MAIDENHOOD.

Maiden! with the meek, brown eyes,
In whose orb a shadow lies
Like the dusk in evening skies!

Thou whose locks out shine the sun,
Golden tresses, wreathed in one,
As the braided streamlets run!

Standing with reluctant feet,
Where the brook and river meet,
Womanhood and childhood fleet!

Gazing, with a timid glance,
On the brooklets swift advance,
On the rivers broad expanse!

Deep and still, that gliding stream
Beautiful to the must seem.
As the river of a dream.

Then why pause with indecision,
When bright angels in thy vision
Beckon the to fields Elysian?

Sweet thou shadows sailing by,
As the dove, with startled eye,
Sees the falcon a shadow fly,

Hearest thou voices on the shore,
That our ears perceive no more,
Deafened by the cataract's roar?

O, thou child of many prayers!
Life hath quicksands—Life hath snare!
Care and age come unaware!

Like the swell of some sweet tune,
Morning rises into noon,
May glides onward into June.

Childhood is the bough, where slumbered
Birds and blossoms many-numbered—
Age that bough with snows encumbered.

Gather then each flower that grows,
When the young heart overflows,
To embalm that tent of snows.

Bear a lily in thy hand;
Gates of brass cannot withstand
One touch of that magic wand.

Bear through sorrow, wrong, and ruth,
In thy heart the dew of youth,
On thy lip the smile of truth.

O, that dew like balm, shall steal
Into wounds, that cannot heal,
Even as sleep our eyes doth seal;

And that smile with sunshine, dart
Into many a sunless heart,
For a smile of God thou art.

Discretion of the Better Part of Valour.

(Freely translated from the Charivari.)

Orloff! . . . . Sire.

They tell me that the English fleet is at hand, commanded by the revolutionary demagogue, whom they call Sir Charles Napier.

They say so.

And that hostilities, in spite of my old friend may really be perpetrated by that anarchist.

There is too good reason to fear it.

In this grave conjunction what ought I to do? Those Quakers whom I introduced to the Emperor have not been of the slightest use. They made themselves and me ridiculous. The dear, good, excellent Aberdeen, my old friend of 40 years' standing, does everything in his power. But que voulez-vous! The good old soul is in his dotage. The Court is with me, I know, but Albert must be circumspect. I expected something from Cobden. I took five hundred of his Pamphlets, at two shillings a piece, with a discount for ready money. He offered me another five hundred at half price, with a short-hand report of his famous speech on tea, coffee, and cakes. I declined. For five hundred of Cobden's Pamphlets are, after all, no joke. My admirer, Earl Grey, and the Reverend Mr. Bright (I wonder why they call him reverend,) have undertaken to try the "Christian" dodge, and enlist religious feeling in my favour. The worst of it is, the Atheists have got hold of the story of the Nuns of Minsk, of my persecution of the Lutheran, of my persecution of the Catholics, of my dragonades, bastonades, and wholesale conversions to the orthodox Greek Church, by the knout, at the cart's tail. What is your opinion, Orloff?

Your Majesty overwhelms me.

No doubt my ships could blow the English out of water. Still if they don't, and are blown out themselves, the road to St. Petersburg is open. Orloff, I feel a strong desire to decamp—to cut, as I have heard those English say, to cut my Imperial stick.

Sire, that is the word. Cut your Majesty's stick. We will both cut our sticks.

Wait a bit, Orloff. Let us talk the matter over.

Sire, we can do that as we go. The discussion would be safe as well as interesting.

Wait! There are two ways of decamping Orloff—a vulgar and an Imperial one. When the House of Romanoff cuts its stick imperially. Do you recollect the scene where Berthrand and Robert Macaire helped a sick man out of the world? When Berthrand and Robert perceived the police, Berthrand, like ourselves, felt an irresistible impulse to make the best of his legs. Stay, said Robert. Shall we decamp thus? interjected that great man. The police is a splendid institution. I respect it, and cannot make myself scarce without sincerely complimenting it.

Sire, I always thought that scene ridiculous and unnatural.

Because you have a vulgar mind. I think, for my part, I shall wait for Napier, and offer him a pinch of snuff.

For God's sake, Sire, don't. You are dreaming of Dundas. He, I am aware, is a friend of our friend and would fire a salute in honour of your Majesty, and invite us to a cold collation. But Napier is a coarse John Bull. He was appointed by Palmerston, in spite of the good Aberdeen. Let us cut our stick. Don't think of the pinch of snuff.

There is much force in what you say; if I could only get ten minutes' conversation with my excellent old friend, I would make all right, and arrange the affairs of the sick man to and I talked of, to my perfect satisfaction. Ah! if we had only Dundas here, instead of this sanguinary demagogue.

Your Majesty is right. Let us cut our stick. The first impulse is usually the true one. Sire, we will cut our sticks.

Orloff, your opinion coincides with mine. But an idea strikes me.

Sire!

What will Europe say, Orloff?

Whatever it pleases, Sire. Let us cut our stick.

Right, Orloff, perfectly right. My first duty is to think of my subjects, and to preserve myself for them.

Then your Majesty will cut your stick?

Yes, I will think only of my subjects. And, in fact, whatever Europe may say, I will preserve myself for it—I am its sheet anchor.

You are, your Majesty.

If a bullet carried me off what would become of civilization? What would become of society?

Ah! sire, what indeed?

Who would protect religion?

Who? Sire.

Who would restore (as my journal the Times pointedly and piously expressed it) the finest regions to a pure faith, and a mild and benevolent sway?

Capital, sire, capital! Who would save property from red republicans, demagogues, and destructives?

Bravo!

Who would secure peace and prosperity from the eternal enemies of order?

Hurrah! Let us cut our stick.

We will, Orloff. The more I consider it the more I am convinced of taking that step. It would be absolute impiety and downright sacrilege to expose myself to the slightest chance of the wind of a ball.

Your Majesty's courage is only surpassed by your Majesty's imperial wisdom. We will definitively cut our stick.

Orloff, they tell me that these English revolutionists have projectiles of extraordinary force. I hear they have shells that would suffocate a regiment, and cannon of prodigious range!

True, Sire, these wretches have tremendous engines of destruction. Cut your Majesty's stick.

What was that, Orloff? Did you hear a report? Do you smell anything particular?

I do smell something, Sire; but the smell is not unfamiliar to me. Your Majesty must cut your stick.

Certainly, Orloff, certainly! This very instant! Allons!

This Conversation, the accuracy of which is evident, will explain the announcement that the Imperial Family are expected hourly in Moscow. DELTA.

THOMMASTOWN QUARTER SESSIONS.

These session commenced on Friday, the Chairman of the County, N. P. O'Grady, Esq. having opened the court at seven o'clock.

When Mr. Cadogan's turn came to be sworn, that gentleman commenced his accustomed exhibition with his usual interrogatory, "what book is this?"

The Barrister asked whether that was the person who was in the habit of interrupting the proceedings every session?

Mr. Cadogan said he was the person who, from conscientious motives, always objected to be sworn on the Protestant Testament, as it was a corrupt version of the Scriptures.

The Barrister directed the juror to stand forward, and told him in an impressive manner that he had a great respect for conscientious opinions; but he had a greater respect for the law of the land than for any private scruples which might be put forward with a view of gaining notoriety. He would carry out the law, and commit any party refusing to be sworn. The book tendered to him was not objected to in that court by the most eminent Roman Catholic divines, and when recently such an objection was made by a clergyman at the Revision Court in Dublin the objection was overruled.

Mr. Cadogan said he had brought his own Testament, by which he was willing to be bound. If compelled to swear on the Protestant Testament he could consider it no more binding upon him than a piece of stick.

The Barrister—Sir, the obligation you take is binding irrespective of the object on which you may be sworn. If you appeal to the Almighty God to witness the truth of your declaration, it would be just as obligatory upon you when taken upon a piece of a stick as a book; but the rule is to use the Testament, containing those truths which all Christians of every religious denomination, believe in. You say you have your own Testament there. Pray did you read and compare it with that to whom you object since last sessions?

Mr. Cadogan—I did.

Barrister—What part of it?

Mr. Cadogan—The entire, from Genesis to Revelations!!

Barrister—What difference did you find?

Mr. Cadogan—This is not the place for entering upon that. My conscientious scruples deserve to be respected as much as those of a Turk or a Jew, neither of whom you would compel to be sworn on that book.

Barrister—I would swear a Sock on the Koran, because that book contains the principles of the religion in which he believes, or a Jew on the Old Testament for a like reason. But you profess to be a Christain, and you have no right to object to a version of Christ's Testament upon points which you do not understand. If you wish to apply to me as a Turk, I will allow you the privileges of a Turk. (A laugh.)

Mr. Cadogan—I demand liberty of conscience. I have a right to have my conscientious scruples respected as a Ro——(correcting himself) as a Catholic, as much as——

Barrister—Ah! silence, sir; this is ridiculous affectation. Let this man be sworn, and if he refuses, you, Mr. Sheriff, know your duty.

Mr. Cadogan—Very well, but I protest against it as a corrupt version, and I'll let every one know that I will consider the oath no more binding on me than if I was sworn on my hat.

Barrister—Then I can only tell you, sir, that if you do not attend to your oath on such a plea as that, you will be as bad as the worst perjurer who ever set in the pillory.

Mr Cadogan—That is only your opinion, your worship.

Barrister—Every Quarter Sessions you are disturbing the court, making an ostentatious display here; if this be persisted in I will at once commit you.

Mr. Cadogan—I make but a conscientious objection.

Barrister (peremptorily)—Sir, I will hear no more from you—(in a lower tone)—this man's ignorance is only equalled by his presumption. Kilkenny Moderator.

LIGHT AND DIRECTORY READING.—Some weighty remarks, which fell from Sir James Stephen, at Exeter Hall, the other day, deserve serious attention at the present time. There was considerable danger, he apprehended, to the intellectual character of the people of England, from the habits which they have of late years been notorious for—getting, of superficial reading, and useless speculation on almost every subject of human inquiry. It was now the almost daily practice—and he must plead guilty to it himself—to enliven the breakfast table with a canter through the Times, touching upon all the chief topics of of the day in a cursory and superficial manner. Then, in the case of many London gentlemen especially, a walk was taken, directly after breakfast, to the Club, where the entire range of tables were covered most thickly with reviews and magazines, which in their reading required no strain upon the intellectual powers and were, therefore, on that very account, as well as others, exceeding attractive, and at the same time, they had a powerful tendency to repel the mind from those solid and more difficult studies which had been the delight of former ages. Let them go next from the club to the railway station where they would behold book-stalls loaded with light and amusing, rather than solid and instructive literature. The system extended itself still further, as the numberless popular lectures advertised, in connexion with mechanics' and other institutions abundantly testified; and by the position he that night occupied, it might be said, perhaps, that he was lending his aid to the same direction. This conspiracy, however, as he would call it of newspaper critics, railway readings, and popular lectures was designed to have the effect of making men wise at the smallest possible expenditure of mental labour; but it might be as certainly affirmed, that such a system would very rarely qualify men for any of the more serious duties of life. These remarks, he said, were not prompted by any morbid feeling of dislike to this English literary revolution of the nineteenth century; but, from a jealousy of the undue advancement of a system which could not fail, in his estimation, to be most injurious to the intellectual growth of his fellow-countrymen, not only of those excellent gifts, reason and conscience, which were in some sort and degree common to all, but of those special gifts of political and moral power which, at the present moment, were possessed by Englishmen alone.

HINTS TO DINNER-GIVERS.—How many do we see sacrifice all their domestic comfort, and eventually their prospects in the foolish pursuit of society, believing most fondly that they are making hosts of friends, and that all the shaking of hands and after dinner speeches are beautiful and affecting traits of friendship, and the crowds who come and eat their dinners, and dance their wax-lights to a snuff, are their staunch friends? No such thing; friendship is not made to music; dinning opens the mouth, not the heart; after-dinner affection is only a voice from the cellar; the people who swear eternal friendship over the dinner-table, must not be called upon the next day to fulfil their promises. As long as people give good dinners and grand soirees, so long they will find a host of diners and dancers, who will have a great esteem for their feeding and their music; but, as to any personal esteem, they have no more than the pastry cook who brings the supper, or the man who plays on the cornopean. "I weaned my friends," said an old eccentric friend, "by hanging a piece of stair carpet out of my first-floor window, with a broker's announcement affixed. 'Cad it had the desired effect. I soon saw who were my friends. It was like firing a gun near a pigeon-house; they all forsook the building at the first report, and I have not had occasion to use the extra flaps of my tiny dinning-table since."

Alfred crowquill, in Bentley's Miscellany.

THE CHRISTIAN WIFE.—Cheteaubriand discourses beautifully on this theme:—

'Man, in uniting himself to her, regains a part of his substance; his soul, as well as his body, is incomplete without his wife; he has strength, she has beauty; he labours in the field; he does not understand the details of domestic life, but his companion prepares the repast, and her smiles sweeten existence.—He has his crosses and the partner of his couch is there to soften them: his day may be sad and troubled, but in the chaste arms of his wife he finds comfort and repose.—Without woman man would be rude, gross and solitary. Woman spreads around him the flowers of existence, as the creepers of the forest decorate the majestic oak, with their odoriferous garlands. Finally, the pair live united, and in death are not separable; in dust they lay side by side, and their souls are united beyond the limits of the tomb.'

A passenger on the mail boat from Louisville, not in the habit of "indulging," found himself somewhat under the influence of "OLD KING AL." being asked how he came to drink so much, he replied, 'why, fact is, gents, (hic) the river has got so low, (hic) the captain has forbid the use of water as a beverage, there is none to spare.'

A COMPLIMENT.—When the celebrated George Buchanan was in France, the King took him to view his picture gallery. At length they stopped before a picture representing the crucifixion. George requested an explanation. "That, sir," said the King is our Saviour; the one on the right, is the Pope, and the one on the left is myself." "I am obliged to your majesty," replied George, "for the information you have given me, for though I have often heard that our Saviour was crucified between two thieves, I never knew who they were before.

A man out west, whose house was recently destroyed by fire, published a card, in which he thanks his fellow citizens for making an unsuccessful attempt to save his furniture, and expresses a hope that he will soon have in opportunity to reciprocate the favor.'

THE BOMBARDMENT OF ODESSA.

British Fleet, off Odessa, April 25.

On the 17th (the French official declaration of war having arrived,) both fleets sailed for Odessa, before which place they anchored on the afternoon of the 20th. An explanation was demanded of General Osten-Sacken, the Military Governor here, as to his reasons for outraging a flag of truce, always held sacred by all nations pretending to civilisation. The General returned an unsatisfactory answer. Upon this the Admirals sent in a demand for the delivery of all the shipping in the port, and in the event of no answer arriving before sunset on the 21st, declared that they would punish this outrage on the law of nations. On the morning of the 22d the steamers of the combined fleets attacked the Imperial Mole at Odessa, and during the day completely destroyed it and most of the (Russian) shipping within it. The attacking force had orders to give the Quarantine Mole as wide a berth as possible, in order to be out of reach of its fire, and so to avoid the necessity of returning the fire and injuring any of the neutrals within, the following was the attacking force :—(French,) Mogador, Vauban, Descartes, Caton; (English,) Sampson, Terrible, Tiger, Retribution, Furious, and a detachment of rocket boats under Commander Dixon. The Sanspareil and Highflyer acted as reserve. This force proceeded to another similar mole at the nothern extremity of the cliffs, called the Imperial Mole, enclosing a mass of Russian ships of all sorts, and some large stores or barracks. Both Moles had a formidable array of embrasures, and there was a battery between them at the foot of the cliffs, but as far as we could learn, they were badly off for guns. We counted over 70 embrasures. The steamers had orders to go as far as possible in shore, so as to take and destroy the Imperial Mole and shipping, but to avoid firing upon any part of the town or upon the shipping in the Quarantine Mole. About 20 minutes to seven they began, the Sampson leading in most gallantly. From the large ships, about 3½ miles off, it was a most curious sight. When within about 200 yards each steamer delivered the fire of her enormous guns, then wheeled round in article of about half a mile in diameter, each taking up the fire in succession. Thus they kept wheeling and twisting about like so many waltzers, without either touching or getting into scrapes. The guns in the mole answered steadily, and in the course of an hour the Vauban came towards the fleets on fire from red-hot shot, and riddled in several places. Happily the fire was got under, and she returned to her post. For a long time the terrific fire from the steamers did not silence the mole. At length it became slow, though regular, answering about once every two minutes, and towards one o'clock a shed at the back of the tongue batterry caught fire and blew up. The steamers continued plying the ships with shot and shell, and they were sinking, and on fire throughout the mole, when suddenly from behind some sheds on the low sandy shore near them, a battery of six horse artillery guns opened out upon the rocket boats, which were at the moment within musket shot. Happily nobody was hurt, though a perfect shower of balls fell around them, knocking the oars about and ploughing up the water all around them. Upon this the rocket boats and steamers opened upon them, and sent them scampering. A few minutes after the sheds behind which they had sheltered themselves burst out into a furious fire till about five o'clock. In the early part of the day, while they were so engaged, her Majesty's steam frigate Arethusa was ordered to attack the southern side of the Quarantine Mole battery as a diversion, for its guns had frequently been very troublesome. Nothing could be prettier than the way in which she stood in, hove to, and delivered her fire, filled, tacked, and again delivered her broadside. Shortly after the breeze freshened, and she deliberately reefed her topsails, though under fire, and was then recalled by the Admiral. During the fire several English merchantmen slipped out of the Quarantine Mole and escaped. Altogether the punishment was severe but appropriate. Russian property was destroyed, and much of it must have belonged to government. The town and neutral ships were spared, though completely in our power, and it cannot be contended that a place with so many batteries on the seaboard was defenceless. Some of the steamers are a little damaged, but nothing of any consequence. But one Englishman was killed, eight or nine wounded, none of them severely. No officer has been laid up."

English Steamers.—Sampson, 6 guns; Retribution, 26; Tiger, 16; Terrible, 21; and Furious 16.

French Steamers.—Mogador, 24; Descartes, 16; and Vauban, 16.

The Terrible fired red-hot shot from her 10-inch guns, and it is thought that it was from her the shipping were set on fire and the magazine blown up. The firing ceased at five p. m., when the signal was made to return to anchorage. The squadrons were admiring this brilliant action from five miles distance. They were all to leave for Sebastopol on the 26th, and a division under Admiral Lyons was to go to Circassia. The English and French fired red-hot shot, shell, and rockets, and the Russians returned them.

The Terrible fired 44 rounds from her guns—542 shots and shells together.

The Arethusa blew up a Russian barrack at a short distance from Odessa on the sea coast. This took place on the 22d April. On the 20th the Tiger captured, in the island of Serpenti, about 90 leagues from Oldessa, 12 Russian vessels (transports.)

The Russians laid down a "lump," that is, an old vessel was anchored to mark the distance their guns would carry. The allied division went within this mark, and exposed themselves to the shot of the enemy. At first, however, their shot did not reach our ships, although they suffered severely under our fire. The Terrible stood farther in than the rest, and commenced firing red-hot shot. After a time a loud explosion was heard. The Imperial magazine had been blown up by a shot from the Terrible, and great part of the mole on which it stood was rent in pieces by the violence of the explosion. This relieved the Anglo-French squadron from their most formidable opponent, the battery on the Imperial Mole. The Terrible continued to fire red hot shot. A Russian frigate in the harbour took fire, burnt to the water's edge, and blew up. Two new frigates on the stocks were soon in flames, and 20 to 30 merchantmen, and it is believed some smaller vessels of war, were soon sunk or burnt.

Each of the vessel which remained out of action had sent a rocket boat, firing 24-pound-rockets, and these caused terrible destruction. The dockyard was the chief object of these missiles, and was soon in flames. The seamen of the Terrible which remained on the spot till the following Tuesday, declare that it burnt for two days and two nights, and this vast collection of naval stores must have been totally destroyed.

At half-past 5 p.m., when the action had lasted 12½ hours the signal of recal was made. The action ceased, the Terrible having lost two men killed and five wounded, the Retribution three, and the Sampson five wounded. These were all the casualties that I was able to ascertain. Unless the Russians escaped from their burning frigate before its explosion, their loss must have been terrific in this one spot. All attempts, however, to estimate the number of their killed and wounded must be mere guess work.

As the Terrible was the most distinguished in this action she was received with all honours on passing the fleet. Each ship cheered her as she steamed past on her way to the Bosphorus. She has suffered much in personal appearance. Her paddle boxes are a good deal knocked about, and she has twelve shot in her hull. Captain M'Cleverty remained on the paddle-box all the time, and narrowly escaped a shot.

Extraordinary Conduct of Admiral Dundas.—We have, on various occasions, proved, in the most conclusive manner, that Admiral Dundas, the commander of the fleet in the Black Sea, is altogether unfit for the position which he fills. It will be remembered that we stated on the best authority, two months ago, that the gallant admiral—gallant by courtesy—had written home to the company in which his life is insured, in answer to a communication they made to him relative to an increase in the premium, consequent on the greater risks incident to war, that there would be no fighting between our fleet and the Russians. But we find something still more surprising in the additional paper just published on the Turkish question. Never did man more completely, by his own acts and words, demonstrate his professional incapacity, if not want of courage, than the commander of the fleet in the Euxine has done. Let us invite the attention of the public to a few facts. On the 9th of January, Lord Stratford, our ambassador at Constantinople, forwarded instructions of the plainest possible kind to Admiral Dundas, as to the way in which he was to treat any Russian vessels he might meet with, in the event of their refusing to return to their own ports. But instead of acting on the instructions so received, Admiral Dundas wrote to Lord Stratford on the 12th, for such explanations as would enable him to understand them. Lord Stratford, astounded at receiving such a communication, replied on the 14th, that he conceived the instructions which he had forwarded were so plain and precise that it would be impossible to misunderstand them; but in order that there could not be even the possibility of mistake, he repeated his instructions in the most explicit terms which the English language could furnish. They were to the effect that in the event of any Russian vessel refusing to return to port, they should be brought to the Bosphorus; but instead of executing the commands thus given him, Admiral Dundas returned with his fleet to the Bosphorus, not only without the concurrence, but even without the knowledge of Lord Redcliffe. And when remonstrated with on the subject, his answer was that he had brought back the fleet to the Bosphorus on his own responsibility. There he has remained ever since.—English Paper.

MEMORIAL TO THE KING OF PRUSSIA.

It has already been stated that the leading firms of Stettin and Stralsund had signed a memorial to the government praying that Prussia might adhere, at least morally, to the western powers. The remaining Prussian Baltic towns have since joined the movement, and a deputation, composed of the representatives of Elbing, Dantzic, Koenigsberg, Stettin, and Stralsund, have presented to the President of the Council the memorial of the merchants, in which we read —

"The provinces of the Baltic, hardly recovered from the evils brought on them by the wars of 1806 and 1813, and which were called to make great sacrifices in consequence of the Danish blockade, are now once more in danger of seeing their prosperity destroyed for a long period, should a naval war break out. In the interest of these portions of the kingdom we consider it incumbent on us to expose frankly to the ministers the critical situation in which the Baltic commerce is now placed. The uncertainty of our political situation, and our complete ignorance respecting it, as well as if its possible consequences, have already embarrassed all undertakings. Neither the importer nor exporter can embark in any enterprise for the season now about to open.

"Already the prices of commodities have fallen, and the receipts at the Customs will soon exhibit the diminution to which consumption will be subject. In case of a war with the Western Powers, the Sound, through which we convey our ships into every sea, and through which pass all our imports, would be hermetically sealed. Even if we contrived to get our ships safe back again 1,000 vessels, amounting to 134,000 tons, representing a capital of seven millions of dollars, would be useless in the harbours; 8,500 seamen would be thrown out of employment, and would lose wages to the amount of 800,000 dollars. We say nothing of the workmen in the harbours. The imports and exports, their sum total being actually twenty-five millions of dollars, would be reduced to nothing."

THE ELECTION.

The result of the recent contest so far as the County of Saint John is concerned, has been highly satisfactory. When we bear in mind, that ever since the period, when the Hon. R. D. Wilmot and Hon. J. H. Gray became an integral portion of the government of the country, they, as well as their colleagues, have been the objects of the most untiring and virulent abuse on the part of the conductors of a degraded and hireling press, who spared neither lies, nor the foulest calumnies in order to secure their unrighteous ends. When we recollect, that every public act of those gentlemen, has been grossly perverted by these foul mouthed slanderers, and no means, no matter how disgraceful have been spared in order to destroy their public and private reputations :—when it is known that this, and analagous kinds of villainy have been sedulously practiced for years, we rejoice, with all sound conservatives, and lovers of peace and order, at the recent triumph.

The present Government of New Brunswick is more than safe. The Provincial Secretary—the highest officer under the Lieutenant Governor, leads the poll. The Surveyor General stands next, and Mr. Gray, an Executive Councillor, will again take his seat, in spite of his enemies. Our friend, Mr. Godard, must fight the battle with Mr. Ritchie, and we feel assured that he will neither lack for good wishes, honest exertions, nor for "material aid," to sustain his just position. He has our hopes and expectations of his ultimate triumph.

With regard to the City Election, no important political principle was involved. Some misunderstanding took place on Wednesday between the Orangemen and the Sons of Temperance, which partially destroyed the unanimity which on that day it was thought would exist between these respected and influential bodies, and the consequence was, that many who had intended to vote for Mr. Lawrence, changed their minds, and gave their suffrages and interest for Mr. Harding, and thereby placed him at the head of the poll.

Throughout the length and breadth of the land, the recent doings of the sound, free, and truly independent electors of the County of Saint John, will excrise an important influence, and for the good of the country. Their acts on Wednesday last, will teach rebels, annexationists and radicals, protestant haters and relic worshippers, that the people of this Province—first settled by sterling loyalists, and deriving its name from the House of Brunswick, well appreciate seditious men and rank jesuits at their real value.

The following was the state of the Poll at its close :—

From the Danube.—Not much new as to the movements of the armies. Paskiewitch's plans are said to be to besiege Rutschuk and Silistria at present, with 40,000 men. Omar Pacha is kept in check by Luder's corps, and the main body will separate on the Balkans.

The Vienna Lloyd's of the 26th, says, Omar Pacha has taken up his position before Schumla, and will meet the Russians there. It is asserted, and he has written to Constantinople, stating that he may be compelled to sacrifice Silistria, if the allies are not in force at Balkans by the end of May, at latest. Meantime the siege of Silistria is pushed on with vigour.

On the 16th, terms of capitulation were offered to the commandant, Musa Pacha, but were rejected, and on the 17th, the bombardment recommenced.—Gen. Schildtes, who commands Russian Engineers, has 70 guns in position, but we have no advices whether he operates by regular approaches, or whether the firing is still carried on from the opposite side of the River. The City and defences have already suffered severely, and if the above statement of Omar Pacha's be true, cannot long hold out. On the 16th, Paskiewitch had his head quarters at Kalarasch. A Constantinople despatch, May 18th, says that the Russians had cut off communication between Silistria and Varna, and the same also between Varna and Sarkowo. Another letter states that on the 10th Silistria was still in the hands of the Turks. The 5th division of the allies was in motion to join Omar Pacha, and had set it courage.

From Bucharest, May 18, a Cracovich says—every thing here is perfectly quiet. Not a rumour, for some days past, from out of town. Intercourse, for the sake of Dunaiewitz, is interrupted, and from no private Communications will be communicated without delay.

Greece.—King Otho begins to repent of favoring insurrection, and is reported will send General Kaserges on conciliatory mission to Posen.

Terms of Ultimatum of Western Powers to Greece are observant of strict neutrality; also prosecution of Greek subjects who had joined insurgent Greek officers in insurrection to be immediately recalled and degraded from their rank in Greek service.

A definite reply is demanded before a certain date. If not Greek coast will be blockaded.

Athens occupied and reported that Otho has been removed and provisional Anglo-French Protectorate established.

Greek insurgents had been again defeated in Macedonia. They were still in great force near Salonica, and Turks were advancing against them.

French steamer Gomar captured four piratical vessels at Rhodes. Several other pirates were sunk by cruisers.

The Staff.—The commander of cavalry, the Earl of Lucan, is brother in-law to the Earl of of Cardigan, who will be the head of the light division under his relative. Lord Lucan, is in his fifty fifth year. He was once lieutenant-colonel of the 17th Lancers, to obtain which he actually spent £20,000. He holds considerable property both in England and Ireland, and is, strange to add, a Knight of St. Anne of Russia, second class—an honor which was conferred upon him by the present Czar. He has not hitherto been engaged in war, indeed, he entered the army in 1816, the year subsequent to the annihilation of the man whose nephew is now, our ally. Lord Lucan is half-brother to the Duke of Norfolk.

Lord Cardigan, though lower in military rank than his kinsman, is his senior, in point of age, by three years. His income, from property, cannot be less than £40,000 per annum.

Colonel the Hon. Y. Scarlett, who commanded the heavy cavalry under Lord Lucan, is a scion of the noble house of Abinger, and is considered to be one of the most dashing officers in the service.

Lord de Ros, another of the brigadiers, is like Lord Lucan, an Irishman by birth. His age is kindred with that of Lord Cardigan. His father was Lord Henry Fitzgerald, cousin of the Duke of Leinster, and his mother, the Baroness de Ross. He is the premier Baron of England.

Sir Richard England, is another native of the Green Isle. He is a county Clare man, and is internally related to the O'Brien family. He particularly distinguished himself in the Peninsula, India, and latterly against the Kaffirs.

Sir De Lacy Evans is in his 67th year, but like Sir C. Campbell, retains much of his former vigour.

The French Admiral says there is no foundation for the pretended attempt at disembarkation. The loss of the French was only 2 killed, and 2 wounded by accident. The English loss was 1 killed and 10 wounded. These results, the Admiral says, prove the immense superiority of the calibre and practice of our navy over that of the enemy, and being infinite mischief without receiving any. A letter states that the Russians met with considerable loss, for when the fire ceased, heaps of dead were to be seen strewed about the dismounted batteries. It is presumed that they must have had about 500 killed and a proportionate number wounded. It is also believed that a great number of men perished in the Russian barracks destroyed by the Arethusa. After the destruction of the Odessa batteries, a strong body of Russian troops marched towards the sea to prevent a landing, but they were soon dispersed by the steamers.

The Louth Advertiser states that Admiral Hamelin, commander-in-chief of the French expeditionary fleet engaged in the Eastern war, is an Irishman by birth, and a native of the County Louth. His immediate relatives reside in the neighborhood of Channonrock, near Dundalk, and it is not improbable that he may yet supersede Dundas in the command of the Black Sea Fleet.

Quarter Sessions.—The Court of Sessions met yesterday. There were seventeen magistrates in attendance. After some routine business had been transacted, a number of persons were appointed to offices in the Parish of Portland. The sum of £350 was ordered to be assessed on the City and County for erecting a Dead House in the City, and warrants ordered to be issued forthwith. Mr. Keans then moved, that the question of granting Tavern Licences stand over until Saturday next. Mr. Smith moved in amendment, that a licence be granted to John Allingham, to keep a tavern in the Parish of Portland for one year; and the question being taken on the amendment, the Court divided as follows: Yeas—Messrs. W. O. Smith, R. W. Crookshank, H. Sharkey, C. Simonds, P. Bennard, J. Sears, R. Kettle, W. Parks, J. Gallagher, H. Chubb, Hon. R. L. Hazen, H. C. Simonds, and W. Hawkes—12. Nays—Messrs. S. K. Foster, W. E. A. Keans, W. King, and O. Crookshank—4. The amendment was therefore carried. The amount of the license money was fixed at £7 10s. and licenses were then granted to ten persons in the Parish of Portland.—Church Witness.

Portland Band.—The members of this much admired Band will give a Concert at the Institute in this City on Wednesday evening. They are engaged to assist in the Temperance Demonstration ceremonies of next week, and will arrive in the steamer Admiral.

The New York Journal.—We have been furnished with the June number of this exceedingly cheap periodical, which is filled with good reading, and contains over a dozen illustrations. The work is for sale by Mr. B. O'Brien, King street, at a York Shilling for each number.

Government!—The President of the King's County Temperance Convention, neglecting Mr. Godard and voting for Mr. Ritchie.

The Boston Chronicle says, that a clergyman recently returned from Algeria, the African colony—says that during a residence there of 4 months, he did not hear a single oath uttered, nor see one person intoxicated.

COMMUNICATION.

Mr. Editor,—According to appointment, the above Anniversary was celebrated at Wickham, Queen's County, on Thursday the 18th instant, at the Meeting House, near Mr. Thomas Carpenters. The meeting was organised by electing Mr. Thomas Carpenter, Senr., the sole survivor of the Loyalists of '83 who settled in Wickham, to the Chair. The meeting being duly opened, a number of speeches were delivered on the subject of the meeting. We would gladly make a few remarks on some of them, but we feel, that, when all were so excellent, it would be folly to particularize :—Every sentence breathed the most devoted loyalty to the Crown and Constitution of Great Britain.—Placed in a conspicuous part of the room was a birch bark camp, or hut, in miniature, and some rude iron axes, such as were used by our devoted loyalist forefathers in the settlement of our native Province. There were also a number of stone axes, or knives, and memorials of the aborignes of New Brunswick, before the pale-faces came amongst them, and introduced the arts, and with them the vices of more civilized life. All these mementoes of days "lang syne," were collected and presented to the meeting by Mr. Wm. Carpenter, whose untiring exertions in the cause of British loyalty cannot be too highly commended.—With these representatives before us, and the warm-hearted speeches delivered, I can assure you it was a delightful meeting. Cold indeed, and dead to every noble feeling must have been the heart that could remain unmoved through the exercises of that day. The utmost harmony and unanimity characterised the proceedings; and the only cause of regret was, that the meeting, although very respectable in point of numbers, was not more numerously attended. A number of ladies were there also, (for what meeting would be complete without them,) and appeared delighted with what they saw and heard. Loyalty is a leading principle with the fair daughters of New Brunswick, and well it may be so, since the most benevolent, pious and just of living Sovereigns is our present beloved Queen, Victoria.

At the close of the meeting three cheers were proposed, and most heartily responded to, for her Majesty the Queen—three for Prince Albert and the Royal Family—three for the British Constitution, and three to the memory of the Loyalists of the American Revolution.

A Pic Nic was the next and last interesting feature of the day, prepared by Mr. Wm. Carpenter, and spread out on a beautiful green, on the shore of the river, immediately in front of the meeting house: after which the party separated, to meet again, D. V. on the 18th of May, 1855, of which due notice will be given.

In conclusion, Mr. Editor, permit me to say, that as I stood at the door of the meeting house, situated on a beautiful hill, commanding an extensive view of the surrounding country, and gazed upon the noble river St. John as it swept along its now turbid waters before me, and upon the beautiful farms on each side of it, I thought all these fine farms and improvements are the results of the labors of that noble and devoted band of men who "left their all for a home in British land." Who did not count their loyalty in the scale of £ S. & D., nor measure their attachment to British principles by the surveyor's chain.—They perilled all, and lost all; but they never murmured. They came to what is now called New Brunswick, and took upon themselves the hardships of a new settler's life. They toiled on cheerfully, enduring privations that we, their unworthy successors have no idea of; and succeeded in establishing comfortable and independent homes for their children. This train of thought brought me to the reflection whether the sons and grand sons of those loyalists were actuated by the same love for British rule as their fathers were? I was compelled to admit, that as a general thing they were not, else we should not hear so much about Liberalism, Free Trade, and other political humbugs agitated among them.

The genuine son of the loyalist, together with all who love British freedom and British rule, should be on the alert. Politicians who are but of yesterday, are scouring the country, and I greatly fear are leading many astray; but let all true men rally around the Bible and the Crown, and I am fully persuaded that their numbers are yet sufficiently numerous, if they will only act in union, to stem the tide of democracy and innovation which is continually rolling into our own, our native Province.

Your's, most respectfully, H.

Wickham, Q. C., May 22d, 1854.

☞ Holloway's Ointment and Pills have Effected a most Extraordinary Cure of Bile Indigestion, and Liver Complaints.—The widow of an officer in the E.I.C. Service resided many years in Calcutta, where her liver and stomach had become so deranged, that she had much difficulty in digesting any kind of food. She suffered almost unceasingly from sick headache, nervousness, and lowness of spirits, the result of a debilitated constitution. The medical aid she had was of no avail, and her friends gave up all hopes of her recovery, until she had recourse to Holloway's Pills, which in about six weeks restored her to sound and perfect health.

The far-famed Medicine.
HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

SURPRISING CURE OF A CONFIRMED ASTHMA, AFTER FIVE YEARS' SUFFERING.

The following Testimonial has been sent to Professor Holloway, by a Gentleman named Middleton, of Scotland Road, Liverpool.

Sir,—Your Pills have been the means, under Providence, of restoring me to sound health after five years of severe affliction. During the whole of that period, I suffered the most dreadful attacks of Asthma, frequently of several weeks' duration, attended with a violent cough, and continual spitting of phlegm intermixed with blood. This so shook my constitution that I was unfitted for any of the active duties of life. I was attended by some of the most eminent medical men of this town, but they failed to give me the slightest relief. As a last remedy I tried your Pills, and in about three months they effected a perfect cure of the disease, totally eradicated the cough, and restored me to a vigour to the chest and digestive organs.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
Jan'y. 1st, 1853. (Signed) W. MIDDLETON.

PERMANENT CURE OF A DISEASED LIVER OF MANY YEARS' DURATION.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. Gamis, Chemist, Yeovil, to Professor Holloway.

Dear Sir,—In this district your Pills command a much extensive sale than any other proprietary medicine before the public. As a proof of their efficacy in Liver and Bilious complaints, I may mention the following case. A lady of this town with whom I am personally acquainted, for years was a severe sufferer from disease of the Liver and digestive organs, her medical attendant assured her that he could do nothing to relieve her sufferings, and it was not likely she could survive many months. This announcement naturally caused great alarm among her friends and relations, and they induced her to make a trial of your Pills, which so improved her general health that she was induced to continue them until she received a perfect cure. This is twelve months ago, and she has not experienced any symptoms of relapse, and often declares that your Pills have been the means of saving her life. I remain, Dear Sir, yours truly,
Nov. 23, 1852. (Signed,) J. GAMIS.

AN ASTONISHING CURE OF CHRONIC RHEUMATISM AFTER BEING DISCHARGED FROM THE HOSPITAL INCURABLE.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. W. Moon, of the Square Winchester.

To Professor Holloway.

Sir,—I beg to inform you that for years I was a sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism, and was often laid up for weeks together by its severe and painful attacks. I tried everything that was recommended, and was attended by one of the most eminent Surgeons in this town, but obtained no relief whatever, and fearing that my health would be entirely broken up, I was induced to go into our County Hospital, where I had the best medical treatment the Institution afforded, all of which proved of no avail, and I came out no better than I went in. I was then advised to try your Pills, and by persevering with them was perfectly cured, and enabled to resume my occupation, and although a considerable period has elapsed since, I have felt no return whatever of the complaint.

I am, Sir, your obliged servant,
Oct. 8th, 1852. (Signed) W. MOON.

AN EXTRAORDINARY CURE OF DROPSY, AFTER SUFFERING FOR EIGHTEEN MONTHS.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. G. Briggs, Chemist, Goole, dated February 15th, 1853.

To Professor Holloway.

Sir,—I have much pleasure in informing you of a most surprising cure of Dropsy, recently effected by your valuable medicines. Captain Jackson, of this place was afflicted with Dropsy for upwards of eighteen months, to such an extent that it caused his body and limbs to be much swollen, and water oozed as it were from his skin, so that a daily change of apparel became necessary, notwithstanding the various remedies tried, and the different medical men consulted, all was of no avail, until he commenced using your Pills, by which, and a strict attention to the printed directions, he was effectually cured, and his health perfectly re-established. If you deem this worthy of publicity, you are at liberty to use it.

I am, Sir, yours respectfully,
(Signed) G. BRIGGS.

THE CRUCIFIX.

She stood beneath a spreading tree,
Against its mottled trunk reclin'd,
Around the tremulous sunshine play'd,
Above her went the summer wind,
With freight of sweetbriar from the hill,
And scent of meadow violet,
Intwingled with the hum of bees,
And clank of swift winged martinet.

Her bonnet lay upon the ground,
With pale arbutus intertwined;
And her fair tresses all unbound,
By the soft fingers of the wind,
Fell in brown floods upon her breast,
And o'er her meekly folded hands,
Like half hurled waves, that through the night,
Gleam up the white unanswering sands.

The river sparkled in the sun,
Or whispered to the pebbly marge,
And many a swelling sail went on,
And many a merry freighted barge,
A wild bird mosned within the dell,
The wind blew up the dancing leaves,
The shimmering sunlight glided down
The shifting cleits of trembling trees.

Up to the soft unmeasured skies,
Filled with their deep celestial blue,
She turned her tender tearful eyes
As she might breath a prayer anew:
And as she gazed unto her lips
Her buoyant spirit seemed to rise,
And beamed upon her radiant face
Reflected lights from Paradise.

She sang of one who years ago,
Went o'er the wide expansive sea,
At times her song was prayer for him,
Again she deemed it might not be.
Oh! many a fair hope started up,
And a smile of faith was there,
But faith and hope, long fled her heart,
Were flowers to frail for her despair.

Then turned and carved upon the tree,
A simple cross above his name,
And blessed it with unspoken words,
And knelled, and rose and kneeled again.
She deemed in that sequestered spot,
No eye looked in upon her love,
And trustingly unveiled her heart
To the great vision from above.

The wind blew up the dancing leaves,
Another summer shone upon
The faded name the cross remained,
The brown-haired blue-eyed maid was gone.
She went beyond the twinkling lights,
She floated up the deep blue sky;
The moss grew o'er the Crucifix,
And still the winds went laughingly—

Went laughingly above the sea,
Above its green halls high and wide,
Where flaunting sea-grass bound his head,
And swept his bones the rocking tide,
Her brown locks bound like rippened grain;
Her still hands fold on her breast,
Through nights of star and summer rain
And happy sunshine ever rest.

The Renowned Remedy!
HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

A MOST ASTONISHING CURE OF SCROFULOUS ULCERS.—A CASE CERTIFIED BY THE MAYOR OF BOSTON.

Copy of a Letter from J. Noble, Esq., Mayor of Boston, Lincolnshire.

To Professor Holloway.

Dear Sir,—Mrs Sarah Dixon, of Liquorpond-st., Boston, has this day deposed before me that for a considerable period she was severely afflicted with Scrofulous Sores and Ulcers in her arms, feet, legs, and other parts of her body; and although the first of medical advice was obtained, at the cost of a large sum of money, she obtained no abatement of suffering, but gradually grew worse.

Being recommended by a friend to try your Ointment, she procured a small pot, and a box of the Pills, and before that was all used, symptoms of amendment appeared. By persevering with the medicines for a short time longer, according to the directions, and strictly adhering to your rules as to diet, &c., she was perfectly cured, and now enjoys the best of health.

I remain, Dear Sir, yours truly,
August 12th, 1852. (Signed) J. NOBLE.

AN EXTRAORDINARY AND RAPID CURE OF ERYSIPELAS IN THE LEG, AFTER MEDICAL AID HAD FAILED.

Copy of a Letter from Mrs. Elizabeth Yeates, of the Post Office, Aldwick Road, near Bognor, Sussex, dated Jan. 12th, 1853.

To Professor Holloway.

Sir,—I suffered for a considerable period from a severe attack of Erysipelas, which at length settled in my leg, and resisted all medical treatment. My sufferings were very great, and I quite despaired of any permanent amendment, when I was advised to have recourse to your Ointment and Pills. did so without delay, and am happy to say, the result was eminently successful, for they effected a radical cure of my leg, and restored me to the enjoyment of health. I shall ever speak with the utmost confidence of your medicines, and have recommended them to others in this neighborhood, similarly afflicted, who derived equal benefit.

I am, Sir, your obliged and faithful servant.
(Signed) ELIZABETH YEATES.

A DREADFULLY DISEASED ANCLE CURED AFTER BEING GIVEN UP BY THE FACULTY AT MALTA AND PORTSMOUTH HOSPITALS

The following important communication has been forwarded to Professor Holloway for publication, by Mr B. Dixon, Chemist, King-st., Norwich.

Copy of a Letter from Captain Smith of Great Yarmouth, dated January 19th, 1853.

To Mr. Dixon.

Dear Sir,—I send you the particulars of a cure effected by Professor Holloway's invaluable medicines: Mr. John Walton, late in Her Majesty's Service, in the British Fleet at Malta, had a very bad ulcerated uncle, and after having been in the Malta Hospital for six months, was sent to England as an invalid to Portsmouth Hospital, where he remained an inmate four months, there, as at Malta, refusing to have the limb amputated, he was turned out incurable. He then came to Yarmouth, and was under a medical gentleman for about three months, but his uncle became so much worse, that all hope was lost. At this period, by my advice he tried Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which by unremitted application, healed all the ulcers, and restored him to perfect health and strength.

I remain, Dear Sir, yours very truly,
(Signed) JOHN SMITH.

SURPRISING CURE OF A BAD BREAST, NERVOUS DEBILITY, AND GENERAL ILL-HEALTH.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. T. F. Ker, Chemist, &c. Lower Moss-Lane, Manchester, dated February 12th, 1853.

To Professor Holloway.

Dear Sir,—I have great pleasure in forwarding to you the particulars of a very extraordinary cure of a bad breast, effected solely by the use of your celebrated Ointment and Pills. Mrs. Martha Bell, of Pitt-street, in this town, had been for a considerable time labouring under nervous debility, loss of appetite, and general ill health, occasioned by ulcerated wounds in the breast. She had had much experience in the use of all the known remedies for the cure of ulcers, but without any beneficial result, in fact she had nearly lost all faith and hope of a cure being effected. In this distressing and painful condition of body and mind, she was persuaded to have recourse to your invaluable Ointment and Pills, which she immediately did, and in the course of a very short time the effect produced was most astonishing; her appetite was speedily improved, the sores and ulcers in the breast gradually healed, and the nervous excitement of her system was wholly removed.

I remain, Dear Sir, yours faithfully,
T. FORSTER KER.
