HOMEMADE JELLIES.

HOW A CLEVER WOMAN CREATED A DEMAND AND FILLED IT.

A Profitable Use Made of the Farm's Surplus Fruits-She Has Become an Expert Jelly Maker and It Pays Something Now.

One city woman has found life on a small farm enabled her to add materially to her pin money by utilizing products that otherwise might often have brought but little. A few years ago Mr. and Mrs. H. H. S. Rowell moved to Vine Hill, near Lake Minnetonka, building their home on a small farm already well planted with fruit. They had a taste for country life and chose that to gratify themselves and as affording a desirable environment for their children.

Mr. Rowell's business in the city occupies his time quite fully, but with some hired labor he is able to look after his fruit trees and to keep up a fine garden in his leisure hours. The latter is wholly for his own use, but the former he could not utilize in that way except in small part. In most families, especially of suburbanites, when the men of the family are engaged in other pursuits and merely farm as a side issue and pastime the marketing devolves upon the women

Mrs. Rowell in considering the matter concluded that it would be easier and simpler to market the fruit product of the place in the form of jellies than to provide a team and take it to market daily. She had had no experience in making jelly except for use in her own home and sometimes found her undertaking a big one, but soon adjusted herself to its wholesale manufacture.

"Before making my first attempt at manufacturing jelly for sale," Mrs. Rowell said, "I went to see several of the leading dealers in this city to inquire it any of them would take homemade jelly and received no encouragement whatever. One seemed much amused at the idea of my thinking I could make enough jelly for him to consider the matter at all 'You had better make your jelly first be-fore you talk to me,' he said in a manner which implied he did not think I would make more than a dozen or two.

"Strange to say, that dealer has since been my largest patron. I have never seen him since my interview, and I do not think he is aware that he has ever conversed with the woman whose jelly he has been buying.

"I concluded to make the venture notwithstanding, believing a sale could be found for it among private parties if not with dealers. I made 1,121 one-half pint glasses (since then I have always used the one-third pint size), and by the 1st of November all was sold to private parties and dealers, excepting what was reserved for our own use.

"It was not an easy matter to convince the dealers that they needed any, for they would point to their pails of 'jelly,' which they could buy at a few cents a pound. But eyes since then one dealer has taken each year all I had to sell him. The most emphatic refusals were from the leading hotels and restaurants, who said they could not afford to pay more than tub jelly prices. The pure food laws are now iscouraging the sale of imitation jellies. and I think there will be a much greater demand for pure jellies.

"In making my jelly I am very particular as to the condition and quality of the fruit. It must be either somewhat green or just ripe, but not the slightest degree overripe. Apples must be hand picked to avoid being bruised. Nothing wormy or stale is used. I always try to use fruit the same day it is picked and never use any picked over twenty-four keep the juice in earthen jars and do all cooking in sixteen and eighteen quart graniteware kettles. I always strain the inice twice and never press the pulp in the least. My method is to cook the fruit with water in the afternoon, mash through a colander and then put all in a bag and leave it to drip over night. In the morning I strain the juice again and put up to boil. After boiling one-half hour (with any amount under four quarts twenty minutes is sufficient) I add heated sugar and again boil fifteen or ten min-utes, according to amount. I stir constantly before juice begins to boil, both before and after adding sugar; also skim well before and after adding sugar.

"I never need try it to see if it has jel-It is poured into glasses and allowed to stand a few days before covering. The past two years I have used paraffin to cover jelly, but concluded this year to again use white paper under the tin lids. have heard of others complaining of jelly fermenting when covered with paraffin and to a slight extent have also had the same experience. Two years ago I made 2,548 glasses and used the paraffin. About four dozen glasses fermented. If any one can tell me why those fermented and all the others did not, I would be very glad to know."

Before her marriage Mrs. Rowell was an expert accountant and uses the same exact methods in her domestic accounts.

"I keep strict account of all jelly made as to amount and cost of fruit, sugar and number of glasses and all other incidental expenses, as fuel, labels, cartage, etc., so that I know exactly each year the average cost per glass of each kind of jelly made. By so doing I am enabled to know just what I can afford to sell the jelly for, an essential point in making it for sale. The maximum record Mrs. Rowell made in 1899, when she made 2,548 She began her work of jelly making in 1897 .- Minneapolis Journal.

Kindness of Heart. To be in touch with the finest etiquette is to have kindness of heart. Lack this quality, and no rules of behavior will do any good. They will be followed while you are thinking of them and departed from in emergencies, says the Chicago Record-Herald. Politeness, after all. is only a matter of common sense. It is not blind chasing after some one who does not know any more than any one else. Because the French and English never have asparagus any thinner than a heavy walking stick, eat it from their fingers, is no reason why Americans, whose food ducts vary with the divers climates in from a fork. Imagine Europeans if they could get our corn on the cob picking it out grain by grain with a fork. It is senseless to follow any style in eating. entertainment or dress that has not for its basis a good, sound stratum of com-mon sense. Frills of behavior are all mon sense. Frills of behavior are all right; but, like carving in architecture, they should have something solid beneath them. If they don't have, they will soon fail off, and then what a revelation!

Two horrors crowded into one life, the product of poor digestion, and the poisons that are thereby formed within the body. There's just one method of cure for this terrible condition—plenty of food, but mind, food properly digested. That's the difficulty—the digestive power of the stomach must be improved. Rich, red blood formed, strength given to the organs to drive out poisons; then comes strength, vig-or and endurance. Ferrozone does all this and more; it makes sick people well; weak people strong. Sow Fer-rozone and you reap health. Sold by

There's a story of a farmer and his son driving a load to market. Of the team they were driving one was a steady, reliable old grey mare, and the other a fractious, balky black horse. On the way the wagon was stalled and the black horse sulked and refused to pull. "What'll we do, father?" said the younger man. "Well," said the father, "I guess we'll have to lay the said to the Municipal Counsilis destroy of Chatham to grant aid for the promotion of such manufacture.
