on on behalf of the Victory Loan, adopted the refrain as the text for his appeal.

And yesterday on the eve of the Great Victory Loan drive for half a billion dollars the committee adopted the same song as the key-chorus for the campaign:

"Pack your troubles in your old kit bag,

As this Victory Loan will probably be the last big thing we can do for our boys "over there," let us adopt their methods. In the abominable filth and vermin of the unspeakable trenches they sing this song of cheer. They sing it as they pass those acres of white crosses which fret the fields of France, and which mark the last resting place of their comrades. They fling it in the bright eyes of danger when under fierce bombardment. And because they are men who can sing in such conditions they are unbeatable.

It is this spirit which is bringing Victory in Picardy and Flanders today. It will insure the success of the Victory Loan in Canada. Under the strain of the Civil War, Lincoln took a copy of Artemus Ward into the cabinet. At the very peak of his responsibilities in the present war, President Wilson came into council rippling with laughter and with a newspaper comic strip in his hand. Our soldiers sing and laugh to lift the strain. If they lose the power to laugh they lose the power to fight. A moping, solemn nation is a losing nation.

Such is Germany.

In this spirit the thousands of workers for the Victory Loan are going into this fight. "Flu" can be fought with camphor and quinine, but better still with courage. re occupation and concentration in this great drive is the real antidote for the worry and apprehension on which such epidemics thrive.

"What's the use of worrying, it never was worth while,
So pack your trouble in you old kit bag,

AVOID OVERFATIGUE

Philadelphia Public Ledger: The mere fact that the incidence of the grip at the outset looks ominous is all the more reason for meeting the issue with confidence and absolute resoluteness. Whatever medical science may advise as to prevention or as to treatment, one simple fact that outweighs everything else is that if every individual will but follow the normal life he has led, eat those things that are suited to his system, things that he has always eaten with resulting good health, rest and sleep as usual and avoid overfatigue, while carrying on his work, also as usual, he will escape the grip. There is no excuse for any panic.

SYNOPSIS OF LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjurtment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

War Efficiency and National Prosperity

More than a billion and a half dollars distributed in Canada for exported agricultural produce and the products of labor in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1918, has kept Canada busy, and prosperous in spite of the war.

CANADA'S production in such enormous quantities was made possible only by the money received through Canada's War Loans. Canada thus was enabled to assist the Allies in their purchases here by establishing financial credits for their use in this country.

CANADA'S war loans not only have sustained Canada's war effort, but they have kept the wheels of production turning as they never turned before.

This is the flood of cash which poured in to Canada's farms for their exports in the fiscal year 1918, for:—

Butter	$ 2,000,000
Cheese	36,602,000
Eggs	2,271,000
Oats	37,644,000
Wheat	366,341,000
Flour	95,896,000
Meats	76,729,000
Vegetables	19,034,000

Over six hundred and thirty-six million dollars for exported farm products alone!

* * *

AND the workers of Canada also shared greatly in Canada's export trade.

For their products there was distributed in Canada, during the year:

Munitions	$450,000,000
Metals	92,083,000
Vehicles	22,776,000
Wood Pulp and Paper	59,599,000

These huge sums were spent in Canada by the Allies.

Canada's own war expenditure for the fiscal year 1918 was $342,762,000.

And the bulk of all these expenditures, the foundation of Canada's prosperity and war effectiveness, was made possible only because the subscribers to Canada's war loans furnished the working capital.

* * *

CANADA must keep this great work going—must produce as never before; must work, fight, save and lend as she has never yet done to bring victory and a lasting peace to a war-ridden world.

But Canada to-day (thanks to her great export trade), is in a better position now than ever, to carry on.

The Victory Loan 1918 will keep Canada busy, will enable her to maintain her great export business; and it will make Canada more efficient than ever, because her prosperity will not be diminished and her determination to work, fight and win will be stronger than it has ever been before.

WORK OR FIGHT SAYS CARVELL

St. JOHN, Nfld., Oct. 29.—Hon. Mr. Carvell, minister of public works, while in the city yesterday was asked regarding the labor situation in western Canada. He stated that unfortunately a very unsettled condition seemed to prevail in certain sections of the labor unions, not only in western Canada but in a lesser degree in certain portions of eastern Canada as well. He was very emphatic in his belief that I. W. W. and socialistic propaganda of considerable importance was being carried on all over Canada and particularly in the west and unfortunately many of the Labor leaders were, in his opinion, very much influenced by these seditious doctrines.

He was very particular, however, to emphasize the fact that big labor unions, such as the railway conductors, engineers, trainmen, telegraphers and what are generally known as the "Big Six," and many other of the recognized trade unions were not affected by it. In fact, he thought that the part played by the big labor unions in Canada during the war had been of such a high patriotic character that it was an absolute justification of their existance and an evidence that properly conducted labor unions could exert a wider influence for good in any country.

Mr. Carvell was very sorry to read in the papers that a strike was threatened in Sydney because of the dismissal of some employees of the Dominion Iron and Steel company, but wished it distinctly understood that if any such took place the government would not hesitate to act with the firmness necessary to meet the situation; in other words, they laid down the principle that every man has a right to have his grievances investigated but no man has a right to cease work in any industry during the continuance of the war—every man physically fit should either work or fight. —Nelson News.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a small bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

John Barleycorn, my jo, John, since nations had their birth, you have with beastly arrogance infested this old earth. But now you see your finish, John, and many fits you throw, the bells are tolling knells for you, John Barleycorn, my jo This war has slain its millions, John, and many more must die, but you have killed far more than war, with your old gin and rye; the men who fall on battlefields our prayers and blessings know, but those who slay must die in shame. John Barleycorn, my jo. John Barleycorn, my jo, John, your tricks cannot avail; you cannot set aside your doom by blowing in the kale; nor can the tears of crocodiles which down your whiskers flow avert one hour the bier and shroud, John Barleycorn, my jo. 'Twill be a better world, John, when you've removed your sign, when you no longer poison men with tanglefoot and wine; for every plunk you handle is the price of pain and woe, and that's a tainted sort of coin, John Barleycorn, my jo. You've wearied all the world, John, you've tired the souls of men, and when you chase yourself away you won't come back again; you're letting go by inches, John, but you will have to go, and so skidoo and fare thee ill, John Barleycorn, my jo.

FARMERS' EXPORTS BEATING THE BOCHE

Last year the people of Canada loaned to the government $419,000,000 to carry on thew ar. Out of that sum were spent huge sums to finance the purchases of the British Government in Canada for food and munitions. Since the war began the Imperial Munitions Board has awarded contracts in Canada amounting to $1,200,000,000 and about $600,000,000 have been advanced by the Government and banks. Besides that there were heavy advances to assist in the export of Canada's agricultural products.

These sums have been the cause of a tremendous expansion of industry. Farmers, as well as manufacturers have beenable to sell their surplus products to Great Britain and to get the money at once. They have gone on multiplying their efforts and doing their part in winning the war, for Great Britain had to eat while her soldiers were away fighting. In the past year the Government has advanced $100,000,000 to finance our agricultural and animal products to Great Britain. The bacon output was entirely handled out of Loan funds. And this year there will be some heavy calls out of the 1918 Victory Loan. Canada has a surplus of cheese for export amounting to $40,000,000. Butter, eggs and condensed milk will amount to $10,000,000 more. The Victory Loan will get these to their only market, Great Britain. The exportable wheat crop will be 100,000,000 bushels and the value $225,000,000. Victory Loan money for the most part will finance this.

It is a big story. Perhaps we may better understand the tremendous import of the Victory Loan by comparing the agricultural and animal exports of the last fiscal year with four four years ago. In 1915 Canada exported of these $209,000,000; last year the figures grew to $740,000,000, because the Dominion Government was able to find the money for the handling of these exports. In manufactures exports have increased from $85,000,000 in 1915 to $636,000,000 in the last fiscal year. Many great industries have been built up. The whole country has felt the impulse to greater endeavor. This is the spirit that is winning the war. We must not let it flag. Subscribe to the Victory Loan.

CIVIL SERVICE WAGE INCREASE

A minimum wage of $1,080 a year has been fixed for all civilian employees of the United States Government in legislation which passed the House of Representatives on September 25. The size of the vote, 252 for to 16 against almost assures the final passage of the bill.

This is a method of going ahead and doing things which it is rather salutary to consider. Civil Servants in Canada expect some such treatment when reorganization and reclassification becomes a fact but this is a long way ahead. It is so long that Civil Servants have been forced to apply for a relief that shall be more immediate. They need a war bonus right now, have needed it in fact for the past three years, and such items of news as the one which we have quoted in our first sentence can only make them wonder why there should be a moment's further delay on the part of the Canadian Government in granting the full measure of the moderate request contained in the Civil Service Memorial of over two weeks ago.

Civil Servants, whose average salary is $1,125 a year, asked for $350 to meet a doubled cost of living which has reduced their salary for the present year alone by $1,125. They see the employees of a neighboring government, employees who have all been receiving war bonuses for the past year or more, given a minimum wage only $45 less than their own average salary. They know, moreover, that approximately sixty per cent of their own number receive less than this minimum which has been established for everybody, including messengers, watchmen, and janitors, in a country where living conditions are less expensive than in Canada.

For such a condition of affairs to be at all equitable the inefficient employees who are product of the old patronage system should form 60 per cent of the total and all of them should draw less than $1,080 a year. Both of these suppositions are impossible.

The Civil Service of Canada has many employees on full time at $500 and hundreds more, including married men with families and returned soldiers at $600. If the Government of Canada is not to treat its employees less generously than the United States is doing the bonus granted to employees at the lower salaries will have to be raised from $350 to $480 and even $580. If the Government of Canada is not to treat its employees less generously than private money making industry the bonus granted to all will have to be made much higher than $350. If the Government of Canada is not to treat its employees less generously, so far as per capita expenditure is concerned, than France, the bonus will also have to be made much more than $350. Civil servants did not ask this but they addressed their request to statesmen and they have a right to expect that their portrayal of conditions will be met in a statesmanlike manner.

Justice to its own employees by one of an allied family of nations will have an effect far wider than its own boundaries, and an effect within these boundaries far wider than its own employees. In the words of the winning poster used by the Government in the present Victory Loan: "If ye break faith, we shall not sleep."

SEVEN MONTHS AFTER

Beginning in March what they hoped to be their final great offensive for Paris, the Channel and victory the German armies, after seven months of almost continuous fighting have got none of these things.

On the other hand they have used up all their reserves, have lost several hundred thousand troops as prisoners and a great portion of their artillery.

They have retreated in places over thirty miles. Their air superiority is gone for good. They have lost the Belgian coast naval bases and the mining districts of Northern France. Over a front of 120 miles they are moving slowly rearward wrecking everything wreckable as they go.

These facts would suggest early victory. But the Germans are not yet beaten. By reducing the length of their fighting front by even fifty miles they gain new reserves of troops—tired troops most likely but still capable of making a vigorous resistance and inflicting loss on their opponents.

The Germans, no doubt, have other defenses in the rear of their present lines. They have ample forced labor. Entrenched in new dugouts and behind barbed wire and concrete they can doubtless hold out the winter and hope for better things in the spring.

Therefore it is well not to imagine the war is over yet. Though the Hun is tired he is by no means exhausted.

OFFICIAL PROSPECTUS

The proceeds of this Loan will be used for War purposes only, and will be spent wholly in Canada

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE OF THE DOMINION OF CANADA offers for Public Subscription the

5 year Bonds due November 1st, 1923
15 year Bonds due November 1st, 1933

Principal payable without charge at the Office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the Office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Victoria.

Bonds may be registered as to principal or as to principal and interest, at any of the above-mentioned offices.

Interest payable, without charge, half-yearly, May 1st and November 1st, at any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank.

Principal and Interest payable in Gold
Denominations: $50, $100, $500 and $1,000

Issue Price: 100 and Accrued Interest

Income Return 5½% per Annum

Free from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The proceeds of the Loan will be used for war purposes only, including the purchase of grain, foodstuffs, munitions and other supplies, and will be spent wholly in Canada.

Payment to be made as follows:

10% on application; 20% January 6th, 1919;
20% December 6th, 1918; 20% February 6th, 1919;
31.16% March 6th, 1919.

The last payment of 31.16% covers 30% balance of principal and 1.16% representing accrued interest at 5½% from November 1st to due dates of the respective instalments.

A full half year's interest will be paid on May 1st, 1919, making the cost of the bonds 100 and interest.

Subscriptions may be paid in full at the time of application at 100 without interest; or on any instalment due date thereafter together with accrued interest at the rate of 5½% per annum.

This Loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest are a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

The Amount of this issue is $300,000,000, exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds of previous issues. The Minister of Finance, however, reserves the right to allot the whole or any part of the amount subscribed in excess of $300,000,000.

Conversion Privileges

Bonds of this issue will, in the event of future issues of like maturity, or longer, made by the Government, during the remaining period of the War, other than issues made abroad, be accepted at 100 and accrued interest, as the equivalent of cash for the purpose of subscription to such issues.

Payments

All cheques, drafts, etc., covering instalments, are to be made payable to the Credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture, and the allotment to cancellation. Subscriptions must be accompanied by a deposit of 10% of the amount subscribed. Official Canvassers will forward subscriptions or any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank will accept subscription and issue receipts.

Subscriptions may be paid in full at time of application at 100 without interest; or on any instalment due date thereafter together with accrued interest to time of making payment in full. Under this provision, payment of subscriptions may be made as follows:

If paid in full on or before Nov. 16th, 1918, par without interest, or 100%.
If remaining instalments paid on Dec. 6th, 1918, balance of 90% and interest, ($90.48 per $100.)
If remaining instalments paid on Jan. 6th, 1919, balance of 70% and interest, ($70.80 per $100.)
If remaining instalments paid on Feb. 6th, 1919, balance of 50% and interest. ($51.04 per $100.)

GIRLS! WHITEN YOUR SKIN WITH LEMON JUICE

Make a beauty lotion for a few cents to remove tan, freckles, sallowness.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply you with three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Squeeze the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle, then put in the orchard white and shake well. This makes a quarter pint of the very best lemon skin whitener and complexion beautifier known. Massage this fragrant, creamy lotion daily into the face, neck, arms and hands and just see how freckles, tan, sallowness, redness and roughness disappear and how smooth, soft and clear the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless, and the beautiful results will surprise you.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

One Taylor Safe for Sale. For particulars, apply at the Western Canada Wholesale Co., Ltd.

See Dad Bleasdell about the "Flu." He has all the things for prevention and cure and he knows.

Joseph McDougall, paying teller of the Home Bank was taken ill last evening, suffering from the "Flu." He is the first member of the Home Bank staff to be afflicted.

Among the casualties this week two local names appear. They are Burdell Clowers, son of J. W. Clowers, coke oven foreman, suffering from effects of shell gas. Pte. James Raven, whose next of kin is given as Mrs. James Raven, Morrissey, is reported dangerously ill.

All members of the city clerk's staff are laid up with the influenza. City Clerk Moffatt was taken ill last Friday, and the remaining members, Miss Marjorie Carmichael and Miss Grundy were obliged to take to their beds this week. The office therefore is closed temporarily.

Our venerable contemporary, D. V. Mott, who during his residence here over an extended period, has been engaged in press, lumbering and automobile industries, was born on November 1st, 1848. Allow us therefore to extend our good wishes on this his seventieth anniversary.

The sad intelligence was received here Wednesday of the death of William Todhunter at Rexford, Mont., the previous night. The deceased prior to engaging himself on the mechanical staff of the Great Northern Railway was for many years employed in the same capacity with the M. F. & M. Railway here. He was 33 years of age and is survived by his wife,(nee Miss Ammie Biggs) and three small children. His parents,Mr. and Mrs. John Todhunter, reside at Elko. The remains were conveyed from Rexford and arrived here last evening but funeral arrangements have been deferred until the return of Mr. Thomas Biggs, father-in-law, who is at present in the eastern states, in connection with his official duties as president of District 18.

GOOD HATERS

Baron Beaverbrook, better known to Canadians as Max Aitken, has been compelled, through ill health, to relinquish his post as minister of propaganda in the British government. There has been no secret as to his condition. It has been publicly stated that he had to undergo an operation for swollen neck glands, and that the operation was not a success. In regretfully accepting his resignation, Premier Lloyd George wrote that he delayed, waiting the outcome of the surgeon's effort, and accepted only when he was convinced that there was no hope of Lord Beaverbrook being able to continue in office. The British premier, who has a high regard for his Canadian colleague, expressed the hope that Lord Beaverbrook's great talents would again be available to the empire before long.

In face of this perfectly frank and clear explanation of the case, there are some papers in Canada which are endeavoring to lead their readers to believe that Baron Beaerbrook was a failure in his propaganda work, and that his resignation was practically forced Lord Beaverbrook's commercial record in Canada made his enemies, particularly among other financiers who failed to over-reach him. The cement merger was neither more nor less of a commercial offence than a dozen other mergers that have taken place in Canada, prominent among which was a bread merger conducted by a son of Sir William Mulock. It is only because Lord Beaverbrook became prominent in public life that he is hte target for the attacks of little enemies.

In his public career, however, there has been nothing but honor. His services in bringing about the present Union government in Great Britain, and in reconciling the differences of Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Bonar Law, are among the most important that have been performed by any individual during the war.

Since he has been active in war work in Britain, both in and out of the government, he has done much to bring honor and credit to Canada. Today he is a sick man, forced, because of physical infirmity, to abandon an important government office. These facts should entitle him to decent treatment even from his Canadian enemies

DEALING WITH "THE CHOSEN PEOPLE"

It was in December, 1914, that the Kaiser delivered this address to his army of the East:

"Remember that you are the chosen people.

"The spirit of the Lord is descended upon me because I am the Emperor of the Germans.

"I am the instrument of the Almighty! I am his sword. His representative!

"Disaster and death to all those who resist my will!

"Disaster and death to all those who resist my mission!

"Disaster and death to cowards! May all the enemies of the German people perish!

"God orders their destruction and God commands you through my mouth to do His will.

"Wilhelm II."

There is nothing apocryphal about this text. It is authentic. It was prepared with care by the All Highest and was distributed among the troops to encourage them in their campaign against the Russians.

It is the spirit contained in this document that the civilized world has been fighting for four years. To break and destroy it the nations of the Entente have made sacrifices quite beyond the power of the human imagination to grasp. The British Empire's toll in dead alone has one million men.

The Kaiser is not making speeches like this now; but is his silence due to a change of heart or to fear? The German people of today would not applaud such speeches if made; but is this due to their recognition of their essential madness or to a belief that the time is not precisely opportune to declare their "divine mission" to destroy the nations that resist them?

After all that has happened since August, 1914, the Allied powers can take no chance of making peace with a Germany which at heart is unrepentant and unreformed. Germany must convince the world of her sincerity and her penitence. She cannot do it by documents; that damning phrase "A scrap of paper" bars the way. She must do it by deeds which cannot be questioned. She must deal with the Hohenzollerns, the instigators of the submarine crimes, the violators of Belgium, and the whole brood of high-placed criminals. If not, the Allied world must deal with them; and the war must go on until the power and the opportunity thus to execute justice are placed in the hands of the nations which were doomed to death in the Kaiser's flamboyant announcement of policy in December, 1914.—Winnipeg Free Press.

STORAGE OF POTATOES'

Many have grown potatoes this year who never did so before and consequently will be unfamiliar with the best methods of protecting the crop.

Potatoes should be stored in as dry and cool a place as possible without freezing. The drier they can be kept the less rot will develop.

This year especially potatoes should be carefully sorted within from three to four weeks after storing in the cellar, those showing any signs of developing rot being discarded. This will protect the remainder of the crop.

Food is badly needed and it is our positive duty to take good care of what we have produced.

NOTES AND COMMENT

An American aviator ascended 28-000 feet by airplane. His fingers were so cold he froze them, but it cannot be said that he had "cold feet."—Buffalo Commercial.

Colonel Roosevelt warned the United States against becoming a "polyglot boarding house." The admonition is needed in Canada, too.—Toronto Globe.

The word runs that neither gas, airplanes, nor massed artillery will be counted the epochal innovation of this war, but that the honor will be reserved for tanks. Even the haughty airmen are beginning to think that the tortoise-like machine that keeps close to mother earth is the coming conquering instrument in warfare.—Writer in New York Tribune.

THE WAR

The western battlefields quite naturally absorb most of the attention of students of the war. Not merely are they nearer and their associations with civilians on this side of the Atlantic more direct and numerous; they form, in addition, the real centre of the struggle. On them is concentrated the major portion of the remaining military strength of the Central Powers. A decisive victory in France would end the war. But that is not to say that the only avenue through which the Allies can strike the fatal blow at Prussia, the mainstay of the Teutonic alliance, lies in the west. The question is rather whether any other avenue can be utilized without weakening the effort which compels Germany to focus its forces in France and Flanders. If Prussia can be reached from the south or from the east, simultaneously with the maintenance of the present pressure in the west the resulting division of the forces of the German Empire in order to parry the new blow will make easier the task of the Allies. The possibility of such an attack is therefore of great interest.

The importance of prosecuting the "side-shows" is well illustrated in the case of Bulgaria. A few weeks ago the probability of an attack being made upon Hungary across the Danube by Allied troops was remote. Between the Saloniki armies and the Danube lay the Bulgarian forces and some hundreds of miles of difficult country. But Bulgaria was at the end of its tether. It needed only the commencement of a determined Allied offensive to break its spirit and to cause it to sue for peace on the Allies' terms. Thus was conferred on the Entente forces the ability to march to the Danube and to bring their reinforcements and supplies to the new scene of action over the Bulgarian and Serbian railroads. The war has been brought to the Austrian frontier just when the Hapsburg government needed all its remaining strength to repel the Italians. Succor can now be brouht to the Roumanians, ground under the heel of a German army of occupation. Within a short time the reorganization of a portion of the Roumanian army sufficient to cause Hungary to entertain very grave apprehensions of its ability to withstand the concerted attacks of the Allies will have been effected. Under the threat of invasion from the southwest by the Italians, from the south by the Serbians, and from the east by the Roumanians the Dual Monarchy, which is obviously almost as near the end of its resources as Bulgaria appeared to be before its collapse, may also sue for peace on the Allies' terms. That will expose the southern borders of the German empire to attack and vastly complicate the calculations of the German High Command.

Turkey is farther from the main seat of Teutonic resistance. But through its elimination from the war very important consequences will accrue. When Turkey surrenders—as sooner or later it must— the Entente will have free access to the Black Sea. There, it is true, are the Russian Black Sea fleet and the remains of the Turkish fleet. These are in possession of Germany. But they could not hope to offer more than momentary resistance to the naval forces which the Allies could and would bring to bear upon them. Once in possession of the Black Sea the Allies would have—what they have never had in the war—easy access to southern Russia for the purpose of sustaining Russia's military effort. The Bolshevki forces in eastern Russia and Siberia would find their rear exposed. They might retire to the westward relying upon the assistance of Germany to maintain their supremacy there. But the creation of an eastern front so near to Poland and Prussia as to compel the latter to take steps to defend itself would be an accomplished fact.

If Germany is comtemplating the defence of the Fatherland against the Allied armies, which are out for decisive victory or unconditional surrender, here is one of the main underlying causes of the "peace offensive." The certainty that, at some stage of the defence, the Allies will be knocking at their back door is behind the desire of the Prussians to extricate their armies from France and Belgium without further loss of men and material. And the certainty is not a mere distant contingency. Turkey is very severly wounded; it may surrender at any time. The influence of the Young Turks has almost gone. Once let it be seen that, by no conceivable course, military or diplomatic, can Constantinople be saved from the grasp of the Allies and surrender will follow. The reluctance to relinquish Constantinople is probably the most potent motive for the continuance of Turkey's military resistance.

The situation in the East offers them no real hope that Constantinople can be saved for the Turks. General Allenby's great victory in Palestine robbed the Turks at a stroke of a large proportion of their defensive power. Allenby's troops have entered Aleppo, on the Bagdad railway and close to the boundary of Anatolia, the stronghold of the Turks in Asia. General Marshall is also showing activity. His armies have been unable to pursue their plans during the hot season. They were withdrawn upon Bagdad pending the renewal of hostilities in the cooler season of the year. General Brooking was in command some months ago of the left wing which advanced up the Euphrates to Abu Kemal and Khan Bagdadie. His army retired to Hit, about a hundred miles west of Bagdad. General Marshall's troops have again advanced up the Tigris and have driven back the Turks from Kirkuk. They are thus more than half way to Mosul. The Bagdad railway was to have connected Mosul with Aleppo, some distance to the east. That portion of the road has probably never been completed. But it follows the easiest line of march to the point at which General Marthose of Allenby.

This operation in the Tigris valley is also a threat to the flank of the Turkish forces pushed eastward into Trans-Caucasia and Persia against the wish of the Germans, but in pursuance of Pan-Turanian ambitions to establish a new Turkish empire held together by ties of racial affinity as well as by that of military power. The resources of Turkey cannot at this stage of the war, be adequate to the maintenance of the expedition into Armenia, Russia and Persia, as well as for the defence of Anatolia. But the latter is essential. General Marshall will endeavor to cut off the Turks east of Lake Van unless they are withdrawn. At the same time the forces opposing General Allenby are utterly unable to prevent him from advancing along the completed portion of the Bagdad railway from Aleppo across the Taurus range into the heart of Turkey-in-Asia. The danger which is threatening is reflected in the attempt of the governor of Smyrna to open peace negotiations with the Allies. Once General Allenby begins operations in Anatolia the Allied navies can render him valuable assistance. The province of Anatolia has a lengthy and vulnerable seacoast which could not be properly defended by the Turks.

The defeat of Turkey is thus inevitable. Allenby and Marshall require only time in which to develop their operations to bring home to the Turks the hopelessness of continued resistance. And General D'Esperey will shortly commence an offensive which will strike directly at Constantinople. The German threats of reprisals upon the capital if the Turkish government begins peace negotiations cannot retain their power when the Allied artillery is also at its gates and Allied airmen are dropping bombs into its forts and defences. The prospect of the British and French navies sailing into the Black Sea is not so distant as to obviate the necessity for German preparations against the dangers that they will bring in their train.

The collapse of Turkey and the confusion in Austria-Hungary consequent upon the Italian and Serbian offensives will add also to Germany's political difficulties. The policy of defence of the Fatherland might very well obtain complete support if it meant only the defence of of the western frontier; but when it is realized in Germany that the Allies have an excellent prospect of attacking on the south and east also there will be a different tale to tell. German morale is breaking under the strain of economic stagnation, food shortage and military defeat. The War Lords will have an enormous task to perform in maintaining the courage and determination of the masses above the danger point. And they will attempt to maintain it there only at the risk of their own existence as the ruling power in the German Empire.—Manitoba Free Press.

NOTICE TO SOLDIERS ON HARVEST LEAVE.

Attention is directed to a recent announcement published in the Press by the Military Service Branch, Department of Justice, regarding extensions to be granted to men EXEMPTED AS FARMERS.

It is pointed out that this DOES NOT IN ANY WAY AFFECT MEN WHO HAVE BEEN ORDERED BY THE REGISTRAR TO REPORT to Depot Battalions and who have thereafter received leave of absence from the Military Authorities.

Once a man has been ordered to report for duty by the Registrar he leaves the jurisdiction of the Registrar and comes under that of the Department of Militia and Defence, and is to be considered as a soldier. This applies to men of the 20 to 22 Class who have been ordered to report by the Registrar in virtue of the cancellation of exemptions by Order-in-Council of the 20th April last, as well as to those ordered to report in the usual way on refusal of claim for exemption, or on expiration of exemption granted.

All men, accordingly, who have been ordered to report, and are therefore SOLDIERS, and who have subsequently been granted harvest leave by the military authorities, MUST, NOTWITHSTANDING THE NOTICE ABOVE REFERRED TO, REPORT ON THE EXPIRATION OF THAT LEAVE, unless they are notified to the contrary by their Commanding Officer or by general notice published by the Department of Militia and Defence.

DEPARTMENT OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE.

LIFT YOUR CORNS OFF WITH FINGERS

Tells how to loosen a tender corn or callus so it lifts out without pain.

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn or callus the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn or callus, root and all, lifts off with the fingers.

Freezone dries the moment it is applied, and simply shrivels the corn or callus without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but will positively rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or hardened callus. If your druggist hasn't any freezone he can get it at any wholesale drug house for you.

MAP NAMES MOUNTAINS OF WESTERN CANADA

The Department of the Interior issues the following:

Great importance attaches to the publication by the Geographic Board of a map illustrting the scheme adopted for the nomeclature of the mountains of western Canada, or, as they are called, the Cordilleras of Canada.

There are three main belts, named the Eastern belt, the Central belt, and the Western belt.

Each belt is divided into systems. The Eastern belt into the Rockies and Arctic systems; the Central belt into the Columbia, Interior, Cassiar, and Yukon systems; and the western belt into the Pacific and Insular systems.

Each system is divided into chains having a territorial designation followed by the term mountains. The undissected high table lands of the Central belt have a territorial designation followed by the term plateau.

The Rockies system includes the Rocky mountains, the Mackenzie tains; the Arctic system includes the Richardson mountains; the Columbia system includes the Selkirk mountains the Monashee mountains, and the Cariboo mountains; the Interior system includes the Fraser and Nechako plateau, and un-named mountains and plateaus; the Cassiar system includes the Babine mountains, the Stikine mountains and un-named mountains; the Yukon system includes the Yukon plateaus and various isolated ranges and mountains, including table lands on the drainage basin of the Liard river; the Pacific system includes the Cascade mountains, the Coast mountains, the Bulkley mountains and unnamed mountains; the Insular system includes the Vancouver Island mountains the Queen Charlotte mountains and the St. Elias mountains (in part.)

Mountains are similarly divided into ranges, groups or plateaus, and the latter into individual mounts, peaks or ridges.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Cure Sick Headache, Constipation, Billiousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath—Candy Cathartic.

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels—you always get relief with Cascarets. They immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet and head clear for months. They work while you sleep.

What Will I Look Like in Ten Years from Now?

What woman hasn't asked herself this question? How often have you worried about it? You have heard it said that "beauty is only skin deep". Don't believe it. The key to good looks is health, and the first essential to good health is to keep the digestive organs in perfect working order. For this purpose nothing is so helpful as Chamberlain's Tablets. An occasional dose will prevent or relieve constipation, indigestion, biliousness, sick headache, and all their train of attendant evils.

"STEADY THE HOME FRONT— PUT OVER THE LOAN"

If peace came tonight the Canadian army would have to be fed and nursed for over a year before returning home. Your money will do it. Ships must be built and armies fed. This means a market and a cash market. Will you lend your money for this purpose? The proceeds of the loan will provide the cause, produce products and stabilise industry. The last loan made business good. This loan will keep it good. Business prosperity and the loan go together. The loan of 1917 was a guarantee against military defeat. It meant reinforcements, ordinance, food, ammunition, hospitals, victory. The Loan of 1918 is a guarantee against commercial depression. With one we secured victory, with the other we will ensure prosperity. Our soldiers have done their full duty. Let us do ours.

One year ago the fate of Italy hung in the balance and the enemy was knocking at the gate. The Italian army, with broken morale, deceived and disorganized, was in rapid retreat. Seldom in history has there been a record of such a rapid reorganization. In a few days the Italians had barred the way and saved the nation. A few months later they administered a decisive defeat to the enemy, marking the first of a series of terrible reverses to the Hun nations. One year after the tragic retreat, the Italians have brought the Austrian enemy to its knees in unconditional surrender. It was a remarkable reverse.

It may mean your life. Don't risk it. Spray your nose and throat daily with Suddaby's Antiseptic Solution.

FERNIE IS A SICK CITY

In its short history of some twenty years the city of Fernie has been up against all kinds of trials and tribulations, such as explosions, strikes, fires, etc. Men have been killed you may say by the hundred and millions of dollars worth of property destroyed by fire, and the people of this town have always managed to come up with a smile, but in the last week the Flu just seems to have knocked the wind out of everyone's sails. With over half our population down with the epidemic and the balance feeling as if it were their turn next, the spirit of gloom has been upon us. It has not been the heavy death rate. Many other towns have been hit much harder in that way than we have, but with over two thousand sick people in our midst and death striking here and there the prospect did not seem very cheerful. However, the response to the call for nurses and help has been very generous and with three emergency hospitals working full capacity hundreds of cases have been treated and dozens of lives saved by the prompt and heroic efforts of the volunteer workers. Many of the patients have already recovered and have made way for others, and it now seems that the worst of the epidemic is over although there are a number of very serious cases yet and a few deaths occur every day.

Following is a list of the fatalities to date:

Jos. Prats, aged 29. Next of kin Nick Daniluk.

Thos. Rhodes, age 32, Englishman. Next of kin, Mrs. E. Davidson, West Fernie.

John Urban, age 23. No relatives in this country.

G. Camerona, of Coal Creek, age 28 years.

Louis Vernetta, 111 Lindsay avenue, age 23. A brother lives in Michel.

FLU NOTES

Sherwood Herchmer, one of the hardest workers on the emergency hospital staff, was taken ill yesterday and it is feared he has the flu.

J. L. Gates is very ill with pneumonia.

A. Klauer and Father Michel have done a great work gathering in the afflicted to the different hospitals.

W. J. Claridge, Jas. McCool, James Johnson, Fred Perry, Dr. Simmons E. J. Schagel, William Wilmot and Harry Wilkes are a few of the workers who have been on the job from the start and seem to be immune from the disease.

The flu epidemic in gradually abating in Cranbrook, although they have had a hard time in that town. Over forty people have already died from the dread disease and there are still some dangerous cases.

Allan Graham, who was one of the first patients admitted to the emergency hospital, was on Tuesday discharged as cured. Mrs. Graham is still on the sick list but is recovering.

Mrs. Matthew Tully and her son Matthew, two of the worst cases in the hospital, are now practically out of danger.

A. B. Trites, who has been in charge of Victoria Hall hospital, which contains forty beds, has been doing splendid work. Only one patient died in this hospital.

The thanks of the city are due to Wm. Mills, who so kindly gave up his hotel for use as an emergency hospital.

Dr. Bonnell, who was taken ill last Tuesday, was back at work again on Sunday and has been hustling night and day ever since.

Dr. Corsan has been ill for three days but is recovering.

There are two serious cases of flu at the Elk Lumber Co.'s camp.

John Podbielancik is dangerously ill with pneumonia.

Jack Wilson, who did such good work on the ambulance in the early stages of the epidemic, is now dangerously ill.

Dr. Garner returned from the east on Tuesday to find his wife critically ill. Mrs. Garner had worked hard the first week of the epidemic and on Sunday was taken down with the dread disease. She had been in delicate health for some time and pneumonia developed rapidly. Everything that medical skill could do was tried but without avail, and she died at the Fernie hospital last evening about 9 o'clock. Dr. Garner and the children have the heartfelt sympathy of the people of Fernie in their affliction.

The Hon. Dr. King arrived in the city last evening and is spending a few days with us helping to fight the flu. The Doctor's services are greatly appreciated by the people of the city.

A bright incident in the hospital work was the birth of two fine babies at the King's hospital. One was promptly named Sherwood Young Shulack in honor of R. M. Young and Sherwood Herchmer, two of the hardest working committeemen, and the other Mary Aloysois Zaffa, after A. Klauer, who has also been constantly on relief work.

Two cases of scarlet fever were gathered in on Tuesday in the general roundup and the isolation hospital was opened and put in commission.

R. M. Young, wh owas one of the main organizers in the first part of the relief work, is in the sick ward now with the disease. He is recovering. J. Billings, another of the committeemen, is also down.

The following members of the teaching staff of the Fernie public schools have given freely of their services in taking care of sick families and nursing at the hospitals. They are given the credit of saving the situation at the most critical time: Miss Stirritt, Miss O'Hearn, Miss McLachlan, Miss Macdonald, Miss Pye, Miss Wade, Miss B. Hommil, Miss F. Hammil, Miss Dicken, Miss Crocker, Miss J. Elliott, Mrs. Elley. Miss Hogan, Miss DeBou, Miss Malls, Miss Stott, Miss Bell and Miss M. Elliott have been too ill from the first to render any assistance but are prepared to "jump in" as soon as they are able.

To those who have sent donations of soup, chickens and other foods and delicacies the committee in charge wish to extend their heraty thanks.

The following lodies have also worked night and day at the emergency hospitals and are desrving of great credit: Mrs. Mettler, Miss Mettler, Mrs. Ireland, Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. A. F. Anderson, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Corklin, Mrs. Mawson, Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Biddulph, Mrs. Spence, Mrs. G. G. Henderson, Miss Rushcall, Mrs. Aune, Miss Richardson, Mrs. Whalley, Mrs. and Miss Carmichael, Mrs. H. J. Johnson, Mrs. R. M. Young, Mrs. E. K. Stewart, Mrs. T Beck, Mrs Bonnalie, Miss Proudlock, Mrs. C. V. Stevenson, Mrs. Alex Macneil, Mrs. J. Turner, Miss Alstead, Mrs. Dick, Mrs. Todd, Mrs. Hollingshead, Mrs. J. Mitchell, Miss Haile, Miss Mulligan, Mrs. Price, Mrs. T. Thornton. This list is incomplete but as the time for preparing it was very short some names have doubtless been omitted.

The wreck of the Princess Sophia with its 343 victims on Vanderbilt Reef less than two weeks ago, calls to mind the fact that 43 years ago British Columbia went into mourning when the steamer Pacific was lost in a dense fog off Cape Flattery at 10 o'clock at night, following a collision with the schooner Orpheus. There was a heavy loss of life, only two surviving the wreck. The old Pacific, of the Fraser river excitement days, left Victoria on Nov. 4th, 1875, in command of Capt. J. D. Howell, a brother-in-law of Jefferson Davis, never to return. She had a passenger list of 205 and a crew of 65 and carried about $100,000 in treasure. The exact number on board will never be known as many of the Cassair miners, bound southward, rushed on board during the last moments without tickets. A rough estimate by those standing on the dock when she steamed out placed the number at about 500 souls.

ARMISTICE NOT SIGNED

Washington, No. 7.—It was officially announced at the state department at 2.15 o'clock this afternoon that the Germans had not signed armistice terms.

Secretary Lansing authorized the statement that the German armistice delegation would not be received by Marshal Foch until 5 o'clock this afternoon.

The secretary's announcement came after Washington had been celebrating for two hours on the strength of an official report that the armistice terms had been accepted.

In spite of the fact that officials did not accept the report as true, demonstrations persisted. President Wilson left the lunch table to see from the verandah what was going on outside and waved his napkin to the crowd before the White House gates.

The state department was advised that General Foch would receive German envoys at 5 o'clock p.m., French time (noon, eastern United States time).

The unofficial reports which started celebrations had said the armistice had been signed at 11 o'clock French time, or an hour before the time set for the meeting.

Later it was learned at 11 o'clock this morning, when the navy censors reported an unofficial cablegram from Paris saying the armistice had been signed at eleven o'clock, French time, or six hours before the time set for the meeting. An official message was rushed to Paris and three hours later brought a reply on which Secretary Lansing based his announcement.

Montreal, Nov. 7.—This city went into furious celebrations of joy upon receipt of the news that an armistice had been signed. Whistles were blown and bells rung all over the city. Business was suspended and the streets quickly crowded with celebrants. Guns boomed and small arms cracked. The people took a chance on the correctness of the news but celebrated anyway.

New York, Nov. 7.—A wave of almost frantic acclaim swept New York from one end to the other today when unconfirmed reports were published that the Germans had signed an armistice. They were distributed shortly before noon, whereupon a great celebration began which grew in volume and enthusiasm as the news spread.

INFLUENZA AT MICHEL

A. I. Fisher and Inspector Owen, who made a trip to Michel yesterday, report that the local doctor advises there are 300 cases of influenza in that district, but so far there has been only one death. Arrangements have been made for day and night nurses to take care of certain patients in a boarding house where there are a number of patients with no one to look after them, and in the meantime a committee from Michel Local Union is investigating as to the necessity of opening an emergency hospital.

AND NO DEBATE, EITHER

There must be no negotiations; no armistice; compounding with the powers of hell; no sitting down to sup with the devil's brood of Berlin. A conqueror's peace and fitting punishment for the crimes against civilization are the only gates to a tolerable future for the world. That objective is in fair view; it can be reached by a sacrifice almost inconsequential in contrast with the price that has already been paid. On to Berlin! — Manitoba Free Press.

Epidemic Influenza

INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING THE CARE OF SICK PERSONS

The City Health Committee wish to draw the attention of the public to the following regulations issued by the Alberta government:

Since thousands of people are nursing influenza patients in the province, the following instructions will be of value:

1—Fresh air is the most essential requisite to the comfort and well-being of patients, no matter how ill.

2—Rest in bed for three days after fever has gone is urged to prevent complications.

3—Pneumonia cases should not be kept in the same room with uncomplicated influenza cases.

4—Nourishing food at regular intervals.

5—Plenty of water or lemonade.

6—General Unworried Service: Avoid chattering, nagging, or questioning; anticipate wants of sickest patients, convalescents usually ask for what they want; keep the patients in isolated room, in separate beds; keep patient in bed all the time (this means patients must not get up to go to the bathroom); two or three pillows arranged step fashion, the lowest well under the shoulders, will make breathing easier; keep the arms and shoulders well covered; ventilate the room freely; at the outset, headache and back ache are frequent; cold cloths (moist, but not dripping) to the head, changed frequently, give some relief; avoid anything that might cause the slightest chill.

CARE OF MOUTH—A mouth wash every few hours and cold cream to the lips help to keep the mouth in a normal condition.

If patient is extremely weak, swab the teeth carefully with moistened cotton applications three times daily.

COUGH—Patient should keep mouth covered when coughing. Paper napkins or three thicknesses of toilet paper, used once only, are safer and better than rags or handkerchiefs. Keep a small paper bag pinned to bedside, within easy reach of patient's hand, to receive the used napkins. Change bag at least twice daily, or whenever it becomes half full.

The invisible spray from the mouth and nose during coughing and sneezing is as dangerous as visible expectoration. Convalescent patients can be masked; weak patients are annoyed by them.

FOOD—For the unhappy, feverish patients, liquid diet, hot or cold, as preferred—milk, lemonade, weak tea and coffee, broths. For the convalescent and patients not feverish, soft diet—gruels, cooked cereals, milk toast, jellies, soft boiled eggs, etc.

Food may be kept warm in a thermos bottle.

All patients should dring some water every hour when awake.

PRECAUTIONS—All mouth washes, bath water, exeta and uneaten liquid food should be thrown into the toilet by the attendant.

All bags, napkins, scraps of uneaten food, mouth swab, etc., should be wrapped in clean newspaper before being carried to the kitchen to be destroyed by burning.

All linen—sheets, masks, towels, etc., should be submerged in a large kettle of cold water in the sick-room, or put in a pillow-slip or laundry bag. This can be safely carried to the kitchen stove, and when contents have been boiled five minutes anyone may finish caring for the linen. When attendant cannot stop to wash her own hands, door knobs, faucets, etc., should be protected by scraps of newspaper, which may be destroyed after each using. Attendants must be constantly masked, must wear big allover aprons in sick-room, changing it to a different one always before entering any other part of the house. Attendant must have facilities for washing her own hands, soap, nail brush and paper towels, in clean place, and never touch the patient or patient's utensils without afterward cleansing her hands thoroughly Running water is better and safer than a basin of weak disinfectant kept for the hands alone.

Everything used for the patient should be kept separate from the supplies for the rest of the household. This means dishes, bed linen, bath wraps, towels, face cloths, rocking chair, etc.

Families can help visiting nurses and aids by having hot water, towels and newspapers ready when nurses are expected.

BRITAIN AND THE WAR

"St. George did not go out against the dragon like that divine calm youth in Carpaccio's picture nor like that divine calm man in Donatello's statue. He went out, I think, after some taste of defeat, knowing that it was going to be bad, and that the dragon would breathe fire, and that very likely his spear would break and that he wouldn't see his children again, and people would call him a fool. He went out, I think, as the battalions of our men went out, a little trembling and a little sick and not knowing much about it, except that it had to be done, and then stood up to the dragon in the mud of that far land, and waited for him to come on."

"I know my nation's faults as well as I know my own. They are the faults of a set and a system. They are faults of head not faults of heart. When I think of those faults I think of a long graveyard in France, a hundred miles long, where simple, good kind, ignorant Englishmen by the thousand and the hundred thousand lie in every attitude of rest and agony, for ever and for ever and for ever. They did not know where Belgium is, nor what Germany is, nor even what England is. They were told that a great country had taken a little country, by the throat, and it was up to them to help, and they went out by the hundred and the hundred thousand and the million on that word alone, and they stayed there in the mud to help that little country, till they were killed."

One of the countless facts the British have to be proud of today is that they have a representative who can speak to the other great Anglo-Saxon nation as John Masefield has spoken in America. The two paragraphs set above are taken from his lectures on "St. George and the Dragon" and "The War and the Future," which have stirred many hearers like a trumpet, as "Gallipoli" has stirred thousands of American readers. They have the simplicity that is the best eloquence. Of the two, most readers will prefer the first, a lecture originally delivered on Shakespeare's birthday, and more dignified in manner, more serious in theme.

The prime object of the lecturer has been to bring home to American audiences the intensity, earnestness, and gigantic scale of the British effort. He tells how when the war came he was in his twelfth-century home in Berks, with a little company of friends (one of them Rupert Brooke); who scoffed at the idea of a general war. The house was at once turned over to cavalry as a billet; when he next saw the men they were in the Gallipoli trenches, and Brooke was buried in Scyros. He retells the story of the fighting retreat from Mons, and that of the 27 days and nights of continuous fighting at the first battle of Ypres, when a terribly thin British line somehow held. We have not seen before the names of the two English soldiers who on the most critical day led the cooks, servants, stretcher-bearers, and walking wounded to close the gap at Gheluvelt; he gives them as Black and Pugh. He retells the story of the first gas attack, in the third battle of Ypres and puts most vividly the terrible consequences that seemed impending; night falling, the line shattered and gone for four and a half miles, the whole area under an intense shell fire, the few survivors agonizedly fleeing—all leading up to a description of the restoration of the front by detachments that heroically improvised masks from handkerchiefs, strips of shirts, and blankets or caps.

PRICES AFTER PEACE COMES

When peace comes, in a month or a year, will prices of commodities decrease at once? The question has an insistent interest for the citizen who exchanges handpower or brainpower for money.

Economists who watch these things say there will be little or no change immediately peace comes. Prices will still be high for the same reason they now are.

The armies, while no longer fighting, must still be fed. They will continue to be consumers, not producers. Until the world, therefore, catches up with production and ceases to live on its accumulated commodity-capital there will be scarcity and consequent high prices.

So far as Canada is concerned her wheat and lumber and metals should still be in great demand after the war. The peoples of Europe for some years will not have made good the damage and loss they have suffered. They will call on the countries who have the raw products to assist them. This will keep prices at a high level, for a time at any rate.

Afterwards there will be sharp dislocations of commerce. New markets will be opened; new channels of trade charted. New demands will come from a reconstructed society. All this means readjustment. And economic readjustment is not accomplished without friction.

The Ames Holden McCready factory at St. Hyacinthe, Que., entirely devoted to the production of work shoes. Capacity 4,000 pairs per day.

Shoes for Canada's Workers

FOR many years this company has studied the shoe needs of workmen in all lines of industry. The conditions under which work shoes are worn differ widely, and no single type of shoe will suit all of them.

Ames Holden McCready shoes for farmers, lumbermen, miners, mechanics, etc., are the result of special effort to produce exactly the type of shoe which will give the longest possible service together with the greatest comfort to each class. We are able to do this because of our large output, and the fact that A. H. M. shoes are sold in all sections of Canada—not merely locally.

It is worth remembering that there is an A. H. M. shoe for every purpose, for men, women and children, Incidentally, A. H. M. shoes bear the Union Label, which is a guarantee of the best factory conditions and the highest standards of workmanship.

A.H.M. War-Time Selections for Men, Women and Children offer special Service Value. Ask your dealer for them.

YOUR SHARE OF THE SCRAP

Scrap-iron is fighting iron today. Old metal reused releases new metal for use on the front. Technical men say that iron smelts better if some of the rusty stuff is in the blast furnace, and the prices paid by second-hand dealers reflect (somewhat) that fact. The "Railway Age" says that on one line the track walkers are picking up nuts, washers, etc., at the rate of fortty pounds apiece per day! For Mr. McAdoo's whole system that would mean over a thousand tons of steel daily, enough to break a hole in any line that Hindenburg ever built. Every day is scrap day for our soldiers: why not for you? Personally we have never been able to realize the hopeful prices that one sees quoted in the public prints for all second-hand hardware, etc., but no doubt we have contributed something to the prosperity of certain sons of the Mediterranean, and perhaps they buy Thrift Stamps with it. Look into your attic, cellar, back yard, etc., and pick up what you find there. It will improve the premises and you will be doing something more to help Foch, Haig, Pershing and company.

THE ANCIENT SACRIFICE

The doom of Germany and the merciful of Germany, is to be read in the words of Mr. Wilson's latest reply . . . Germany can have an armistice when Germany chooses to acknowledge her defeat, and to pay the price for it. Germany can have peace when Germany shows a readiness to recognize that she is living, not in the Dark Ages but in the Twentieth century of the Christian era, and when she will adopt a government policy suitable to that era. But Germany can be received back into the brotherhood of nations only when she has given evidence that she possesses a broken and a contrite heart. That is the ancient sacrifice. But until then the Allies will not forget.—Boston Monitor.

HOW TO DO IT

Colliers: We wish we had his picture also, but these few lines will serve to introduce a true American, John Mullins, of the Solvay Collieries Company, Hemphill, Pa. The day after President Wilson asked for more coal Friend Mullins cut loose, and in one month he dug and loaded 691 tons of coal, the world's record for that sport. Incidentally he is said to have earned about $450, which compares well with the pay of a brigadier general. That's the way to win the war at home: get out the things that are needed, and more of 'em. Who is next after John Mullins?

Rheumatism Every Winter

To be crippled by Rheumatism is to have life become an intolerable burden, especially in the winter, when the persistent cold and damp aggravate this complaint till it is almost unbearable.

Can you picture the dread that any man would hold winter in when all it meant to him was a yearly return of his Rheumatism and the agonizing pains that it brings?

Such was the case of Mr. A. Beaudry of Bedford, Que. Each winter he was forced to undergo the torture of Rheumatic pains, until he discovered Gin Pills. Read what he says about these little doctors:

"Every winter I suffered from Rheumatism, and this is the first season I have been able to go through without a return of my old trouble—thanks to Gin Pills. The pills are all you claim for them, and more."

Testimony such as this should convince even the most skeptical that Gin Pills do remedy Kidney troubles.

If you have friends or relatives who suffer from this dread affliction, tell them to try Gin Pills. So many people have written us stating in glowing terms how Gin Pills have relieved them of Kidney troubles, that we are convinced that all any person needs to do in order to obtain relief is—try them.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a small bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

SYNOPSIS OF LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

THE TURK AND THE TEUTON

It is accounted unto the fixed idea as a triumph that even pacifists whose pacifism invariably takes the form of being extrememly tender of all things German, regard the surrender of Turkey with something which in ordinary human beings would be termed satisfaction. Even so with the high souls who through their tortoise-shell rimmed glasses see darkly their own country but with a rosy hue all the other nations of the earth; these too, are willing that the Turk should go. For a number of years the Turk has been wedded to the adjective unspeakable and the name has accomplished its psychological inoculation.

There is no question of mourning the passing of the Turk. He has lingered in Europe seven centuries too long. But to all those persons capable of other than fixed ideas and whose convictions bear not so charmed a life as to be impervious to the most deadly facts, his passing out throws the question of attitude towards the Teuton into greater relief. They feel clearly enough that the good name of civilization demands the disarming of the Turk. Do they feel as clearly that the safety of the Teuton within his own borders and the imposition of terms which will insure his remaining there?

It is no defence of the Turk to say that he is much less guilty than the Teuton. It was the Teuton who invited him to war. It was the Teuton who did his best through this ally to plunge the world into the unimaginable horrors of a holy war. It was the Turk who massacred the Armenians and the Teutons who approved the massacre—the Armenians being a trading people and the Teuton feeling that he could take care of all the trade of the near east.

It was the Teuton who brought to war the inhuman agonies of the gas and of liquid fire. It was the Turk who refused to use them and thus saved the Allies from having to stoop to this form of warfare on the Mesopotamia front. It was the Teuton who fired on the Red Cross. It was the Turk who respected this emblem. "The Turk fights like a gentleman," has been the testimony of our men. The Turk has lived up to his light. The Teuton has done everything in his power to quench forever the light of humanity.

The Teuton character today is exactly what Julius Caesar delcared it to be, what Dante described is as being, what the blood and tears of our time has proven it to be, that of the savage.

Te Deums let us sing that the Turk has ceased to menace us, but let us not forget the vow heard in Heaven that the power to frightfulness which is the doctrine of demons, shall not be bent but broken. Our responsibility to the unspeakable Turk is nearing accomplishment. Still remains the unmentionable Teuton.—Winnipeg Free Press.

THE SUGAR DISTRIBUTION

In a statement on the sugar distribution difficulty the Chairman of the Canada Food Board says:

Since last May, when the use of sugar in Canada was rigidly cut down manufacturers, candy makers, public eating places and large users have played the game fairly, and have abided by the rulings of the Canada Food Board.

Approximately 300,000 tons of sugar will be required in Canada for 1918. Only 12,000 tons of this will be used in the confectionery industry. If the Food Board issued an Order absolutely closing down factories, we should disorganize the industry and throw hundreds of people out of work.

If the people in the homes would not put the "second spoonful" of sugar in their tea and coffee it would save 50,000 tons of sugar a year. This amount is more than four times the sugar allotment to the confectionery manufacturers. It could be done with a little good will.

Notwithstanding the Order issued on Sept. 15th, there is reason to believe that a large number of people hoard sugar in the homes. It is only a little possibly in some cases, but when multiplied by the number of homes in Canada it is a huge quantity in the aggregate. There is possibly also a good deal of waste which, if checked by everyone, would make the situation easier.

It is for the consumer to "get in behind" the Food Board now as the manufacturers have done. There will then be an ample supply of sugar for all.

THE SILENCE OF THE PACIFISTS

There is not a word these days in the cable dispatches about the present views upon the war of Ramsay Macdonald, Philip Snowden and the rest of the British pacifist group. This may be because the wires are overburdened with more important news; or, perhaps it is because these once so loquacious gentlemen have not a word to say. The theme which they used to expound ad nauseam in parliament and on the hustings was that no military decision against Germany in the field was possible and that therefore the war should be ended by negotiations upon the best terms that could be secured. Perhaps it is beginning to dawn upon them that if they had had their way the world would have been subject for centuries to come to the militaristic conception of the state. From that calamity humanity has been saved by the heroism, the sacrifice and the endurance of those whom Mr. Ramsay, Mr. Snowden and their fellows have been denouncing for the past four years.—

ONE OF BRITAIN'S SACRIFICES

(From an official advertisement in the British papers by the Coal Mines Department of the Board of Trade.)

The smashing of the Hindenburg line, Foch's triumph on the Marne, the victory of the Piave, were all made possible by British coal. British coal has saved a disaster and assured the "brilliant dawn." We have sacrificed our coal reserves and our coal supplies, but when history comes to be written it will be seen how the nation has been justified in making this great sacrifice for liberty and victory.

We must suffer discomfort in our homes and dislocation of our trade. But who will be so bold as to complain when he thinks of our men this winter in the ice-filled craters of Flanders, or of the Italians fighting at 20 degrees below zero, when even the lungs may freeze?

Let us hasten the end by using less coal, less light. The way is clear. "Britain," says Mr. Samuel Gompers, the American leader, "must furnish coal for the ships to bring American troops and American supplies." Do your part. Use less coal.

FAVORED IRELAND

Ireland has the same rights and privileges in the British Empire as Scotland and Wales, except for local self-government, even more than the great dominions of Canada and Australia. It has a larger representation in parliament than its population warrants. It enjoys every guarantee of conscience, press and speech which the British constitution affords. In the matter of land tenures its people are favored by the laws to be found in no other country. Rebellion and other crimes participated in by a few violent men have been sternly punished, but Ireland is not a Belgium or a Serbia, devastated and enslaved by a power setting itself above treaties and laws, and every sensible person knows it.—New York World.

THE BRITISH IN DAMASCUS

General Edmund Allenby's capture of Damascus appeals to the imagination because it is "the oldest city in the world," its earliest history lost in the mists of time. There is still contention upon the point whether Abraham' steward Eliezer was of Damascus. In our modern period we do not know what its real population is; its estimate runs from 154,000 to 225,000. Connected with the post of Beirut and with Mezerib by rail, and a market place for the whole desert of Syria, with its orchards, vineyards and fields in a circuit of sixty miles, Damascus is a rich prize for the British. They will know how to protect its people and develop their considerable manufactures without infringing upon personal liberty or meddling with their faith. — New York Times.

A JUST REQUEST

What we have said from time to time within the past few weeks on the desirability of a war bonus for Dominion civil servants applies with equal force to the employees of the Provincial government. The latter, we understand have stated a case for presentation to the ministers. A new schedule of salaries can hardly be put in force until the coming session of the Legislature, but in the meantime the government can and should give a war bonus. Owing to the high cost of food commodities in Victoria many of the provincial civil servants here are suffering. There are scores of clerks, a number of them with responsible duties, who are drawing less money per month than is being earned by laborers in the shipyards, and the latter are just getting what is considered sufficient with the cost of living what it is, according to a finding of an arbitration board appointed by the Dominion government.

The Provincial government has a Department of Labor and through the facilities it has for collecting statistics dealing with wages paid throughout the province it can draw a parallel between them and those paid by the government to its own employees. It also has the means of finding out all available information about the cost of living. Recently the government recognized the plea for larger salaries made by the employees at the Okalla Prison Farm. Increases were granted. Increases were also given in the case of the employees of the printing department of the government. The cabinet is, therefore, on record in recognizing that inadequate salaries are being paid.

There is a good deal of complaint because nothing in a general way has been done up to the present. It is true there were certain increases in the last estimates, but they did not apply all round. The question of giving a bonus will have to be met fairly and squarely. It will not be in the interests of British Columbia to have a civil service with a disgruntled staff and we do not believe the government will hesitate when the plain facts of the situation are reviewed. Our local government, unlike the federal authorities, has not had this matter before it for months, nor has it evaded the problem which it knows must be faced and met. For some weeks past it has been impossible to hold a full cabinet meeting, but now most of the ministers are in the city we hope this question of a bonus for civil servants will be among the first to be given favorable consideration.—Colonist.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY AID VICTORY LOAN

As an instance of how science and industry have co-operated in helping to win the war, it is interesting to note that Sir Thomas White, K.C.M.G., Minister of Finance, has made a special "His Master's Voice" Record for the purpose of actually informing the Canadian Public in his own voice concerning the need of the second Victory Loan.

Science has thus made it possible for the voice of the Finance Minister to be heard in thousands of places in every part of the Country at the same time.

The illustration shows Sir Thomas "caught in the act" as he made his special recording at the laboratories of the Berliner Gram-o-phone Company, Limited, Montreal.

BAN ON PRO-HOCKEY?

Toronto, Nov. 1.—It has been intimated here for the past few days that the federal government contemplates putting a ban on professional hockey for the coming season, says the Globe today. Complaints have reached Ottawa to the effect that some of the well known professional players are being excused when drafts of their military units are being sent overseas. Unless these complaints are directed through official channels they will not be dealt with by the authorities at the capital.

Last night in Ottawa the department of justice, which would receive and administer such complaints, issued a statement that nothing of the kind had been brought to their notice.

WHAT WAR ORATORY WILL LIVE LONG

How much of the war oratory that has flooded us since 1914 will live? Most of it has perished already; there are not even many single phrases that have stuck in the memory. Mr. Asquith's "We shall not sheathe the sword" is an exception. But the only war-time oratory which has the suggestion of a posterity about it is that of President Wilson. Such a phrase as "The world must be made safe for democracy" is already merged completely into our national sentiment, has become the common idea of so many millions of allied peoples that we have ceased to attribute individual authorship to it, just because it now belongs to everybody. It is, of course, President Wilson's phrase, uttered in his address to congress in April 1917. And here are a few more of the president's epigrams that are likely to live:

"This is no war for amateurs."

"What I am opposed to is not the feeling of pacifists, but their stupidity."

"I believe in the ordinary man."

"There is something very fine in the spirit of the volunteer, but deeper than the volunteer spirit is the spirit of obligation."

And then, of course, there is the notable utterance beginning, "Force force to the utmost, force without stint or limit"—perhaps the most majestic and thunderous words ever uttered by a statesman in the midst of a great war.—Manchester Guardian.

USE MORE APPLES

"Those who make a liberal use of apples will serve the dual purpose of saving for shipment overseas such articles of food as are fit for that purpose and at the same time furnish a useful and valuable food for the household."

"The apple without question is the king of fruits, whether fresh, dried, evaporated or canned, it is a wholesome food, easily prepared, attractive and palatable at all times."

"Always cook apples in earthen or granite utensils and use silver, granite or wooden spoons for stirring. The use of the apple as the basis for all manufactured jam is well known. This is due to the large amount of pectose which it contains. There is no waste to a good apple; even the parings and core may be utilized for jelly. Fruits are classified as flavour fruits and nutritive fruits—the apple comes under both of these heads."

—Extracts from a little booklet issued by the Fruit Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture giving 160 recipes for the use of the apple. The book can be had free on application to the Publication Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

SOCIAL REFORM THE GREATEST

All who have studied social conditions are aware of the country's needs. While the political parties were wrangling and quarreling in the years before the war, the nation itself was perishing. Mr. Lloyd George tells us that if the problems of national health had been adequately attended to in the last few decades, there would have been another million men between 18 and 41 available for military service. His pungent saying that you cannot run an A1 empire on a C3 population is one that will be remembered.—The Daily Telegraph, London.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

JUSTICE FOR GERMANY

It is just that Germany repair, as far as money can repair, the damage she has inflicted upon France and Belgium. Her obligation to furnish such reparation is explicitly recognized by the Hague convention which she has signed, and in the case of Belgium by the statement made by the German Prime Minister to the reichstag at the opening of the war.

It is just that she give to the Allies from her ports a ship for every one which she has lawlessly sunk at sea.

It is just that the cost of this reparation be made to fall as far as possible on the individuals in Germany who are responsible for the conduct of the war rather than on the common people who have been coerced or deluded into giving it their support.

Therefore it would be just to take possession of Germany as Germany took possession of Belgium and confiscate the property of the war lords including the Kaiser, confiscate the Krupp works and all other munition factories, confiscate the landed property of the Junker class without whose support the war would not and could not have been maintained, and use the proceeds of these confiscations in paying the damages due to Belgium and France.

It would be just to split great estates into small holdings and sell them to peasants on some adequate security that they would occupy and cultivate them. This would be just because such a peasant occupation of the land would be the best practical guarantee against militarism in the future.

It would be just to dismantle the forts, reduce the fleet and do whatever is necessary in the disorganization or reorganization of the army to give reasonable assurance that it would not and could not be again used in a war of conquest.

It would be just to bring to trial and condign punishment any who, in violation of the laws of war and of the explicit convention of The Hague signed by Germany, have been guilty of the crime of murder.

In short, it would be just to put Germany in the hands of a receiver who would pay its just debts to France and Belgium and in the hands of a guardian who would provide protection for the German people and their neighbors from the madmen who have bankrupted their Fatherland and brought upon the civilized world this unparalleled tragedy.

It would be just to put an army of occupation in Germany until these acts of justice were accomplished.

And it would be just to restore to France the territories of Alsace and Lorraine, of which Germany robbed her in 1871; and it would not be just to restore to Germany any of the colonies of which she has been deprived by this war unless the citizens in those colonies by a free and untrammeled vote to come again under German sovereignty.

We are not saying that the course which we have outlined would be expedient: we are simply saying that it would be just. It would meet the definition furnished by the President in his address of September 28: "A justice that plays no favorites and knows no standard but the equal rights of the several peoples concerned." It would accord with Justinian's definition of justice: "A constant and perpetual will to render to each one his own right."—New York Outlook.

COURT GIVES RULING ON COAL LICENCES

Vancouver, Nov. 2.—The provincial Minister of Lands has no discretion to hold back coal licenses from being restaked and leased because the original licensees are applying to have their licenses revived.

This was the decision of Mr. Justice Murphy handed down today in a written judgmet in the appeal of Johnson et al in regard to three coal and petroleum leases near the North Thompson river.

There is something of the comic opera in that request from the Bolsheviki government of Russia for the opening of peace negotiations with the Allies. The Bolsheviki in government have shown themselves to be worse than murderers. They do not govern Russia today and their position is that of the usurper who by theft has gained a place of power. The only way for the Allies to deal with the Bolsheviki is to invite them to come forward and take such punishment as is fitting for the crimes they have committed.

CLAIM THE FLU IS NOT ABATING

Edmonton, Nov. 6.—The minister of health in his statement today says the number of cases so far reported to his department is 10,788.

The number of new cases reported during the past 24 hours is 1577. This indicates quite conclusively that what this department has apprehended without any hesitation asserts that we are not quite into the worst of the fight.

Nine new places report 418 fresh cases. This again is evidence that the flu is on the spread. Just for example the city of Edmonton reports 472 cases and Taber and district reports 236. The new cases reported within the past 24 hours are alarmingly large. Specific instructions have been issued with reference to Calgary and other points by the Superintendent of the Provincial Police that mask orders and all other orders must be strictly obeyed. A number of prosecutions throughout the province are being instituted.

Many demands come still from different points urging for a supply of liquor. The department once again announces that it is not in control of the liquor situation, that the government has determined to carry out at least the spirit of the law, and the people of the province passed a law, which in effect says that liquor shall only be used for medicinal purposes and the department is absolutely unequivocally and thoroughly in accord with the will of the people in that respect. Nothing worse could happen this province than at this particular time after the doors have been closed, that they should be immediately opened and general looseness allowed.

The fact that influenza is now becoming distinctly epidemic throughout the northern portion of the province is evidenced by returns coming in today.

It is our duty to be especially vigilant because alarming reports, not yet verified, come in from some of the non-English districts. For goodnees sake get around, pull down the windows, knock holes in the gables, let the air in, look after these people, and generally help out the situation, declares the minister. So far as the whole south is concerned the reports are favorable, but this department again emphasizes its warning to the general public not to be too optimistic, but to keep up vigilant observation of every community.

DOCTOR EXPLAINS KNOCKOUT BLOW

Dr. Ben Apple, one of San Francisco's most prominent physicians, who has made a close study of the boxer and puts the O.K. on the boys before they are permitted to enter the ring, gives an interesting explanation of why a pugilist is knocked out.

Dr. Apple has officiated in the capacity of examining physician, says Leon Meyer in the San Francisco Bulletin, for the different promoters in this city since 1897, and in that time has examined such champions as Jim Jeffries, Abe Attel, "Battling" Nelson, Joe Gans, Bob Fitzsimmons, Stanley Ketchel, Tommy Burns, in fact everyone who has visited these shores since that year, and knows whereof he speaks.

"There is no immunity from a knockout blow. Any man, when hit in the proper place with sufficient force will become insensible long enough to permit the referee to count him out.

"A blow on the point of the lower jaw is the favorite knockout punch. The result does not come altogether from a jarring of the nerves as many believe.

"When the lower jaw is hit hard enough it shoots back. It comes in contact with the jugular vein. The flow of blood is temporarily stopped. The blood rushes back to the brain and temporary congestion follows. This renders a man insensible for a time. Until the blood flow readjusts itself one is practically out of existence.

"The man of a physique of a Dempsey or a Willard (who was a marvelous piece of athletic machinery at the time he won the title from Jack Johnson) does not apparently succumb to this knockout blow. This is not because either man cannot be knocked out.

"The truth of the matter is that men of their prodigious strength are able to resist the ordinary blow. If they are ever hit hard enough the dazed effect will follow."

MR. AND MRS. F. ROBSON DEAD

Cranbrook Herald: Finlay Robson, manager of the Cranbrook Jobbers, died in the St. Eugene hospital from pneumonia after but a few days' illness, on Tuesday, at 8.30 in the evening. The news of a brother's death in Toronto a few days previously took away the fighting chance he had for his life. The body is being prepared to be sent down east to Fenelon Falls, Ont., his old home. Mr. Robson was one of Cranbrook's brightest business men and his death is a distinct loss to the city. Heartfelt sympathy is extended to the bereaved.

Later—Mrs. Robson also died on Friday last.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Robson were well known in Fernie, where they resided for some time.

Forged Cheques

Invermere, Oct. 28.—The officials of the Imperial Bank of Canada have discovered three forged cheques and stopped payment. The alleged forger is believed to be an Indian. The cheques were for sums of about $50 each. One of them was sent up for collection from Cranbrook but the others were cashed locally.

As a matter of business, what do you think of the plan?

You are a farmer.

Canada is a farming country.

Canada grows more food than the people of Canada need.

To prosper she must sell that surplus food.

Great Britain is our best customer for grain, pork, beef, cheese and other farm products.

Every practical man must see how important it is to hold the British trade. Canada wants not only the profit on this trade, she wishes to create a good-will in Britain towards Canadian products and thus assure our export business for the future.

At the moment Great Britain asks for credit, asks Canada to sell her the products of the farm, "on time." To hold her trade, it is necessary to give this credit.

This takes capital—immense capital. For Britain's purchases from Canada are huge, and these purchases must be paid for in cash.

In these times, it is not easy even for a nation as wealthy as Canada to procure money. Certainly, no other country can lend us money. The only way now open for Canada to secure money is to borrow from the people of Canada.

This is the reason for selling Victory Bonds.

Can anyone deny the sound business sense of this plan of protecting our valuable market?

From the standpoint of the man who lends, what better security could he get for his money? Where else could he get a five and a half per cent. return on such security? Where would he find an investment to pay interest so regularly and with so little trouble to the lender? Certainly Canadians have an opportunity to benefit very directly from this borrowing plan.

And the money Canada borrows is spent entirely in Canada—a very large part of it for the very crops the farmer has to sell.

Therefore, if the Victory Loan is a success, business in Canada must be good, the nation must prosper and so be able to carry on a vigorous war effort in France and Flanders.

As a practical man you must approve of the Victory Loan plan.

Then help it along. Put your own money into Victory Bonds; urge your friends to buy; work hard among your loyal neighbors to make the Victory Loan 1918 an overwhelming success.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

Magistrate Whimster, who has been ill for two weeks, is again back on the job.

Thos. Biggs returned on Wednesday from Indianapolis, where he was on Union business.

City Clerk Moffatt and Mrs. Moffatt are able to be around again after ten days' illness.

Today is pay day and it was a pretty sick lot of men who lined up to take their money.

Wanted—Two or three room suite of furnished rooms. Apply at Ingram's barber shop.

Mr. Geo. Welsby wishes to thank those who were so kind to him during his recent bereavement.

Lesile Mills last week presented the emergency hospital with two cases of brandy, a very valuable gift.

John Belanger, who has been seriously ill for some months, died at the Fernie Hospital on Saturday.

The entire staff of the city clerk's office have been on the sick list. The office was closed for over a week.

The funeral of the late Wm. Todhunter, who died last week at Rexford, took place at Fernie today.

The delivery of coal in the city has been greatly retarded by the illness of drivers during the past two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Walton have the sympathy of the citizens of Fernie in the death of their daughter Annie.

The usual monthly meeting of the I.O.D.E. has been postponed until further notice because of the influenza epidemic.

We received a card this week from Pte. Roy Kirkpatrick from Glasgow, Scotland, where he is spending a few days' leave..

The funeral of the late Mrs. (Dr.) Garner will take place on Sunday, Nov. 10th, at 3 p.m., from the Undertaking Parlors.

Pte. Garnet Dudley, who has been visiting his parents for a few weeks, has returned to Vancouver, where he will report for duty.

While one of our prominent citizens was in the hospital for a few days this week his wine cellar was relieved of about $1500 worth of liquor. No trace of the thieves has yet been discovered.

Some miserable sneak thief stole several bottles of brandy from one of the emergency hospitals. The English language is hardly strong enough in adjectives to describe such a creature.

J. W. Nunn, of Vancouver, formerly city clerk of Fernie, is in the city on business. Jack, who has not been here for about four years, is still peddling condensed milk and looks the picture of health.

Alex. Watson, of the local government office, was in Cranbrook helping them out at the office there for several days this week, but was recalled to Fernie in order to keep the office open here.

Miss F. Nicholson, daughter of the late H. L. Nicholson, customs officer at Fernie, died in Rossland on Tuesday. This is the second daughter to die of the influenza since the epidemic struck Rossland.

Leslie Mills was seriously injured the result of a collision his car had with the ambulance on Victoria avenue on Sunday evening. The steering wheel was driven into his chest with such force as to endanger his life. He is in the King's hospital.

Members of the Fernie District Branch Navy League of Canada, and the I.O.D.E. are requested to assemble at the Undertaking Parlors on Sunday next at 2.45 p.m. to attend the funeral of our late member, Mrs. (Dr.) Garner. Services at the graveside.

Among the business men of the city who are down with the flu are Thos. Prentice, manager of the Crow's Nest Trading Co.; A. Muirhead, manager for W. F. Muirhead & Co.; A. Walker, manager T. W. Co. grocery department; and J. L. Gates, of the King Edward Hotel.

The Victory Loan Committee reopened their rooms in A. Macneil's office and next week a strenuous campaign will be inaugurated to make up for lost time. The epidemic completely disorganized the work of the committee, but the citizens of this town will go over the top next week in their efforts to make good.

Charley Claridge had the misfortune on Friday last to upset his runabout on a slippery piece of road this side of Morrissey. He was bringing in Mrs. Dr. Saunders, of Waldo, who had volunteered to assist in fighting the flu epidemic. Mrs. Saunders was thrown out of the cars and somewhat hurt but is gradually recovering. Charley with the exception of a few bruises was uninjured. The car was badly wrecked.

Fred Roo must have the "flu" as he hasn't blew through for a couple of weeks.

A letter has been received from France by a friend stating that Pte. Thomas Furneaux, formerly of the Trites-Wood staff at Coal Creek and who left with the 225th, has been awarded the Military Medal for valor on the field, on Aug. 10. Tom was of a quiet and unassuming nature and his many friends extend congratulations.

Two of the local sports who were fined in Fernie in connection with a gambling raid on a local hotel about ten days ago left immediately for Calgary. They were gathered in by the Calgary police and sentenced to six months in jail for violating the anti-loafing law. Another one of the four who were in the Fernie mixup has since died of the "flu" in one of the local hospitals.

The girm reaper again visited the family of James Terris this week, Mrs. Terris being striken on Sunday and Miss Lottie on Wednesday. The grief-striken husband and father is the only one left at home. One son is at the front and another is quarantined at Nordeg. The citizens of Fernie extend their deepest sympathy. The funerals of Mrs. Welsby and Mrs. Terris took place on Tuesday.

A young Scotchman who was sent out to Canada with letters of introduction from various titled friends to the president of the Canadian Pacific was referred to Lord Shaughnessy, then general manager. Wishing to make an impression he put on a frock coat and tall hat and was indeed astonished to find the general manager working in his shirt sleeves. However, he had good engineer's certificates and so was given a job. But before he left the room, "Young man," said Lord Shaughnessy, "if you mean to keep your job on the C.P.R. you'll have to shed those clothes." The young Scotchman was Randolph Bruce, now one of the best known men in East Kootenay, and manager of the Paradise mine, a steay shipper to the Trail smelter.—Trail News.

U. S. ELECTION RETURNS

Washington, Nov. 7.—Congressional election returns were still incomplete late tonight but it was apparent that the Republicans had taken control of the house by a majority of at least 11—probably more. The senate was very close, with the outcome depending on final returns in Michigan where Henry Ford was running a close contest with Truman Newberry, and in Idaho and New Mexico.

On returns available 25 Republicans had been elected to seats in the house now held by Democrats and seven Democrats had been elected to seats now held by Republicans.

In the senate one Democrat had been elected to a seat now held by a Republican and six Republicans had been elected to seats now held by Democrats.

On the returns to hand the house figures were: Republicans 229, Democrats 196; Socialist 1; doubtful 9. A majority is 218.

In the senate returns showed: Republicans 47; Democrats 46.

New York, Nov. 6.—Alfred Smith, Democratic candidate for governor, was given a lead of 12,000 over Governor Whitman, his Republican opponent in the race for governor, late tonight, with only 51 districts missing out of a total of 7230 in the state. The districts lacking were in remote upstate sections and although they are nominally Republican, it seemed improbable that they would wipe out Smith's advantage. The vote stood: Smith 987,242; Whitman 974,873.

PROHIBITION VOTE IS VERY MUCH MIXED

New York, Nov. 6.—Retruns from various states which voted on prohibition follow:

In Missouri the state-wide prohibition amendment was probably defeated. St. Louis rolled up a 75,000 majority for the "wets," while the rest of the state went heavily "dry," but it did not overcome the St. Louis lead.

Whether Ohio has changed from the wet to the dry column of states remains in doubt with the wets leading by more than 31,000 votes with more than three-fifths of the precincts having been tabulated. With the exception however of a few precincts, all of the wet strongholds have been heard from and dry leaders still contended that returns from the rural districts will wipe out what they claim is a temporary lead.

In Minnesota latest returns gave the amendment 18,233 votes and 16,366 opposed to it.

In California the defeat of a "bone dry" liquor amendment to the state constitution, as well as a milder amendment to regulate liquor traffic, is indicated.

In Vermont the probable ratification of the proposed federal prohibition amendment was indicated.

The wets were victorious in six out of ten communities in southern New Jersey that voted on the liquor question under the new local option law.

SOUR, ACID STOMACHS, GASES OR INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" neutralizes excessive acid in stomach, relieving dyspepsia, heartburn and distress at once.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress, due to acidity, will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest stomach sweetener in the whole world, and besides it is harmless. Put an end to stomach distress at once by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder caused by fermentation due to excessive acids in stomach.

JUST LIKE A HOUSECLEANING

Every room needs an occasional "Cleaning up", no matter how carefully the regular sweeping and dusting is done. Especially is this true after any unusual event, a party, a wedding or a quilting bee.

So it is with your body. No matter how regular your habits or well cooked your food, there comes a time when you don't feel just right. You may recall an unusually hearty meal or two, irregular hours, or eating something that "didn't agree with you", or it may be just the "dust-gathering".

In any case a few doses of a really good carthartic is all you need to put you right. For this purpose nothing is quite so suitable as

Chamberlain's Tablets

Two or three after supper the first night, and one each night for two or three days, and your digestive apparatus is just like the well-cleaned room. Every part of your body is more vigorous, you go about your work with a new feeling and begin again to enjoy life. Are these benefits not worth getting? You know they are.

And you need have no hesitation about beginning them for fear you must "keep it up". The effect is just the opposite.

INFLUENZA!

FIRST AID SUGGESTIONS

Owing to the great number of cases of Influenza in the District and the impossibility of every case receiving immediate medical attention the following suggestions after consultation with the Medical Health Officer are made as first aid measures.

Go to bed, keep warm, have fresh air and sunlight in the sick room, take hot drinks, avoid solid foods, use laxative medicines, and be very careful not to go out until fully recovered as many cases have developed into pneumonia through patients being too anxious to be out.

In order to avoid the spread of the disease locally, it is necessary that all new cases in the district should be immediately reported at the Napanee Hotel Hospital and, if possible, moved there at once.

DO NOT SPIT ON THE STREET

Primo Suggerimento di Aiuto

Essendo un gran numero di casi di Influenza nel distretto e nella impossibilita dei medici di visitare tutti i casi, Dopo di aver consultato il Medico di salute del Distretto le sequente sono le prime cure da osservare.

Andare a letto, stare caldo, avere aria fresca e luce di sole nella camera del ammalato, bevere cose calde, usare medicine purgative evitare cibi sostanziosi.

State avvertito di non andare fuori se prima non siete ricoverato in pieno, perche assai casi sono sviluppato in polmonite dove il malato e stato troppo ansioso di uscire fuori prima di esser quarito. In ordine di evitare lo spargimento della malatia nella localita e nel distretto e necessario di rapportare tutti i nuovi casi immediatamente al Napanee Hotel Hospitale se possibile condurre L'Ammalato la subito.

GIRLS! LEMON JUICE IS A SKIN WHITENER

How to make a creamy beauty lotion for a few cents.

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, whitener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any drug store and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands.

OIL PROSPECTING

Nelson, Oct. 30.—Three of the oil companies of the Flathead district of Southeast Kootenay have combined to sink six wells and a contract has been signed with a drilling company to complete the wells to a certain stipulated depth in the next two years. The companies are the Flathead Oil & Coal Co., the Kishenehna Oil Co., and the Flathead Syndicate, Ltd.

THE TREATMENT OF CIVIL SERVANTS

The United States has fixed a minimum wage of $1080 a year for all civilian empleyes of the government. In the Civil Service of this country there are many employees who are working on full time at $500, and hundreds of others, some of them returned soldiers and some with families, who are in receipt of a yearly wage of $600. The paltry pay given to lighthouse keepers was alluded to in a letter in our columns yesterday. The Dominion government's wireless operators are very poorly paid considering the onerous and vital nature of their duties. Dockyard employees are also treated unjustly; in fact, throughout the whole civil service, both inside and outside, hundreds of instances could be quoted to illustrate the absolutely sound grounds upon which the Dominion government's employees are now making their claim for a bonus to meet the increased cost of living.

In the United States the minimum service wage has been established for every government employee. It includes messengers, watchmen and janitors. The minimum is the one which is considered absolutely essential in a country where the cost of living is lower than it is in Canada. The Dominion's civil servants have asked for a war bonus of $350. They should have been receiving a bonus during the past three years yet the government never seems to have given the matter a thought. We do not recall the Civil Service Commission having made any recommendation for an increase in salaries or, if it did, it was pigeon-holed by the cabinet.

The whole schedule of civil service salaries should be revised. A minimum wage, insuring fair living conditions, should be established, as in the United States. From time to time the salary schedule should be revised according to changes in the cost of living. The government is willing this should be done in the wage questions in other industries. The same argument applies to the civil service. The federal employees have an unanswerable case in their claim for consideration. In delaying reaching a decision the government is showing very poor judgment.—Colonist.

DENMARK WANTS SCHLESWIG

To the ghosts of old crimes that haunt the master criminals of Prussia must now be added that of Schleswig. In the treaty of Prague between the victorious Prussia and defeated Austria it was agreed that the Schleswig-Holstein provinces which they had combined to take from Denmark should go to Prussia with the proviso that the people of northern Schleswig were to be reserved the right to be again united to Denmark, should they "express a desire to be so by a vote freely given." It was really Napoleon III. of France who caused the plebiscite provision to be inserted. This stipulation has always been regarded by Prussia as a scrap of paper. The plebiscite has never been taken. It is not surprising therefore to hear that there is a movement in Denmark — where the fear of Germany is not as great as it was a few months since—to have this long-forgotten provision revived and enforced.

JOB'S COMFORTERS

It is indeed fortunate for Germany that she possesses (or possessed till she pretty well wore it out with hard work) a highly trained army and a public contented to trust blindly to its large body of expert officers.

It is plain that had the country been left, as England was, to the energy of the individual or to the inspiring leadership of her political chiefs, she would long since have perished from sheer lack of individuality and inspiration.

Of late, since the catastrophic failure of her summer campaign Germany has had to appeal to her leaders for some sort of spiritual consolation in her hour of misfortune, and anything less calculated than their response to nerve the German people to meet approaching fate cannot well be imagined. The man who stands outside any fifth rate provincial picture palace and sets forth its spurious attractions would have made a better job of it.

There was the Crown Prince, who brazenly ate all his earlier boasts and explained that a complete victory meant sitting in a cellar, with the trapdoor barred, to starve. There was Dr. Solf, a person of no great importance in the German government (as the Frankfurter Zeitung unkindly points out), being secretary for the non-existent colonies (a sort of Irish professor of snakeology). He could do nothing more effectual than denounce England as a land-grabber, proclaim Germany's moral right to own territory in Africa, and call upon his countrymen to accept the world's challenge to a fifth year of war. To a people which cares very little at heart about its colonies (of which comparatively little use was ever made—except, perhaps as a sort of training ground for the Belgian atrocities), and desires only to get out of a fifth winter-war, there was nothing in this speech to set the crowd cheering.

Prince Max of Baden, a reputed Liberal, was another royal propagandist. All he could find to say was that it was to Germany's (and particularly Baden's) royal families that she owed her greatness and happiness. If the merits of German princes are to be measured by the present happiness of their subjects, they can scarcely be said to have made good. Also, when he had warmed to his work a little, he told his audience that he did not think much of Western democracy. He rejoiced that "we are not compelled, in every upheaval of popular passion, in every flood or ebb of opinion, to see an infallible revelation of the will of the people, to which we must sacrifice our conscience. Mob-law, lynch-justice, the boycott of opponents, pogroms of foreigners and the other despotic customs of western democracy, whatever they are called, will, it is to be hoped, always remain as foreign to our nature as they are to our language."

None of your democratic camouflage for Prince Max! But by now things had got so bad that the great von Hindenburg himself had to take a hand. He, preferring the hoarding to the platform, spread abroad manifestoes urging his countrymen not to be afraid and not listen to the fierce threats of their enemies. And to save them from all need of keeping their ears open to those threats he proceeded to paint as lurid a picture as an enemy propagandist ever attempted of the horrors in store for them if they did not keep their enormously strong and numerous enemies out of Germany. If a bank manager sought by such means to allay his depositors' fears, he would within the hour have a queue two miles long outside his doors clamoring for their cash.

Finally the great Pan-jan-drum himself had to come down and speak to his loving subjects in that resort of the well fed and well paid Krupp's works.

Here at least and at least you might have expected dignity, courage and a defiance that would have revived the courage of so sympathetic an audience. King Albert of Belgium would have said something worthy of the occasion. A descendant of Maria Theresa might have made an impressive scene of it. But the Kaiser could do nothing but snivel and whine. The words are undignified in connection with so famous a personage, but they sink lower than the facts demand.

The war, said the Kaiser, was not our fault. We didn't want to do it. It was all England's fault. She was jealous and she wants to go on hating us. We don't know how to hate; we haven't got it in us to hate anyone; but we must go on fighting, though how it will all end God only knows!

And every one of these speakers has not only been uninspiring in his tone but singularly unfortunate in his facts.

Herr Solf's speech has been rapidly followed by the publication of the Blue Book on German administration in South West Africa which is enough to convince anyone of the criminality of allowing Germany to lord it over natives of any race.

Prince Max's aristocratic self-praise coincides with a particularly vigorous "demorcratic" peace offensive under the auspices of Erzberger and Scheidemann, the tame Socialist, and also by a renewed demand for suffrage reform.

Hindenburg's appeal to Germans to have confidence in himself and his men is followed by a further nasty crack in the famous defence line that bears his name.

And the Kaiser's wail of "please, sir, it wasn't me!" had just been anticipated by an admission of the General Council of German Trades Unions that it is precisely the German jingoes who have been at the bottom of all the trouble, and the declaration by yet another prominent neutral, the Norwegian ex-minister Sigurd Ibsen, that whoever else wanted war neither France nor England did.

It is really time von Tirpitz, the Pirate King, said something cheering. But for him such a task must be particularly difficult. It is a pity Count Zeppelin is dead.

SHOULD PUNISH THE AUTHORS

Philip Gibbs' description of the "world of agony" opened up by the British advance must fill every reader with rage at the savages who have destroyed and defiled French towns, and starved French men, women and children and murdered British prisoners. The allies should insist, as one of the terms of peace on the right to ferret out the authors of these outrages.—Toronto Globe.

This Drawing is from a Photograph

— That's why it means so much

It is from an actual photograph of Anna Case of the Metropolitan Opera singing in direct comparison with her own voice on the New Edison.

"But what's remarkable about this?" you ask. The amazing fact is that no human ear can distinguish the artist from the instrument; so perfect is the Re-Creation. This is what we call the "tone test". And it proves the truth of the Edison Company's claims about

The NEW EDISON
"The Phonograph with a Soul"

It proves that the instrument does re-create, not merely imitate. Hundreds of these tone tests have been conducted. More than 2,000,000 people have attended them. And not one could say when it was the artist he heard and when the instrument. With the lights lowered to hide the singer's lips the audience was completely baffled.

Visit our store for a demonstration of the marvelous New Edison or have one sent to your home. No obligation, of course.

Most Heat from Fuel

One reason why the Kootenay Range gives the most use of the heat generated from the fuel, is that the grates have ample vents to make perfect combustion in the firebox, which is properly and scientifically proportioned according to the needs of the range.

"CASCARETS" WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—Take Cascarets tonight.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

SPANISH INFLUENZA RAGES IN CANADA

Thousands of Cases Reported With Many Deaths.

THOSE WHO ARE MOST SUSCEPTIBLE TO IT

"FRUIT-A-TIVES"—The Wonderful Fruit Medicine—Gives the Power To Resist This Disease.

The epidemic of Spanish Influenza which played such havoc in Europe, has reached this continent. Thousands of cases of the strange malady have appeared and many deaths are already reported; Surgeon-General Blue of the United States Public Health Service having stated that "Spanish Influenza will probably spread all over the country in six weeks".

Practically every ship which touches our shores from abroad, brings those infected with the disease.

Surgeon-General Blue urges that "the individual take all the precautions he can against contracting the disease by care and personal hygiene". Plenty of exercise should be taken; the diet should be regulated, etc.

Spanish Influenza affects most severely elderly persons and others whose powers of resistance are weakened by illness, work or worry, especially those who are "run-down" or "not feeling up to the mark."

The really great danger from the disease is not so much in the disease itself, as that it often develops into pneumonia.

What everyone needs now is a general tonic like "Fruit-a-tives". This wonderful fruit medicine is not a germ-killer. It is a body-builder; a strength-maker; a blood-purifier; a power in protecting against the ravages of disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" regulates the kidneys and bowels, causing these organs to eliminate waste regularly and naturally as nature intended. "Fruit-a-tives" keeps the skin active, and purifies and enriches the blood. "Fruit-a-tives" tones up and strengthens the organs of digestion, insuring food being properly digested and assimilated.

Everyone can take ordinary precautions, avoid crowded places, and use "Fruit-a-tives" regularly to insure sound digestion, to keep the bowels and kidneys regular and the whole system in the best possible condition. Then we are safe from disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by dealers everywhere at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

THE SUBMARINE HEROES AT BRUGES

Mr. Walter Duranty's dispatch telling of the short and riotous life of the German submarine officers in Bruges, points vividly a crapulous life. One seems to see some Flemish Little Master portraying almost too actually the excesses of Alva's Spanish infantry, or the little diversions of the Free Companies, the reckless mercenaries that followed the famous Condottieri, the Reiter and the Lanzknecht whose exploits anticipated though at their worst they far from equalled, those of their twentieth-ceneury successors.

We see the submarine officers highly paid, exempt from close official scrutiny into their amusements, living on shore a life much like that of the buccaneers and pirates, their more respectable ancestors. The adventurers who served under the Jolly Roger, the swaggering cutthroats of Flint and Blackbeard, sure to be hanged to the yardarm at last, drank and made merry in about the same way, according to their humble lights and coarser surroundings, as these undersea Siegfrieds. As a rule, however, they had to lurk about obscure colonial ports. West India rum, more burning than the climate, was their ordinary tipple. The pirates of Bruges had a beautiful, quiet, mediaeval city to revel in. Ancient houses, their windows stained beautifully by the lapse of centuries, were put at their disposal. They had the pick of the best stocked wine cellars of Belgium. With the curious fondness of the parvenu they seemeo have favored most what Mr. Greely used to call "champagne wine." Condemned to the nerve-biting life-in-death of the submarine, their occupation growing more dangerous every month, they consoled themselves with the old philosophy of men doomed to death. In the case of professional murderers like these, however, one thinks rather of the final drink of the eighteenth-century highwayman just before he donned the "wooden collar" at Tyburn.

The home of a millionaire of the classic name of Catulle was the club and headquarters of these gentle souls They turned the basement, as they would have turned Catacombs or Cathedrals, into a rathskeller, perhaps the finest flower of German civilization. They adorned it with caricatures and cartoones. They scrawled over its walls characteristic Epicurean beer-hall rhymes. They hung up gaudy-colored lamps. And then, like Jamshyd, they reveled and drank deep. Their wet record in this one house was ten thousand bottles. It is not much. The Olympian Goethe is said to have drunk thirty thousand bottles but his was a long life and these genltemen were all for a short and merry one. In this house, and whatever other house was dishonored by their presence they went through the usual German frolic of smashing allthe crockery and furniture. The feast of unreason was usually ended by burning up the whole establishment.—N. Y. Times.

HARD ON HINDENBURG

Three months ago the news was spread that old Dad Hindenburg was dead. He had a row with Kaiser Bill concerning proper ways to kill the old, the helpless and infirm; the kaiser's comments made him squirm; the blood rushed to his old fat head, and Hindenburg fell over dead. It seems he wouldn't stay defunct, and Azrael was badly funked. A late dispatch tells how once more he and the kaiser ripped and swore, and called each other sons of guns, and cheap john imitation Huns. Then Hindenburg, with anger blind, threw down his sandbag and resigned. He handed in his large brass knuks which cost some fourteen German bucks, his slingshot and a pair of gats, his razor and his rough on rats. "I jump my job!" he sternly cried; "to save my country I have tried, but I've been made an also-ran by you and your Buttinski clan. I gave you quite a hint," he said, "that time when I fell over dead; but subtle hints are thrown away upon such a bonehead royal jay. And now I'm through!" What will this warrior do next if by the kaiser he is vexed? Once he has died, and once resigend; what other stunts has he in mind? Though now and then his work is coarse, he is a man of great resource.

SMALL CONSUMERS TO BE GIVEN LESS COAL

Ottawa, Nov. 4.—Small consumers of coal as well as large are now subject to reduction in the amount of anthracite which they may obtain for this winter, as compared with previous years. This is the ruling of the fuel controller, after consulting with the administrators for the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. These administrators have authority to say what proportion of last year's tonnage may be supplied any consumer within their respective provinces and their ruling will apply to people ordinarily using six tons a year or under as well as to those using larger tonnage.

The fuel situation, critical ever since the beginning of the war, is now much aggravated by the influenza epidemic, which has adversely affected the output of the mines and the transportation of their coal. This, coupled with shortage in the amount of anthracite coal alloted to Canada, has made it necessary to take action as above indicated.

A GOOD IDEA

A local theatre is trying to interest Calgarians in community singing. Words of well known songs are flashed on the screen and the audience asked to sing them with orchestral accompaniment. The idea is a good one. But it is going to take some patience and hard effort to induce Calgary audiences to loosen themselves up sufficiently to make a real chorus in public.—Calgary Herald.

THE MESSAGE OF THE VOICES

(Suggested by Victory Loan Campaign, 1918)

Listen! Listen. Can you hear them, hear the voices in the air—
Voices calling in the night-winds from the regions "over there,"
Yearning, pleading and insistent with a message we must hear—
Weird and solemn is the medley—that should pierce the deafest ear,
Are we busy with our trifles? Are we centered all in self?
Are our minds engrossed with pleasure? Are our hearts bound up in pelf?
Are our souls so dead to pity that we cannot now give heed
To those myriad airy voices calling in their need?

Listen, listen to the mothers, French and Belgian weeping sore
For their children sent to slavery—they may never see them more!
They are calling, they are praying and their hopes depend on you;
"Will you get us back our darlings, will you crush their captors too?
You have sent your boys to help us—they have bled and they have died—
But the Hun has turned in terror; they have tamed him in his pride.
Now, at last, when Victory beckons, the All Highest stands aghast;
Will you hesitate or falter, will you fail them at the last?"

Listen, listen to the soldiers in the trenches under fire—
Blood and death are all around them and beneath them filth and mire—
They are calling, "Brothers, hear us, we have borne the brunt for you,
We are worn and sad and weary; and yet we are conquerors too.
We have dared the hell of battle. We have slept among the slain;
And our souls are sick with horror but we've kept them free from stain!
"Oh, we beg you, don't forget us, pay your share of Victory's price.
Search your coffers, send your treasures or, in vain, our sacrifice!

Listen, listen to the voices calling from a hundred seas;
"Brothers, we have watched and waited, scorned delight and hated ease.
We have kept the sea-lanes open, we have swept the deadly mine,
We have dared the dread torpedo, we have starved the Hun, in fine!
We have hemmed him in his harbors, we have penned him at his base;
But we're weary of our vigils, won't you help us end the chase?
Won't you make one final effort, put your stakes upon our game?
And we'll show that Britannia still is worthy of her name."

Listen, listen, they are calling, 'tis the voices of our dead,
Of the noble lads—our heroes—from their gory battle bed
Or the restless heaving billow where sleep their long, last sleep
Those our brave and gallant seamen who have perished in the deep.
"Brothers, brothers, do not fail us, 'twas a privilege to die
In the cause of Right and Freedom and we would not waste a sigh
On the lusty life we're leaving if we have not fall'n in vain—
If we know that Right shall triumph and true peace shall come again!

Listen, listen to the voices, heed their urgent call,
By your pity, by your manhood, by your honor and by all
That your soul should hold most sacred! If you do not quick respond,
Lending gladly, freely, proudly, then your spirit is in bond
To a slavery much more deadly than the Belgian people bear,
You shall lose the golden moment, you shall forfeit all your share
In that grand and glorious victory that we trust will soon be won,
Which the hand of God has written in the feast-hall of the Hun.

Here Again

"Granny" Chamberlain

I have come back to stay in Canada as long as cold weather lasts, because that is when I can be most useful. I have helped young mothers whose children were choking with croup, and been the comfort of parents whose children tramp to school in the wet wintry weather.

Many a cold and attack of bronchitis I have warded off, and thousands I have helped in the anxious time of whooping cough.

You will see me often, for I have much to tell you of what can be done in the home with.

What time-saving secret does this box hold?

WHY is it that this box of Gold Dust will save so much time in dishwashing? We'll whisper the answer:—

"Gold Dust dissolves the grease."

Proof? Wash some greasy dishes with Gold Dust. Notice how quickly Gold Dust fairly slips the grease away. Notice the real time-saving.

But don't stop at saving dishwashing time with Gold Dust. Scrub the floor with Gold Dust and save time. Dissolve grease from pots and pans with Gold Dust. Save time in washing woodwork—with Gold Dust. In fact, "Use Gold Dust for any kind of dirt that you can't brush up or sweep off."

But remember this: To get Gold Dust results be sure it is Gold Dust you really get.

OLD TIMER CROSSES DIVIDE

It is with deep regret that we report the death of one of our old timers in the person of Howard Marshall, of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. staff. Howard came to Fernie from Westville in 1898 with the original Nova Scotia crowd which followed William Blakemore to this city and has practically lived here ever since. He was of a very retiring disposition but those who knew him loved him for his sterling worth and his death is deeply regretted. While the Spanish influenza was the final cause of death, he had suffered for many years from tubercular trouble which he contracted while working on survey work in the mines. Deceased leaves a wife and brother, James H. Marshall, to mourn his death.

The funeral, which took place today, was largely attended.

LETTERS OF CONDOLENCE

France, Sept. 11, 1918.

Dear Mrs. Dooley—I wish to express to you my sincere sympathy at the death of your brother, Pte. T. Fitzgerald. In the attack on the Drocourt Queant line he was wounded by a sniper. The bullet passed through the shoulder. Before he got out another bullet from a machine gun killed him. He was buried in a military cemetery and a cross with his name, number, regiment and date of death marks his grave. I know, Mrs. Dooley what a blow his death must be to you. He escaped so long, having come out at the first that it is such a pity he should meet his death now, but God's will be done. He went to Confession and to Holy Communion two days before the attack. Since death in the end is inevitable I suppose he died at the best time and in the best manner for him, viz., in the performance of his duty. But for you and his family the sacrifice must be heavy to make. May God console you.

Yours with deepest sympathy,
F. M. Lahary,
R. C. Chaplain.

France, Oct. 9, 1918.

Dear Mrs. Dooley—Some time before this note reaches you, you will no doubt have received the official notification of the death of your brother Pte. T. Fitzgerald. I wish you would accept my sincere sympathy in your great bereavement. Your brother had been in France a long time being one of the original 1st Canadian Division, and was looked upon by all the boys in the Company as one of the old standbys. His advice to the newcomers was always sound and I can assure you he is missed by all of us.

It may be some consolation for you to know that he was killed instantly by a machine gun bullet, on the afternoon of August 30th. I am not permitted to give you the location of his grave but he is buried with a number of boys from the Battalion. If you will write the Graves Registration and Enquiries, War Office, London, they will give you these latter details.

Again I ask you to accept my sincerest sympathy. Believe me. Yours sincerely.

W. O. Tudhope,
Lieut., 3rd Can. Batt.

The latest reports from the Napanee hospital state that their patients have been reduced to 26. If the general decline in the disease keeps up the ban will soon be lifted from public gatherings.

The death of Isaac Cartmell, a well known resident of Coal Creek, which took place in Victoria Hospital on Wednesday, has cast a gloom over that community. Deceased leaves a family of seven children, two boys with the colors in France and the balance of the children living at Coal Creek. Mr. Cartmell, who was 51 years of age, was widely known and respected, having resided here for over sixteen years.

"DER TAG" IN FERNIE

Joy was rampant in the city on Monday when the glad tidings spread abroad that the armistice had been signed by Germany. The whistles blew, the bells rang and notwithstanding the ravages of the flu which had cast a gloom over the community, everybody that could possibly crawl sallied out to join the procession which had been arranged. The Mayor proclaimed a half holiday and threw the town wide open for the occasion and it was not long before everybody was feeling happy.

The procession, which consisted of a long string of automobiles and a host of people, headed by Pipers Watson and Macneil, marched through the principal streets of the city and finally wound up in front of the Victory Loan office, where stirring speeches were delivered by Acting Mayor Thos. Beck; Major G. G. Moffatt, representing the Army; American Consul E. Wakefield; Italian Consul L. Carosella; Polish Representative J. F. Rudnicki; Dr. Bonnell, M.P., A. I. Fisher, M.P.P.; our first citizen W. R. Wilson; and W. J. Claridge, representing the Navy League.

All the speakers spoke of the joy and honor they felt at being present on this occasion to celebrate probably the greatest event that has occurred in history. Each speaker closed his remarks with an appeal for aid for the Victory Loan.

In the evening there was another demonstration and a monster torch light procession which wound up opposite the King Edward Hotel, where a huge bonfire had been lighted. An abundant supply of fireworks had been secured and a beautiful display arranged.

NOTES

Billy Ingram kept open house on celebration day.

Manager Mentrum of the Fernie-Fort Steele Brewing Co. tied the whistle down, ran up all the flags he could find and told the staff to get out and celebrate for the rest of the day.

American Consul Wakefield is some spellbinder when it comes to speaking.

The young ladies of the town pulled off a few celebrations on their own account.

The visible supply of liquor in Fernie has almost disappeared. The flu and the celebration have caused a famine.

Jimmy Mitchell accumulated an old time jag.

David Gash was the happiest man in Fernie on celebration night.

I.O.D.E.

By permission of the Mayor a special meeting of Mt. Fernie Chapter I.O.D.E. will be held in the city council chamber at 11.00 Saturday morning, Nov. 16, to last 15 minutes. ANOTHER HERO GOES WEST

J. Martin Murphy, who was reported missing in the casualty list some time ago, is now listed as killed. "Spud," as he was popularly known in Fernie, was the only son of his widowed mother, Mrs. J. W. Murphy, of this city, and the heartfelt sympathy of all our citizens goes out to her in her sad affliction. It seems hard at this final moment of triumph for our boys to be taken at the last moment, but the mother who is called upon to make this wonderful sacrifice now knows that her boy did not die in vain.

Fernie has reason to be proud of its women folk. The way they have worked and risked their lives in their efforts to help the sick during this plague has been something wonderful. It is up to the men when this curse has passed over to get out and give these workers such a banquet as will long be remembered.

It has not yet been definitely decided but the general opinion seems to be that the public schools should be closed until the end of the year. The children have now had a month in the middle of the short term and few if any would be prepared for promotion at New Year's. The teachers must also be in a very tired condition. Nearly all of them have been nursing day and night in the fight with the epidemic and they will need a rest.

FERNIE HOPES TO MAKE IT

In spite of strikes and the flu this little old town, with the assistance of the outside district, is making one tremendous effort to get over the top. The canvassers are working like Trojans, fighting every conceivable objection and have already signed up about $260,000, leaving a balance of $80,000 which we must dig before tomorrow night. The Loan positively closes tomorrow as the following wire will show:

Vancouver, Nov. 14.

R. D. Mitchell, Victory Loan, Fernie:

We have just been advised by Dominion authorities that the campaign ends Nov. 16 and that no extension whatsoever will be granted. Applications originating on or before Nov. 16 may be accepted, but no other.

J. D. Kearns, Prov. Organizer.

This town has always been among the leaders when it comes to patriotic effort. No city in Canada has sent as many men per capita to the war and few have subscribed more liberally to past loans than our citizens and we must not fall down this time. So get out and beg, borrow or steal but get these bonds. Our country needs the money.

Our sister town of Cranbrook has already reached its quota of $200,000 and expects to add another sixty or seventy thousand. Almost every town in the interior has gone over the top in a grand effort. Don't let us fall down. Remember it is $80,000 or bust by tomorrow night. Buy another bond.

GREAT LIVE STOCK DEMAND

Peace emphasizes the world shortage of cattle, sheep and hogs — in fact all live stock. Canada will be called upon to help restore the flocks and herds of Europe, and the after-war demand will be greater than the war demand, in the view of those in touch with conditions.

PUT $30,000 IN BONDS

At a meeting of the city fathers held last evening at which all the members were present, it was decided to place $30,000 of debenture money in Victory Bonds.

On motion it was also decided to endorse the action of the Citizens' Committee in connection with the epidemic.

A communication from the Provincial government offering to go fifty-fifty on the expenditure of $6600 on river protection work in the Annex was read and after some discussion it was decided to accept the offer.

There was no other business transacted and the meeting adjourned.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dunlap received the sad intelligence this week of the death of their son Bonnell at Brule Lake. Deceased was a well known Fernie boy, having spent all his life here until recently. He was the second boy born in Fernie and was named after Dr. Bonnell. All the old timers unite in extending their sympathy to the bereaved parents.

EPIDEMIC IS ON THE WANE

All indications point to the fact that the epidemic of Spanish influenza which struck Fernie so hard during the past three weeks is fast wearing itself out. Two of the emergency hospitals have been closed and the Napanee only has about 30 cases left. The general hospital, however, is still pretty full, but the dangerous cases are now very few.

The doctors state that fully eighty per cent of those liable to contract the disease have already had it and they do not anticipate much further trouble. Out of about 2500 cases we have had up to date, counting one or two of the adjacent lumber camps, there were some 47 deaths.

Following is a list of the deaths since our last issue:

On Nov. 9—Michael Reggets, son of Geo. Reggets, who died a week ago.

On Nov. 9—Wasyl Ivanuslk, of the Elk Lumber Camp at Olson.

On Nov. 9—Alexander Cazzitti, of Coal Creek, aged 28 years.

On Nov. 8—Alex. Usehaki, aged 34 years.

On Nov. 8—Antony Salasky.

On Nov. 12—Lily Small, wife of James Small, Fernie.

On Nov. 12—Howard Marshall, aged 42 years.

On Nov. 12—Frank Lento, aged 30 years.

On Nov. 8—W. C. Maxfield, of Coronation, Alta., at Bull River.

On Nov. 8—Sanislaw Herman, aged 22 years.

On Nov. 8—Dorothy Dicken, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dicken.

On Nov. 8—Mary Falip, 28 years of age, widow of the late G. Falip, killed in the recent explosion.

On Nov. 14—Teresa Wodyga, aged 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wodyga.

On Nov. 12—Isaac Cartmell, of Coal Creek.

On Nov. 14—The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Crellin, of West Fernie.

On Nov. 15—Mrs. Monks, of Coal Creek.

In our last issue we reported the death of Tony Bossio. This was a mistake. The name should have been Pasquale Basile.

LEATHER SUBSTITUTES OBTAIN WIDER FIELD

High prices and scarcity of leather has paved the way for the rapid development of the substitute leather industry. So much has this been the case that the market for leather substitutes has widened noticeably, and new uses have been secured for the product, in which its utility has been found to approach that of genuine leather. Under severe conditions the substitute article has been found to meet requirments as to tensile strength, toughness and wear resistance. The development of this industry has been of comparatively recent date, and the extension of this branch of manufacture to Canada was of even later occurrence. The reasons for the diversity of the uses to which leather substitutes are put consist of the three principal characteristics of the materials, durability, appearance and impermeability. The influence of war conditions served to enlarge the market considerably for leather substitutes, but peace conditions are not likely to bring about a contraction in consumption of this article. The fact that the growth in population of Canada and the United States has been contemporaneous with a decline in the production of hides, and that leather has been put to many new uses, is a combination of circumstances that go to guarantee the permanency of the substitute leather industry. Huge army requirements depleted North American stocks and the world's supply is much smaller than before the war.

Over ten years ago the development of nitrocellulose for industrial uses led to this product being marketed in the form of solutions to produce the base coating ingredients for the manufacture of the better grades of substitute leather. The output of leather substitute has been multiplied ten fold in the United States since 1910 and the Canadian manufacture is estimated to be 10 per cent of that of the American plant.

Extensive changes have recently been made in the process of manufacture, and the character of the product has been changed radically with the utilization of new types of solutions. The improved quality of the product was attended by an enlarged demand. Extensive research by scientific experts caused still further improvements to be made.

Canada's output of leather substitutes has increased twenty fold within the last five years. Commercial requirements have grown and new uses have sprung up. Besides being used for civilian purposes, the substitute leather is utilized for war purposes for upholstering of ships, motor trucks, ambulances and airplanes. While the uses of these products has been very greatly increased through war conditions, the manufacture can hardly be classed as a war industry.

PEACE HATH HER VICTORIES

The enemies of civilization are taking the count one by one. Bulgaria, Turkey, Austria—all have succumbed to the terrific onslaughts of Great Britain and her glorious Allies, and, perhaps before this gets into print, the instigator of the foul crime against humanity, the once proad German Empire, may have thrown herself on the mercy of the world.

That will be the Peace that seemed so far away only a few short weeks ago. How glorious it will be to know that our boys "over there" are through fighting. And we will prepare to bring them home and to re-establish them in peaceful pursuits.

"Peace Hath Her Victories No Less Renowned Than War." It is for us, then, to remove the difficulties we see in our path, and we can do this by lending the government to the limit of our ability so that industry will not lag and Canada will face the new problems with serenity and confidence.

THAT WHICH WON THE WAR

It was not the British army of millions, nor the invincible British navy that won the war. It was not that marvellous invention, the "tank," nor the unrivaled British artillery. It was not the genius of Kitchener who created armies, nor of Haig, who led them so efficiently into battle.

Wars, Marshal Foch says, are won in the soul. It was the British people's character that won the war.

The British character is like the British "tank"—built for utility and not for show. On the surface it seems frivolous. It woefully lacks a sense of the dramatic. British soldiers will go to certain death with the words of a cheap music-hall song on their lips. British seamen will perform feats of desperate bravery and the Admiralty will record "a certain liveliness" in the North Sea.

When peril is dubious the British people will scoff at it and quarrel amongst themselves as if nothing but their quarreling mattered. Their statesmen will squabble and abuse one another and everyone will accuse everyone else of lack of patriotism, of energy, of ability, even of common honesty. Yet when danger is real and imminent, Briton stands shoulder to shoulder with Briton, backs to the wall ready to die but never to surrender.

Beneath all the frivolity, all the apparent irresponsibility, all the dis putatiousness, lie qualities that have made the British people the rulers of one-quarter of the globe. Courage, strength, imperturbability, a silent but unconquerable patriotism, a keen sense of honor, a bulldog tenaciousness, an ingrained love of justice, law and fair play, a hatred of bullies, national or personal, and a love of freedom, not for themselves alone, but for all oppressed and struggling nations as well—these are the qualities by which the British peoples have won the war.

Wars are won in the soul. It is because the German mind, nourished on Kultur, was unable to read the British character that Germany lost the war.—World.

THEN GRUDGE YE NOT

(Awarded First Prize in Victory Loan Contest.)

Since neither word of our can raise,
Nor prayer of our restore,
The dear lost lads of other days,
That legion "gone before,"
How shall we grudge the yellow gold
To beat their foemen down,
Where the Red Prussians pitiless hold
Sacked city, pillaged town?

But if some faith of ours could know,
Some prayers of ours awake,
The dear lost lads of long ago,
That perished for our sake;
And at the dusk their spirits dim
Come whispering sweet and far
From that fair land beyond the rim
Of things that mortal are—

If such could be, would these not ask
(Vague voices down the wind)
That we should help, ah, humble task,
Their comrades left behind?
Then grudge we not the yellow gold
To beat their foemen down,
Where the Red Prussians pitiless hold
Sacked city, pillaged town.

George H. Maitland.

GOOD FOR US.

The rain is falling as I write, the cold November rain; it is a black and cheerless night, and tomcats on my tin roof fight, and make a noise insane. The rain is pelting, pelting down, I hear it splash and beat; and I'm unwise to wear a frown and rend my spangled dressing gown—this rain will help the wheat. All things unpleasant will do us good, so all the sages say; instead of using steaks for food we ought to make a stew of wood, or boil some prairie hay. To teeter in a chair and rock is pleasant, I must say; but all the doctors come and knock and say we ought to go and walk a hundred miles a day. If there is something we despise, that is the stuff we need; we have to swat the silly flies but in that task our safety lies, so runs the health board's screed. We all are liable to ills which makes us pale and thin; and while we pay the doctor's bills we know there's nothing to their pills unless they taste like sin. Sometimes I think that life's a fake, a rather sorry jest; my spirit feels a throbbing ache, for everything I ought to take is something I detest. The rain is streaming down the door, like water gone to seed; it grieves my heart, it makes me sore, and since it is a beastly bore, I know it's what we need.

SYNOPSIS OF

LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $200 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

She's gone!

If war work has summoned daughter from the home, or the maid to the munition factory, there are busier times than ever ahead—for women who stay at home.

You need all the time-saving helps you can get hold of. See how Gold Dust helps out day by day:

Monday

Besides being laundry day, means 'picking up' and freshening the house after Sunday. Gold Dust takes care of the 'wiping up' of kitchen and bathroom, removes finger prints from woodwork and windows because it quickly and gently dissolves all oil and grease. A tablespoonful to a half a pail of water.

Tuesday

After the ironing is out of the way there is time for such little odd jobs as cleaning cut glass and bric-a-brac, mirrors, windows, glass globes, lamp shades. They all sparkle like diamonds after an easy application of Gold Dust and hot water.

Wednesday

After baking there must always be a general clean-up of utensils. Gold Dust dissolves the grease quicker than soap—important to remember after shortening has been used. No soapy taste left behind.

Thursday

—is Gold Dust day for bathrooms. Gold Dust smoothly—without scratching, gently dissolves all oil and grease and quickly removes dark circles and stained rims from bath-tubs and bowls. Remember, too, to flush out the pipes with hot water in which you have dissolved a tablespoonful of Gold Dust.

Friday

On sweeping day a cloth dipped in Gold Dust water freshens and purifies door sills and window sills, dark nooks and crannies, and corners of rooms and other places hard to reach where 'oily dust' sticks. A tablespoonful of Gold Dust to half a pail of hot water performs sanitary wonders, for dirt simply can't stick after Gold Dust gets rid of every particle of oil or grease.

Saturday

means extra cooking for over Sunday and the final clean-up of kitchen and kitchen utensils as well. Gold Dust freshens the ice box to receive Sunday's supplies with no danger of soap left behind. A tablespoonful to a dishpan or half a pail of water accomplishes a wonderful amount of sweet cleansing.

How Many Crowns for Your Honor Flag?

Of course every city, town and district will earn its Honor Flag.

But how about the crowns?

For every twenty-five per cent. in excess of its quota, each city, town and district will be entitled to add a crown to its flag.

Can you do fifty per cent. better than your quota—that means two crowns for your Honor Flag.

But double your quota and it means four crowns.

Hang a Flag in your hall, that for years to come will show that your city, town or district did better than well—

That it was a real factor in the huge success of CANADA'S VICTORY LOAN 1918.

LEMONS WHITEN AND BEAUTIFY THE SKIN

Make this beauty lotion cheaply for your face, neck, arms and hands.

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, whitener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any drug store and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It is marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.

RETRAINING OF CANADA'S DISABLED SOLDIERS PROGRESSING FAVORABLY

Graduated from industrial training courses and placed in civil life are 1347 disabled soldiers, who, having been so disabled by their war injuries as to be unable to return to their former occupations, were given such training by the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment to place them on an equal footing from the employment standpoint with their fit fellow workers.

This figure is complete to October 1. On the same date 6076 disabled soldiers had been officially approved for such courses of training. Of the 6,076 who have been approved, 373 decided not to accept the training, and 671, after taking instruction for a portion of the time allotted for training, discontinued attendance at the shop where they were being instructed in their new vocations. Included in this number are a great many who were able to obtain employment on the strength of the partial instruction already received, and a number whose health broke down and who, consequently, had to return to hospital for further treatment. Others, both among those who rejected the courses and those who discontinued, obtained attractive employment in some commercial line where specific training was not required. Statistics on this subject will be issued by the department at an early date.

The number of graduations from the industrial retraining courses during the month of September was 226, and the number of courses approved during the month was 480.

The number of men attending classes or shops for industrial retraining purposes on October 1 was 1911, an increase of 34 over the previous month. Similarly the number of convalescent patients in military hospitals attending the vocational classes conducted for occupational and therapeutic reasons showed an increase of 40, the attendance on October 1 being 2044. Further increases are expected during the next two or three months as the weather becomes colder.

From investigation which is not yet complete it appears that the majority of those who discontinued their courses did so because they were able, although not completely educated, to take positions in the field for which they were being trained.

In a report on the matter an alphabetical list of those who have discontinued their courses has been prepared, and on the first page appear, among the A's and B's, 29 names. Only one of these men had his course cancelled for bad conduct. The information in reference to eleven is inadequate and these cases represent the broadest field of the investigation which is being made.

The first man was taking a commercial course and left to take a position as clerk in a hotel. The second man was studying mechanical draughting, and took a position with the Canadian Aeroplane Company. The third was taking a commercial course, and left to accept a position on the clerical staff of the Dominion Police Force. The next man was taking a commercial course, but left temporarily by permission to aid in farm production work for the summer. The next was taking a course in dairy farming, and left to take a position on a farm. The next was studying motor mechanics, but took a position in the post office. Another one, taking bookkeeping and stenography, reattested. Another, taking the Civil Service course, obtained a position with the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment.

A man taking a course in horticulture took a gadener's position at a Northwest Mounted Police barracks. A man taking a course in telegraphy obtained a position as watchman at $120 a month. Another one taking a commercial course obtained a position as clerk in a club. The next man quit his course in cabinet making to take a salaried position in a G.W.V.A. club.

Another man studying machine shop practice returned to the Militia Department to do instructional work. Another one studying mechanical draughting obtained a position as a draughtsman. The last one on the page was studying motor mechanics, and left to take a position as chauffeur.

From this it will be seen that only three are known to have gone into work other than that for which they were being trained. The others, being able to take positions in the occupations for which they were fitting themselves, probably felt that what they had not already learned they could pick up on the job.

Of the twenty-nine names on this first page, nine are known, without investigation, to have profited directly by their instruction, while left for patriotic purposes a number who will in all probability return to their courses.

The investigation which it is proposed to conduct starts off under favorable auspices and will probably discover that many of the others about whom information at present on fyle at headquarters is not complete, are really utilizing the partial instruction they received before discontinuing their courses. In preparing this memorandum upon the investigation as far as it has gone, page 1 was selected rather than some of the other pages which show much more favorable results, in order to avoid the suggestion of having picked out the best page.

AIDING THE RETURNED MAN

The recent decision of the Invalided Soldiers Commission to organize a system which will enable them to keep in close and helpful relation with the returned man who has been re-trained and started upon some new occupation in civil life, should be of great service in the efforts that are being made to help those who by reason of disablement, take their place again among civilian workers at some disadvantage. The experience of the department has shown that its opportunity for service has not been fully utilized when it has cared for such men in hospitals, prepared them by special instructon for some occupation which shall take the place of the one for which they have been rendered unfit and, finally, found them suitable employment. Observation has shown that in the early days of this new venture into the competitive world the man is apt to meet difficulties and discouragements which could not be fully anticipated in the period of training and to stand much in need of friendly counsel until such time as he has lost the sense of his handicap and acquired confidence in the use of his newly-trained powers. It is not surprising to learn that many in these circumstances, have thrown up the job which they could have held easily with a little judicious encouragement, and, seeking easier work, have sunk to a lower economic level, losing the benefit of the training which had been given them.

The proposed extension of the machinery of supervision is intended to meet this condition, keeping in mind the requirement that the men who are to be benefited must be so aided always that they will be enabled to help themselves. Follow-up forms have been sent out to the District Vocational Officers. One of these, giving the fullest possible particulars of the man's training and employment is to be sent to the head office at Ottawa a week after the conclusion of the course. Thereafter monthly reports must follow and in order that these may be filled the man must be visited at his work. He is thus made to feel that interest in his welfare has not ceased and at the same time it is possible to urge upon employers the necessity for patience and consideration. Other efforts will be made to keep in touch with the men through the Pensions Board, through Veterans' Clubs and the Provincial Aid Commission. Under the direction of capable and sympathetic officials this extension of the excellent work which the department is now doing should be of very great benefit. — Manitoba Free Press.

GERMAN INSINCERITY

It is not a sign of being hardened or skeptical to demand that the Germans produce both evidence and guarantees that they are in earnest. It is a German who shows the need of this. Prof. F. W. Foerster, of Munich, wrote only last January that the reason why the Entente could not trust German professions about peace was that the apparent "convictions" of Germans were always subject to alteration "by a change in the war situation." That was exactly what happened with the Reichstag peace resolutions of July, 1917. As soon as the war situation in Russia entered a new phase, that resolution was incontinently thrown overboard. The Reichstag itself openly trampled upon it by ratifying the Brest-Litovsk treaties. And be it remembered that it is the same Reichstag in whose excellent intentions and firm resolves we are now asked to confide. How long would it persist in its present attitude if Ludendorff were to win a great victory over Foch? The situation would instantly become again the one which Professor Foerester describes in saying that "our offers of peace are made worthless by the military. — New York Post.

THE GREATEST DAY IN HISTORY

In the early morning hours of July 15, Kaiser Wilhelm ascended a tower in the immediate rear of the German armies south of the Aisne to await the hour of "zero" which was to unleash his forces for the final drive that was to open his road to Paris.

His faithful Boswell, Karl Rosner, was present to limn for an admiring present and an adoring posterity the bearing, the manner and the emotions of the Superman whom the German Gott had raised up to lead his people to the highest places of the world.

On the afternoon of Saturday, Nov. 10, Kaiser Wilhelm at the German General Headquarters signed a decree abdicating the Imperial throne.

The faithful Karl was not present to record the scene; but an event, so momentuous will not fail to get itself suitably recorded in the pages of history. The cables inform us that the Kaiser signed his abdication with a dejected air saying ,"Perhaps this is for the good of Germany."

Between those two dates, July 15 and Nov. 10 there were just 118 days. In that brief space of time the Kaiser passed by stages with a swift descent at the last from the vainest hopes ever entertained by mortal to the direst despair that ever wrung a human heart. His expectations have shrunk from a universe, trembling at his frown, to enough space for a dishonored grave.

During these days the Allied nations, upon whose cause the whole future of the world was staked, have seen the vision for which millions of men have died come true — a world free from the shadow of the sword and safe for democratic peoples. The grim determination never to yield which held the lines against the giant assaults, those last outlashings of the Prussian beast, has been replaced by the proud realization that victory has been won, that their warfare is accomplished.

For the high privilege which is ours living of through these days—the greatest that the world has known—a great price has been paid. The average of casualties for these 17 weeks for the British alone has been 30,000 per week, or half a million; to these must be added the casualties of the French, the Americans, the Belgians, the Italians and the Serbians, which would put the total probably nearly up to the million and a half mark. If there are any so dull as not to realize what these figures mean let them consider that the total casualties for this period approximate roughly the entire population of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Back of these sacrifices lie the still greater sacrifices of those terrible four years that preceded the sunburst of victory. The foundations of the great victory of the Hundred Days in 1918 is stayed on the bones of the men who fell in the bitter years; the men who saved us by a heroism besides which the storied pages of antiquity pale their glories. It was of these that Kipling wrote:

"At the hour the Barbarian chose to disclose his pretences,
And raged against Man they engaged on the breasts that they bared for us.
The first felon stroke of the sword he had long time prepared for us—
Their bodies were all our defence while we wrought our defences.

"They taught us anew with their blood forbearing to blame us,
Those hours which we had not made good when the Judgment o'ercame us.
They believed us and perished for it, our statecraft, our learning
Delivered them bound to the Pit and alive to the burning
Whiter they mirthfully hastened as ostling for honor
Not since her birth has our Earth seen such worth loosed upon her!

"Nor was their agony brief, or once only imposed on them.
The wounded, the war-spent, the sick received no exemption!
Being cured they returned and endured and achieved our redemption
Hopeless themselves of relief, till Death, marvelling closed on them."

That is rough poetry but its message rings against the target. We rejoice as we have the right to do; we feel the elation of a victory that proves once for all time that Right in the long run makes Might; we glory in the privilege of living in the supreme hours of the world's history; we thrill with the pride of our relationship to the heroes and martrys who have saved the world. But we who have fought these battles by proxy and have won our laurels in absentia must never forget—and if we do we have no doubt we shall not lack drastic reminders—that we are recipients of an honor for which we can only pay, and then in part only, by a civilian devotion to our country that will match in some slight measure the sacrifice of those who have given us the victory which we now celebrate with a thankfulness too deep for words.—Manitoba Free Press.

KINGS—GOOD AND BAD

Those who see in recent events the final passing of kings and thrones, had better not make their statements too general. While the greatest villains in this world drama have been monarchs, they have been among its sublimest heroes, too.

History will reserve for its darkest pages those chapters which record the deeds of Ferdinand the Fox, of Constantine the Inconstant, of Francis Joseph the Weak, of William the Unspeakable and of Abdul the Damned.

On the other hand are the records of as knightly kings as have graced the thrones of history. The long line of British sovereigns furnishes a few hopes and fears of his people as has who have shared the sufferings, the our own gracious sovereign. Whether in the field, in the wards of our hospitals or in counsel with his ministers he has proved worthy of the best traditions of his office.

The name of Albert of Belgium will shine with increasing lustre as history throws into bolder relief against its horizons his heroic figure. He lost his country rather than lose his honor. Now all his loss will be made good to him.

King Victor of Italy, too, a soldier himself, sharing the perils and dangers of his soldiers—him will his people praise and honor for years to come. Italy had to make no less tremendous decision than Belgium. She made it at an hour when the Allies' fortunes were none too bright.

And the aged King Peter of Serbia, who shared the horrors of the tragic retreat of his army. He also played the man in the hour of terror and trial.

Kings who are kings by the peoples will need fear no revolutions. They are the greatest among us because they are the servants of all and the symbols and guardians of national greatness and honor.

BILLY SUNDAY ON VICTORY LOAN

Canada's Victory war chest needs filling again. We have the cash to fill it as many times as the lid is lifted.

There are only two horns to this dilemma—you are either a patriot or a traitor.

The men on the firing line and on the battleships have turned from business, home, mother, wife, children and they stand ready to give their lives and shield with their bodies us who remain at home.

We are unworthy to be protected thus if we do not do our utmost to sustain them.

We must be one in our determination to win this war. We are traitors to the cause for which they are giving their lives if we do things here that make their efforts harder.

Life is not worth living unless there is something to live for. Life would not be worth living if that bunch of Heinies should win. That is why they cannot win. That is why we cannot lose. What a mountain of crime God has on his books against that horde of Hellish Huns. What grave is deep enough for this thousand-armed, thousand-footed, thousand-headed, thousand-horned, thousand-fanged pirate of the air, assassin of the seas, despoiler of the earth and ambassador of Hell. The army and navy will dig the grave but we must furnish the spade.

Our boys will soon hang crepe on the door of the Potsdam palace and the bands will play "The Maple Leaf Forever" along the Rhine.

Canada is the cactus in the Kaiser's pillow.

Our boys have gone over to clean up on that fool bunch of Huns and it is up to us to supply them with whatever they need to finish the job. It takes money to keep the riveters riveting, the sawyers sawing, the machine guns spitting bullets and the grub wagon always on hand with the eats. There is nothing too good for our brave defenders.

Our vocabulary contains no words adequate to express our approval of our armies since we threw our hat in the ring. We are rich on top of the ground; we are rich under the ground, and our rivers creep like silver serpents to the seas, bearing our products.

The children of England, France, Italy and Belgium are laughing once more because they are being fed from Canada's bakeshop. We are in this scrap to the last dollar, the last grain of wheat, the last day.

Victory Bonds provide a market for British Columbia Mines and Smelters

Of Canada's total production in the calendar year 1917, of copper, lead and zinc, amounting to $35,750,000, British Columbia produced $21,350,000.

For the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1918, Canada sold on credit to Great Britain and the Allies more than $46,000,000 worth of metals, the greater part of which were produced from the mines of British Columbia. That was more than three times the average exports for the three preceding years.

The Victory Loan 1917 made this production possible because it enabled Canada to give credit to Great Britain and the allies for their metal purchases in this country.

Without this market the mines and smelters of British Columbia could not have sold their outputs.

But the mines have had a market for their ores. The smelters have turned out tremendous quantities of copper, lead and zinc.

This production has not only brought prosperous times to the miners but it has been a mighty factor in helping to win the war, for these metals were absolutely necessary to the production of munitions in both Canada and Europe.

The Victory Loan 1918 will keep the good work going. British Columbia will continue to have a market for her metals and other minerals and these will help to win the war.

By buying Victory Bonds you enable Great Britain to secure needed materials for munitions and you help to maintain prosperity in British Columbia.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

Chas. O'Brien's entire family is laid up with the flu.

Mrs. A. Macneil is ill at her home with the influenza.

Furnished Rooms for Rent; steam heated. 81 Jaffrey St.

Mrs. W. S. Stanley, of Nelson, formerly of Fernie, is seriously ill.

R. M. Young, who was laid up with the flu for a week, is around again.

Mrs. Alan Graham, who has been dangerously ill, is rapidly recovering.

Our old friend Frank McCrohan, is dangerously ill with the flu at Nelson.

Arthur Muirhead is back on the job again but is still feeling pretty weak.

Died—At Fernie, on Nov. 12, Lily Wilson, beloved wife of Pte. James Small.

Out of 350 cases of the flu, Trail had 22 deaths. Fernie only had about 35 deaths out of 2000 cases.

Archie Cartwright, who is in training with a branch of the flying corps at Toronto, is spending a few days in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Walton wish to thank their many friends for kindness shown during their recent bereavement.

Dr. Garner wishes to thank his friends for their great kindness to himself and family in their recent bereavement.

Geo. Scott was arrested yesterday for having in his possession some 46 gallons of Bourbon liquor. He brought it across the line.

The doctors would like to convey their thanks to Geo. Scott, of Roosville, who so generously donated five gallons of brandy to the general hospital.

E. G. Daniels, an indefatigable worker in the fight with the flu is now down himself. Only a few of the original workers have escaped the plague.

Jos. Falvo received word the other day that two of his brothers had died of influenza, Tony at Calgary and Jack at Nordeg. He left for Calgary on Monday.

Out of 500 cases of the flu at Rossland they have had 53 deaths. Out of 2500 cases Fernie has only had 46 deaths, so we have a good deal to be thankful for.

Hon. Dr. King, who spent a couple of days with us in the fight against the flu, returned on Saturday to Cranbrook. A. Macneil drove him back in his car.

Three plate glass windows were smashed on Monday evening by big skyrockets, the Northern Hotel, Jos. Aiello and the Co-Operative store being the losers.

Pte. R. G. Austin, writes to his father from Seaford, Eng., asking that he and Walter Winnet, who is there with him, be remembered to their Fernie friends.

H. P. Gregson, who has been hustling for Victory Bonds in the south country, wishes us to thank Ben Palmer, who generously donated his car for the canvassers.

Rev. A. L. Carr, of Calgary, was in the city on Sunday attending the funeral of Mrs. Dr. Garner. Mr. Carr left that evening for the east to go overseas with the Y.M.C.A.

Sherwood Herchmer, who did such good work in connection with the emergency hospitals and who finally was taken down himself, is gradually recovering and hopes to be out in a day or two.

Mrs. Anderson, of West Fernie, who was one of the main nurses in the King's Hospital during the fist two weeks of the epidemic, is now suffering from a severe attack of pneumonia.

An Indian walked into a lumber camp at Jaffray the other day and said he was sick. He sat down in a chair and in a few minutes was dead. He had pneumonia. The body was brought to Fernie for interment.

L. P. Sullivan, machinist operator at the Ledger, was called home to Cranbrook on Wednesday owing to the dangerous illness of his wife. Mrs. Sullivan was recovering from an attack of influenza and was up and around when pneumonia developed.

The sad news came to Mr. and Mrs. James Mercer, of Michel, that their son Harold, engineer on H.M.S. Galiano, was lost when the ill-fated vessel became a total wreck off the coast of Queen Charlotte Islands, on Oct. 30. Harold lived with his parents at Michel for fourteen years, where he served his time as machinist in the Coal Co. shop for seven years. Two years ago he went to Calgary and worked as a machinist at the Calgary Iron Works. He enlisted in the navy at Calgary as an artificer in the engine room.

Your country needs the money. Buy a Bond.

Household Furniture For Sale. Apply at McDougall's.

The Calgary Canadian has decided to cease publication.

The Odd Fellows purchased $1000 worth of Victory Bonds.

Bob Schram has had a tough fight with the flu but is gradually recovering.

Tomorrow is the last day to do your bit in connection with the Victory Loan.

The order-in-council making strikes illegal during the war has been cancelled.

District 18 is now very much worried over the prospect of an influx of Russians.

Miss Bell, of the Public School teaching staff, is slowly recovering from a dangerous attack of the flu.

J. R. McEwing, who has been spending the summer in Seattle and other coast cities, returned home on Monday.

Frank Lawe crawled out to the celebration on Monday after an attack of the flu and has been selling Victory Bonds ever since.

If you haven't bought a Victory Bond yet, don't wait to be canvassed. Drop into A. Macneil's office or any of the banks. They will fix you up.

The Ledger reports the death of Mrs. Evans, of West Fernie. This is incorrect, although she has been dangerously ill there is still hopes for her recovery.

Charles Lange was yesterday fined $75 by Magistrate Hewat for bringing in some liquor in a suit case for a few friends who were suffering from the flu. It doesn't seem altogether right.

Alan Wilmott, of Jaffray, was the guest of his brother-in-law, R. M. Young, several days this week. Alan says that at their lumber camp they had 47 cases of the flu among 65 men. Only five cases were sent to the hospital and all have recovered.

A special meeting of Mount Fernie Chapter I.O.D.E. will be held in the council chamber for 15 minutes only, on Saturday, Nov. 16 at 11.00 a.m., in connection with the Victory Loan. All members are urgently requested to be present precisely at the hour named.

In our last week's report of the flu we stated that Miss DeBou, of the teaching staff, had been ill. This was an error. Of all the teachers who have nursed during the epidemic Miss DeBou is the only one who has been constantly on the job without taking the disease.

Wanted: Returned soldier to represent the "Veteran" Magazine in Fernie. It is the official organ of the G.W.V.A. of Canada and all proceeds go to the Association. Good prospects to a man of ability. Apply to Manager the "Veteran," Lakeview Hotel, Kelowna, B.C. O15-2

While the celebration was on on Monday evening a most unfortunate accident occurred which cost a ten year old lad named Leonard Whitehouse his right hand. The tiltle lad had grabbed a big cannon cracker which had failed to explode and it went off in his hand tearing it completely off at the wrist.

ELKO NOTES

(By Fred Roo)

It pays to advertise if you have the goods and there is more in advertising than just buying goods and filling space. If you have any suggestions to make to the editor of this great family paper as to how your ad should appear he will listen to you and then tell you how to magnetize it.

Jim Thistlebeak says he'll bet the Kaiser and his whole dam family look funny when they laugh. If a fellow just had the whole bunch in steel cages and could take them around the world and exhibit them, wouldn't he make some money.

Contractor Wm. Parnell has just completed plastering the Roosville school house, which makes it one of the most comfortable schools in the district. When the flu subsides the trustees intend holding a masquerade ball for the benefit of the school funds.

The Elko Mining Exchange was the scene of great hilarity last Thursday night when the peace news was flashed over the wires. Mayor Klingensmith went round to the business men of the town for a donation towards a soothing syrup banquet and at eight o'clock the club rooms were thrown open and the grub would have given the Canada Food Board the pip had they seen it. On account of Jim Thistlebeak not being able to attend Alex (alwayssupintime) Birnie was toastmaster. The rooms were decorated with flags of the allies and about 40 sat down to the festive board that boasted of everything from angel food to sauerkraut. After the big blow out the shot and shell cigars gave the room a Kootenay fog appearance and it was only the waterplane fizz, cruiser cocktails and the submarine whiffs that saved the whole assemblage from being gassed. The hospitality that prevailed would have made any old timer think he was back in the days of the construction of the Crow's Nest Pass railway. Many songs were sung and toasts drank and the banquet closed by singing the National Anthem and for an encore "Rolling Home in the Morning, Boys."

J. Findley, of Shawnigan Lake, Vancouver Island, was in Elko and Flagstone last week and has returned to the coast.

Some of the travelling salesmen visiting the Old Historic Burg recently were: James C. Sheirlock, with the nerve of a burglar, came into town on two wheels selling overland trout and pickled whale meat and said that he was several days late on account of the flu and had very little time and less money to spend as he was anxious to get to Blairmore, where he was billed to address "The Ladies Culture Club" on "How to Cook a Turtle in the Shell." Then a Winnipeg man selling roofing tar and building paper, built somewhat similar to a shed roof, looked sort of one-sided and slanting and he had about as much expression in his face as a kalsomined wall and said if the retail merchants didn't buy his paper they should buy some kind of paper if it was only Victory Bond paper. Jim Thistlebeak told him he would get more education reading this paper than the people would his building paper. Ed. Clay stopped over night and returned to Vancouver on receipt of a telegram. It was this same Ed Clay that told Jim Thistlebeak that if there was only three homely men in B.C. that he would be two and a half of them and they have been fast friends ever since. J. W. Nunn, of Vancouver, the Hyas Tyee for the Borden Milk Co., an old timer in the Pass and one time city clerk of Fernie, and an old friend of the writer. Harry S. Waterman, the sunflower editor of the D. M. Ferry's Illustrated Seed Catalogue, picking up empty boxes and booking future business, tells you how to grow Isabella Maria Gian Asparagus, Mammoth Smooth Skinned Green Gooseberries, and pie plant hot house born, and carries a side line of bright blue anecdotes; a merry soul and a good fellow to meet. Colin Dingwall, Ottawa and Vancouver, with gents furnishings and other hardware, said he had the only smart-wool sock in B.C., would wear like wood and had a smart appearance. James A. Black (the inimitable and only Jimmy) of Vancouver, who said "you can't take a shirt off a naked man," but that he had a line of shirts that any man would be proud to wear, save him from getting the flu and give him a pleasing disposition. It was this same Black that told a West Kootenay hotelkeeper that his grilled ham tasted like a piece of Lot's wife's face. This was Jim's first apperance since his divorce from Jack Colvin, prince of shoe travelers. (To be continued next. week.)

The Elko ladies committee last week sent 24 parcels to the soldier boys overseas, and on account of several cases of influenza coming in from Alberta they had to suspend operations to attend the sick.

Jim Thistlebeak thinks that Briggs the cartoonist could get up a good "Damn the Kaiser" picture that would be appreciated right now.

Don't pray cream on Sunday and live skim-milk the rest of the week. Buy a Victory bond and make the milk so thick the cream can't get to the top but will put the boys over the top. Jim Thistlebeak says the Huns are like Jonah when he was in the whale's belly, starting to blubber.

Sergt. J. P. Stocks, of Clear Spring Farm, Roosville, left for the coast where he will report to the military board for his discharge papers.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudy, of Creston, arrived in Elko and left for Waldo, where Mr. Rudy will have charge of the C.P.R. Waldo terminus.

THE POWER OF THE WEST

WILL THE PRAIRIES HOLD THE BALANCE OF POWER?

(By J. K. Munro in Maclean's Magazine for November)

Watchman what of the West? That is the cry that goes up to the lookouts on the political towers. Nor are signs wanting that the political generals turn instinctively to that part of the Dominion that lies beyond the Great Lakes when they take down their maps and concentrate their great minds on political strategy. To be sure there are only fifty-seven members from that favored portion of Canada while the remainder of the two hundred and thirty-four are scattered, or rather, clustered elsewhere. But even in countries where majorities rule, or are supposed to rule, the tail sometimes wags the dog.

That is exactly what is expected to happen in Canada once the war cloud is cleared from the political horizon. That is the reason political leaders are practically leaving the dog alone while they are trying to get both hands on the tail.

Are they doing this? Just note a few of the straws that indicate the direction and velocity of the wind. When Sir Robert Borden went to England he carried in his train three provincial premiers; Stewart, of Alberta; Martin of Saskatchewan and Norris of Manitoba. Also in this first contingent of overseas statesmen went Hon. James Calder and Hon. Arthur Meighen, both of whom are proud to claim the prairies as their home. Of course Hon. Wesley Rowell also went along and Hon. Sidney Mewburn; and Hon. C. C. Ballantyne happened along later.

It is hardly necessary to point out that the Western premiers are all Liberals and at least outwardly Liberal-Unionists. Neither has it escaped your attention that all the Dominion Ministers invited to make the trip are of the same political persuasion. All except Mr. Meighen, of course. But he labored so earnestly in the formation of Union government that he could safely be trusted not to do or say anything that might hurt His Master's cause.

Did Sir Robert Borden personally select his party? Or did the same benign influences that so ably helped him to form Union government, in their own unostentatious way, help him with his selection?

Was it all accidental or did somebody, say, Sir Clifford Sifton who knows the West even if he is not too popular there, or Sir Joseph Flavelle who knows more politics than he gets credit for, do a little more of the same gentle prodding that kept Sir Robert so steadily on his way to Union Government?

Did they figure that showing the Liberal premiers the glories of the Empire in company with Liberal-Unionists might prove a sort of insurance policy against any threatening disaster?

These, of course, are questions that even the future may not answer. But men like Sifton and Flavelle would hardly bend so much energy to the formation of Union Government without taking some measure to insure its permanency. However that may be, there is a scurrying westward of ministers and others that show that the Prairies are to have a Liberal, or perhaps Liberal-Union, education. Hon. Newton Wesley Rowell, whose sweetly-mournful voice was carried back from England practically unimpaired,, was first heard in Ontario. By easy stages he reached Winnipeg. He probably just wanted to assure the wild Westerners that a childhood spent in Toronto law offices had not so contracted his heart that it did not beat for all of Canada. Hon. Frank Carvell also did the Western tour and there is an off chance that carefully stowed away in his grip were some of those free trade speeches that flowed so fluently from his well-trained tongue ere the trend of events hurried him out of the mire of New Brunswick politics into the more elevating work of winning the war. Of course Hon. T. A. Crerar had to go West for a look at the crops and a hurried glance through the books of the Grain Growers' Grain Company. It is more than probable that he told his farmer followers how he longed to be back living the simple life and was persuaded that the great cause of agriculture and $2.21 wheat demanded that he stay put for yet a little longer. Hon. Arthur Sifton and Hon. Jas. Crerar heard the call of the prairies in their blood and answered it.

Of course Hon. Arthur Meighen also turned his face towards the setting sun and so did Hon. Tom Crothers. But, as pointed out before Hon. Arthur is safe while good-natured Tom is a relic of other and Torier days. Anyway, he had troubles of his own with the labor men even as Hon. Arthur had his, trying to find an occasional section of land that a returned soldier could settle on.

Another who has found the West a new field for missionary work is Sir John Willison, Chairman of the Reconstruction Commission, an offshoot of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, who gave the west the benefit of his erudite mind and the sunshine of his smile.

Naturally you start to look for reasons for this sudden political partiality to things western. And you have not got far to look. It seems assured that for some years to come Ontario will vote against Quebec and vice versa; that if Ontario votes Tory, Quebec will vote Grit or that if Quebec votes anti-Union, Ontario will perforce stick to the Union party. The reasons are too obvious to require setting out. Laurier, while he lives, will be the chiefest among them.

That neutralizes the two great seat-producing provinces. Then, when you get to the Maritimes, you realize that they are not going to do much towards breaking the tie. You can draw a line through the centre of New Brunswick and find that every seat north of it is Liberal in Provinciol politics and that all save one or two are the same way in Dominion politics. They can be depended on to stay that way with slight variations. Nova Scotia never suffered a severe relapse from party lines and is not likely to. That was evidenced by the fact that Premier Murray after being enrolled in the Union cabinet took a hasty glance at the safety first signs and decided to stick with his old job and his old party. He ought to know Nova Scotia for he has been its premier for a long, long time.

So you turn your eyes from the east and the contiguous, look away across the waters of Lake Superior and realize that if the West comes down to Ottawa in close formation it has the rest of Canada practically at its mercy. Hon. Bob Rogers realizes this, for he has resurrected his Winnipeg Telegram and his wires are out to rescue some remnants of the old Tory party from what he always considered the Union muddle. He realizes that to be a power in the West is to be a power in Canada. And it is no secret that Hon. Bob still yearns to be a power in his native land — whether for good or evil, who shall say?

There is still another reason too why the West must be looked after politically. The crops out there have not been any too good. Next to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, prosperity has been the best friend Union Government has known. When a man is making money and living in comfort or comparative luxury he can look on any kind of government with considerable equanimity. But once let him feel the pinch of hard times and it takes a particularly nice brand to please him. Why, down in New Brunswick, where they imbibe politics with their mothers' milk, they're so busy with the potato crop this year that they have not any time to give to their favorite topic of conversation.

In various sections of the West the harvest has been easily harvested. That leaves much time for talk about the duty on agricultural implements. Once that "duty" talk starts in the West, no one can tell where it will stop. Of course the West is loyal. It has given its sons to the battle line with a generosity not even equalled by Ontario. It has been closer to the war than any other part of Canada. But, unless all signs fail, the war will be out of politics before many more months have passed. Once the Allies get fairly over the top, mouths will be opened that have long played a part in grim siilence. And the West will take a large share in the ensuing conversation. This conversation will not necessarily await for the signing of the peace treaty. Once victory is assured, get ready to listen.

It is always well to remember too that the West is not afraid to ask for what it wants. Those men who live out amid the dry cold that you can't feel are there for a purpose. They did not go there for their health. They want to accumulate a competence and to do it with celerity. They are business men, quick to take advantage of a business opportunity. Before the Union government reared its head above the political horizon they had pretty nearly made up their minds that they all wanted the same thing and that they wanted it all at once. That something sounded so much like the total abolition of tariffs of all kinds that you couldn't well tell the difference between it and the freest kind of free trade. They were in fact beginning to voice a Liberalism that was radical almost to Bolshevism. Knowles of Moose Jaw was one of the fiercest advocates of this new brand of Western Liberalism. His utterances caused some of his fellow Liberals to quail even as they brought derisive smiles from across the floor. There was an inclination to treat his speeches as a new form of Western bluster and to laugh at various predictions that the West would send down fifty members thinking and talking along similar lines.

It may be significant that Mr. Knowles did not come back to the Federal house. But what is more significant is the fact that Mr. Knowles with Hon. tacked on in front of his name is a member of the Saskatchewan cabinet—that cabinet is headed by Hon. Willie Martin and generally supposed to be owned by Hon. James Calder. Mr. Knowles evidently was not too radical for at least two of those firm friends of Union government who were specially selected by Premier Borden to accompany him on his Empire-making expedition to England!

It is an old prediction that the tariff is the rock on which Union government will wreck. Up to the present time this rock has been submerged by waves of $2 wheat. Even the storm, that the raised railroad rates promised to engender, died away before the fixed price of No. 1 Northern. But the waves of wheat have grown shockingly less; even the finish of the fixed price may soon be in sight. What then?

Perhaps that is the question that silent James Calder is trying to find an answer for. James is a politician. Politicians do not lead. They figure out what the people are going to ask for next and beat them to it. Is silent James keeping his moustache-concealed mouth so tightly closed in order that he may with impunity lead the clamor that seems bound to come? Is there anything to the report that filters through occasionally that Hon. W. M. Martin is to be the successor to Sir Wilfrid Laurier when the latter finally decides to retire? Does Hon. James Calder dream of a West that loves not Ontario united to a Quebec that hates Ontario with himself pulling the strings that guide the nation? Hon. William Martin would make a mighty fine figure head for a Federal government, even as he does for a Provincial government. He is tall and broad and fair to look upon. He carries all the earmarks of a good Presbyterian respectability. He may not be overburdened with brains, but then Silent James might furnish the brains. A man that can keep silent in enough languages to control the foreign vote in Saskatchewan may have almost any quantity of anything in his make up. Such may or may not be the dream of Silent James but others have dreamt it for him more than once. A grave injustice may have been done him but those who know him best believed from the start that he never would have come into the Union except to look for such a chance. They may have done the Western politician a great wrong. But, if they were right, sure it is that his opportunity is at hand — always supposing that he should prove equal to it. Many a man has made a reputation for shrewdness by simply keeping his mouth shut.

"But where would Hon. Arthur Sifton come in on a deal of this kind," you naturally ask. And the promulgators of the Calder theory are ready with their answer. They assure you that the Sifton ambitions lie along judicial rather than political lines and whisper in your ear that Sir Charles Fitzpatrick may soon relinquish the ermine for vice-regal robes—that he will become Lieut.-Governor of Quebec and leave a vacancy at the head of the Supreme Court of Canada. What better place could be found for a man whose forte is giving sound judgments and giving them quick?

However, all this is more or less speculation. The fact remains that the Union cabinet is making sounds that might lead one to believe it expects to replace the old Conservative party and try to line up that part of the country opposed to Laurierism. If it does, it has every reason for getting busy in the West.

All four provinces are Liberal in Provincial affairs. In Manitoba and British Columbia some traces of the old Tory party may be found. But in Alberta and Saskatchewan the situation is perhaps best described by the dialogue between two lonesome old-time Tories who happened to strike the post office on the same day.

"We hear of Unionists and we hear of Liberals," said one, "but what are we?"

"We're souvenirs," sadly replied the second.

Of course the virtual extinction of the Conservative party in these two provinces is largely chargeable to the foreign vote. When you realize that 47 per cent of the population of Saskatchewan is of foreign origin and that 130,000 of her 640,000 people carry the blood of Germany and Austria in their veins you get some idea of what an important part the foreign vote can play in a country's politics. Of course, the Wartimes Franchise Act spoiled the Federal voting qualities of large numbers of those aliens but they are still in good standing on the provincial lists and they have been fashioned into as nice a political machine as Tammany ever owned. Moreover, the last provincial elections both in Alberta and Saskatchewan found the Federal Conservative organization practically bankrupt. The provincial associations left without money couldn't do much, the elections went practically by default and all organization faded from the political map.

There is much evidence to show that it was the Wartimes Election Act, smashing the alien vote out of the Grit machine, that forced James Calder et al into the Union cabinet. If that is so, the first step towards the disintegration of that cabinet will be the repeal of that Act. Sir Robert Borden never liked said Act. It was forced down his throat by certain of his followers with more political foresight than the Premier ever owned. But he swallowed it with a shudder and probably would not be hard to persuade to take it on the statute books. Also he might be brought to see that, if the West is to be placated, this is the best way to do it. It is reported even now that the Franchise Act is to be generally overhauled at the next session of Parliament. If part of that overhauling is the elimination of the clauses affecting aliens stick a pin in your political history at that point. It will be the beginning of the end.

But so various and diverse and complex are the questions in connection with this Western problem that it is little wonder the politicians are giving it their closest attention. It must be remembered in connection with them all that the present parliament was selected rather than elected. Sir Robert Borden put his brand on a set of candidates and they were elected in spite of personality or previous affiliations. For proof of this you have only to turn to the Toronto constituency of Parkdale. It's the strongest Orange-Tory riding in Canada yet the Borden brand elected a Liberal as its member. Now Sir Robert did not personally select the men on whom he placed the mark of his approval. Silent James Calder selected them in Saskatchewan; Honorable Arthur Sifton picked them in Alberta and other lieutenants culled them in the other provinces. Thus it is only fair to presume that a certain number of members from West of the lakes owe their seats not to the people but to Honorable James Calder and to Honorable Arthur Sifton. If the Big Two from the West determine to cast in their lot permanently with the Borden Unionists they can to a large extent control these members. They may be able to control enough of them so that no other defection from the Union ranks could bring real disaster. They may be able to pacify their constituents with the argument that it is just as important that war debts be paid as it was that we should win the war. To pay war debts you must have revenue and one of the best ways to produce revenue is the imposition of tariffs. Parliament has yet four years to live if the government can continue to command a majority.

Sir Robert Borden is the kind of Premier who sits and waits for something to turn up. A year and a half ago you wouldn't have bet counterfeit money that he would now be Premier. Yet there he is and with a bigger majority than ever. He is credited with a desire to spend his declining years in England. Honorable Wesley Rowell is said to have his feet all nicely socked ready to slip into the Borden shoes. Honorable Arthur Meighen is convinced that, if the Big Job ever goes out looking for a man to fill it, it will lay a detaining hand on his shoulders. But they've misjudged their man. The best thing Sir Robert Borden does is nothing. He'll just linger on. He likes his job. Any way you can, with the best of politicians, turn your eyes to the West, satisfied that when you turn again to find Sir Robert Borden he'll be reading orders-in-council right where you left him.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a small bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

The Bank will trust you

Perhaps you never had an account in a bank—maybe you've never done business in a bank—hardly even cashed a cheque in one. But—that is no reason why you cannot go to a bank and borrow money to buy Victory Bonds.

If you are a steady, industrious, thrifty citizen, working and saving a part of your income, you are just the kind of person Canada's chartered banks stand ready to help to-day.

Any bank will lend you as much money as you can save during the next twelve months, with which to buy Victory Bonds.

All you have to do is to pay ten per cent. of the amount you want to buy and deposit the receipt for that ten per cent. in the bank.

The bank will lend you the 90 per cent. balance at 5½ per cent. interest and will give you a year to repay it, the interest you get on your bond being just the same as the bank charges you.

This is a fine opportunity for you to begin a real savings account, to make a first class investment and to help your country at the same time.

Why not see a banker to-day—he will tell you all about it and you will be glad of the advice and help he can give you.

THE FISH CONSUMPTION IN CANADA

All over Canada people are eating fish in greater quantities than ever known in this country before, the average increase being estimated at 100 per cent. National Fish Day, Oct. 31, was well observed throughout Canada. The increased demand will increase the supply, for there are plenty of fish in Canadian waters, if people will only ask their dealers to order them.

CUT IT DOWN TO BARE FACTS

GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL LARGEST SHIPOWNER

The new issue of Lloyd's Register recently published contained some interesting facts. For the first time in modern shipping history it is a government official and not a private shipping company that appears as the largest owner. This is Sir Joseph Maclay, British Shipping Controller, who has nearly 1000 ships after his name and address in the Register. The names of the ships he owns occupy eight columns of small type. When the war broke out the Hamburg-American Company was the largest individual owner. Not far behind the British Shipping Controller is the United States Shipping Board, to enumerate the vessels of which requires five columns of type.

In the detailed description of vessels which form the greater portion of the Register, there are 34 pages of ships, each of which begins with the word "War." These boats are all owned or controlled by the British Shipping Controller, except such as have been requisitioned by the United States government in the States.

The Register contains a list of some 200 German and Austrian vessels launched between 1914 and 1918, but sets forth: "As to which it has been impossible to get further authentic details." The list is made up for the most part of small vessels, less than a fourth being over 5000 gross tons. The largest ships in the list are the Muenchen, 12,000 gross tons, and the Rheinland, 11,500 gross tons.

Fry's Cocoa

The best way to get the most work out of the "human engine" is to give it the food that has the most energy in it. Of all foods, certainly this means FRY'S COCOA—the great food beverage that is all delicious nourishment. If you have to work harder these days, try a regular course of FRY'S. You will need less of other and more expensive foods. There is concentrated strength for muscle and brain in every single cup.

THE TERMS OF ARMISTICE

Germany's surrender is a surrender on the field of battle. She is defeated and the conquerors impose their will upon her.

The armistice is purely a military and naval affair. To avoid worse losses and greater suffering, Germany agrees to evacuate all invaded territory, withdraw her men beyond the Rhine, surrender or disarm her naval forces, give up her land artillery and war supplies—in a word, to place herself in such a position that it is out of the question for her to resume hostilities.

Armistice terms are not peace terms. The peace conference has yet to be held. In general the Allies know what they propose to do with Germany when they have rendered her impotent. But so rapid and so profound are the changes in the government of Germany that by the time the peace conference assembles many of the problems now of great difficulty may have been solved through the action of the Germans themselves.

There is danger that the German people may get off lightly because, apparently, they have repented of their murderous debauch of the last four years. This must not be. The German people wanted war, made war, approved its ruthlessness and applauded its horrors. They must be punished for all that. The criminal even though his repentance be sincere, still serves his jail sentence. And so it must be with the German people.

Throughout the British Commonwealth of Nations for months to come there must be but one voice and one determination: "Punishment for Germany—just punishment, but merciless."—World.

WHY PILOTS NAMES ARE NOT PUBLISHED

London—The British Air Force authorities do not favor the publication of the names of fighting pilots, with their "scores" of German machines brought down, because this method does not commend itself to the British temperament. It would doubtless please certain British individuals, but it is contrary to the main weight of British sentiment; the majority, inside and outside the Royal Air Force, is against it; and so the authorities do not sanction it.

In this, as in so many other matters, it would be folly to ignore or over-ride national temperament; and the fact that a given course or policy is right for one country, by no means shows it must be right for another country.

The British flying officer, and especially the fighting pilot, is quite clear about this and ,right or wrong, thinks it would be unsporting and wrong to invite public attention and popular admiration for individual pilots, because of the opportunities they had had and successfully used, for bringing down "Huns." As one of them recently wrote: "I am not pot-hunting; I am doing my job and trying to help win the war like every other officer in the R.A.F., and in the navy and army, too. Platoon commanders are not advertised as having shot so many "Huns," yet they do shoot a good many, in circumstances a good deal less comfortable and just as dangerous as mine. And then, again, what about the R. A. F. Observers — some of the best gunners we have. Why should their names be left out. I go into the air perfectly equipped at all points to bring down Hun machines. A pilot on artillery observation or photography work goes up to do a highly necessary job, and perhaps has to spend several hours over it, and in any case has other work to do, and cannot go trafing however much he might like to. Why should I be advertised and glorified any more than he is? We both try to do our job, and nobody can do more. When any of us earn a decoration we are gazetted and the thing is on record. For the rest, we play for our side and for the good of the R.A.F. It is the R.A.F. that downs the Hun, and the figures advertise the R.A.F. No need to advertise individuals."

It is, of course, undeniable, that there cannot possibly be equality of opportunity for flying officers in the matter of bringing down enemy machines; and it would be absurd to suggest that the highly difficult and hazardous work performed in bombing, reconnaissance, contact patrol, ground-trafing, and many other special duties, is one whit less than the work of bringing down German pilots.

There is another aspect of this matter which is worth consideration. By methods of advertisement and of glorifying a few "star" pilots to the point almost of deification, Germany hoped to popularize her air service and encourage recruiting. Captured documents have established beyond question the fact that the results have been most disappointing to the German high command. Further, when a pilot so glorified, so carefully made into a national hero, is brought down —as in the case of Richthofen — the sense of national loss is acute, and the blow to the morale of the German air service is very serious.

The main point is that one method suits one people and another is needed for a different people. The British adhere in this manner to the method which suits them best, and that which is most in accord with their naval and military and sporting traditions.

GREENWOOD SMELTER TO CEASE OPERATION

The Greenwood smelter and Mother Lode Mine will cease operations about the middle of next month. If this proves to be a permanent shut down Greenwood will soon be a ghost city of the west. We understand it is necessary for the company to have a reverberatory furnace in order to smelt their concentrates from Copper Mountain. A furnace of this kind will cost $200,000 or more, and the company has no funds for that purpose, and may have to permit the Trail smelter to handle the smelting for them.

The company, we understand, would immediately build a reverberatory furnace in Greenwood, ensuring the permanent prosperity of this community for a very long time if they had financial assistance from some quarter. It might be a wise move for the legislature to back the enterprise. The government will lose, probably $90,000, if Greenwood is ruined, through having to pay the city bonds. As the government is so vitally interested in the welfare of this community it is up to our beloved legislators to assist in averting the calamity that now threatens to sweep Greenwood into the dump of oblivion. The death of any industrial community is felt all over the province. — Greenwood Ledge.

MORE MONEY FOR SOLDIERS' KIN

Victoria, Nov. 9.—Allowances to soldiers' dependents are to be increased by a decision just reached by the government, according to a telegram received today by Frank Giolma, M. P.P., from Major Margison, president of the pay and allowances adjustment board. There will be a $10 flat rate increase per month for all up to and including the dependents of subalterns.

The government is also to grant an extra allowance, over and above that given by the Patriotic Fund, for each child of a soldier's wife. The increases are to be retroactive, as from September 1.

TWO YEARS TO DEMOBOLIZE

New York—Demobolization of the American forces in France will require a period of two years after peace is derlared, according to a statement made here by Gen. T. Coleman Dupont, who has just returned from a two months' visit on the western front.

Declaring that his views were the reflection of official opinion among the allied forces he asked that Americans accustom themselves to the idea of a long demobilization, as they had to that of a long war.

"One of our generals asked me," he said, "to tell the people at home that our boys have a year's work ahead of them in removing the barbed wire the Huns have strung across France."

10 CENT "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

VICTORIA CROSS FOR 'CY' PECK

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 18—Lieut. Col. Cyrus Wesley Peck, M. P., of Prince Rupert, who has been serving at the front for more than three years, has been awarded the Victoria Cross, the most coveted military distinction in the British army. The announcement of this signal honor paid to a British Columbia officer was received in Vancouver last night. Accounts of his exploit at the front tell of his having brought in a lieutenant under heavy shell fire. He also led his battalion in the face of heavy machine gun fire, while he has been mentioned several times in despatches. He was wounded in the fighting at Festaubert and was gassed at Vimy ridge, where, for gallantry, he was later awarded the D. S. O.

Lieut. Col. Peck enlisted at Prince Rupert the day war was declared and on Nov. 6, 1914, left the northern town as commanding officer of 225 men for Victoria. At Victoria he joined the 30th battalion and went to France as captain of No. 2 company. Arriving at the front on Feb. 14, 1915, he was transferred to the 16th battalion. He was soon promoted the rank of major and two years ago, became officer commanding this famous battalion.

In the Dominion elections of 1917 Lieut Peck ran as the soldier candidate for Prince Rupert, defeating Fred Stork, the Liberal nominee. Lieut--Col. Peck's wife has been a resident of Vancouver since her husband left for the front.

HOW PIPER RICHARDSON WON THE VICTORIA CROSS

The particulars of Piper Richardson's winning the V. C. are as follows:

No. 28930 Pte. (Piper James Richardson, 16th battalion (Canadian Scottish.) His next-of-kin is David Richardson, chief of police at Chilliwack, B. C. Formerly he was connected with the Seaforth cadets.

Piper Richardson was awarded the V. C. for his splendid initiative and example during an attack. After playing his company "over the top," he continued to play with the greatest coolness, inspiring the men to furiously attack and overcome a heavy obstacle and win their objective. Later after assisting in bombing operations, and carrying back the wounded, Piper Richardson returned for his pipes, which he had left behind, and was never seen again.

PROTECTION AT LAST

At last the river bank protection project has materialized from the discussion and correspondence stage to something definite, and work will be commenced on same on Monday next. Mr. Cummings, provincial district engineer met the works and property committee in the council chamber last evening and presented plans and specifications of the work which the Government consents to subsidize to the extent of fifty per cent. of $6,600. A slight hitch in these proceedings resulted on account of the understanding by Mr. Cummings that the city were to undertake the work, but this was amicably adjusted by the city assuming responsibility for the actual undertaking of the work under the supervision of Mr. Cummings and Mr. Macdonald. A telegram requesting approval of this arrangement was dispatched to Hon. Dr. King, but come what may, regardless of whether the work will be under the supervision of the Government or the City, the city will commence same on Monday morning and carry on until the project is completed or at any rate until weather conditions prevent further activities. It is assured that the essential work will be completed in ample time before the next flood season, which should be gratifying to the property holders affected.

Len. Bisaro, who was one of two last patients at the Napanee hospital, died this afternoon at two o'clock.

FERNIE DISTRICT WINS A CROWN

The final figures of the 1918 Victory Loan Campaign, which closed on Saturday night, the 16th inst., show that the Fernie District subscribed the magnificent total of $406,650,00, as against its alloted quota of $340,000.00, an over-subscription of $66,650.00, entitling the district to an Honour Flag and Crown. This showing is all the more remarkable in view of the epidemic which struck the district at the outset of the campaign, and not only disorganized the committee in charge, but practically put it temporarily out of business.

The results achieved show emphatically how successfully an agressive campaign can be conducted under unusual difficulties, and reflect great credit on chairman E. K. Stewart, Vice-chairman A. Klauer, and the Executive committee and outside district representatives who so ably co- operated with them. The totals also show how firmly have become fixed in the mind of the individual citizen the merits of these issues, and how generous is the response from the man in the street to an object which he has become accustomed to regard as from every viewpoint praiseworthy. The committee are naturally very gratified at the result, and wish to thank all those who assisted them, particularly the ladies who organized and took so enthusiastic a share in the work.

The total number of subscribers in the district was 1172, and the sub-totals of the various centres are given hereunder:

Fernie, Executive Com.	$280,750.00
Coal Creek, J. Worthington,	16,150.00
Michel, Natal and Crow's Nest T. Thompson	42,250.00
Corbin, J. Lancaster,	13,200.00
Elko, Campbell Lewis,	2,200.00
Roosville, A. J. Nolan,	2,050.00
Waldo, J. Ross,	21,400.00
Baynes, F. W. Adolph,	17,150.00
Dorr, H. Gregson,	3,000.00
Jaffray, A. G. Wilmot,	8,500.00
Total	$406,650.00

The following telegrams show that Fernie's efforts were recognized by the Provincial executive:

Vancouver, Nov. 16.

E. K. Stewart, Chairman Victory Loan,

Accept heartiest congratulationsupon earning Honour Flag. Fernie achievement truly wonderful.

W. H. Malkin,
Chairman, Executive.

E. K. Stewart,

Your magnificent achievement surpasses anything I thought possible when I remember the unequalled handicap which Fernie has had to contend with. You and all your workers must be deservedly proud that even the severest kind of Influenza attack could not prevent you from exceeding your objective. Three cheers and a tiger for Fernie are well merited.

THE 1918 VICTORY LOAN

None of the most sanguine estimates of the success of the 1918 Victory loan came anywhere near the realization, as expressed in the official figures announced at a great meeting in Massey Hall, Toroto. In the three week's drive Canada subscribed the great sum of $676,027,217, which means that the loan is over-subscribed by more than 35 per cent. The Dominion total for the whole campaign last year was $420,000,000.

The total as announced for Ontario stands at $329,679,000, of which $90,613,250 was subscribed the last day. This compares with $204,500,000 last year and is nearly $80,000,000 over the provincial objective.

Both Toronto and Montreal put on a big spurt at the end, the Ontario city winning out by a million and a half. The actual figures are Toronto, $144,946,100; Montreal, $143,433,050. Toronto added $51,483,600 on Saturday. Last year the Queen city subscribed $78,871,000.

Every province in the Dominion went over its objective, most of them by a substantial margin. The totals for the provinces are:

British Columbia	$35,396,667
Alberta	18,189,600
Saskatchewan	23,889,000
Manitoba	43,639,900
Montreal (city and island)	143,433,050
Quebec (outside Montreal)	32,000,000
New Brunswick	16,500,000
Nova Scotia	30,600,000
Prince Edward Island	2,700,000

The figures for Prince Edward Island are very incomplete, it was announced, owing to a big snowstorm, which had hindered reports being turned in.

The final returns were announced in Massey Hall, when about 3,500 people were present. Two or three thousand people tried in vain to gain entrance to the crowded hall. Much enthusiasm was manifested in the announcements of the various totals, particularly when the grand total for the Dominion was made known; and when it was declared that Toronto had beaten Montreal in the race for the lead between these two cities, the audience rose and cheered and made a big noise with horns.

JACK CARTMELL DIES AT FRONT

The old saying, "It never rains but it pours," was borne out a few days ago when Mrs. Isaac Cartmell, of Coal Creek, received the sad intelligence that her son, Jack, had died of Spanish Influenza in France. Coming right after the death of her husband, the poor woman and her family are almost prostrated with grief. Deceased who was a popular young man around Fernie, leaves a wife and two children besides his mother and five sisters. There is also one brother who is still with the colors in France.

APOLOGY

Fernie, B. C., Nov. 19th 1919.

The Fernie Free Press,
Fernie, B. C.

Sirs:—

Having recently made the statement that Mr. Norman E. Suddaby, of this place, Druggist, was a German I now beg to withdraw such statement abcolutely and hereby apologize for having made same. Having made full inquiries I am satisfied that Mr. Suddaby was born in Kitchener, Ontario, and that his father and mother also were both British subjects by birth and ancestry, the former having been born in Brockville, Ontario, and the latter in England. I might add also that I have never heard Mr. Suddaby express any sentiments that were not thoroughly patriotic.

As I would like to make this apology as public as possible I would be obliged if you would publish it.

Yours Truly,
Wm. Robichaud.

Four Chinamen died at Kelowna last week from the plague, and one at Penticton.

FIFTY NINE FATALITIES

While it may be said there has been a favorable turn in the trend of the influenza epidemic, conditions even yet are far from a total recovery. The Victoria Hall and King's Hotel emergency hospitals during the past week have been closed but the Napanee still has two patients, Len. Bisaro and Eli Benezeth, who are in too critical a condition to be transferred to the General Hospital. Although during the past month between 2,500 and 3,000 cases of varying types of the "flu" have been recorded in the city, even yet new cases develop daily; Tuesday of this week being the worst in this respect since the recent climax, when ten new cases were reported.

With a most notorious history for calamities, including fires, floods, strikes, snow-slides, etc., this city during recent weeks has passed through a period of trials and tribulations unsurpassed by any of the former mentioned plagues. During this period 58 citizens and former residents have been interred here; 51 of which died within the city limits. Expressions of commendation cannot amply award the host of willing workers who sprang to the assistance of those stricken with the dreaded "flu." One month ago today not a single case of the "flu" as far as was known, existed in the city, although in all the surrounding communities numerous cases were reported. One week later or on October 29, a very conservative estimate based the number of cases at fifty, and daily they increased with astounding rapidity. On October 30, the Victory Loan Committe to a man volunteered and formed themselve into a citizen's emergency h league and within twenty four the Napanee Hotel was converte a fully equipped emergency hospital. The following day Victoria Hall was placed on a similar basis and then the King's Hotel, and the committee in three short days perf d this gigantic task and had [illegible] patients comfortably confined in these three emergency hospitals. Following this organization without complaint they kept at their task and acted as nurses as well as performing almost every known duty under the sun, and one by one they succumbed to the disease until but very few of the original staff remained on duty.

HOME FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS

A letter sent out by the Great War Next-of-Kin Association, of Victoria, to all British Columbia newspapers, reads as follows:

Alittle over a year ago the wives, mothers, sisters and daughters of men overseas formed an Association known as the Great War Next-of-Kin Association.It has been the object of this association to give all help, comfort and sympathy to all returned men in any service either on land, sea or air, also to returned nurses.

They are opening a home in Victoria where any returned men or nurses can obtain a simple, homelike room and breakfast at a nominal charge. The Association is giving any person or organization the chance of perpetuating the memory of some one they have lost in the war by furnishing a bedroom or giving any other donation of money, furniture, etc., as a memorial. Any information wanted will be given by—Mrs. J. S. Harvey, President; Mrs. L. Powers, Convenor; Mrs. M. Davies, Secretary.

MRS. ANDERSON PASSES AWAY

Another heroine has given her life for the sick and afflicted of Fernie in the person of Mrs. Agnes Anderson, wife of Mr. A. F. Anderson of West Fernie, who passed away early this morning at the Fernie Hospital after a week of intense suffering from double pneumonia. Mrs. Anderson was as truly a heroine as though she had died doing her duty on the blood stained fields of France. When the call for nurses to [illegible] during the epidemic [illegible] the first [illegible] King [illegible] charge of [illegible] ...titution and worked day and night to relieve the suffering patients. During the final days of the epidemic she was suddenly stricken with pleura pneumonia which quickly developed into double pneumonia and resulted in her death this morning. Mrs. Anderson, during her residence here, endeared herself to every man, woman or child who knew her. She was ever engaged in looking after and helping those who were sick or in distress and the expressions that have been heard during her recent illness show the universal respect and love in which she was held. Her friends have suffered an irreparable loss and the City of Fernie loses a splendid woman.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were born in Norway and emigrated to Spring Valley, Wis., when they were quite young. About eleven years ago they came to Fernie and have resided here ever since Mrs. Anderson leaves a husband and three sons to mourn her death, Arthur, who is serving with the American flying corps in France, Harold, who is attending McGill University in Montreal and Oscar, with the Bank of Commerce staff at Saskatoon. The bereaved husband and sons have the sympathy of every citizen of Fernie.

GERMAN PROPAGANDA IN THE UNITED STATES

Propaganda! The world has been amazed at the extent and adroitness of German propaganda. America was blissfully unconscious that such a propaganda was active in this country long before the war broke out, and did not at first realize its gravity after the war had begun. Having so many people in this country of German ancestry, it was easy for the Hun to carry on his fiendish schemes. It is to the credit of such men as Francis P. Garvin, Director of the Bureau of Investigation, Attorney-General Lewis of New York and A. Mitchell Palmer, Alien Property Custodian, that many schemes have been brought to light and foiled. Two notable investigations by Mr. Garvin have been in the cases of the Bridgeport Projectile Company, of Bridgeport, Conn. financed by German money, the concern agreeing to sell no munitions to any country with which Germany was at war; and the operations of Von Bernstorff, German Ambassador, in the Chemical Exchange Association's plot to buy up all available carbolic acid and prevent its use in manufacturing trinitrotoluol for the Allies. Germany will have not only the hate of nations to deal with because of her brutal methods of war, but also a deep feeling of distrust because of spying and plotting, which only decades of good behavior can eradicate.

The latest reports say that Mrs. L. P. Sullivan, of Cranbrook, is improving after an attack of pneumonia.

The medium broad high toe is popular with many men who want a roomy wide-fitting shoe. Blucher: black or brown leathers, $6 to $10.

Better Value for Your Money

THE size and the resources of the producer have a big effect upon values. A large volume of business reduces the cost per unit of product. Great buying power means the ability to secure materials well in advance, and at lowest prices.

Ames Holden McCready supply the shoe requirements of a large part of the Canadian public. More than 5,000 dealers, in all sections of the country, sell A.H.M. shoes. No other Canadian shoe house has anything like this volume of output.

And in financial resources this company occupies the same dominant position. It is able to place contracts for materials far in advance of actual requirements, and at better prices than would be possible for smaller purchases. These facts are important in normal times; they are doubly important now.

The A.H.M. trade-mark on a shoe is a warranty of value based upon the large output and greatest buying power.

A.H.M. War-Time Selections offer Special Service Value for Men, Women and Children. Ask your dealer for them.

Freed from Chronic Pains

To those who are afflicted with the agonies of a chronic aching back, loss of strength, weight and vigor, the case of Mr. P. Herbert of Plesseville will appeal with special significance.

Mr. Herbert had suffered with Kidney trouble for years and failed to find a prescription that would give him any relief. Finally he tried Gin Pills because he was impressed by the fact that Gin Pills contained the beneficial ingredient of Juniper without any Alcohol being added.

Note these extracts from his letter:

"I suffered from Kidney trouble for several years, and tried numerous remedies without finding any permanent relief. My case appeared chronic.

I knew that Juniper without alcohol was excellent for the Kidneys, so decided to try Gin Pills. One single pill gave me great relief, and since taking four boxes, I find myself completely cured. I am no longer bad-tempered, have increased in weight, and am strong and vigorous again."

Here is another case. Mrs. M. E. Gardner, of Richmond, Que., writes:

"My husband was taken with severe kidney trouble last winter, and could not work for some time. He heard of Gin Pills, and after taking one box was able to resume his work. Two boxes relieved the pain in his back, and to-day he is well and strong again."

Gin Pills help others—surely they will do the same for you. Try them. 50c a box everywhere.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

SYNOPSIS OF

LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

For information apply to any Provincial Government Agent or to

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

OBITUARY

FRANCIS JAMES FRY

November fifth, nineteen eighteen, saw the passing of Francis James Fry, for some years Chairman of the House of J. S. Fry & Sons, Limited, of Bristol, England.

For nearly seventy years Mr. Fry held a leading position in the development of the House of Fry, and to his commercial genius, unfailing tact, and gracious courtesy the worldwide success of the House was very largely attributable.

It may be stated with confidence that Mr. Fry was a man who, while he had hosts of friends, never made an enemy in business, politics or religion—yet he consistently maintained independence of thought. His sterling honesty and his courteous tolerance of opposing views had always ensured him respect.

At the ripe age of eighty-four years, and after a long life of active usefulness, the Empire loses one of its Merchant Princes, and the World is today poorer by the loss of one of her finest Citizens.

Our deepest sympathy goes out to the bereaved family, and our hope that the sadness will be brightened by the memory of many kindly acts during the long life so nobly spent.

A Song for Every Mood

Music gives expression to every human emotion. All that is happy and beautiful in life, has been expressed in music.

When things seem bright and cheerful because a ray of happiness has come into your life, you need an outlet to give vent to your feelings.

When sorrow or depression comes, the need of consolation is even greater.

It is at such times that you derive the greatest comfort from

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

Then one sweet note of the voice of Anna Case, or one ripple of melody from the bow of Albert Spalding, puts your soul in harmony with the world. Music—real music—is one of life's greatest boons. Edison music is real music because the New Edison does not merely imitate, it re-creates. One never tires of the New Edison, the novelty never wears off, because there is no novelty to wear off. It is not just another "talking machine". It is decidedly different. To appreciate the difference you must hear it.

We will gladly submit the New Edison to your musical judgment either here or in your own home.

THEY PUT ON GLORY AS A COMMON COAT

In his Ode on the Tercentenary of Shakespeare's death, Robert Bridges, the poet laureate, turns to the unprepared youth of our time, who "lightly in the day of fury put on England's glory as a common coat." It is a striking phrase full of poetry and meaning, a phrase which the whole British Empire, Belgium, France and the Allies can make their own. And to think of the host of young Canadians, dead or living, or maimed who flocked to the colors because justice and liberty and the word of honour called, is to think of them in the laureate's glory as a common coat.

Illustrating the great paradox, we may, on grounds of military achievement, take pride in being a nation of farmers and fishermen, manufarturers and miners, lumbermen and shopkeepers. Has not our nation like all unprepared nations, produced the best fighters in this last and greatest Armageddon? When the battle went against them, did these quandom farmers and clerks and students and all new apprentices of war lay down their arms or complain or play the coward? They laid down their lives, they fought unyielding retreat, they doubled and redoubled determination to vanquish the hosts arrayed in all hell's strength of numbers and mechanism against them. These men of the desk and the market-place, the factory and the farm fought without flinching professional fighters of long training in the new and secret and diabolical science of war.

It was more than patriotism, even the unquestioned resolve, deep and quiet, of free men that freedom and the defence of the weak should not perish from the earth. It was the soul against the colossal machine, right against might. When our young men took the khaki and the gun, they put on Canada's glory like a common coat.—Manitoba Free Press.

"CASCARETS" WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—Take Cascarets tonight.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

NOTHING ELSE LIKE IT IN FERNIE

There has never been anything in Fernie with the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. ONE SPOONFUL flushes the ENTIRE bowel tract so completely it relieves ANY CASE sour stomach, gas or constipation and prevents appendicitis. The INSTANT, pleasant action of Adler-i-ka surprises both doctors and patients. A. W. Bleasdell, Druggist.

BEDRIDDEN WITH RHEUMATISM

Felt That He Would Never Walk Again "FRUIT-A-TIVES" Brought Relief.

MR. LORENZO LEDUC

3 Ottawa St., Hull, P.Q.

"Fruit-a-tives" is certainly a wonder. For a year, I suffered with Rheumatism; being forced to stay in bed for five months. I tried all kinds of medicine but without getting better; and thought I would never be able to walk again.

"One day while lying in bed, I read about 'Fruit-a-tives' the great fruit medicine; and it seemed just what I needed, so I decided to try it.

The first box helped me, and I took the tablets regularly until every trace of the Rheumatism left me.

I have every confidence in 'Fruit-a-tives' and strongly recommend them to every sufferer from Rheumatism".

PAN-GERMAN SOCIALISM

The Free Press has given up a great deal of space to the remarkable book recently published in Germany under the title "Three Years of World Revolution," written by Dr. Paul Lensch, a Socialist deputy; but too much attention can hardly be paid to this candid and unblushing revelations of German working-class Chauvinism. A special correspondent of the London Times, discussing Lensch's book, says:

Lensch attributes the German success in conquering foreign markets first, to the fact that Germany was really producing "a riper and higher form of economics," secondly, to the very fact that the movement started from such small beginnings and apparently hopeless prospects, and Germany positively profited from her political backwardness, which caused all the brains of the country to be thrown into economic organization, while other countries were spending their brains and activities upon "politics;" and, thirdly, to the fact that England was hopelessly wedded to obsolete traditions and barren "Liberal" ideas. Lensch's contempt for "Liberalism" and Free Trade is unbounded, Germany, he remarks, was helped at every turn by the rivalry of her enemies, and especially by the fact that England was "too proud to see' the meaning of Germany's successful wars between 1864 and1871. With the utmost gusto, he writes:

"Nothing is more teaching than the soft assurances of German politicians and professors about German peacefulness. Of course! Of Germany's subjective peacefulness there is no doubt. But that ought not to prevent us from recognizing that, regarded objectively, we are and must be the disturbers of the peace."

One might quote Lensch at length concerning the "death and burial" of "Liberalism," and the need for Germany to root out the last remnants of bourgeois faith in English "catch words" such as "freedom" and "democracy." For him all that is necessary is for Germany to break down old-fashioned political barriers in her stride towards world-power through ever greater state concentration. He is satisfied that the necessary amount of "freedom" will be granted to the German people, simply because that will be a necessary relief from the ever tighter domination by the state. For example, the Prussian franchise will be reformed because it has become the interest of German finance to remove such obstacles to German prestige abroad.

Particularly interesting are the passages in which Lensch ridicules the hesitation of "official" German Socialism "to recognize the tremendous historical mission of Germany." He attributes this to a traditional "humility" and sense of inferiority.

Lensch remarks that the German Socialist party became "a sexless Fatherland-saving party" and "dangerously approached pacifism." He repeatedly exults in the charges of barbarism that are levelled against Germany, and says that they are really a measure of foreign admiration. In one place he writes:

"They call us barbarians. So let it be! We ought to drop all our whimpering or horrified protests against the barbarism cry of the English—to say nothing of the French."

In general, Lensch holds that the German "mission" in this war was to overthrow both Russia and England. "Tsarism lies crushed upon the ground and the English world-despot will soon have also to descend from his throne." For France Lensch expresses the utmost contempt, and declares that it is almost a matter of indifference what attitude France may choose to adopt towards Germany after the war. According to him the main point is that "a weakened France has ceased to be the point of attraction for the neighborly small states, and especially for Belgium." Drunk as he is with the doctrine of the organized state going hand in hand with organized capital, Lensch attributes all the "weakness" of France to the fact that she did not after the revolution concentrate all her forces upon aggressive aims, as Prussia-Germany has done, but dissipated her energies and in particular became a nation of small holders.

As for Russia and the Balkans, Lensch easily regards them all as mere instruments of German policy and spheres of profitable invasion with whose peoples Germany will deal by separate "agreement."

The importance of Lensch's book lies in its candid, if boisterous, expression of what the ordinary German Socialists think but do not dare to say, and in its penetrating analysis of the economic foundations of militarism. Lensch regards England as the one great enemy, and he expects that England after the war will adopt protection and be "rejuveated" by faithful imitation of the whole Prussian state system, economic and military. What he has never attempted to face is the possibility that Germany's enemies will achieve real economic unity, and destroy the German system in the only way by which it can be destroyed—by the destruction of its economic foundations.

IMPROVED MINE-GAS DETECTOR

Although the electric safety lamp, as compared with flame safety lamps, is much safer in gaseous mines, not alone because it will not under any conditions ignite the gas present, but because it gives a better illumination than the flame safety lamps, it does not take the place of the flame safety lamp in one of the latter's most important functions, namely that of testing for the presence of dangerous gases.

There has long been a demand for some sort of an indicator or detector with which the presence of inflamable gas could be determined more accurately than with a safety lamp. Such an indicator, called the Burrell gas detector, has been developed by one of the chemists of the U. S. Bureau of Mines. For determining the presence of inflamable gases it has an advantage over a flame safety lamp because its use eliminates any error due to defects of vision, and anyone can easily determine the exact amount of gas present. Thus the detector not only makes unnecessary the use of the flame safety lamp but enables the proportion of gas present to be determined to within 0.1 per cent. The flame safety lamp enables the miner to estimate only roughly the amount of gas present. Moreover, the use of the detector is not limited to mines or to detecting fire damp, but can be used for proving the presence of any combustible gas such as gasoline vapor, hydrogen, natural gas, or coal gas.

Essentially the detector consists of a U-tube, one branch of which is inclosed in a metal case. To make the device ready for use the top is unscrewed and water is poured in until it fills the two branches and rises to the zero point on the scale.

To make a determination of combustible gas, say methane, in mine air, the valve is opened, and by blowing gently into the reservoir the operator depresses the water column along the scale and forces it up to the top on the other side. A slight click when the water strikes the valve tells the operator that it has risen to the required height. Then the operator pinches the rubber tube and takes the instrument to the place where the sample is to be collected. When the pressure on the rubber tube is released the water immediately comes back to its original position, and on falling sucks through the valve a sample of the air to be tested.

This sample rests in the combustion chamber in contact with a platinum spiral. The valve is closed and the spiral is electrically heated by use of the binding posts. Any combustible gas in the sample immediately begins to burn and at the end of a minute and a half is completely comsumed. The electric current is then turned off and the instrument is shaken, thus forcing the water into the combustion space and cooling the gases. Immediately the water column on the open-tube side falls to some point on the graduated scale as x, the exact point depending on the percentage of methane present. The scale reading opposite the water level shows the percentage.

The platinum wire can be heated by means of the storage battery of a miner's electric cap lamp, the battery being carried on a man's belt, and the current being switched from the lamp to the detector, as the tests are made. The device is 10 to 20 times as accurate as the safety lamp, weighs less, and has fewer and more durable parts. It has been adopted by the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company, Limited, at Coal Creek and Michel.—Mining and Engineering Record.

VICTOR HUGO

Of course he was a dreamer. His faith in the future was the faith of the seer and the poet. Were he living today he would still say what he said years ago. Such soul see beyond the present. No matter if it is night. They believe in the day. They know that after darkness, the light must come. This is what he said:

"A day will come when the only battle field will be the market open to commerce, and the mind opening to new ideas. A day will come when bullets and bomb-shells will be replaced by votes, by the universal suffrage of nations by arbitration of a sovereign senate, which will be to Europe what the Parliament is to England, the Diet to Germany, the Legislative Assembly to France. A day will come when a cannon ball will be exhibited in public museums just as an instrument of torture is now, and the people will be astonished how such a thing could have been. A day will come when these two immense groups, the United States of America and the United States of Europe, shall be seen extending the hand of fellowship across the ocean, exchanging their products, their industry, their arts, their genius, clearing the earth, peopling the deserts, improving creation under the eye of the Creator, and uniting for the good of all these two irresistable and infinite powers—the fraternity of men and the power of God."—F. H. R.

NEW FORM OF MINE RESCUE APPARATUS

After a long period of experiment the U. S. Bureau of Mines has developed a new form of oxygen breathing apparatus for use in poisonous or irrespirable atmospheres in mines after fires or explosions. It is called the Gibbs apparatus, after its chief designer, W. E. Gibbs, engineer of mine safety investigations, of the Bureau.

In such apparatus, as it is impracticable to compress into a portable tank enough air to supply the breathing needs of the wearer for the hour or two during which he remains in poisonous atmospheres, pure oxygen is used. In general, an oxygen rescue apparatus consists of a small tank of compressed oxygen, a reducing valve through which the oxygen flows to a mouthpiece connected to the breathing bag by flexible tubes, and a receptacle containing caustic soda for absorbing the carbon dioxide from the exhaled air. Valves that open and close at each breath prevent expired air from returning to the lungs before it has passed through the purifier.

To construct an apparatus of this kind would be relatively simple if it were not for the conditions under which the apparatus is worn. As rescue crews work in the unmapped wreckage following mine accidents in a presumably irrespirable atmosphere, and often in smoke so dense that their electric lamps are of small help, any failure of an oxygen rescue apparatus may mean death to the wearer. Moreover, the labor of exploration and rescue is often arduous, and the apparatus worn must be as light as is consistent with strength and yet strong enough to withstand the hard knocks it is sure to receive. It must be mechanically so perfect that it will not fail to function, and yet be so simple that it can be manipulated with safety in the dark and in surroundings that exhaust the wearer both physically and mentally.

The Gibbs apparatus, developed by the Bureau of Mines, differs from others in the following particulars:

By means of a new form of reducing valve the oxygen is supplied to the user at a variable rate which constantly adjusts itself to his immediate demands.

A new form of carbon dioxide absorber keeps the inspired air pure and prevents it from reaching an uncomfortably high temperature during the two-hour standard period of use.

The pressure guage, which indicates the available supply of oxygen, is read by touch. Thirty minutes before the supply is exhausted it rings an alarm.

The apparatus, a self-contained unit is carried wholly on the back of the wearer, so that his arms are unimpeded by the customary front breathing bag and its connections.

An aluminum cover incloses the whole apparatus and protects it from injury.

A pump within the mouthpiece permits the removal of saliva as fast as it is formed.

The apparatus has satisfactorily passed severe tests. In use it is expected to prove more satisfactory than any such device hitherto available. Consequently, the United States will be independent of foreign makers of breathing apparatus for its future supply.—Mining and Engineering Record.

DEMAND SOCIALIST GOVT. OF CANADA

Occupying every inch of the space, some of them clinging from rafters, more than 1000 members of the Socialist movement at the Labor Temple on Saturday night bitterly denounced the leaders of organized Labor as 'fakirs,' and the tools of the capitalists.

The meeting had been called by the district labor council for the purpose of protesting against the order-in-council which prevented strikes and lockouts and their regulation of labor propaganda in anything but the English language, which orders-in-council were rescinded during the week.

A Socialist member put up a resolution calling for a Socialist government in Canada, asking for the release of political prisoners and setting forth that "the present war had been won by the workingmen of Germany." He was loudly applauded.

The executive of the Trades and Labor Council said that there would be no further discussion and ordered the hall cleared.

INDIANS AFFECTED BY "FLU" EPIDEMIC

According to incomplete returns which have been received by Mr. W. E. Ditchburn, Chief Inspector for British Columbia of the Indian Department, the death toll among the Indian population of the Province from the Spanish influenza epidemic has been 1.62 per cent.

This percentage is based upon returns from 13 agencies throughout the Province, which are necessarily as yet incomplete. No report has yet been received from the Babine and Stickine agencies.

In the former the ravages of the epidemic are expected to be heavy, for the territory lies along the line of the G. T. P. railway, and in that section the epidemic was virulent. In the Stickine agency the disease is not expected to have proved at all severe, as, owing to its situation in the Far North and the lack of any centres of population, comparatively few cases have so far been reported there among the white population, and, con-

The Indian population of British Columbia is estimated to be 25,000 in round numbers and if the death rate is accepted at 1.62 per cent the total deaths would approximate up to date slightly over 400.

Reports from the various Indian schools of the province indicate that health conditions, so far as the epidemic is concerned, have been satisfactory. Prompt steps to isolate the institutions were taken by the Indian Department here, with the result that the ravages of the epidemic were greatly reduced and patients received prompt and careful attention. In fact, the reports which have reached Mr. Ditchburn show, where the Indians took ordinary precautions and obeyed the instructions from the department, the mortality was not greater than among the white population.

WAR SAVINGS STAMPS CAMPAIGN ANNOUNCED

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—Announcement is made that the government will inaugurate a war savings stamp campaign. The first war savings stamp has just been issued to his excellency the governor-general. The government will become the repository of the nation's savings up to a total of $50,000,000; savings will be placed with the government by means of the purchase of war savings stamps.

The stamps are to be redeemable in January, 1924. They are to be sold by the government at a price which will work out to an interest rate of somewhat better than 4½ per cent., compounded semi-annually, or 5 per cent. simple interest if computed at the end of the period. Thus in December, 1918, or January, 1919, a five dollar war savings stamp may be bought for four dollars. After January the purchase price of a war savings stamp will be increased month by month, but at the end of five years, from December, 1918 all stamps will be redeemed at $5.00 each.

Stamps of smaller determination, to be known as thrift stamps, will be on sale. When sixteen of them have been accumulated, they can be exchanged for a war savings stamp, worth five dollars at the end of the period.

The plan is expected to work out to the great advantage of both the people and the nation.

In all the nine provinces strong local organizations are being formed. These will, in turn, organize the municipalities, and the process of organization will be further carried out until it will embrace, so far as possible, every individual in the country.

VALUE OF RUBLE INCREASES

Vladivistok, Siberia, Nov. 18.—The value of the ruble continues to rise here. Today we got 7.50 for $1 in American money, against 9.70 a week ago. This shows a pretty regular improvement since the lowest mark last winter when 18 rubles were given for $1. The rise indicates an improvement both in confidence and business It has, however, no relation to the price in Russia proper.

The currency of the old empire is accepted in Vladivistok, but Bolshevik money is refused. In Khabarovsk the people take Bolshevik currency, including the most ragged paper notes, and kopecs which are like postage stamps.

Charlie O'Brien, who has been seriously ill in the Fernie hospital, is slowly recovering.

J. W. Robertson was called to Regina on Sunday, owing to the serious illness of his father-in-law.

Miss Khilgren, who has been visiting her sister in Calgary, is expected back tomorrow.

David Grundy, formerly an official of Michel Union, died the other day at Sirdar, B. C.

The soldiers' wives deserve special mention for their able work at the emergency hospitals during the "Flu" epidemic.

Mrs. H. Marshall wishes us to convey to her many friends her sincere thanks for their kindness during her recent bereavement.

Ernie Good, who for years was a well known brakeman on the M. F. & M., died at Crow's Nest on Sunday, of Spanish Influenza.

Harry Martin, of the M. F. & M., is around again after ten days in bed. Harry's entire family were ill, but have all recovered.

Mr. George Monks and family desire to thank all their relatives and friends for their kind expressions of sympathy and floral tributes during their sad bereavement.

A local moonshiner who has been experimenting with the manufacture of different brands of booze, says he can now produce anything you want out of one barrel.

Bob Schram, after having been given up by the doctors several times, was able to leave the Napanee Hospital this week and is rapidly recovering.

Mrs. Anderson, of the Coal Creek boarding house, was brought down to the Fernie hospital on Wednesday. She is suffering from a serious attack of pneumonia.

Bob Jones, of West Fernie, has recovered from the "Flu" and is now busy making arrangements for the Poultry Show, which takes place in Fernie on December 4th and 5th.

Archie Nicholson, who was taken to the New Westminster hospital suffering from an impaired mind about a month ago, died this week at that place. Deceased leaves a wife and several children in Fernie.

The Ukrainian prisoners in the Fernie jail, charged with having seditious literature in their possession, have asked for a change of trial judge. They object to magistrate Whimster on the ground of prejudice. A. McNeill is appearing for the accused.

Mrs. Isaac Cartmell and family wish to thank all those who were so kind to them in their recent bereavement, especially Mrs. Duthie and Dr. Workman; also the C. C. L. & A. A. and Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Johnson for wreaths.

Sherwood Young Serville, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Serville, who was born in the emergency hospital and called after these two hustling organizers of the relief work, R. M. Young and Sherwood Herchmer, died on Monday last.

Through mud, water and snow, district organizer Mitchell, Tom Cole, Matt. Whitelaw and the wheel in charge of old reliable Al. Rizutto, made the trip to Crow's Nest last Saturday on behalf of the Victory Loan, and brought back several hundred dollars.

Jimmy Johnstone was around this week rustling names for the Curling Club for this winter. He secured 89 members and expects that there will be over a hundred. Any new members desiring to join will kindly hand in their names to Mr. Johnstone. The ice man has already started work at the rink and the club expect to have everything in shape very shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. Paddy Hughes and Mrs. Harry Dunlap arrived on Tuesday from Brule, bringing with them the bodies of the two Dunlap boys, who died of the Influenza at that camp. Paddy says the epidemic was very severe in Brule and the hospital accomodation and nursing facilities were very poor. Eight persons had died there up to the time he left and there were still quite a number of bad cases.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dunlap were again called upon this week to bear an additional sorrow in the death of another son, Alexander, of Brule. The younger son, Bonnell, died about a week ago at that camp and both boys were brought here on Tuesday for interment. Both lads were the victims of pneumonia resulting from Influenza. Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap have the sympathy of the town in their sad bereavement, having lost three sons in the past year, Angus being killed at the front a year ago. The funeral which was largely attended took place yesterday .

CARRY ON

The war is ended but the work of the Red Cross Society has not ceased, for supplies will be needed just so long as the wounded are in hospitals, and so long as the expiditionary force remains in Russia and Siberia. There will be a tendency to relax effort because an Armistice has been signed. Many persons wil not believe in the need of Red Cross supplies any longer. If they stop to think they will realize there are still many thousands of men in hospitals who will need comforts just as in the past. Victoria's wonderful Red Cross effort, which cannot be praised too highly or too often, would still be incomplete if any tendency towards discontinuing work is shown. Until all need for supplies has vanished our workers, who have labored so meritoriously, must carry on, so that no discomfort will be experienced in any of the hospitals where there are men who have fought in the war.—Colonist.

The I. O. D. E. hope to be back in their rooms next week and will take up their work along these lines.

Make Clothes For Refugees

Given a few samples of the native garments of France and Serbia, together with several sketches and written directions and asked to interest the women of the fifteen hundred branches of the Canadian Red Cross Society, the individual chapters of the Daughters of the Empire and the numberless auxiliary working circles throughout Canada are engaged in the making of endless quantities of garments for the repatriated civilian populations of the allied nations. It would seem a hopeless task to any but a band of workers trained by four year's actual experience to cope with any emergency. While the scheme is as yet in the first stages of evolution, its shape can easily be discerned at no great distance ahead.

Custom in certain countries demands certain variations in wearing apparel; hence the sample garments. In kindness to those who have so suffered and must look to a sympathetic ally for the bare necessities of life, the refugee clothing should conform to the prevailing mode of dress. This meant samples for multitudinous working branches the country over. Another step had to be taken by the sub-committee.

Plainly, the few samples on hand must be copied and supplemented by samples of the many other garments described. The Toronto branch of the Red Cross, with its 300 auxiliaries, was asked to co-operate with the Central Emergency Department and make samples from samples for samples. The request had only to be made to meet with instant response and beginning this afternoon working parties will make up many odd-looking, more or less shapeless garments of flanelette, heavy unbleached cotton cloth, etc. The city chapter of the I. O. D. E. will unite in this work. As fast as the Emergency Department can supply the initial sample, material and pattern, the auxiliary sets to work to reproduce it times without number. In its turn the Central Pattern Department will send out samples in response to the requests which are already coming in from all parts of Canada.—Toronto Globe.

Married Men and Veterans To Leave First

The following order was despatched Saturday to officers commanding all military districts:

General demobilization—as a result of cessation of hostilities and information just received from overseas, the forces in Canada will be reduced at once in accordance with instructions which will be issued from time to time.

In order to bring about necessary co-ordination, a special meeting of the cabinet has been appointed under the chairmanship of Hon. J. A. Calder.

The first step will be a drastic reduction of all military establishments in Canada, bringing these down to absolute requirements for the operations of demobilization, the care of soldiers in hospitals and aid of the civil powers.

For demobilization itself, a considerable force will be required at militia headquarters, at headquarters of military districts and district depots, which have been organized for the express purpose of carrying out demobilization. In addition there will be the personel required in connection with the medical services and dental services. Subject to the foregoing and to the maintenance of a moderate force in aid of the civil forces demobilization of troops in Canada will be carried out as rapidly as possible by reference to the following classes:

Returned soldiers and married men who can be spared and who are desirous of discharge.

Men in lower categories who have been held for various duties in Canada, and who can now be spared.

Men who can be spared, whose occupations are such as to make them urgently required in civil life for economic reasons.

All other men whose services are not required.

Orders already have been issued that all men serving in Canada, and who so desire, and who were originally railway employees, are to be discharged immediately.

There are 71,000 men in khaki in Canada, of whom 10,000 are returned men in hospitals and convalescent homes. Members of the draft comprising the remainder will be demobilized almost immediately in order of preference, according to employment, and the task is not expected to occupy any considerable length of time.

Women and children overseas will be brought back as speedily as possible in the interval between the present and the time armistice terms have been satisfactorily carried out Thereafter Canadian soldiers will begin to arrive at the rate 20,000 a month.

A number of young people spent an enjoyable evening at Morrissey on Monday last, when a motor trip was followed by a short dance.

16. Owners of birds may offer for sale by making arrangements with the Secretary. A commission of 10 per cent will be charged by the Association.

17. There must be three or more entries before 1st prize will be paid.

18. During the show the Superintendent will have absolute charge of all exhibits entered and no bird must be handled or removed without his consent. Any party infringing this rule will forfeit any prizes awarded them.

19. In any class if in the judge's opinion a bird is not worthy of 1st prize it shall be placed accordingly.

20. In every show there is more or less complaint on the part of exhibitors over some awards. This is usually occasioned by some disgruntled exhibitor or would-be judge, who hopes to gain prestige in the eyes of the loser by finding fault with the work of the judges. It gains them nothing and becomes disgusting to all fair minded exhibitors., and we propose to eliminate this worthless feature from the show. When we find exhibitors who insist on nonsensical "kicking" and fault finding, where there is no cause for complaint, we shall list them and refuse their entries at future exhibitions. We do not intend to take any rights away from our exhibitors, but we do intend to cut out once and for all the silly system of "knocking" that is sometimes indulged in.

PEACE

Only in times of great trial and in times of great mercies is there brought home to us a full sense of the greatness of our imperfections. When the peace of the world is unbroken and unthreatened we hold it in so little value that we never even think of it. It takes an experience of war to teach us how to prize that gift of God, concord among nations. To our shame be it said, it is not in long periods of unalloyed peace that our human nature shows to the best advantage. When there are no enemies to be fought we tend to grow selfish and hard-hearted. Defensive war brings out the heroic spirit, and schools even the non-combatant part of the population in at least the virtue of self-denial. To many at home war brings anxieties and bereavements whose discipline fits them for better things than they before thought themslves capable of. The peace that now descends upon the world after being sought after through the valley of the shadow of death by hundreds of thousands of brave Canadians is one that will surely be held precious by Canadians for ages to come. To learn how blessed a thing peace is it will surely not be necessary for our people to be plunged in the horrors of war in the future. Let their fathers tell them. To the world as a whole the peace that comes after this awful war must be as the new joy in life the convalescent soldier feels who has been long hovering near death's door. May the peace that has been won by the valor of our defenders abide with the world, and may our people never forget to be fervently thankful for it.

There is peace for us and peace for our enemies, but what a difference! Theirs is the peace of the vanquished, ours the peace of the victorious. Had the fortunes of war been reversed, had ours been the lot to bow to unconditional surrender, the cup of peace would have been not a sweet but a bitter draught. Germany and her allies have the peace that is the portion of the proud spirit brought low They have the peace of the oppressor, strong in his own strength, but overcome by the arms of the righteous. No other nation ever went forth to war armed with such fearful powers of destruction as Germany in 1914, and none ever had such seeming assurance of victory. Truly none was ever forced to yield more completely to a conqueror than that same mighty Germany. Her army has been reduced to a shadow of its former greatness. Her navy has had to be surrendered. The territory she won in this war and the Provinces she seized in her former war with France have had to be given up. Her prisoners must be released, and that without reciprocal action by the Entente Nations. There is no example in history of greater haughtiness and power being brought to the dust. Truly it is the Lord's doing!

VINOL MAKES GOOD BLOOD

Positive—Convincing Proof

Many so-called remedies for anaemia are only so in name. Their makers are afraid to prove their claims by telling what their medicines contain.

The only way to be honest with the people is to let them know what they are paying for. Here is the Vinol formula. When the doctor knows what a medicine contains, it ceases to be a "patent" medicine.

℞ Cod Liver and Beef Peptones, Iron and Manganese Peptonates, Iron and Ammonium Citrate, Lime and Soda Glycerophosphates, Cascarin.

Any doctor will tell you that the ingredients of Vinol, as named above, will enrich the blood and banish anaemia and create strength. When the blood is pure and rich and red, the body is strong and robust.

You can prove this at our expense because your money will be returned if Vinol does not improve your health.

JAIL MATRON BEATEN BY FEMALE PRISONERS

When they were about to be locked in their cells for the night, three women prisoners incarcerated at the Toronto Jail turned upon the matron, Mrs. K. N. Sinclair, and commenced to beat her with their fists and anything else they could obtain. The matron overpowered, they then sought to escape from the building, but were caught by the guards before they could get out.

No information regarding the injuries sustained by Mrs. Sinclair could be obtained, the guards refusing to talk. When asked concerning the attempted jail-break, they discounted the affair by stating that the trouble was of little account.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a small bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

CANADIAN DEAD IN PRETTY SPOT

The most remarkable of all the military burial places which have filled the soil of Europe and of Britain with the bodies of the bravest of the brave is at Taplow, the home of the Waldorf Astors and adjoining the country home King George at Windsor. Certainly, it is the most unique.

The Canadian hospital at Taplow had its beginning in the thought of Mrs. Astor to convert the indoor tennis court on the Astor estate into a hospital for Canadians. This, by the way, was the first of the many Canadian hospitals in Great Britain. The Canadians had begun to return wounded from France, in the early part of 1915, and having no hospital of heir own it was the happy idea of Mrs. Astor that her large playhouse, capable of holding 200 beds, should be turned over to the military authorities for this purpose. The Canadian government was prompt to receive the con ribution, and Canadians as a whole will always entertain a sense of deep gratitude to the graceful hostess of Cliveden. From that small beginning has grown one of the most important of the hospitals that crowd Britain. Two hundred wounded Canadians had just arrived from France when we were at Taplow the last week in August of this year. They had been wounded only four or five days previously, showing the speed with which they are passed back from the battlefield to these wonderful institutions where they may have care and rest. But all this is another story. We were speaking of burial places for the honored dead.

The present Mrs. Astor was one of four Virginia girls famous for their beauty when she married Major Astor and went to England to live. The major's mother was deceased, and Mr. Astor had in course of construction a memorial to her when the war broke. This memorial took the form of a height of perhaps 20 feet, and having a like diameter, being circular. The walls were of fine marble, but it was when one looked within that the great beauty and richness of the chapel appeared. The windows are of rarest glass, and the walls are decora ed by famous painters. I heard from an officer at Taplow that the chapel cost a million dollars.

"When the war grew worse," said Mrs. Astor. "and we saw that it was certain to continue into a dreadful calamity, my husband and I decided, as perhaps many soldiers would die at our hospital—you know, I like to think of it that way—that we would desist from the original idea of a memorial chapel to mother and instead create it as a chapel to the brave fellows who might die here. From that idea grew the further one of providing a burial ground on the estate. The idea was no sooner conceived than we carried it into effect."

And then we were conducted to see the fruition of the idea—what I have called the most remarkable of all military cemeteries. Passing along the hillside in the midst of the gorgeous English landscape on this watershed of the Thames, we came to an Italian garden. The garden is built into the hillside, and is complete with Italian marbles and statuary. The landscape gardener has produced something rare and magnificent. This is the burial ground of which I write. The Italian garden remains, but it is not merely such. Twenty-seven graves, indicated by flat slabs over the burial places and each bearing the name and regimental standing of the deceased, occupied positions on the green sward. Trees brought from Italy and planted on the hillside overlook the graves, and among them there is murh shrubbery and natural growths peculiar to the land of sunshine.

From the garden-cemetery one looks off toward the river that leads out to the sea. The Astor yacht was at anchor a mile distant, with the sunshine playing on its brasses and its shining decks. In the valley a herd of thoroughbred cattle were feeding. A flock of sheep were climbing the hills oposite in the distance. Windsor Castle was just behind the forest of trees to the left, but no other human habitation was within view. One could not imagine a more restful picture, where sleep these heroes—not all of them Canadians, but for the most part so.

DO IT NOW

Ministers of the Gospel have never gone on strike for higher pay and never will, but without exception, there is no class more deserving of better salaries. The acceptable educational qualification for a minister is his possession of academic and theological degrees. As theological students do not generally come from the well-to-do, many ministers begin their professional careers under the handicap of debt in securing an education, and it may take years to wipe out their obligations.

The pastor of a church must be a social and spiritual leader, an organizer ad executive, and many times the manager of the financial affairs of his parish. For all this he receives on the average far less than a day laborer. The average in ten of the largest denominations is less than $1800 a year. In the smaller denominations and those whose constituency is largely rural the average is far less. Yet he is expected to keep up with the best standard of living in the community, to be well read, well attired and up-to-date, and somehow to worry along without a word of complaint. Under all the circumstances it is remarkable he does so well, an achievement in which the mistress of the manse, always busy and often overworked, has no small part.

In these days when Government expenses are in billions, when millions are freely given to war work, when living is so high and when more money is in circulation than ever before in the nation's history, it is only common justice for every congregation in the land to dig down into its pockets and increase the minister's salary. Do it now!

WHAT KIND OF SOCIALISM

The Washington correspondent of the New York Post says that during the last month President Wilson has been more worried over the prospect of anarchy in Europe than anything else. "He knew that when the German request for an armistice came Germany was on the road to collapse, and his concern was how to manage the situation without forcing Bolshevism on Germany, a disease of such contagion that if left unchecked might spread to neighboring countries." His effort was "to assist the Socialist-Democrats of Germany into power, and to render such co-operation as would prevent Germany from becoming another Russia—ruled by the red flag of terror."

It is for this reason, as well as for humanity's sake, that President Wilson is anxious about the supply of food to Germany. "Hunger," he says, "does not breed reform; it breeds madness and all the ugly distempers that make an ordered life impossible."

Many different things are signified by the word Socialism. There are differences even among its own advocates, while among its foes Socialism may mean anything all the way from old age pensions to Bolshevism. Liebnecht, who suffered imprisonment for his opinions in Germany, is among the moderates. He denounces the idea of class warfare. "We include in the working class," he says, "all those who live exclusively or pricipally by their own labor, and who do not grow rich from the work of others." If Socialism is to prevail all over Germany, Austria-Hungary, Poland and Russia, if it is to be powerful in France and Italy, if it is to have influence in England, it is in the interest of humanity that it shall be of the constructive and not of the destructive kind. We have had enough of war, and we do not want the spirit of international war carried into industry. We cannot be indifferent to the character of German Socialism because it is of the essence of the movement that it leaps over the boundaries that divide nation from nation—Toronto Star.

SOUR, ACID STOMACHS, GASES OR INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" neutralizes excessive acid in stomach, relieving dyspepsia, heartburn and distress at once.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress, due to acidity, will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest stomach sweetener in the whole world, and besides it is harmless. Put an end to stomach distress at once by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder caused by fermentation due to excessive acids in stomach.

H. G. LOCKHART PASSES AWAY

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Rudnicki received a wire from Vancouver yesterday stating that their son-in-law, Capt. H. G. Lockhart, had just died from complications, following an attack of influenza.

Deceased was a well known old timer in Fernie, having come here early in 1899. In 1900 he enlisted and went overseas with a contingent for South Africa and served during the balance of the war. He returned to Fernie after the war and lived here for many years. About seven years ago he moved to Natal and later became identified with G. B. Stedman in the Michel Liquor Co., in which he made considerable money in the final days before prohibition. About six months ago he moved to Vancouver, where he resided until the time of his death. He leaves a wife and two children. His parents reside at Moncton, N.B.

Coal Creek Methodist Church

Sunday, Dec. 1, Reopening services:
Sunday School at 2.30 p.m.
Evening service at 7.30 p.m.
Special Memorial Service for the late Mr. Gerard, Mr. Cartmel, Mrs. Monks and Mr. John Boardman, who have recently died during the epidemic. All their friends are invited to attend.

Bishop Black, Pastor.

Christ Church

The ban being lifted this church will be re-opened for services on Sunday:

Matins and Holy Communion at 11 a.m.

Evensong, 7.30 p.m.

Sunday School, 2.30 p.m.

Sunday is the first in the Advent season and at the morning service the Bishop's annual Advent Pastoral will be read. Sunday has also been appointed to be observed as a day of Thanksgiving for Victory and the cessation of hostilities. The Holy Communion or the Holy Eucharist as it is called, is the highest act of Christian worship and all communicants should make a special effort to be present. The evening service will be largely musical, a service of song and praise to God for the triumph of our cause.

The church committee will meet in the church basement after the evening service.

JIM CORRIGAN KILLED AT FRONT

Neil McCallum received word the other day from England that his brother-in-law, big Jim Corrigan, of Fernie, had been killed in action in the last big fight of the war.

Jim, who was a well-known football player in Fernie before the war, was the first man to leave this town for the front. He was a reservist in the Cameron Highlanders and joined his regiment as soon as he could get overseas. His career at the front was one long tale of adventure. Seven times wounded he was brought back from England time after time to again take his place on the firing line. He was an ideal fighting man and a hero whom Fernie citizens shall always remember with pride. Jim's name should be the first on any memorial that this town erects to the memory of our noble dead.

Most of the Fernie teaching staff have departed from the city. The Misses Hamil are at Armstrong, Miss Crocker is at Vegreville, Alta.; Miss McEwen and Miss O'Hearn are at Chilliwack, Miss Wade and Miss McLachlan are at New Westminster; Miss Pye and Miss Gilchrist are at Vancouver; Miss Walls at Victoria; Miss Bell at Vernon, and Miss McVicar at Nelson.

CITY FATHERS IN SESSION

The regular meeting of the city fathers took place last evening with all the members present with the exception of Mayor Thomson, who is ill.

A communication was received from the Coal Co. stating that the price of coal for the power house would be $4.88 per ton until further notice.

The C.P.R. wrote asking for a reduction in water rates.

The question of raising the salary of the City Electrician came up but was laid over until the next meeting.

Acting Mayor Beck stated that the health committee had decided to lift the ban on Saturday night at 12 o'clock.

Dicken—Jackson—That we appoint a committee to go into the question of the power rights from Fairy Creek with the intention of using it for electric power purposes.

Rutledge-Dudley—That the City Clerk be instructed to issue deeds re all tax sale properties which have not been redeemed and that he have all property purchased by the Corporation registered.

Dicken-Rutledge — That the Clerk be instructed to serve notices on the late owners and tenants (if any) of the following property: Lot 4, Block 9; Lot 2, Block 22; Lot 2, Block 30; E 1-2 6 and 7, Block 48; and other property purchased at 1917 tax sale, that said property is now owned by the Corporation and that all rents are to be paid to the City Clerk.

Dicken-Hunter — That the City Clerk be authorized to find out cost of suitable bronze tablets for the purpose of putting up a monument or drinking fountain in honor of the men who have made the supreme sacifice in the world's war.

Ald. Dudley, Ald. Hunter and the Mayor were appointed a Court of Revision on the city voters' list.

Geo. Goole was engaged as driver of the fire team at a salary of $89.25 a month.

Hunter-Dicken—That the following rates of pay be granted for nursing at the emergency hospital: Mr. Hesketh, 50c per hour; Mr. Wilkes, 50c per hour; Mrs. A. Dick, $40 per week; Mr. A. Lees, 30c per hour.

SOLDIERS' DEPENDENTS GET INCREASE

Thos. Uphill has handed us the following schedule showing the increases in the patriotic allowances to soldiers dependents. The increase for November will be put on the December checks as the Secretary had not time to make the adjustment for November:

The National Executive has authorized the new schedule which follows, to be effective from the first of November. It may also be pointed out that the Militia Department has decided to increase the Separation Allowance to the dependents of all privates and non-commission officers to $30 per month. This, together with assigned pay, will amount to $45 per month.

Childless wives and widowed mothers without children remain as before on the $10 basis. Widowed mothers with children who were, prior to the soldier's enlistment solely dependent, may be placed upon the same basis as a wife with children. Therefore the grant to wives or widowed mothers, solely dependent, with children, is placed at $20 per month instead of $17.50 as formerly and grants will in future be paid on account of each child according to age as follows: Up to five years, $4 per month; between five and ten years $6; between ten and fifteen years, $9. The former plan of paying only one the maximum, one the medium and the others at the minimum, has been done away with. Each child is to be paid on the basis of its age, according to the schedule given.

In the case of children at school, the age limits may be extended for boys to 16 and girls to 17 years.

Deductions on account of earning by members of the family: In future $40 may be allowed as exempt and 50 per cent of the balance is to be taken into account in fixing grants.

All other rules and regulations which have been in effect during the past year are to be continued.

The usual deduction on account of free house rent and other sources of income will, of course, be taken account of as formerly.

As many of the cases have been in effect for 2, 3, and 4 years, children who come in on the Fund at the time the application was taken around the ages of 13 and 14, should be carefully investigated and where they have passed the age limit such children must be deleted from the grant.

The maximum grant to any family from the Fund which was formerly placed at $45 has been raised to $50 no matter how many children there may be.

I am directed by the National Executive, when sending out this circular letter to request all committees to continue their best efforts in maintaining collections up to and including the 31st March next. It is expected that it will take at least twelve months in which to bring the men home, so that work must be continued during that period and possibly some little time afterward. However, after the 31st of March next we are advised that the government will make up any deficit which may be necessary to carry on the work.

"BUCK" RAINIE DEAD

On Tuesday afternoon at about 3.30 o'clock, Henry Rainie, the Fort Steel to Rampart mail carrier, dropped dead while preparing to make his afternoon trip. "Buck," as he was generally known, was an old timer in Fort Steele, having driven the stage 20 years and is a veteran of the American civil war. He will be buried at Fort Steele cemetery on Wednesday at 2 o'clock, following service at the Presbyterian church.

KILLED ON RY. TRACK

The formal inquest touching the death of Frank Rathbone, who was instantly killed near here on Wednesday afternoon while walking on the track from Coal Creek to the city, was held last evening. Owing to Coroner G. B. Thomson being confined to his bed suffering from influenza, Coroner A. C. Murray, of Natal, officiated. The jury was composed of H. E. Douglas, foreman; E. L. Brown, L. E. McDonald, R. Sherwood, Ed. Marsham and Dominic Citra. Evidence given by the engine crew was to the effect that the engineer noticed deceased walking some distance in front of the train when he rounded a curve. He immediately blew a crossing signal and rang the bell and continued to blow the whistle to warn the man until he was struck. The train, consisting of three loads of coal and a coach was brought to a standstill within six car lengths after the accident. Evidence also showed that the deceased was stone deaf, he carrying writing pad and when asking question required those to write their answers. He had that day applied for work as laborer at the mines. Train crew and passengers corroborated that the engineer blew the whistle continuously and vigorously applied brakes.

Deceased was a stranger here, arriving here only a few days ago from Lucky Strike, Alta., near Foremost. He was apparently about 55 years of age. The police have been in communication with H. Sturtevant, of Foremost, whose address was found on the body and notification has been received that this party will arrive here on Sunday to take charge of the remains.

The jury in their verdict found Rathbone had come to his death by being struck by a railway train; that he was quite deaf; and that no blame could be attached to the train crew in charge; and that every effort had been made by Engineer Falconer to warn the man and stop the train.

TAKE IN THE POULTRY SHOW

Every citizen of Fernie should take sufficient interest in the Poultry Show which opens in Fernie on Wednesday, to visit that exhibition. It will be time well spent and a lot of people will have their eyes opened at the beautiful stock of birds that is being raised in this district.

The local organization that has gone to the trouble and expense of pulling off one of these exhibitions certainly deserves the patronage of every citizen.

Private John Boardman, of Coal Creek, who returned recently from military service in France with the 54th Batt., died on Friday last at the home of his brother, Constable Jos. Boardman, at Coal Creek. Private Boardman, who was a victim of influenza, had been ill for about three weeks. He was buried with military honors on Wednesday, all the soldiers and returned men attending in a body.

DECISIONS ARE GIVEN

His Honor Judge Thompson gave the following decision yesterday in the appeal against the judgment of R. Hewat, fining the Flathead Hotel Co. $1000 for the unlawful sale of liquor:

This is an appeal from Ronald Hewat, Esquire, Stipendiary Magistrate, whereby the appellant company was convicted of having liquor in its possession in a place other than the dwelling house in which it resided. The appellant company through its manager pleaded guilty and the magistrate inflicted a fine of $1000. There is no doubt but that the magistrate inflicted the maximum fine under a misapprehension of the meaning of the Act. In his belief he had no power to inflict a lesser fine; if he had had that power he would have inflicted a fine of lesser amount.

Objection was taken by the respondent's counsel to the appeal on the ground that the appellant having pleaded guilty had no right to appeal. This point has been considered in two cases—Regina v. Bowman, 2 C.C.C. 82. In this case the accused pleaded guilty and was fined the maximum fine. The magistrate prior to inflicting sentence had asked questions of the prosecutor and others regarding the existence of malice in the defendant's mind, so as to arrive at the extent of the fine he thought fit to impose, and apparently as a result of the questions and answers, had inflicted the maximum fine. Mr. Justice Martin refused to interfere on the ground that the magistrate had exercised his discretion, and that he did not prevent the defendant from rebutting the inference of malice, nor had he acted oppressively. In this case, however, the magistrate exercised his discretion and in the exercise of that discretion had imposed the maximum fine.

Another case to which I was referred was that of Rex v. Baird, 13 C.C.C. 240. In this case the accused pleaded guilty; the magistrate had then inflicted a maximum penalty and in addition a term of imprisonment, the latter being beyond his jurisdiction. The learned judge before whom the appeal was heard, allowed the appeal and reviewed the sentence. The case before me is not analogous with either Regina v. Bowman or Rex v. Baird. In the latter case the magistrate had inflicted a punishment beyond his jurisdiction. I myself believe that the proper remedy of the accused in the latter case was that of certiorari, but I need not consider it as it is not analagous with the presnt case before me.

Regina v. Bowman differs from the present case in that in the former the magistrate had exercised his discretion, in the present case the magistrate did not exercise his discretion but under mistaken view of the Act inflicted the maximum fine, believing that he could inflict no other. I therefore believe that I have a right to allow the appeal on this point and review the sentence.

The next objection taken by the respondent's counsel is that no affidavit of merits has been filed as provided by section 54 of the Prohibition Act. It is quite obvious that the accused having pleaded guilty could not make an affidavit denying his guilt. The Act is clearly at fault in this respect in that while an accused person may be guilty of the offence charged the punishment inflicted may be, in this case, excessive and he has no remedy.

Mr. Herchmer argued that in the case of a corporation no affidavit of merits is necessary. Section 54, in part reads as follows: "No appeal shall lie from conviction . . unless the party appealing shall make an affidavit of merits." Throughout all the Act the word person is used except in sections 53 and 54, which deal with appeals. Even in section 55, which enacts that a conviction shall not be quashed for want of form uses the word person. The word person has a clear and distinct meaning under the Interpretation Act; section 26, sub-section 19. It includes any body corporate, body politic or party. Mr. Herchmer therefore argues that the word party is used in a separate and distinct sense than that of body corporate or body politic and applies only to an individual. The whole question therefore comes down to the meaning of the word party.

As I have said, all through the Act, excepting in sections 53 and 54, the word person is used, so that section 11, for example, would read "no person including a body corporate, body politic or party, shall have liquor, etc,' but sections 53 and 54 only speak of "a party." Mr. Herchmer argues that the express exclusion of the words body politic or body corporate would indicate that the word party applied only to an individual.

Section 45 of the Interpretation Act reads as follows: "Every provision of an Act relating to offences punishable on summary conviction shall, unless the contrary intention appears, be deemed to refer to bodies corporate as well as to persons." Therefore even though I were to take the view that the word party means only an individual, section 45 of the Interpretation Act makes that section apply to bodies corporate, and a body corporate therefore is bound to furnish what is called an affidavit of merits as well as an individual. Even though this were not the case, however, I would with considerable doubt hold that the word party means a party to the appeal, which would include a body corporate as well as an individual. I must therefore hold that as no affidavit of merits has been filed the appeal has not been properly launched.

As I have before indicated, it seems to me the Act is defective in this respect; no matter what sentence is imposed by a magistrate or the justice of the peace for the infraction of the Act, neither certiorari nor appeal lies unless the accused is able to swear that he was not guilty of the offence. In almost universal practice it has prevailed that unless there be special circumstances, a first offender should not have the maximum sentence inflicted upon him, and it is agreed that the magistrate, had he not misdirected himself on a point of law, would not in this instance have imposed the maximum sentence. It is not, however, the province of the courts to correct a manifest injustice where the Act is clear and distinct.

With regret, therefore, I must dismiss the appeal with costs, which I fix at $50 and disbursements.

The following judgment was also given in the case of E. Bigattino, of Michel:

This is an appeal from a conviction made by J. Dixon, Esquire, Justice of the Peace in and for the County of Kootenay, whereby the appellant was convicted that he did by himself have and keep liquor in a place other than in the private house in which he resides. Two distinct offences are charged in the information and the accused was convicted of both offences, namely, of "having" and "keeping."

The conviction is clearly wrong on the face of it. The wording of section No. 11 is that "no person shall have, or keep or give." There is no such offence as having and keeping liquor. Had the objection therefore been taken on the appeal that the information and conviction disclosed no offence under the Act I would have sustained it. Rightly or wrongly, however, I called upon the Crown to elect on which charge the accused had been charged and convicted. The Crown elected to charge the accused with "having liquor in a place other than the dwelling house in which he resided."

The facts briefly are as follows: One Bossio had some liquor in his possession in an unlawful place. He desired to have the liquor moved to another place and engaged the appellant to move it apparently along with some other stuff. The appellant knew that he was moving liquor. Bossio accompanied the appellant during the removal. Bossio was charged with having liquor in an unlawful place and was convicted. The appellant now contends that the liquor was in the possession of Bossio and that he had no possession whatsoever of it and that therefore he could not be charged with having liquor in his possession. In other words, that the liquor could not be in possession of two men at the same time unless they had joint ownership or possession.

In my opinion the word "have" as used in the Act denotes possession and the possession must be an actual physical possession of the liquor. The best example I can think of is that which I put to the respondent's counsel on the argument. If a traveller checks his suit case the suit case is then in the possession of the railway campany, but if he takes his suit case on to the car in no way has the railway company possession of the suit case; the passenger retains it in his own possession. In this case Bossio had possession of the liquor; he never parted with it. The appellant was merely hired to convey the liquor from one place to another and Bossio could have taken the liquor off the rig at any time. Were it being lawfully conveyed and had it been destroyed by the action of some third party the appellant would have no

THE EX-KAISER'S FUTURE

A strong movement has begun in the French parliament for the trial and punishment of the German leaders who caused the war, and who ordered the infamously cruel conduct of the German army and navy. The appeal from the Bavarian Socialist administration that all guilty ones, including the Kaiser, von Tirpitz, von Holtzendorff, Ludendorff, the governors of Belgium, etc., shall be punished, shows that the new German opinion recognizes the justice of the demand. The British Attorney-General, Sir F. E. Smith, who has argued publicly in favor of an international court to give the monsters a trial, found his proposition received warm support from British people.

In view of the trend of popular opinion in the Allied countries, what means the clause added to the armistice terms: "No person shall be prosecuted for offences or participation in war measures prior to the signing of the armistice?" The British Weekly, the leading Nonconformist journal of Britain, is asking pointedly if the Kaiser is to be protected as was King Constantine for so long. It is generally understood that the shielding influence in Constantine's case came from the Russian court, but there is no Russian Court now to stand between the Kaiser and justice.

There is no doubt that the Kaiser is not wholly responsible for Germany's war policy. The storm that followed his interview with the London Telegraph showed that Germany had a military-Junker caste foaming with hatred of Britain. To some extent, he has been borne along by a resistless current. Yet the revelations of Herr Muehlon, the Krupp director, showed the Kaiser to be a leading and dominating figure in making war, pledging all German industrial magnates to personal support to him. At present Herr Hohenzollern is virtually protected by the Dutch Court, but when the Allies meet in peace conference, the matter of what shall be done to bring him to justice ought to be jointly considered, irrespective of European dynastic considerations.—Mail and Empire.

THE RED TERROR

The British Government, according to a statement made by Mr. A. J. Balfour in parliament, has information which shows the Bolsheviki regime in Russia has deliberately planned to exterminate those who are opposing the continued maintenance in power of Messrs. Lenine and Trotzky. The plain evidence of facts accumulating during the past three months shows conclusively some such policy has been in force. Recently the Moscow correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung sent a dispatch to his newspaper telling of conditions in Russia. He can hardly be accused of perverting the truth inasmuch as his country was at that time in league with the Bolsheviki. In writing of the latter days of September he said the cities of Moscow and Petrograd were trembling. There was not an inhabitant who was sure of his life. Both the guilty and the innocent were arrested indiscriminately on mere suspicion. They were sent to verminous, over-filled prisons and shot after a few hours. The country was shaken with the Terror as with an ague and the Terror, the correspondent wrote, was born of revenge. Factory managers, house owners, business men—all who came under the category of Bourgeoisie, whether they lived in lodgings or on the great boulevards—were arrested and held as hostages to be shot should there be the slightest ebullition among the people against the government.

In Russia these days bourgeois houses are systematically searched for food, clothes, money and articles of value by the troops of the Red Terror. And mingled with this Red Terror there is the Grey Terror of anarchy. Money and goods are stolen in broad daylight in the open streets by armed hordes and the newspapers print little about such happenings. The Saviour's Church of Moscow has been rifled of its Mass-utensils, vestments, flags and pictures; even the silver mountings of the Gospels disappearing. Throughout the country cottages and country houses. The organized mobs are looting estates, statements credited to the German correspondent whom we have quoted are substantiated from every other source from which it is possible to get any news. The Allied governments know, the United States knows, and everyone who has come out of Russia in recent months knows, that it is the firm resolve of the Soviet government, in the event of Bolshevist rule being seriously threatened, to destroy everything that can be destroyed and to carry out such a massacre as the world has never seen. Preparations have already been made. The upper stories of houses in Moscow have been cleared and fitted up with every imaginable agent of destruction. What is happening recalls the most savage periods of history. Until the peril of Bolshvism is stamped out, the world can never be made safe for democracy. That in this so-called civilized age, such crimes can be perpetrated is not alone intolerable to the most elementary feelings of humanity, but a satire on any proposal directed towards establishing a League of Nations.

The creed of Lenine and his colleagues is to spread unrest and class warfare everywhere. He sought to bring about a revolution in Switzerland and in his preliminary steps towards this end he agitated for facilitating quick and gratis the naturalization of all foreigners living in Switzerland. They were his emissaries in the campaign of world-wide anarchy he hoped to promote. His agents are everywhere, even in this country of ours and their propaganda is infinitely more deadly than that of the German spy system for they seek to promote class warfare and bury one-half the world in an avalanche of blood. Wherever their influence has asserted itself there is no safety for anyone, for even the tools of Bolshevism today may be its victims tomorrow. That is the eternal law that applies to any movement of the human race that is desperately immoral. The record of Bolshevism when it can be written will be the most blood-curdling story in the history of peoples. The lesson of the cult that at present controls Russia is a warning to every nation to prevent the spread of the deadly virus in their midst.—Colonist.

CANADIAN SOLDIERS HAVE $16,000,000 DEFERRED PAY

There is in the hands of the receiver general at Ottawa a credit for soldiers of the Canadian expeditionary forces of approximately $16,000,000 deferred pay. This represents pay earned, but not drawn, with accumulated interest.

The majority of the men will have a sum of money which they themselves have saved immediately available on discharge.

There will be paid to every man a further sum, by way of free grant commonly called post discharge pay. This will amount to a sum equivalent to three months' pay and allowance. payable in three monthly instalments, including separation allowance to the soldiers' dependent entitled to receive it.

On discharge every soldier who has donned uniform will also receive $65 which is intended to provide for the purchase of civilian clothing.

CLASSIC DOG DERBIES HAVE BEEN CANCELLED

The wide-flung sweep of the world war in its relation to sport has penetrated beyond the Arctic Circle and the classic dog derbies have been abandoned until the return of normal times and conditions. The long distance sweepstakes over the snow trails of the Seward peninsula have been cancelled, according to the plans of the Nome Kennel Club. Thus the winter will pass without either the All-Alaska sweepstakes or the Solomon sweepstakes, both formerly big events on the Alaska sport calendar. Last winter only the Solomon race was held.

The All-Alasks prize money of last year, together with the purses for this year's race, will be given to the Red Cross or some other war work fund.

Although the big races are abandoned, dog drivers remaining in Nome for the winter will hold several short informal race meets during the long dark months coming. Possibly after the war the big races will be resumed. Then, as in other years, the eyes of the Arctic sporting world will be centered on Nome every April, when the malamutes leap at the whip's snap and tug at their sleds over the 413 mile All-Alaska trail to Candle and back.

Thousands of dollars changed hands on the races every year, it was said. When Nome was at its height in the old gold-boom days, the All-Alaska purse amounted to $10,000. Pioneers say $200,000 was wagered on the result one year. Dog drivers sprang into the sporting spotlight as a result of skill and endurance on the frozen trails of the Far North. "Scotty" Allan, Leonard Seppla, John Johnson, Fay Delezene and others became known far by their victories in the big races.

SYNOPSIS OF LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

For information apply to any Provincial Government Agent or to

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

THE DAY

Now that the Hun's day of vaunting is over, it is interesting to recall some of the earlier poems and cartoons that foresaw Gremany's Day of Reckoning. Chief among the poems of that time is "Civilization's Reply" to the toast "Der Tag," that has been on every German officer's lips these many years. The poem is by Henry Chapell, a railway porter of Bath and appeared in the London Daily Express in the early months of the war:

You boasted the Day and you toasted the Day.
And now the Day has come,
Blasphemer, braggart and coward all,
Little you reck of the numbling ball,
The blasting shell, or the "White Arm's" fall,
As they speed poor humans home.

You spied for the Day, and you lied for the Day,
And woke the Day's red spleen;
Monster, who asked God's aid divine,
Then strewed the seas with the ghastly mine—
Not all the waters of all the Rhine
Can wash thy foul hand clean.

You dreamed for the Day, you schemed for the Day,
Watch how the Day will go;
Slayer of age and youth and prime,
(Defencelesss slain for never a crime)
Thou art steeped in blood as hog in slime—
False friend and coward foe.

You have sown for the Day, you have grown for the Day,
Yours is the harvest red;
Can you hear the groans and the awful cries?
Can you see the heaps of the slain that lies
And sightless turned to the flame-split skies
The glassy eyes of the dead?

You have longed for the Day, you have wronged for the Day
That lit the awful flame,
'Tis nothing to you that hill and plain
Yield sheaves of dead men among the grain;
That widow mourns for their loved ones slain,
And mothers curse thy name.

But after the Day, there's price to pay,
For the sleeper under the sod,
And He you have mocked for many a day—
Listen and hear what He has to say:
"Vengeance is mine, I will repay,"
What can YOU say to God?

THE SENSE OF LOSS BY DEATH

When the aged die, whose strength has become labor and sorrow. there in no bitterness of mourning nor mourning at all. When the frail invalid welcomes death, whose long sufferings have made life a continual weariness with no hope of relief for the body or refreshment for the mind, the sense of bereavement is lost in gratitude for a resting grave. When news has come that happy, careless, dearly loved boys or men in the first flush of high promise have died on the field of honor, there is mingled with the agony of grief the noble pride of the high-hearted and a deep thankfulness with which none may meddle. We have now grown familiar with the name of death, and we know that the pain of these enormous losses is hallowed by the sacrifice and healed with a great consolation.

"Nothing is here for tears, nothing to wail
Or knock the breast, no weakness, no contempt
Dispraise, or blame, nothing but well and fair,
And what may suit us in death so noble"

And so it is concerning those nurses who have made the sacrifice in this stricken city today. But when friends in the vigor of health are smitten without warning, and happy, helpful, salutary life is snuffed out like a candle, heavy sorrow weighs down the heart. The sense of loss which follows the first shock increases with the days until Time and all healing Influences do their assuasive work, leaving only the precious memories of comradeship and of endless good deeds.

"They live again
In minds made better by their presence; live
In pulses stirred to generosity, in scorn
For miserable aims that end with self."

—Manitoba Free Press.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels—you always get relief with Cascarets. They immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet and head clear for months. They work while you sleep.

EARNED SMALL WAGES

The idea of the British Columbia government engaging the Y.W.C.A. to secure women farmerettes for the Okanagan valley and other points was undoubtedly to relieve the man power scarcity and help garner in the crops. It was by no means to take advantage of the enthusiastic and progressive girls. But while the government meant well and the Y.W.C.A. had every good intention, the girls report, or to be correct, a number of the returned girls do not report very favorably of some of the farmers. Some of the girls were only able to earn a dollar a day and they were charged $5.00 a week for room and board. Consequently some of the girls came back "broke." Some girls did better.—Municipal Review, Burnaby.

GOVERNMENT DOING BIG BOOZE BUSINESS

Owing to the heavy business done during the flu epidemic by the provincial government's liquor store at Vancouver, it will move to more commodious and convenient quarters. The business went up to over $5000 a day and although there were considerable complaints about the high prices charged, the government gave the people to understand that they needed the money, and Mr. Findley, the manager of the liquor department, held the prices strictly to orders. In the new location the government should do a much better business as there should be more of the drop-in trade and it has always been conceded that location went a long way in the booze business. During the emergency several branch stores were opened in the province, and if this policy proves to be a good one, Manager Findley may open still more of them. Nothing succeeds like success even the booze business managed by the government. — Kamloops Sentinel.

MARSHAL FOCH

The two outstanding military leaders whom the war has produced are Marshal Foch and the Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia. The former succeeded in a way which ranks him among the great soldiers of the world. The latter, after showing all the skill of generalship necessary to bring about decisive results, was deprived of his command. General Foch was a great leader and a great master of strategy and tactics long before the war commenced. The late Lord Roberts recognized in him the master tactician of the age and predicted he would lead France to victory when war came. From the beginning of the struggle General Foch made his mark as a brilliant commander. The stubborn persistence which is characteristic of the man was displayed in striking fashion during the Marne fighting. General Foch was in command of the French centre, against which the Germans thrust repeatedly in the hope of breaking through between Sezanne and Mailly. Three times General Foch was forced to retire by the weight of the forces thrown against his army, but each morning, with imperturbable regularity, he resumed the offensive. His obstinacy won in the end. He waited his opportunity and a false step made by the enemy enabled him to take the latter in the flank and inflict the defeat which marked the first great epoch of the war.

General Foch was next heard from during the second battle of Ypres, when the German gas attack had created a desperate position for the British Army. He was sent north with reinforcements and gave valuable aid and support, which received the warm praise of Lord French. He was largely responsible for the organization of the defences in Flanders. When the French took the offensive on the Somme in 1916 General Foch was in command. A year ago, when it was decided to set up a supreme political council for the whole of the Western front, General Foch was chosen as the French representative on the central military committee. Subsequently he became the head of the Military Council of Versailles, a post which he did not hold long as early in April he was summoned to take the supreme command of all the Allied forces in the field.

Marshal Foch belongs to the type of leader who never believes a battle is lost. He was given the supreme command at a time when the military fortunes of the Allies on land appeared to be near their nadir. The Germans in their great offensive from St. Quentin had swept back the British armies to the Somme and Ancre rivers. The whole front was shaken by the mighty thrusts and there seemed no co-ordinate scheme for providing reinforcements where they were required. Marshal Foch rapidly brought order out of what threatened to become military chaos. He reckoned on his resources, estimated the percentage of losses being inflicted on the enemy, came to a rapid conculsion as to how near Paris he could allow the Germans to approach, and then, having made his dispositions, awaited the moment when he believed the time was ripe to strike back. For upwards of three months more the Germans remained on the offensive, but as blow followed blow keen observers could see each succeeding stroke was growing weaker. All the time Marshal Foch was awaiting his opportunity. When he turned on the enemy he did so in a rapid and bewildering manner. The counter stroke at the Marne, when the enemy was in the middle of an offensive, was brilliantly executed. He drove in the flank of the attacking army, threatened to cut off the salient that had been created and within twenty-four hours he had wrested from the Germans the initiative, which had been lost to the Allies for almost four months.

The subsequent blows delivered by the Allied armies between the Oise and Somme, between Arras and Albert, the forcing back of the Germans to their old Hindenburg positions, and finally beyond these so-called impregnable field fortifications, and the extension of the offensive until it embraced the whole front from Lorraine to the sea, showed master strategy. Mashal Foch, when he assumed supreme command, proved at once his ability to handle huge masses of men on a wide front. All previous efforts to convert the war into one of movement on the Western front had failed since the battle of the Marne, because there was no leader with the authority and possessing the necessary genius to grasp the situation as a whole. Marshal Foch has never regarded war as an exact science. He has realized that the developments of science have increased the necessity for mental and moral effort. He is a philosopher as well as a fighter. All his theories have been built up on three fundamentals —preparation, the formation of a mass and the multiplication of this mass in use. How he brought these fundamentals into practical use is exemplified by the fighting of the last four months of the war. He is rapid, precise and logical. He has translated the philosophy in his composition into action. When he opened his offensive of the Marne last July he knew he was about to inflict overwhelming defeat on Germany. If no armistice had come and Marshal Foch had been permitted to see the military results of his genius, it is now apparent Germany would have been forced to capitulate in the field before the end of the present year. But, although the crowning accomplishment of his military genius was forestalled by the political collapse of Germany, he did enough to establish his fame for all time. He did everything; for his single mind, more than any other individual factor, was responsible for the end of the war. The armies of Macedonia and Italy, as well as the forces on the Western front, responded to his direction at the chosen moments. Never once did failure threaten any single undertaking when Marshal Foch had made up his mind. He is a simple soldier, unostentatious, and he is continually trying to efface himself. It will be noted that in all the triumphal entries being made into different cities of France, of Alsace-Lorraine and of Belgium, Marshal Foch so far has not participated. Undoubtedly the government will insist on his doing so before long, but the manner in which he keeps himself in the background is typical of the first soldier of the war. The place which history will assign him in military annals will be in the foremost ranks. Never before has a leader been called upon to exercise so much imagination, to control such vast bodies of men and to react so quickly after such a tremendous offensive as that of the Germans, which it would have been supposed would have meant exhaustion to both groups of combatants.—Colonist.

CANADIANS WIN VICTORIA CROSSES

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—A list of honors and decorations won by members of the Canadian expeditionary forces, compiled by the militia department, shows that 104 Victoria Crosses, the highest honor obtainable, have been awarded to soldiers of the Dominion. The Distinguished Service Order was won by 481 Canadians and 1657 Military Crosses were awarded to officers of the Canadian expeditionary force.

The Military Medal, corresponding to the Military Cross, but granted to non-commissioned officers and men, was awarded to 6549 Canadian soldiers and the Distinguished Conduct Medal to 1028. Canadians mentioned in dispatches 3333.

Of foreign honors awarded to Canadians, the French Croix de Guerre heads the list in point of number. Three hundred and five members of the Canadian expeditionary forces won this decoration. The Russian Cross of St. George was given to 102 men from the Dominion and the French Medaille Militaire to 45. Twenty men from Canada won the Italian bronze medal for military valor.

A number of distinctions, including 125 C.M.G.'s were also awarded to members of the Canadian expeditionary forces.

Billy Sunday and Billy Hun

Billy Sunday would send the kaiser to St. Helena. We regret to note this evidence that Billy is not the man he used to be. The obvious insufficiency of all punishments suggested as suitable for the former Kaiser will probably stay the progress of many a man who was moving away from the belief in Hell-fire.—Exchange.

DIVORCE NOT VALID

That a resident of this province can not have his or her Canadian marriage dissolved by the courts of Washington, so as to be recognized as a valid divorce here, was held by Mr. Justice Macdonald in Vancouver, in granting Mrs. Beatrice Sprott, of Vancouver and Penticton, a divorce from R. J. Sprott on the ground of bigamy.

The case has been before the court two or three times of late. Mr. and Mrs. Sprott were married in Vancouver in 1910 and parted in July 1914. A deed of separation was drawn up whereby Mr. Sprott transferred property in Point Grey and Penticton and a sum of money to his wife.

In November of last year Mr. Sprott obtained in the state of Washington a divorce on the ground of incompatibility of temper and in May of this year married Miss Annie Edgell in Seattle. Alleging that she had no knowledge of the divorce proceedings in Seattle Mrs. Sprott entered suit for divorce, citing the marriage to Miss Edgell as proof of adultery and bigamy. A letter from her husband notifying Mrs. Sprott that he had obtained a divorce in Seattle and was taking out citizenship papers in the United States on the advice of a Seattle lawyer to protect himself against any possible proceedings for bigamy should he marry again, was filed in court by Mr. S. S. Taylor, K.C., for Mrs. Sprott.

A week ago Mr. Justice Macdonald adjourned the case to give counsel for Mr. Sprott an opportunity to prove by evidence that Mr. Sprott had resided in the state of Washington for twelve months before the decree, as stated in that document. This morning as neither Mr. Sprott nor his counsel appeared, his lordship said he must presume that such evidence does not exist.

"This means," he added, "that the decree was not properly granted and can not stand in this province. The court finds that a bigamous marriage was contracted as alleged, and under the circumstances grants the petitioner an absolute decree with costs."

THREE KINDS

PRINTER AND PUBLISHER SIZES UP THE LEDGER

"Printer and Publisher," of Toronto, the main journal of the trade in Canada, has the following to say of the Fernie District Ledger in its November issue:

The District Ledger has had a varied and stormy career. There has been a heap of money spent on the plant and the production of the paper. Some ten years ago it used to get away with editorial reference to local people that would call for a session in the beak's sun parlor in the east. The paper should have been a paying proposition, but it wasn't. It had a hand-picked circulation all over the district. It was hand-picked because the members of the Miners' Union were supposed to subscribe whether they felt that way or not. Job work for the various unions in the district came to the Ledger office at the Ledger's own price. All it needed was a little good newspaper common sense and it was the makings of a good proposition. But that was the trouble. The miners didn't know how to run a paper, and they didn't want any person who did know how to go ahead and do it. Their officials appointed a manager, and then they proceeded to manage the manager.

The head office of District 18 of the Mine Workers are (or at least they were at the time to which we refer) in the same building as the Ledger. In fact the miners' property sprawls all over that end of the town. Across a lane from the Ledger office the miners built an opera house, co-operative store and several other affairs. The price of that building may never have been put down in black and white so that all the miners could have a look at it. But it's a safe guess and a safer gamble that it ran into enough cash to put up premises twice the size on a straight contract basis.

But some of those miners' union officials were interesting. At one time the late Frank Sherman was head of District 18. Sherman had one thing that was interesting, viz., a personality all his own. In some ways he was a born leader. Rather small of figure, but fine of feature, with a neatly trimmed beard and broad black hat—he was typically Frank Sherman and no one else. During his regime some case came up in court in which the miners were interested. Sherman, so it is said, informed the Ledger editor to smite hard upon the B.C. judicial system. The scribe wished to state that in his opinion a miscarriage of justice had occurred. Instead of that he embellished the article with bits of fire-works, the effect of the display being to set forth in bold relief that you could do anything you pleased in British Columbia so long as you belonged to a certain lodge. This pleased all concerned until a blue paper arrived in the coking town from Victoria inviting the youthful, but fiery editor to appear before the court there and explain what he meant. He went. He explained. He had a good time, and the fine and expenses ran around the $500 mark. The only tragic thing about it was that the miners, digging coal— and digging coal is hard work —had to foot the bill for the whole damphoolishness.

The presidents, in fact all the officials of District 18, who preside over the destinies of the Ledger, are Socialists. In fact they could not get elected if they were not. And each year or so brings a new set to preside over the destinies of the District Ledger. The skidding was rough about three years ago and the Ledger shut up shop. But now a new injection of faith has come to hand and the Ledger appears. The fact that it has brought down on its barn-like structure a $2500 government advertisement would come with the beauty and grace of the breaking up of a hard winter to an empty coal bin. Small wonder that the Ledger was tempted to climb the Lizzard range and shout to the "Three Sisters" about the way it scooped in the $2500 jack pot.

CRANBROOK NEWS

(Cranbrook Herald)

One of the very sad deaths due to the influenza was that of Mrs. Chas. Elliott, sister of Mrs. Finlay Robson. Mrs. Elliott came here from Calgary to take Mrs. Robson's children back with her to her own home. She was accompanied by her husband, who is a C.P.R. conductor at Calgary, who was helping to arrange to make the move. Mrs. Elliott was taken sick with the influenza and on Thursday, November 14, she died. The body was shipped to Lindsay, Ont., on Sunday and was accompanied by the bereaved husband. One of the sad features of this case is that Mr. and Mrs. Elliott, having no children of their own, were going to adopt the motherless babes of Mrs. Elliott's sister.

The sad death of Mrs. Robert Woodley, of Kimberley, took place on Wednesday, Nov. 13th, pneumonia following an attack of influenza being the cause. She was buried on Saturday in the K. of P. plot in the Cranbrook cemetery. She leaves a husband and two married daughters and one son to mourn her loss. The two daughters live in Seattle and the son is overseas.

Word has been received in the city that Cadet Ian Grant Forbes of Vancouver, formerly of the Canadian Bank of Commerce staff here, died on October 30, at the Military Base hospital at Toronto, from pneumonia following an attack of influenza. Mr. Forbes was a native of Aberdeen, Scotland. He left his home land and came straight to Cranbrook to take a position with the Canadian Bank of Commerce and later was transferred to Vancouver.

Mrs. John McAulay, wife of C.P.R. Conductor John McAulay, died on Friday, Nov. 15th, of pneumonia, after an illness of 32 hours in the hospital. The bereaved husband took the body east to her former home in Scotstown, Que. She leaves a husband and one daughter to mourn her loss.

FRED ROO AND BUSINESS

(From the Commercial Review)

Say, I want to hear from some other merchants on some points of interest and there are a good many of them. A few days ago I spoke to the Editor about this and he showed me a little just received from a B. C. merchant, the illustrious Fred Roo, of Elko, B.C. Here was the way he put it:

"I would like to write some for you but I am at this time as busy as a one-eyed boy at a three-ring circus—my help called to the front and impossible to get help now, and I feel meaner than Old Man Brown when they kicked him out of heaven, but later on I might be able to send you in something that will tickle the travellers right into their samples. My success in business is getting what the people wanted, not what I thought they should buy. Alfred Harmsworth (Lord Northcliffe) made his millions by giving the people what they wanted to read and lots of it. The reason there are no millionaire editors in Canada is because 90 per cent of the editors of papers think because they don't write an article it's not worth publishing."

Good. Isn't that putting the blocks to the Editors? Well, we ought to have an experience counter as well as a bargain counter. Let's have it here and now.

BLAME THE OLD BRITISH NAVY

The British navy has been the one greatest instrument in the winning of the war. In the transport of troops, munitions and food, in the defence of the French coast from invasion, in the closing of channels through which Germany might otherwise have obtained sufficient supplies, the navy has made possible a victory which could not have won without its aid. It is probable that empty stomachs as much as allied powder and shell have been the cause of the collapse of the Central Powers and for their empty stomachs the people of the enemy countries may very well blame the good old British navy.

CABINET DEALS WITH COAL COMPANIES DISPUTE

Ottawa, Nov. 26.—The cabinet this afternoon took up consideration of the dispute between the Nova Scotia Steel company and the Dominion Coal company. Questions arose between the two companies some time ago in regard to development of mining areas under Sydney harbor. The Nova Scotia Steel company sought permission to mine on adjoining property belonging to the Dominion Coal company, claiming that by so doing production of bituminous coal could be increased. The two companies were unable to agree, however, and the points at issue were referred to C. A. Magrath, fuel director of the maritime provinces, for a judicial settlement. After hearing evidence on both sides, Mr. Magrath recommended to the government that the Nova Scotia company be given authority to mine in certain directions on the Dominion company's property.

The government's decision probably will not be announced for some days. It is regarded as very probable that the Dominion Coal company will take the question to the courts should the government issue authority to the Nova Scotia company. The view taken by the Dominion Coal company, it is understood, that such an order would be unconstitutional.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

W. R. Wilson, who has been seriously ill, is recovering.

Mayor Thomson is laid up with the flu. His case is not serious.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Gregson, of Dorr, were in town on Wednesday.

The ice at the Fernie Curling Rink will be in good shape in a few days.

J. A. Broley, of Newgate, spent a couple of days in the city this week.

Dry Tamarac For Sale. $3 per rick. Apply McGladrey Bros. O29-2

Wanted -Girl to do general housework. Apply Mrs. A. I. Fisher.

Miss Winnett's Business College will re-open on Monday evening, Dec. 2nd.

J. Schagel and Billy Wilmot brought in a fine big buck from Hosmer on Monday.

Stipendiary Magistrate Green, of Duncan, B.C., is spending a few days in the city.

Mrs. John Laithwaite wishes to thank Dr. Garner and others who were so kind to her during her recent bereavement.

Skating at the mill pond has been going on all week. There is a fine stretch of ice and the young people are enjoying it.

The flu is gradually dying out in Fernie. There have been hardly any new cases the last day or two and the Napanee emergency hospital was closed today.

Services will be held in the United Church on Sunday, Dec. 1. Rev. W. T. Young, minister of the United Church at Frank, will preach at both morning and evening services.

Mrs. Good, Mr. Good and family wish to thank the many friends for their kindness in their sad bereavement.—Mrs. E. J. Good, Crow's Nest, Mr. Good and family, Pincher Creek.

With the flu ban lifted the Loyal Order of Moose will resume their weekly lodge meetings on Monday, Dec. 2. Will all members kindly attend as a large amount of business must be attended to.

The local Poultry and Pet Stock Association will give a big dance in Victoria Hall on the evening of Dec. 2nd. Admission $1.50. Don't fail to attend as the Association needs every assistance that can be rendered.

If nothing further develops the ban will be lifted from Fernie on Saturday night at 12 o'clock. This will include everything with the exception of the schools, which will remain closed until the beginning of the year.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hirst, a widow residing near the G. N. depot, died from influenza on Monday last. She leaves two sons to mourn her death, Harry in Fernie and another boy at the front. The funeral took place on Thursday.

Dr. Corsan, of Fernie, left on Thursday for Vancouver, where he will spend a few months on military duty in connection with the demobilization of home coming troops. Drs. Bonnell, Garner and Asselstine will look after his practice during his absence.

Archie Farquharson came up from Morrissey on Monday with what he thought was an attack of the flu, but he was apparently too tough a proposition for the germs as he was out again in a day or two. A lot of Archie's friends would have liked to nurse him but were disappointed.

The funeral of Mrs. A. Anderson, of West Fernie, which took place yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, was largely attended, showing the respect in which she was held by the citizens of this town. Two of her boys, Harold, of Montreal, and Oscar, of Saskatoon, arrived in time to attend the funeral.

Death claimed another well know citizen on Saturday last in the person of Mr. John Laithwaite. Deceased had been suffering from influenza and had been up and around again when he was suddenly taken with pneumonia. Death came very suddenly. The funeral took place on Monday.

The Editor of the Ledger this week devotes several columns to the justification of the Bolsheviki of Russia, and tries to prove that they are a badly maligned people. We would like to make a bet with him that there is not enough money in Fernie to coax him to live in the Bolsheviki districts of Russia for 24 hours.

Dr. Bayfield, who has been located at Corbin for the past year, has given up his position there and gone to Swansea Bay, where he has secured a better position. Dr. Eberts, of Victoria, a son of former Speaker Eberts, of the B.C. House, has taken over the Corbin contract. He arrived on Saturday and was suddenly stricken with the flu. Dr. Asselstine, of Fernie, is acting for him during his illness.

Chas. McNab, of Waldo, has the flu.

The Orpheum will re-open Monday night. Don't miss the program.

Dry Tamarac For Sale. $3 per rick. Apply McGladrey Bros. O29-2

Billy McKay, of Waldo, lost forty-two pounds in his fight with the flu.

Furnished and housekeeping rooms to rent: steam heated. Mrs. Murphy, 81 Jaffray St.

The local Masonic Lodge will attend a Thanksgiving service in Christ Church on the evening of Sunday, Dec. 8th.

A movement should be started at once to secure a memorial for the Fernie boys who gave their lives for their country in the Great War.

There will be a meeting of the Curling Club in Herchmer & Graham's office on Tuesday evening, Dec. 3rd. All members are requested to attend.

One of the machine guns which was captured by the 54th was donated to Fernie. The city council should take steps to see that the gun is forwarded as soon as possible.

E. G. Daniels has been busy during the past week officiating as a plumbing expert at the public schools owing to the plant having gone somewhat out of commission.

The names of Matthew Whitlaw, Mrs. Mary D. Whitlaw and Miss Margaret D. A. Whitlaw were accidentally omitted from the Victory Loan subscribers in our last issue.

The Popular Magazine is publishing a serial story by A. M. Chisholm, of Golden. The title is "The Country of Strong Men," and the plot is laid in Fire Valley, over in West Kootenay. It is a real yarn.

Hon. J. H. King, minister of public works in the B.C. government, is ill with influenza at Victoria. He came to Cranbrook and Fernie to help during the epidemic there and on his return to the coast became ill.

Mrs. L. P. Sullivan, who has been very sick with pneumonia is improving, although not yet out of danger. Mr. Sullivan has been in the city for the past few days and has passed an anxious time, but is now encouraged to hope for his wife's recovery.—Cranbrook Herald.

The regular meeting of the Ladies Guild of Christ church will be held at the home of Mrs. H. F. McLean on Wednesday, Dec. 4, at 2.30 p.m. All members are requested to be present as the sewing meeting in connection with the bazaar to be given before Christmas will be resumed.

Mr. A. F. Anderson and sons wish to thank all their friends for the sympathy shown them in their recent bereavement, and for the many beautiful floral tributes given by the following: Miss S. E. West, Mrs. and Miss Corsan, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Herchmer, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Young, Mr. and Mrs. E. Heaphy, Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Smith, Mrs. G. G. Moffatt, Miss Fairy McDougall, Miss Alice Duthie, Miss Lilian Kihlgren, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Wood, Master Jackie Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Schagel and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot, Friends and Neighbors in West Fernie, a few of her Patients, Emergency Hospital Committee.

The Ledger constitutes itself the champion of the Ukranians who are being held by the local authorities for having alleged seditious literature in their possession, and last week took Magistrate Whimster to task for having commented on these people. It also champions the course of Eugene Debs, who is doing a term for violating the United States law, likewise the notorious Bill Haywood, who is also doing time. If the editor of the Ledger wants anyone to take him seriously he had better go a little easy on the brand of agitation he is so keen to heroize.

R. W. Wood, representing the merchants of the interior of British Columbia, is in Vancouver attending a conference to be held on Dec. 4 on the minimum wage to be paid female employees in mercantile occupations in British Columbia. This conference has been called by the Minimum Wage Board and will have representatives of the employers, the employees and what is termed the disinterested public. The employers represented will be, in addition to Mr. Wood, H. T. Lockyer, of the Hudson Bay Co., and C. Spencer, of David Spencer, Ltd; employees, Miss Dunbar and Miss Hewat, Vancouver; Mrs. C. Sutton, Victoria; public, Mrs. W. H. Griffith, Rev. Father O'Boyle, Vancouver; Miss Helen G. Stewart, Victoria. The conference will make recommendations to the board which the board may approve or disapprove in whole or in part. In the latter event it would be the duty of the board to re-submit the recommendations to the conference or to appoint another conference.

right of action which would have laid altogether in Bossio.

By no possible construction of the Act can I see that the appellant had possession of the liquor. I therefore find that the appellant was improperly convicted. I will allow the appeal and dismiss the accused; costs of the appeal to be paid by the respondent to the appellant. Costs set at $50 and disbursements.

Before His Honor Judge Thompson the criminal case of Rex v. G. G. Phillips, of Fort Steele, was heard. Phillips was charged with stealing a horse from the Fort Steele Trading Co. and also unlawfully killing same. The evidence went to show that last September the animal in question was missed and a couple of weeks later neighbors attracted by the stench from decomposing flesh at Phillips' ranch, investigated and found the severed head of a horse in one place and the remains of the carcass, from which the hide where the brand had been was cut away. The matter was reported to the police and Phillips was arrested. He claimed that he had by mistake roped the animal while trying to catch one of his own horses and that the animal when roped attempted to jump the corral fence and fell dislocating its neck. He later shot it and although he knew to whom it belonged made no special effort to inform the owner, contending that he would have done so as soon as he saw Mr. Carlin, the owner. He was found guilty by the court but allowed out on suspended sentence conditional upon paying the value of the animal and costs of the trial in the sum of $125.

A. Macneil represented the crown, and A. I. Fisher appeared for the accused.

The provincial police offices have been removed from the basement of the court house to the spacious rooms on the south side of the building on the ground floor.

A MODEST APPRAISAL

One sentence in the recent speech to Congress of President Wilson deserves the particular attention of the nations with which the United States associated itself for the conquest of autocracy. He said:

"It was the privilege of our people to enter it (the war) at its most critical juncture and in such force as to contribute, in a way of which we are deeply proud, to the great result."

That is a modest appraisal of the achievements of the United States in the war. Into every department of military and industrial activity the American people have thrown themselves with singular devotion since the great decision was taken. And there is no discounting the fact that, in the circumstances created by the collapse of Russia after the revolution, the war must have been long, tedious and exhausting to the last degree but for the intervention of the United States and the whole-hearted nature of their co-operation.

When hostilities ceased the United States army had already a total strength of 3,764,677 men, of whom 2,200,000 had gone overseas to France, Italf or Russia. That in itself is a remarkable record. But the work actually performed by the American troops in France, from their first notable victory at Chateau-Thierry until they entered Sedan and sealed the fate of the German armies was of a kind to justify the American people in feeling the utmost pride in their citizen-soldiery.

The credit which belongs to the United States in the field of industrial activity, also, is no less than that which has been earned by its armies. The allied nations will be the readier to express their appreciation and gratitude because the Chief Executive of the great republic has proclaimed, in the moment of victory, inconceivably hastened by the share "contributed" by his country, that the American people feel that it is a "privilege" to have performed it.

THE ELECTORS OF GREAT BRITAIN

The elections to be held in Great Britain owe much of their interest to the composition of the electorate as determined by the Representation of the People Act passed during this year. By the provisions of that Act some 2,000,000 men and 6,000,000 women will reinforce the body of voters, which will thus be increased to 16,000,000 or more, about one-third of the total population. At the census of 1911 the adult male population was 11,375,000. Under the new electoral law voters must be 21 years or over, if civilians, and have lived on or occupied business premises of an annual value of not less than $50 in the same parliamentary borough or county or one contiguous thereto. for six months ending on January 15. The recognition of war service as a qualification for the franchise takes cognizance not only of soldiers and sailors on full pay but of all persons doing service, military or naval in character, abroad or on the sea and paid by the public treasury, and merchant sailors, pilots, fishermen, workers for the Red Cross, or any other war work recognized by the Army Council or Admiralty as of national importance. All male voters who have served in the war must be registered if they are 19 and otherwise qualified.

Women in this country who in the past indulged a natural resentment at the inclusion of their sex in a list of persons not entitled to vote, which includes Indians and idiots, may derive humorous consolation from the list of those who are disqualified under the British law, which includes infants, peers, idiots, lunatics, aliens and bankrupts. The conscientious objectors who have not done war or other national work is disqualified during the war and for five years after its termination. The discrimination against recipients of poor relief which prevailed in the past has been removed.

A woman to qualify as a voter must be 30, and entitled to be registered as a Local Government elector by occupying premises worth not less than $25 a year, or a dwelling house; or she must be the wife of a husband so entitled to be registered. A curious provision entitles qualified lodgers in unfurnished rooms to vote, while denying the privilege to those in furnished lodgings. Inequalities in the size of constituencies, which were formerly grossly conspicuous, have been removed.

NEW FIGURES ON B.C. FOREST RESOURCES

Ottawa.—The commission of conservation has just completed an exhaustive investigation, extending over a period of three years, into the forest resources of British Columbia. It shows that the total stand of new lumber and pulp wood material in British Columbia is 366,000,000 board feet.

The report discloses the fact that of the total land area in the province 355,855 square miles, approximately 200,000 square miles is incapable of producing forests of commercial value. About 145,000 square miles lie above the merchantable timber line and on 55,000 square miles the soil is either too rocky or wet, or the forests have been so completely destroyed by fire that there is no hope for the natural re-establishment of forest conditions for centuries to come.

Of the remaining 155,855 square miles which is capable of producing forests only about 28,000 sq. miles carries sufficient timber to be classed as statutory timber land. The timber on about 100,000 sq. miles, or two-thirds of the area once forested, has been totally destroyed by fire, and on over half of the remaining 55,855 square miles has been seriously damaged. Using the timber still standing as a basis, it is estimated that the province has lost through forest fires at least 665,000,000,000 feet board measure.

"When one considers," says the report, "that the total stand of saw material in the whole of Canada probably does not greatly exceed this amount now, the seriousness of the loss which can be attributed very largely to public carelessness, becomes apparent."

NOTES

From Montreal comes word that F. August Heinze is suing the C. P. R. for $100,000 for personal property at the Trail smelter, which he claims was not included when he sold the smelter to the C. P. R. for $800,000 cash. It is understood to include a valuable lot of copper matte.

Many people believe the flu is literally in the air—that contact with the disease is not necessary for one to contract it. Physicians are puzzled over the fact that a lighthouse keeper and his family at a remote point on Lake Winnipeg were found down with the flu when the tender arrived there last week. They had not come in contact with a human being for months. Two trappers reached Prince George recently. They had not seen a single person for months and had been 100 miles away from any settlement when they became victims with well defined flu symptoms.

An Iowa paper does not hesitate to use its personal column to remind delinquent subscribers of their remissness. The Oxford Leader incidentally mentions that "John Centman, who skinned the Leader out of a year's subscription, was in on Tuesday with a load of watermelons."

The minister of finance is considering the design for a new one-cent copper coin. The present one-cent piece, while of excellent design, is of so large size as to make it inconvenient to carry more than two or three in the pocket. The new coin will be slightly larger and slightly thicker than a 10c piece, so as to be easily distinguishable to the touch It will take some time to have the die made and the coins issued for circulation.

Telegraph reports state that the release of food held by profiteers in Germany has caused a fifty per cent drop in the cost of edibles. If this sort of thing goes on it may become possible to envy a German.

PLANS TO REGULATE LABOR DISTRIBUTION

Ottawa, Nov. 24. — Canada is to have a national system of employment offices co-ordinated through the federal department of labor. The minister of labor purposes to undertake the work of organiation at once. At a series of conferences held during the last week questions of policy, plans of organizing and system and details of office routine were discussed and a general scheme determined. The new system will have as its basis, employment work that has already been done in Ontario and Quebec, as well as the agricultural employment work of the western provinces.

An official statement issued tonight, says in part:

"The plan of organization drawn up by the department of labor was submitted to the provincial officials and with their co-operation and criticism the whole organization scheme was outlined in the most minute detail. A local office will be opened in every important industrial centre and in the larger cities it is proposed to have separate offices for unskilled labor and for skilled workers. These offices will report daily to a provincial clearing house the number of workers unplaced and the situations unfilled, by trades, and on the clearing house personnel will fall the duty of matching up vacancies in one part of the provinve with unabsorbed workers in another locality. Upon the provincial organizations will be super-imposed a federal system of two clearing houses, located probably at Winnipeg and Ottawa. When the provincial clearing houses have done their best to relate workers to positions in the provinces and find that there is still a deficiency or a surplus of labor in some parts, the federal clearing house will take up the work at this point and will try to locate the surplus labor or secure the labor required in other provinces.

The clearing house in Winnipeg will function in this way for all the western provinces, while the Ottawa clearing house will perform a similar task for the east. By this plan the Dominion government will have always at hand accurate information as to the demand and supply of labor in all parts of the country.

"In placing this machinery at the disposal of employers and employees, the Dominion and provincial governments are anxious that it shall be operated for the common interests of both classes and to that end advisory committees, specially representative of employers and employees, will be connected with all the larger offices. A national advisory committee, to be called the Employment Service Council of Canada will be organized at once to supervise the administration of the entire organization. The provincial governments will appoint one member each on this committee and the soldiers' civil re-establishment department, the Great War Veterans, the Canadian Manufacturers association, the Trades and Labor Congress, the Railway War Board, the Railway Brotherhoods and the Canadian Council of Agriculture will also be represented. The department of labor appoints three members, two of whom must be women. A provincial advisory committee to safeguard the interests of employers and employees in each province will also be appointed in each province."

One problem which remains to be settled is the relation of the employment organization to the work of the department of soldiers' civil re-establishment and the provincial returned soldiers' commissions. There have been conferences, however, between the employment officials and the officials of the soldier civil re-establishment on this matter and delimitation of the spheres of the two departments has been practically agreed upon.

WOMEN AND THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT

The recent recognition in Great Britain of the right of women to stand as candidates for parliament naturally provokes the question whether it is likely that the new parliament will be found to contain any, or many, women members. When the Bill in which the right of the women to sit was under consideration a few weeks ago, the House was reminded by one speaker that although the franchise was granted in Australia eighteen years ago, but six women had become candidates during this time and not one of these had been elected. It is interesting to recall also that in the provincial elections which have been held in this country since the provincial franchise was extended to women by certain of the provinces there has been no very noticeable inclination on the part of women to seek election. In Saskatchewan the one woman candidate was unsuccessful; in Alberta two women sit as members, one of them as representative of the soldiers overseas; in British Columbia the wife of a former cabinet minister was successful in a by-election. In some of the States of the Union, notably in Kansas, a large number of women fill elective offices, but up to the present only one woman has sat in the federal legislature.

Some people will assume that the women of Great Britain will be no more eager or successful than others of their sex elsewhere. People who are not familiar with conditions in Great Britain, however, will know that, although the women of that country have only now acquired this right to elect, and themselves to become, members of parliament, they are by no means without interest or experience in public business. In most of the departments of local government they have long enjoyed and exercised equal rights with the other sex though it must be admitted that their advent here was at first slow. In the forthcoming elections there will be many women candidates and competent observers say that a few of these will almost certainly emerge from the struggle as successful candidates.

THE RUSSIAN ANARCHY

In an analysis of the spirit of the Russian Revolution, the Round Table Quarterly, in the current number, regards the present phase of that upheaval—the Bolsheviki anarchy—as anything but a fixed state, or final crystalization, but merely an episode in the gigantic process of the reconstruction of Eastern Europe. When the old regime fell under the strain of a great war it involved in its ruin the whole of the political structure over which it had so jealously asserted its monopoly. The ruin was not and cannot be final, the quarterly declares, because the Russian State was not wholly identified with the old regime, and still less was it solely the creation of the autocracy. But the revolution was so disastrous because, in completely liberating all the forces opposed to the old regime, it exposed to violent attack all those functions which had been exercised by the autocracy and its agents — that is to say, practically all the principal functions of the state. And this at a time when an aggressive neighbor was directing its efforts to the defeat and destruction of the power of Russia.

This explanation of the reason for the Russian revolutionary debacle is of interest at the present time in view of the revolutionary changes in Germany. In Russia, at the outset, as in Germany at present, the Bolsheviki element were in a very small minority. But they were most aggressive, they quickly perceived that their best weapon was the disorganization of the army, and to this end they played on the Soviets. The Russian Socialists, the quarterly asserts, labored under the incredible delusion, the rank heresy from a Marxian point of view, that the disorganization of a great army, the exposure of their country to a ruthless enemy, was the equivalent of the social revolution of which they dreamed. "To such disasters," he adds, "led the infatuation of men whose natural faculties had been starved in the underworld of Tsarism. Their action could only be destructive, for they had lived so long amid bitter abstractions and negations."

The Round Table's conclusion is that the recovery of Russia is certain. If that view is correct, there may be hope that the German revolution — a ferment in a different national element — will not go the lengths of the anarchism that Russia experienced. There are indeed ominous signs of class war. But German Socialists can hardly be permeated to the same extent with the impetuous and insane enthusiasm of the Russian proletariat, and before red anarchy runs riot a disciplineed people may reach a halt.

Canada's War Costs

The war has cost Canada well over a billion dollars up to date. This comprises accounts which have actually passed through the finance department. It does not include recent overseas expenditures for which accounts have not yet been presented. War-expenditure by the Dominion since August, 1914, has been for the different fiscal years approximately as follows: 1914-15, $60,750,000; 1915-16, $166,197,000; 1916-17, $306,488,000; 1917-18, $343,835,000. Seven months to October 31, 1918, $169,574,000. Total $1,046,844,000.

GERMAN PSYCHOLOGY

"Tell them they are coming to England; that will be enough." Admiral Beatty's reply to the commander of the German fleet that surrendered, when the latter wanted the leader of the Grand Fleet to sign a document stipulating the German crews would not be ill-treated, was typical of the man and his abiding faith in the country for which he, and the great instrument he commands, have fought so magnificently. German militarism never believed in the law of chivalry, the word of honor, or the scrap of paper. The monstrous edifice incarnating the doctrines of might which the ex-Emperor reared around his throne could not realize other nations are not inspired with the spirit of revenge. The power that now controls German affairs has inherited the psychology that deformed the militaristic soul. Its hatred for Britain is no less pronounced, but this time it is the hatred of impotence.

Admiral Beatty's phrase, if taken to heart, may teach the Germans a lesson and one in which they stand sorely in need. What conception of humanity has a government that releases upwards of 100,000 prisoners and tells them — in their rags and poverty, unarmed and without money —to march through a hostile country on their way to the frontier and freedom? This is what the new government of Germany has done with the released British prisoners. It was a representative of that government that wanted a written undertaking from Admiral Beatty promising the interned German sailors would not be ill-treated. The German treatment of British prisoners, both before and since the revolution, shows there is no repentance in the hearts of the German people for their manifold crimes. A London Times correspondent who has just returned from a trip through Western Germany reports hatred of Britain is universal and that the idea of revenge is implanted in all hearts. If it is true that the German nation intends neither to forgive nor forget it will be necessary to meditate well before that country is admitted to any League of Nations. A world effort must be made to change the viewpoint in Germany, to disillusion the people completely of any idea of world dominance or any conception they belong to a race of supermen. They must be taught the value of peace. The task may occupy a few generations, or more, but the spirit of revenge must be exorcised from the international sphere or else there cannot be permanent peace. One of the greatest tasks before the Peace Conference will be the nature of the propaganda that must be undertaken before the world is prepared for a League of Nations. If that ideal is conceived with force as its basis it is foredoomed to failure.—Colonist.

HENS COULD PAY CANADA'S WAR DEBT

"Poultry and eggs alone could pay Canada's National War Debt," says Fred C. Elford, Supt. of the Poultry Division of the Dominion Experimental Farm, Ottawa. And he produces the following figures to prove it:

"Canada's net national debt on Oct. 31, 1918, was $1,247,000,000. We have adopted the slogan, 'One hundred hens to every farm, ten hens to every urban lot.' That would mean taking 1,000,000 as the round number of Canadian farms 100,000,000 hens in the country, and 10,000,000 hens in the cities, towns and villages, a total of 110,000,000. Of course everybody in the city could not keep hens, and many would not even if they could. But many people in the suburban districts of the cities, and in the smaller towns, and the country villages could keep more than ten—20, 30, 50, 75 perhaps. So take an average of ten. A good select hen will produce 200 eggs a year. But taking a low estimate of ten dozen eggs a year (120) for 110,000,000 hens and we should produce 1,100,000,000 dozen eggs a year.

"At the present time we consume in Canada 23 dozen eggs per head of population per annum. We could increase this allowance to 50 dozen, a total of about 350,000,000 dozen. We use less than 25,000,000 dozen of our eggs at the present time for incubation. Suppose we increase this to 50,000,000 dozen. That would total 400,000,000 for Canadian consumption, a very liberal allowance. We would then have left for export 700,000,000 dozen at an average price of say 40 cents per dozen. That would bring $280,000,000 per year into the country from eggs alone. The interest on our debt of $1,247,000,000 at 5 1-2 per cent will amount to $68,585,000. We would pay this interest and apply a balance of $213,415,000 to reducing the principal every year. In less than six years Canada's hens would wipe out the total monetary cost of the war to Canada, and our total net national debt.

"I do not say that Canada will do this. But I say that Canada might well aim to do it, for it is within the possibilities of what could be done without undue strain upon our present labor capacity."

THE ROYAL MINT

The Royal Mint at Ottawa has been one of the most important industrial war activities in the Empire. During the past three years it has turned out more refined gold than any similar institution in the world has ever done and has earned a profit of approximately $600,000.00.

The accumulation of gold in South Africa, the falling rate of exchange in the States and the risk of loss in shipping to London, required Imperial stabilization action. War purchases in the States could not be met by Canadian exports, and so the Royal Mint at Ottawa — opened in 1908 by Earl Grey—received instructions in 1915 from the Royal Mint of London, England, to proceed with the refining of 1,000,000 ounces of bullion containing varying quantities of silver and base metals. The Ottawa Mint had at the time a comparatively small refining plant, only sufficient for the normal requirements of Canada, but by working day and night, including Sundays, the first million ounces was refined and delivered as fine gold bars in nineteen weeks, one week less than the time allotted, this being a weekly output, allowing for loss of time, of nearly 60,000 ounces.

Orders speedily came to quadruple the weekly output; the Royal Mints of Melbourne and Sydney loaned two foremen of long experience; and with three daily shifts of 150 employees, the output was raised to 1,000,000 ounces per month as a minimum.

Since September, 1915, it has refined 600 long tons, of 2240 lbs. avoirdupois, producing some 1,344,000 pounds of refined gold, worth $350,000,000; and not less than 1,500,000 ounces of silver.

During 1917, the Mint received 3,250,000 ounces of gold from South Africa, Borneo and Canada, which produced 7,350,000 ounces of fine gold, and 999,000 of fine silver. The maximum output in one week of 48 hours, running one shift with fifteen chlorinating furnaces, was 206,000 ounces, which it is claimed by the Mint officials constitutes a world's record.

There is a small loss in minting operations, caused by volatilization, but the loss from start to finish is only 0.2 per 1000 of gold and 0.6 per 1000 of silver; for even the furnace ashes, floor sweepings, and groundup crucibles are cleaned and treated for what is technically called the mint "sweep."

From the Fields of France

These are the things our lads shall bring from France;
A clearer sight; a knowledge strange and new
Of human souls revealed to common view;
A spirit wakened by deliverance
From motives small and mean; a wider chance
For those once held repressed and hampered through Outworn conditions; and fair dreams come true
For high hearts tried and proved by circumstance.

A miracle has touched our humdrum days
With holiness; a flame that naught may quench
Has quickened eager youth with strength that would Spend endlessly in sacrificial ways;
And there shall rise from battlefield and trench
A new race bred of love and brotherhood.

IF YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

DON'T WANT MUCH

Ottawa, Nov. 27.—The annual interview of representatives of labor with the Dominion government with the object of asking for the adoption by parliament of legislation putting into effect the recommendations of labor as set forth in resolutions passed at the annual meeting of the Trades and Labor Council, took place this afternoon. Labor's demands on this occasion were made to Sir Thomas White, minister of finance, and acting premier in the absence of Sir Robert Borden; Hon. Gideon Robertson, the recently appointed minister of labor; Hon. N. W. Rowell, president of the privy council, and several other members of the cabinet at present in the city. The usual promise of consideration was made by Sir Thomas White.

The labor delegation was headed by Tom Moore, the new president of the Dominion Trades and Labor Council, who was accompanied by all the members of the Dominion executive, with the exception of Secretary-Treasurer Draper, who is labor's representative with Canada's peace delegation, as well as by representatives of many important labor unions, making a representative gathering of about forty in number. Officers of the executive present included Arthur Martel, Montreal;; Robt. Baxter, Glace Bay, and D. Rees, vice-presidents of the Trades and Labor Congress.

The requests made of the government included a number of recommendations which have been urged in previous years. There was a reiteration of the suggestion that pensions should be provided for widowed mothers and deserted wives, with the additional request this year that pensions should be provided for widows and children of sailors and civilians. As in the past, the adoption of a Dominion system of old age pensions was asked for as well as for pensions for soldiers and allied reservists. These resolutions call for an increase in soldiers' pensions to at least $100 a month.

Federal insurance for the soldiers, owing to the exorbitant rates demanded by private concerns was asked for.

The desirability of introducing legislation providing a fund against insurance for sickness was urged upon the government, coupled with a demand for national control of medical treatment in hospitals and the creation of a federal health department.

The representatives of labor again registered their objection to two per cent beer and asked for an increase in the alcoholic strength of this beverage.

Other resolutions presented to the ministers recommended government ownership of railways; the creation of a national fund to meet emergencies in case of national disaster; legislation making Dominion election day a public holdiay and abolishing election deposits by candidates; the introduction of higher land taxes; legislation in aid of the co-operative movement in Canada; the passage of an act making the use of injunctions against strikers illegal; the adoption of more stringent regulations covering food and fuel control; the abolition of private employment bureaus; registration of trade labor unions and the remission of duties on trade union supplies.

Other resolutions presented which directly affect workmen included a renewal of the request for the inauguration of the eight-hour day on all public works; the publication of name of government contractors and nature of contracts; the appointment of a fair wage officer for the maritime provinces; the establishment of minimum wages and adjustment to meet changing conditions throughout the country; protection of car builders and repairers by the erection of suitable buildings; prohibition of the importation of coolie labor and the establishment of a cntral immigration authority.

The labor delegation also reiterated its request of the past several years for a half-holiday on Saturdays for postmen.

95 PER CENT PLATINUM CAME FROM RUSSIA BEFORE WAR

The state of affairs in Russia makes the discovery of platinum in the Serrania de Ronda in the south of Spain, announced in a specific memoir issued by the Geological Institute of Spain, especially interesting. The rocks in this region were studied because of their similarity to the platinum bearing rocks of the Ural mountains. The Ural deposits yielded in pre war days about 300,000 ounces (troy) per annum—about 95 per cent of the world's yearly output. In 1916 this figure had fallen to 86,000 ounces. Platinum has also been found in some quartz deposits in the Ober Rosbeck district of the Taunus mountains in Germany and these deposits are being worked. The chief source of the entente supplies is now presumably the mines in Colombia, where the metal was first discovered in 1735. Their output is comparatively small; in 1916 it was 25,000 ounces, rather more than twice what it was before the war. Other possible sources of supply are the river gravels in southeast Borneo, where further prospecting is required and various districts in North America, more especially Sudbury, Ont., and the stream placers in Alaska, which are being investigated by the United States geological survey. Considerable activity is also reported in the Similkameen and Tulameen districts in British Columbia, which are the chief localities of platinum production in Canada. New South Wales has produced some 2000 ounces in the course of the last five years.—Science Progress.

POST WAR REMARKS

Germany's greatest work of art is that final "bustt" of the kaiser.

Von Tirpitz implored his German sailors: "Quit you like men" — and they quit.

German logic is unchanged — they insist on being fed before the people they have pillaged.

The kaiser said he would stand no nonsense from the Yanks and he found none of it to stand.

Now that the world war is over, those southern European nations might sing: "Jugos, never, never, never will be Slavs!"

There is sound horse sense in the statement of a Berlin editor that "it is better to be under a foreign rule than under the sod."

The public at large probably will not forget that the German women now clamoring for food also spat on wounded allied officer prisoners.

The "lights of London" are again shining bright while darkest night prevails in the deserted haunts of those who plunged the world in gloom.

If there is a hedge around the Hohenzollern retreat the ex-kaiser can make himself useful by converting his "shining sword" into a pruning hook.

The war has taken the "un" out of nearly everything but unconditional surrender. An unsinkable ship has been sunk, an unbeatable army has been beaten, and the unscrutable has been unscrewed."

AN EXPLANATION

An explanation has frequently been asked as to the reason why a nominally Christian nation such as Germany is supposed to be should have manifested such a fury of destruction in desecrating and wiping out the magnificent and historic cathedrals and churches which came within their devastating path of ruin. It is now asserted that this only marked another feature of Hun trickery with the intent to make the Moslem world believe that the Kaiser was a veritable Hadji conducting a holy war on behalf of the Mohammedan faith against the "infidel dogs" of the West. It has been discovered that picture post cards and photographs showing the ruins of these places of Christian worship have been distributed by the million among the followers of Islam in Asia. At the same time the Hohenzollern hypocrite was almost daily announcing his firm alliance with God in terms of sickening blasphemy. Perhaps it would not be a bad idea to deliver him up to the tender mercies of the Turkish Mohammedans who now must realize how he deceived and cajoled them into irretrievable ruin.—Vernon News.

THOUSAND CASES OF FLU

It is estimated by the doctors in charge that Trail has had more than a thousand cases of influenza in the last month. This, of course, includes the many light cases, which means a large number.

Dr. Thom stated to the News that he had on his own records alone a total of 680 cases that he had been treating—which does not include the large number of flu cases that have had the special attention of Dr. Nay in the Gulch section of the city. This is known, without definite figures, to run up into the hundreds, and it is believed that there is scarcely a family or a house or home in the Gulch that has not had one or more down with the malady.

Fortunately conditions are today much improved over what they were a week ago but the doctors still think that all precautions should be taken by the residents of the city against a recurrence of the epidemic, as has happened in a number of places, where they thought they had it stamped out.—Trail News.

WHY SEATTLE PROSPERS

The Seattle labor leader, Mr. Duncan, whose work on behalf of the Victory Loan in this city has been so appreciated, made this remark at the final luncheon:

"Seattle owes its present prosperity to the good relations between capital and labor, and to Prohibition."

His testimony but corroborates that of the leaders of labor in this city, whose views were expressed in the World on the first anniversary of Prohibition in B.C. These were the more remarkable because several of them admitted their original hostility to the adoption of Prohibition, and their astonishment at its excellent effects on the class for whom they spoke.

Not only has Prohibition proved a good thing for employer and employee alike, but it has enormously facilitated the establishment of those better relations between the two of which Mr. Duncan spoke. A union of sober men is more effective in negotation for wage scales than one that is not, and it can secure better wages, partly because its members can give better service.

The experience of Vancouver and Seattle under "dry laws" seems to be identical.—Vancouver World.

SOLDIERS AND THE LAND

The proportion of returning Canadian soldiers desirous of becoming farmers is somewhat higher than had been anticipated, but it corresponds with the similar estimate made in connection with the United States army, where forty per cent of the men also wish to become agriculturalists. Had there been any disposition to revert to the discredited system of land grants there would be undesirable elements in the situation; but that is so clearly ruled out that great benefit should accrue to the country at large from the evident inclination of returned men to settle permanently on the land.

The two chief considerations are those of training and the provision of the best land available in easily accessible situations. It will be useless to place ex-soldiers in the outskirts of settlement, far from towns and with poor transportation facilities. That will introduce into their lives from the outset disadvantages which will eventully result in failure. If, in addition, the land which they are given to farm is poor in quality, all the efforts of government and people to promote the movement will have been wasted.

The demand for agricultural edusation is being very fairly met, both here and on the other side. The men who wish to take up land will have opportunities for preparing themselves to become successful farmers during the period over which demobilization extends. The faicilities for practical work in England and France are already being provided. On this side the agricultural schools and colleges have the needs of the soldiers in view and are ready to extend their co-operation.

The land question is rather more difficult. Closer settlement is highly desirable from the national viewpoint as well as from that of the returned soldiers. The latter require social amenities which can be provided only by proximity to other settlers and, wherever possible, to the towns. The interest of the Dominion is to fill up the country already served by a railway system developed far in excess of existing needs. But closer settlement can be attained only by freeing good agricultural land now in the possession of owners who have in it a merely speculative interest or who are unable to put it into production.

The present owners of land which is unproductive hold it under conditions which have been deliberately created, and as deliberately maintained by past governments, with the consent of the people. They cannot justly be deprived of their holdings without compensation. They have the right either to use the land or to sell it. But the Dominion has equally the right to demand that private owners shall not use their prerogatives to the detriment of the country by withholding lands from use, or to the detriment of the would-be purchaser by maintaining speculative prices.

The problems with which the Dominion and Provincial governments have to wrestle is by no means simple. The plan suggested by Hon. J. A. Calder at the conference of premiers at Ottawa, under which the Dominion government would provide the money with which the Provincial governments would purchase undeveloped land, to be re-purchased on the instalment system by settlers, deserves careful consideration. Its chief difficulty would appear to lie in the fixing of the purchase price. The use of public money for compulsory purchase lends itself to the enhancement of prices; machinery for keeping the amounts paid for land down to close approximations of their market values would therefore be essential.

In this connection it is interesting to note that at the Thirteenth International Farm Congress and Soil Products Exhibition at Kansas City a few days ago "the agricultural responsibility of the nation was made clear, and particularly of the relatively thinly settled West, in the period immediately following the close of hostilities. The congress declared that the responsibility would be accepted, and resolutions were drafted urging co-operative legislation whereby the states would provide land for settlement by soldiers and sailors, and the federal government would, where necessary, reclaim them."

The problem in the United States is identical with that to be faced in Canada; and what is done south of the boundary cannot fail to have far-reaching effects upon this country. The necessity for early and well-considered action is imperative, not only on account of the approaching demobilization, but to enable all the interests involved to avoid the confusion resulting from uncertainty as to what will be done with the lands now ripe for settlement. — Manitoba Free Press.

BRANCHES AT FERNIE, MICHEL, NATAL AND COAL CREEK

OCTOBER AND NOVEMBER DELINEATORS FOR DISTRIBUTION

I.O.D.E.

Mt. Fernie Chapter I.O.D.E. will serve hot tea and coffe, sandwiches and cake at the Poultry Show, Hawthorne's Hall, Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 4 and 5.

As the I.O.D.E. rooms are not yet available members are asked to kindly send donations of bread for sandwiches and cakes to the Methodist parsonage, now occupied by Mrs. W. Owen, on Wednesday morning.

Toronto, Nov. 27.—It was decided at a meeting of the Canadian Red Cross society today that this organization will undertake the regular Red Cross work among the Canadian soldiers on the Siberian expedition, that the work at Halifax among returning soldiers will be enlarged, and that preparation will be made to carry on the work in the Canadian hospitals to a greater extent than has been done in the past. This decision is the result of the two days' conference which the council has been holding and it indicates that the Red Cross will carry on a progressive policy as long as their services are required among the sick and wounded soldiers who will return from overseas. In connection with the Siberian expedition it has been resolved to affiliate the work with the British and United States Red Cross organizations and to leave the shipping of supplies to the British Columbia and Alberta branches.

In connection with the work at Halifax, considerable attention has been devoted to supplying the wants of the sick and wounded upon their arrival, and now, in view of the increased number who are expected to arrive shortly, the executive of the organization will be increased at that point. Up to the present this work has been looked after by the Halifax branch, but now they will be given financial and what other assistance they need. The same applies to the work in the Canadian hospitals, owing to the increased number of men who will return.

Many points are well organized for this effort, but all the branches are to be organized thoroughly and they will be asked to hold themselves in readiness to meet any requisitions which may be made upon them from the commanding officers of the military hospitals. In this connection an appeal is being sent out to the branches asking them to increase their supplies.

With regard to the relief work among refugees in France and Belgium it has been decided to limit that to three months, covering November, December and January. An appeal was sent out some time ago asking the branches to supply material for this activity and for three months the supplies on hand will be used for women's and children's garments, rather than for the French and Belgian hospitals.

It is pointed out with regard to the Red Cross program for the future that there will be a greater demand for money and a less demand for supplies than has been the case in the past. There will be less clothing to be supplied to the hospitals, while there will be a greater demand for the class of comforts which have to be purchased outright, such as cigarettes and magazines.

In spite of this it is not anticipated that there will be any early appeal to the public for funds.

WAS SHE RIGHT ?

Hundreds of Girls Will Ask This Question After Seeing "Playthings."

What people don't know doesn't hurt them!

This adage would have saved Marjorie North many a heartache, yet she told the man she loved everything. She carried him back over the years and painted for his sorrowing eyes the scarlet picture of her first love affair.

Was she right?

This is a question forming the theme of "Playthings," a deeply dramatic Bluebird photoplay, in which the beautiful and talented Fritzi Brunette is starring in the role of Marjorie North.

Through it all the trusting faith of a good woman is exemplified in Marjorie North, who tears the cloak of piety from sham love.

If you would be thrilled by a sincere photodrama artistically presented go to the Orpheum Theatre, Monday, and see Fritzi Brunette in her master Bluebird photoplay, "Playthings."

DEATH OF WM. L. PHILLIPS

William Lewis Phillips, ex-President of District No. 18, who left here with the 225th Batt., has now been definitely reported killed in action on Sept. 28 last. The first intimation of this was when his name appeared in a mailed casualty list over a month ago but as the relatives here had received no official notification and in view of the fact that Thomas, a brother with the same unit, was officially reported killed on Sept. 29, and he having enlisted prior to William Lewis had given his name as next of kin. This gave rise to some confusion and it was only after the matter was checked up by the Director of Records at Ottawa that confirmation of the deaths of the two brothers was obtained.

William Lewis Phillips came to Fernie from Wales seven years ago and was at first employed on the mine engineering staff. Prior to coming to Canada, although born in a mining community and working in the mines during boyhood, he was very studious .He at first trained for the ministry but being of the turn of mind that his endeavors could better serve his fellow men by directing his efforts towards uplifting their social position he became interested in the labor movement and an ardent Socialist. He progressed rapidly in this sphere and for some time was one of the active lieutenants of that noted labor leader Kier Hardie.

On account of ill health he gave up this work and came here. However the call to actively engage in labor affairs soon resulted in his holding minor offices in the local union and he advanced step by step until in 1914 he was elected president of District 18, U.M.W. of A. Although an ardent socialist when the urgent call for recuits came he enlisted in the 225th.

He is survived by two brothers, David E. and Richard S., and one sister, Mrs. W. B. Phillips in this city. Another sister, Mrs. Lewis, resides in Edmonton.

Mr. Phillips death is deeply regretted by everyone here. He had a wide circle of friends and was highly respected for his sterling qualities of straightforwardness and integrity.

ROSSLAND MINER IS NOW A WEEKLY

This week the Rossland Daily Miner reverts to a weekly. Its editor deserves the journalistic Victoria Cross for the able and heroic manner that he has stuck to his post through so many trying times, including the terrible flu storm. The efforts of such heroes of the pen are only appreciated by those who think and know what he has to contend with in the past four years. The day for better things is dawning again in Rossland,, and the writer sincerely hopes that the Miner and its brave editor will yet obtain the recognition and prosperity that they so richly deserve. We admire an editor of brains and nerve, especially when he lives and moves amognst a community, largely composed of mud-brained people who cannot distinguish between a diamond and a hunk of country rock.—Ledge.

The Kaiser's "Bad Eminence"

It can never be said of William's career what Prof. J. Holland Rose has said of Napoleon's: "The man who bridled the Revolution and remodeled the life of France, who laid broad and deep foundations of a new life in Italy, Switzerland and Germany, who rolled the west in on the east in the greatest movements known since the Crusades, and finally drew the yearning thoughts of myriads to that solitary rock in the south Atlantic, must ever stand in the very forefront of the immortals of human history." William can be immortal only in his "bad eminence."—New York Times.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a small bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

SPOKANE AGAIN CLOSES SCHOOLS

At the metting of the council and school board on Monday evening to consider the question of opening the schools ona of the lady delegates stated that Fernie was the only town in British Columbia where the schools remained closed. For her information we will state that in every town in the interior of importance, namely, Rossland, Nelson, Kamloops, Trail and Cranbrook, the schools are still closed and will likely remain closed until the first of the year.

In Spokane where the schools were re-opened the epidemic broke out again with increased virulence and the following article from the Spokesman-Review will show the action taken in that city this week:

At the emergency meeting of the school board yesterday afternoon it was unanimously resolved to ask the city health department to close all the public schools of the city at once for an indefinte period and also put a ban on the pupils attending any public gatherings whatever.

All the members of the board were present. Supt. O. C. Pratt reported that out of a roll call of the city schools of 15,730, including the two high schools, 4561 pupils, or 29 per cent did not attend yesterday. Chairman Engdahl said that the fact of 603 cases of influenza being reported to the health department since Saturday noon showed a serious state of matters.

J. G. La Rue insisted that the matter of closing should be left absolutely in the hands of the health officer, Dr. Anderson, but if he did close the schools the board should press him to prohibit students of the high school and pupils of the grade schools from coming down town, getting out in the streets or attending movie or other theatres, otherwise closing the schools would be useless.

D. B. Heil said unless something in the way of a ban is put in operation it will be utterly impossible for doctors and nurses to cope with the situation. He thought the schools should be closed and that it was the duty of the health department to renew the ban and close up even more tightly than before.

"It is true that if we close the schools and the health board won't prevent the children getting on the streets, going to movies or attending Sunday school the full benefit of closing the schools will not be obtained. Still we are the school authority and I am in favor of the board closing the schools indefinitely, then we shall have done our duty. It will then be up to Dr. Anderson and the board of health to do their duty.

Dr. T. M. Ahlquist, who was present, said that the doctors of the city were the ones who knew the seriousness of the situation more than any one else from their personal contact with the plague. They should rid their minds of it being anything like ordinary influenza or grippe. It was a plague which left behind it tubercular and kidney complications in many cases. The effect of the serum for innoculation or vaccination, according to the leading medical journals, was an unknown quantity and could not be regrded as a panacea.

All the doctors with whom he came in contact were in favor of renewing the ban as they had had to do in Denver. If the schools were kept open it was almost impossible for parents to keep their boys and girls at home. The only plan was to close up and strictly keep the young people at home. Influenza was being conveyed by "carriers," who could only be avoided by keeping out of public gatherings.

Dr. J. E. Drake, the health supervisor, said that since the schools had reopened the strictest care had been taken, every pupil examined and every case that gave rise to the slightest suspicion sent home. This had proved inadequate and the only

SUPREME COURT IN SESSION

A special sitting of the Supreme Court has been in session all week, Mr. Justice Clement presiding.

The first case to be heard was that of Baskin & Stedman vs. the Elk Lumber Co., in which the plaintiffs are suing the defendant company for $2300.00 damages for the loss of posts, poles and material on their limits, which it is alleged were destroyed by fire which originated on the defendant company's limits and through alleged negligence spread to the adjoining property of the plaintiffs.

This case was adjourned at the end of the second day in order that two civil jury trials could be heard.

The first jury case was that of Scarpino vs. Rizzuto, a suit for $2000 general damages and also actual damages for loss of time by the plaintiff on account of Rizzuto in August last assaulting him and fracturing his jaw. Shortly after the occurrence, which arose over alleged derogatory statements by Scarpino as to Rizzuto introducing marked cards into a game which was being run at Scarpino's place of business, Rizzuto was convicted in the County Judge's Criminal Court of assault and fined $35. The present suit subsequently followed and after a two day trial the jury after thirty minutes' deliberation returned a verdict awarding the plaintiff damages to the amount of $150. The court awarded costs to the plaintiff as well under the Supreme Court scale.

The second jury trial opened yesterday afternoon, being that of Jesse Mansfield vs. Frank Zwick, in which damages are sought by the plaintiff to the extent of $15,000 for seduction of his seventeen year old daughter while he, Mansfield, the plaintiff, was overseas on active service. Yesterday the evidence of the plaintiff and his daughter was all that was heard and this side of the case closed this morning. The defence, however, will probably take longer and the case will probably not go to the jury before this evening.

In all the actions so far the opposing counsel have been the firms of Lawe & Fisher and Herchmer & Graham.

On Thursday morning before Mr. Justice Clement, A. Macneil made application for writs of habeas corpus and certerorari on behalf of five alleged members of the Ukaranian Social Democratic Party, who are charged with belonging to an unlawful society and also having in their possession literature which has been placed under the ban by order-in-council. His Lordship, however, promptly dismissed these applications informing Mr. Macneil that inasmuch as these men were out on bail they could not properly seek any remedy by habeas corpus proceedings, and also in view of the fact that their case was still being heard before the magistrate that until a decision had been made in the lower court a writ of certerorari could not be granted. The accused men are out on bail aggregating $11,000 and their trial will not be heard until Dec. 9.

URGENT APPEAL

Owing to the many families left destitute by the recent epidemic the Benevolent Society has had many requests for clothing. Anyone with cast off clothing suitable for babies or older children or that might be made over for them, would confer a great favor on the Society by sending it to Mrs. A. Klauer.

WILL LEND MONEY TO THE PROVINCES

Under an order in council the Dominion government has arranged to lend money to the provinces for the purpose of better housing of the working classes in towns and cities. The object is worthy but it is to be hoped discrimination will be shown in the handling of the funds. It would be a very easy matter to squander much money upon badly conceived schemes of this nature.

THREATEN STIKE IN COAL MINES OF DISTRICT 18

Because two Japanese are being employed in the Galt coal mines at Lethbridge, operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway, officials of District 18, United Mine Workers of America, are threatening to make trouble.

Reports from Lethbridge say members of the local union are hostile at the action of the mine officials.

Ted Brown of Calgary, secretary of District 18, told the Herald this morning that unless the Orientals were removed a strike would be called in the mines in which they are employed. "If that is not efficacious," added Mr. Brown, "then we are prepared to call a general strike of all miners in District 18."

Up to the time of going to press this afternoon the Herald had been unable to get in touch with Lewis Stockett, head of the mines branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway.—Calgary Herald.

SCHOOLS WILL STAY CLOSED

A joint meeting of the city council and the board of education was called on Monday evening to meet a delegation of citizens who objected to the closing of the schools owing to the influenza epidemic. All the members of the council with the exception of Ald. Jackson and Ald. Hunter were present, and all the members of the school board but Trustee Hancock.

Among the delegation of citizens were Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Johnson, Mrs. H. F. McLean, Mrs. Elley, Mrs. R. W. Wood, Mrs. E. K. Stewart, Mrs. S. F. Wallace, Mrs W. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. W. Owen, T. Uphill and A. I Fisher.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Johnson, Mrs. E. K. Stewart and Mrs. R. W. Wood were the principal speakers for the delegation and they placed their contention before the meeting, stating emphatically that the closing of the schools when the epidemic was practically over was a blow to the education of the youth of the city.

Dr. Garner, acting medical health officer, stated that he did not believe that the time had yet arrived when the schools should be opened and that if they were opened and any deaths occurred through the lifting of the ban he would feel himself criminally negligent.

The matter was discussed pro and con for some time, some of the delegates waxing quite wrathy at the action of the school board and the health authorities and they seemed to want the schools re-opened whether the health of the children of the town was endangered or not. However, the majority of the council backed the action of the school board and the schools will remain closed during December.

POULTRYMEN HOLD BANQUET

The third Annual Show of District No. 9 Fernie Poultry and Pet Stock Association closed last evening with a most successful banquet, which was held at the Northern Hotel. Fully thirty-five guests of the members of the Association partook of their hospitality and the most cordial spirit prevailed and merriment could not be excelled.

A. I. Fisher acted as chairman in a most capable manner. The speakers of the evening were J. Hayden, who acted as judge during the show just closed; Dr. Bonnell, T. Uphill, James Clarke, J. Cunliffe, James White, F. Brindley, A. G. Bonnallie and many others. The musical numbers were contributed by Mr. and Mrs. Whitehouse and Mr. Perrington.

Mr. Hayden gave a brief address congratulating the local exhibitors, and particularly those who have gone in for the black varieties of birds. These he claimed were far superior to those exhibited at recent Western Canada shows in Saskatoon and Calgary; in fact he stated they were par-excellence. The buff and white varieties here were good but there was room for improvement.

R. Jones and Mr. Hancock replied and gave a very lucid idea of what difficulties that had to be surmounted in order to breed birds and make as favorable a showing as the local exhibition demonstrated. They urged that more become interested in this line.

Dr. Bonnell in his address heartily congratulated the local Association for the very efficient manner in which they had brought the enterprise to such a successful conclusion, but he urged that it must by no means be allowed to become dormant, and that the public who already showed indications of special interest in these shows should be further educated along these lines. As Honorary President, he stated that he intended to fill it conscientiously not only in an honorary capacity but in an active one as well.

CURLING MEN HOLD MEETING

The annual meeting of the Fernie Curling Club was held in the offices of Herchmer & Graham on Tuesday, when over forty curlers were present.

The officers for the season 1918-19 are:

Hon. President—W. R. Wilson.
President—M. A. Kastner.
1st Vice-President—A. Corrie.
2nd Vice-President—Harvey Brown
Sec.-Treas.—Thos. Cole.
Chaplain—Rev. F. Yolland.
Executive — S. Herchmer, F. C. Lawe, R. M. Young, Thos. Prentice, and E. K. Stewart.

The annual membership fee was fixed at $12; this fee to be adhered to throughout the season, except in the case of strangers moving into the district after 31st January, 1919, when the fee will be $6.00. It was regularly authorized by motion that in case employees of banks and other corporations being transferred from Fernie, their successors would be allowed to finish the season on their predecessors' subscription.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Corbett, Austin, Kossoff, Quail and Harive were appointed to act with the executive in selecting skips for the season.

The locker fee was fixed at $1.00 for the season, and the Ladies Curling fee at $5.00 under the same regulations as prevailed last year. The arrangement of all competitions was left in the hands of the Executive.

Regular games will consist of 12 ends to start at 7.30 p.m. and the executive was instructed to strictly enforce the rules of the game.

The question of leasing the two sheets of ice in the skating rink was discussed and the matter left in the hands of the executive.

The season will open with a game between teams representing the President and Vice-President, and it was decided to charge 25c entarance fee, the losing side to pay an additional 50c each and the proceeds to be applied to purchasing prizes for the Ingram Cup series.

The new members as shown on list were accepted and duly entered.

A unanimous vote of thanks was accorded to Secretary Cole for his services.

The prospective membership of the club for the ensuing season so far stands at 108 applicants.

Following is a list of the rinks as picked by the skips last evening:

Thos. Beck, skip—B. Ferguson, J. Garbutt, V. Jenkins.

Wm. Baldrey, skip—A. T. Hamilton, G. A. Bonnallie, E. Mills.

ALBERTA FLU CASES TOTAL UP TO 26,398

Edmonton, Nov. 29.—The minister of health handed out the following statement at noon today:

The number of new cases reported yesterday was 68. Total to date 26,398. One place not heretofore heard from, namely, McLennan M.D., reported four cases.

Reports from different points north of the C.N.R. indicate that workers have the situation fairly well in hand, but the flu is overrunning territory that it had not already overrun.

Practically everybody seems to be down with the flu at Monarch. Erskine closed its hospital yesterday.

At Burdett late last night the conditions were reported much worse. A hotel was converted into an hospital and 19 cases brought in. A graduate nurse was sent at once from the Calgary office.

In Barns the flu seems to be breaking out again, nine new cases being reported yesterday. There is a small hospital there with two graduate nurses in charge.

WINNERS AT POULTRY SHOW

Although the number of birds on exhibition at the third annual exhibition of the Fernie Poultry Association, which opened on Wednesday in Fernie, was not as large as on the previous occasions, the class of stock exhibited was equal to anything which has ever been shown in Canada.

Mr. Hayden, of Edmonton, who was the official judge, spoke in the highest terms of the birds shown, stating that they would be recognized as winners in any exhibition.

The poultrymen of this district are not very numerous but they are a bunch of good live hustlers and did everything in their power to contribute to the success of the affair.

The refreshment booth was under the charge of the I.O.D.E., who rendered splendid service.

Following is a list of the prize winners in the different classes:

White Orpingtons

DISCRIMINATION

The change authorized by the Minister of Marine in the treatment accorded sailors on their discharge does not go far enough. No reason whatever can be advanced why any discrimination should be shown towards those who serve on sea. Soldiers when discharged from the army are permitted to retain their military clothing, and, in addition, are given $35 as a clothing allowance. With the cost of clothing what it is today the sum of $35 is not enough. No matter what economy is practised it would be impossible to buy anything resembling an outfit at that figure. But the case of the discharged sailor is more unsatisfactory still. Those beneath the rating of Cheif Petty Officer upon discharge have to return all their uniform except great coat, underwear and boots, whereas they only receive $25 to outfit themselves for civilian life. Cheif Petty Officers and men in square rig retain their clothing with the exception of cap and badge and distinctive badges and buttons, and are given $7.50 as a clothing allowance.

This display of parsimony on the part of the Naval Department needs rectification. It is to be hoped the Army and Navy Veterans and the Board of Trade will not let the matter rest until the sailors are treated in exactly the same way as the soldiers upon their discharge. The Government can make no satisfactory explanation of why there should be invidious treatment. This is a matter in which the Navy League of Canada can test its growing influence, indeed it is one that comes peculiarly within its province. Public support will not be lacking in steps taken to right a wrong that is contemplated. Large numbers of men in the navy are about to be discharged. They are entitled to equal chances with the soldiers in making their re-entry to civilian life and it is intended they shall have them. The Government in this matter would show wisdom as well as justice in following a similar course to that to prevail with discharged soldiers.

TWO KINGS

William II. of Germany and Prussia, smoking his cigarette on a Dutch railway platform, just over the line from "meine Leute," who are pursuing him, and listening with craven submission to the shouts of "Assassin!" from Belgian refugees ranged about, cuts a very different figure from his collateral ancestor Frederick II. of Prussia, called "the Great," when that ruler (also very much of an assasin) was in like circumstances of defeat. Frederick often found the fortunes of his incessant and wicked wars against him; but he, barring his flight on the occasion of his very first appearance in battle at Mollwitz, did not meet these circumstances in a cowards way. He was in the habit of carrying with him a bottle of corrosive sublimate, and all who knew him were aware that he was fully prepared to take it if things went too badly for him and his country.

On one occasion Frederick was certainly very near to taking the fatal draft. At Kennersdorff, in the Seven Year's War, he and his Prussian army were utterly defeated and crushed by the Russians, Frederick gave up all as lost, and he sent a courier back to Berlin with word:

"Let the royal family leave Berlin. Send the archives to Potsdam. I have no resources left. All is lost. I will not survive the ruin of my country. Fargewell forever."

But before Frederick could carry out his intentions, he succeeded in extricating himself from this wreck of his armies; the Russians did not follow up their victory; and soon after, with the death of the Empress Elizabeth and the succession of Peter, there came a reversal of the Russian policy, and Prussia was saved—saved, to be sure, with the loss of ten per cent. of its people, the total depopulation of hundreds of villages, and with sorrow, misery and want incalculable. But in a truly Prussian manner Frederick was able to enter into a bargain with the victors atKennersdorf by which Poland was robbed and partitioned between them, and all went well with his precious dynasty.

Now, however, this same dynasty is at the end of its rope. Without a shred of the fierce heroism of the past, William II. sneaks out of the Fatherland, and in the midst of the bitter jeers of the people whose brothers he has murdered, takes cowardly refuge in a foreign chateau.

Even there justice may find him.

The Defence of the President

It is not a wholesome symptom that, almost before the ink with which Germany signed away her hope of becoming a dominating world power is dry, marking the greatest triumph of democracy in a century, if not in all history, irreconciliables in the United States senate should be afforded opportunity of misrepresenting and attempting to belittle a man whom the whole world cheerfully recognizes as one of the most important factors in the achievement of this victory. There is no excuse for impugning the motives, much less for questioning the loyalty of Woodrow Wilson to the Constitution and to American ideals. It is when hidden evil forces are seeking every possible means of expression, every possible method of propagating suspicion, discontent and sedition that men in high office should indulge, through partizan rancor, in aspersions tending to create disunion among good citizens.

Common sense, common prudence and ordinary judgment should impel those intrusted with public responsibility to take a broader than portizan view of the work that lies before the president at this juncture. He is responding to a world invitation in consenting to attend the peace conference. His presence at the board is sought because his counsel is everywhere esteemed. The nation he will represent should feel proud of the honor conferred upon him. It has stood behind him in making war; it should stand behind him in making peace.—Christian Science Monitor.

PAT CASEY'S PRAYER

An Irish soldier, after ten months of hard active service, applied for furlough. His request was granted, and then it dawned on him that he had no money to take advantage of his holiday. He wanted $100 to go to Paris.

He was at his wit's end, there being no time to be lost, when he recalled his old mother's advice to apply to the good God above in time of trouble. So he wrote and posted this letter:

"Dear Lord: Here I am after fighting ten months in mud up to me neck. The work is somewhat unpleasant but Ye'll be glad to hear that I killed fifty Germans. Now I'm a little tired and have me furlough all right, but I have no money left, having spent most of what I had for prayer books. Ask Father McCarthy if Ye don't believe me. So, Lord, I ask Ye in the name of all the saints for the small sum of 100 dollars. Sure, you'll never miss it, and if ye send the money I'll never forget ye in my prayers.

Pat Casey."

In due course this appeal reached the censor's office which happened in this particular locality to be housed in the Y.M.C.A. quarters. The letter was passed around and aroused considerable attention and discussion and interest, as Casey was known to be a brave and cheerful fighter.

Contributions were sought and finally the sum of fifty dollars was raised. This was sent to the applicant without comment in a Y. M. C. A. envelope. The next day the following acknowledgement was received:

"Dear Lord: I've received your 50 dollars as per application for furlough money, and I thank ye. May yer shadow never grow less. But I make so bold as to give ye a word of warnin'. Send the next money by the K. of C's. Ye sent the last by the Y.M.C.A. and they nipped half of it on ye. Pat Casey."

GREAT BRITAIN'S SACRIFICE

Four years of war cost Great Britain the lives of 658,665 of her sons. They left the scars of battle upon the bodies of 2,391,326. In all, her casualties numbered 3,049,991.

This was the price she paid because of her fidelity to a treaty and to an unwritten understanding. Her signature was pledged to Belgium, her word to France. Behind word and signature she put all that she had of blood or treasure.

We are wont to speak of America's unselfishness and to think that we stand aloof and alone in our disinterested devotion to the cause of humanity. And yet there were days when we were told that America's interests demanded our participation, and when the Zimmermann letter to the German minister in Mexico was urged as proof that American territory was at stake in the war.

And American interests and American territory were at stake, and they were considered among the arguments that impelled us to enter the struggle. But the fact lessens no whit the importance of the higher impulses that inspired our effort.

Nor should the fact that Great Britain had interests at stake and territory to guard minimize the splendid truth that she did not hesitate when Belgium and France were threatened, but, without calculation of cost threw herself unready into the strife and played her full part to the end.—Rocky Mountain News.

PEOPLE WITH A VISION

Boston Monitor: Durring the past four years, but especially during the last eighteen months, the Tzechs-Slovoks have forced the world to recognize them as a great people, a people who have already attained to a large vision and a willingness calmly and intelligently to sacrifice themselves for it, which places them well in the van of human progress. It is of just such qualities that the world has special need at the present hour, and those who have given proof of possessing them will be veritable sheet anchors in the great council which must shortly meet to settle the affairs of the nations.

A GREAT ACHIEVEMENT

In the big war loan campaigns which have just been concluded, Canada, per capita, beat the United States by a substantial margin.

The United States Liberty loan totalled $6,989,047,000, subscribed by 100,000,000 people.

The Canadian Victory Loan totalled $676,027,217, subscribed by 8,000,000 people.

The investment per capita in the United States was thus $69.89, while the investment per capita by Canadians was $84.50.

To put it in another way: If Canada had had the same population as the United States and had maintained its per capita subscription it would have raised eight and a half billion dollars for the last Victory Loan.

Canada certainly has reason to be proud of its Victory Loan showing.—Nelson News.

SYNOPSIS OF
LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

Buying Upon Faith

UNLESS you are an expert, you cannot judge the quality of a shoe by looking at it. It is possible to take most of the wearing qualities out without changing its appearance. Shoes are bought largely upon faith in the integrity of dealer and manufacturer.

In these days of high-price levels, your confidence should be well placed. Go to a reliable dealer, whose judgment you can trust. Get his candid advice as to values. Buy for the best service at the price which you wish to pay.

Look for the manufacturer's trade-mark on the shoes you buy. It is a sign that the manufacturer himself has confidence in the shoes, and that they are worthy of your confidence. A responsible manufacturer will not jeopardize his reputation by placing his business signature upon an unworthy product.

Buy shoes of a brand you know, from a dealer whom you know. Buy for service rather than merely for appearance. Thus you may be assured of Quality Shoes at Fair Prices.

A.H.M. War-Time Selections offer Special Service Value for Men, Women and Children. Ask your dealer for them.

THE MOONEY CASE

The action of Governor Stephens of California in commuting the sentence of "Tom" Mooney to one of life imprisonment is likely to prove one of these half-way measures that will satisfy nobody and will in the end be worse than no action at all. Mooney was sentenced to hang after having been convicted, not merely of murder, but of a peculiarly cold-blooded, deliberate and cowardly murder which resulted in the death of ten persons. The man who has an enemy and kills him commits a crime, but it is not in the slightest degree comparable with the crime of the man who explodes a bomb in a crowd, killing, tearing and mangling men, women and children alike.

If Mooney is guilty of that crime he should be hanged; life imprisonment is not an adequate penalty.

But Mooney, his friends, labor men all over the continent and many people who are not particularly friendly to organized labor believe that Mooney was convicted with perjured testimony, and that he is innocent. The very judge who tried him is so convinced that there is good basis for this belief that he has repeatedly tried to get a new trial for Mooney.

If Mooney is innocent of the crime his imprisonment for life is a monstrous injustice.

In a word, the course now taken is wrong in either case. How can it be justified? Are the powers that be so afraid of the threats made by some sections of organized labor that they will throw this sop to labor even although believing that the attitude of labor in this case is wrong? Better far to accept the gage of battle and plunge into it at once, for if labor is taking an unjust stand in this matter and wins, then it will go on and make still more unjust demands until finally the situation will become intolerable and the battle will come in spite of all; and then this tyranny will be the stronger; it may be so strong, in fact, that the whole social fabric may dissolve in one bloody welter and the tragedy of Russia may be repeated on this continent.

But if on the other hand the attitude of labor in this matter is just, of what avail this half-measure? Will it satisfy anyone? No, the injustice will continue to rankle, and the tendency will be to accentuate the very danger which authority seeks to avoid.

The thing is wrong in any case. Attemps to temporize, to saw off one faction against the other, to palliate crime because of threats on the one hand or to compromise with conspiracies on the other because of the position and influence of the conspirators, are all wrong. Far better to do justice though the Heavens fall, then take one's stand, prepared for all eventualities, confident in the belief that the right will triumph. It was so that the British democracies stood when they drew the sword against the overwhelming might of the German menace, and saved the world from barbarism.— British Columbian.

"CASCARETS" WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—Take Cascarets tonight.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

VANQUISHED AND SHAMED

Whether the Germans yet realize it or not, in surrendering their high seas fleet they surrendered much more than a fleet; they surrendered the dream of world dominion. The 20 miles of warships between the two lines of allied battleships overlapping them at either end—steamed in to surrender without fight—were the greatest naval force that ever hauled down its flag. No naval pageant in history was equal to it; and never was there so powerful a fleet assembled as the British armada, with attached French and American squadrons, which received the surrender.

The spectacle was unparalleled in history, and so was that which lay behind it. No navy had ever done this before. The Germans fought the British off Jutland; and when the fleet was ordered out early this month to try it again in a desperate last effort the men refused to go. American officers recalled Cervera, overmatched in strength as much as the Germans, who knew that to come out of Santiago harbor was certain destruction, but who came out and fought bravely to the last. Yet the German fleet which was to win the world was handed over without the firing of a shot. It was a humiliation that was incomprehensible to navies bred in the tradition of Drake and Nelson, of Paul Jones and Farragut, and it was a humiliation that must have been felt by every German subject throughout the world.—New York Times.

A HUN IS A HUN

Kamloops Standard-Sentinel: A Hun is a Hun. They will sign the peace papers all right but with mental reservation. Their word is no better today than it was in 1914, when it was nothing but a "scrap of paper." The only way that the Hun will keep the peace is to be so tied up that a false move will mean the loss of his head. The Hun cannot be trusted in defeat any more than he could in victory.

WOUNDED COLONEL LED BIG ATTACK

London, November 30.—Among a list of seven awards of the Victoria Cross is that given to Col. Viscount Gort, whose action during the attack of a Guards division on Sept. 27, 1918, across the Canal du Nord near Flesquieres, when in command of the first battalion of Grenadier Guards, is officially described as follows:

"Under heavy artillery and machine gun fire he held his battalion with great skill and determination to the forming up ground, where a very severe fire from the artillery and machine guns was again encountered. Although wounded he quickly grasped the situation, directed a platoon to proceed down the sunken road to make a flanking attack and under a terrific fire went across the open ground to obtain the assistance of a tank, which he presonally led and directed to the best possible advantage. While thus fearlessly exposing himself, he was severely wounded by a shell.

"Notwithstanding considerable loss of blood, after lying on a stretcher for a while, he insisted on getting up and personally directing a further attack. By his magnificent example of devotion to duty and utter disregard of personal safety all ranks were inspired to exert themselves to the utmost and the attack resulted in the capture of over two hundred prisoners, two batteries of field guns and numerous machine guns.

"Viscount Gort then proceeded to organize a defence of the captured position until he collapsed. Even then he refused to leave the field until he had seen the success signal go up on the final objective."

NEW LIBERTY FUEL HAS BEEN INVENTED

Washington, Nov. 29.—Major Zimmerman, of the war department, announces these advantages of "liberty fuel" over gasoline: Engine starts easier: fuel explodes at temperatures even below zero; mileage per gallon is greater; safe against premature explosion; some materials used in manufacture now drug on market.

Washington, Nov. 29. — "Liberty fuel," vastly cheaper than gasoline and possessing many advantages over that product, has been invented by officers of the war department and is now being produced in large quantities, it became known today. Exhaustive experiments have proved that the new fuel is adapted to all kinds of motor vehicles, stationery engines and airplanes.

Kerosene is the base of the new fuel. The discovery, which ranks with the greatest of the war, resulted after 27 gasoline substitutes had been produced. The other ingredients are of low cost and can readily be obtained. The process of manufacture is exceedingly simple and the cost of the new fuel would be virtually less than that of gasoline.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 29.—Automobile manufacturers here are withholding expression on the reported discovery of army engineers of a "liberty fuel" said to be much cheaper than gasoline until further details are supplied.

They say many discoveries of a similar nature have been announced in the past but none has materialized A cheaper fuel, however, would have radical effects on the industry, they said.

THE POWER OF ADVERTISING

The success of the Victory Loan campaign throughout the province must stand forever as a proof of what good organization and zealous salesmanship can do. It is in no way derogatory of these if we say that it was pre-eminently a proof of the power of newspaper advertising and publicity.

Every other means of publicity was practically paralyzed. Public meetings were prohibited, parades were cancelled, even open-air gatherings were discouraged. The pulpits were unoccupied. Dinners and club gatherings were impossible. All the ordinary methods, outside of newspapers, of informing the public mind and of generating enthusiasm were barred. On top of these was depression due to the epidemic, and most fatal of all in the final days of the campaign, the news of peace.

Each succeeding difficulty was met by the press of the province with a bigger blast of printer's ink. The work of the editors was rendered peculiarly difficult by a simultaneous order from the government to reduce the consumption of white paper. Every extra column therefore had to be deducted from a reduced space for news. Publicity committees, realizing the situation, used generous paid copy; the merchants backed them up. But the free reading matter donated by the press—editorial and news—was three times as great as in the last loan and has probably never been equalled before in this province, not even in a political campaign.

If any papers are worthy of special mention it is the weekly ones, whose staffs in many instances were reduced by the influenza, and who gave without stint often where they could ill afford to do so.

The campaign proved two things: It proved the unselfishness and patriotism of the editors, and it demonstrated beyond question that there is no combination of adverse circumstances which can defeat any worthy campaign behind which is ranged intelligent and adequate advertising.—Vancouver World.

ENTERPRISE OF GREENWOOD CITIZENS

Greenwood citizens are showing no small degree of real old-time western spirit and enterprise in their attempt to dispell the ominous business clouds which appeared with the decision of the Canada Copper Corporation to permanently close its smelter in that city. To raise capital to keep the smelter in action and add to its efficiency in handling ores is rather an auspicious undertaking for a place many times the size of Greenwood, but the initiative which its citizens have displayed would appear to be born of the determination that knows no obstacles and that Greenwood will be able to refute the suggestion of a possible ghost city will be the wish of all admirers of pluck everywhere.

THE KAISER'S WAD

Dispatches to the Daily Mail from The Hague, quoting the Westphalian Gazette, says that the ex-kaiser's fortune, mostly in cash and deposited in various banks, is estimated at $5,000,000 and his income from this is said to be $225,000. The revolutionary government has declared that the ex-kaiser's lands and property will not be seized, though the crown domains will pass to the treasury. Of ninety forests, farms, parks and other estates and castles, only seven are crown domains.

SPOKANE AGAIN CLOSES SCHOOLS

remedy, in his opinion, was to close the schools.

Supt. Pratt and J. G. Rogers were both in favor of asking Dr. Anderson to close the schools.

Chairman Engdahl moved that Dr. Anderson be asked to close all the city public schools immediately and for an indefinite period and that students and pupils of whatever age be forbidden to be on the streets or at any public gathering whatever while the schools were closed, stating that parents could safeguard their children only by keeping them at home or in their own yards. The resolution was carried unanimously.

Last night Mr. Engdahl went to see Dr. Anderson at his home and asked him to close the schools, to take effect this morning. Dr. Anderson said he was only one member of the board of health, of which Charles Fleming was chairman. He personally was in favor of instantly closing the schools and putting a ban on the children attending places where numbers congregated.

Mr. Engdahl and Dr. Anderson then saw Mr. Fleming, who at first said he thought it was a matter for the board to act on its own initiative.

"I have little doubt that our requests will be complied with and that an order will be issued closing the schools Tuesday noon," said Mr. Engdahl last night.

PACKING HOUSE PROFITS

The Federal Food Board in the United States has commenced to wage war on profiteers. Retail dealers charging more than the prices allowed by the Food Administration are to be put out of business. For retail stores a gross margin of profit has been set, which must not be exceeded and this sets the price to consumers. But in the announcement of this exercise of food control nothing is said about curtailing the profits of the great packing concerns and similar agencies where the whole source of the trouble lies. It is useless fixing the prices which the retailer may charge, unless at the same time the control is exercised over the operations of the jobbers, the middlemen and wholesalers, in fact throughout the whole system from the land to the mouths of the people. It is difficult to understand why the United States, with the information in the possession of the government of that country, should have started to control prices in the very last stage of the distribution of commodities, instead of at the intervening stages, where the main profits are being made.

It would be folly for a retail butcher in this country to be told that he must reduce the price of beef from 35 to 25 cents per pound, if at the same time he had not the asurance that the packing firm with which he dealt would sell him the beef at a price which would insure him a profit. Any such mandate by the government would mean a retailer would be forced automatically to go out of business, as he would be operating at a loss. It would be quite another matter if Messrs. Swift & Company and P. Burns & Company and other packing concerns were told by the government that cattle they bought on the hoof at 6 and 8 cents per pound must be sold to the retailer at 14 or 16 cents per pound, and cattle bought at 10 cents must be sold at 18 cents. In that case the packing houses would still be making profits, whereas the meat stores would be able to reduce their prices anywhere from 4 to 10 cents per pound. The government, too, should be able to insure that a proper supervision is exercised over the class of meat sold, and to prevent shipments of carload lots containing steers and common cows mixed indiscriminately, and sold to the public as meat at a uniform price, and no doubt sold to the retailers in the same way.

Producers, as far as we know, are not being paid exorbitant prices for their cattle; nor is there any definite knowledge that retail stores are bleeding the public. The packing houses and such like concerns engaged in the process of distribution are making immense profits, as their financial statements clearly show. To reach the root of the cost of living the government should either take over the packing houses and similar institutions and operate them or else there should be legislation to curb monopoly by fixing prices. It is more important than ever now that definite action should be taken before the paking houses seek to take advantage of the growing trade with Europe. The government should have controlled prices long ago. It has been the duty of the Food Control Board to do this ever since it was created, and because it has not done so widespread suspicion is aroused that influences are at work inimical to the cause of the consumer. The public have a right to demand what Canada's Cost of Living Commissioner is doing. There is a new Minister of Labor in office, whose experience should have taught him that all the industrial unrest there has been, and that still exists, is due solely to the abnormal cost of living. There is a Food Control Board, which, since it is being relieved of other duties, can well exercise its faculties on righting wrongs at home. The problem of the high cost of living has to be solved. Any government which neglects this question is guilty of blundering stupidity.—Colonist.

RETURNING VETERANS IN ANOTHER PHASE

What has become of the remittance man, who, in happier days, used to lounge gracefully over the polished surface of the bar, or recline carelessly in the easy chair while he handled the cup of afternoon tea in the manner born, and exchanged the light gossip of the day about the footligh favorites or the latest sporting sensation? He disappeared when the first shock of war struck the world in 1914. Where did he go? asks the Weekly Gabette.

The first thunder of guns in France was heard by the remittance man; the first orders to cut through the enemy barbed wire found him facing the machine guns with careless laughter. His was the eternal sacrifice of a ruling class proud of its traditions.

And when the awful carnage of war has claimed its last victim will they once more — the few who will be left — adorn society and speak with easy grace of the world's lighter pastimes? Are they again going to scatter to every outpost of Empire —far flung as the hosts they now lead into battle?

It must be remembered that the returned soldier questions deals with men of this class as well as with men who have no "remittance" or other private means.

These remittance men, returning veterans, will be seeking settlement on the land, possibly in smaller acreage lots than those who will require to farm lands for their living entirely.

It is openly expressed by some of those soldiers who have already returned that neither the provincial government nor the Ottawa authorities have as yet fulfilled their pledges in this direction, and that returning veterans seeking land are met with the answer that there are no locations open which are suitable to their requirements.

TEST THE RIGHT TO CLOSE CHURCHES

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 4.—The right of the health authorities to close Catholic churches during such epidemics as Spanish influenza is to be tested in the highest courts in the land. Father Tarasitk, rector of the Polish Roman Catholic church here, was fined $20 today for ignoring the health board's flu order on Sunday and City Solicitor Waddell announced that if the church was opened next Sunday the police would close it. The case is to be appealed, the Catholic clergy insisting that under the treaty of Paris signed in 1763 the free exercise of the Catholic religion cannot be interfered with, directly or indirectly.

Referring to William of Germany, the Times asserts that if "we had to single out one culprit for punishment he would be the person." The argument that he cannot be punished because there are others who also are guilty, cannot be admitted.

R.R. No. 1, Lorne, Ont.

"For over three years, I was confined to bed with Rheumatism. During that time, I had treatment from a number of doctors, and tried nearly everything I saw advertised to cure Rheumatism, without receiving any benefit.

Finally, I decided to try 'Fruit-a-tives". Before I had used half a box, I noticed an improvement; the pain was not so severe, and the swelling started to go down.

I continued taking this fruit medicine, improving all the time, and now I can walk about two miles and do light chores about the place".

Good for the whole family

A good cough remedy is one that can be depended upon to cure coughs. Not one that cures some particular cough, but coughs in general.

While the causes of all coughs are primarily the same, yet the condition of the patient is what makes the difference in the nature of the cough itself. Coughs of healthy persons are easier to cure than the coughs of invalids. The more powerful convulsive cough of a big man is harder to cure than the cough of a baby. If you get a remedy that will cure a big man's cough and yet not be too powerful for the baby, you have a good cough remedy.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

Hundreds Winter at the Coast—Delightful Climate Lures Prairie Folk

Scores from the prairie and middle west are wintering this year at the Pacific Coast, lured by the delightful temperate climate, and the wholesome out-of-door life and indoor social activities of those two charming cities, Vancouver and Victoria.

Golfing, mountaineering, hunting fishing, boating, automobiling winter and summer on beautiful scenic roads lined with towering cedars and firs, are only a few of the popular out-of-door pastimes awaiting you.

Beautiful Pacific Coast bungalows may be rented at reasonable rates, or if hotel life is desired, Vancouver and Victoria boast two of the very finest hotels in Canada—the Hotel Vancouver at that city, or the Empress Hotel at Victoria.

Imagine this beautiful trip through the Canadian Rockies via Banff on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway where five hundred miles of magnificent scenic beauty is passed. You'll like either of the two trains which operate daily, equipped with electric lighted sleepers, roomy tourist cars, dining cars, and luxurious observation cars.

Many take the seven-day cruise each way on the waters of the Pacific to Honolulu, "Paradise of the Pacific." You'll be delighted with the customs and conditions in these beautiful mid-Pacific Islands.

Paddy Hughes, who came to Fernie several days ago as a representative of Brule Union at the funeral of the Dunlap boys, left on Wednesday for that camp.

Attorney General Farris announces that the next session of the Provincial Legislature will probably be held early in the new year. The official also states that the prohibition laws will hereafter be rigidly enforced, now that the "flu" has practically subsided everywhere.

We regret very much to report the death of Jack McTavish, of Jaffray, proprietor of the Jaffray hotel, which sad event took place yesterday. Jack was a fine fellow, a good sport and was well known throughout the district. Mrs. McTavish has the sincere sympathy of a host of friends.

The editor of the District Ledger prides himself on the fact that their plant is now clear of debt. That is fine and now that they have hooked up with A. I. Fisher they may only have to levy one or two assessments each year on the hard working miners of this district to keep the plant going.

If the editor of the Ledger — who styles himself the friend of Bill Heywood, and we do not doubt his word for a minute—keeps on knocking recruiting in connection with the Siberian expedition, he will soon find himself nestling in the straw alongside of Bill in some cold chilly prison cell. The Canadian press censor is not dead if he is asleep.

Mrs. Nicholson and family wish to thank the True Blue Lodge, the Loyal Orange Lodge, the local Union and their many friends for their kindness during their recent sad bereavement; also to thank the following for floral tributes, the True Blue Lodge, Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap, Mr. and Mrs. Simms, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ingram, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilson, Mrs. Clarkson and Mr. and Mrs. P. Bean.

There is little or no stir in municipal politics at present although something is liable to start at any time. Ald. Jackson says he will not be a candidate as he intends to reside in Blairmore in future. Ald. Jackson for the past five years has been the stormy petrel of the city council. He wasn't always in the right, but he always had something to say and in his departure Fernie will lose a good citizen.

The District Ledger infers that the editor of the Free Press was responsible for a certain article which appeared in the Printer & Publisher relative to some past history of that paper. We must deny the soft impeachment. If the editor of the Ledger knew the least part of the history of his paper he could place his finger on the author of that article without giving it a second thought. If he had just run through the list of ex-employees of the Ledger for a moment he would have discovered that a former Linotype operator of the Ledger was now one of the leading editors of McLean's publications, of which Printer and Publisher is chief. Nuf sed. Funny thing, that although the Ledger has always styled itself the champion of the working man, no employee who ever worked on that sheet and quit ever had a good word to say for the bunch who controlled it. This certainly speaks volumes.

CANADA'S FINANCIAL NEEDS

It will be a marvel if Canadians do not face increased federal taxation in the near future. The cost of the war has been mounting up, and is now given at approximately $1,100,000,000. Up to the end of October accounts had passed the Finance Department totalling $1,046,844,000, which, however, does not include soldiers' deferred pay in France and several large outstanding accounts. According to the Canadian Official Record, war expenditures by the Dominion since August, 1914, for the different fiscal years has been approximately as follows:

1914-1915	$ 60,750,000
1915-16	166,197,000
1916-17	306,488,000
1917-18	343,835,000
1918-19 (7 months)	169,574,000
Total	$1,046,844,000

The war expenditure last month was $66,510,000 as compared with $44,481,000 in October, 1917. But Revenue on Consolidated account last month was $23,431,234, expenditures being $19,685,497, thus leaving a surplus to be applied on war expenditure as has been the case generally from month to month. Still Canada's net debt has been mounting up and on October 31 last was $1,287,035,509, an increase during the month of $62,807,616. It is very evident that the Ottawa government must hunt around for new sources of taxation.

WILL SPEND TWO HUNDRED MILLIONS IN CANADA

Britain will spend two hundred millions in Canada during 1919. This has been made possible by a Canadian loan to the imperial authorities for that amount from the recent Victory Loan funds. Thus the fund will not only pay interest to its subscribers, but will provide many of them with profitable employment as well. These domestic loans are a good thing in every way and should be encouraged.

ABOUT THE SPANISH "FLU"

A report from Washington states that the ravages of Spanish influenza still is very serious, and the germ of the disease still eluding the scientists, there is a general impression abroad that civilization has been visited by a new and dreadful malady.

Now, there is some question as to whether Spanish influenza can be called a "dreadful malady." Certainly, it is more sinister than its small brother the "common cold," but, by the same token, it is surely less terrible than its vindictive sisters, pneumonia and pleurisy. But, according to specialists in respiratory diseases, the staff of the surgeon general of the United States army, the public health service, and nearly every reputable physician in the country, there is no earthly reason for calling it new.

"The first association of the disease with the country of Spain seems to have been in 1557, when nearly the entire nation was "stricken sore with spitting, sneezing, coughing and the like." An interesting manuscript published in London in 1749 by Dr. Thomas Short and entitled "A General Chronological History of the Air, Weather, Seasons, Meteors, etc.," relates that in 1557 "at Manta, Carpentaria, three miles from Madrid, the epidemic began in August; and bleeding and purging was so dangerous that in the small town more than 2,000 were let blood of and all died. There, it began with a roughness of the jaws, a small cough, then a strong fever with a pain of the head, back and legs; some felt as though they were corded over the breast, and had a weight at the stomach; all of which continued till the third day when the fever went off with a sweat or bleeding at the nose. In some few it turned to pleurisy or fatal peripneumony." These symptoms correspond pretty faithfully with those reported of victims in our own country at the present time.

Another epidemic seized Spain in the year 1646, and the chronicles of the early Plymouth colony record how a malign disease of the respiratory organs was carried into New England by a cargo ship from Valencia. Several Pilgrims died of it. Following these first seizures in 1646, intermittent epidemics occured in this country with reasonable frequency. Medical books detail them as having taken place a dozen times in the last two centuries.

Between 1850 and 1898 there was a lull in the influenza outbreaks. In the latter year, however, came suddenly the widespread la grippe epidemic, still within the memory of many of us. This epidemic, according to bacteriologists, had its origin somewhere in the Orient, whence it found its way into Russia and then into the rest of Europe and, finally into the United States.

The name la grippe was applied by French physicians, because of the swift and unexpected nature of the disease's attack. The epidemic, statistics show, lasted until 1893 though perhaps, it was not so widespread as was commonly believed. To have la grippe became a thing of fashion, and doctors are inclined to think that many persons feigned sickness through some foolish notion that it gave them a social superiority. This idea may have risen from the fact that several royal families were afflicted.

It was during the epidemic of 1889-93 that the greatest advances in the treatment of influenza were made. A German scientist named Pfeiffer succeeded in isolating a bacillus to which was given the name Pfeiffer's bacillus. Until a few years ago it was devoutly believed by physicians to be the sole cause of influenza.

Spanish doctors are vehement in their denial that the disease which has alredy taken a toll in the United States originated in their country. The facts seem to bear them out. It is generally known that an influenza epidemic occurred during the summer of 1917, in nearly all of the south European countries, and in the fall and winter of 1917-18 reached the western front and sent many a soldier into a base hospital for a brief respite. Among the soldiers it took the name of "Three Day Fever" or "The Flu," the latter being an abridgement for influenza, which was deemed too highbrow and cumbersome for trench use. As early as 1916 the disease was reported on the eastern front by German physicians. Its appearance in New York came late this summer.

Bacteriologists of the United States are agreed that influenza has been carried here from some foreign country—though they are not prepared to say the country is Spain. However, they are more concerned in discovering the cause of the disease than its place of origin. American physicians seem to be at loggerheads as to whether or not the germ which is responsible for the epidemic is the same as the one Dr. Pfeiffer imprisoned under his microscope a quarter century ago.

Surgeon General Rupert Blue of the United States Public Health Service said recently: "That the epidemic of 1893 which swept a large part of Europe and this country was caused by a very minute bacterium, commonly called Pfeiffer's bacillus, is undoubted. Yet, on the other hand, we have found fairly extensive outbreaks of an influenza-like disease which were certainly not due to this bacterium. Influenza—or seeming influenza—is known to have been caused by the pneumocci, the germ of lobar pneumonia.

It is of great importance, Dr. Blue points out, to ascertain definitely whether the physicians of the country have to deal with the Pfeiffer bacillus or with some other germ. "Moreover, said the surgeon general, "we should know whether the outbreaks of 'Spanish influenza' in various parts of the country, like New Orleans, Mobile, Boston and New York, are all due to the same kind of germ."

To this effect Dr. Blue, a few days ago, requested Major Richard M. Pearce, chairman of the division of medicine of the national research council, to use the laboratories throughout the country to determine the exact nature of the micro-organism behind the epidemic. If this is done cultures of the germs from various cities can be sent to the hygienic laboratory at Washington and a careful and comparative study made there.

In addition to this, the public health service is carrying on a campaign of public instruction. Through the press and through community health boards it is administering advice in the matter of prevention and treatment. In a short time railroad stations, post offices and other public buildings throughout the country will display posters setting off the value of personal hygiene.

"The disease now running over the country," the contemplated poster says, "is highly contagious and may attack your community at any moment. And, unless you are very careful, it may attack you and your family. Remember, therefore: 1. To cover up each cough and sneeze. 2. Do not spit on the floor, or on the street, or anywhere where the germs are likely to dry and be blown about. 3. Do not use common drinking cups or public towels."

Checking the spread of a disease like influenza must, perforce, be preventive rather than curative. The sickness is acquired mostly in crowded places or stuffy atmosphere. Plenty of fresh air and sunlight are an almost infallible insurance. An abundant and wholesome diet is also important. It is interesting to note that during the epidemic of '93 Pope Leo XIII, removed the Lenten restrictions from Catholics in order that they might be fortified against its attacks.

It should be remembered too, in treating patients who have acquired "Spanish influenza" care and sanitation are the all important points. Drugs are virtually impotent although aspirin may be administered to relieve headaches and body pains. With proper attention the disease will run its course in three days and the patient fully recovered in less than two weeks. Death seldom ensues except through neglect.

STAND BY THE NEWSPAPERS

Kamloops Sentinel: The Canada Food Board has received $4,000,000 worth of advertising from the newspapers of British Columbia without paying one cent except for furnishing mighty poorly executed mimeograph copy. As far as this paper is concerned we are through and propose to start selling newspaper space instead of giving it away. What was done during the war in the way of free advertising was done cheerfully by every newspaper in this province. The war is over now. There is not a newspaper in the province that was not imposed upon to a certain degree at least by the demands made for free advertising, as well as work and money and service in many other ways. It is time for a lot of editors to get new socks instead of cutting off the worn toes and tying them up to make them last another month; it is time for many of them to get a suit that is not frayed at the heels and decorated with a sunburst in the back of the coat; it is time for him to get a hat that looks no longer as if it had been used to carry the coal up from the cellar. It is also time that the wife who has been helping to fold papers, keep the books, look after the baby and one or two others, cook the meals with mighty little to cook with, had a gown that she can go out with in the daylight, and shoes that she will not have to keep under a chair to hide their poverty stricken appearance. The country newspapers of Canada have made sacrifices galore. They have stood pat when other people were willing to cry quits and let the town go to the deminition bowwows. The editors have worked two shifts and then some to keep the sheet "agoin" so that people would know that the old burg was still on the map. The time has come for a change. The war profiteers who have held up governments might step aside and let the newspapers get the legal rate for government advertising, twelve and eight, even if there is only a little of it, instead of serial stories on the food question. Both Federal and Provincial governments will have an opportunity to show their gratitude to the newspapers and do some legitimate advertising instead of creeping in under the cloak of patriotism. All any newspaper in this land asks for is a square deal, and now with the great war won, with civilization assured for at least 100 years, with production instead of destruction the program, the owner of the country newspaper should come in for his own. The town without a newspaper soon ceases to be a town. It is only a hamlet and will soon be a whistling post. It is up to the governments and the people to stand by the newspapers. They have all stood by you.

JUSTICE TO GERMANY

Germany is not a nation overwhelmed in an ordinary war. She is just a criminal standing at the bar of justice. The allies are not exacting terms of hate and vengeance. They are vindicating law and order.

The German leaders began the war by repudiation of solemn obligations. The invasion of Belgium was a challenge to humanity, a claim of irresponsible power to overturn what civilization has been centuries in building. To have condoned the denial of its solemn obligations by any nation would have been to destroy the slowly accumulated results of the world's striving toward a responsible brotherhood.

Prussia, which has been the driving force and the formative brain of Germany in the last 40 years, was but renewing its own history of bloodguilt and treachery in the past. Prussia has always been a robber power. She has grown with the spoils of Austria, Denmark, France and the smaller states of Germany. Her leaders started on a new career of robbery, and it became necessary for the future security of the world that judgment be passed on the aggressive spirit which she had always manifested toward her neighbors. Imposing a sentence as severe as this armistice is necessary. Germany must be taught that robbery is not a policy that pays.

The severity of the sentence is also made necessary by the policy with which the Germans waged this war. Their deliberate adoption of frightfulness, their invention of new and torturing weapons, many of them expressly forbidden by the civilized laws of warfare, their torture and assassination of civilians, their disregard for the rights of women and children, their bombing of hospitals and needless murder of crews and passengers at sea, their burning and plundering, continued to the surrender, have given reasons for the growing belief that inhumanity is a permanent characteristic of the Prussian soul. Until the world is ready to reconcile itself to the acceptance of deliberate, cold-blooded cruelty as a war measure it can not let a murderous and cruel power, like Germany, off without complete surrender.

Nor can easy terms be granted to the Germans on the ground that they are to be trusted. The whole history of the German management of their own people proves that they have been liars by policy and treacherous as a means of gain. German leaders are not to be trusted. One does not make light and easy terms with a hyena. The only security with the treacherous liar is to take his weapons away from him.—Boston Congregationalist.

THE MERCHANT SEAMAN

"Amid all the pomp and circumstance of war," wrote the late Admiral Mahan in tracting the influence of sea power in the long struggle against Napoleon, "Amid all the tramping to and fro over Europe, there went on unceasingly that noiseless pressure upon the vitals of the enemy that compulsion whose silence when once noted becomes to the observer the most striking and awful mark of the working of Sea Power." When the story of this war comes to be told, it may be necessary to modify Mahan's dictum that the Napoleonic wars afforded the greatest demonstration of sea power in history. In one respect at least it will be necessary to enlarge our perspective.

The deadly working of sea power in this war has depended not only upon the aggressive and relentless vigilance of the navy but upon the grim silent defensive work of the merchant seaman. There was a time when that British phrase, "the righteous sea," was not far from the truth. The German U-boats have belied it by some of the basest barbarities of the war. For two years there was no right when British seamen, civilians like ourselves, were not drifting or perishing on the open sea. A Prussian naval critic has recently admitted that they were "deceived" in thinking that British sailors could not withstand the methods of unrestricted submarine warfare. The waves of the Atlantic will never bring ablution to those who at last confess themselves thus "deceived," but the process of deception has cost the lives of 16,000 murdered seamen.

The drowned merchant seaman was denied the lot of the soldier who fell in fair fight. He was murdered in cold blood by a burglar. His wife and children are left in many cases to poverty because submarine murder, which has never been in the past and please God shall never be again in the future a legitimate weapon of war, has had to run its course. More than 40,000 women and children are widows and orphans because men whose lives were as clearly safeguarded by international law as our own, could not await like us in comfort and security the dawn of a victory that should make our civilization in the world sure for all generations to come.

We do not believe that Canadians would willingly seek to restrict this debt to the British taxpayer or to the generosity of the British people. The debt is ours as much as theirs. Rather is it not less truly theirs than ours, for is not theirs the flesh and blood already paid? We believe that the co-operation of the Navy League next week for the fund being raised for this purpose in Great Britain under the chairmanship of Lord Charles Beresford, will commend the support of every Canadian who thinks and feels what this brutal war has cost. Every ship that sails the sea for years to come will find the disembodied spirits of 16,000 murdered seamen brooding upon the waters.—Manitoba Free Press.

UNCLE SAM PAYS HIS DEBTS

The Americans at the front, more modest than their newspapers at home, realize that it was their great privilege to lend weight to the solar plexus blow, but not to deliver it. The adversary who knocked the Hun out was the same old adversary who had fought him four rounds and left him groggy—the entente—that is to say, England, France and Italy.

This fact, which does not lessen the high courage and the resolute intention of the United States one iota, is nicely discriminated in the diplomatic language which speaks of the "Allied powers and the United States." In some cases the United States is referred to as an "Associated Power." These distinctions spell differences which should not be overlooked when the future historian apportions merit to the various sharers in the war.

What the United States did in this war was to open such a boundless reservoir of man-power that Marshall Foch could go forward with confidence incurring wastages which would have not been possible if these eager, chafing American millions had not been in the background. To get back to my metaphor, the presence of the American armies at the front lent steam to the solar plexus blow which Marshall Foch delivered. It not only lent steam to the blow which was delivered, but it threatened more steam for any other blow that might be necessary.

It was a matter of regret with every American soldier I talked to that his country did not get into the war sooner so that he himself could have got into it deeper. What the American soldier wanted above all things was a fight—to beat up Germany—to inflict on Hunland at least thesame measure of havoc France and Belgium have suffered—to march to Berlin—to overthrow the kaiser—to mete out justice to the practicers of frightfulness—to choke to death the kultur that murders churches, universities, women and children with equal gusto. The American soldier came over tuned to that pitch and it must be a bitter disappointment to him that the quick march of events took the task out of his hands before his hands had reached the throat they were itching for.

The United States' zest for this war of freedom and humanity must be measured not by the casualties, which were a little over a hundred thousand, but by the avenging spirit of its great army, which was infinite. This spirit of righteous anger was quite as keen in the United States army, which—much to its digust—fought only a little while on one front as it was in the British army, which fought four years on fifteen fronts and incurred three million casualties.

CANADA AND SIBERIA

In the vast cosmic workshop where the Fates weave the destinies of nations from the tangled skein of chance and circumstance, two groups of good and evil spirits sat down in the years long ago at two independent shuttles, says The Montreal Daily Star. Today, after nearly three centuries, their intricate patterns—known to the world as Siberia and Canada—are strangely similar, in texture and design.

Canada and Siberia have developed simultaneously, and as the influences which have moulded their growth have been to a great extent alike, so the completed products bear many obvious points of resemblance. In physical and geographical features they have much in common, and this likeness is naturally reflected to a large extent in the fauna and flora of the two countries. Both countries are the reservoirs of food and raw materials for great empires. Both have uncounted wealth in their mineral resources and both the riches of their forests and streams are incalculable, although in both lands the real wealth lies in the "black earth" of the steppes and prairies.

The settlers of Siberia and Canada have both had to face peculiar hardships and suffering as pioneers of their new domain. Climatic conditions have been a barrier to rapid development in both countries. Politically each country has developed along the lines of local self-government with central Parliaments and the final say in matters affecting its national destiny left to the supreme governance of the Empire.

Siberia—the Russian Sibir— is a vast territory of about five and a half million square miles, and supports a population of about fourteen million persons. It is bounded in the west by the Ural Mountains, in the north by the Arctic and Pacific Oceans and on the south along the Tarbagatai range and the Chinese frontier to the edge of Korea. Much of its geography is still imperfectly known, especially in the uninhabited hilly tracks.

Siberia can roughly be divided into three east and west zones. Of these the "tundra," the most northerly, is practically a treeless belt, with perpetually frozen subsoil, the upper layers forming a vast swamp in the summer. Next comes the "taiga" or forest belt, mountainous over a large portion of its area and thickly wooded with poplar, spruce, birch and alder. To the south lies the more open or agricultural belt, with an area suitable for cultivation two and a half times the size of France. Through this runs the great Trans-Siberian railroad from Vladivistok on the Pacific Ocean to Tchelyabinsk, a distance of approximately 4,000 miles. This is about one thousand miles more than the distance from Montreal to Vancouver, although, on the other hand, while the total mileage of the railways of Canada is approximately 36,000 miles, the total mileage of the Siberian railways is not more than 8,000.

Vladivistok, where it is expected the Canadian overseas force will land, is a modern city in every respect. Situated on the tip of the Golden Horn, it is fringed with forests of oak, birch, maple, walnut and lime, beneath which is a rich undergrowth of the most varied shrubs. The annual mean temperature is only 40 Fahr., but the gulf itself never freezes, although a thin crust of ice forms about December and does not disappear until April.

In industry, population and location, Vladivistok may be compared with Prince Rupert, although it is considerably larger than the British Columbia port, but in the modernness of the two places there is no comparison. A magnificent cathedral, a museum, observatory, naval hospital and an Oriental Institute lift Vladivistok at once into the rank of the world's cities, while the shops of its well laid-out streets and boulevards contain the latest novelties from Paris, London, New York and Tokio.

GOOD MUNICIPAL ADMINISTRATION WANTED

A municipal administration composed of men endowed with business ability, initiative, enterprise and expert financial knowledge can prove a factor of the highest value to the community during the time of reconstruction that is ahead. To secure a mayor and aldermen answering these requirements the public will have to take an active interest in municipal problems. There is no form of government that enters more intimately into the domestic life of a community than a municipal administration, and yet, year after year, the people of this city have regarded with a certain amount of indifference not only the civic problems by which we have been perplexed by the ability of the men elected to office whose duty it is to find a solution. The New World has many activities upon which to pride itself, many in which itis leading civilization, but municipal government is not one of these. The reason is because there has been too languid an interest shown by the people themselves in the problems that most nearly concern them.—Colonist.

VINOL MAKES CHILDREN STRONG

And Invigorates Old People

Any doctor will tell you that the ingredients of Vinol as printed below contain the elements needed to improve the health of delicate children and restore strength to old people.

℞ Cod Liver and Beef Peptones, Iron and Manganese Peptonates, Iron and Ammonium Citrate, Lime and Soda Glycerophosphates, Cascarin.

Those who have puny, ailing or run-down children or aged parents may prove this at our expense.

Besides the good it does children and the aged there is nothing like Vinol to restore strength and vitality to weak, nervous women and overworked, run-down men.

Try it. If you are not entirely satisfied, we will return your money without question; that proves our fairness and your protection. Millions of people have been convinced this way.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Shake off the Burden of Ill-Health if you are Weak, Anemic, Nervous, Run-down

CANADA'S BIG JOB IS TO AVERT THE BOGEY OF HARD TIMES

(By Russell Fox)

With the necessity of providing food for Europe until the armies of her belligerent countries are demobilized and the soldiers returned to productive employment, and with the task before us of providing material for the rebuilding of devastated France and Belgium, there need be little occasion for worry about hard times and lack of employment in Canada.

To put Europe on her feet again is not the work of one or two years. It will require a decade or so, and the people of this Dominion and the United States can be employed in turning out the tools and material with which this rebuilding is to be done, to an extent that will keep the factories of the Dominion running, if not in 24-hour shifts, at least in periods of eight to sixteen hours a day.

Economically, however, the present position of the country is extremely delicate, and unless certain important factors are watched, a tendency towards depression might easily result. Two things will be required from every one in the community, and from the government, legislation along certain lines will be essential.

From the public and especially from business men, there is to be expected a spirit of optimism, and the bending of every energy to the development of new markets and the conversion of factories now being used for the manufacture of munitions into plants wherein the products that are required at home and in Europe may be manufactured. And in making this transition from a war to a peace basis not a moment's time should be lost, so that there will not be, if possible, even a temporary loss of employment by any number of workers. Further, there should be a continuation of the policy of thrift that has been practiced during the war so that the financial resources of the Dominion may be maintained.

With regard to laws, probably the least important that will come before parliament will be the tariff, and the most important, a revision of Canada's currency system. Signs are not lacking that the tariff will be projected into public discussions in and out of season, by interests determined to attain their own ends regardless of the common weal. There is no need to go into the various tricks and pretensions that may be used in this connection. Suffice to point broadly to conditions as they actually exist. Canada's chief need is an opportunity to maintain her industrial army. There is no need for the moment to consider trade with the United States. In this country there is an abundance of raw product and workers and factories aplenty to turn it into the sort of goods required here and in Europe. What we do not require here Europe will buy, and hence everyone in this country may be kept busy.

But the question may be asked: "How will Europe pay for what she buys? Will we not require to change our tariff to permit of the importation of European goods in payment for what we sell to Europe? A moment's examination of European conditions will reveal the fallacy of such a contention. Europe will have nothing to sell which Canada needs for at least several years. Every ounce of food produced in Europe will be needed in Europe. Canada may expect to import very little from Europe, and that is exactly the position in which Canada wishes to find itself.

Europe, however, must pay for what she gets to provide pay envelopes for the workers of Canada, and that is the reason why Canada may now be called upon to adjust her currency laws. With the coming of the war, gold was dispensed with in Canada as the standard of currency, and in its place Dominon notes became legal tender. The credit of the Dominion was pledged, in other words, to a greater extent than formerly in so far as commerce within the country was concerned, it being necessary, of course, to maintain gold as the standard in trading with other nations, which the Dominion government had no way of compelling to accept notes in payment of trade debts.

This system has worked most harmoniously, and there is no reason why in settling the problems now confronting the country it should not be continued and enlarged, if for no other reason than to avert every semblance of the bogey of hard times. For example:

France requires material, as does Belgium, for that matter, and other countries. France is not in a position to pay us what she requires by shipping to us the products she herself manufactures, these being required at home. We, however, can sell our goods to France on credit, knowing full well that when she is in a position to pay she will pay. In Canada, however, as in other countries, there is no manufacturer or group of manufacturers, or farmer or group of farmers who can ship products to another country for a period of a year or two and receive in the meantime only the other country's notes.

Here is one remedy that has been suggested: The Dominion government by increasing the number of bank notes in circulation in proportion to the natural resources of the country and of the indebtedness France is incurring, and by maintaining these notes as a standard of currency, with which wages may be paid and goods purchased from merchants at home, can enable the people of Canada to continue in their employment, and at the same time help to rehhabilitate Europe.

Flat, or paper money, was the curse of France after the war of 1870, and of the Federal States at the time of the Civil War, but there is no reason why, when properly regulated and used for a period of not more than a few years, it should be detrimental to the status of Canda. There would be ample resources behind such currency, and while gold is at such a tremendous premium, it would merely grease the wheels of trade and enable us to get some of the trade which may otherwise go to the United States.

THE KAISER'S EXTRADITION

Undue importance appears to attach to the merely legal aspect of the problem of the extradition of William Hohenzollern. If the greatest criminal that ever trod earth is to be given immunity from punishment solely because of complications in the way of international law, then it is high time that international law underwent radical revision.

Assuming that Holland wants to retain so undesirable an immigrant, and that under her treaties with other nations she is legally entitled to give him protection, then it becomes a simple matter of deciding whether his extradition is of sufficient importance to warrant the application of pressure to his protector.

There would be no occasion to make war upon Holland. We should not do that even if it is satisfactorily proved that the violation of Dutch neutrality by the retreating German armies was done with Dutch sanction.

But the world can so regulate its dealings with Holland that it will not be profitable for that country to harbor a dangerous criminal and as long as he lives, a permanent menace to peace.

International safety is the supreme law governing international relations, and as international safety demands the extradition of the former kaiser, he should be given up as promptly as possible when the necessary application has been made.

As yet no definite demand appears to have been made on Holland, but when it is made the foregoing arguments should supplement the merely legal application.

The allies seem determined that certain German generals, admirals, and other officers be brought to book and suitably punished for their special crimes, and there is no reason why subordinates and not their superiors should be held to a strict accountability.

In the case of the former kaiser, it is not so much a matter of adequate punishment — human imagination could not devise anything adequate— as of proper precaution against the reappearance of the emperor in the role of a war maker, or the inciter of revolution in Germany.

Peace will never be secure while this dangerous fanatic is at liberty to go where he wills. Holland is not to be trusted as his keeper. We want to put him where we know he will remain, and this could be done without putting him where he put so many people—underground.

Better men than he have been sacrificed, but if he is not to be sacrificed he should at least be kept safe. —San Francisco Chronicle.

BEHIND THE SCENES

(The Statesman)

Who is running Canada? The people are never consulted as to the government of the country or the future of political parties. In days when Autocracy is crumbling in Europe there are men in Canada who cherish the hope that, wherever Autocracy is destroyed, it will survive in Canada. Those who think so have good reason to believe that their purpose will be accomplished without any serious opposition on the part of the people, who will be distracted by the problems of making ends meet. Having foisted Union government upon the country by methods which we rightly condemn in other nations where Autocracy reigns, the Big Interests are now putting up their money for another shuffle of the cards. The first trick was won by the Siftonites in the appointment of Sir Thomas White as Acting Prime Minister. But the Rowellites have some cards up their sleeves.

Through the mediation of powerful friends Mr. Rowell is endeavoring to find his way back to the Liberal Party. Strings are being pulled and mysterious influences are at work to make the stony Grit road smooth for the apostle of Higher Righteousness who condoned the War Times Election Act, and who was the father of government by Order-in-Council. Behind Mr. Rowell is the Toronto Star, which in December last, denied it was a Liberal newspaper, and which was the first to stab Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the back in an editorial which was patently hypocritical and unfair as it was offensive and lacking in the essential elements of manly criticism. The Toronto Star, which has fought to a finish every advance in wages claimed by its employees of the Typographical Union, is now posing as the friend of Labor and the organ of social reform. At the last election one of its employees, James Simpson, was sent to England to get him out of the way during the electoral contest, and we understand he is now in New Zealand for similar reasons that relate to the coming struggle over reconstruction problems in which Labor is directly concerned. Having betrayed Liberalism, and humiliated democracy by bolstering up an arbitrary government which has suspended the Constitution, and which treats the working man as a potential criminal, the Toronto Star relies upon the indifference of Labor to these great issues to aid in its backward flight to thhe camp of Labor and Liberalism. It is now the personal organ of Mr. Rowell and is moving heaven and earth to obtain a reunion between the Liberals who stood by Laurier and the Constitution, and the leaders who deserted the Liberal party. It looks for a return of a Liberal party to power in which Mr. Rowell will appear as an unrepentant and glorified leader of the democratic forces. But there is a rival in the field.

The mysterious visit to Ottawa of the editor of the Toronto Globe is now known to have been inspired by the rival claim of Sir Clifford Sifton to cabinet making. No man has ever received such a castigation at the hands of an editor as Sifton received, in 1911, at the hands of the former editor of the Globe. Those were the days when the Globe called a spade a spade, and there was no equivocation in the tone of its contempt for the man who returned Borden to power in 1911, and who is now engaged in destroying any political influence he still wields in the Unionist party. Sifton has the support of the Globe in his effort to secure a new Unionist alignment which will bring Ontario into line with the West behind a government which will have the support of the Siftons and from which Rowell will be excluded. This rivalry between the Globe and its evening contemporary would be amusing were it not that Liberalism has been lulled to sleep by the war, and that the changes may be effected before the country knows what these changes portend. Apparently Rowell is like the dove that first left Noah's ark. The Globe is tired of carrying the Old Man of the Sea, and has decided to find a safety-first landing place in rural Ontario by the Western route.

Neither of these newspapers seem to care a fig for the opinions of the rank and file. The secrecy with which the intrigues are being carried on shows how these newspapers fear publicity. Machine politics is dying hard. There are thousands of staunch Liberals who will gladly assist at the political burial of those who so impudently arrogate to themselves the right to run Canada behind the backs of the people. Let the Globe and the Star beware of asking Canadians to choose between Rowellism and Siftonism as the only alternative to Bordenism! Meanwhile Liberals will look on with amusement at the second phase of the Great Betrayal.

FRANCE'S WAR PROSPERITY

An officer of one of the largest shipbuilding corporations confirmed, with some details, the statement made by Jacob H. Schiff in the New York Times a few days ago, that, paradoxical as it may seem, France, after four years and a half of war, is almost as financially prosperous as she has ever been in all her history.

"I never appreciated," said the shipbuilder, "how prosperous this war has made the people of France until I was talking the other night at dinner with some French army officers. One of them said: 'To be sure France has piled up an enormous war debt, as have all the warring countries, but our people have probably never been, individually, so prosperous. And it is perfectly easy to account for their prosperity. First, the British army came in ever increasing numbers, and for their use the British had to build piers and vast storehouses and railroads. French labor was employed to as great an extent as possible in the construction work. And French laborers were well paid. Besides, British soldiers spent freely of their pay wherever they were stationed in France.

"'Then came along the soldiers from Australia. It has been estimated that they left in France an average of about $30 a month. And finally, the Americans came. They were the best spenders of all the fighting forces. While many of the American officers and privates had no resources but their pay, many others had means quite independent. I should hesitate to say how much the Americans averaged per man but I have heard it estimated at a little more than $40 a month. The United States sent an army of not far from 2,000,000 men, Britain an army of not far from 4,000,000 men, plus the troops from her colonies. Suppose each one of these foreign soldiers spent on the soil of France $20 a month. Multiply 7,000,000 or 8,000,000 men by $20 and you can get some idea of the vast sums of money which the soldiers of the allies of France spent on French territory.

"'But besides the construction work done by Great Britain, there was greater construction work, in piers and warehouses and railroads executed by the Americans. The piers which the Americans built at Brest and Bordeaux and St. Nazaire will remain, of course, the property of France. Like the British, the Americans employed all the French labor they could, and they paid handsomely for it. The result of all this has been that the French peasants, the small shopkeepers, the farmers and the day laborers of France have never been so prosperous in all their lives. Families who never knew what it was to take an annual holiday of more than two or three days have for the last two years taken two or three weeks or a month and they have had the time of their lives. The standard of living has improved all over France, to such an extent that I fear now that the war is over, there will come comedowns in the personal affairs of our people.'"

SECRET THINGS

The prophecy of a free Europe is in the touching story of how the French and Belgians emerged from their four years beneath the brutal German hoof. With few exceptions they had kept the faith, had lived true to the hope of that final day of liberation. The people of Lille had all learned various English phrases with which to welcome the British soldiers: "We are glad to see you." "We have great joy today," and the like. Some burghers of Bruges doffed their ceremonial silk hats and sang "Tipperary" from beginning to end for the benefit of certain astounded English Tommies. Fancy a group of business men in Rochester or Dubuque chanting "Madelon" for their poilu visitors! The half-starved children of Belgium left off eating the first square meal they had had in years to sing the songs of their trampled country, songs learned in darkness and misery and under the shadow of a tyrrany too savage for shame, songs sung with such burning zeal that men who had endured all the horrors of war stood around and cried like schoolgirls at a matinee. Imagine trying to explain those hearts to the tricky meanness of the German soul! The very origin of freedom is in that indomitable spirit which years of scientific oppression were powerless to crush. People like that must and shall be free, and it is the high privilege of our civilized world to see to it that their liberty shall never be put in peril again.—Colliers.

CANADA HAS BIG REVENUE

The Dominion's revenue for the fiscal year ending March, 1918, as a result of the success of the business profits taxation, income and other taxes, will reach nearly $300,000,000.

This will be sufficient to meet the interest on our debt, the pensions account, all domestic administration expenditure, and pay off probably $100,000,000 of this year's war expenses.

This enormous revenue, almost double that of years before the war, will be reached, despite a considerable drop in customs revenue due to restrictions on imports.

If the same revenue could be continued, Canada, despite her pensions bill, which may total $60,000,000 a year, and interest on her debt which will reach from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000, would be able to pay off the pre-war debt at the rate of $100,000,000 or more a year. However, without doubt some of the taxation, such the war-profits taration, will have to be dropped next session.

The expenditurres for this coming year will be on a war basis. It will take fourteen months to demobilize the troops, while every soldier on his discharge gets three month's pay.

There has been a statement going the rounds of the press that the minister of finance had intimated to the conference of provincial premiers that additional revenue to the amount of $100,000,000 would have to be raised by the federal government through taxation during the coming year. This is without foundation. Sir Thomas White said at the conference that compared with the expenditures of the year before the war, the expenditure of the Dominion during the coming year, on account of additional interest upon the national debt, attributed to the war, and on pensions account would reach $100,000,000 or more.

GET BUSY

Don't start croaking. This country is going on in prosperity. They may upset thrones and regimes all they please in Europe. We don't do things that way in this country.

When we aren't suited with things as they are we dust off the ballot box and put it into commission.

That's the Canadian way. The peaceful revolution. And business and jobs as usual.

Lots of things need change and mending. Don't forget that. For one thing the common fellow is going to have more to say than before the war. But free people like this know how to go about such jobs as ours without flying at one another's throats. Of course occasianolly some big or little man looses a tornado of fiery words. We do ourselves sometimes and our chest feels better afterwards. Now we're going to be altogether too busy to bother with the brethren of the firebrand.

And we don't have any time to waste listening to croakers. They told us it would take a good many more years than it did to lick the Boches. Thanks be, our boys didn't believe it. The croakers are discredited.

This is our hour of prosperity — for all of us Canadians to make good times for ourselves. Get busy!

There are rumblings of a provincial election, something which the Miner forecasted as early as last May, but this should be considered one of the important items of reconstruction and an opportunity to right the wrongs we made in the heat of a bitter campaign.

Politicians move in a mysterious way their wonders (?) to perform— theyr're looking to the interests of the people always, we don't think.

They'll find this time that they have saner minds to deal with than at the time British Columbians were appealed to for votes in the last campaign. They'll have the returned soldier who will see to it that we have, or make a start on the line of that democracy for which he fought, and there'll be no consideration of the arguments usually put forth.

All who have watched the government at Victoria will agree that the movement now is to get quick action before Johnny Canuck comes home— he's the boy that turned the trick "over there," and will turn the trick here, provided the politicians at the capital do not take snap judgment and conduct their offensive before he can reach the ballot line. — Rossland Miner.

Germans Still

Ottawa Journal Press: The treatment of British prisoners of war being released from German prison camps does not indicate any great change of spirit on the part of the Germans.

Taking No Chances

London Advertiser: The British fleet which met the German surrender squadron was cleared for action.

GIVE THE SOLDIER HIS DUE

This war was won by soldiers, not by dickering diplomats or morale mongers. Bulgaria quit because her forces were not able to hold the Balkan ridges. The Serbs and their comrades of the Allied armies paid a heavy price for that smashing victory, but they had the men and the means to compel it. Turkey quit because Allenby's forces broke up the Sultan's armies and conquered his provinces. It took some years to gain the skill and hardness necessary, and to get adequate equipment together, but Great Britain did it. Austria failed to put Italy out of the war and got an armistice only after the Italians had taken half a million prisoners. Germany seethed with discontent, but the real trouble was that her armies were being whipped and her Rhine towns bombed. The hard, unending work of four years comes to triumphant expression in the great concerts of victory played by master musician Foch across the keyboard of two continents. The dear-bought skill of devoted multitudes of soldiers in all ranks of the Allied armies, makes that march of freedom possible. No doubt the soldier is a specialist, seldom a statesman, not often a great administrator; perhaps it is best that the results of his labors should be built upon by those trained to see and pursue the ideals of peaceful progress but even the modern world has no substitute for the soldier's work. The morale of the vulture nations would be good enough if only their armies could win. There is no virtue whatever in this current civilian undervaluation of military achievement. We may have a better world after the war—we ought to—but that fairer order of human things will stand solely because the armed forces of right fought harder, fought better, and fought longer.—Collier's.

MAE MARSH'S NEW FILM GIVES HER STRONG ROLE

Fascinating Mae Marsh, she of the multi-moods, comes to the Orpheum theatre on Wednesday and Thuusday in her latest Goldwyn photo drama, "The Glorious Adventure," by Edith Barnard Delano. Described as a dramatic offering, the story embodies all the delicate whimsicality the slim star is famous for portraying.

She is Carey Wethersbee, a girl whose knowledge of liife does not extend beyond the garden of the old Southern mansion she occupies with her spinster aunt. When the latter dies, Carey, imubed with the desire to go "visiting," sets out on a journey which brings her to a strange town and the home of Hiram A. Ward, owner of a great mill.

In her innocence Carey does not know that she is defying convention in visiting a strange bachelor, who is at first hostile, then gently tolerant of her odd point of view.

She is taken through the great mills and is shocked at the condition under which Ward's employees work. Unaware of what she is doing, Carey goes down into the slums and distributes money broadcast.

Instead of calming the workers they are only spurred to violence by Carey's impulsive generosity and one night the great mills are dynamited. Shocked by what has been done, Carey cannot believe that she has erred in championing the mill workers and begs Ward to be merciful in dealing with the man accused of causing the destruction.

"I will," says Ward, "if you marry me."

This odd proposal leads to a dramatic situation, followed by an unusual climax.

Needs Watching

Hamilton Times: Germany's hatred for England is the hatred of the beaten bully. And the beaten bully can always be depended upon to do some sneaking thing.

Not Enough Whitewash

Hamilton Spectator: Of 30,000 defaulters in Canada, 18,000 are located in Quebec alone, according to official reports. It would take a frightful amount of whitewash to go over that lot."

Turning the Tables

Ottawa Journal Press: It was the aim and boast of the Germans that they would replace British inefficiency and stupidity with German practical efficiency. But bungling British inefficiency and traditional impracticability have brought German power to a humiliating fall.

Poor Losers

Calgary Herald: The German people are showing themselves pretty much the same kind of people whether in victory or defeat. During their period of success they were overbearing, cruel and boastful. Since disaster fell upon them they display the corresponding traits of character by showing themselves hypocritical, cringing and whining. They are not good losers.

Public Ownership Scores

Winnipeg Tribune: Is there not some food for thought and reflection that during war times the price of water, light and power has not been increased? The city of Winnipeg, under a public ownership policy, controls the price of these great needs of the people.

Venting Her Spleen

St. Thomas Times-Journal: It is the same old Germany, beaten but not repentant . Willing to commit further crimes if she dared. Helpless to meet force with force, but not so helpless that she will not vent her spleen and hatred to the last moment on defenceless prisoners of war.

Best Judges

Halifax Chronicle: If Germany is to be fed by the allies, we would suggest that the rationing be placed in charge of a commission composed of allied soldiers who were prisoners of war in German internment camps. They will have the best idea of how the German people deserve to be fed.

Cannot Trust His Judgment

Guelph Herald: Sir Wilfrid Laurier celebrated his 77th birthday and apparently is as full of grit as ever in his determination to hang on to the Liberal leadership. He will never be able, however, to lead a united party again, for a large number of Liberals will refuse to trust his judgment on big questions hereafter.

BILL PROHIBITS RED FLAGS

Washington, Dec. 3.—A bill prohibiting the display of flags or emblems of organizations, which espouse principles of government antagonistic to the constitution of the United States was introduced today by Rrepresentative Osborne of California. Imprisonment of five to 25 years for the heads of these organizations who do not submit the tenets of their organizations to a United States district attorney for approval is provided.

GRUBSTAKING MR. McADOO

Railroad employes of lines operating out of St. Louis, in order to keep Director General McAdoo on the job, have offered to "chip in" to bring his pay envelope up to the dimensions that would warrant his withdrawing his resignation. They pledge themselves to increase his salary $2,000 a month. If employes- elsewhere- followed suit, and Mr. McAdoo should accept, he would soon find himself drawing a stipend far in excess of that of the president.

Secretary McAdoo was represented in press dispatches a few months ago as wearing patched trousers as a conservation measure. It was supposed at the time he was merely showing the quality of his patriotism, but in the light of the words of his resignation letter it appears probable he was actuated by purely personal economics.

Slipping a cabinet member a few extra thousands a month doesn't somehow seem to comport with the prestige and dignity of the United States of America, hence we may expect Mr. McAdoo, being a gentleman of parts, to turn down the St. Louis offer precisely as he would turn down a proposal of a rummage sale for his benefit or discourage any gesture toward making him a beneficiary of the Red Cross.—Minneapolis Tribune.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a small bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

FERNIE MAN WINS M.M.

Stretcher Bearer Claude Hitchmough, who went overseas with the 13th Canadian Field Ambulance in the spring of 1916, won the Military Medal for conspicuous bravery in removing wounded under heavy shell fire. This report is taken from a Lancashire paper, of which county Claude is a native, and where at the present time he is enjoying a well earned rest.

His parents reside in West Fernie.

CITY POUNDKEEPER DOES SOME OPTIC POUNDING

(Grand Forks Gazette)

When E. F. Laws went to the city pound on Thursday morning to secure a horse of his which had been wandering on the streets and had been gathered in by the poundkeeper, he is said to have called that officer some names that are not printable with the result that his optic came forcibly in contact with the fist of the officer. The impact assayed a black eye and an assault case will be aired in the local police court. As Magistrate McCallum was leaving the city last night the case will likely be heard by justices of the peace. It is expected the case will come up on Saturday morning with reserved seats taken. In the meantime the poundkeeper, who is also city chief of police, is out of office as a seep of juris prudence on the part of Mayor Acres.

The above refers to James Norgrove, at one time provincial constable at Hosmer and later at Michel.

CITY COUNCIL MEETING

The regular meeting of the city council was held in the council chamber last evening with the Mayor and all the members present.

Minutes of meeting held on Nov. 28 were read and adopted.

A delegation consisting of Major Moffatt, Sergt. Warwick and Corp. Hirst, representing the returned soldiers, waited upon the board requesting help in organizing a reorganization centre to assist in all matters relative to demobilization and suggesting that the proposed memorial be made a district matter. They suggested a committee consisting of representatives from the Council, the Board of Trade, the Coal Co., the Miners' Union and the Elk Lumber Co. to look after and find employment for returned men.

A communication was received from Engineers Cummings and Foreman stating that the river protection work would begin at once.

A communication from D. Smith requesting that instructions be given to repair damaged generator, was received.

Moved by Ald. Beck, seconded by Ald. Rutledge—That the Mayor and Ald. Dicken be a committee to act in conjunction with the G.W.V.A. re erecting a suitable memorial; also with representatives from other organizations.

Dudley-Beck—That the city clerk instruct Mr. McCallum to move Mr. Hesketh's furniture from McGladrey's barn to the Hesketh residence.

Dicken-Hunter—That the city clerk insert in the local papers on behalf of the city council their appreciation of the services of the many public-spirited citizens who gave their help to meet the flu situation without any thought of monetary consideration.

Beck-Dudley—That A. F. Anderson be paid $100 in recognition of Mrs. Anderson's services in the epidemic and the city clerk convey the sympathy of the council to Mr. Anderson.

Beck-Hunter—That Aldermen Beck and Hunter be authorized to O. K. accounts re emergency hospital.

The salary of Miss Grundy was raised to $60 per month.

The regular motion in connection with the municipal elections was passed. The city clerk was appointed returning officer at a fee of $20.

Dr. Garner was appointed acting health officer in the absence of Dr. Corsan at the coast.

After passing a number of accounts the meeting adjourned.

I. O. D. E.

The following instructions have been received from Canadian Red Cross Headquarters:

To the Secretary Mount Fernie Chapter I.O.D.E.:

Dear Mrs. Trites — Patterns and samples have been sent you in response to your letter asking for latest needs of Red Cross. For the time being we are confining ourselves exclusively to refugee work. Garments are needed in such quantities that we are asking that a special effort be made by all organizations. Materials on hand for Red Cross supplies should as far as possible be utilized for refugee work.

No more Red Cross supplies will be shipped overseas. Wherever there is a military hospital the Red Cross should reserve made up supplies on hand in case of local demand and should be prepared to fill any request. Otherwise they should ship in usual way any supplies completed or cut out, to central warehouse. Wool on hand can be used for stockings for women and children and some of the coarser grades for sweaters for boys

Yours sincerely,
The Canadian Red Cross Society,
Refugee Sub-Committee.

Head Office Prov. Chap. I.O.D.E.
To Mt. Fernie Chapter I.O.D.E.

Dear Regent and Members—With the following message from the President of our Order, may I also send the greetings of the Provincial President and Executive to all our faithful Chapters, and to ask them to clasp hands with us in this wonderful hour when Almighty God has answered our prayers and accepted our sacrifices by granting a complete victory to our cause; and entrusting to Great Britain and her Allies the enduring peace and welfare, of what it becomes the immediate duty of each one of us to do her part in making, a better world.

President's Message:—

I rejoice with you over Peace with Victory. My heartiest congratulations on the part you have taken in helping to achieve this glorious end. We shall prove that we are worthy the sacrifices made for us by renewing our efforts for the future good of our Empire.

Mary E. Gooderham.

We are asked from Headquarters to immediately assist in the supply of clothing, socks and knitted comforts for the repatriaed parts of France and Belgium, and I would suggest to the Chapters I.O.D.E. that they commence on this work, which should be carried out through the order so that our part in this service may remain identified with the "Daughters of the Empire." I will send full particulars later. Menwhile socks, children's sweaters and garments, petticoats, pyjamas and nightgowns will be among the articles required. Please note instructions as endorsed just received on this subject. The Chapters are reminded that there will be many hospitals and returned permanently disabled men needing our care and solicitude for a long time to come.

Yours very faithfully,
B. M. Hasill, Prov. Sec

Head Office, National Chapter
I.O.D.E., Toronto.

Re French Relief—Important—

Dear Madam—At the annual meeting it was decided that First there should be a fund for rehabilitating the devasted regions for the repatriated refugees. The time for this work is yet to come, though every sign points to its speedy arrival.

Secondly, the most urgent call from France for the provision of clothing and other necessaries to meet the needs of the repatriated refugees, especially women and children. The President desiring to have the advice of those who were personally acquainted with conditions wrote to consult Col. Blaylock, Chief Commissioner overseas of the Canadian Red Cross Society. Crossing this letter came a cable from Col. Blaylock to the Red Cross Society proposing that the Society should direct its energies to supplying the urgent need of clothing for repatriated refugees and suggesting that the co-operation of the I.O.D.E. in this work should be invited. Some Chapters will ask if money to buy clothing would not be just as useful. This question was asked by the Executive of the Red Cross Society and the Commissioners assured them that the made up clothing was necessary, because of the great scarcity of labor and material in Great Britain and France. Therefore the Executive ask the Chapters to use their money to buy material to be made up by the Chapters themselves into garments. The National Executive feel that a great compliment has been paid the Order in being asked to co-operate with the Red Cross in this most urgent work and would urge all Chapters to loyally co-operate.

Yours sincerely,
Gertrude McGaffin,
Asst. National Secy. I.O.D.E.

Head Office, National Chap. I.O.D.E.
Instructions—Most Important.

Dear Madam Regent—At the National Executive meeting held Nov. 6, the following resolution was carried unanimously:

"That all garments sent by the I. O.D.E. to the refugees of any devastated countries of our Allies should bear the Order 'Marking Tag'".

The National Executive wishes to impress on you and the members of your chapter the utmost importance of carrying out the terms of this resolution. In the first place we wish our Allies to know that we are thinking of them. Secondly, it is known that the United States are making every article sent with a sticker bearing the "Stars and Stripes." It is felt that it is the duty of the Order to uphold our own country and the British Empire in the eyes of our Allied countries. Therefore you will see it is a matter of honor and very grave importance that our work should all bear a distinctive and national mark.

Sincerely yours,
Gertrude McGaffin.

The Mount Fernie Chapter has received samples and patterns from Headquarters of garments required, some of which have been already cut out and are ready for distribution to Red Cross workers to take to their homes or to be made in the work rooms, which are again opened but not altogether in working order.

The following outstanding work made from I.O.D.E. supplies has been sent in:

BENEVOLENT SOCIETY MEET

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent Society took place on Saturday, December 7th, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. E. K. Stewart.
1st Vice-President—Mrs. J. Irvine.
2nd Vice-President—Mrs. A. Klauer
Secretary—Mrs. Asselstine.
Treasurer—Mrs. R. W. Wood.
Investigating Committee — Mrs Klauer and Mrs. Macneil.
Dish Committee—Mrs. H. J. Johnson and Mrs. Suddaby.

The following reports were submitted:

Auditor's Report—

To the President of the Ladies Benevolent Society, Fernie, B.C.:

	$291.05
Bal. on hand Dec. 1, 1918	40.17
	$331.22

E. M. Hogan.

Secretary's Report—

During the year the Society held six regular and three executive meetings with an average attendance of eight out of a membership of 24. The President presided at four regular and two executive meetings.

During the early part of the year the work was comparatively light. The influenza epidemic, however, called forth the utmost effort on the part of the President and many of the members. The President especially, Mrs. E. K. Stewart, deserves the highest praise for the noble manner in which she gave her time and her strength to aid the sufferers.

The Society was greatly saddened by the death of one of its members in the person of Mrs. Garner, who overtaxed her strength in working for the influenza patients and herself fell a victim of the disease.

During the last two months the Society has several cases brought to its notice of families left destitute by losing their main support from the influenza. These cases are thoroughly looked into by the investigating committee and if found deserving are given aid in the shape of food and clothing.

DISTRICT 18 ELECTION

Calgary, Dec. 12.—From the returns of half a dozen districts so far received, Christopher is leading candidate for the presidency of the United Mine Workers in District 18. The figures give Christopher 726; Biggs 336; Rees 256; Clark 174.

For vice-president, Dickenson leads with 388; McFagan 237 and Lund 76.

Browne apparently is a general favorite and it looks as if he is sure to be re-elected as secretary. He already has 766 votes as against 286 for Beard and 150 for Lote. There are 34 unions still to be heard from.

Blairmore Vote

For President—Christopher 176, Biggs 31, Rees 25, Clarke 27.

Vice President — McFagan 109, Dickinson 100, Lund 49.

For Secretary—Beard 70, Browne 72, Lote 122.

	Biggs.	Christopher.	Clarke.	Rees
Lethbridge	84	244	19	21
Fernie	88	39	128	190
Blairmore	31	176	27	25
Coalhurst	121	117		6
	324	576	174	242

By the resuts of the voting in District 18 of the U.M.W. of A. thus far received, Christopher is leading the next highest candidate, Biggs, for president, by a substantial majority, but this does not by any means indicate that he is elected president. In fact it will be necessary for him to secure a clear majority over all the other three candidates and he is still considerably short of this as shown by the above figures. He still requires 165 votes to give him a majority and the race is still in doubt. Taber vote is reported very close and while the other towns in the pass not yet heard from may give Christopher a big majority the large number of camps in the north end of the province are still to hear from. These are expected to give Biggs a majority.

Dickenson is leading in the race for vice-president, his total in Fernie, Blairmore and Lethbridge camps being 506, McFagan 436 and Lund 124.

For secretary-treasurer, Browne is leading in three camps with a total of 493, with Beard 345 and Lote 245.

Later—A dispatch this morning gives the following figures up to date:

For President

Christopher 1055; Biggs 498; Rees 550.

For Secretary

Browne 924; Beard 568.

B.C. MEMBERS AT COAST

Dr. Bonnell, M.P., was called to the coast on Wednesday, to consult with the other Dominion members from B.C. upon matters of vital interest. The Nelson News contains the following dispatch in reference to the conference:

Victoria, Dec. 11.—The necessity of supplementing existing pensions to returned soldiers with an immediate war bonus to be made retroactive to the time of the last increase of separation allowance with particular reference to widows and dependents of men who have given their lives, was the unanimous decision of the British Columbia members of parliament today. Demobilization and pensions were the chief topics discussed. The opinion of the conference on pensions has been telegraphed to Hon. Martin Burrell. On the questions of demobilization the government will be asked to retain the men in service with the usual pay and allowance until such time as they can be properly reabsorbed into civil life. The conference also concluded there should be provisions made immediately for some definite authority in each province to deal with the returned soldiers' problem and with power to act. The conference felt that there was a lack of information and guidance for the returned men and it was most desirable there should be the fullest cooperation between them and the governments in solving their problems.

MINERS' STRIKE IS OFF; WAS ONLY ELECTION DODGE

(Lethbridge Herald)

Despite the threat to strike, all the men of the Galt Collieries are at work today and there is no indication of a strike. According to the threat of the local union, supported by Vice-president Christopher and Secretary Ed Browne of the district executive, the 700 men of No. 3 and No. 6 were to have refused to go into the mine this morning.

Members of the Coal Operators' Association are now more than ever of the opinion that the threatened strike was an election dodge pure and simple, calculated especially to stampede the non-English speaking vote of the district in favor of Vice-president Christopher in the race for president, the polling for which will take place Tuesday of this week. So far as the Herald can learn there was never any ultimatum delivered to the Galt Collieries management either at the Lethbridge or Calgary offices.

Indications are that the agitation over the employment of Japs in the local mines has blown over. A couple of weeks ago there were two Japs working down in the pit for a short time, but this was temporary, and they were removed before there was any talk whatever of a strike.

DISLIKE PRESENT LABOR OFFICIALS

Vancouver, Dec. 6.—A suggestion that some returned soldiers be brought out as aldermanic candidates at the forthcoming municipal elections was very favorably received at last night's meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association. A survey of the general situation will be made with a view to taking action.

As the result of another suggestion it is likely that the city council will be approached at an early date with a request that exemption from taxation be granted for a term of years on the new headquarters of the association, near the post office block. The new quarters will be occupied early next month.

There was a lengthy discussion on the attitude which the association would take to organized labor as at present constituted in Vancouver. The question arose out of a communication recently received from a section of organized labor in the city, asking the returned men to meet to talk of matters of mutual interest. Nearly a dozen members spoke on the matter, and there was an almost unanimous opinion that while the returned soldiers favored the principles of unionism and that while the majority of them were union men, still the men who came back to Vancouver from overseas could have no dealings with organized labor in Vancouver so long as the present group of labor leaders control the Trades and Labor Council.

"When they re-elected the present heads who were responsible for calling the 24-hour strike on behalf of a draft evader, organized labor openly defied the returned men," said one speaker.

"We will have no dealings with them until they have a housecleaning," said another.

Still another speaker declared that during the height of the recent trouble a labor leader had stated that it would not be long before the returned men would be asking for labor to assist them.

"Don't ever think we are going to tout to any labor organization or any other organization in Vancouver," exclaimed this speaker. "With returned soldiers, munition workers, old Canadian militia members and the wives and families of these men, we will soon be two and a half million strong in Canada, and we will bend to no one; nor will the labor party or anyone else turn us."

SWISS TRAVELLER THRILLS OVER COAST SCENERY AND CLIMATE

On that beautiful boat trip from Victoria to Vancouver, B.C., a Swiss traveler enraptured over the views he was obtaining remarked, "I have travelled pretty much over the world and throughout by country—and no one who has been in Switzerland will dispute the beauty of the Alps—but for sheer magnificence, for Nature run riot in chaotic splendor, I have never witnessed anything so inspiring as this, nor set in such a genial climate."

As winter vacation resorts offering every manner of outdoor and indoor recreation, few if any cities on this continent can equal Vancouver or Victoria.

Delightful bungalows may be rented reasonable, or accommodation may be had either in the Hotel Vancouver of that city, or the Empress Hotel at Victoria, two of the largest, finest and best appointed hostelries either in Canada or the United States.

Thrilling scenery and comfortable travel through the Canadian Rocikes is afforded by the trip over the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, with stop-over privileges at Banff. Two first class trains operate daily on this system with a service and equipment par excellence. Consult any Canadian Pacific representative who will be glad to tell you all about it.

LIQUOR SITUATION CHANGED BY THE WAR

The transformation in the British liquor situation as a consequence of the war conditions is giving rise to hopes that the old evils of "heavy drinking" are gone forever, says the Toronto Mail and Empire. Lord d'Abernon, the chairman of the control board, declares: "It is recognized that the present system affords a basis for a permanent settlement of the drink question acceptable to all." If the question is being settled acceptably to all, including the United Kingdom Alliance and the brewing interests and the wage-earning masses, what is the system? Before the war the British people's drink bill was $800,000,000 a year. It is now $1,200,000,000—twice as much as for bread and as much as for meat. This does not look on the surface like good progress; but while $1,200,000,000 a year is spent now, the government gets in taxes about $750,000,000 of the amount. About 15,000,000 barrels a year of beer are made, instead of nearly 40,000,000 and the $450,000,000 going to "the trade" for the reduced quantity gives good profit, because so much water is allowed in the beer. The alcoholic contents of the beer is now only a third of what it was. Light beers are growing in favor. Two years ago the manufacture of whiskey was stopped. Under the regulations the strength of the spirits now is weakened to 40 under proof, instead of the old standard of 22 degrees under proof. The dilution has abolished drunkenness among a large percentage of the drinkers. Excessive drinking has declined about 80 per cent; in fact the board has received direct complaints that "it costs an enormous sum now to get drunk." This effort to put the British people, who have refused to accept prohibition, upon what is practically a light beer and wine basis, has, the Mail and Empire reports, accomplished wonderful industrial reforms. The workingman would almost have rebelled if deprived of the beer, but their taste is being educated into the "2 per cent" class.

POSTPONE MOONEY STRIKE

San Francisco, Dec. 9. — Strikes planned throughout the country today as a protest against the conviction and further incarceration of Thomas J. Mooney have all been called off until a special labor congress can meet in Chicago on Monday to consider all phases of the Mooney case, the International Workers' Defence League announced here today.

The league announced that it had heard from all of the unions which had contemplated strikes and they had complied with the league's request to postpone action until after the workers' congress.

Seattle, Dec. 9.—No Mooney strike was held here today, the Seattle Labor council Dec. 4 having voted to postpone the walkout. Council officials said they took the action at the request of the International Workers' Defense league, a San Francisco organization identified with the Mooney defense.

According to Seattle labor officials the defense league asked that the strike be postponed until a meeting is held in Chicago, January 14, to consider united nation-wide union action in the case.

Butte, Mont., Dec. 9.—Following the failure of the great majority of unions here to favor a Mooney strike today it was officially announced last night that there would be no demonstration in Butte. It is announced at the mines this morning that full shifts are at work.

IT DOES SEEM STRANGE

It is a wonder that somebody has not yet suggested that we discard the Fahrenheit thermometer because it is the invention of a German. In this connection the Buffalo Courier points out some strange anomalies. In all English speaking countries the Fahrenheit thermometer (German) is in universal use; in Germany they use the Reaumer (the French instrument), in France they use the Celsus (Swedish) and in Russia they use the Leslie (English).—Simcoe Reformer.

SEE THE SOLDIER THROUGH

Most of the men in thearmy were taken from their homes. It is a slipshod policy that efficiently proposes and negligently disposes. The government plan of registration and induction was thorough and efficient. The men were maintained in discipline and protected against habitual evils by a fine system of welfare agencies. And now after all these safeguards have been thrown about them in ranks, they are to be dismissed willy nilly, far from their homes, out of distant cantonments, fresh from discipline, money in their pockets and a prey to every yawning vice.

Discharge from service should be given at the point of entrance. If a soldier went into service through a registration board there is where he should leave it. The official agency that prepared the way for his service should welcome him home, give him some token of his worth, and continue to see that his life is not beset by the hazards of sudden readjustment.—Chicago Tribune.

GREAT BRITAIN AT WAR

(Scientific American)

Speaking of the magnitude of Great Britain's share in winning the war, Mr. Otto Kahn drew attention to the fact that it was a British characteristic not to indulge in self-advertisement, and that it was due largely to this that the magnificent war record of the British Empire has not received adequate recognition. With a view to placing the facts before the American public and giving due honor to Britain's achievements, an organization of Americans, with Alton B. Parker as chairman and Dr. Charles W. Eliot as honorary chairman, has planned a special day of tribute, December 7, 1918, which will be duly observed in New York and over six hundred cities throughout the country.

During the course of the war, the Scientific American has kept its readers in touch with the technical developments in all the countries and on the various fields of battle. The present article is an attempt to visualize the vast contribution of Great Britain to the final and glorious success of Allied arms.

In August, 1914, the British army contained 250,000 regular troops, 200,000 reservists, and 250,000 territorials (the old volunteers). By the middle of August, two weeks after the outbreak of war, she placed her first expeditionary force of 160,000 men in France. At once Lord Kitchener called for volunteers, and the country bent itself to the task of building up an army to meet the mighty forces of the Central Empires. A year later, or July 31st, 1915, 2,000,000 men had enlisted in the army and ten months after that, on May 25, 1916, the government announced that the total voluntary enlistment in the army and navy had reached 5,041,000. In August of the present year, Lloyd-George announced that there was a grand total of 8,500,000 men serving in the army and navy of Great Britain.

As the war progressed German and Irish propaganda was quick to take advantage of the prominence which was given in the press to the achievements of the troops from overseas—the Canadians, Australians and New Zealanders—by suggesting that England, as usual, was sitting back and letting other people do the fighting for her. The following official statistics show how England held back:

	P.C. Armed Forces	P.C. Casualties
England and Wales	70	76
Scotland.....	8	10
Ireland	6	6
Dominions	16	8

During the four and a half years of war, Great Britain has waged altogether seven different campaigns, and thanks to her omnipresent navy, she has been able to attack and defeat the enemy in no less than 18 different centres of the globe. British forces have fought in the following localities: Flanders, France, Italy, the Balkans, Egypt, Mesopatamia, Aden, Persia, Palestine, the northwest frontier of India, Kiaochau, Siberia, Northern Russia, New Guinea, Samoa, the Soudan, East Africa West Africa, and Southwest Africa.

The above list is the answer to the German cuckoo cry, "Where are the English?" We are now permitted to state that of the total of 8,500,000 fighting men, over 4,000,000 were serving this year in France, over a million in Mesopotamia and Palestine, and the balance in the navy and in the various centres throughout the world, that are enumerated above.

Perhaps, after all, the supreme test of a nation's share in an allied war is the casualty list—the dead and wounded. Judged on this basis we find that in the whole British Empire 1,000,000 men died in battle, and by accident and disease, and today lie in a soldier's grave. Based on the ratio of three men wounded for one killed, the British casualties amount to over 3,500,000.

We in America, who know what grief has come to us, due to some 53,000 deaths and 236,000 casualties, can appreciate the price that was paid by the British Empire with its death roll of over 1,000,000 and its casualty list of over 3,500,000.

Perhaps the most brilliant feat of British arms was the rescue of Mesopotamia and Palestine from the Turk, and the utter annihilation of the Turkish armies in the field. The greatest battle of the British armies began on October 8th, which Frank S. Simonds designates as the "decisive day," when Foch threw three British armies against the Hindenburg Line between Cambria and St. Quentin, with the result that they broke entirely through the wide stretch of those amazing defences. During these weeks of continuous fighting, the casualties were from 35,000 to 40,000 a week.

The official figures showing the total captures of the British army to date are not available at the present writing; but several weeks before the signing of the armistice, the total of prisoners taken on all fronts was over 400,000, of which nearly 300,000 were German prisoners. The total number of guns captured is estimated at over 4000; the majority of these were taken from the Germans in France and Flanders.

One of the most brilliant pages in the history of the army in the great war is that covering the aircraft forces. In 1914, the amount of bombs dropped by aircraft was practically nil. In May, 1918, 668 tons were dropped in a single day. On the western front, British aviators silenced 127 German batteries, destroyed 28 gun emplacements, and caused 60 explosions in ammunition dumps, etc. In one week in August, British aviators accounted for a total of 334 enemy machines and one Zeppelin. From July, 1917, to June, 1918, 4,102 enemy machines were destroyed or brought down by British pilots, with a loss of 1,213 machines.

It is a common truism accepted the whole world over, that but for the preparedness and power of the British fleet, Germany would have succeeded quickly in her monstrous attack on civilization. The work of the navy has been summarized as follows:

1. The High Seas Fleet of Germany, costing her $1,500,000,000 was contained in its home ports.

2. Five million five hundred thousand tons of German shipping and 1,000,000 tons of Austrian shipping was driven off the seas or captured.

3. The overseas trade of Germany and Austria was strangled.

4. The German Overseas Empire was torn from them.

5. Two million enemy subjects of military age abroad have been prevented from joining the enemy.

6. Ocean communication with the markets of the world has been denied to the enemy and secured to the Allies.

The situation which the British navy established within 24 hours remained unchanged to the close of the war.

During this war British warships have fought in every sea, either against enemy ships or to support the Allied troops in land operations. It is officially announced that, in proportion to numbers serving, the casualties suffered by the British navy are higher than those in the army.

In August, 1914, the British navy had a tonnage of 2,500,000 and a personnel of 145,000 officers and men. Today it has a tonnage of 8,000,000 including the auxiliary fleet, and its personnel has increased to more than 450,000 officers and men. This does not include those in the Mercantile Marine, over 12,000 of whom have given their lives for the cause of the Allies. In 1914, mine-sweepers and patrol boats numbered 12; they now exceed 3,300.

During the first four years of the war the British navy transported across the sea over 13,000,000 men, 2,000,000 horses and mules, 500,000 vehicles, 25,000,000 tons of explosives, 51,000,000 tons of oil and fuel, and 130,000,000 tons of food and other material for the use of the Allies. Every day of the year during the fighting in France and Flanders, the navy carried from England 7000 men and 30,000 tons of military supplies, and last April to make good the loss from the German drive, she carried from England to France in 30 days, 355,000 men. To date, the Royal Dockyards have docked and repaired during the war over 40,000 vessels, in addition to doing extensive repairs on Allied ships.

Because of its terrible threat to the boys on our transports and because of the cooperation of our destroyers and patrol boats with Great Britain, Americans have been particularly interested in the anti-U-boat warfare. A statement made public shortly before the close of the war showed that of the Allied warships engaged in anti-submarine warfare in the East Atlantic, 80 per cent were British, 14 per cent American and 6 per cent French.

Of the submarines engaged in hunting submarines, 70 per cent were British, 17 per cent French, and 5 percent American. Of the miscellaneous smaller patrol craft, largely extemporized yachts and motor boats, 86 per cent were British, 11 per cent French, and 3 per cent American. The bulk. of our craft of this type was engaged in protecting our own coast.

British warships during their silent watch in the North Sea and other home waters, travelled in one month 1,000,000 sea miles. In the same month the mileage of auxiliary vessels, including mine sweepers and patrol boats, was 6,000,000 miles. In the anti-submarine warfare, over 150 German U boats have been destroyed. British submarines have been uniformly successful, destroying two battleships, two armed cruisers, two light cruisers, seven destroyers, five gunboats, 20 submarines and five auxiliary vessels, besides badly damaging three battleships. The submarines also destroyed 14 enemy transports, six ammunition and supply ships, and 250 steam and sailing ships and in this work no merchant ship was sunk at sight, and care was taken that the crews got safely away.

At the outbreak of the war the tonnage of the Merchant Marine was 18,750,000, manned by 200,000 officers and men.

On the British Merchant fleet has fallen the great task of supplying with food, coal and other material, not only the far-flung British Empire, but also the great majority of the people of Belgium, France, Italy, Servia, etc. Over 1,500,000 tons was set aside for the service of France, to whom 2,000,000 tons of iron and steel was supplied in one period of 18 months. Of France's imports 45 per cent, and 45 per cent of Italy's, were carried in British ships, and 50 per cent of their coal was supplied by Britain and carried in her ships.

Due to the fact that it has been the great carrier for the Allied cause, and has fearlessly traversed the submarine zone, the Merchant Marine has lost over 9,000,000 tons, or say 50 per cent of its original total.

In carrying on against the ferocious submarine warfare, the 200,000 officers and men, despite the loss of 12,000 seamen and 15,000 non-combatants, have shown undaunted heroism. The President of the Board of Trade reported in the House of Commons (May 15th, 1918), that there had not come to his attention a single instance in which either officers or men had failed to take out their ship when it was ready to sail.

The tonnage entering and clearing United Kingdom ports rose from 6,336,663 tons in January, 1918, to 8,158,639 tons in August, 1918.

The losses through submarines were offset by new constructions and requisitions to the amount of about 4,250,000 tons. By the release of shipping due to the increased production of food in the British Isles, the total increase of tillage since 1916 amounting to 4,000,000 acres, there was a corresponding saving of the service of 2,000,000 tons of shipping.

In 1914 out of a total population of 44,000,000 in the British Isles there were 18,000,000 workers. Of these 6,250,000 joined the fighting force and 4,000,000 went into munition and other war work, leaving only 7,750,000 of the original 18,000,000 to carry on the trade, etc., of the nation—and they did it, thanks to the patriotism and ability of the women of Britain.

In 1914 there were 200,000 female workers. In 1918 over 5,000,000 women were doing 1701 different kinds of work formerly done by men.

The following table includes only a part of these activities of the women:

Munitions	1,000,000
Eng. and chemicals	500,000
Farm laborers	300,000
Army and Navy service	30,000
Government Offices	500,000

The munition output, to which the women so largely contributed, not only suppiled the whole British army but was able to furnish large amounts to the Allies. In 1918 the output had risen to 12,000 tons per day.

In addition to holding the seven seas secure and maintaining an army of 8,150,000, Great Britain, as Lord Curzon stated on July 29, 1918, "has been the feeder, clothier, armorer, banker and universal provider for the Allies." Previous to our entrance into the war she had loaned to the Allies the huge sum of over $8,000,000,000.

During the war the National Debt has risen to $42,000,000,000. The taxation, which in 1914 was about $1,000,000,000, in 1918 has risen to $3,270,000,000. The response to the government loans has been well distributed; for out of 44,000,000 people some 19,000,000 have invested in the War Bonds and War Savings Certificates. At the opening of the fourth year of the war, a popular Victory Loan of $5,000,000,000 was raised in 30 days. Since that time the great drives for money have been abandoned, and the people contribute a steady flow of about $125,000,000 per week.

The foregoing is at best but a skeleton outline of the contribution of the British Empire to the vast Allied operations, which have resulted in the overthrow of the foulest and most stupendous effort ever aimed at the security of modern civilization.

HATS OFF TO BRITAIN AND FRANCE

If conditions were reversed, if the outlook for Great Britain or for France were as desperate as that of Germany now is, it would still be possible to say with absolute confidence that there was no peace in sight. Great Britain has lost irretrievably in dead alone upwards of 1,000,000 men. Our reported losses in war have been in the neighborhood of 62,000, killed, wounded and missing, or rather less than the British sacrificed in a single fortnight in September.

But when France was making the heroic defence of Verdun and the British were fighting to redeem their pledge to Belgium without the subsequent victories in Asia Minor to hearten them, we heard no talk of peace riots in London or Paris. The allies were, as Browning says, "baffled to fight better." If we had never entered the war they would still be fighting without thought of surrender. — New York Wall Street Journal.

CANADA'S SLOGAN

E. R. Wood, Chairman Dominion Victory Loan committee: Optimism must be the slogan of Canada from now on. It is a desperately hard thing to restore confidence when it is once lost, and I trust the business financial and commercial interests of Canada, as well as the federal and provincial governments will co-operate in an effort to preserve a confidence that will carry us over the transition period. Canada must have courage at this moment."

THE PEACE CONFERENCE

Toronto News: The Peace Conference will be the most important national gathering ever held. It will go far to settle the future of civilization. Its decisions will have a vital influence on Canada for generations to come. For these reasons the Canadian prime minister should have a part in its deliberations and in its conclusions. Canadian public opinion on this question should be strong enough to make itself felt on the other side of the Atlantic and that without any further delay.

WHEN THE ELEPHANT SQUINTS

In his recently published "Forty Years in Burma," Dr. John E. Marks tells some humorous stories of elephants.

The huge and highly trained elephants at work all day "a-piling teak" for shipment are a source of unfailing interest. With their tusks, trunks and feet they shift hugs baulks of timber according to the will of the mahout, or driver, who sits on the animal's neck and directs its movements by means of an iron hook which he holds in his hands. Many curious stories are told of the phenomenal intelligence of these animals. Some of them are said to close one eye and squint down the logs as they lay them, to see if they are straight. Others are said to object to work on Sundays, and they all "down tools" as punctually as the British workman as soon as the luncheon bell is heard.

FINDS QUICKSILVER

Port Alberni, Dec. 6.—Mr. Thomas Rowley has received from up the West Coast of the Island some specimens of quicksilver ore which he believes are richer than the average out of which big values are taken. He is advised that the ore exists in large quantities, hundreds of thousands of tons of it being in sight.

Mr. Rowley has sent his samples to Victoria to be assayed and if tests come up to his expectations he will proceed immediately to secure a number of claims.

RED CROSS DOGS

A letter from a young Harvard man in the American Ambulance Service in France which is quoted in the New York Sun, gives an interesting glimpse of the wonderful cleverness of the war dogs.

Last evening, he writes, a couple of fellows came round to see us, bringing with them two of the famous Red Cross dogs. We were anxious to see them work, and so I ran off and hid in some bushes.

Lying down, I placed my cap under me so that the dog could not find it. He finally discovered me; and as he was unable to find my cap, he put his nose in my pocket and pulled out my handkerchief, which he took back. A few minutes later he led his owner to the place where I lay.

They told us that this dog saved one hundred and fifty lives in one day during the battle of the Marne.—Youth's Companion.

A NEWSPAPER TRAGEDY

Toronto Globe: The Montreal Herald, founded 108 years ago, has passed into the hands of a receiver. It has succumbed to the burden of war prices which have fallen with special severity on the newspaper business during a period of riotous prosperity for the paper-making industry.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a small bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

WAR-SAVINGS STAMPS

The Canadian Government offers interest-bearing War-Savings Stamps

Issue of 1919—Payable Jan. 1, 1924

ORDER-IN-COUNCIL P.C. No. 2462 authorizes the issue of War-Savings Stamps for the purpose of assisting in the financing of Government expenditures.

As Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, points out, W.-S. S. will provide "an excellent investment for small savings; and a strong incentive to every-day economy."

$5.00 for $4.00

Until January 31st, 1919, War-Savings Stamps will be sold by all Money-Order Post Offices, Banks, and other authorized Agencies, for $4.00 each, and on January 1st, 1924, Canada will pay $5.00 each for them.

Registration Against Loss

A Certificate is provided for the purchaser of a W.-S. S. On the certificate are spaces to which 10 W.-S. S. may be affixed. A certificate bearing one or more W.-S. S. may be registered at any Money-Order Post Office, fully protecting the owner against loss by fire, burglary or other cause.

The Certificate also shows the Cash Surrender Value of W.-S. S. at various dates before maturity.

NOTICE

There will be a window display of a few of the many articles to be seen at Christ Church Bazaar at McLean's Drug and Book Store, on Saturday, Dec. 14.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS

The Great Northern Railway, commencing 12.01 on Jan. 1, will change time at Cut Bank instead of Troy, that is, Pacific time will extend from Seattle to Cut Bank. The Fernie branch will come under the change, making the G.N. time here the same as the C.P.R.

Montana bootleggers are doing a rushing business these days. That state goes dry on Jan. 1 and they are not letting the grass grow under their feet. One well known bootlegger who does business mostly in Washington, states that he has cleared $20,000 in six months.

Manager Mentrum of the Fernie-Fort Steele Brewing Co., at a meeting of the directors of the Company held yesterday, handed in his resignation. Walter Harwood, late of the Pollock Wine Co., has been appointed manager. He will take over the management on Jan. 1.

Mayor Thomson has definitely announced that he will not be a candidate at the next municipal election. The only name that has yet been mentioned in connection with the position is that of Ald. Beck. Ald. Dicken has also announced that he will not be a candidate at the forthcoming election.

Dobson & Willingham, who for many years have conducted a flour and feed business in Fernie, on Saturday sold out to John Podbielancik, formerly proprietor of the Royal Hotel. The old firm, who by strict attention to business have biult up a fine trade, wish to thank their many customers for their patronage and bespeak for their successor a continuation of same.

The Court of Revision on the Voters' List opened on Tuesday evening in the council chamber. A committee for the Miners Union asked to have the names of those who were unable to register during the last few days of the flu epidemic added to the list. The council decided to ask the advice of the Attorney General on the matter before taking action and the meeting was adjourned.

MABEL NORMAND STAR OF "THE VENUS MODEL"

Captivating Mabel Normand comes to the Orpheum theatre next Wednesday and Thursday in her newest Goldwyn production, "The Venus Model."

Fitted with a role that suits her as perfectly as the dashing bathing costume she wears as "The Venus Model," Miss Normand may be depended on to give an excellent account of herself as Kitty O'Brien, who bound love with a sily thread as a worker in the factory of Braddock & Company, makers of bathing suits sell. So Kitty works out a swimming garment which her acute sense of what women want tells her will be a great success. And it is.

The costume is called "The Venus Model," and Kitty herself is viewed by the buyers in the chic costume. Business booms and Kitty is promoted to the desk of chief designer.

She employs the son of the owner as an assistant. The young fellow's father is absent and he chooses to come under an assumed name in order to prove to his parent that he has the right stuff in him. Kitty and the stranger become great friends and work together to put the business on a firm foundation. Love comes to both, but the girl thrusts it aside, feeling that she is unworthy.

After other amusing adventures and escapes the owner of the business returns, delighted with what Kitty tells him of the stranger who has proved such a help. The right conclusion is brought about in the happiest manner and Kitty is given a permanent place in the hearts of both father and son.

HANDS OFF THE NAVY

Great Britain, according to Mr. Winston Churchill, will go into the Peace Conference determined there shall be no interference with her Navy. In effect this means international law cannot restrict the character of the instrument that guarantees the Empire's freedom, or impose any limitations on the right to maintain naval defence. It is possible to read into this pronouncement that Britain is determined her Navy will not become subject to international control. This statement from a responsible minister will be welcomed throughout the length and breadth of the Empire, but it would be well if every parliament throughout the British domains were to go on record regarding the policy of "Hands off the Navy." There is no subject coming before the Peace Conference that concerns more vitally the welfare of the British peoples. The Navy won the war and upon this aspect of the future of armaments the British delegates have earned the right to make the law, for it is one that affects their existence and is a better guarantee for the Empire's freedom than any League of Nations that could be conceived.

No doubt influences will be at work to attempt to restrict British naval power. There can be no other interpretation of the injection of a discussion of the freedom of the seas into the Peace Conference. But in rebutting any attempt to restrict their naval power the British delegates will be on firm and unassailable ground. There are historic, ethical and geographical reasons why no design to break or bend sea power can be tolerated. There is no single question upon which the peoples of this Empire are more united. Arguments that have been advanced that by a reduction of naval strength so much the more money will be available for commercial expansion must be dismissed for they become peurile in the light of the fact that in Britain's history trade has followed the flag. It will do so in the future no matter what international conventions may be signed. When sea power is used for the purpose of military aggression and becomes a memace to civilization it will be time enough to talk of restrictions. It can never become so in the hands of democratic Britain unless she proves untrue to all her history. Britain's claim to make her own naval future is not susceptible to any diminution, and in the interests of harmony at the Peace Conference it is well this should be clearly understood before the discussions commence.—Colonist.

LANTERN SLIDES FREE

Sets of Lantern Slides, illustrating the various steps in the invalded soldier's climb back from "down and out" to "up and in again," proved very popular last winter all over Canada, as well as on shipboard among the returning soldiers themselves.

We are informed by the Editorial Branch of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment that the slides have been thoroughly overhauled and many new pictures have been added, while new and up to date lecture material has been written.

The new sets are now being sent out, free of charge, on loan to ministers and other responsible speakers who realize the vital need of spreading information on this great national enterprise among all classes of the people.

Posters to announce the lecture are supplied in advance.

Application should be made as early as possible to one of the following addresses:

British Columbia (Mainland)—Assistant Director, Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment, Board of Trade Building, Pender St., Vancouver.

British Columbia (Vancouver Island)—Secretary Returned Soldier Commission, Parliament Buildings, Victoria.

Every applicant should state (1) his own position, (2) the nature of the occasion on which slides are to be shown, (3) the date, or better still, alternative dates, and (4) the route by which the slides are to be sent.

A meeting for the purpose of organizing a branch of the Federated Labor Party was held in the Grand theatre on Sunday night. The following officers were elected: President, Jas. Clarke; vice-president, William Dickenson; sec.-trea., W. B. Phillips.

Maurice Roux was up before Magistrate Hewat yesterday on a charge of having contraband liquor in his possession. In a raid on the premises of the Canadian Dairy, 5 ten gallon kegs of Bourbon whiskey were seized. The case was adjourned until this afternoon.

The District election of officers for the Miners Union was held on Tuesday. Final returns will not be in for a week. It takes longer for the miners to count these three or four thousand ballots than it does to get the returns from an entire Dominion election.

IRELAND'S LOST OPPORTUNITY

Irishmen and their descendants in America, the British colonies and England, Scotland and Wales did their bit in winning the war; but Ireland itself did not. North and South disputed and quarreled among themselves while others fought and died to save the world from Teutonic domination. This is unfortunate for Ireland.

Premier Lloyd George goes to the country with a home rule program that excludes the six northeastern counties of Ulster from the plan because the Irish committee failed to agree on any home rule measure applicable to the whole island. He intends to let the rest of Ireland try the experiment for a term of years, and this will not satisfy the south. America will not intervene to force home rule on the six Ulster counties and the American people will not get excited about the woes of people who profited by the war and failed to take their proper part in the struggle. It has been said with some measure of truth and wit that "Ireland is flowing with milk, honey and discontent."

The war has put America out of touch with Ireland and this will be felt in the politics of both countries. If the Irish had followed their late leader, John Redmond, they would have earned and won a victory for home rule, but they chose to hold back in the critical hour instead of following the example of their kinsmen in all other lands. It is now too late even to talk about it.—New York Commercial.

ONLY 19,125 MILLIONAIRES

According to statistics just published by the statistician of the Bankers' Trust company of New York, there are only 19,125 millionaires in the United States. The use of the word "only" is not ours. It is used as an expression of surprise by the New York Commercial which appears to have believed previous to the publication of the trust company figure, that the number of American millionaires was considerably larger.

The Bankers Trust company figures have, no doubt, missed a few men who, although they undoubtedly possess worldly goods of a greater total value than $1,000,000 have not an income of at least $50,000 a year. But even without these the total yearly revenue of the "income millionaires" is $2,780,235,000, which works out an average of $133,000 each.

While these figures are tremendous their significance is to be found in the fact that the rest of the population of the United States is also in receipt of still a more remarkable amount. The total income of the whole population is more than $55,500,000,000 so that the amount drawn by the millionaire class is less than 5 per cent of the whole. Further subdivision shows that more than $40,000,000,000 of the grand total is drawn by those in receipt of between $1000 and $2000 a year.

In this wide distribution of the total wealth of the country, through income, is to be found the chief difference between our social conditions in this country and in countries abroad. The bane of Great Britain has been the accumulation of a large part of the total wealth of the country in the hands of a few people and the enjoyment of the comparatively beggarly remainder by the vast majority of their fellow countrymen. — Deroit Free Press.

"WHO DID IT?"

Who pushed Germany into the war? The ex-all highest says that he did not. According to his story, Bethmann-Hollweg was the evil genius who shunted him off to Norway in order to give the foreign office a chance to incite Vienna to attack Serbia.

Bethmann-Hollweg denies Willam's charge. He has a good alibi, because he was away on a wedding trip at the time of the Serbian note crisis and Von Jagow was the nominal head of the foreign office.

The ex-crown prince says he opposed the war and tried to end it in October, 1914, by offering to surrender Alsace-Lorraine to France. According to his account, the grand general staff ruled the roost, treating both him and his papa with scant courtesy. Ludendorff, he says, was the man who prolonged the war. But Ludendorff can not be accused of causing it, being in August, 1914, only an obscure colonel.

Nobody is hankering after the distinction of having drawn the German sword out of the scabbard in which it had so long rattled. Denials will be as thick as the leaves in Vallombrosa. And the great controversy will never get anywhere. No one German brought on the war. It was in the heart and mind of the German people. It was the outgrowth of years of mental suggestion.

The German nation made the war. And the whole nation must now pay for its crime and folly.—New York Tribune.

CARE OF HOUSE PLANTS

In caring for house plants it should be borne in mind that they are two classes and that such plants as ferns, palms and the rubber plant will do better in those parts of the room where the light is limited while flowering plants such as geraniums, tulips, narcisse and cyclamen, must have as much light as possible. Plants are more like human beings than like bric-a-brac and if grown to brighten the home during dull winter months they must not be left to take care of themselves or they will soon fail to fulfil the purpose of their presence.

There are not a large number of successful house plants and those which experience has shown are best suited for the purpose demand certain definite conditions. The fundamental condition relates to the atmosphere which must be kept at a suitable temperature and also, for success, must have plenty of moisture. A dry atmosphere, even when plants are well watered, is fatal to good growth. Regular watering is another important factor for success.

Plants will grow better in houses heated with hot water than they will in those heated by hot air or steam. The latter systems absorb the moisture from the atmosphere with the result that the plant either loses some of its leaves by withering or fails to make healthy growth. Pans of water stood on the radiators to give off moisture improve the conditions of plants. The ideal temperature ranges from about 50 degrees to 70 degrees. Higher temperatures necessitate more frequent waterings. Some plants need to be watered daily,, others not more than two or three times a week. A pot which rings hollow when tapped with the knuckle needs water. Over watering is bad for plants and only one or two varieties like the spirea, will succeed if the pots are allowed to stand in water. All pots should be supplied with good drainage in the form of broken rocks filled in at the bottom of the pot when the plants are potted.

Fresh air is always beneficial but not in the form of direct draughts.

A temperature of 40 degrees or lower will often seriously affect the tender house plants. Palms and ferns are the better for sponging once or twice a month. Never water a sickly plant too freely; it more often requires to be repotted. Most plants will be benefitted by a yearly repotting. Healthy plants and plants in flower require much more water than those which are sickly. Soil should not be watered so often that it becomes soggy and always cold. A plant with cold feet and a hot head soon dies.

WASTE EFFORT

Boston Monitor: Of all waste effort the most useless, just now, is the endeavor to show that this or that influence, person or activity "won the war." The subject may tempt one to conversation but it is a saving of time and effort to remember the fable of the man and the bundle of sticks, with the moral, "In union there is strength."

SOLDIERS RESPECT DOG

In its first drive an American platoon, after advancing several kilometres, came into possession of a building which had been a German regimental headquarters. Personal effects scattered about, a half-cooked meal, maps and documents on tables and in racks told of the precipitate departure of the commander and his staff.

In the room which had been the office of the commandant was a dead dog. Attached to his collar was a metal tube. In the tube was a message calling assistance from a German gun nest, which, at the time of reading, had long since fallen into American hands. The dog, trained as a message bearer, had been dispatched with the call for help, had been struck by a shell fragment, as was evidenced by a wound in his side, and had struggled on to the headquarters only to find it abandoned. He will be remembered and respected by the American platoon as one servant of the kaiser who nobly did his duty and died.

HEROISM DURING THE FLU

In the heroism of the nurses and doctors whose lives were sacrificed to duty during the recent epidemic we cannot help seeing the effect of the noble examples set by our soldiers on the field. It was noticeable that some whom their friends had thought rather frivolous and empty-headed were among the first to volunteer their services. That these should have taken their places among the more serious-minded shows that our estimates of human nature may sometimes be wrong. The desire that some permanent memorial shall be erected to the memory of those who have given their lives is one that will commend itself to all.—B.C. Monthly.

TRY FORTY-SEVEN I.W.W. FOR CONSPIRACY

Sacramento, Cal., Dec. 8. — Forty-seven defendants in the Industrial Workers of the World conspiracy case which grew out of the investigation of the dynamiting of the home of Governor William D. Stephens here Dec. 17, 1917, will be brought to trial here tomorrow in the United States district court on charges of attempting to obstruct the war program of the federal government.

Sixty-two persons, including one woman, Theodora Pollok of San Fancisco, were named in the United States grand jury indictment. However, four of the defendants have died. Another Julius Weinberg, has pleaded guilty. Several others have not been apprehended and the cases of four or five will be disposed of otherwise, according to the prosecution.

The defendants were accused in the indictment of a conspiracy to encourage sabotage by arson and other means and of fostering resistance to federal war measures and proclamations.

Robert Duncan, special attorney for the department of justice, will conduct the government case. He will be assisted by P. H. Johnson, assistant United States Attorney, and by George N. Murdock, Chicago, special agent of the department of justice, who assisted in a successful prosecution of the Industrial Workers of the World case in Chicago.

Miss Pollok will be represented by Nathan Coghlan, attorney of San Francisco, while the other defendants so far have indicated a determination to adhere to their announced intention to conduct their own defence. They have appointed a trial committee and it is announced by it that they will conduct "a silent defence."

United States District Judge F. H. Rudkin of Spokane will preside.

DO NOT TRUST THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT

All British labor leaders are not trustful of the new government at Berlin. J. Sexton of the Dockers, Liverpool, at a recent Trades Congress meeting in London said:

I have no more confidence in the men who are now controlling the government of Germany than I had in the Kaiser himself. (Cries of "Oh!") There is something suspicious about the whole matter when Hindenburg masquerades as the Vicar of Bray and offers his services to the revolution, and when the Kaiser has his finger on the back door. Until they carry out every one of the terms of armistice I am not going to be convinced that it is their honest intention to carry out any of their promises.

Mr. Sexton also expressed the opinion that the Lloyd George coalition would swamp labor in the coming elections.

Some one must stay at home to do the work of daughter, sister, maid.

To keep home sweet and clean, wouldn't you say she needs all the time-saving help that Gold Dust will surely give. These four helps particularly.

No. 1—Greaseless

Some articles collect more grease than others. For instance, roasting and frying pans, tops of stoves, dish towels. Busy housekeepers find that a tablespoonful of Gold Dust to half a pail of hot water makes the water soft for hands and wonderfully dissolving for grease.

No. 2—Gritless

There are many articles which require a smooth cleaner with no grittiness to mar glossy or polished surfaces. Such things as: silverware, windows, mirrors, wash bowls and all enamelled surfaces. Gold Dust is a smooth, gentle cleansing agent without grit. Remember—a tablespoonful to half a pail of hot water.

No. 3—Rubless

Soap rubbed on a cloth cannot clean such things as: baby bottles, milk bottles, cruets, funnels, food choppers and all utensils with spouts. But Gold Dust dissolved in hot water makes a solution which dissolves every bit of oil or grease without the need for rubbing. Yes! A tablespoonful of Gold Dust to a gallon of hot water.

No. 4—Tasteless

Not even a trace of soap must be left behind when you clean the following: Nooks and corners in iceboxes, dairy utensils, strainers, sieves and graters, patented articles such as grinding mills and egg beaters. Gold Dust thoroughly and effectively dissolves every tiny particle of oil or grease and washes out completely. Nothing but sweet cleanliness can remain.

The statement was made on Trafalgar Day in London that the British Navy has carried by means of its transports 16,000,000 fighting men and the casualties amount to one man in every 10,000. The safety of the legions of overseas troops rested with the Navy. That and the Mercantile Marine through their vigilance and efficiency have made the victories of the past year possible in France. They have fed and clothed the army in Salonika and have kept England so well supplied with food and raw materials that no really serious lack has been felt.

The Manitoba Branch of the British Red Cross forwarded £30,000 to London as its contribution to the movement for raising funds to care for the wounded. The campaign was set going on October 24—"Our Day." Great enthusiasm greeted the news of this gift.

Representative English women arranged for a luncheon recently in honor of the Matrons-in-Chief of the Military Hospitals. This is the first public recognition given these workers although the high quality of their service has been realized every day. No one except those in close touch with all that a military hospital must do can form the slightest idea of the extent to which the success of the entire institution depends on the Matron-in-Chief. Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyle, presided and Queen Alexandra sent flowers from Sandringham. The Queen sent a kindly message and Mrs. Humphrey Ward sent an address to be read as there were no speeches.

The demand for war memorials has revived interest in monumental brasses which have been so universally adopted in England for memorial purposes as to be looked upon as a distinctively English form of art. There is at present on the top floor of the Victoria and Albert Museum a collection of rubbings from brasses dating back from the 13th century English memorials to the present day. These studies are grouped as Military, Ecclesiastical, Civil and other costumes. There are over 2400 studies in the Museum collection any of which may be seen on application. A complete list with 176 illustrations is on sale for 2s. 6d. and will be helpful to those planning memorials. An example of modern brasses is taken from an "Eleanor" cross that is being erected by the village of Sledmere, York, in memory of their officers and men who have fallen.

CHANGES IN DEMOBILIZATION

The plans for the demobilization of the Canadian army appear to have been modified in deference to the desire of the men and officers overseas to return as units. This leads inescapably to the conclusion that the original plan was drafted without very much effort to discover the wishes of the people principally concerned, the soldiers thmeselves. The desire of the government to prevent waste and friction and to bring the soldier most easily and quickly into touch with congenial employment were the proper motives of the scheme. But since any scheme however carefully prepared on paper depends for its success primarily upon the goodwill of the soldiers towards, and the co-operation of the public in it, these two essentials must be secured.

If the views expressed by some of the higher command of the Canadian army represent those of the men—and it is to be presumed that these officers know what the men want—the decision of the government to change the plan of demobilization is wise even if belated. Better some inconvenience and expense during the process than that the men should come back dissatisfied with the methods of demobilization and disappointed with the nature of their welcome home. If, then, the men and officers set some store by the prospect of returning as units, instead of in that manner which would be most economically beneficial, in the abstract, the satisfaction of their wishes will, in the long run, conduce to greater efficiency in their reestablishment.

In any case the machinery already set up will be readily adapted to the change. Some overhauling of that machinery would not, however, come amiss. It ought not to be possible for any man to be discharged until he has a clean bill of health, mentally as well as physically, allowing for permanent injuries received; though these in any case demand and receive special treatment. If he insists on being discharged, in face of medical warning of the consequences of an endeavor to enter too soon on civilian employment the responsibility of the government is greatly lessened and private citizens and business establishments cannot undertake the cost of his maintenance in return for inefficient service. This should be made clear in every case of over-anxiety to leave the service.

Neither the somewhat autocratic habit of mind inseparable from military command nor official particularity and lack of adaptability to special circumstances — in short, no "red tape" — should prevent the soldier from being cared for as long as his mental or physical condition demands care. He might, perhaps, ought, to be kept "on the strength" during the process; but he ought not to be launched into civilian life except under every possible safeguard from failure to maintain himself in comfort.

All this is elementary; but warning that the methods are yet imperfect is necessary and timely. Soon it will be too late to improve them. Injustice to the men and to those who will bear an undue proportion of the cost of their failure will then be unavoidable.—Manitoba Free Press.

TWO MEN CAUGHT IN INVERMERE SLIDE

Invermere, B.C., Dec. 9. — Heavy falls of snow here of late caused some slides. One came down on Lead Queen mine north of here, burying John Macdonald of this place and M. F. Powell of Secretan, Sask. Macdonald was recovered after an hour and a half digging but in spite of the mine crew working until exhausted Powell was not recovered. He leaves a wife and family. Macdonald was caught last year also by a slide at the Sitting Bull mine.

GENERAL NEWS

This year Canada raised 106,000,000 bushels of potatoes, the greatest yield on record. The average yield to the acre in B.C. was 228 bushels, the highest of any province. Alberta went a fraction over 70 bushels to the acre, the lowest of any province.

The removing of the ban upon public places has brought an increased amount of death and sickness from the flu in hundreds of places in America. In many cases the plague is five times more prevalent than it was when the ban was on. The ban should be kept on everywhere until the scourge is entirely gone in America. The mad race for gold is the cause of removing the ban too soon in nearly every place. Ledge.

The Vancouver Island coal mines are slowly regaining their normal output of about 3000 tons of coal a day. The work was seriously hampered by the flu as a large number of workingmen were absent through sickness, but now the majority have returned and the other day 1600 tons of the mineral were mined.—Ledge.

At the request of the War Trade Board, an investigation as to the possibility of recovery of potash salts from the waste flue gas of cement plants is now being undertaken. In the past Canada has produced only small quantities of materials containing potash, not in any way meeting her demand for this commodity, and it is expected that the product now wasted by operating cement plants will prove sufficient to supply home requirements in the fertilizer and other industries, and at the same time leave a surplus for export.

Forty-nine Belgian priests were tortured and put to death by the Germans during the occupation, Cardinal Mercier, the Primate of Belgium, declared in a recent interview. He added that 12,000 men were removed from his diocese to Germany, where they were forced to work. Other crimes committed by the Germans, the Cardinal said, were too long and too terrible to relate briefly.

All mails between Europe and the United States eventually will be carried by airplanes, according to Lord Morris, who has championed a movement before the parliamentary committee for the establishment of a port of call for Atlantic liners on the west coast of Ireland. Already, he says, a regular daily mail service by airplane is maintained between England and France without interruption by the weather.

The Allied squadron which sailed on Nov. 15 for Sebastopol was composed of the British battleships Superb and Temeraire, the French battleships Justice and Democratic, the Italian battleship Leonardo Da Vanci, the British cruiser Galatea, the Italian cruiser Acordat and nine destroyers. The squadron was preceded by the British cruisers Canterbury and Admant, one British destroyer and one submarine and the French destroyer Bisson.

The estimated numbers of farm live stock, based on the returns received, are for the whole of Canada as follows: Horses 3,608,315, milch cows 3,542,429, other cattle 6,507,267, sheep 3,037,480, and swine 4,289,682; fowl 31,324,498, turkeys 1,058,981, geese 879,177, and ducks 884,034.

Work is to begin at once on an 8-mile extension of the Alberta and Great Waterways railway from the present end of steel. A construction train will go north within a few days with material and crews of men. It is expected that the work will be commenced before the end of the year.

The Great War Veterans have decided to make another protest to the provincial government against the appointment of W. H. McInnes as civil service commissioner until returned men have had a chance to offer their services for this $5000 per year position. The offer of the government to appoint a returned soldier as deputy commissioner at a salary of $2000 a year is not satisfactory to the organization, and another deputation will wait on the government and again ask for the resignation of Mr. McInnes.

The remarkable hold which American athletics and sports gained in France with the entry of the United States army is being illustrated in many ways and there are indications that the return to peaceful conditions will only augment this popularity. Competent observers hold firmly to the opinion that the coming years will witness a wonderful growth in international sport competition, the seeds of which have been sown by the soldier in khaki and those who entered Europe with him in advisory or other helpful capacity.

The famous whaling steamer Halcyon, which furnished the inspiration for Jack London's story of the "Sea Wolf," has gone to her end in the Far North. Word was received in Seattle that the Halcyon went adrift at Akutan, Aleutian Islands, in a big storm on Nov. 11, while her captain and crew were ashore. Her last resting place, it is believed, will be veiled by the same cloud of mystery which has closed over many other vessels in Arctic waters. The Halcyon was built in San Francisco in 1887 and was purchased about two years ago by the North Pacific Sea Products Company of Seattle.

SAYS KAISER INNOCENT

London, Dec. 9.—Maximilian Harden, editor of the Zukunft of Berlin, said to the correspondent of the Express, according to a dispatch from the German capital, that the impression abroad concerning former Emperor William is a false one. He said that he, himself, had suffered too much through the former emperor to incur a charge of partiality, but that it was a fact that William Hohenzollern had no personal part in starting the war, but was a mere tool in the hands of the military party, by which he war regarded as a coward.

"When the moment for declaring war came they were afraid he would refuse to sign the declaration," said Harden. "The former emperor missed his vocation. He was never happier than when posing in the limelight. He ought to have managed a cabaret or taken a show on tour. He was a great show man."

Declaring he knew when America came into the war that Germany would be beaten, Harden said:

"I fought with the censors to tell the people this, and when President Wilson published his 14 points I advocated their acceptance, because I knew we could not get better or more favorable terms."

THE UNITED STATES AND "BRITAIN'S DAY"

The observance of this day as "Britain's Day" thoughout the United States will be interpreted by the people of the British empire as but a new exhibition of the fine generosity with which Amercans have recognized the part played by the British in the war. This spirit has found expression again and again during these last few eventful years in the deliverances of public men and of the press of the United States. Now the whole nation joins in a demonstration of friendship by which all British hearts must be profoundly touched. The movement to observe "Britain's Day," it appears, owes nothing to inspiration, direct or indirect, from any government, but came spontaneously from the good feeling of the American people. Responsibility for such organization as was necessary to give effect to the proposal was undertaken by four societies: The American Defence Society, The National Security League and the National Committee of Patriotic Societies.

Canadians, in common with other members of the great British family, will warmly reciprocate the goodwill which the people of the United States have thus so finely exhibited. And today, in every part of the world where English speech is heard, there will be echoed the wish that these two peoples, who have lately worked and bled together to maintain ideals which they had long cherished in common, may continue ever in the friendship which has found new life in common sacrifice.—Manitoba Free Press.

THE BRITISH ELECTIONS

Nomination day in the British Isles gives some idea of what the sentiment of the people will be in the coming election. Mr. Lloyd George has already 69 supporters who have been returned unopposed to the new House of Commons but this honor does not appear to have been accorded to a single one of Mr. Asquith's followers. Eleven Laborites have gained their seats without a contest and one Independent. The most startling feature of the nominations has been the return of no fewer than 22 Sinn Feiners for Irish constituencies. Only one Nationalist has been returned without opposition. The party now headed by Mr. John Dillon is at the nadir of its fortunes. Its decline commenced with the death of Mr. John Redmond and the growth of the Sinn Fein movement which appears to have swept over Ireland in an alarming fashion. It is not the policy of the Sinn Fein members to sit in the British parliament. They have gone so far as to announce they intend setting up a parliament of their own in Dublin with the purpose of levying taxes and administering the country. Until Ireland is given Home Rule any such proposal is incapable of realization, but it is an earnest of the trouble that may be anticipated.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

N. B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

SYNOPSIS OF
LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

For information apply to any Provincial Government Agent or to

Deputy Minister of Lands,

THE MOUNTIES TO BE A PERMANENT FORCE

Ottawa, Dec. 16.—Sanction was given today to an order-in-council increasing the Royal Northwest Mounted Police force to its authorized strength of 1200 men. In addition to its present duties in the territories the force is further assigned to duty in Alberta, Saskatchewan, British Columbia, Manitoba and that portion of Ontario embraced in Military District No. 10. The force is also to be the only federal police force operating in such territory.

The duties of the force are to be:

1. Enforcement of federal laws.
2. Patrolling and protection of the international boundary line.
3. Enforcement of all orders-in-council passed under the War Measures Act for the protection of public safety.
4. Generally to aid and assist the civil powers in the preservation of law and order whenever the government of Canada may direct.

The order proceeds:

"The minister (the president of the privy cooncil) observes that the comptroller reports that owing to the changes which have been made, apprehension has arisen in the minds of the members of the force and of the people of Western Canada as to the permanency of the force, and that the commissioner and the comptroller are of the opinion that it will be very difficult to secure the additional men required to bring the force up to the standard of efficiency necessary to meet the situation unless the uncertainty as to the future of the force is removed.

"The minister concurs in the view of the commissioner and comptroller, and recommends that the comptroller be authorized to state to the commissioner and to the force that there is no intention to terminate the life of the force but that its future is assured, either as the basis of a permanent federal force or as one of the mounted units in the permanent force of Canada, as may hereafter be decided by the governor-in-council."

HORSEFLESH MAY BE SENT TO EUROPE

The Alberta Horse Breeders' Association has been requested to ascertain the number of horses that would be available for food purposes at five cents per pound f.o.b. owner's nearest station. Horses must be healthy and in good condition; old used up horses are not wanted. There are undoubtedly thousands of horses in Western Canada that are misfits, undersized and of very little commercial value that could be utilized to help supply meat for the millions of people in Europe who have been accustomed to eating horse flesh and whose meat supply is most seriously inadequate, and at the same time their use for this purpose would conserve a tremendous amount of fodder to be used in raising a better class of horses and other classes of live stock.

JUDGE GIVES MAN LECTURE

In Judge Thompson's criminal court this week, John Murray, a miner, appeared charged with having broken into and stolen from a freight car in the C.P.R. yard, some flour, ham and bacon. Murray elected for speedy trial and pleaded guilty, whereupon His Honor delivered the following remarks to the prisoner and with the consent of Mr. Macneil, counsel for the Crown, allowed him out on suspended sentence.

Murray, I have been inquiring about you and your character, and a great many representations have been made to me on your behalf. It appears that you are a man who having lived here the last 14 or 15 years, working in the mines fairly steady, but according to the representations made to me, lately, on account of the strike and on account of the influenza you have been up against it, but you have not been up against it so hrd that you should resort to stealing. I have heard a description of your home, and how any man having a wife and children can allow his home to get into such a condition I was puzzled, because there is no excuse for a man in Fernie, especially a man of your knowledge of coal mining, being without a job or being hard up, and I could not make out why you should allow your home to get into the condition it is. I hear your children are actually sleeping on newspapers. I do not know that that is true but that is the report I get; and that you were without food and the children were practically without clothes, and yet you have been working.

As I say, I could not make out why this was until I heard what I believe to be the truth of the matter. That is that you have been drinking. Now I have often expressed this sentiment from the bench; I have no objection at all or I had no objection at all to a man drinking so long as he did not commit a crime to obtain drink, and I think that is the trouble. You have got so consumed with the desire for liquor that you are prepared to commit any deliberate crime like breaking open a box car. My own opinion is to send you to gaol long enough to overcome that desire but so many representations have been made to me, and so many pleas have been put in for you, not only by your own friends but others, that I am going to do something with the consent of the Crown, against my better judgment.

I am going to allow you out on suspended sentence, but I am going to be very strict and place conditions upon you. These conditions will be copied and kept on file by the police and the moment you break these conditions you will be arrested. The conditions are: (1) You are to work steady, (2) and support your family in a proper conditions, (3) and you are not to drink. That does not mean you are not to get drunk; it means that you are not to drink and you know what that means.

You have had a pretty hard lesson; it may do you good. I am not sure, but remember that if you disobey any one of those three conditions and the police are satisfied that you are doing so; if they know of you taking a drink you will be brought before me again and if I am satisfied the conditions you now agree to accept have been broken, instead of giving you six months I would send you to gaol for two or three years. I could send you to gaol for 14 years for this offense. Now are you prepared to accept those conditions?

By the Prisoner—I am prepared, Your Honor.

By the Court—My advice to you is to go back to work and remember that you are the father of a family and also that you are the father of a son who is just coming home from the front. I don't understand why you would not be kept by shame, having a boy like that, from putting yourself in the box you are today. Remember, it is not only at the present time that you are to make a man of yourself but you are to make good always and if you fail you got to remember there is this club that the police have over you. You may go.

Mr. Macneil I have your consent.

By Mr. Macneil—Yes, Your Honor.

By the Court—There will be an order for restitution. I wish to add that the next man who comes before me in this manner will not be treated with any leniency whatever no matter what the conditions are.

Born—At Fernie, on Thursday, Dec. 19, to Mr. and Mrs. A. Cummings, a daughter.

RESULTS ARE GOOD FROM BUSH MINE

The Bush mine, near Stewart in the Portland canal district of British Columbia, which was acquired last year by Messrs. Trites, Wood & Wilson of Fernie, and R. K. Neill of Spokane, is one of the greatest examples of fortune or ill-fortune in mining operations in Canada.

After considerable work had been carried out by a company without an important discovery of ore the property was ready for sale to any party anxious to acquire it. An examination by Neill convinced him that the real ore body lay still untouched and a short crosscut of a few feet only, confirmed his opinion.

Under his charge development has been accomplished with marvelous results.

Two tunnels have been driven to obtain depth. One has a length of over 400 feet and in a portion of it for a distance of 50 feet and for its entire width of six feet the ore values vary between $300 and $400 per ton. The width of this rich ore on either side has not yet been ascertained.

A test of the width of the entire ore body is now being made and up to the present the average values of the ore for a distance of 82 feet in this crosscut exceed $40 per ton in silver and gold content, considerable ruby silver being encountered. The face of this working continues in ore.

In the development tunnel the drift on the rich ore referred to has been extended along the vein with values of about $150 a ton across the face. Raises have been made to facilitate the mining of ore and show no lowering of the silver content.

A road was completed last summer to the mine and 500 tons of high grade ore taken out during development is sacked ready for shipment. It is expected that about 3000 tons running $200 a ton will be brought out this winter.

With the comparatively small amount of development accomplished the value of the ore in sight exceeds $20,000,000. The benefit to British Columbia will be considerable and luck is also on her side through the fact that the mine is only a short distance inside the Canadian boundary and is controlled by Canadians only.

PRESIDENT VS. VICE-PRESIDENT

The following is the draw for the curling competition, President vs. Vice-President, Dec. 26, the day after Christmas. The hours of play have been set for 10 a.m., 2.30 p.m., and 8 p.m. All skips are requested to let the President or Vice know s soon as possible at what time they can most conveniently play, so that the games may be arranged to suit as many as possible.

The name of the rink playing for the Preident is stated first in each instance:

Kastner vs. A. Corrie.
Herchmer vs. F. Greenwood.
Baldrey vs. G. F. Johnson.
Winters vs. A. C. Liphardt.
T. Beck vs. R. M. Young.
T. Prentice vs. J. R. Wallace.
Stewart vs. Guy Johnston.
McDonald vs. Kirkpatrick.
McLaren vs. J. Johnston.
Lawe vs. J. S. Irvine.
Lancaster vs. Daniels.
Kossoff vs. Douglas.
Quail vs. Macneil.

RATE WILL BE 40.2 MILLS

The city council met last evening and made final arrangements for issuing the Tax Notices and striking the mill rate for 1918. On account of the pending appeal no taxes could be collected or the by-law fixing the mill rate passed. This was passed through the preliminary stages last night and will be finally authorized at a special meeting tonight. The mill rate will be 40.2.

CHIEF GETS OLD POSITION

Lieut. P. Adams, who has been invalided from military service, has made application to be reinstated in his old position as chief of police at Cranbrook. Chief of Police Hersey is, therefore, retiring at the end of the year in favor of Lieut. Adams. Mr. Hersey has been the chief for the past three years, during which time he has proved himself not only an efficient officer, but, it is said, by his strict attention to duty has won the esteem of all citizens.

WILL NOT BE ABLE TO VOTE

Those who were unfortunate enough to leave the task of having their names put on the city voters' list to the last minute will not be able to vote at the forthcoming election.

The following telegram has been received from the Attorney General's Department:

Replying to your message of the 10th, I point out that under subsection 2 of section 8 of the Municipal Election Act, Amended Act, 1915, the declaration in question can be made before persons other than the city clerk.

Had their declarations been properly made and left at the city clerk's office the fact that the same was closed would in my opinion have had no bearing on the right of the elector to be placed on the list but as the parties in question failed to make declaration during the month of October last and there is no provision in the Act allowing for extension of the time within which they can make and deposit the declaration, I am afraid they will not be entitled to have their names placed on the list.

The government has no power by order in council or otherwise to extend the time fixed in subsection two and by section four of the Amended Act, 1915, within which such declaration must be made and filed.

A. M. Johnson.

OLD THING UNDER NEW NAME

Apparently there is no difference between the present Bolsheviki movement in some parts of Europe and the old communistic one of the last century.

It will be recalled that after France made peace with Prussia in 1871, a considerable portion of the French people, particularly those residing in Paris, was so bitterly opposed to the terms of the treaty that they attempted to overthrow the provisional government installed in the French capital.

These communists raised the red flag and for a while ran riot through Paris, and they were not suppressed until the regular French troops fought their way into that city and restored order once more.

This was not accomplished until hundreds of communists had been killed in their efforts to resist the taking of Paris, but actually this revolution was of brief duration.

For a tme t looked as though the scenes which were enacted in the French capital in 1871 might be reenacted in Berlin at the close of this year of grace.

Recent dispatches from the German capital indicate that the returning Prussian soldiers have no sympathy with the Bolsheviki movement in their country, but, on the contrary are determined to suppress all outbreaks of this character.

It is noticed that these guard regiments are returning from the front with their old national emblems flying and that they absolutely decline to recognize the red flag in Berlin.

The blood-colored banner has never yet accomplished anything for the people of any nation that hoisted it, and in the eyes of the world any movement which adopts this emblem is due to failure as soon as it gets under way.

The only appreciable difference between the present Bolshevists and the old communists is in the name.—Nelson News.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS

The returned men will again be the guests of W. R. Wilson at a dinner in the Fernie Hotel tomorrow evening.

The local branch of the Navy League has secured the services of Mrs. Wallinger's orchestra for their dance on New Year's eve. This will be the dance of the season, so come along and enjoy yourself.

Jim Wallace says that if the health authorities would round up a lot of the people in West Fernie and the Annex who keep their chickens and other poultry in their houses it might help to banish the flu.

Harold Jones, son of Robt. Jones, the well known poultry fancier, had the misfortune to suffer from a broken leg while driving at Coal Creek mines. In an endeavor to back his horse by a car, he stumbled, and the horse stepped on his leg, breaking it below the knee. He was brought to the Fernie hospital and his leg set and he is doing well.

Fernie will shortly have a representative of the Mounted Police stationed here. The Mounted Police have taken over the federal police duties in this province and men will be stationed in all the principal towns.

Special arrangements have been made for services in the United Church for Sunday, Dec. 22. Rev. Lieut. Chas. E. Batzold, M.C., who is on his way back from the front, will preach both morning and evening.

Jimmy McCool in conversation with a local hotelkeeper, asked him if he thought that the liquor scandal at the coast would result in the country going back to license law. His reply was reassuring, "McCool, you always were an alarmist."

The Christmas windows of the Trites-Wood Co. and the Crow's Nest Trading Co. are a great credit to those establishments. These large stores vie with each other in their window dressing and it would take an expert to pick the winner.

Cranbrook has finally decided that they will hold the District Bonspiel in that city, commencing Jan. 13. Already local curlers are lining up their rinks to take in the spiel. It is expected that there will be at least a dozen rinks go from Fernie.

A big bonspiel will be held under the auspices of the Fernie Curling Club on New Year's day for the benefit of the G.W.V.A. Every man, woman and child is expected to get in the game. Turkey dinner will be served for 50c; other refreshments at popular prices. The draw will be made on New Year's eve, so get busy and get your rink together.

A sad drowning accident took place at Wardner on Monday, when Ole Holmes, the well known merchant of that town, lost two of his boys in the Kootenay river. The youngest, a lad of five years, broke through the ice and the eldest, 12 years old, in endeavoring to rescue him, also was drowned. Both bodies were recovered and the funerals took place on Wednesday.

M. A. Kastner received a wire this morning from Nelson that Frank McCrohan died last night. The news was a distinct blow to the young man's many friends here, as it was understood that he was recovering from the stroke from which he had been suffering. Deceased was one of the most popular young men in the west and one of the best piano agents in the business. He leaves a wife to mourn his loss.

CITY LOSES ITS APPEAL

The Court of Appeal handed down its decision in the cases taken by the city appealing from the judgment by His Honor Judge Thompson, which substantially reduced the assessments on the King Edward and Napanee hotels. The court of Appeal dismissed the appeal thereby sustaining Judge Thompson's finding, which in effect amounted to that by reason of the principal source of revenue being cut off by the enactment of the Prohibition Act, hotel properties were correspondingly reduced in value.

The widespread effect of this decision will be very noticeable in future years because it means that a reduction of approximately 20 per cent in assessment of all hotel properties will have to be made by city assessors. Consequently in order to raise the equivalent funds to meet the required expenditure the mill rate will be increased, the net result of which amounts to the ratepayers as a whole being called upon to make up the deficit.

FIRE DESTROYS ANNEX HOUSE

In the early hours of Wednesday morning the fire brigade was required to respond to an alarm from the Annex and upon arriving the dwelling of Wm. Minton was found burning in an advanced stage. Chief McDougall's boys fought valiantly but all that could be done was to prevent the fire spreading and the residence in question was destroyed to the extent that it was classified as a total loss. The origin of the fire could not be definitely ascertained but it is believed to have been from an overheated stove.

Insurance was carried on the building and contents in the sum of $1300.

WM. BARTON, Agent

IN FRANCE UNTIL MARCH

Toronto, Dec. 16.—In an address to the Canadian Club here today Gen. Mewburn, minister of militia, announced that during the war more than 611,000 men had passed through the hands of the Canadian military machine in one form or another. He also said that the fighting troops in France would remain at the front until March. "Peace is not yet signed," he observed.

"The exact number of enlistments, etc., reported up to Nov. 15 was 595,441," said Gen. Mewburn, "and in addition some 16,300 men who came into touch with the recruiting authorities were struck off the strength. The two sets of figures thus aggregate 611,741.

"Of the 595,441 some 41,000 were men who were dealt with but were not required to render service; more than 21,000 enlisted in services other than the Canadian Expeditionary force, and about 15,000 were reservists, British and allied, who were sent by the Canadian government to the colors in their own armies.

"The total number of recruits obtained for the Canadian Expeditionary force by voluntary enlistment is reported to be 445,695.

"The work of the Canadian military police corps has been exceedingly heavy. The total number of cases handled by military police, including the civic branch, arising from the operations of the Militry Service Act, have been: defaulters 18,824; absentees 9454, deserters apprehended both draftees and others 2304; cases investigated 269,121.

"A large percentage of these numbers were found medically unfit and allowed to return to civil life.

Speaking of conditions in Canada he said:

"One of the greatest dangers the nation has to cope with is the venereal trouble. It has been said that those men should be demobilized first. My adjutant general and the army medical officers said 'No, we have a duty to the nation and must hold these men and make them fit before being discharged, so that they will not be a menace when they go back into civilian life.' That is the attitude that has been adopted," said the minister.

"Last year a committee on demobilization met in England and the plans that were drawn up at that time were approved. At the time of the armistice there were 228,000 Canadians to be brought back. The speed with which they would be brought back depends upon ships and railways. It was first thought that those with the longest service overseas, particularly married men, should come first. Then the proposal was made that they be returned by units. This would be almost impossibld, as the battalions were now made up of drafts from all over Canada. The first plan is therefore the best.

"The Canadian troops in France will remain there until March; it will do them no harm. They want to stay. The regret of the men in hospitals is that they are not able to be there with the other men who are in Germany. What they are going through as troops of occupation will aid them to settle down to normal conditions. Canada is not going to funk her duty to the task. Peace is not yet signed."

Gen. Mewburn said he had consulted with the executive of the Great War Veterans' association and "they urged that we go slow with demobilization."

PETER WRIGHT TALKS ON BOLSHEVISM

Peter Wright, trustee of the British Seamen's Union, to a large audience in Toronto recently, said:

"My God! Don't follow Russia! Don't follow the Bolshies. I have been here only a short time, and already I find evidence of the Bolshies here. The I.W.W. agitation is a German trick. The Germans try to stir up discontent and anarchy through them. I want to warn the Canadian workingman against Bolsheism. We have means at hand to obtain our rights along constitutional lines. But don't follow the Bolshies. They are men in a hurry. They want to put everything right in twelve months. They are followers of Karl Marx. They pull down everything, destroy everything and have nothing to put in its place. Bolshevism simply means murder. That is what they did in Russia. But I have great confidence in the Russian peasant because his soul is filled with the teachings of such men as Tolstoy. In Russia the Bolshies destroyed everything they got their hands on. They killed every man of intellect. Lenine and Trotsky are the paid agents of the dirty, filthy Hun. For the sake of liberty be sane and work along constitutional lines."

Coal has advanced another 25c a ton, bringing the price to $6.25 for screened coal delivered in Fernie.

UNFETTERED SEA POWER

There is no explanation which President Wilson will make during his visit to Europe that is awaited with more interest by the British peoples than his definition of what he means by the freedom of the seas. Britain's sea power was the main factor in winning the Great War; it won it because of the overwhelming strength it exercised, and that strength in every departure was legitimately exercised. The Grand Fleet was the keystone of the Alliance. Had its hold on the sea been shaken Great Britain and her Empire would have been ruined, Russia would have been isolated, the French front would have been turned, and Italy crushed. For an island people, who are the centre of a maritime empire, there is no substitute for sea-going gun-platforms. No restrictions can be permitted, or changes in direction tolerated, that will filch away from Britain the only policy that can insure her peoples against invasion, cement the empire, enable foodstuffs to be sent to the United Kingdom and permit the armies of the Empire to be dispatched wherever they may be required.

These are he broad outstanding reasons why the British peoples can suffer no diminution in their sea power. For a moment it may be of interest to discuss what are naval rights as they may be exercised by any nation in time of war. Practice, regulations and naval opinion all agree that a belligerent must take measures for his protection. He can regulate his territorial waters, and circumstances may oblige him to assume a measure of control over waters which in time of peace are outside his jurisdiction. The principle of strategic, or military areas, is now generally accepted. It must be remembered mines and submarines have rendered the blockade of the past obsolete. Indeed, the practice is to define a certain area and warn all ships they enter it at their peril. Such a measure was rendered inevitable by the class of warfare which is now waged. The blockade, as it was known in the past, is obsolete, so any new definition regarding freedom of the seas can hardly allude to this part of naval strategy.

The law is clear on the subject of contraband. A neutral power is not bound to prevent the export or transit for either belligerent of arms, munitions of war, or in general of anything which could be of use to an army or fleet. But one of the first duties of naval power as exercised by a belligerent, is to prevent such munitions reaching his enemy. It is here the right of search comes in, and it is because of this that neutral nations have always been restless and vexed by the application of rules limiting the activities of their commerce. What must be remembered is that in time of war there cannot be absolute freedom for the ships of neutral nations to do what they please and go where they will. If they are employed to carry contraband of war to the enemy, the other belligerent is perfectly within his rights in interfering, for by so doing he may be protecting his national safety. No one recognized this better than American statesmen of the past, for they refused, by word or by act, upon every occasion, to shackle the United States navy. The United States is conscious of the debt she owes to sea power, which incidentally has guarded the freedom of the American Navy.

The Allies in the Great War showed every possible consideration for neutral nations, having regard to the circumstances that they were fighting for their existence. No neutral ships, cargoes or lives were threatened with destruction. What they did do, as far as they could, was to prevent commodities of any kind from reaching or leaving the German Empire. After Germany inaugurated her unrestricted submarine campaign, a measure which cynically brushed aside every canon of international law, the Allies decreed that no merchant vessel, whatever her nationality, would be allowed to proceed on a voyage to or from any German port. But such vessels were not destroyed. They were required to discharge their cargoes at a British or Allied port and the goods were either requisitioned and paid for, or else restored to their owners. In effect what the Allies did was to reply to Germany, when she rendered all international law void, by varying the generally accepted rules of naval warfare so as to spare neutrals the worst effects by which their vessels might be overtaken. They exercised on Germany by sea power almost exactly what Germany exercised against Paris by land power in 1871. The precedent created on the sea favored neutrals. It was designed to spare them from the penalties, which, in the event of a blockade, fall upon every vessel and cargo proceeding to and from enemy ports.

Whatever proposals President Wilson may have in view regarding limitations of sea power, he should remember what Admiral Manhan, America's greatest naval writer, has said:

Why (he asked) do English innate political conceptions of popular representative government, of the balance of law and liberty, prevail in North America from the Arctic Circle to the Gulf of Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific? Because the command of the sea at the decisive era belonged to Great Britain. . .

What, at the moment the Monroe doctine was proclaimed, insured beyond peradventure the immunity from foreign oppression of the Spanish-American colonies in their struggle for independence? The command of the sea by Great Britain, backed by the feeble navy, but imposing strategic position of the United States, with her swarm of potential commerce-destroyers which a decade before had harassed the trade of even the mistress of the seas.

It is obvious that Americans, who are familiar with the history of their country, know what they owe to sea power. Those aboard the American vessels that have kept the watch in the North Sea with the Grand Fleet during the last eighteen months of the war know full well what the task was and how it was accomplished. They would be the last to advocate any restriction to naval power in time of war. We hear no talk of freedom of the land, or freedom of the air, and yet in the future both of these matters may have to be considered as they would have to be considered at this juncture if there is any danger of restrictions being placed on sea power. There is one thing certain and that is France will stand behind Britain in the latter's claim for unfettered sea power in time of war. That alone should be Brtain's task in any League of Nations that may be formed; but irrespective of any international guarantee of permanent peace the British peoples cannot renounce their prerogative afloat for it is the sure and only shield of all they have and are.—Colonist.

DON'T WANT CONSCRIPTION —EUROPE MAY FORCE IT

Is conscription invoked as a war measure, to be made permanent in Britain? This question looms large in the presnt political campaign. J. H. Thomas, the Labor leader, declares he has correspondence from the War Office which states that the national army scheme contemplated for Britain consists of four years' school service and then one year's conscript service with the colors, which last starts at the age of nineteen. This would be followed by a short annual training every year until the citizen has reached the age of forty.

Conscription is an odious term to the average Briton. But Lloyd George has just intimated that the continuance of some form of conscription in England, or its abolition, depended upon the terms of the Peace Conference. "If you want to prevent the horrors of war from being repeated," declares the Premier, "you must put an end to conscription on the continent of Europe." Conscription is now almost second nature to the people of continental Europe.

It seems very improbable that France, whose conscript armies were her bulwark against the Hun, or that Belgium or Italy, or even the Germans and Austrians themselves, will be willing to entirely abandon conscription. Land boundaries are too easily crossed by maurauding neighbors. Even t his war can hardly hope to abolish jealousy and distrust from Europe. About the best that can be hoped for and will surely be realized, as a pact, possibly in the new League of Nations, will be strict limitations in the application of conscription and consequent great reduction of the standing armies.

The German government is beginning to show its teeth to the extremists and Bolsheviki who have been making trouble. It threatens severe measures. The return to Berlin of the Prussian Guard and other troops loyal to the principles of stable government has given the government fresh courage. Ebert greeted the big soldiers of the guard as they marched into the capital through the Brandenburg Gate, flying the national colors and playing, not revolutionary airs, but "Deutschland Uber Allies." The guard declared itself for "quiet" and the election of a National Assembly as soon as possible. Cruel as they may have been, the Prussian Guards are brave soldiers, and the German people look upon them with love and respect. Whether they eventually turn out to be supporters of some movement to restore the Hohenzollerns or remain merely conservative republicans, their influence for the present will give strong support to the government.

The Reichstag will be reassembled and the German government will dissociate itself from the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council at the request of the Allies, who refuse to treat with anything but a country with a proper parliamentary establishment, so it is said. The old Reichstag, bossed by the imperial chancellor, the Kaiser's nominee and tool, was a joke, but the new body would be pretty much the same in many ways as the National Assembly which it is later intended to establish.

It now looks as though the much-talked-of question of the "freedom of the seas" might be settled with satisfaction to all concerned. Though the peace conference is not yet, British and American representatives, which the issue mainly concerns, appear to be getting together.

With the two Canadian divisions already in Germany and two others on the way, the whole corps will be across the Rhine. Unofficially it was announced from London that demobilization of the Canadian forces would probably start as soon as the Germans completed the terms they had agreed to in the armistice—that is to say, surrendered the material and removed their troops to the places designated. It was assumed that then the Canadian army of occupation, a smallish force composed from all four divisions, would be formed from volunteers and those whose services had been briefest and that the bulk of the troops would be allowed to go home.

Canadians are now anxiously awaiting to hear definitely about demobilization and whether it really hinges upon the time of the armistice conditions being fulfilled or whether the corps as a whole stays considerably longer and how large a Canadian army of occupation they intend to leave in Germany.

The official taster for the provincial police in liquor cases threatens to go on strike as the quality of booze that is being seized is too vile for his cultivated taste.

The Chinese Grand Lodge of Free Masons of British Columbia will meet in Fernie tomorrow. It is expected that there will be over one hundred delegates present from all over the province. We expect Joe Austin will be out with the glad hand to welcome his brethren.

Word was received in town today that Lt. Col. Dr. Harold Anderson had been gassed a few days before the armistice was signed. Col. Anderson, who resided here for some years before going to the front, has very recently received the additional decoration of D.S.O. He formerly was honored by the French government, receiving the Croix de Guerre.

James Taylor, our very familiar proprietor of the shoe shining parlors on Victoria avenue, is at present in Rochester, Minn., undergoing treatment at the Mayo institution. Jim has been in ill health for the past few months but only very recently did his condition develop to the critical stage which required him to seek specially skilled treatment. We sincerely express the wish that he will speedily recover and that we will shortly see his familiar figure in our midst.

COAL OUTPUT IN B.C.

Estmatd figures for British Columbia's November coal output indicate a material decrease in comparison with the previous month, the difference being approximately 49,476 tons. This is explained by the fact that the Vancouver island collieries in almost every instance, failed to measure up to the standard owing to the time lost by their employees, who were victims for varying periods to Spanish influenza. Production for the province is placed at about 168,006 tons, while that for October was 217,482 tons. The total output for the year 1918 up to the end of November approximately 2,372,161 tons, or an increase over 1917 of 222,186 tons.

FRANCE WANTS TO BUY

France at the end of the war finds herself with 2,360,000 less cattle, 2,258,000 less sheep and 2,815,000 less pigs than in 1914. She will be glad to buy pork and hog products in Canada as soon as financial arrangements as to credit in Canada can be arranged. Canadian breeding cattle also are wanted. Canada is the only country upon whose cattle France does not maintain an embargo.

DENMARK'S BACON TRADE

Before the war Denmark used to dredweight of bacon per year. Today Denmark is herself short of 1,873,000 pigs. And her great hungry neighbor, Germany, is short 19,306,000 pigs. Britain will have to look elsewhere for the bacon Denmark used to supply and here is where Canada will find a permanent trade opportunity with the mother country of no mean proportions.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

Calgary schools were closed on Monday owing to the flu.

Dave Atherton, of Harris, Sask., is spending a few days in the city.

It is said that Thos. Uphill will again be a candidate for mayoralty honors.

Private C. Commons returned this week from the coast. He has received his discharge.

Private Joe Langdon, the well known electrician, is back in the city from Vancouver.

John Podbielancik will take over the Dobson & Willingham flour and feed business on Jan. 1st.

Jack Gates, with the assistance of a cane, is able to be around again after a long and serious illness.

Ed. Heaphy, manager of the Elk Lumber Co., left on Tuesday for Winnipeg, where he will spend Xmas.

The provincial police have a suspected smallpox case isolated. He is a lumberjack from the south country.

Judge Thompson returned to Cranbrook this morning after holding County Court here for the past three days.

Mrs. C. R. Lowe and daughter have arrived from England and are visiting her sister-in-law, Mrs. Hy. Bentham.

R. W. Wood returned on Saturday from a six weeks' trip to the coast. He has been on the sick list ever since he returned.

A children's concert and Xmas tree will be given in the Salvation Army barracks on the evening of Dec. 26, at 8 p.m. All are invited.

W. C. (Dad) Cavanaugh received the sad intelligence on Wednesday that his brother had been killed in a railway accident near St. Paul.

Arthur Wright, of Regina, at one time an employee of the District Ledger, is spending a few weeks in town. He is accompanied by his family.

Archie Corrie's little boy had the misfortune on Monday last to fall on a slippery hill and break his shoulder bone. The little fellow is progressing favorably.

Six persons died in Cranbrook one night last week.

There will be no more meeting of the Women's Auxiliary until Wednesday, Jan. 8th.

There are still a few cases of flu hanging around the city, but they are mostly out of town people.

A representative of the All Red automobile trail through the province was in town on Monday blazing the line on his way east.

The G.W.V.A. dance in Victoria Hall on Tuesday evening was a brilliant success. They will hold another very shortly. The proceeds were in aid of I.O.D.E. work.

A Whist Drive and Dance will be given in Christ Church basement on Friday evening, Dec. 27, commencing at 8 p.m. Refreshments will be served. Admission: Gentlemen 50c; ladies 25c.

Booze is being smuggled in from Montana by way of the Flathead country. They bring it in on pack horses. Thus far this route has escaped the notice of the provincial police.

The case of Maurice Roux charged with having contraband liquor in his possession, came up before Magistrate Hewat on Friday last. He was fined $200 and costs. The case will be appealed.

Jack Gates' appeal against the assessment of his hotel property has been allowed. If all the hotel property in Fernie is reduced pro rata the rest of the city property will have a substantial increase in taxation.

We had a nice letter today from Corpl. David Gash. David has been recently appointed corporal in charge of the military police at Veast, in France. He expects to remain in France for several months yet.

Returns for District 18 election are still far from complete although the latest figures would seem to give Christopher a big lead over Biggs for president. Browne for secretary would also appear to be elected.

Dr. Simmons, who has for four years conducted a dental business in Fernie, expects to leave for the coast in the near future. We understand he will practice in one of the coast cities. The doctor's many friends here will regret his departure.

ELKO NOTES

(By Fred Roo)

We sincerely wish every reader of this great family paper a bright and a real merry Christmas, and may the the delights of Heaven be with you all. On with the dance, let joy be unconfined, and to Germany with the Joy Killers.

The Nelson News says Influenza may be traced to bacon. Sure says Jim Thistlebeak, the "flu" is swine fever. As they die they turn black. Flu affects us the same and the real cause is the Canada Food Board putting too much pig feed in the flour.

Woodrow Wilson, the big puddle from the United States, landed in France the other day and received the freedom of the city and other kinds of champagne. We hope that some of the huns won't shoot him in the back like they did dozens of trusting Tommies when he wasn't looking. They're all a rotten crowd anyhow. It was Solf who is still foreign minister said at the beginning of the war, "Britain we fight for loot," and they were all in the game. Every hun, man, woman and child was in the attempted murder of Europe. The whole swine herd was out for loot. And now, like the dirty butchers they are, they've turned on degenerate imbecile kaiser because he failed to deliver the goods. As they say in Elko he didn't bring home the bacon, and leading papers tell us that under the armistice we have to feed the brutes who starved our prisoners, and the assassin of 20,000,000 men is taking a short rest just over the dutch border, just waiting for a chance to jump back and start hell all over again. It was Napoleon that escaped from Elba and started to trouble the world again. Until Wellington, not Washington, put the kibosh on him at Waterloo, and why we would like to know should kaiser Bill the Berlin butcher, the vilest skunk that ever lived, be allowed to enjoy life in Holland. Will the Allies stand for a second war? Do unto the Germans what the Germans would do unto you, and do it quick.

Miss E. May Roo was a Fernie visitor this week, the guest of Mrs. Joseph Austin, C. P. R. agent.

A big band of indians from the tobacco plains reserve were in Elko last week returning from their annual deer hunt up the south fork of the Elk.

Methven Gorrie, manager of the Clyde Bank stock ranch, Roosville Valley, was visiting Elko and Fernie this week.

A great many travelling men passed through Elko this week going east and west for Christmas. Jones, the rubber man, with a gutta percha smile, Lethbridge; Jack Berrington of Nelson; Cassidy going north to Edmonton, then west into the Pouce Coupe country; a light wine merchant from Calgary, with crab apple cider champagne, no gas, does not thrill the teeth, you could drink a whole barrel and it would have no more effect on you than poultices would on a wooden leg. They brew some great stuff up in Calgary, but you've got to get down into the Roosville Valley to get the real Bourbon with the barb wire edge and a kick like 4 mules. A Winnipeg specialty traveller trying to sell Jim Thistlebeak some Jarborandi hair tonic, horseless horse radish and potted air. Vic Rollins, who sells cigars that you can smoke in daylight, starlight, moonlight or any other light, and adds pleasure to the life of any lover of good tobacco. Several Alberta meat salesmen with frozen fish, saurkraut and other garden truck; several soap salesmen with printed matter showing how all soaps had taken a big jump. Now what do they want to raise the price of soap for now as the indians have all quit washing for the winter, but it must go up before it can come down.

J. P. Stocks of the clear spring farm, Roosville, is back from the coast where he got his military discharge.

Mr. George Dingsdale, Deputy Collector of the port of Roosville, was in Elko this week on official business.

It is expected when the C.P.R. commence to build their new shops at Elko, and Sherwood Herchmer's water power starts south of the town, that Lawe and Fisher will open a law office in Elko.

The Burton copper mine, west of Elko, will start up after new year with a big force of men. That well known hustler from Calgary, O. C. Thompson, will be mine manager.

Bert Sang, grain merchant of Lethbridge, was in Elko last week looking up business, cheerful as ever.

CHRISTMAS ATTRACTION AT THE ORPHEUM

Mae Marsh in "The Glorious Adventure" — Delightful in Role That Makes Whole Town Happy.

Awakening people of affluence to the realization of how the other half lives is the task allotted Mae Marsh in "The Glorious Adventure," her latest Goldwyn production, from the story by Edith Barnard Delano, to be shown at the Orpheum next Wednesday and Thursday.

Whether the country is at war or at peace, the poor are always with us. How to assuage their sufferings, how to make them feel there is a silver lining to every cloud, will perhaps always remain civilization's greatest problem. But most important of all, before anything concrete can be done for the poor and afflicted those on whom Dame Fortune smiles must be brought face to face with their less fortunate sisters and brothers to study conditions that oppress them before affluence can be of assistance to poverty.

Mae Marsh as Carey Wethersbee in "The Glorious Adventure," essays that task. Bereft of an aunt, her only relative, Carey leaves her native town in Virginia to make her way in the world. Limited funds, however, force her to make a small mill town not far away her stopping off place. There she seeks shelter at a luxurious home, which she later learns is occupied by the owner of the big mill. He is a gruff young bachelor in whose life women play no part.

He objects to her presence and Carey would have found herself in the street but for a companion of the owner. His plea compels the bachelor to give in, and Carey is given a room and is otherwise treated as a member of the household. Carey makes frequent trips to the mill and learns the employees are contemplating a strike. She hears their complaints, visits their homes and in many other ways acquaints herself with conditions surrounding them.

When the strike does come she is in a position to go to the mill owner with a view to acquainting him with existing conditions. This she does and before long the employees are back at their looms and grateful to their little benefactress.

LIQUOR CASE AT COAST SCANDALIZES DRYS

Vancouver B. C.,— A declaration favoring an immediate investigation of operations in British Columbia of the Prohibition Act was made this afternoon by John Nelson, president of the People's Prohibition Association. Sentiment among officials of the prohibition organization is decidedly opposed to dropping the matter with the disposition today of the case against Walter C. Findlay, former commissioner for the enforcement of the Prohibition Act, who pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $1,000 for the illegal importation of 100 cases of rye whiskey into the province. Premier John Oliver announced today that he was very desirous that the whole matter should be "probed to the bottom." Attorney General Farris stated in Victoria that the investigation was in the hands of the Vancouver police, and that "if any other form of inquiry is needed the proper steps would be taken."

Mr. Nelson made the following statement:

"If by merely pleading guilty and paying a fine of $1,000 Findlay is permitted to escape, it will be a public scandal."

"If he is guilty, as he admitted, he alone is not guilty. He imported liquor by the carload, which is a finable offense. He or some one whom he knows disposed of it, which is a prison offense. He has been guilty of malfeasance of office. The men who accomplished his downfall and who profited by it can be aprehended through the information he must possess. For that reason the premier was asked on Friday last to anticipate exactly what occurred this morning and get after the higher-ups.

When the prohibition executive was asked on Aug. 28, 1917, to endorse the application of Mr. Findlay for the position, I opposed the motion. It is a matter of record that I not only voted against the motion but asked that my recommendation and the recommendations for it be noted in the minutes. I did not mistrust Findlay, but felt that my right to criticize his conduct, if necessary, would be compromised by supporting the recommendation.

"The laxity with which the law had been handled for some weeks past, together with certain reports received, recently has created suspicion even among those who were most reluctant to doubt his sincerity. There is a certain open defiance in law breaking which always accompanies the chloroforming of the offenses of the law. This has been notorious of late.

"The government, the general public, which is law abiding, and the supporters of prohibition are commonly concerned in seeing that the ring of law breakers are brought to justice. The department of the attorney general would seem to be the one to act, as it had more sources of information than anyone else. A select committtee of the house could take the matter up or possibly a commission. But the time for action is now, when the facts and the principals are all within call."

MENACE TO ALL THE WORLD

"It is the seamen who discovered the British Empire, who made the Empire and who maintained the Empire," said Peter Wright, Chairman and Trustee of the Seamen's and Firemen's Union of Great Britain, who delivered a forcible address at the Empire Club today. "It is due entirely to the courage of our naval and mercantile marine that we stand as victors for the ideals of the Anglo-Saxon race.

"In 1914, civilization, as we understand it, was challenged by the Teutonic race. The result was to proclaim to the world whether the democracies of the world would lay claim to their own souls and govern their own destinies, or whether they would be governed by the autocracy of a military caste. The two great principles at stake were, whether autocracy should shape the future destiny or the voice of the people.

"The war is at its close and democracy has won, and it is now standing on the eve of a great transition, and the future largely depends on the coordination of all the progressive forces in the world. 'To be or not to be,' will be our future policy.

"How are we to reconstruct a world filled with anguish, pain and suffering? How are we to rebuild out of the terrible chaos and carnage with which we are confronted today? That is a problem which requires the intelligence and supreme effort of every thinkng man and woman. If ever there was a time when it was absolutely imperative to have co-operation of labor and capital, it is today.

"Every student of sociology will recognize that though we have defeated the aims and objects of Teutonic arms, at this moment the thoughts of all nations are entwined with the damnable doctrines of Karl Mark. Great hidden and unseen forcse are at work at the present moment in a powerful influential and sinister way. Karl Mark proclaimed through his doctrne that the workers had nothing to lose but their chains, and the only solution by which they could overcome and throw aside the manacles of oppression was to destroy our present capitalistic and commercial system.

"That idea was given by Trotsky and Lenine to the workers of Russia. The Russian working people, to their sorrow, now know the fallacy and see the chaos which it has brought them.

"It is now up to labor to use the best brain influence and skill to lead and guide the masses to a higher and nobler ideal based on the same policy of equality and justice. It is to be hoped that capital, and all men of business, will realize that there is a serious responsibility resting upon them. The world was created for all. It was never intended for a large section of the community to toil and spin for the whole of their lives in order that they could keep body and soul intact."

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

When cloud-banks blot the sky dull grey, or whistling winds make outdoors disagreeable, how cheery and exhilarating are bright lights and sparkling fires ;

And in these soul-trying days, how welcome is the cheery brightness—the soothing caress—the soul-satisfying message—of the music you love.

So this Christmas you need music more than ever—good music, that brings the spirit of Christmas to everyone, young and old. Such is the music of

COAL CREEK MEMORIAL SERVICE

On Sunday, Dec. 1st, a service was held in the Methodist church at Coal Creek to the memory of those who have passed away during the great epidemic that so maliciously has ravaged our fair Dominion.

The following have died from the Creek: Jonas Gerrard, Isaac Cartmell, Mrs. Sarah Monks, and John Boardman. During the address the pastor made a short reference to each life, dwelling upon a few of the more important details that had special reference to their character. (1) Jonas Gerrard was the first to fall a victim to the deadly disease. He was born in Lancashire, England, (some say London,) in the year 1881. He spent the early years of his life in that country, coming to Canada and settling down at Coal Creek. During the last seven years he has been an industrious and regular workman only losing three days work in seven years. He belonged to the Church of England, attending their Sunday School as a boy. He did not, however, attend church much while living in Coal Creek on account of his work. He was a quiet and retired man, seldom leaving home in the evening even for recreation. He found his chief pleasure in his home; he was a good husband. He was married to a young lady whose home at that time was in Coal Creek, a Miss Brown, about two and a half years ago. They have one child. He fell a victim to the flu and died in Fernie hospital, Nov. 11th. He leaves a wife and child, also a mother in England to mourn his loss.

(2) Isaac Cartmell was a well known figure in Coal Creek, being one of the pioneers. He was a native of England, born in Whitehaven, Cumberland, on the 11th of May, 1867. As a boy he attended the Church of England, but for many years while not opposed to organized religion, he seldom attended its services. The first years of his life he spent in the old country and at the age of 22 years, married Miss Kathleen Quinn and for 29 years they have lived together, the home life being cheered by a number of children all loyal to their parents and the home. Mr. Cartmell came to Coal Creek about 16 years ago, and the family followed him about seven years ago. During the early period Mr. Cartmell made a couple of visits to the homeland. Mrs. Cartmell is well known and respected among the inhabitants and her sickness and sorrow called forth a sincere response. Her husband took sick early in November and died on Nov. 12th. He was laid to rest in the Fernie cemetery on Nov. 16th. He leaves a widow and seven children. A sad incident connected with this family was they received a cablegram on the same day from France saying that John Cartmell, the eldest son, had died of Spanish Influenza. The son was married and he leaves a wife and two children. Our deepest sympathy is with the family in this their sad bereavement.

(3) A gloom was cast over many when the news of Mrs. Monks' death was known. No one expected she would be called away so soon, but death is no respecter of persons. Mrs. Monks was also born in England, in Lancashire, on the 1st of Sept. 1878. She was a member of the Church of England and attended their Sunday school while in England. At the age of 24 she married Mr. George Monks in West Houghton, Lancashire, and for four years lived in England where the eldest boy, now a young man, was born. She left for Canada on the 29th of June 1906, sailing on the "Empress of Ireland" when that ship made her maiden trip across the Atlantic. Mrs. Monks first arrived at Nanaimo, B.C. en route to Cumberland, where she lived for about a year and a half. Later the family moved to Nicola Valley and finally came to Coal Creek. Since coming to Coal Creek three more children have been born, the youngest an infant of only five days when its mother died. Mrs. Monks died on the 15th of November and was quietly laid to rest on Nov. 20th. She leaves a husband, four children (Coal Creek) and two sisters and three brothers (in England) to mourn her loss.

John Boardman, being a brother of Joe Boardman, the Coal Creek policeman, was well known in Coal Creek. He was a native of England, born in Northumberland, July 14th 1886. He was brought up in the Methodist church. At the age of 23 years he left England for Canada and came to live in Coal Creek.

When the war broke out, he volunteered and was sent overseas, joining the 54th Batt. He spent some time in England and about two and a half years in France. Being wounded, he was sent back to England and while there he married. Last March, having been discharged, he left with his wife for Canada and since then has lived amongst us. He died November 22nd and was buried amidst military honors on Wednesday, Nov. 27. The Coal Creek church wishes to express its sympathy with all the bereaved.

MICHEL MEMORIAL SERVICE

On Sunday, December 8th, a special service was conducted in the Methodist church to the memory of those who have recently died of the Spanish Influenza. The following have been buried by our church, and on account of the ban, no service could be conducted apart from those at the graveside; we therefore had a united service for them. The names are given in the order in which they died: Barbara Kotek, Willie Hampton Sam Hampton,(all of Natal) and William Bunker, late of Michel.

The service opened in the usual way by the singing of the hymn, "Nearer my God to Thee," and after the lessons the address was delivered by the pastor, who in the course of the evening gave a brief account of each life including their early history, life in Canada and cause of death, closing with a united expression of the congregation's sympathy for the bereaved.

A brief outline of each now follows: (1) Barbara Kotek was a Bohemian by birth, who came to this country with her parents while a young girl. She was married a few years ago in the Methodist church by the Rev. J. F. Dimmick, (late pastor of Fernie.) Her husband is at present serving overseas, they have one child left to comfort the father's sad home-coming. She was only a young woman, called away early in life. She was well respected among her own people and the inhabitants of Natal. She leaves her father, mother, brother, husband and child to mourn her loss. (2) Willie Hampton was a son of Mr. Hampton, of Natal, a man well know in this district, the family being among the oldest residents having lived in Natal for at least fifteen years. Willie was born in England, leaving for Canada when a boy of six years and coming direct to Natal. He was educated at the Natal Public School and attended the Methodist church of Michel, being a scholar in the Sunday School and a member of the Juvenile Temple, I. O. G. T. For the last few years he has been employed by the C. N. P. Coal Co. and worked for them until his death which occurred after a brief illness, on Friday, Nov. 15th. He was buried amid manifest sorrow on the part of his loved ones and sympathy of his friends on Saturday, Nov. 16th, Mr. R. Sinclair performing the last sad rites in the unavoidable absence of the pastor.

(3) Sam Hampton, his brother, lay seriously ill at the time of his brother's death and he only survived him by a few days. Sam, unlike his brother, was more of a public man, being an industrious and thrifty as well as energetic person. He came to Canada six months before his brother Willie; he accompanied his father, being then only 14 years of age. He received his early education in England, attending the schools there and being brought up in the Baptist church and Sunday school. He was born on the 29th of Nov. 1889, just two years after Queen Victoria's Jubilee. Since coming to Canada he also has lived in Natal and worked in the mine. He was always trying to improve his position. Recently he passed his examination and received papers making him capable of taking the position of fire boss, should the opportunity present itself. He was very much interested in all local institutions, being a member of three different orders, he became a member of the I.O.O.F., Michel branch on March 3rd, 1916 and before his death he had passed through most of, if not all, the chairs of office. A very nice letter was received by Mr. and Mrs. Hampton from the brethren of that order, expressing their sympathy and also remarking upon the honest, noble, manly bearing of the late brother, Sam Hampton. The deceased was also a member of the Rebekah and Eagle lodges, having received the "gavel" from the latter as a token that he had passed through the highest office in the order. In addition to his devotion to these orders, he was also interested in ambulance work, being one of the successful competitors at the late competition held in Lethbridge last July. A medal having been presented to the winners, this token is preserved with the deepest respect by his parents and they will long cherish it with other things that will help to remind them of a dutiful and loyal son. Mr. Sam Hampton will also be missed at the local agricultural exhibition, which is held regularly at Natal every September, having been secretary for the above for the last two years. He always took a great interest in the show. There is much more that one might say but his mother paid him a fine tribute when she said, "I never heard him use a profane word." Such a character is worthy of imitation and a model to the young. He died of pneumonia on Nov. 19th and was buried on the 20th. His bones may be in the grave but his soul will long be remembered in Natal. He leaves a father, mother, two brothers and two sisters and many friends to mourn his loss.

(4) William Bunker was the company's carpenter and he was a familiar character, visiting the various dwelling houses to attend to the necessary repairs, alterations etc. It was with a sense of a shock that the news of his death was received by us on Tuesday morning, Dec. 3rd. He had struggled with life and death for nearly three weeks and we all began to hope that he might recover, but the disease was even too strong for his young and healthy constitution, and he passed away on Monday, Dec. 2nd, about 9:30 in the evening. He was born in England at Bruxton, London, in the year 1883, on the 7th of January. He belonged to the old mother church, the church of England and attended their Sunday school. When about 21 years of age he left England for Canada, settling first in Calgary where he lived for about two years and later coming to live in Michel. He has been a resident of Michel for about twelve years, having married Miss Edith Morres nearly seven years ago. Since then he has been a householder in the camp taking part in all its duties and pleasures. He belonged to the I.O.O.F., Michel branch, and the brethren showed their faithfulness and loyalty by doing all they could for him during his sickness, and attending his last rites and performing their part of the funeral service. He was buried on Wednesday, December 4th by the pastor. He leaves a wife, a father and mother (in England) and a sister in Canada to mourn his loss. The church, through this service wishes to pay its tribute of respect to those that have gone, and its sympathy for those that mourn.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

N. B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for

SYNOPSIS OF LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

For information apply to any Provincial Government Agent or to

The year just drawing to a close has shown us results much beyond our expectations and a big increase in business compared with 1917, and we are out stronger than ever for bigger business, and with good service, high quality goods, and the lowest possible prices, we hope to have the patronage of all our old customers and many new ones in the coming year.

Wishing everyone "A Happy and Prosperous New Year."

G. W. V. A. BONSPIEL

The big G. W. V. A. bonspiel, under the auspices of the Fernie Curling Club, to take place on New Year's day, promises to be the event of the season. All the skips and thirds are out rustling for players and there will be at least sixty rinks. If you are entering a rink phone Tom Cole, phone 27. The draw will be made on New Year's eve, so get busy at once and get a rink together.

The wives of the curlers will have charge of the refreshments and a big turkey dinner is promised.

F. J. McCROHAN

(Nelson News)

F. J. McCrohan died at the Kootenay General Hospital at 9 o'clock in the morning. He suffered a stroke of paralysis on Nov. 11 and was taken to the hospital the next day. From that time he made continuous progress toward recovery until yesterday morning, when he sustained another stroke and passed away almost immediately.

Mr. McCrohan had been district manager for Mason & Risch, Limited, with headquarters in Nelson, for the last ten years. He started with the company in its Winnipeg branch as a salesman 12 years ago and after two years' experience there was sent to Nelson.

Mr. McCrohan was born in Whitby, Ont., 33 years ago and is a son of E. O. McCrohan of Toronto, who is at present in the city. He received his education in Toronto and in St. Michael's college, Sandwich, Ont. He was married in Nelson in 1912, at the Church of Mary Immaculate of which he and Mrs. McCrohan are members.

Mrs. McCrohan, a daughter, Rose Mary, and a baby son, Jerry, survive him. He is survived also by six sisters living in Toronto. Another sister died in Toronto a few days ago.

Speaking of the high esteem in which Mr. McCrohan was held by Mason & Rishch, Limited, J. G. Whiteacre, general western manager, with headquarters in Vancouver, said yesterday: "The highest tribute I can pay to Frank McCrohan, whom I have known for the last 15 years, is that he was one of the most highly respected and thought of among all our employees. He has held an executive position with us for the last 10 years as manager in this district, covering East and West Kootenay and I can speak in the very highest terms of his work in that capacity. He was a most satisfactory salesman, always attentive to his work and was well liked by all his customers.

"As a salesman in our Winnipeg branch he showed such ability that after two years' experience he was given preference over our many hundred of employees and promoted to the position of manager here. Any tribute I could pay him would not be too much."

TRAVELLER SWINDLES RETAIL MERCHANTS

A crook, representing himself as Henry Anderson, traveller for a firm which he calls the "Golden Gate Silk Mills," San Francisco, Cal., carries a line of very fine silk hose, and is putting over on the unsuspecting retail dealers a story to the effect that his firm has a shipment of hosiery on hand at Kenora (or perhaps some other point) C.O.D. $360.00, which shipment has been refused by the original consignee. This shipment he endeavors to sell on the understanding that he will have the shipment reforwarded to the new purchaser C.O.D. for the amount, but before leaving he usually prevails upon the purchaser to advance him $20.00 or more—giving as his reason that his expense money is running low—on the understanding that the amount advanced is to be deducted from the purchase price of the goods. But there are no goods, and the dealer is out his money.

This fraud has been perpetrated on four different people during the past few weeks.

CITY COUNCIL HOLD SESSION

The last regular meeting of the city council for this month and the second last of the present council was held last evening, His Worship and Aldermen Dudley, Beck, Rutledge and Hunter in attendance.

The minutes of the previous regular and two special meetings were adopted as read.

Mr. Andrew Lees, as spokesman of a delegation from Gladstone Local Union, desired to ascertain whether the tax notices recently sent out to the ratepayers made provision for the city's proportion of the expenditure in connection with the recent epidemic, which is estimated to be about $3500. The mayor heatedly inquired whether such an item was shown on the tax notices Mr. Lees had seen and receiving a negative response, suggested that was conclusive that such estimated expenditure was not included. The city clerk was then instructed to read a section of the Municipal Act, which authorized the taxation of one mill for the purpose of health and relief. He explained that on this basis the annual estimates, in view of the abnormal health and relief expense, had been considerably underestimated and consequently a deficit of some $1657 would result, but this would have to be carried forward to the next year, and that the present tax notices did not include the gross cost to the city resultant from the influenza epidemic.

Frank Brindley was the next to address the council as spokesman of a delegation from Gladstone Local Union, on behalf of the little Whitehouse boy, who was distressingly injured during the closing hours of the Peace Day celebration, by the explosion of a fire cracker. He intimated that in view of the fact that the council had permitted this celebration, morally at least they should assume some responsibility for the sad accident. His Worship stated he hardly thought the city was considered liable, pointing out that no claims had been presented for windows broken, but nevertheless he thought the council sincerely regretted the accident, but he did not see how it was at all possible for the present office holders to make any grant or undertake to compensate the boy as they legally could not do so, their term having practically expired. Personally he was eager and willing to do the right thing and even suggested that the succeeding council might consider a proposal of levying one mill for the future support of the boy.

Ald. Beck pointed out, while disclaiming any desire to place the onus of dealing with this matter upon the incoming council, that in view of unforeseen contingencies arising during the past year, the estimates had been used up and in some cases over-expended. This deficit would have to be assumed by the incoming council and although the case of the Whitehouse boy was undoubtedly deserving of generous consideration, the present council would hardly be justified in placing an additional burden upon them. He suggested that therefore it be laid on the table and considered by the incoming council.

W. B. Phillips, on behalf of the boy, made a strong appeal to the council to do something to assist the injured lad and recommended something substantial, as he contended they and not the new council were responsible for the accident.

Ald. Beck promptly replied, repudiating any responsibility on the part of the council for the unfortunate occurrence. The citizens, he claimed, desired the celebration and they undertook to carry the same out in line with their desires.

Frank Brindley suggested that nothing could be more appropriate than the present council authorizing that the boy become a ward of the city of Fernie in commemoration of Nov. 11th, the most glorious day in the history of the Empire.

Wm. Robson stated that he gathered from the remarks from some of the members of the council that they were powerless to authorize any subsidy for the purpose of supporting the Whitehouse boy, but they nevertheless appeared in accord that something of this nature should be accomplished. In view of this he suggested that they make a strong recommendation to their successors to do something along the lines suggested by the committee. Wm. Dickenson also made a strong plea for some substantial support on the part of the council. The matter was finally concluded by the following motion being duly passed:

Beck-Dudley—That the case of the boy Whitehouse, who lost his arm on Nov. 11, through the explosion of a fire-cracker, be laid on the table for the incoming council to deal with."

General correspondence was then taken up, the first being a communication from the Coal Co. announcing in accordance with an order issued by the Director of Coal Operations based on the recent finding of the Cost of Living Commission an increase of 10c per ton of 2000 lbs. was effectve from Dec. 1. This brings the price of slask, f.o.b powerhouse, to $4.98 per ton.

A lengthy circular from Mayor Gale of Vancouver regarding reconstruction problems was left in abeyance as the meeting of delegates from the council and those from other organizations in the city to consider the matters suggested in the circular had not been held.

The Workmen's Compensation forwarded recent orders by which it is incumbent upon employers and corporations to have in effect by Jan. 1 certain regulations for accident prevention and requirements for first aid. These orders cover all firms, etc. employing ten or more, but in view of the fact that in no department of the city are the minimum employees engaged, and therefore the doubt as to whether the order would apply, the city clerk has communicated with the Board in order to ascertain whether the city must comply therewith. He at the same time pointed out to the Board that the general hospital is the most centrally located place in the city, where first aid can be expeditiously rendered at all times. No reply has been received and meantime the matter is held over.

The city clerk reported that "Dad" Harrison had met with an accident inflicting a nasty cut to his hand from broken glass while cleaning out one of the street waste receptacles, and with a view to preventing similar accidents suggested that the public refrain from depositing broken glass in these waste boxes.

Ald. Rutledge, on behalf of the fire, water and light committee reported that arrangements had been made with the power house staff to temporarily dismantle one of the powerhouse generators on Sunday next for the purpose of repairing and cleaning same, in order that further inconvenience caused by brief shut-downs may be eliminated.

It was reported that the Hesketh children had now returned to their home and are no longer wards of the city. Mrs. Rees, who has been caring for them, will receive cheque in full up to Dec. 19.

With regard to the isolation hospital, Ald. Rutledge reported that arrangements could be made to pay for the nursing on the basis of $3 per day and $2 per week extra for washing. This was authorized. He said there were still five cases at the isolation hospital, some of which were non-contract cases and one an outside case and raised the question as to whether or not it was the custom to charge non-contract patients for treatment. Arising out of this the discussion reverted to the emergency hospitals, and the question of charging non-contract patients confined therein. The city clerk reported he had, in accordance with the suggestion at a former meeting conferred with the doctors with regard to this, and there appeared to be so many complications that no definte plan for charging patients treated at emergency hospitals was reached. The doctors at the outset had guaranteed to finance their own hospital and provide accommodation to its fullest capacity, but beyond that they could not handle others. Ald. Rutledge contended that there had been non-contract patients in the general hospital and contract patients in the emergency hospitals. However, the difficulty seemed to be in sorting them out and arriving at a basis upon which some revenue could be obtained. Ald. Beck intimated that non-contract patients were required to pay in the general hospital and consequently they should be made to pay while receiving treatment at the emergency. At this juncture Andrew Lees requested permission to make a few remarks and the request was granted. He stated the miners union had in mind when they sent the delegation to wait upon the council in connection with tax notices, that they were contributing at the rate of $24 per year for medical attention and hospital treatment, and therefore did not feel that they should be called upon to pay for this additional service. The discussion was finally concluded by a motion: Beck-Dudley—That accounts be rendered to all non-contract patients who were treated at the emergency or isolation hospitals at the rate of $3 per day.—Carried.

BASKIN-STEDMAN MILL AT GRANITE NOW RUNNING

Baskin and Stedman's new electric sawmill at Granite is now running full blast. About 50 men are employed there and 12 teams of horses are at work. They are at present working on a contract of 50,000 ties for the Canadian Pacific Railway. Ties are being cut from white pine.

Construction is nearly completed on the camp buildings, including the bunk house. Work on the large stable is to begin immediately. Electricity is used for lighting purposes in the bunk house and boardng house. The machinery installed is up-to-date in every respect and modern protective devices have been installed as preventative against accidents.

ENTERTAINS RETURNED MEN

About fifty returned men were the guests of W. R. Wilson, the soldiers' friend, at a splendid dinner at the Fernie Hotel on Saturday evening. In addition to the returned men there were about a dozen friends of the host present. After everyone had partaken of the bounteous repast, after dinner speeches, songs and stories occupied the attention of the guests until a late hour. Among the speakers were Major Moffatt, who occupied the chair, Sherwood Herchmer, A. I. Fisher, U. S. Consul Wakefield, R. M. Young, Barney Caufield, Sergt. Warwick, Robt. Wilson, A. Graham and the host.

Mr. Wilson welcomed the men back from the front and said that as long as he remained in Fernie it was his intention to entertain the men from time to time.

The affair broke up about 1 a.m. with the singing of "God Save the King."

TO REVIVE SMELTING INDUSTRY AT GREENWOOD

(Greenwood Ledge)

Mining Truth directs the attention of citizens of Spokane, and particularly the Chamber of Commerce and other quasi-public organizations, to the front page article in this issue, wherein it is proposed to revive the smelter enterprise at Greenwood, B.C., under independent management and with the combined financial aid of the State of Washington and Province of British Columbia.

In our opinion this is a sane and entirely feasable reconstructive project that will mean much to our own prosperity and even more to the great mineralized areas to the north, on both sides of the international line. No other movement would meet with such popular approval in a territory that contributes largely to this city's prosperity and which naturally looks to us for practical aid in development of its resources.

The first argument against the suggestion naturally turns upon the fact that the property is in British Columbia and that nothing of similar nature has ever before been undertaken. The best answer is that the property has always been owned by an American company and that, as a matter of fact, there are several similar projects, noticeably the nickel properties of Sudbury, owned in the United States. Another argument is that import and export duties might interfere with free movement of ores from both sides of the line. In answer it may be said that there are no import duties upon raw ores going into Canada and that in any event the plant would be bonded by the United States government so that bullion derived from ores from this side of the line could be returned to this market. As a matter of fact, the only logical objection to the project is that the State of Washington could not legally go behind a British Columbia enterprise with financial aid. That remains to be seen, but in any event there is no legal hindrance to strong moral support.

Mining Truth suggests that the Spokane Chamber of Commerce take the lead in this movement, and as a first step get into touch with other communities to ascertain the sentiment, and, if encouraged, call a representative meeting at which all details could be threshed out and a concrete plan adopted. The British Columbia government has already promised material aid in reviving the fortunes of the plant, which has been in successful operation for almost 20 years. Since Canada and the United States are firm allies in world affairs, it seems to us that an international agreement to benefit a great mineral territory which happens to be on both sides of an imaginary line offers no unsurmountable difficulties. Small difficulties can be brushed away by common sense and reliable expert advice. — Spokane Mining Truth.

DISTRICT 18 ELECTIONS

Complete returns of the annual election of officers for District 18, U. M. W. of A., are as yet unobtainable, but it is positively assured that for the presidency P. M. Christopher, of Blairmore, and David Rees, of Vancouver, formerly of this city, will be contestants in the second heat. this being necessary as the successful candidate must obtain over fifty per cent of the total vote. For vice-president, Wm. Dickenson, of Fernie, and W. McFegan, of Hillcrest, will go to the second ballot. Edward Browne, of Taber, has been re-elected District Secretary-Treasurer on the first ballot. Robert Livett, of Bellevue was re-elected by acclamation as International Board Member. For auditor, Wm. Potter and W. Christie will contest the final round, as will David Rees and Frank Weatley for election as delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress. The second ballot will take place between January 10 and 13, but the exact date has not been set.

COMMITTED SUICIDE

By hanging himself to the top bar of his cell with a strip of blanket, John Walsh, a life termer in the New Westminster penitentiary, committed suicide. Walsh was sent from Fernie, where he was sentenced to life imprisonment for murder. A short time ago he became insane and arrangements were made to have him transferred to the medical hospital.

R. W. Wood is recovering from an attack of the flu.

There will be a Christmas tree tonight in Victoria Hall for the soldiers' kiddies.

The Desert of Water

I have read in some books of travel that certain tribes of Arabs have no name for the ocean, and that when they came to the shore for the first time they asked with eager sadness, as if penetrated by the conviction of a superior beauty, "What, is that desert of water more beautiful than the land?"

SOME ISSUES OF BRITISH ELECTIONS

Last-moment predictions as to the outcome of the British elections are to the effect that the Coalition government will be returned by a large majority; that Labor will not be so strongly represented as earlier forecasts indicated, and that Labor and Sinn Fein may form a working alliance, the latter leaving in abeyance their demand for a separate republic in return for the support of Labor for immediate home rule. The Sinn Feiners apparently have repented of the absurdity of running for parliament on a pledge of staying away from parliament if elected, and will attend to revive memories of Donnybrook at Westminster. They promise to wipe out the old National party, but if they form an alliance with the Labor party they will undoubtedly constitute a more formidable obstructionist element than ever did the followers of Parnell or Redmond. If the Coalition Liberals remain Coalition Liberals and stand by the Coalition Unionists there is not the shadow of doubt that Lloyd George will be able to carry on as Prime Minister.

Who will be the leader of the Opposition is not clear; in fact, the Opposition is likely to be made up of a number of guerilla leaders, and this will be one of its sources of weakness. Some observers are of opinion that the great weakness of organized labor is that it lacks good leadership. Its higher counsels are infested with Socialism and pacifism in almost equal proportions. Indeed, the official Labor party may be considered for all practical purposes Socialist as far as its parliamentary representation is concerned. The party has declared for state ownership of railroads, canals and mines. The Coalition party is pledged to the ownership of British railways. The Labor party is somewhat vague as regards the Irish problem, for it demands "the immediate application to Ireland of the fullest possible measure of Home Rule." Lloyd George says that the fullest possible measure of Home Rule would be applied to Ireland as soon as Ireland can agree upon the matter. Until then, he says, no measure at all is possible.

The Labor party demands that Labor shall be directly represented at the Peace Conference, that there shall be a concurrent world labor conference, and that the British government shall give passports to any Labor leaders selected to confer by any foreign labor party. This would permit the German Socialist labor leaders and the Russian Bolshevists to attend. The Laborites and the Asquith Liberals are at one in demanding the immediate restoration of the freedom of speech, of travel, publication, and the abolition of all compulsory military service. There is also a demand from the same quarters for the release of all political prisoners, including conscientious objectors. The Labor party has come out flat-footedly for the ablition of the House of Lords, whereas Lloyd George has declared himself ready to further democratize the Upper Chamber without explaining how it is to be done.

The Prime Minister has been somewhat vague also in the matter of providing small land holdings for returned soldiers, in that he omits to say how the vast sum of money for this project is to be raised. The Labor party is more explicit on this plank. It protests against any scheme whereby the money shall be raised for this or other expenses by taxing the consumers of food or other commodities in popular conmoney shall be raised by lowering the exemption limit for income taxes, by more heavily taxing or even confiscating the larger incomes, and by doubling or trebling the death duties. Its proposals with regard to taxation are Socialistic in the extreme. Those of the Asquith Liberals are founded on the maintenance of Free Trade, which Lloyd George contemplates some protection features.

One interesting plank in a platform put forward by the weekly periodical, Common Sense, as providing standing ground for both Laborites and Liberals, is a proposal that "newspaper trusts shall be dissolved and laws enacted for the purpose of purifying the press, and especially for the purpose of preventing the spreading of false information about home and foreign affairs." This is probably aimed at Lord Northcliffe, whom the Socialists view with fury. Of late the relations between the Coalition government and Lord Northcliffe have been far from cordial. While moderately supporting Lloyd George this section of the press has predicted that he is not destined long to survive. Lloyd George's partisans explain this situation by asserting that Lord Northcliffe wanted to become one of the British peace delegates, but was unable to get a promise from the Prime Minister that he would be appointed. Others say that Northcliffe, with his remarkable instinct of political foresight believes that Lloyd George is going into a decline, and desires to stand from under before the crash comes.—Mail and Empire.

INDUSTRIAL PEACE PREPAREDNESS

Mr. H. J. Daly, director-general of repatriation and employment, is apparently proceeding in a business-like way to organize the necessary machinery for the readjustment period in Canadian industry. The task of fitting the complex departmental machinery into position in the general scheme is probably lightened to an appreciable extent by the evident desire of the government to get the country into a state of preparedness without playing politics.

Co-operation between the several departments concerned with the transference of Canadian soldiers and war workers back to civil industry will be in itself a commendable step forward in government administration. It is necessary to harmonize the work of the department of militia, the department of civil re-establishment, and the department of labor; and to fit in schemes of various boards such as the soldiers' settlement board, and possibly housing, land development, and highway construction projects.

In addition, there must be co-operation between the provincial and municipal authorities and the Dominion government. The effectiveness of government labor bureaus, as distributing mediums for labor and opportunities, as the army is demobilized and new industrial activites are developed, must largely depend upon goodwill and hearty co-operation between the national, provincial and local organizers. Some of the provinces seem to be shouldering their responsibilities with foresight, and an evident desire to help the situation from the natonal viewpoint. Even when the labor exchange machinery has been organized into smooth working order, it will still be necessary to educate many employers of labor to make the most intelligent use of the government facilities, by dealing always through the local bureaus in engaging labor. Common sense will be especially needed in helping to restore to steady work men who have been unsettled by their experiences on active service.

Mr. Daly's courage in dealing with national problems, and business organizing ability, would seem to be serving him in good stead, however. Public opinion can help, by remembering that the work of preparedness for industrial readjustment must be carried on with as much thoroughness and intelligent anticipation as preparedness for war. It is the way to avoid a breakdown in industrial and social relations in Canada. — Exchange.

THE HORRIBLE AND THE ABSURD

"If our after-the-war playwrights ever find themselves short of material," says our Paris contemporary, "L'Oeuvre," "we recommend to them the history of the Russian revolution as an inexhaustible mine. There the horrible rubs elbows with the absurd; the shiver and the mad laugh alternate—a true repertory for the Grand Guignol." As one example—there are a thousand others—"LOeuvre" calls our attention to the following "Statute Relative to Women, Issued by the Soviet of Vladimir," and published in "Izvestia," the official monitor of the Committee of Workmen and Soldiers:

Every woman who has reached her eighteenth year is declared the property of the state.

Every woman of eighteen not already married is obliged, under pain of very sevre penalties, to register at the "Bureau of Free Love."

Once registered, she has the right to choose a mate wherever she wishes, among men ranging in age from nineteen to fifty.

Notes.

1. The consent of a man thus chosen is not necessary, and he has no right to protest.

2. Men from nineteen to fifty have also the right to choose women from among those who have reached the eighteenth year; the woman's consent is not necessary.

3. Children issuing from these unions become the property of the state.

All this, no doubt, the result of profound coagitations by some serious philosopher of human morals, hellbent on the improvement of the race. But doesn't it sound like some preposterous masque of mock marriage that one might expect to find at a wild Greenwich Village ball.—Colliers'.

RESTRICTIONS ON SUGAR ARE REMOVED

Whereas the available suppiles of sugar permit of the removal of certain restrictions now, and other restrictions on January 1, 1919.

In exercise of the powers conferred by Order of His Excellency, the Governor General in Council, dated the 12th day of March, 1918, P.C. 596, and of all other powers enabling, The Canada Food Board hereby orders:

The manufacture of icing sugar is permitted.

Restrictions on the use of sugar in making French pastries, iced cakes or biscuits and in the making of candy for private consumption, are removed.

Restrictions on the serving of sugar in public eating places are removed.

On and after Jan. 1, 1919—

White or granulated sugar may be used in making bread.

All restrictions on the use of sugar in the manufacture of canned goods, biscuits or fruit, pound, layer, wine, sponge cake; sweet dough products, and pastry; cocoanut macaroons or fancy almond macaroons; marshmallow; bread and bread rolls; candy, chocolate, solid chocolate products; cocoa products, chewing gum, dessicated cocoanut, tobacco, table syrup, compound honey, maple butter, maple syrup compounds and like products; pharmaceutical syrups and medicinal preparations; beers, ales, soft drinks, fountain fruits, fruit juices or syrups, dessert or jelly powders, marshmallow powders; ice cream; soap, shall be removed.

Sugar may be purchased without permit or the presentation of sugar certificates or coupons.

Restrictions upon the use of sugar in the manufacture of condensed milk shall be removed.

Prejudice keeps many a man away from a good friend.

UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE

All the indications are that after the war it will be English. The formal draft of the Treaty of Versailles will be couched in the traditional language of diplomacy, the language of Foch and Clemenceau, but the discussions at Paris and Versailles may well be in the tongue which President Wilson and most of our peace delegates have best at their disposal. Perhaps it is no compliment to us that the European peacemakers should be in a position to meet us more than halfway in the matter of foreign tongues, but the fact is there.

The French language will prosper after the war. In more or less perfect form it will be brought back to America, to Australia, to Canada, to South Africa by soldiers and auxiliary war workers to the number of many tens of thousands. But for every Anglo-Saxon whom the war has taught French, it is a safe guess that there are a hundred mid-Europeans to whom as the result of the war, emphasizing already existing conditions, the English tongue will be brought close home. Because the new Czechoslovakia must be in intimate touch with a million Czechs and Slovaks in the United States, because there are several million Poles in this country, because every one of the new nationalities in central Europe looks in the first place to these United States, the American language will be familiar among all foreign languages to these peoples. For that matter, the numerous commissions and propagandas of mid-Europe which have been busy in the United States will have brought back with them the use, if not the idiom, of our language.

This will not be a novelty altogether. Returning immigrants have these many years been exporting our "Hello" and "All right" together with our best dental work into the European hinterland. Once more it is a safe guess that for every member of the upper classes in Europe who speaks French there are dozens among the plain folk to whom English is a recognizable tongue. — Collier's.

VINOL CREATES STRENGTH

Positive—Convincing Proof

It is all very well to make claims, but can they be proven? We publish the formula of Vinol to prove the statements we make about it.

By Cod Liver and Beef Peptones, Iron and Manganese Peptonates, Iron and Ammonium Citrate, Lime and Soda Glycerophosphates, Cascarin.

Any doctor will tell you that the ingredients of Vinol as published above, combine the very elements needed to make strength.

All weak, run-down, overworked nervous men and women may prove this at our expense.

There is nothing like Vinol to restore strength and vitality to feeble old people, delicate children and all persons who need more strength.

Try it. If you are not entirely satisfied, we will return your money without question; that proves our fairness and your protection.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

N. B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

SYNOPSIS OF LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

For information apply to any Provincial Government Agent or to

THE WRONG WAY TO DO IT

The War Labor Board at Washington, whatever its animating purpose may be, is drifting in the wrong direction and making itself an instrumentality for the punishment of those who believe in the fairness of the open-shop system. This war is not being waged against the open or the closed shop. It is not a union or non-union controversy.

The proclamation of the President creating the War Labor Board defined its "powers, functions and duties" as covering "controversies arising between employers and workers in fields of production necessary for the effective conduct of the war." The principles to be observed by the National War Labor Board, as defined as its creation, specifically prescribe that "In establishments where union and non-union men and women now work together, and the employer meets only with employees or representatives engaged in said establishments, the continuance of such shall not be deemed a grievance."

Notwithstanding this very clear definition of the board's duties, this body has been repeatedly used, possibly without its knowledge or consent, as an instrumentality to close the open shop. It is not surprising that cunning and astute labor leaders seeking to magnify their influence with their associates, have skilfully fomented troubles in open-shops for the purpose of inviting the War Labor Board to step in and adjudicate, knowing that usually the adjudicators would conclude that the easiest way to settle the disturbance would be to compel the recognition of the union.

Perhaps the most flagrant instance of this interference with satisfactory conditions was found in the case of the Western Union Telegraph Company. This concern had its own organization of its employees. No complaint from them was heard. Suddenly outside organizers endeavored to break in. It was easy to create a disturbance and then to call it to the attention of the government and then to have the government assume control of the company whose services had been notably economical and efficient.

One of the most recent instances of interference with a corporation which had been going on its way quietly for nearly twenty years occurred in connection with the Brooklyn Rapid Transit. Outsiders had been trying for years to organize the men employed by this company. To create a disturbance, they charged that it was discriminating against its employees on account of unionism, whereupon a voluntary statement was made by all of the 450 men involved, excepting four, that there had been no such discrimination.

The disturbers told the employees that the government was behind them and that it would only be a short time before the company would cease to have anything to say about the employment of men and working conditions. On these assurances, the disturbers were able to get a small part of the subway and elevated motormen into their organization. With this little group, they threatened to strike. This was only a bluff. Once again, following the procedure to which we referred, and this time apparently by pre-arrangement, a representative of the Federal Labor Bureau appeared, urged the few malcontents not to strike, and asserted that the Labor Bureau would take up the matter with the National War Labor Board. This was done, and the War Labor Board again, as usual, took the side of the union and opened a way by which a small minority of malcontents could exert the influence of a majority.

This sort of thing has been going on all over this country. It is in violation of the purpose for which the War Labor Board was created and deserves the strongest reprobation. It is not the way to bring labor and capital together, but rather to produce discontent where no grievance existed. In these trying times, when our great corporations are called upon to meet the enormous burdens of war taxes and all the increased cost of operation and of materials, they are entitled to fair and just treatment. We do not hesitate to say that, in numerous instances, they have not received this treatment from the War Labor Board.—Leslie's Weekly.

BRITISH POLICY JUSTIFIED

It is a mistaken and mischievous view which persists in regarding Great Britain's emergence from this war as a sort of hairbreath escape from a disaster which she invited by a state of unpreparedness. In the early days of the war, and while the issue was still uncertain, the prophets of calamity could wag their heads with impunity while they talked of Britain's unreadiness and told us with tiresome iteration how often they had told us so. Now, however, the war is won and their doctrine can be assessed at its proper worth. When it is so assesed it can be dismissed.

So long as this war is a subject of discussion there will be argument among those who will seek for the deciding factor. And while no one is ever likely to determine to the satisfaction of everyone concerned who or what won the war, it may be taken for granted that tomorrow or a century hence one indisputable fact of the war will be that, but for the British navy it could not have been won. The view of those who are prepared to undertake an impartial assessment of British policy as illuminated by the experience of the war, is fairly summed up by the New York Evening Post in its comment upon that recent event which it describes as "the most impressive and astounding naval capitulation ever seen." The Post says:

"This majestic proof of British might at sea is also proof of the wisdom of British policy. English statesmen had to make their choice. They could not be invincible on the ocean and at the same time formidable on land. As practical men they knew that their election lay between a great navy and a great army; they could not maintain both. And with large foresight and a nice measuring of probabilities and perils, they decided to insure England's safety by making her safe at sea. The fashion was four years ago to cry out on English unpreparedness for the great war. But we see now that she had prepared for herself the surest armor available to her statesmen. They were held in light esteem in Berlin. In land fighting the English were 'contemptible,' according to the German standard, and the English fleet could be kept at bay by mines and torpedoes. But wisdom is justified of her children; and it must today be sorrowfully admitted by the humiliated and discredited military experts of Germany that the long-headed English had been wiser than they in making ready for the last desperate wrestle."

So far as the unpreparedness argument goes, the beginning of the war found France and Russia quite as unprepared as Britain in all the modern appliances which gave to the kaiser's army the strength which made it so formidable a menace. A British conscript army would not, of itself, have saved the situation if Germany had succeeded in her plan of overwhelming France at the first onslaught with the superior machinery of warfare it had perfected. The real deficiency of the Entente in the early part of the war was not in men but in munitions, guns and equipment of the type possessed by their opponents.

The war has strengthened rather than weakened the old arguments against the necessity for conscription in Britain. The navy has proved itself a complete and sufficient defence. For that purpose alone a huge standing army is not needed in the British Isles. The experience gained of the armies trained by Britain, Canada and the United States, after declaring war, is that levies raised and trained under actual war conditions are at least equal, and probably are superior to the conscripted armies against which they were pitted.

So far as land warfare was concerned, Great Britain had no hairsbreath escape from destruction. Britain's first line of defence was found at the outbreak of war to be fully prepared and already in silent occupation of the proper strategic points. The invasion bogy has occasionally been paraded; but there is no scrap of evidence that Germany ever contemplated the possibility of landing an army in the British Isles, or that the late German Government had discovered a method of maintaining it there, or of extricating it again in face of the British fleet.

These facts make difficult of comprehension the election talk in Britain of the abolition of conscription there depending on the peace terms. Even if Europe returned to the "status quo ante bellum" there would be less justification than ever for the permanence of what has been submitted to as a disagreeable necessity of a world war for the defence of democracy and international law against the aggression and rapacity of Teutonic militarism.

THE MYSTERY OF THE FLU

The four-and-twenty warring sects appear to have nothing on the physicians attending the American Public Health Association, whose recent deliberations concerning the pandemic have been followed with great interest. The influenza still refuses to yield up its secret, although not because of paucity of theories. To ban or not to ban; to inoculate or not to inoculate; to mask or not to mask—each had its advocates, and each in his own opinion "exceeding stiff and strong." In their divergence the medical authorities of this continent reflect opinion abroad.

Some hold that the virulence of the disease is due to the intensification of germ life in the trenches, and others argue that it is not the sort of disease that follows in the wake of armies. Some hold that it is spread by personal contact, and others that it travels by air and earth, as witness the outbreaks among the Indian tribes far from civilization. Those who cling to the mind over matter theory, announce that, broken by four years' strain, the strength of mental effort is not sufficient to contend with the germ life always present in the human frame. But if so, why does the disease particularly attack those in the flush of youth, granting practical immunity to older and younger persons? Some, going still further afield, assert that the epidemic is a visitation caused by unfavorable juxtaposition of the planets. So far as is known, not one has officially mentioned the evil eye.

In summing up, American Association members very sensibly decided that they would just have to do the best they could until science got the number of this latest ill that flesh has inherited.

In truth, the physicians of the continent in convention assembled have not revealed much to the waiting eye and ear of the laity, but they have demonstrated one thing about which there has been some doubt in certain quarters, including those where medicos were wont to assemble—doctors are human, even as the rest of us.—Manitoba Free Press.

LIVE STOCK SHORTAGE

An enormous deficiency in the stock of food animals in the principal European countries has occurred in the past four years of war, during which period production was necessarily hampered, while consumption by the armies probably more than made up for the decreased consumption of the civilian population. The fighting men had to have plenty of meat.

The estimated decrease in European live stock since the war, not counting Russia, Austria-Hungary and the Balkans, is made up as follows:

Cattle	28,080,000
Sheep	54,500,000
Hogs	32,425,000
Total	115,005,000

Last census Canada's total live stock numbered as follows:

Cattle	6,526,113
Sheep	2,174,300
Hogs	3,634,778
Total	12,335,191

In other words the decrease in Europe is nearly ten times the total live stock population of Canada, counting only those leading countries from which figures are available.

Britain's imports as based on normal figures are:

Beef	1,077,154,000 lbs.
Pork	1,261,082,032 lbs.
Butter	452,795,264 lbs.
Eggs	190,850,520 doz.

Canada, in the year ending in the fall of 1918, exported:

Beef	104,710,813 lbs.
Pork	149,934,593 lbs.
Butter	6,783,466 lbs.
Eggs	3,861,389 doz.

The demand for Canada's animal products during the re-construction period of Europe will be as great as, or greater than the demand during the war, according to those in touch with the situation.

Canada will have a net war debt of about $1,300,000,000 for war expenditures alone by March 31st next. Her exports of animal products increased during the war from $53,400,000 in 1913-14 to $172,700,000 last year. The opportunity exists for holding this trade and paying off Canada's war debt inside ten years by live stock alone.

You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder caused by food fermentation due to excessive acid in stomach.

CITY COUNCIL IN SESSION

An unusually limited number of accounts were ordered paid.

Ald. Beck brought up the matter of the recent dismissal by the Court of Appeal of the assessment cases. The city clerk said that he had not yet received a copy of the judgment and that he believed the costs of appeal would not exceed $500.

Ald. Beck then introduced the following motion: That the city clerk be instructed to communicate with the Union of B.C. Municipalities, requesting that organization to liquidate all expenses incurred by the city in connection with the assessment appeals. He explained that an attempt should be made inasmuch as the city by carrying this matter to the highest judicial tribunal and obtaining a decision had established a precedent by which every municipality in the province would benefit. The motion was seconded by Ald. Dudley and carried.

Ald. Dudley said he had received two complaints from parties who had worked at the emergency hospitals that the remuneration was totally insufficient. After brief discussion the matter was dropped and adjournment taken.

Winnipeg Labor Council held a meeting the other day and applauded the Russian soviet republic, which in controlled by Bolsheviks. There is need in Canada for labor leaders to find out more about the Russian Bolsheviks before they advise their followers to join in applauding them. Applause of their cause with the information we have at hand now means condemnation of the Canadian labor organization rather than a boost for Bolshevism.—Calgary Herald.

BRITISH LABOR AND THE COALITION

The severence of the relations of the official Labor Party in Great Britain with the Coalition government — the abrogation of the party truce—has not been thoroughly understood in many quarters. In view of the possible acquisition to the representation of that party in the new British House of Commons the following statement of its attitude towards the Lloyd George administration, given to the European Bureau of the Christian Science Monitor from the headquarters of the party itself, will be of interest:

"Labor's original desire was to have the election postponed until the public was free to give thought to the great issues to be determined by the new parliament, and it was particularly anxious that men on active service should be able to vote with a full understanding of the problems raised by the war and the solutions proposed by the various political parties.

"Despite the representations of the Labor party and other organized groups of public opinion, however, the Coalition government dissolved parliament on the plea that it required a fresh mandate from the country and despite protests and appeals, Mr. Llowd George, with the support of the Unionist party and his Liberal followers, reopened the domestic controversy.

"In the name of national unity the Unionist-Liberal Coalition, formed upon a compromise in vital and fundamental matters which were fully debated and decided in three general elections and three parliaments, has invited the electorate to give it a fresh lease of power as a national government.

"The present coalition, however, is not a national government, as was the first coalition, formed by Mr. Asquith in May, 1915, and which was a combination of the three parties—Liberal, Unionist, and Labor — and was supported in its war policy by the sympathy even of the Irish Nationalist party. That coalition was destroyed by intrigue, but while expressly condemning the methods by which public confidence in Mr. Asquith's administration was undermined, Labor continued its associations with the government under Mr. Lloyd George.

"Like the Irish Nationalists, however, it lost all confidence in the second Coalition as a result of the mishandling of the Irish question, and especially of the invitation to Sir Edward Carson to take office.

"Nevertheless, despite several unpleasant incidents arising out of differences of policy upon questions of vital interest to the internationally organized working class movement Labor's association with the Coalition was in sight. Having the national interests solely in view, Labor could not consent to continue its association with the government when it realized that it was proposed to hold a general election under conditions that made general consultation of the people's wishes impossible.

"The Labor party further held, and still holds, that in the new parliament it can best serve the national interests and purpose by remaining entirely free to promote its specific programme of reforms in the most effective manner that the parliamentary situation would permit Labor could not be a party to setting up even a benevolent despotism untempered by unorganized parliamentary opposition strong enough to check administrative tyranny, alert to offer guidance and informed advice to the government and capable, if need be, of forming an alternative government, should the existing administration forfeit the confidence of the House of Commons or fail to meet the country's needs.

"Labor, therefore, appeals to the electors as an independent political party with a specific and coherent programme of reform, and it is not in the Coalition because it desired to submit its program to the electorate. Its programme is constructive, embodying the fundamentals of democratic justice, and applying those fundamentals in detail to problems of national and international reorganization which have resulted from the war."

IF YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

Baysil Robertson is spending the holidays at Regina.

Geo. Thrasher, of Bull River, spent Christmas in Fernie visiting friends.

Miss Jean Corsan, of Victoria, is spending the holidays with her parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Fitzgerald, who have been visiting relatives in Fernie returned to Calgary.

Alex. Sherwood, who is up at Monson, Alta., with the internment guard, was home for Christmas.

W. McKinnon, of Invermere, spent Christmas in Fernie, the guest of his sister, Mrs. A. I. Fisher.

Don't forget the Navy League dance in Victoria Hall on New Year's eve. The dance of the season.

The hockey club gave a very succesesful dance on Christmas night. They netted $80 for the boys.

Reginald O'Brien was successfully operated on for appendicitis on Saturday last at the Fernie hospital.

There will be a meeting of the returned Veterans at 2.30 on Sunday afternoon. Business: Election of officers.

Hereafter Mt. Fernie Lodge I.O. O.F. will meet every Wednesday evening in Ingram's Hall, at 8 p.m., instead of in the K.P. hall.

All children are invited to meet at the Trites-Wood store at 11 o'clock sharp on New Year's day to receive the usual New Year's treat.

The widows and orphans of the sailors of the merchant marine must be provided for. Attend the dance of the Navy League in Victoria Hall on New Year's eve.

G. G. Henderson is back from the north country where he has been for several months with the Croydon Lumber Co. He is looking fine and expects to spend the winter in Fernie.

ForSale—Lot 5, Block 59 and Lot 4, Block 126. Both for $325 or nearest offer. Also McClary range as good as new, $45. Same Lockwood, King's Hotel.

Findlay may have been more or less of a hypocrite, but he wasn't a piker when it came to bootlegging. He makes a lot of our one bottle men look like thirty cents.

The first draw in the Ingram Cup series will be played at the curling rink tonight. Billy Ingram will donate four boxes of cigars as prizes to go with the cup this year.

Bert Whimster, a Dominion fire warden in Alberta, is spending the Christmas holidays with his parents in Fernie. Bert says the flu is raging in Calgary but is not so bad in Edmonton.

Walter Campbell, of Nordeg, spent Christmas in the city with old friends. Walter is interested in a coal mining proposition up north which he claims is a winner. He left for the west yesterday morning.

Dr. Simmons, after practicing dentistry for four years in Fernie, has closed his office and on Christmas day left for his old home in Vancouver. The doctor's many friends here sincerely regret his departure.

Manager Coffee, of P. Burns & Co., has resigned and Fred Dennnison has been appointed to the position. Fred, who has been in the employ of the Burns Co. for many years, is well known in Fernie, where he has lived at different times for a number of years. Fred is a Great War Veteran and will be a popular manager.

Wm. Gibbon, aged 55, after accumulating a horrible jag with bad whiskey, endeavored to shuffle off the mortal coil by the razor route on Saturday last. He succeeded in slashing himself about the throat pretty badly but the doctors at the Fernie hospital sewed him up and he seems to be a very repentant sinner today. He is a lumberjack and worked for the Elk.

The Sunday school children of Christ Church will hold their Christmas festivities on Saturday, Jan. 4, in the church basement. Tea will be served at 5 o'clock and the evening will be spent in games, etc. Parents and other members of the church are asked to send cakes, sandwiches, etc., for the tea. They are also invited to come in the evening and join in the children's fun. Each child should bring a cup.

At the dinner given by Mr. Wilson on Saturday evening to the returned men, Sherwood Herchmer, on behalf of A. B. Trites, offered to donate his lots on Victoria avenue, in the 41 Market Co. block, together with $500, if the city would purchase the balance of the block and erect a suitable memorial for the men who have given their lives in the great war. This is a splendid offer and the matter should not be allowed to drop without something being done.

Wilmot Tisdale, of Lewiston, Man., is the guest of his sister, Mrs. Wm. Hawthorne.

The telephone girls wish to thank their friends for many Christmas remembrances.

The whist drive advertised for tonight in Christ church basement has been postponed.

The city of Cranbrook will vote on a bylaw to purchase the Arena rink for curling, skating and athletic purposes.

All children are invited to meet at the Trites-Wood store at 11 o'clock sharp on New Year's day to receive the usual New Year's treat.

Ald. Dudley suffered a slight stroke while curling at the rink on Christmas day. He is rapidly recovering and no serious effects are anticipated.

The Loyal Order of Moose are holding a social on Monday evening, Dec. 30, for members and their friends. It is hoped that all who can will be present.

Services at Christ Church next Sunday will be: Matins at 11 a.m.; Evensong 7. 30 p.m. The evening service will be a service of song and will include the old familiar Christmas Carols.

Thos. Prentice, local manager for the A. Macdonald Co., received a wire this morning from Winnipeg stating that Charlie Macdonald, son of the big western wholesaler, had just died of pneumonia.

When our citizens received their tax notices this week and realized that they would have to kick in with at least 30 per cent more money than last year, a lot of them wore a worried look. By and by some of them will wake up to the fact that this city is costing at least $10,000 a year more to do business than is necessary.

Robert Wilson, head of the engineering staff of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., has been appointed to the management of one of the Granby coal mining properties at Cassidy, on Vancouver Island. During his stay in Fernie, Bob has made many friends who, while they regret to see him leave town, congratulate him upon his appointment.

Jack Macdonald, of Vancouver, is in the city, the guest of his sisters, Mrs. S. Herchmer and Mrs. Billings. Jack stopped over in Calgary on the way here long enough to have the flu. He says that he and a friend were at the Palliser hotel and they paid $18 a day for a nurse. There were 63 cases of the flu at the hotel while he was there.

Sherwood Herchmer has got the dope that Teddy Roosevelt will open the Winnipeg bonspiel this year and he can hardly wait for the big event to come off. He has a new lineup for his rink, which consists of himself as skip, M. A. Kastner third, Harvey Brown second, and A. Corrie lead. They have had a number of practice games and look like a strong aggregation.

President Biggs of District 18, in conversation with a correspondent of the Lethbridge Herald, says that he thinks organized labor should send a delegation to Russia to investigate the Bolsheviki movement. We think this would be a splendid move and would suggest Mr. Biggs' name, together with that of the editor of the Ledger. Those fellows would look like ready money to the Russian wolves and if they ever did return we would hear no more of their questionable propaganda work.

GAME CONDITIONS

Elko, B.C., Dec. 23, 1918.

Editor Fernie Free Press,
Fernie, B.C.,

Dear Sir:—I beg space to present a few facts relative to wild game conditions which I hope may interest some of your readers.

For the past five years it has been noticeable that deer are harder to get than formerly, and most sportsmen were of the opinion that the scarcity was due to the deer being chased back by hunters into the higher mountains. This opinion is hardly borne out by the real facts of the case.

I have made careful inquiries of many hunters who have gone back into the hills, to find that one and all complained of a scarcity on ground that in former years teemed with game in the early fall months.

I find, too, on making enquiry of the Indians that they are also of the opinion that game is decidedly on the decrease, and some of them are of the opinion that another ten years will see the end of the deer in the District of Fernie.

I do not wish to pose as an alarmist, but to me it is evident that the Indians are right as to the passing of the deer, although I would not like to set an exact date of the killing of the last deer.

However, I know personally of one party of Indians, six in all, counting Chief Paul,—who is quite an old man—who in three weeks hunt near Elko only succeeded in killing three deer. This too, on ground that some years ago was famous for its herds of wild game.

It would seem as though the time had come for the establishment of game preserves or a close season of some years. Few real sportsmen will begrudge laying aside their rifles for a year or two if by so doing our deer herd be preserved indefinitely. There are yet enough deer in this district, which if carefully conserved, will be sufficient to form a nucleus for the establishment and regeneration of a new herd. This is worth while doing and if acted upon now the public will congratulate itself years hence on its forethought in taking up the matter in time.

It is unthinkable that any of our sportsmen wish to see the deer exterminated. But it is quite conceivable that many of our gunners are not fully alive to the situation as it really exists.

Game has a way of disappearing almost at once, and often for years after its practical extermination, people cannot really believe that it is gone never to come back. The disappearance of the buffalo is a good example of how quickly game can disappear once it reaches a certain point in the diminution of its numbers. The killing off of the elk in the State of Iowa is another instance of complete disappearance in the space of a year or two.

If the sportsmen in the District of Fernie will look well into this matter now and seek to have protection for the deer for the space of five years, their work in that direction will bear fruit a hundred fold, and their children will rise up and call them blessed.

There are several reasons for deer being scarce. First the bag limit is too liberal. Secondly our open season is of unprecedented length. Thirdly the months of November and December should be closed months, as that is the time the deer seek the crowded area of the winter ranges and thus fall an easy prey to the hunters. Then of course there is the cutting of the forests by the lumberman, which affects the white tailed deer more than the mule deer. Huge areas have been cut over of late years with the result that the range of the white tail has been materially lessened. That of course cannot be helped at the present time as the state needs the timber, but what we can do is to give the deer protection until they either acclimatize themselves to a new habitat, or the gradual reforestation of the cut over areas again afford the cover without which they cannot live.

Now Mr. Editor, there are a lot of good clean sportsmen in our District of Fernie. Some years back they organized themselves into a game association which for a long time was an active and hard working body. When the war came many of its members went overseas, and the meetings gradually became fewer in number until at last they were discontinued altogether. No one was to blame for this. It was simply a war condition that was all.

Now our men are coming back, and now is the time to revive the institution. There will be little difficulty in getting recruits if a few energetic men will take the matter up.

I make my appeal to your readers knowing that the average man is a lover of fair play. I ask fair play for the deer. I ask that they be given a chance to survive. I ask that every man who loves the woods and the wild life it contains to co-operate with his fellows in a determined effort to save the deer. All they want is a rest. Give them five years, and they will pay you big interest on the period of waiting. Save the deer for your children, they too want to hunt a little when they grow up.

Let us do it now.

Campbell Lewis.

Save your Hair! Get a small bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

The Plain Truth about Shoe Prices

LEATHER is scarce and is growing scarcer. A large part of the available supply must be used for soldiers' boots. Importations have practically ceased and we are forced to depend upon the limited quantity of materials produced in Canada.

The cost of everything which goes into a pair of shoes is high, and is going higher. Workmen by the thousands have joined the colors, and labor is increasingly hard to get. It is not merely a matter of high prices, but of producing enough good quality shoes to go around.

These conditions are beyond the control of any man, or any group of men. They fall on all alike. No one is exempt—neither the manufacturer, the dealer, nor the consumer.

You must pay more today for shoes of the same quality than you did a year ago. Next Spring, prices will be higher still.

These are hard facts. They will not yield to argument. They cannot be glossed over. We cannot change them, much as we would wish to do so.

But you, as a wearer of shoes, can help to relieve them if you will exercise prudence and good judgment in purchasing. See that you get real value for your money. Spend enough to get it, but spend nothing for "frills."

See that the manufacturer's trade-mark is stamped upon the shoes you buy. High prices are a temptation to reduce the quality in order to make the price seem low. But no manufacturer will stamp his trade-mark upon a product which he is ashamed to acknowledge. Remember this, and look for the trade-mark. It is your best assurance of real value for your money.

Some one must stay at home to do the work of daughter, sister, maid.

To keep home sweet and clean, wouldn't you say she needs all the time-saving help that Gold Dust will surely give. These four helps particularly.

No. 1—Greaseless

Some articles collect more grease than others. For instance, roasting and frying pans, tops of stoves, dish towels. Busy housekeepers find that a tablespoonful of Gold Dust to half a pail of hot water makes the water soft for hands and wonderfully dissolving for grease.

No. 2—Gritless

There are many articles which require a smooth cleaner with no grittiness to mar glossy or polished surfaces. Such things as: silverware, windows, mirrors, wash bowls and all enamelled surfaces. Gold Dust is a smooth, gentle cleansing agent without grit. Remember—a tablespoonful to half a pail of hot water.

No. 3—Rubless

Soap rubbed on a cloth cannot clean such things as: baby bottles, milk bottles, cruets, funnels, food choppers and all utensils with spouts. But Gold Dust dissolved in hot water makes a solution which dissolves every bit of oil or grease without the need for rubbing. Yes! A tablespoonful of Gold Dust to a gallon of hot water.

No. 4—Tasteless

Not even a trace of soap must be left behind when you clean the following: Nooks and corners in iceboxes, dairy utensils, strainers, sieves and graters, patented articles such as grinding mills and egg beaters. Gold Dust thoroughly and effectively dissolves every tiny particle of oil or grease and washes out completely. Nothing but sweet cleanliness can remain.

NO SOFT PEACE WANTED

But there can be no peace for the future unless this Balkan question is settled, and settled in a manner that harmonizes completely with the victory of the Entente. The terms must be severe, in order that justice may be secured for ravaged Serbia and Roumania and for Greece. Then will come Turkey. No soft course possible there. The Turk must leave Europe forever, and he must give up a good deal of Asia to the Armenians, the Greeks, the Arabs, and to the new people who are to raise their heads at last in Syria and in Transcaucasia. With that peace, too, we have nothing to do; we are at peace with Turkey! But then will come Austria, with whom we were belatedly at war. In the settlement of that amazing debacle we shall have some voice. The best of the new nations in the old Hapsburg dominions, Czecho-Slovaki, was organized on our soil. Austria is wiped out; her humiliation is complete; but in still other ways than by her shame her account must be rendered for the disturbance of the peace of the world. Germany; and she can be allowed to approach the peace conference not as a suppliant for admission on equal and democratic terms to a league of nations, but only as the still existent ravager of Belgium and Poland and Roumania, the bully and the wrecker of Russia. Of this character, and of their responsibility for the reparation that must be done unless the war has been fought in vain, the German people, who for more than four years sustained the Hohenzollern in every act, must be held just as responsible as if the Hohenzollern still ruled. The time of the conference cannot be wasted in the consideration of any other course.

FUR OVERCOAT? OH, NO! NOT AT THE COAST

Never mind that big fur overcoat if you're bound Victoria or Vancouver way for a winter's holiday. They're picking chrysanthemums and playing golf on grassy greens out there. This delightful climate is attracting hundreds from the Prairies as an ideal spot in which to spend winter.

To those fond of outdoor sports it is a veritable paradise. Golfing, hunting, mountaineering, boating, horseback riding or automobiling are but a few of the popular pastimes.

Two of Canada's largest and finest hotels offer unexcelled accommodation — Hotel Vancouver in that city, Empress Hotel in Victoria.

Five hundred miles of grandeur, of majestic mountains, roaring falls, rushing cascades, giant cedars and firs are seen along the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

COMMITTED SUICIDE

Word was received in this city on Monday that ex-Alderman Edmund Leek Brooks had taken his own life while residing in Vancouver. The news shocked the citizens considerably as Mr. Brooks was during his nine years' residence here highly respected and took a very active interest in conducting his business affairs as well as a very keen interest in the affairs of the city, and for three and a half terms represented the ratepayers on the city council and always received the support of a large percentage of the voters on polling day. He came here direct from Wolverhampton, Staffordshire, England, and immediately engaged in his trade of bricklayer and mason. He rapidly succeeded in this and established a very profitable business. He was always a good fellow but frugal in his habits and gradually acquired different residential properties here and when he enlisted in June had five of these in the Annex from which he derived a substantial revenue. He entered the ranks of one of the engineer units upon arriving at the coast and remained with them for some time. Later he transferred to the Royal Flying Corps and journeyed to Toronto. There, however, owing to some physical defect he was rejected and reverted to the engineers, joining the 11th Canadian Engineers at Vancouver, to which unit he belonged when the self-inflicted tragedy occurred.

He is survived by his parents and three brothers; his parents residing at Wolverhampton; his three brothers being on active service with the British forces. According to his will his parents are the beneficaries, Ed. Marsham and C. McPherson of this city being the executors. Full particulars of the rash deed are not available, other than the weapon used was a razor and the act was committed in the room of James Wood, formerly of this city. The body is being shipped here and the funeral will probably be held on Sundav next.

Mrs. A. I. Fisher entertained the managers and officers of the Presbyterian church at a dinner party at her home on Tuesday evening.

Public schools will re-open on Monday after being closed for two months. So far as Fernie is concerned the city is practically free from the flu so all pupils should attend from the very first of the term.

There are a lot of heavy taxpayers roaring their heads off this week owing to the high tax rate. Let them kick; it will do them good; probably a few of them will get enough sand after a while to offer themselves as candidates for aldermen.

Away back in the early history of this city A. B. Trites, J. D. Quail, Fred Johnson, A. C. Liphardt, J. L. Gates and one or two other business men sat on the city council of this town and they now think they have done their duty so far as civic affairs are concerned for all time. They are doing a lot of talking these days about high taxes. Possibly if a committee of citizens waited on them they might be prevailed upon to take another term on the board.

RATEPAYERS' ATTENTION

Fernie, B.C., Jan. 3, 1919.
The Editor Fernie Free Press,
Fernie ,B.C.

Dear Sir—As, with the advent of the New Year, brings us again to the period when a new administration is about to be placed in charge of the city affairs, and as the recent Tax Notices served upon ratepayers indicate that we are not getting any farther out of the hole than for several years past, I respectfully request that you give me space in your columns to endeavor to bring to the attention of those who are very deeply affected, how certain existing conditions appear to me as a ratepayer could be to a greater or lesser extent modified.

I am not attempting this with any intention of unduly criticizing past administrations, because it is always supposed to be an easy matter to inflict unjust charges against those holding public office, but it is merely with a desire to suggest the introduction of a policy of retrenchment and economy without seriously reducing the efficiency in the various civic departments. If the following conclusions are considered by those who are in a better position to know and obtain the specific details to which I will refer, as being incorrect or unsound, I trust you will accord them the same opportunity to present their views through your columns, when it may devolve that some suggestions far better than those herein advanced will be brought forward.

It is my firm belief that by careful reconstruction of the respective civic departments, at least $7,600 per annum could be cut from the estimates that are brought down to maintain these departments. To begin with, while the present financial conditions exist, surely we have sufficient public-spirited citizens and property holders who aspire for seats on the council, to waive their right to paid salaries; by doing so they would save an expenditure of $1200. Then in the case of the city clerk and police magistrate, could not these offices be combined at the saving of another $1500 per year without at all inflicting any extreme hardship upon the one who assumed these dual duties?

Then we have in the departments for the preservation of law and order and that of fire protection, six permanent employees who receive approximately $7200 per year. Could we not amalgamate the heads of these departments in one office and reduce the permanent staff from six to four and thus save some $2000 more, and have equally as good police and fire protection? In the electric light and power department since the former city electrician resigned it has required two men to fill that position and of course this has not been done at any reduction in the expense of operation in this department but rather we believe at an increased cost of over $1000 per year. The city engineer's department now virtually has two heads, both of whom are unquestionably thoroughly competent men and paid more or less elaborate salaries, but in dealing with a hard financial problem such as we now face we must not lean too much to sentiment and consequently would it not be possible to operate these on the principle of combining these offices at a saving of another $1000.

In the estimates we also find an item of $600 for auditing the books of the city, and in the past the major portion of this work at times has been performed by a former city employee, who six months before jojining the firm of chartered accountants engaged by the city, was receiving less than $100 per month, but the city now pays $600 for about two weeks' work every year. In view of this does not the question arise: "Are there not local accountants sufficiently qualified to do this work at two-thirds the expense?" The city also has on its payroll the office of medical health officer at a salary of $900 per year. We understand that all police officers are ex-officio health officers and therefore they might as-

G.W.V.A. PASS RESOLUTION

The local Great War Veterans' Association have unanimously passed the following resolution:

That Whereas there are at present numerous Germans, Austro-Hungarians, and other persons of alien enemy origin interned in the various camps throughout Canada.

And Whereas numbers of such persons from time to time during the war have been released to enter the farming, lumbering, railroading, mining and other industries.

And Whereas there are numbers of such persons who by their conduct and words have rendered themselves abnoxious and liable to internment, but have unfortunately been overlooked.

And Whereas these persons are undesirable citizens not only on account of their origin but also for many other obvious reasons.

And Whereas many of such persons are a public menace by reason of their expressed feelings of hatred and revenge towards the citizens of this country, especially towards those patriotic citizens who were instrumental in procuring their internment.

And Whereas the release and employment of such persons would in the highest degree be detrimental to the interests of labor, firstly by keeping our own citizens, especially returned soldiers, out of employment, and secondly by tending to bring about a reduction of wages below the standard of decent living.

And Whereas it is undesirable on the one hand to admit such persons to British citizenship and on the other to permit a large number of men to remain within the community who are not, and should not become British subjects.

Now Be It Resolved That, His Excellency the Governor General of Canada, the Senate, the House of Commons and the Privy Council of Canada be petitioned by this Branch of the Great War Veterans Association to deport such Alien Enemies to the respective countries of their origin as soon as may be after the conclusion of the war and the declaration of peace.

NO WORD OF NEW MINERS' ELECTION

Owing to the illness of Secretary E. Browne of District No. 18, U. M. W. of A., no arrangements have been made for the second election for officials of the district for the coming year made necessary by the fact that neither a president nor a vice-president was elected on the first ballot. There was some talk of holding the election on Jan. 10th, but secretary Peacock of the local union has no word to this effect.

The race for presidency has narrowed down to Messrs. Biggs and Christopher, at present the president and vice-president of the district. In the first poll Christopher was 300 votes short of a clear majority. It is generally expected that he will be returned a winner. For the vice-presidency the race will be between Dickenson and McFagan. At the same time Messrs. Wheatley and Rees will fight it out for the honour of representing the district at the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada convention.—Lethbridge Herald.

The Great War Veterans and the ladies of the I.O.D.E. had a Christmas tree entertainment in Victoria Hall last Friday evening, at which all the children of overseas soldiers were remembered with presents which were so numerous as to greatly overtax the capacity of the big evergreen tree and spread out upon the floor and stands provided for the purpose. A feature of the affair was the presentation of a turkey to each wife and mother of soldiers at the front, there being 90 turkeys distributed to spread comfort and cheer to the families of the men not yet returned. A bounteous supper was the most enjoyable feature of the evening.

THE NEW YEAR'S DAY BONSPIEL

The big spiel on New Year's Day in aid of the G.W.V.A. was a huge success and when the expenses are paid they will have about $160 to the good.

Forty-six rinks entered the competition and the ice was kept busy from 10 a.m. until nearly 1 a.m. the following morning, when the contest narrowed down to the semi-finals.

The rules of the competition called for a skip playing with a lead and two green curlers, or a third and second man playing with two green curlers, and this rule was almost invariably carried out with but one or two exceptions, thus making the competition very even. One notable exception to this rule—and how they got by the committee no one seems to know—was the McIntyre rink, which consisted of Jack McIntyre, skip; G. G. Henderson, an old skip and one of the best curlers in town playing third; Mrs. G. G. Henderson, a member of the Ladies Curling Club playing second; and Miss Duncan a green curler leading. This combination was much too strong for anything they went up against and they have now reached the finals, where they meet M. A. Kastner, whose team consists of himself as skip; A. Muirhead, a lead playing third, and two absolutely green curlers.

The refreshments provided by the ladies were greatly appreciated and they deserve a great deal of credit for their services.

E. Suddaby for decorations and Mr. Watson and Mr. Graham for adding greatly to the success of the party by meeting Santa Claus and playing him to the hall with their pipes, and above all Santa himself. One hundred and eighty-three children were given presents and Xmas stockings filled with sweets, etc, and 94 turkeys were distributed amongst the wives and dependants. A reserve of presents and turkeys was on hand and given out to those who could not attend, from the I.O.D.E. rooms the next day.

CLEMENCEAU AND DANIELS LIFT THE CURTAIN

Clemenceau and Secretary Daniels one speaking before the French chamber of deputies, the other before the naval affairs committee of the house of representatives at Washington, have lifted the curtain and given the American people a revealing glimpse of the very heart of President Wilson's negotiations.

Answering searching questions from certain French deputies, Premier Clemenceau said:

"You know that reservations have been made on the question of the freedom of the seas. Premier Lloyd George said to me the other day: "You will admit that without the British fleet you could not have continued the war.' I answered in the affirmative. The British Premier then asked me if I was disposed to do anything in opposition to British ideas on freedom of the seas. I answered in the negative."

Here is a perfectly frank declaration that France will support the British determination to maintain Britain's naval supremacy; with an earnest hope that President Wilson will concur in that determination, but with a resolute purpose not to yield if his opposition should be encountered.

When Clemenceau declared that purpose to President Wilson the president replied, as quoted by the French premier to the chamber of deputies, in these words:

"I approve of what you said. What I have to offer the allied governments will change in no way your answer to Premier Lloyd George."

What the president now has to offer to the allied governments is disclosed in Secretary Daniels' statement to the house committee, for it is inconceivable that the secretary of the navy would have spoken thus without the express approval of the president:

"It is my firm conviction (said Secretary Daniels) that if the conference at Versailles does not result in a general agreement to put an end to naval building on the part of all the nations, then the United States must bend her will and energies, must give men and money to the task of the creation of incomparably the greatest navy in the world."

In effect, therefore, the president is saying to Lloyd George and Clemenceau, "If Great Britain persists in her purpose to maintain her great and commanding navy the United States will run her a race for the commanding mastery of the seas."

Behind all the pomp and glitter of the profuse entertainments which France and England have laid at the feet of the president stalks that overwhelming issue.

The Spokesman-Review ventures the guess that Lloyd George and Clemenceau will take Secretary Daniels' threat as a bluff and if need be will call it; that they will reason that the American people would not pile up the blue checks to make good the president's thinly veiled threat to build a bigger navy than Great Britain's; that they will stand on the belief that the American people, on a little more reflection, will see the force and justice of England's contention that a commanding navy is vital to her very existence; that the British navy is not a menace to the peace or commerce of the United States, and that it would be wasteful folly for this nation to engage in rival warship building with the British empire.—Spokesman.

TEUTONIC IMBECILITY

It is not at all likely that we shall hear any more about the proposal that the President of the United States should give part of the time spent by him in Europe to a tour of the cities of Germany.

It will remain on record, however, as another example of Teutonic imbecility that the proposal should even have been thought of, for nothing could be more fatal to Boche appeals for clemency than to give any American statesman who was not a blinded and stubborn pacifist the chance to make a comparison based on his own observation between the results of Hun frightfulness in northern France and the immunity of the fatherland from devastation.

Some of the noblest churches of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries were destroyed by the Germans, never to be restored. The buildings of Kaiserism, the smug, state planned cities; the vulgar villas on the other side of the Rhine, remain intact—a silent confession that Germans were afraid to defend their own soil.

Why should even a whining Socialist officeholder think that the heart of anybody could be softened by the sight of German walls still standing, though they were saved by means of the ignominious surrender of cowards who were too cautious to fight on and take their punishment?—New York Herald.

"What are you going to give your wife for a Christmas present?"

"I don't know. She hasn't told me yet."—Washington Star.

ELKO NOTES

(By Fred Roo)

The writer wishes every reader of this great family paper many Happy New Years. And all your lives so ordered be that e'en through all eternity the hovering dove o'er you all shall be. Sweet Peace.

There are a great many visitors in the Roosville Valley this Christmas. Christmas trees were held at McGuires' School House and the Roosville school house, McGuire's holding their's on Thursday night December 19th and the ranchers turned out en masses. The school house was far too small to accomodate the crowd. The chair was taken by the secretary of the school board, Mr. G. H. Parnell, of the Compton Ranch, and the following programme was carried out without a hitch, and was a great credit to the teacher, Miss D. Walker, of Nelson.

Opening chorus - The Red, White and Blue, by the school children. Recitation - The Spirit of Christmas, Marie Desrosiers. Chorus - Cats, Beans and Barley, by the McGuire Farmers and Farmerettes. Recitation - Gingerbread Land, by Albert McGuire. Recitation - The Dead Doll, by Grace McGuire. Recitation - The Drake's Drum, by Tom Sinclair. Playlet - The Princess, (The Princess: Josephine Desrosiers; The Prince: Grace McGuire; The Witch: Bessie Sinclair.) Recitation - Never Say Fail, by Charles McGuire. Recitation - A Christmas Walk, by Marguerite McGuire. Recitation - Little Orphan Annie, by Bessie Sinclair. Shadow Play - The Night Before Christmas, (Santa Claus Charles McGuire; Father: Tom Sinclair.) Tableau - by the scholars.

This concluded the programme after lavish refreshments were served to all the guests. The school house was beautifully decorated. After refreshments, candy and smokes were enjoyed by the young and the old timers of the valley and a jolly good time was had.

On Friday night, December 20th, the whole McGuire contingent drove down to the Roosville school house, where Miss Jennie Nichols of Creston, B.C., has charge of the public institution for initial education. The faculty had secured considerable outside talent and the programme was some two-handled pumpkins. The chair was taken by the secretary of the school board, Mr. George Dingsdale, who made the speech of the evening, dealing with the glorious victory of the Allies, the blockade runners, and how the Spanish Armada came to be wrecked in the English Channel.

Recitation - The Princess Pats, by Ivy Dingsdale. Dialogue - Tuesday afternoon programme at school by the Roosville school, with Mrs. Walsh Cottingham, of Rossland, B.C., as teacher, and Dick Roo, Broncho twister, as Inspector. This was sufficient to break up school for the holidays. Song - There's a Lump of Sugar Down In Dixie, by Ernest Roo. Piano-Medley-One-Step - by Mrs. J. Broley, of Victoria, B.C. Motion Song - by five of Roosville's Cut-ups, "Oh How I Hate To Get Up In The Morning," (and every one looked the part.) Piano - Gems of the Rainbow Girl, by Miss Hogan, Toronto. Cantata - The Princess, by Roosville School, with pupils from the McGuire's Princess, Prince and Witch. This was well worth the price of admission, Josephine Desrosiers acting as Princess to perfection. Recitation - When Papa Laid the Carpet on the Stairs, by Mike. Fancy Drill - by McGuire and Roosville School Girls. Tiger-Rag One Step, by Roosville Jazz Band. (this selection was enough to make the coyotes and cotton-tail rabbits within a radius of 75 miles hunt their respective holes and remain there till the danger was passed.) Irish Jig - Mrs. J. P. Stocks, Clear Spring Farm. (this was the best bit of jig ever seen in the valley and had everything faded, even the present on the Christmas tree fell down.) Recitation - Murphy Shall Not Sing Tonight, by Charlie O'Rooke, (the pathetic rendition Charlie puts into this classic would bring tears to the eyes of a cast iron dog.)

Dialogue - "Waiting For The Train" by the children. There was another selection on the programme by the Jazz Band but several stockmen who had teams around objected, so with a few closing remarks by the chairman the whole assemblage sang with great gusto, "God Save The King." Wilson's name was never mentioned

The school presented a very pretty appearance with the beautifully decorated Christmas tree, with festoons around the walls, with dozens of pink candles burning, with decorations of Smilax and pink carnations. Refreshments were served, consisting of salads, sandwiches, layer-cakes of 5 and 6 storied castles of succulent delight, and coffee. The dance after the tree entertainment was greatly enjoyed by the young people, who tripped the light fantastic until the cold daylight began to splash through the windows. Both teachers being in great demand throughout the dance, and both leaving the next day for Creston and Nelson.

Fred Peterson and Herman Heftie, the Roosville trappers, came in from their trap line December 18th with 52 Marten, 1 Mink and 29 weasle skins, and left for the hills again after the Xmas entertainment.

Miss E. B. Patterson, teacher of the Kootenay Orchards, Cranbrook, is visiting the Roos, of Elko and Roosville, for the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Macdonald and son, Tom Letcher Macdonald, of Okotoks, Alta., Mr. and Mrs. Blair Letcher and family of Whitefish, Mont., Frank Letcher, rancher, of Cowley, Alta., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Tom Letcher of the Square Deal Ranch.

A decided acquisition to Flagstone society will be Mr. and Mrs. Frank West, of Ainsworth, B.C. Mr. West taking the management of Roo's store at that point. Both are splendid musicians.

AIR ROUTE TO INDIA

Once more the route to India becomes an absorbing topic of the hour and a fit subject for the historian's pen, owing to the flight which Major General Salmond, of the British Air Force, has made from Cairo to Baghdad and Delhi. The general proceeded by way of the desert of Tih to Damascus, and thence across the northern fringe of the Arabian Desert to the Euphrates, in order to reach Bagdad and the Persian frontiers. This route afforded him the advantage of following the coast line to the Indus at Karachi, and constitutes of course, an entirely new way to that country. One might say that it has been found before the ink is dry upon the armistice, that armistice, the signing of which meant the end of the German dreams of an empire which was to reduce the Near and Far East to provinces of the Fatherland. Major-General Salmond's exploit has gone almost unnoticed amid the stupendous events which have marked the termination of the war, but it is the first swift and wonderful conversion of the perfected aeroplane, the gift of the war, to the as yet unguageable uses of peace.—Christian Science Monitor.

SOUR, ACID STOMACHS, GASES OR INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" neutralizes excessive acid in stomach, relieving dyspepsia, heartburn and distress at once.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress, due to acidity, will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest stomach sweetener in the whole world, and besides it is harmless. Put an end to stomach distress at once by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder caused by fermentation due to excessive acids in stomach.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

N. B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for

SYNOPSIS OF

LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.

THE GIANT OF THE SEA

Beside the sea the Giant stands
With dented shield, but stainless hands.
His wounds are sore, but unafraid
He grasps his full victorious blade,
And gazes out upon the sea
To welcome Peace and Victory.

Across the North Sea's stormy breast
A mighty column, steaming west,
With vulture ensigns waving high
Now darkly looms against the sky.
The high seas fleet of beaten Hun,
Whose craven race is fully run,
Comes forth, at last, from hiding place
To meet his "Tag" full face to face.

Since first the flight of time began,
Since first wild beasts made war on man
Since first old ocean rolled afar,
No man e'er saw such end of war!
Beat down at sea by England's fight,
Beat up on land by Allied might,
The foe of freedom went to smash
With sudden and resounding crash.
The world, amazed, stood still to view
The Hun blow up so high he blew.

The Giant stood beside the sea
That British power had rendered free,
And saw in crushing victory
The fightless warships of the Hun
Delivered without sound of gun.
Mile after mile of ships afar—
By courtesy called ships of "war"—
Swam into range of allied guns,
And, silent all, the craven Huns
With joy ran down their vulture flags,
Glad to yield up those useless rags,
Glad to escape on that dread sea
Another Jutland victory.

Great honor unto Britain be
Whose gallant heroes held the sea
For weary weeks and months and years,
In silence grim, devoid of fears,
Determined that the end should show
A beaten and well punished foe.

Slack not, oh Ally, at the last,
In taking vengeance for the Past.
Take eye for eye and tooth for tooth
And give the Hun his own dread ruth.
That, only, can he understand
And take to heart from out your hand.
Maintain your Navy's guarantee
Of world-wide freedom of the sea.
The Hun is now your deadly foe;
When he can strike, beware the blow.
Beware that false and brutal horde.
Henceforward, Never Sheathe Thy Sword. W.T. Hornaday.

TACKLING REPATRIATION RIGHT

As our soldiers marched away from Canada to fight the battles of liberty on the continent of Europe they were promised in no uncertain terms by cabinet ministers, by public officials and private citizens that their dependents would be cared for and that they themselves on their return to civil life would be provided for. The long travail of anxiety and stress is over. The principles of liberty and democracy for which our men fought and gave their lives so valiently can now be established permanently on earth.

The Peace Conference is due to assemble in the near future and as soon as its preliminary deliberations are complete there will be a general disbandment of our armies. Already our men are arriving back in considerable numbers and the time is not far distant when the main process of demobilization will begin. Promises are easily made, but they seem harder to fulfill, and if ever there was a promise that the people of Canada, as a nation, must fulfill and fulfill with promptness and completeness, it is the promise to care for our soldiers and their dependents and see that they suffer no hardship by their sacrifices for our cause.

Roughly 400,000 men have been overseas in all and of these about 100,000 are now back in Canada, some in hospitals or vocational training schools, others back in civilian employment, or awaiting it. There are still due to come almost 300,000 men from the various regions in which the Canadian army is located. The great majority of these men are fit and well and ought to be ready after a short holiday to resume the ordinary avocations of civilian life. They will come back at a time when the commercial and industrial fabric of the country is in a very delicate position,in a state of transition from war to peace basis. They will find themselves confronted with the competition of the many munition workers whose employment has temporarily ceased. The problem for the public of Canada is this: to provide opportunities for suitable employment, and as a result of that suitable employment, possibilities of a life of happiness and comfort for every returned man. There are some whose wounds and sufferings may seem to prevent them from taking any employment; for those there will be provided pensions and special help. There are others whose disability will unfit them for their old trades. They must be educated and trained to new employment, but for the large mass of the returning army, the problem is to find employment at fair and reasonable wages.

There must be a readiness among all classes, by co-operation, and by individual service, to help the government of Canada to do justice to the claims of every man back from the trenches. The government alone cannot solve the problems of repatriation. Nor can any economic doctrine, or political measure, alone do it. There must be team work among workers and employers, and the returned men themselves, and a desire nation-wide to deal fairly with one another. With mutual aid as the basis of action, the problem can be worked out.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

A brunette never can understand what men see in blonde hair to rave about.

An ex-subject of the Kaiser says that the German is servile and lacks courage for open revolt. "But, he makes a fist in his pocket against his oppressor," adds that writer, using an expression that is new to us.

A live sheet is here discovered. Says the Jonesboro News: "The friends of this paper will please hand us items while they are fresh. We prefer not to publish a birth after the child is weaned, a marriage after the honeymoon is over or the death of a man after his widow is married again."

The Can't-Come-Back club now comprises such distinguished members as Bill Hohenzollern, Jack Johnson, Charlie Hapsburg, Dr. Cook, Pancho Villa, von Tirpitz and Jess Willard. Others are emphasizing their claims for admission by sending out invitations for a political banquet in Toronto that nobody seems to want to attend.

In an editorial published on November 19, captioned "The Unconquered Army," the Kolnesche Zeitung remarked, "The flower of the German youth and manhood marched off in 1914 into the field amid the enthusiasm of the whole nation." Like the enthusiasm, the flower of the German army is now dead.

No less than 56 German battleships and cruisers are said by Captain Persius, the German naval critic, to have been broken up in 1918 to provide material for the construction of submarines. Millions upon millions of marks collected from the German taxpayer between 1879 and 1906, when these ships were built, were thus "surrendered" in addition to the submarines.

With the amount of school time lost this year through the influenza epidemic it will be nextx to impossible for students to properly cover the class of work of the ordnary year. In fairness to them the department heads should consider a modification of the course for midsummer examination purposes.—Calgary Herald.

The match shortage due to the war has caused a revival in England's oldest industry, the making of flints. Most of the fints are taken by the makers of mechanical devices for lighting pipes and cigarettes. Before the war most of them went to Spain and Italy, where the flint and steel have never been entirely supplanted by the match.

Almost as many of the people of Canada died of tuberculosis during the four years of war as there were Canadian slodiers killed in battle during the same period, while the number of civilians at home stricken with the great white plague during the four years nearly equalled the number of Canadian soldiers reported sick or wounded in the casualty lists for the entire period of the war. The startling statement was made at Montreal by Dr. Harding, secretary to the Royal Edward Institute for tuberculosis, in giving a brief summary of the institute's work in combating the disease.

A British officer just returned from the newly-liberated portions of France and Belgium, tells a curious tale regarding the flags with which the people celebrated their redemption. There were flags everywhere, thousands of them — Union Jacks, Stars and Stripes, Japanese, Belgian, French and Italian. The officer, struck by the variety and number of the emblems, remarked to a native that the people seemed to have been well prepared for the victorious return of the allies and their own soldiers, and asked where the flags had been hidden. "Hidden?" replied the Frenchman. "They were not hidden. We bought them from the Germans!" Here, indeed, was a curious manifestation of German psychology, or perhaps trading instinct. Did the Germans anticipate their own retreat, and come prepared to equip the French and Belgians with the means of celebrations? It would appear that they did so, and were willing to utilize the occasion for earning an honest penny, the only honest money they had earned for many a day!

Jack—You can't judge a man by the way he dresses.

Edith—Oh, I don't know. I can tell a gentleman by his get-up—in the crowded street car.

THE BRITISH ELECTIONS

London,— A remarkable feature of the elections for the new parliament is the enormous majorities received by many of the winning candidates and a dearth of very small majorities.

Under the provisions of the new franchise act every candidate who fails to obtain one-eight of the votes polled in his constituency forfeits his deposit of £150. More than 130 candidates are victims of this rule.

It is difficult to compare the results of this election with that of 1910, owing to the numerous rearrangements of constituencies under the last reform act, but a comparison between the country areas, as a whole shows that London has gone almost solid for the coalition. Only three independent liberals were returned and the two laborites returned are both coalitionists.

The returns in Yorkshire are no less astonishing. Of the 56 members from Yorkshire, 26 are coalition unionists, 18 coalition liberals, two members of the national democratic party which supports the coalition are discharged soldiers and sailors' representatives, eight are labor members and only one is an independent liberal.

In Lancashire the 66 members returned do not include a single independent liberal. There are 38 coalition unionists, five independent unionists, eight coalition lberals, 13 laborites, one socialist and one nationalist.

Even in Scotland the number of independent liberals returned can be numbered on the fingers of one hand.

Coalition leaders claim that the two principle factors that contributed to their triumph are the votes of the women and soldiers. The former made the majority secure and the soldiers' vote, according to one leader, came later as a tidal wave in favor of Lloyd George.

The twelve divisions of Birmingham returned coalitionists, the only woman candidate in the city being at the bottom of the poll and forfeiting her deposit. This forfeiture of deposit was also the fate of three other women candidates, including the only woman candidate in Scotland.

Labor secured one striking victory in St. Helens, Lancashire, where the candidate of the dockworkers, James Sexton, defeated Rigby P. W. Swift, unionist, for what always had been regarded a safe seat. Mr. Swift had held the seat since December, 1910.

Most of the ballots cast out were those of soldiers, who wrote across them such remarks as "Send us home and we will vote," or "We have no information about the candidates."

The net result of the election is summed up in today's papers as a personal triumph for Premier Lloyd Geogre in the disappearance of the two great parties, the liberals and Irish nationalists. The newspapers without exception emphasize that the election is not merely a great triumph, but a great opportunity for Lloyd George, as the country insists on the carrying out of a vast program of social reform. They declare that the governing classes are on trial and if they fail to satisfy the country a painful reckoning awaits them at the next election, which may come sooner than is now apparent.

In this connection it is pointed out that labor largely voted coalition in the expectation that a policy agreeable to labor would be pursued.

Complete returns for the election of the new parliament give the following results:

Coalition unionists, 334.
Coalition liberals, 127.
Coalition laborites, 10.
Unionists, 46.
Asquithian liberals, 37.
Laborites, 65.
National party, 2.
Independents, 5.
Socialists, 1.
Sinn Feiners, 73.
Irish nationalists, 7.

All coalition with the unionists and national party may be regarded roughly as supporting Lloyd George. The only opposition will be formed by the Asquithian liberals, laborites view.

THE RETURN OF THE HEROES

The tide has turned again westward. The battalions of men that flowed in a constant stream from Canada to the battlefields of Europe for four years are turning their faces homeward and the first peace contingent has already arrived in the city. It is not the same country that they left behind them, and they are not the same men that went away. We are all older in body and in mind, and, let us hope, in wisdom and understanding. These men a few years ago were, like ourselves, a part of the civic organism; they were the toilers the directors and administrators of the multifarious industries that go to make up a progressive modern city. Most of them had no idea of being anything other than what they were—peace-loving and law-abiding citizens. War to them a few years ago was something they read about in newspapers, and which consited merely of clouds of smoke and fire on far distant horizons. They never dreamed that it would be their lot to sail thither and enter the raging holocaust in order to prevent it spreading over the whole world.

These are the men who have come out of the inferno, the smell of fire is upon them, and many of them bear the indelible marks and mutilations of the conflict. The broken men who move among us day by day shall remain as a reminder of the price that has been paid for the peace we enjoy, and will be a living indictment of war for two or three generations to come. Children yet unborn will look upon these men who fought and suffered; they will read the story of how they hastened across the seas at the call of the Mother-land, how they wrestled for four years with the "super-man" of Prussia, and how they smote the giant and slew him—and took off his head.

All the great events of history are written in blood and tears, and the writing of this latest page in Canada's story is no exception. The heroism and suffering of these past few years has not been confined to the battlefields. The ilent endurance in the home, the anxiety, the patient waiting, the hopes, the despairs, the life-long loneliness of bereavement—these are all part of that record of heroism which Canada must hand down to her children's children. In the erection of memorials to the heroes of the great war Canada's heroic women must have a prominent place. Not as Niobe weeping without hope for her slaughtered children, but as the proud and kindly mother of a race of men who loved freedom and righteousness enough to suffer and die for their vindication.—Toronto Globe.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

sume a large portion of this work, in fact we believe they do at present. However it may be quite properly argued they would not be able to perform the entire duties required of the medical health officer, as for example in the case of contagious and infectious diseases, but what would be the objection to employing the medical health officer on the same basis as the city solicitor, viz., payment only for services rendered from time to time? If this could be accomplished it would probably mean a saving of $500.

By inaugurating a system involving the above suggestions, I believe approximately $7500 could be clipped from the estimates and this alone on the basis of this year's taxation would mean something like a reduction of five mills.

My endeavors to bring out these suggestions, Mr. Editor, have considerably exceeded the amount of space I anticipated, and I will not deal at any further length on the suggestion of the adoption of a rigid economic program for the ensuing year. However, it might be as well to invite suggestions for the increasing of the city's revenue. In brief, I believe this might be rationally considered along the lines of increasing the light and power rates. This branch, formerly a money-maker, is now losing money and while the present rates are quite high to the consumer, nevertheless we find that the cost of operations principally through the exorbitant price paid for coal, has not been offset to any appreciable degree and therefore we must pay to make up the added expenditure.

Other opportunities for increasing the revenue might be in advancing the Road and Dog Tax Rates, and those charged for Traders' Licenses. While the aggregate might be slight still where every dollar counts, they means thereby cannot be considered too insignificant to re-establish the operation of the city on sound financial lines. There should be absolutely no exemptions from the payment of Road Tax other than those laid down by statute. Owners of canines may object to any increase in the tax but if they deem such acquisitions necessary they must expect to pay for the luxury. In the matter of trade licenses, should not these be readjusted whereby those who operate many distinct branches of retail and wholesale commercial trade, as also professional, etc., instead of paying one fee for all be required to pay the regulation fee for each and every specific branch in which they are engaged.

Again thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your courtesy, I remain.

Yours truly,
Ratepayer.

KEEP AVIATION FREE IN CANADA

Canada's interest in aviation will be best served by keeping out from the beginning all private vested interests in aerial transportation. The government will never have to buy back franchise privileges from private aviation companies if no franchises are granted. When the dealers in special privilege waken up to the fact that there may be fortunes in the procuring of chartered rights from the government, to establish aerial transportation lines between cities, it is almost certain that lobbying agents will be found plying a new siege round the ministers' offices on Parliament Hill, in the corridors of parliament, and on the floor of the house. The government can protect the national treasury now, from having to pay compensation to vested interests afterwards, by ruling from the first that aerial transportation in a national monopoly—to be nationally-owned, controlled, and operated —in Canada.

A dispatch from New York states that Captain Benjamin S. Lipsner, recently superintendent of the United States government aeiral mail service, is organizing a company to establish passenger and express lines between American cities. The first line will be put in operation, it is announced, on May 15, 1919. The company s described as "backed by a group of wealthy men;" it is proposed to start a service of six aeroplanes, each with a speed of 110 miles an hour, and a capacity of 40 passengers or an equivalent weight in express.

This proposed aerial transportation service is quite feasible. Indeed, it is in every way likely that an aerial passenger line across the Atlantic ocean will be established next year. There are aeroplanes on both sides of the Atlantic already quite capable of making the crossing; and, when the line is organized, it is almost certain to be from New York to Ireland, stopping at Halifax and St. John's, Newfoundland. The longest non-stop filght would be from Newfoundland to Ireland, about 1700 miles and it may be possible to make this crossing in about the same time as it takes to travel by train from Ottawa to New York. From Halifax to the Azores to Lizard Head—the line of one of the transatlantic cables—would be a possible aerial route by two shorter steps than the direct crossing from Newfoundland to Ireland. It might be a pleasanter winter route. But aviation development has already advanced beyond the stage that a roundabout route need be taken because of limitations in the capacity of a transatlantic passenger aeroplane.

But it is plain that if private interests are allowed to acquire franchises ostensibly to operate aerial transportation lines, within a very few years there will be the inevitable demand for national ownership. The government would have to buy out the private companies, probably after much inflation of values had been allowed to take place, by private interests simply withholding aerial rights from use, as valuable land is withheld from use.

The Canadian government has the opportunity to do a great, and immediate service to the whole people of Canada, by ruling from the start that aerial transportation shall be nationalized for all commercial purposes. A department of Air Service is required, with a responsible minister quite distinct from the department of Naval Service, or Militia; or the government should at least create a National Air Board, with a politically and economically independent chairman, who would act for the Canadian government in the international conferences, almost certain to be held soon; to regulate aerial development; to arrive at common standards with regard to aircraft stability, pilot and mechanist qualifications; to determine flying altitudes for various aerial service lines—passenger, express-carrying, coastal, customs, police and forestry patrol—and the regulation of sport and pleasure flying by private owners.

Landing-place regulations have to be worked out; aerial junctions and crossings fixed; laws made with regard to routes over cities, towns, habitations, and international border lines. Because of the peculiarly favorable strategic positions of Canada, in the northern hemisphere between the Atlantic and the Pacific, the Canadian government should be giving immediate special attention to a national aircraft service, and international aviation developments. Aviation is a natural monopoly. There should be no private vested rights in the air. By safeguarding it from the first for national service, aerial transportation can be made a great national revenue-producing industry for the people of Canada.—Ottawa Citizen.

THE MENACE OF SOCIALISM

Peace, which has brought to the Central Powers the menace of Bolshevism, has brought this country face to face with the menace of absolutism. The urgency of the war, which demanded that every private interest should bend to the one end of winning the war, compelled us to trust the Government with absolute power of control of the railroads, the telegraph and telephone, the coal mines and various other industries. The adoption of this socialistic program in time of peace would have been unthinkable.

Advanced Socialists, who are responsible for the chaotic state of Russia's industries today, do not believe in the rights of private property. The sentiment of the majority in this country, however, recognizes the property rights of both employer and employee, capital and labor. The suppression of the red flag in New York City by Mayor Hylan reflects the temper of the nation as a whole to this international menace. We do not propose that Bolshevism, which threatens to doom Russia and Central Europe, shall find lodgment here.

The conservative element of the country thought that with the cessation of the war we should retrace our steps as quickly as possible and put industry on its pre-war basis. The attempt to fasten government ownership on the country, revealed in the placing of marine cables under government control after the armistice had been signed, arouses both resentment and concern. The order bears date of November 2, nine days before the fighting ceased, but was made public nine days after the fighting ceased. No necessity of war can be advanced in its favor. It can only mean a purpose to fasten government ownership on the country.

Senator Lewis of Illinois, Democratic "whip" in the Senate, has introduced a resolution committing the Senate to a permanent policy of government ownership of public utilities, transportation lines and mineral resources. There is an undeniable drift toward government ownership in Administration circles, and it is up to the people of the United States to say whether they sympathize with it or not.

Speaking of the growing danger of radicalism, Senator Sherman of Illinois says that our Cabinet "is a collection of radicals imbued with the vagaries of Karl Marx and of Lenine and Trotzky." These are strong words, and not wholly justified, yet newspapers, such as the New York World and Times, staunch supporters of the President's policies, contemplate the trend of events with some concern. The World views the seizure of the cables and the new orders relative to telegraphs and telephones as a "backward" step, unjustified in the light of approaching peace. "The worst evils of the old unreformed rebating railroads," says the Times, "were the Golden Age to those sure to come from the politico-economic absolutism which permanent government control of the great agencies of communication must bring; and if firm resistance is not made to the beginnings all the other industries will be scooped in, one by one, and a monstrous, swollen autocratic Federal State will have swallowed local and individual initiative and energy."

Even more significant is the diagnosis of the trend of the Administration by David Lawrence, Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Post, who has been looked upon as interpreter of the President's policies. He says that the President must "clean house," reorganize his Cabinet and his party in Congress so that he will have advisers "in sympathy with the true wishes and spirit of the American people." This correspondent also pictures Mr. Wilson's friends, who helped elect him in 1912 and again in 1916, as feeling that the President is "drifting away from the original precepts of openness and managing the government in a personal and private way which does not square with his professions of democracy."

The country is not in favor of the Socialist platform and will not follow any leader who in time of peace tries to impose this program upon the nation.—Leslie's.

WAGES OF MINERS GOOD

The Director of Coal Operations for southwestern Alberta and southeastern British Columbia has compiled a schedule showing the earnings of contract miners in District 18 during the month of July, 1918. These range from $4.72 to $17.06 per shift, the average earnings for each miner being $7.42 per shift. There were included in the schedule 47 mines, employing 3028 contract miners, whose average total earnings per shift amounted to $22,488.79.

"You might let me have your car for the afternoon, uncle."

"All right, my boy, you can take it."

"And I say, uncle, can you let me have the price of a couple of fines or so?"

A clothier giving evidence before a commissioner in Chicago, said the price of clothes was already coming down. No doubt skirts will now gradually creep nearer the ankles also.

FRIENDS THOUGHT HE WOULD DIE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Conquered Dyspepsia and Restored His Health.

MR. ROBERT NEWTON.

Little Bras d'Or, C.B.

"I was a terrible sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation for years. I had pain after eating, belching gas, constant headaches, and did not sleep well at night. I lost so much weight —going from 185 pounds to 146 pounds—that I became alarmed and saw several doctors who, however, did me no good. Finally, a friend told me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'.

In a week, there was improvement. The constipation was corrected; and soon I was free of pain, headaches and that miserable feeling that accompanies Dyspepsia. I continued to take this splendid fruit medicine and now I am well, strong and vigorous". ROBERT NEWTON.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

"CASCARETS" WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—Take Cascarets tonight.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

John Baldassie, of Natal, was fined $50 this week for having liquor in his possession.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

R. W. Wood is able to be out again after a serious illness.

L. P. Woods, of the Home Bank staff, spent New Year's in Spokane.

The local Reconstruction Committee will meet this evening.

The local government office was closed yesterday for a holiday.

Ald. Dudley is able to be around again after his serious illness.

Ernie Pearson, who has been in England on munition work, returned home on Monday.

Olivet Baptist Church, Sunday, Jan. 4—Sunday school at 2.30 p.m.; evening service at 7.30.

Philip Carosella will leave in a few days for a six weeks' visit to his old ranch in Northern Ontario.

Mrs. (Major) Mallandaine, of Creston, spent the holidays the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. S. Irvine.

Misses May and Byrl Beck arrived on this morning's train and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Beck.

The Returned Soldiers' Club Committee will meet in the Club Rooms at 8 o'clock on Monday evening, Jan. 6th.

Chief McDougall was seen early on Thursday morning making a getaway from the rink with ten apple pies.

The annual meeting of the Ladies Guild of Christ church will be held in the basement of the church on Monday, Jan. 6, at 3.30 p.m.

The regular monthly tea of the Ladies Guild of Christ church will be held at the home of Mrs. T. Prentice on Wednesday, Jan. 8, at 3.30.

A regular meeting of the Fernie District Branch of the Navy League will be held in the city council chamber at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 8.

At a meeting of the G. W. V. A. held on Sunday a vote of thanks was tendered A. B. Trites, Trites-Wood Co., and W. Johnston for donations.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies Benevolent Society will be held at the home of Mrs. Sherwood Herchmer on Saturday, January 4th, at 3.30 p.m.

United Church Services—Rev. Lt. C. E. Batzold, M.C., will conduct services both morning and evening. Sunday school will be resumed and will be at 2.30 p.m.

Jack Gates, although not challenging for any foot races, made his appearance at the patriotic bonspiel on Wednesday, where he watched the games from the gallery.

The Coal Co. will present a large cup and four smaller ones to be played for at the District Bonspiel. It is proposed to make the big cup the annual trophy for the Grand Aggregate.

The annual meeting of the Ladies Curling Club will be held in the parlor of the King Edward Hotel on Monday Jan. 5, at 3.30 p.m. All ladies interested are requested to be present.

The following offivers were elected for the G.W.V.A. on Sunday for the ensuing year: President, G. G. Moffatt; vice-president, J. Davidson; Sec.-Treas., F. Warwick; executive, T. Allen, H. Brown and R Williams.

Mrs. Thos. Simms wishes to thank the many friends for sympathy and kindness shown during her recent sad bereavement, especially the officers and members of the Salvation Army, Mrs. A. Nicholson and Mr. and Mrs. W. Marshall.

Among the skips who expect to take rinks to Cranbrook for the District Bonspiel are: A. C. Liphardt, Jas. Johnston, W. Lancaster, R. M. oung, S. Herchmer, L. E. McDonald, W. Baldrey, F. C. Lawe, T. Prentice and J. R. Wallace.

The dance given by the local branch of the Navy League in Victoria Hall on New Year's eve was a decided success in every way. Possibly the crowd was a bit too large for the hall but all enjoyed themselves and the funds of a most worthy organization were increased in a generous way.

The children of Christ church Sunday school should be at the church basement to-morrow (Saturday) afternoon, at 5 p.m., when tea will be served. The evening will be spent in games. Parents and members of the church are asked to contribute cakes, sandwiches, etc. Every child should bring a cup.

Fernie Hockey team journeyed to Coleman on New Year's Day, where they suffered defeat at the hands of the local team to the tune of 9—5. The Fernie team consisted of J. Cameron, O. Anderson, W. Scott, R. Commons, A. Dicken, T. Wilson and S. Glover. Jim Graves went down to root for the boys but owing to having a heavy cold his rooting ability was poor and the boys lost heart and likewise the game.

Walter Campbell left for Nordeg on Monday.

Geo. Meade, of Creston, was in town this week.

John Horodisky, of Natal, was fined $10 on Tuesday for common assault.

Provincial Chief of Police McNeill is in the isolation hospital with scarlet fever.

Thos. Simms suffered a severe stroke on Saturday last. He is slowly recovering.

Joe Cemla, of Michel, was on Monday fined $75 for having liquor in his possession.

Bert Whimster, who spent the holidays with his parents, returned to Edmonton on Tuesday.

D. Wolansky was fined $20 by Magistrate Hewat for having prohibited literature in his possession.

J. F. Rudnicki received word on Wednesday that his son Thadeus was ill with pneumonia in New York city.

Sergt. Donald McKenzie is on his way back from the old land. Donald won the Military Medal some time ago.

Ed Croucher and Frank Bruce, of Bull River, for robbing a hen roost, were each fined $10 and costs on Monday.

Simon Dragon, of Camrose, was in town this week shaking hands with old friends. Simon says that Camrose was hit hard by the flu.

Lost — "Peter," a white and tan dog, the property of W. J. (Charlie) Claridge. Reward for information—J. W. Robertson, Free Press.

If the party who stole ninety per cent of my china dinner set will call at Bleasdell's Drug Store, I will supply them with the balance of the set. It seems a pity to have only a part of it.

Capt. Donald Mitchell, formerly of the Lawe & Fisher staff, who went overseas with the first contingent, is expected in town in a few days. Capt. Mitchell is at present visiting his mother in New York.

Jos. Dobson and Harry Willingham for many years in partnership here, will shortly move to the coast. During their residence here they have been two of our best citizens and their removal will be a distinct loss to this community.

The Dobson & Willingham flour and feed business was taken over yesterday by John Podbielancik, who will conduct it in future. John is one of Fernie's old timers and is a man of sterling worth and will no doubt do well in the new business.

Vincent Rudnicki, who went overseas with the first contingent, arrived home on Sunday. Vincent has been laid up in an hospital for some time but is looking fine again and his old friends welcome him home again after four long years at the front.

Mrs. Pollard thanks all her friends and the Gladstone Local Union for their sympathy shown in her recent sad bereavement; also the following for floral tributes: Mr. and Mrs. John Bean, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison, of Hillcrest, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Woodhouse, Miss Shorthouse and Mr. and Mrs. Birtwistle.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Burland, who have been visiting in town, left for Vancouver on Monday. Billy says that the new branch of the Home Bank which J. F. Macdonald opened a year ago in that city is doing fine. He also informs us that Mac is some golfer. Billy thinks when it comes to real live sport Fernie has Vancouver cheated.

The Trites-Wood Co. gave the children of the city their usual New ear's Day treat on Wednesday, when over 2000 little ones were each provided with a big bag of nuts, candies, etc. If there are two happier men in the country on New Year's day than A. B. Trites and R. W. Wood, when they are taking care of the children, we would like to see them. These gentlemen have long since found out that it is more blessed to give than receive.

The city council of Fernie has set a rate of 40.2 mills for the year 1918. The delay was due to litigation over the assessment of hotel property and the Supreme Court sustained the lower Court in reducing the taxes on hotels where protests had been made on the ground that the property was not as valuable under the prohibition act. This will set a precedent for every hotel in British Columbia and must necessarily increase taxes on other property.—Kamloops Sentinel.

The funeral of Miss Margaret McLeod took place Sunday afternoon from Thomson's undertaking parlors to St. Margaret's cemetery. Maggie McLeod, as she was universally known and loved in the community where she had grown from childhood to womanhood, was a most faithful soldier of the Salvation Army, and was always to be seen at her post in her duties as a soldier. She was the daughter of one of the miners who lost their lives in the great explosion of 1902, when 128 men met their death. Her death is a sad blow to her mother and family, who have the sympathy of the whole population of Fernie. She was a victim of that lingering scourge, influenza, which turned to pneumonia. The Sisters of the Rebekah Lodge were out in full strength and marched immediately behind the Salvation Army band which led the cortege to the graveside, where the funeral service of the Army was performed. A large procession of friends of the young lady went on foot and in motor cars to the cemetery to pay their last tokens of respect to the memory of the departed.

Walter Harwood took over the management of the Fernie-Fort Steele Brewing Co. on Thursday.

Up to date Fernie has been enjoying one of the finest little winters that has ever been pulled off here.

F. C. Lawe and A. C. Liphardt will go to Cranbrook with rinks next Wednesday to bring home the Fleishman Cup.

The Odd Fellows and Rebekahs will hold a joint instillation of officers next Thursday night, Jan. 9, at 8 p.m. in Ingram's Hall.

Robt. Wilson left on Monday for Cassidy, Vancouver Island, where he will assume his duties as manager of the Granby Co. mine at that place.

The blowing up of a kitchen range resulting from a frozen water pipe put C. McKay, pit boss at Coal Creek, in the hospital for a few days. He is doing nicely.

The flu is still rampant in Cranbrook. Last Saturday there were four patients in the hospital and 13 new deaths. Yesterday there were 57 flu cases reported. Our sister city is sure having plenty of trouble.

A PRESIDENTIAL BOGEY

The report that President Wilson intends to try a round of golf at Versailles is disquieting. By no stretch of courtesy can Mr. Wilson be termed a representative American golfer. It has been stated, and never denied, that he drives with a midiron and approaches with a niblick. Loss of prestige with the French public is not particularly to be feared, since, with the exception of Marshal Foch, who plays a daring but indifferent game, there are few in authority competent to pass upon the merits of the President's game. The possible effect on England is much more serious. Mr. Balfour, for instance, might have gone far if he had taken up golf in a serious way. Even in his present state of unpreparedness he is competent to better 90 at almost any championship course. Lloyd George, we understand, is not very severe off the tee, but is a deadly putter. It is in this department that our fears for the reputation of the Pesident chiefly centre. On numerous occasions Mr. Wilson has displayed an ability to recover well after being badly bunkered but it will be much more disconcerting if he happens to miss a six-inch putt. And if Georges Clemenceau, the Tiger of France, should be near enough at the moment to hear the Presidential "tut-tut" the complications may well become international.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a small bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

ONE LANGUAGE, ONE FLAG

Under the caption quoted a New York journal discourses on the text, supplied by Secretary of the Interior, Franklin K. Lane, that "All Americans must be taught to read and write and think in one language; that is a primary condition to that growth which all nations expect of us and which we demand of ourselves." It is needless, of course, to add that the language to which this dictum applies is English, or to say that the sentiment will be re-echoed north of the forty-ninth parallel. The desirability of every person, of whatever nationality, permanently resident in Canada being able to read, write and think in the English language will scarcely be questioned.

The need for a common language in which every citizen shall be proficient is an elementary condition of commercial and industrial success, both for the individual and the community at large. The advantages to the foreign-born citizen are so evident that it would appear to be necessary only to provide the means of instruction in order to attain in Canada the condition visualized for the United States by Mr. Lane. But such is the power of habit and the difficulty of learning a new tongue after youth has fled that there will always, no doubt, be some foreign-born citizens lacking proficiency in English though of the native-born children of foreign parents no exception can be made.

But the universality of the English tongue ought not to dispose anyone to neglect any and every opportunity for the study of "foreign" languages. The literature, ancient and modern, of many peoples high in culture and rich in artistic achievement can never be thoroughly appreciated by a people possessing only one language. In commerce, in the learned professions, in politics and diplomacy, there are many languages and much profit to be derived from their study. If it is essential to the material welfare of every child born under the British flag and of every person to whom acquirement is possible coming to live beneath it, that they should be able "to read and write and think" in one language which is the medium of ordinary communication, it is, and will one day be recognized as, almost as important that every child should have a working acquaintance with at least one other tongue and that, preferably, a living one.

Consider the consequences which have ensued upon the lack among the nations whom we have come to call the Entente, of sufficient study, not so much of the substance of Germany's modern literature as of its essence and the nature of the thought underlying it! Such intimate appreciation of a nation's mind as may be found abundantly in its books can be gained only by the ability "to read, write and think" in it. To how few of the many millions of the Allied peoples was such a knowledge of the German language possible, and by how many less was it actually possessed! Yet a widespread acquaintance of the ways in which the Teuton peoples were talking, writing and thinking might have saved the world an awful catastrophe costing millions of lives and oceans of treasure.

So far from the study of foreign languages being relegated to a back seat by the clear necessity, in countries receiving non-English immigrants, of placing a knowledge of the English tongue first and foremost in our elementary requirements in the educational sphere, that study ought to be encouraged as a portion of the liberal schooling which every true parent desires the children to receive. One language under one flag is incontrovertibly an essential condition to be attained with the closest possible accuracy and completeness; but the pursuit of compulsory English must not blind anyone to the almost equal value of instructing all children in at least one language other than their mother-tongue.—Manitoba Free Press

MAKE THE BEASTS PAY

Under the above caption the Toronto Globe strongly expresses a view that will find almost unanimous support throughout Canada. The Globe points out that Canadian prisoners of war, in captivity most of them since the dark days of 1915, when our men helped to hold the Ypres salient against great odds, begin to drift back and tell their stories. The officers were used badly enough, but it was upon the private soldiers that the brutalities of the Hun fell most heavily. With but few exceptions they seem to have been treated with far greater cruelty than was ever shown by the pirates of Barbary to their Christian slaves. It makes the gorge rise to know that for years these offences against all the laws of war and of humanity have continued, and that many of our Canadian lads and tens of thousands of British soldiers have been done to death by rages, nor any pitying soul to lighten murderous jailors in obscure prison camps, mines, and factories where there were no witnesses of the outthe discomforts of the dying hours of the victims or speak words of consolation and farewell.

Whatever else in the way of financial reparation the Allied Governments may decide to demand, there should be, says the Toronto paper, no failure to secure ample recompense for the long tragedy of the prisoners of war. The beasts who did these things must be punished as individuals, and the nation that permitted them to be done—that stopped its ears to the cry of helpless captives—should be required to pay to the uttermost farthing for the maintenance in comfort of the families of men murdered in camps and prisons, and for the sufferings and permanent impairment of health of many of the prisoners now returning.

Of the cold-blooded malignity of the Prussians toward the Canadian prisoners there is no doubt at all. In the heat of action men of all armies kill others who are technically prisoners by refusing to accept surrender. The fighting man will sometimes elect to give no quarter to an enemy who from the shelter of a strong defensive position has continued to kill and wound the assailants till the last possible moment and in the end endeavors to save his own skin by throwing down his arms before his enemies reach him. The man who surrenders under these conditions always takes the chance of being killed on the spot.

But after surrender is accepted and the prisoners disarmed and marched to the rear there can be no justification for violence of any sort. The killing of unarmed prisoners under such conditions is murder, and should be punished as murder. Major Streight, one of the prisoners taken during the fighting in the Ypres salient when the men of the Third Division were overwhelmed, told the Women's Liberal Club in Toronto that after the prisoners had been sent back a motor car ran through the lines of limping soldiers without warning. Under this treatment one poor fellow fell. The Major asked that he be picked up. Instead of giving orders to this effect, two German officers — presumably underofficers—went forward and bayoneted the helpless man. The Major saw this murder, and a similar one later on during his march. He also saw a prisoner kicked to death by his guards.

Some fifty Canadian soldiers, captured for the most part during the second battle of Ypres in 1915, reached London recently and told the correspondent of the Canadian Associated Press of their experiences as prisoners of war. One tells of the death of his chum, whose body was found afterwards to be all cut and bruised where the man had been hit with spades when in a working party. Another prisoner who reported sick three days in succession was forced to go to work, and died two days later. Herbert Hunt, a Toronto man, saw a bayonet run through the leg of a fellow prisoner for a breach of discipline. Another Toronto man, Louis Ryder, although wounded in the hand was forced to work in a sugar-beet factory. He slept for weeks on the bare floor of the factory and lived upon turnips.

These instances of brutality could be multiplied a thousand times in the experience of British, French and Canadian prisoners of war, and it is to be feared the treatment accorded the Russians was still more terrible. For these outrages, now becoming known in their horrible details as the returning prisoners come into the lines of the Allies, there must be prompt and ample reparation, including the hanging of the officers under whose orders the crimes were committed. Make the beasts pay!

AT THE GRINDSTONE

Benjamin Franklin is considered to be one of the wisest men that America has ever produced. He has been dead over one hundred years, but his reputation has not declined through the progress of time. Of getting and saving money he said: "A man may, if he knows not how to save as he gets, keep his nose to the grindstone." There is now no need of a Canadian keeping his nose at the grindstone, for the War Savings Plan enables him to save easily. Pay $4.00 for a War Savings Stamp and in 1924 the Government will give $5.00 for it. If you can't afford to buy a War Savings Stamp pay 25 cents for a Thrift Stamp and when you have 16 of them exchange them for a War Savings Stamp.

The Highest Culture

The highest and best culture makes us disapprove of unfairness on our own side of the question. — Philip G. Hamerton.

The farmers of the Okanagan shipped more than $4,000,000 worth of fruit and vegetables this year and it took more than 200 cars to transport the products. The fruit business in the Okanagan is the only line of business in which competition is the life of trade and does not interfere with the profits. A few years ago when the Okanagan was budding forth as a great fruit district, the producers experienced the difficulty of not being able to fill orders, owing to the fact that there were not enough of one kind of fruit raised in the district. Today that difficulty has been overcome, owing to the increased output, and now the world is their market and conditions enable them to meet the demand. Co-operation has been one potent factor in bringing about the great success of the fruit raisers in that country.

On Giving Advice

A man takes contradiction and advice much more easly than people think, only he will not bear it when violently given, even though it be well founded. Hearts are like flowers; they remain open to the softly falling dew, but shut up in the violent downpour of rain.—Richter.

A plea of immunity for the ex-Kaiser from further punishment is being based on the assumption that the infliction of penalties for his misdeeds would cause Mr. Hohenzollern to become "a national hero." Students of German psychology during the war have not noted any such tender susceptibilty to the sufferings of others. When the evidence against the arch-instigator of the war and commander-in-chief of the Imperial German armies is all in there will be no room for heroics of that kind.

Adam Beck wants the Dominion Government to recoup the provincial hydro commission to the amount of over $10,000,000, it is said, for the expenses incurred by compulsion of the federal authorities in providing a plant to provide extra power to munitions plants. It is asserted that the claim against Canada may be almost as high as fifty million dollars before the details are all in.

That gambling in Chinatown at Vancouver is rampant, and the attitude of the Attorney-General's department in re-issuing charters which were cancelled by former Attorney-General Bowser, militates against the suppression of the vice in this city, was the opinion expressed by Rev. S. S. Osterland, D.D., superintendent of Oriental Missions for the Methodist Church, testifying before the police commissioners on Thursday.

A cable from the overseas military authorities to the director of public information states that the Canadian contigent employed in northern Russia consists of three parties. The first and third parties are engaged in training and leading the local forces raised in Archangle and Murmansk and in administrative duties. The second party forms part of the allied expeditionary force operating from Archangel, and including, in addition, British and Canadian contingents, American, French and Russian troops whose object is to protect the Russian people from the raveages of the Bolsheviki and to maintain the status of the allies.

Dr. Mahood declares that pneumonia is a dirty air disease which flourishes in Calgary only during the coldest months. That means its frequency is due to foul air in homes, caused by closed tight windows and doors. It is better to take chances with open sleeping room windows than invite pneumonia by breathing foul and vitiated air.—Calgary Herald.

Don't be fooled and take chances with influenza. The pesky thing has been worked out in Winnipeg several times, and, like the cat with its nine lives, bobs up serenely again. Today in the Manitoba capital it is epidemic and virulent. Evidently it intends to remain just as long as it pleases and to go when it gets good and ready. In its case the price of safety is eternal vigilance.—Calgary Herald.

A Canadian air man who has a brilliant record of performances during the war in France, promises to make a trans-Atlantic flight early next year. It is to be hoped he will be encouraged by the Canadian government. To have this record come to Canada would be worth while, besides which Canadian air men are deserving of all encouragement; they got little enough of it during the war.—Calgary Herald.

You never hear of a Cariboo pioneer dying until he is anywhere from 80 to 100 years of age and yet, the pioneers of the country endured the severest kinds of hardships in early days. It simply shows that the Almighty intended man to live outdoors instead of sitting in a heated office and working in stores and factories where ventilation is at a premium.

JONES NOT INSANE

New York, Dec. 23.—E. C. Jones, author of the manifesto proclaiming Bolsheviki government for the United States, beginning Dec. 13, is not insane, according to Dr. S. P. Jewett, acting director of Bellevue hospital, who has spent the last ten days assessing the mentality of the "People's House radical."

Dr. Jewett's verdict was read in the magistrate's court today when Jones was re-arraigned to plead to a charge of disorderly conduct upon which he was arrested when he appeared in Central Park to lead a "mourning parade" of Bolsheviki on the day set for the radicals to take up the reins of the government. The doctor qualified his assertion that Jones was sane with the statement that "he has done the most insane thing I have ever heard of."

Jones pleaded guilty but sentence was suspended when Mrs. Jones informed the court that her husband had been suffering from a nervous breakdown, and that he would be placed in a sanitorium.

Truthful James

A Sportsman of great imaginative gift was telling how at one shot he had bagged two partridges and a rabbit. His explanation was that though he had hit only one partridge the bird in falling had clutched at another partridge and brought that to earth entangled in its claws.

"But how about the rabbit?" he was asked.

"Oh," was the calm reply, "my gun kicked and knocked me backwards and I fell on the rabbit as it ran past."

CANADA'S NATIONHOOD

Admittedly the representation of the overseas dominions in the Imperial cabinet is a makeshift arrangement made in the hurry and heat of the great war. What further changes are to come in the constitutional development of a federalized British Empire the near future will tell. One thing only is certain: Canada, Australia, and the other dominions have a new consciousness of nationality and national responsibility as a result of their part in the war, and some permanent method must soon be found for the expression of their opinion on matters affecting the entire Empire.

He Got the Raise

A merchant, while engaged in the office the other morning, discovered that he had left his pocket-knife at home and, as he needed one urgently he asked the different clerks, but none of them happened to have one. Finally the errand boy walked in and the merchant called him, asking if he was able to produce the desired article. Jimmy handed over his knife.

"How is it, Jimmy, that you alone out of my entire staff seem to have a pocketknife with you?" smiled the proprietor, eyeing Jimmy with undisguised admiration.

"Dunno, sir," replied the youth, "unless it's because my wages are so low that I can't afford more'n one pair of trousers."—London Ideas.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION IN CANADA

Now that it is recognized that reconstruction is so important and serious a problem that the Dominion and provincial governments must work in harmony for its solution, the question of technical education and training should have an excellent chance of being dealt with in a comprehensive, practical way. With adequate financial support from the Dominion and co-operation all round the youth of Canada will be properly equipped to meet all-comers in the coming world competition in which the technically trained will possess the advantages. It would be a thousand pities if in the development of Canada's resources, which is going to be a big factor in world recuperation, Canadians were shouldered to the background by newcomers from other countries better equipped for the work.—Victoria Times.

TO DOUBLE RETURNS OF INCOME TAX

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—The department of finance is making arrangements for the collection of the increased income tax which was enacted by legislation last session. Under this bill returns must be filed by Feb. 28, 1919 and provide for taxation on the income of 1918. The increased income tax provides for taxation on incomes of unmarried men over $1000 and on married men of over $2000. There is provision for exemption of $200 per child. The taxation from $2000 to $3000 is 2 per cent and is graduated upwards. There is a super-tax on incomes over $6000.

The income tax for the past year has brought in from eight to ten million dollars. The increased tax, it is estimated, will double this amount. The machinery is being gradually perfected for the collection of the tax. It takes time to perfect such organizations. In the United States it ws several years before the income tax could be properly collected. It is taken for granted that the income tax will be permanent and it is not believed in Ottawa that the law will ever be repealed. It is doubtful, though, whether the business profits tax will be re-imposed at present unless the law is re-enacted. The tax does not apply after December 31st, 1918.

ANTHRACITE COMES BACK TO WEST

American hard coal is beginning to find its way into Western Canada again to compete with Alberta coal. The amount this season will not be large and will not interfere with the market for the Alberta product but the fact that the U. S. product is working its way back is a disturbing factor in local mining conditions.

Up till January 1st no American hard coal was allowed to come west of the 104th meridian. This was an order of the fuel controller. Now, however, T. M. Molloy, fuel administrator for Saskatchewan, has surveyed the situation and has found that enough American coal is available to allow a limited quantity of nut and pea coal from the U.S. to be shipped to Saskatchewan points and west of the 104th. Dealers will be allowed to buy only from importers from whom they were securing their supplies in previous years and must secure a license to deal in imported coal.—Lethbridge Herald.

FINAL SESSION OF CITY COUNCIL

The final performance of the 1918 city council took place last evening when His Worship the Mayor and Aldermen Dudley, Beck, Rutledge, Hunter and Dicken were all present.

Harry Martin appeared before the council to rectify certain impression spread broadcast. In some manner a rumor had been circulated that Gladstone Local were contributing $900 to be used for relief purposes during the plague. Mr. Martin denied at any time having made any such remark. What he had said was that the union had a fund for relief but only the union could say in what way it should be distributed.

Under the heading of correspondence George Goule complained that he had been wrongfully dismissed by the Fire Chief and that he had been bitterly abused in very obscene language. The correspondent even went so far as to intimate that the Chief had gone "crazy.'" The fire chief being present, as was Mr. Goule, was given an opportunity to address the council and present his side of the case. Chief McDougall contradicted the facts outlined in the communication. On the day of the incident he left the fire hall and proceeded to the post office and on returning when still some distance from the hall he heard the phone ringing. Responding to the call he was informed "a fire at the Waldorf hotel, but we have now got it under control." The chief said the driver was not around and he then left the hall and went to the scene of the fire. The fire by this time was practically out but damage had been done to the extent of $250. On returning to the hall he went to the men's quarters and there found Goule in his bed asleep. He roused him and reprimanded him for inattention to duty and suspended him

Mr. Goule explained that the occurrence had arisen exactly as stated in the letter. That he had been engaged in shovelling back coal delivered at the hall and had not heard the phone call, and that he was not asleep at the time stated by the chief. He admitted he was asleep when the chief returned after the fire. He reiterated some of the alleged obscene language directed at him by the chief. A lively discussion between the two parties and His Worship ended it by telling them both to "shut up." The following motion was then passed: That Fire Chief McDougall be sustained and that the fire driver, George Goule, be let out.

A communication from Charles Hesketh asked for the return to Mrs. Hesketh of $172 assigned pay and separation allowance to her. Legally the city had no right to retain this money although Hesketh owed the city a considerable sum. The money was ordered returned.

The boiler inspector submitted a report of his recent inspection and recommended that the length of the grate surface in the power house and city hall boilers be cut down as a means of conserving fuel.

Messrs. Herchmer and Graham submitted an account of their costs in connection with the city assessment appeal to the amount of nearly $500. An account from Lawe & Fisher of approximately $200 more had not yet been rendered.

A resolution from the Calgary city council asking "that Canada should receive at least one billion dollars war indemnity from Germany" was unanimously endorsed.

The Ladies Benevolent Society submitted an account for $34.95 for broken and lost dishes loaned to the emergency hospitals. This account with two large other bundles were passed without objection.

Before the motion to adjourn was passed His Worship expressed cordial thanks to all the aldermen for their support during the past term, and while he regretted that the year just closed had been fraught with many unforseen conditions and consequently had contributed to make the tax rate the highest ever in the city, he felt that the council themselves were in no way responsible for such; the circumstances were unavoidable. He wished the retiring council success and trusted that those who again are elected to grace the council table will have profited by experience gained. Ald. Beck said this occasion reminded him of the fact that he had attended the last meeting of the first Fernie City Council; upon that occasion away back in 1904 a sumptive repast consisting of cheese, crackers and beer had been served to commemorate the occasion.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS

Miss Bernice Winnett, formerly manager for G. G. Moffatt will open a general insurance business on the 3rd of February in the Bank of Hamilton building in the offices now occupied by A. Macneil.

William Gribben, who attempted to commit suicide near Hosmer some weeks ago, appeared before Judge Thompson on Wednesday and pleaded guilty. A. B. Macdonald, counsel for the Crown, interceded on behalf of the prisoner, stating to the court that the man undoubtedly had become temporarily deranged through partaking of too much "bad whiskey" while at Bull River. He had come from there to Fernie and continued to drink heavily, with the result that later he made this serious attempt to take his own life. However, the man was now fully recovered and had promised to go to work steadily, employment having been found for him in a camp up the Kootenay river near Tata Creek. In view of the circumstances the court allowed him to go on suspended sentence conditional upon promising to totally abstain and pay all expenses in connection with the case, that is, medical attention, etc. Gribben in attempting to kill himself, slashed his throat six times with a razor, four of which gashes were required to be stitched. His windpipe was also penetrated and his recovery is nothing short of remarkable.

GOT HIS BOOZE BACK AGAIN

In Judge Thompson's criminal court two days were occupied in hearing the appeal brought by Maurice Roux against the conviction by Magistrate Hewat under order-in-council 509 which prohibits transportation, etc., of intoxicating liquor in any prohibited area. Roux was found guilty by the magistrate and fined $200. A. Macneil, who appeared for the accused, based the grounds for quashing the conviction on the following: 1. That no offence had been disclosed as there was no proof that Fernie was a prohibited area. (2.) That no proof had been given that Roux caused the liquor to be delivered at his residence. (3) That the order in council P.C. 589 is supplemental to the Prohibition Act, and does not apply in cases where the Prohibition Act applies. (4) That the warrant of search was improperly issued, no ground of information and belief being set out in the information. (5) That two charges are pending against the accused, one the claim of the Customs Officer and the other the charge or claim in question under the order-in-council.

Briefly the facts in the case were that acting chief provincial Constable A. McNeill, having obtained information leading him to believe accused had in his possession five barrels of what is known as American, or bourbon or corn whiskey, took out a search warrant to search the premises of accused or what is known as the Canadian Dairy, about two miles east of the city. Accompanied by W. H. Gates, Collector of Customs, the search was made and five barrels of liquor obtained and upon closer examination of the U.S. Internal Revenue Stamps attached thereto, the date of cancellation was shown to be November, 1918, and indicated that the same had been purchased in the United States some time during that month as the search was made the beginning of Decmeber. The provincial authorities confiscated the liquor and the collector of customs then placed a seizure on same on behalf of the Department of Customs on the presumption that the goods had been smuggled into Canada. The evidence taken at the former trial was reviewed, A. B. Macdonald of Cranbrook conducting the case for the Crown, and practically the only statement from the accused was through the collector of customs, who stated that accused told him he had purchased the liquor from some man in British Columbia.

Mr. Macneil at the conclusion of the Crown's case moved for dismissal and in a very lengthy judyment His Honor dismissed the motion. He, however held that the search warrant was an invalid one but that according to the authorities did not affect the conviction; the only bearing it had was that the liquor was improperly before the Court and consequently it must be returned by the police to the accused at the point of seizure. His Honor also held that the seizure

TO HELP THE RETURNED MEN

Last Friday evening a small gathering convened at the council chamber in response to the call of Mayor Thomson, chairman of the local committee who have under consideration matters pertaining to the reconstruction problems for the Returned Soldiers. A. B. Trites occupied the chair in the absence of the Mayor and F. Warwick acted as secretary; subsequently he was appointed permanent secretary for the local organization.

Major G. G. Moffatt outlined the reasons for having an organization of this nature here, as it was part of the general plan throughout the Dominion to deal with the very important problem of replacing returned men in civil life, and he also made reference to the erecting here of a permanent memormial to the veterans who had made the supreme sacrifice on our behalf.

A. I. Fisher suggested that the local Patriotic Committee should be requested to co-operate or if possible take charge of the matter, and that body undoubtedly had knowledge which would be extremely useful in forming some solution to the problem. He briefly reviewed the action taken by the Dominion government and with which the provincial governments were co-operating, through the establishment of employment bureaus by which sort of clearing house bureaus would compile information and thus the distribution of labor might be more satisfactorily handled. Employers of labor were to be instructed to keep in touch with the government institutions and co-operate with them. However, dealing with those men who are physically unfit more careful consideration would have to be given and the assistance of the patriotic committee and district organizations would be required.

Mrs. E. K. Stewart and Mrs. J. R. Wallace, delegates from the I.O.D.E., who were present, announced that they were in attendance to state to the meeting that the Daughters of the Empire were willing and anxious to do everything they could to help the matter along. J. S. Irvine, representing the C. N. P. Coal Co., stated while he was there as representing the company it was too early for the company to say anything definite but he felt confident that Gen. Manager Wilson was prepared to do his part, but first it was desirous of ascertaining what lines the organization would take and what might be expected of them. Mr. Bonnallie, manger of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, suggested that it might be conducive of more satisfactory results for the secretary to communicate with outside points in order to learn what was being done in the matter, but that the local body should get down to business earnestly and do its utmost to handle the problem successfully. He urged that it was not only the privilege of every person, but their sacred duty to interest themselves in this project; this in itself was but a trifling compensation required of those who had remained at home while the boys went "over there" to make our security permanent.

Secy. Warwick pointed out that during the period of demobilization it was imperative that organization should be perfected so that the returned boys might readily find suitable employment. He also referred to the "housingquestion" subsidies granted by the Dominion government to the provinces and urged that the Fernie organization must be alive to and awake at all times and endeavor to get its fair share in this respect. He dealt with the question of a suitable memorial but nothing definite in this respect was decided although it would appear that something of this nature for the entire district should be established.

The meeting finally decided that special invitations be extended to all adjacent communities requesting that they send a delegate to attend a meeting to be held in this city at the call of the chairman and secretary, the date of said meeting to be announced in ample time to permit the outside residents to attend. This general meeting will then definitely decide what sort of organization will be undertaken and the details as to the work to be performed will also be taken up.

A. I. Fisher, upon request, consented to communicate with the provincial Department of Labor with a view to having J. D. McNiven, deputy minister, attend and address the general meeting he having had considerable experience in this connection and undoubtedly was closely in touch with the progress elsewhere. A. B. Trites donated two dozen prospectus books which are published for distribution with a view to placing before the people throughout Canada the problems which must be considered during the period of reconstruction. These books will be sent to various centres adjajcent to the city with a view to interesting them in this commendable matter.

Honald Hewat, who has been on the sick list, is able to be around again.

PROVINCE WOULD LOSE LARGE PART OF REVENUE

To grant the request recently presented by a deputation representing the City Council, Board of Trade, Manufacturers' Association, the Municipalities of Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt and other bodies, that the government should reliquish to the municipalities the revenue now enjoyed by it in respect of the income tax, motor licenses, amusement tax and other sources of raising funds for government purposes, would mean the handing over of approximately $1,300,000 of revenue now derived by the government.

The government, following the recent request of the deputation, has had figures compiled to show to just what extent, were the request granted, the provincial revenue would be affected and the above amount is the answer.

Just what the government proposes to do in response to the request has not yet been determined. Premier Oliver reiterated yesterday, as he stated to the deputation that he appreciated the situation in which the municipalities find themselves and he feels that there is merit in the request but just how the government can afford the municipalities the relief asked for and at the same time provide for its own financial requirements is the problem for which as yet the government has not managed to secure a solution.—Colonist.

RED CROSS DRIVE NEXT WEEK

The organization for the Red Cross drive which will be on from Jan. 12 to 19 inclusive, got away to a good start last evening. Shortly after five o'clock Mayor Thomson called the meeting to order in the council chamber at which the following were present: A. I. Fisher, F. C. Lawe, S. Herchmer, A. Graham, A. J. Moffatt, Jas. McLean, A. Hancock, F. G. Perry, E. K. Stewart, E. G. Daniels, F. Warwick, A. Klauer and G. Bonnallie. Some discussion arose with regard to the possibility of making a collection from the employees at Coal Creek mines and this matter was left entirely in the hands of A. Hancock, who promised to solicit individual subscriptions both in the mines and from the outside workmen. Mr. Hancock will also take charge of the drive in West Fernie. It was emphasized that everyone should endeavor to contribute to the Red Cross on this occasion to the very fullest extent as this will be the final appeal for this wonderful organization. The purpose for which the funds are to be used is that some 43,000 men are to be returned to this country in the near future for whom Red Cross require funds to supply the necessary comforts until they have been brought back. It was also pointed out that subscriptions to the Patriotic Fund will be discontinued after March 1, so that it would hardly be fair to take any exception to making this extra contribution at this time. Mr. Klauer advised that those employees of the company who make contributions to the Red Cross at this time can be assured that only one deduction will be made from any specific pay, that is he will not deduct both patriotic and Red Cross donations from the same pay.

On regular motion the following general committee of five were appointed to make all necessary arrangements for carrying on the drive next week: Mayor Thomson, chairman; A. I. Fisher, T. Uphill, W. J. Claridge and F. G. Perry. This committee has power to add to its numbers in order to properly arrange the necessary duties and will urgently request the female organizations within the city to co-operate. Special committeemen to handle the following localities and canvass were appointed: Jas. McLean, coke ovens and shops; A. J. Moffatt, city employees and schools; A. Klauer, Coal Office; J. P. Lowe, C.P.R. employees; Harry Douglas, G.N.R.; S. Herchmer and E K Stewart, bonspiel curlers. Alan Graham, secretary of the Victory

A PROPHET IN PART

About two years ago a Spanish war correspondent named Armando Palacio Valdes wrote to his paper, "El Liberal," of Madrid, in this strain of poetry and prophecy:

"'Like everything that touches for an instant this little planet inhabited by men, this war also will pass. The dense cloud darkening today the whole of Europe will fade away into a clear, blue sky. And what will be left of it all? Only a great shame, a great remorse. The day will come, God grant it come soon, when these automatic assassins of women and children will come out of their hypnotic stupor and, horrified at themselves, will fall on their knees before their own children and pray for pardon for the disgrace they have brought upon their heads in seeking to outrage the honor of mankind before their youthful eyes and in attempting to rout out from their hearts the one principle for which men can live and should die."

So Don Valdes thought, and the first part of his dream has come true. But our American correspondents follow the Allied forces to the Rhine and find Saarbrucken busy with plans for keeping some part of the Lorraine iron trade out of French control, Treves going sullenly about its usual ways of life, and Coblenz more prosperous than ever and enjoying it hugely. In Cologne the British troops disarm various looting bands of young German hooligans. Berlin is planning airships to cross the Atlantic, preaching German unity and circulating made-up stories of food shortage because "otherwise America will send us nothing." The Rhineland holds mass meetings to determine whether its own best advantage will be served rather by staying a united Germany than by getting out of it. Shame and remorse and the search for pardon are realities to Don Valdes as well as to all other men whose souls see this world's basis in righteousness, but what has Kultur to do with such useless yearnings? Civilization has its own future still to guard.—Collier's.

NATIONAL WAR COSTS

The statements of M. Ribot relative to the financial situation of France draw attention to a set of conditions resulting from the war which may necessitate extraordinary measures. The central fact is that the sum total of the world's available wealth has been dangerously reduced by the heavy excess of consumption over production in the last four years. The energies of the nations have been largely turned into channels which have ended in the destruction of wealth instead of conducing to its reproduction. Wastage of labor and materials has been absolute rather than incidental to the processes of renewal.

The first necessity now is to restart the machinery of re-production. Since the stocks of raw material and the faicilities for shipping them are limited, either some countries must enjoy accidental advantages over others, with resultant hardship and unfairness, or raw materials and tonnage must be pooled and rationally distributed among the nations. Even after this has been done France and Belgium, in whose countries the war has actually been waged, will be seriously handicapped by loss of labor-power and the wanton destruction of their plant and machinery by the Germans.

By a system of rationing and priority of treatment according to necessities industry may be put into a fair way to recovery. But that will not affect the injustice which arises from the pressure of national indebtedness. That, too, has fallen unequally upon the belligerents. France has been called upon to bear the brunt and has been compelled to incur obligations, as the bulwark against Prussianism, which ought properly to be debited against the whole alliance. The chief sufferers in the war for world-liberty are also the most heavily burdened by debt and the most adversely placed in regard to economic recovery such as will make the huge financial burden tolerable.

The contention that upon Germany and its associates in responsibility for the war should fall the costs of the struggle is just. But if Germany is to pay for the war it must pay out of the products of future industry. Of actually existing wealth of a movable kind there is practically none in Central Europe, which has been self-consuming during the war. The ability to produce the indemnities Germany is to be called upon to pay therefore rests on the ability to obtain the raw materials of industrial activity and to trade profitably with the rest of the world. And in these respects the Allies must have priority of claim to existing facilities, which have been rendered inadequate by Germany's crimes.

To meet the problems of national finance there will need to be some international action similar to the pooling of economic resources. There must be some adjustment of war burdens or some nations will be crushed under a load of taxation while others, less damaged by the war though benefitting equally by the victory, will escape too lightly. Countries which were wealthy and prosperous did not count the cost of defending the world against Prussianism; they have flung their flesh and blood and wealth into the breach. They have become debtor nations where previously they were not under heavy obligations or, perhaps, were creditors.

The dictates of justice would seem to impose on the nations some equitable apportionment of war costs according to their immediate abilities to sustain the burden and the extent of the potential wealth. If, ultimaely, the burden can be thrown onto the instigators of the war, without inflicting injury on the Allied and neutral peoples, that will be fair and just. But, meantime nations, like individuals, must live. And the conditions of life for those peoples which are laboring under serious economic and fiscal difficulties, the direct consequences of their sacrifices incurred in the cause of humanity, must, if possible, be alleviated. The more favored and fortunate among the nations must come to their financial and economic assistance, not as an act of charity but as an act of justice. The losses entailed by the war for freedom from military domination by the Teutonic race should be equitably shared pending the discovery of means to recover them from those who precipitated the struggle. — Manitoba Free Press.

SCANS MYSTERY OF LIFE

Some folks talk about "the mystery of life," and it is as good a way as any to speak of it. For truth is, nothing seems to know anything about life. et everything pays more attention to living than to anything else. Practically every motive in the world, among the wild things, is to live, writes George F. Burba in the Columbus Dispatch.

Not even man, with all his knowledge, knows where life comes from or what it is:

It is just the opposite of death, he will tell you; one either lives or dies. If he is living the body is in a certain condition. The blood flows through the veins. The heart beats. The body is warm. One is conscious of that which goes on about him. The very opposite is true when a thing is dead, whether the thing is a man or a dog or a bird or a fish. But the why of it all — nobody understands that.

The wild things strive with all their might to escape death, but they pay little attention to the dead things about them. It doesn't seem to make any impression upon an animal to run upon another animal that is dead, nor show any emotion in the presence of death. They do not know that the dead creature they encounter in the woods is dead and done for. If it is something they want to devour, they devour it; if it is not they pass on without paying any attention to it.

Death is more of a mystery to man. That is, it impresses him to a greater extent. He thinks more of it. He tries no harder to live than do the wild things, but there is something in connection with the presence of a dead creature that impresses a human being. This is especially true if one encounters death out in the field or woods. Tramping through a forest, and coming suddenly upon a dead animal, one pauses in contemplation of the mystery before him. Yesterday a splendid stag, let us say. Roaming the woods in triumph; strong and swift and beautiful; conscious of his strength and fleetness. Living — breathing, seeing, feeling. Today — there he lies. His coat roughened by the winds and rain, his eyes sightless, his limbs without motion—unconscious he lies there like a log rotting in the elements. Can this be the stag of yesterday? Is the thing called life all he needs today to arouse him from the slumber — to smooth his splendid coat, to bring the gleam of light into his eye, to give speed to his limbs? Then, whence the thing called life? Or from whence did it come in the beginning?

Thus do we meditate and marvel at the mystery of life and death when we are in the presence of death—especially if we encounter it in the great shadows of the forest — out where there is nothing to interrupt us, out where reigns that which gives life and which recalls it!

MADGE KENNEDY HERE IN "THE SERVICE STAR"

Magnetic Madge Kennedy appears at last in a real out-and-out drama. It is "The Service Star" and, as its title indicates, is of extreme timeliness, appealing as it does to every owner of a service flag. When it comes to the Orpheum Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, admirers of the Goldwyn star are promised the double delight of seeing her in a straight dramatic role and an original, powerful play.

She is Marilyn March, a girl of extreme plainness, who yearns for a soldier or sailor sweetheart such as every other girl has. In desperation she announces that she is the wife of a soldier whose heroism is proclaimed in all the newspapers. At once the young man's mother seeks her out and in terror Marilyn faces her, sure that she will be exposed as an impostor. But the mother takes the girl to her heart — and to her home. Marilyn's story is accepted without a question and she is transformed from an unprepossessing girl to a lovely young matron.

Marilyn's mental suffering is agonizing when news comes of her supposed husband's death and later arrangements are made to make her his heiress. This is more than Marilyn can stand and she prepares to go away from the mother and the young man who occupies a room in the house. Marilyn has met him by accident and by chance she makes a discovery which arouses her suspicion.

In a flash it comes to her that the young man in reality is the son whose wife she is pretending to be and who is evading the draft. Furiously she taxes the mother with what she suspects and the elder woman breaks down, confessing everything.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a small bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!
